President Randolph in his speech told delegates that "we should reject the Communist program as negating Democracy." He also advocated "national unity of all people regardless of race or nationality," asked for labor unity by having "CIO return to the House of Labor (AF of L) and the preservation of the achievements of industrial organization made by the CIO." He made a strong plea for the abolition of poll taxes, white primaries and the passage of the anti-lynching bill.

A number of resolutions, on which there was a little likelihood of division, were prepared. They called for "unqualified opposition to the condemnation of the Communist, Nazi and Fascist dictatorships of Russia, Germany and Italy;" condemnaton of fifth columnists; condemned color bar in trade unions, the Ku Klux Klan, anti-foreign sentiment, anti-Semitism, railroad consolidations and racketeering in unions.

International officers of the Brotherhood are: A. Philip Randolph, president; M. P. Webster, Chicago, first vice-president; Bennie Smith, Detroit, second vice-president; E. J. Bradley, St. Louis, third vice-president; C. L. Dellums, Oakland, Cal., fourth vice-president; Ashley L. Totten, New York, secretary-treasurer; Thomas Patterson, secretary executive board; L. D. MacNeal, St. Louis, Ernest Smith, Chicago, and B. F. McLaurin, New York, field organizers.

Porters' Banquet Addressed By Eleanor Roosevelt

By ALFRED A. DUCKETT

In the majesty of the soft lights of the imposing Mecca Temple and to the bursts of oratorical eloquence from the lips of some of the foremost figures of the nation, Franklin Delano Roosevelt received one of the most inspired boosts in support of his third-term candidacy yet to come in this campaign among the Negroes of the county as the powerful Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters highlighted the sessions of its four-day Biennial Convention with a Testimonial Banquet Monday night which union officials were careful to stress was "strictly a non-political" event.

Guest of honor at the dinner was Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt whose gracious charm completely captivated the 1000 delegates, delegates' wives, families and friends who filled the banquet hall to capacity. Mrs. Roosevelt presented by Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, nationally-famed educator, after the union's International President, A. Philip Randolph, had called upon the "first lady of our Negro nation to present to us the First Lady of America."

Mrs. Roosevelt received a tremendous ovation as she paid tribute to Mrs. Bethune's "inspirational life as a woman and a teacher," and went on to counsel the membership of the organization that "we all have a great task and responsibility—that of improving our democracy." Praising the passage of conscription legislation as a measure designed to "keep our country safe" the Chief Executive's wife said:

"I here pledge to you my faith, cooperation and energy to make this a better country, not for you alone, but for all of us. I want to take your pledge in return that you will do the same—to make Americans feel that this country is safer because it is a better land to live in for everyone."

Mayor LaGuardia Speaks

Second speaker in importance on the dias was Mayor LaGuardia who was up to his usual hard-hitting form and showed it by agreeing that "this is a non-partisan meeting" and that "any gathering of men and women in this country who toil for their living and who have witnessed the progress of the last seven years and have seen the interest of their own government in their own families would naturally be as non-partisan as we are and all for Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Sobering, the Mayor reminded the gathering that "I was coming to Philip Randolph's meetings long before I was Mayor." He traced the growth of the Brotherhood, terming it one of the most progressive labor organizations in the country and stating that its greatest achivement has been "giving self-respect to every Pullman Porter who works for our railroads."

Walter White, executive secretary of the NAACP, brought down the house with the militant warning that "America must practice democracy in truth at home as well as urge its practice abroad." White declared that "England today would be in a better position if she had done those things in the past which would have gained for her the warm respect and confidence of her colonies." White attacked discrimination in the national defense program.

Lieut-Governor Charles Poletti brought the good wishes of Gov. Herbert H. Lehman and dubbed A. Philip Randolph "one of the most progressive, loyal labor leaders we in America have today."

(Continued on page 7)

Porters Labor Union Dinner Is Addressed By Mrs. Roosevelt

(Continued from page one)

Other speakers included Aubrey Williams, director of the National Youth Administration; James C. Quinn, secretary-treasurer of the Central Trades and Labor Council; the Rev. William Lloyd Imes and C. L. Dellums, fourth international vice-president of the Brotherhood.

Entertainment during dinner was provided by Prof. Furman Fordham and Nadine Williams, soloists; three clever tots who go by the name of "The Three Natural Alabamians," and Humboldt Findlay, cornetist.

Give Out Campaign Buttons

Helena Williams, international president of the Brotherhood's Ladies Auxiliary, made a presentation of roses to Mrs. Roosevelt while Mrs. Randolph, wife of the organization's leader presented Mrs. Bethune with flowers. Ashley L. Totten, international, secretary-treasurer, presided ably.

Members of the organization invited the departing guests to help themselves from a supply of hundreds of Roosevelt for President buttons as the dinner ended.

HE BLACK DISPATCH, SAT., SEPT. 28, 1940

Pullman Porters Hold 15th Biennial Convention In New York City September 15th

2,000 Marchers Parade Through Harlem Ends in Mass Meeting

Hold Meeting In Y. M. C. A. Building

NEW YORK.—(ANP)—More than 100 delegates from all parts of the country, representing over 6,000 organized Pullman porters, met at the Harlem Y. M. C. A. this week in the 15th anniversary and biennial convention of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. An elaborate program was outlined for the six-day meeting beginning Sunday, Sept. 15.

On Sunday at 2 p. m., fully 2,000 marchers paraded through Harlem's avenues cheered by thousands who lined the streets. The parade ended in a mass meeting at the Salem M. E. church and an overflow crowd, gathered to hear A. Philip Randolph, international president, make his annual address.

Ashley L. Totten, international secretary-treasurer, was general chairman of the convention and in this capacity acted as chairman of the mass meeting. He introduced William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; M. P. Websters, first vice president of BSCP; Senator James M. Mead, and others on the program.

Business sessions occupied most of the morning sessions during the week. On Monday night, the annual dinner was held at Mecca Temple, with some 800 persons hearing a brilliant array of speakers headed by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt. Others on the program included Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, Mayor F. LaGuardia, Lieut. Gov. Charles Poletti, Aubrey Williams, and Walter White.

Governor Herbert H. Lehman addressed the brotherhood and the Ladies 'auxiliary on Tuesday in the auditorium of the Y. W. C. A. He congratulated the BSCP on their splendid progress in a little over 15 years and then told them "What has held you back has been the indifference of workers and employers." He came out strongly for preparedness, endorsed the Conscription bill by calling it the "best insurance for lasting peace."

"The United States is the only country where there is freedom," he continued. "There must be no weakening of defenses and labor has lot to say to defend democracy against dictators who are always enemies of free labor . . . Britain is the last bulwark of democracy . . . Beaten and destroyed, democracy would then be in danger, we could not keep war from our shores . . . should supply Britain with all weapons not essential to our defense . . . Total war is no respector of race or color."

Wednesday, delegates and the auxiliary were entertained at Lido pool with a cocktail party. Thursday was Brotherhood day at the fair and Mrs. Frances Perkins, department of labor, was principal speaker. On Friday night the week's activities were climaxed with a huge ball at the Golden Gate ballroom.

President Randolph in his speech told delegates that "we should reject the Communist program as negating democracy." He also advocated "national unity of all people regardless of race or nationality," asked for labor unity by having "CIO return to the House of Labor (A. F. of L.) and the preservation of the achievements of industrial organization made by the CIO." He made a strong plea for the abolition of poll taxes, white primaries and the passage of the anti-lynching bill.

A number of resolutions on which there was little likelihood of division, were prepared. They called for "unqualified opposition to the condemnation of the Communist, Nazi and Fascist dictatorships of Russia, Germany and Italy"; condemnation of fifth columnists; condemned color [illegible] in trade unions, the Ku Klux [illegible] anti-foreign sentiment, [illegible] itism, railroad consolidati[illegible] racketeering in unions.

International officers [illegible] Brotherhood are: A. Philip [illegible] dolph, president; M. P. W[illegible] Chicago, first vice president; [illegible] nie Smith, Detroit, second vice president; E. J. Bradley, St. Louis, third vice president; C. L. Dellums, Oakland, Calif., fourth vice president; Ashley L. Totten, New York, secretary-treasurer; Thomas Patterson, secretary executive board; L. D. MacNeal, St. Louis, Ernest Smith, Chicago, and [illegible] F. McLaurin, N. Y., field organizers.

Porters' Auxiliary to Hold Biennial Meet

The Ladies Auxiliary to the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters which is affiliated with the A. [illegible] will hold its Biennial Convention in [illegible] International H[illegible] the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, 217 W[illegible] New York, September 16-19, inclusive. The preliminary activities of the Convention will include a parade, followed by a mass meeting at the Salem Methodist Episcopal Church, 129th Street and 7th Avenue, Sunday, September 15, at 3 o'clock P. M. The Ladies' Auxiliary will be the guest of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters on these two occasions which also mark the beginning of the second Biennial Convention and the 15th Anniversary Celebration of the Brotherhood. The Brotherhood Sessions will be held in New York simultaneously with those of the Ladies Auxiliary, but will be of longer duration.

The Ladies Auxiliary was organized August, 1925, in New York City by the Brotherhood president, A. Philip Randolph, and was known at that time as The Colored Women's Economic Council. As rapidly as circumstances and conditions would permit an auxiliary was set up in each of the Brotherhood Divisions until today there are 44 such organizations throughout this country and Canada.

In July, 1938, a National call was issued by the International president, A. Philip Randolph requesting the auxiliary representatives to assemble the following September, in Chicago, Illinois, for the purpose of being organized into an International Organization.

SUNDAY CHICAGO BEE

IN TWO SECTIONS: SECTION TWO

SUNDAY SEPTEMBER 29, 1940

Volume 31, Number 39

1st Lady Addresses Pullman Porters' Meet

LARGE GROUP OF NOTABLES ATTEND CONFAB

NYA Head Makes Presentation

By JOHN R. THOMPSON

NEW YORK, Sept. 26—(ANP)—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, First Lady of the Land, headed the largest group of celebrities ever to attend an all-colored labor convention in New York or elsewhere, when she addressed the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters at their dinner at Mecca temple Monday night, as part of the week long 15th anniversary biennial convention, Sept. 15-20.

Other celebrities at the speakers' table included Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, "First Colored Lady of the Land," Mayor Fiorello La-Guardia of New York City; Lieut. Gov. Charles Poletti, Aubrey Williams, national director of the N. Y. A.; Dr. Channing Tobias, of the YMCA; Walter White of the NAACP; James Quinn of the Central Trades and Labor council of New York City; A. Philip Randolph, president of the brotherhood, and other officials of the BSCP.

More than 800 persons paid the $2.50 per plate to listen to this brilliant array of speakers, who paid tribute to Randolph and the brotherhood.

Must Improve Democracy

Mrs. Bethune introduced Mrs. Roosevelt, who after paying tribute to the head of the colored division of the NYA, launched into her speech. Said the First Lady in part: "We have a right to improve democracy in the U. S. . . . The conscription bill is the only way to make the nation really safe . . . for it is better to have young people trained for warfare than to send them into battle untrained . . . if they are not trained early, last minute measures may not save us from war. . . .

"Each of us has an obligation to try in all ways to perfect the democracy of the country . . . you know what it is to struggle against handicaps . . . we can overcome them only as we work side by side. . . . The color line is gradually being broken down and becoming a thing of the past. . . . We must work together and not let any one group suffer. . . . t is only lately we have realized how much culture of the country has come from the minority groups of the United States.

"As James Weldon Johnson once said to me, 'You are making a mistake when you do not recognize how much more my race has contributed in many ways.' . . . The Negro has a great gift for culture in many things. . . . I am tremendously interested in young people and I know those of your group and their difficulties. I appreciate what young people meet with today in colored groups

PRESIDENT

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH, international president of the Brotherhood of Pullman Porters, which held its 15th anniversary and biennial convention in New York last week.

FIFTEENTH ANNIVERSARY
and Bi-ennial Convention
of the
BROTHERHOOD
OF
SLEEPING CAR PORTERS

SEPT. 15th - 20th - 1940 -

SPECIAL FEATURES

PARADE
Mass Meeting -- Salem M. E. Church

Sun. Sept. 15th

Parade 1 p. m. — Mass Meeting 3 p. m. Speakers:— Hon. FIORELLO H. LAGUARDIA, Mayor, City of New York. Hon. JAMES M. MEAD. United States Senator. Hon. WILLIAM GREEN, Pres. A. F. of L. A. PHILLIP RANDOLPH, Internat'l PRES., B.S.C.P. M. P. WEBSTER, First Internat'l Vice-Pres. B.S.C.P. — Music Program. Admission Free.

•

EXECUTIVE
Sessions -- Y. M. C. A., 180 W, 135 St.

Mon. & Tues. 16 - 17

Convention Speakers: Hon. OTTO S. BEYER, Chairman, National Mediation Board. HON MURRAY W. LATIMER, Chairman, Railroad Retirement Board. FRANK R. CROSSWAITH, Interna'l Organizer, Interna'l Ladies Garment Workers Union. DR. WILLARD UPHAUS, Dir. NAT'L. R. & L. F.
Y. W. C. A.—144 W. 138th St. — Ladies Auxiliary will hold their session simultaneously at the above address Tuesday, 8 p. m. Speakers: MISS MARY ANDERSON, Women's Bureau. MRS. GERTRUDE AYER, Principal P. S. No. 24, MISS HELEN WILSON, Int'l. Pres. Ladies Auxiliary.
SPECIAL EXTRA — Hon. HERBERT H. LEHMAN, Governor of N. Y., will speak at Y.W.C.A., Auditorium, Tues., Sept. 17th. at 11 a. m.

•

LABOR
Dinne r -- Mecca Temple, 135 W, 35 St.

Mon. 16th 7 P. M

We have the honor to present our highly esteemed and most gracious FIRST LADY, MRS. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, who will be introduced by DR. MAR. McLEOD BETHUNE.
Other speakers: AUBREY WILLIAMS, Administrator, N Y.A.; WALTER WHITE, Sec.-N.A.A.C.P., JAMES C. QUINN, Sec.-Treas., C. T. & L. Council of N. Y. SPENCER MILLER, Dir. W. E. B of America, A. F. of L. C. L. DELLUMS, Fourth Int'l Vice-Pres., B. S. C. P. $2.50 per plate. Make all checks payable to ASHLEY L. TOTTEN, Int'l Sec.-Treas. 217 West 125th Street. Suite 301. MO. 2-5080.

•

BROTHERHOOD
Day -- N. Y. World's Fair

Thurs. Sept. 19th

Our Guest Speaker: HON. MRS. FRANCES PERKINS, Sec'y of Labor. A. PHILLIP RANDOLPH, Int'l Pres. B. S. C. P. M. P. WEBSTER, Int'l Vice-President B. S. C. P. MUSICAL PROGRAM featuring PROF. FURMAN FORDHAM, lyric baritone, MISS MAYE HOOPER, Mezzo Soprano, Y. M. C. A. "ALL GIRLS GLEE CLUB." Tickets with Admission to four Concessions — $1.00

•

CONVENTION
Ball -- Golden Gate Ballroom

Fri. Eve. Sept. 20th

Secure your tickets in Advance. Only a few boxes are left. Admission - $1.00. Boxes seating 8 persons — $4.00. Continuous Dancing.

2 SWING BANDS

Lucky Millinder and Fess Finlay

•

6 Glorious Days — Secure Tickets Now

Age 9/14/40

PULLMAN PORTERS HOLD A VICTORY MEETING FOR THEIR PRESIDENT

The Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters held a "victory meeting" in New York's Harlem on Sept. 12 to welcome home its president, A. Philip Randolph. In Chicago, President Randolph had won from the Pullman Co. a $12 monthly raise for all porters.

President Randolph reviewed the long fight which ended in victory for the only all-Negro international union.

Small blackamoors hung over window sills of the union hall to gaze in awe at the famous union leader whom many of their fathers call "the greatest living Negro."

More Than Fifty Chapters Represented At Convention Of First International Brotherhood Ladies' Auxiliary Meet

Sunday afternoon at the Church of Good Shepherd, Chicago, delegates representing more than 50 chapters of the women's auxiliaries to the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, assembled for the opening session of their first annual convention. Mrs. Helena Wilson, president of the host chapter, presided; Mrs. Alice Martin, chairman, Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, principal speaker.

The outline of the full course of the organization was explained as one giving support and cooperation, moral and financial to the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. It will be the first international ladies auxiliary to an international trade union organized by Negro workers in the history of the Negro people. The women's economic councils which go into the making of this unique organization were established immediately following that of the Brotherhood.

Mrs. Bethune, speaker of the afternoon, brought greetings to the convention from the National Youth Administration, the national council of Negro women, Bethune-Cookman college, and outlined the Negro woman's place in world affairs. Obstacles, problems and the preparation for their ultimate solution were clearly defined in relation to the Race's economic progress.

A. Philip Randolph, international president, officers and delegates from various men's division were introduced and greeted as follows: Milton P. Webster, first vice international president and president of the Chicago division; Bennie Smith, Detroit, second international vice; Edward J. Bradley, St. Louis, third vice; C. L. Dellums, Oakland, Calif.; Ashley L. Totten, New York; P. T. Patterson, New York; Carrie McWatt, president of St. Paul chapter, ladies' auxiliary; Nannie Curby, past president of St. Louis council; F. T. Witt, Denver; Mrs. L. Fulcher, Carrie E. White, president, Kansas City, Mo.; Rosie Taylor, president, Cleveland; Annie Wilson, secretary, New York; W. Mae Dailey, president, St. Louis; Georgie Garrett; Lillian Murray, president, Newark, N. J.; Letitia I. Murray, president, Los Angeles; Rosina Tucker, president, Washington, D. C.; Nora C. Thornton, Jersey City, N. J.; Rosa James, Richmond, Va.; Edith Simpson, N. B. Foster, Asheville, N. C.; F. J. Caviness, president, San Antonio, Tex.; L. E. Ross, Atlanta; M. P. Mims, Kansas City, Kas.; M. Marian Sappleton, Ella Johnson, Tampa, Fla.; Bernice Avery, president, Detroit;

Julia Burwell, Jacksonville, Fla.; Lillian Collins, Lillian Collins, Mattie Owens, president, Minneapolis; Della Cole, Essie Harris, president, Omaha; John C. Mills, Myrtle De Von, Lucille Brice, Neva Ryon, Letitia Miles, J. R. Goodlow, Danver; J. M. Lee, St. Louis, Annie Walker, New Orleans, and others.

Volume VI—Number 27—Leon H. Washington, Jr., Publisher

Labor Leader Honored

Honored at breakfast Tuesday was C. L. Dellums, vice-president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; here to aid in the fight against Proposition Number One. Mr. Dellums is also president of East Bay section of National Negro Congress, and of 17th Assembly district of Labor's Non-Partison League. Shown in the picture are, seated: Assemblyman Augustus F. Hawkins, Mr. Dellums and Mrs. Fay Allen; standing, Commodore Wynn, R. B. Strather, Attorney Loren Miller, Halvor Miller, and Leon H. Washington, Jr., Sentinel publisher.

Degradation in the U.S.A. — Fight it

LOOKING AROUND and BEYOND

By

FRANK R. CROSSWAITH

AT THE THIRD session of the National Race Congress held recently at Washington,, D. C., Mr. A. Philip Randolph, head of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and unquestionably one of the most outstanding leaders of American labor, declined to stand for reelection as President of the Congress and formally severed all connections with the organization. In so doing Mr. Randolph has once more rendered a great service to our group.

WHEN THE NATIONAL Race Congress was born four years ago, enlightened and progressive Colored and white people everywhere recognized in it an agency of tremendous potential value to Colored America in our struggle for justice and equality. The fact that an individual of the mental and moral stature of A. Philip Randolph was at the head of the organization served further to impress upon all and sundry the belief that the organization would follow an independent, constructive line and not become the tool of any special group with a special axe to grind. Because of the high esteem in which Mr. Randolph is held in the arena of organized labor, quite a number of unions gave the Congress their blessings and their cooperation. It can now be said without fear of successful contradiction, that without the prestige and reputation of Mr. Randolph behind which to obscure its Communistic design and control, the Congress would have been a stillborn baby to follow the path of its predecessor the National Race Labor Congress.

SHORTLY AFTER THE first Congress was held in Chicago in 1937, it became apparent that the Communist Party had gotten in on the ground floor and was determined to use the Congress to promote Communist organization among Colored people. As a result of this knowledge, many individuals and organizations that were at first inclined to cooperate with Congress began to lose all interest in the enterprise. Some of the most progressive trade unions possessing a long tradition of racial solidarity, such as the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, the Millinery Workers, the United Hebrew Trades and others declined to have anything further to do with the Congress but preferred to follow their splendid tradition by continued support of the constructive work of the N.A.A.C.P. and the Race Labor Committee.

OF COURSE, THE Communist stooges at the helm of the Congress became immediately alarmed and began to find ways and means of portraying the Congress in a light other than Red. But the more they tried, the more obvious became their influence over the Congress, especially to those of us who had had some experience in the labor movement with Communist tactics and duplicity. Individuals who were not Communists but who enjoyed the respect and confidence of our group and of the labor movement were invited to serve on various Committees of the Congress. Upon their acceptance of the invitation, the Communist journals lavished such fulsome praise upon those individuals that even to this day, many of those individuals are unable to overcome the stigma.

UPON ONE OCCASION the New York unit of the Congress called a Conference in the Harlem Labor Center (Labor's Home in Harlem) to secure for the Congress the backing of the trade union movement. At that Conference most of the local Colored leadership of the Communist Party was present. The only trade unionists were non-Communists. The Conference resulted in disagreement. However, the Conferees agreed to give no publicity to the mater. Twenty-four hours later, however, the leading American Communist Journal carried a story of the Conference under the name of one of the Confrerees. It is needless here to emphasize that the account was utterly false. The only angels at the Conference were the Communists while the devils were the rest of us. We were branded as enemies of our race while the Communists were portrayed as real friends. When that false story appeared, it served better than anything I know to convince even the most doubting Thomas among us that the Community Party was playing its usual game.

AT THE SECOND Congress which was held in Philadelphia this writer consented to participate largely because of his long comradeship and high esteem for A. Philip Randolph. Here again the Communist influence and domination was open to all who had eyes, with which to see. Train accommodations for delegates were arranged by "World Tourist, Inc." This Second Congress, without my previous knowledge, named me as one of its National Executive Committee members. I did not publicly decline the questionable compliment, purely because of my long association with my friend A. Philip Randolph. A few days after the adjournment of this Second Congress, the Executive Secretary John P. Davis left for Moscow. Of course, until his return the Congress did very little; and whatever publicity it received was largely by way of Communist newspapers.

WHEN THE THIRD and last Congress was decided upon, my mail became flooded with letters from Washington, D. C. and from the New York office of the Congress with the result that I attended my first and only meeting as an Executive Board member. Again the Red hand of Communism was boldly disclosed. The National Executive Secretary and the other spokesmen for Communism saw in President Roosevelt an evil incarnate and in the New Deal the very basis of all the problems faced by Colored America.

FROM THAT LOCAL meeting, I became thoroughly convinced that neither Mr. Randolph nor any other person seriously concerned with advancing the interest of our group and of the American workers could afford any longer to permit the Communists to use their presence in the Congress as a cloak behind which to hide the fact that another attempt is being made by the Communists to use the plight of our group to carry on their destructive program in the United States.

(to be continued next week)

Editor's Note—Mr. Crosswaith is general organizer of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union and Chairman of the Colored Labor Committee. He has long been active in Labor and Socialist circles. In this column Mr. Crosswaith expresses his own opinions which are not necessarily the views of THE GUARDIAN.

Lewis and the Negro Congress

(The following is taken from the Congressional Record of April 30, 1940)

REP. ROBERT S. ALLEN (D. Pa.)—I read with amazement and despair that a declaration was passed and applauded by the Negro Congress wherein it was stated that if the United States ever went to war with Soviet Russia they would refuse to defend this country. That is treason. That statement should be repudiated by all Negroes who love this country and who believe in democracy. No intolerant white man could have hurt our American Negroes as much as those deluded members of their own race. The greatest enemies of our colored minority in the United States are those who pass such vicious resolutions as that which I have just read. (Applause.)

No group in America is doing more to undermine the rights of our Negro population than the leaders of the Negro Congress who are obviously in the pay of the Communist Party in America. (Applause.)

John L. Lewis is equally culpable with the author of that treasonable resolution passed by the Negro Congress. He openly invited the Negro Congress to join his Labor Non-Partisan League, which is the political arm of the CIO. Inferentially he approves the composition and program of any group which he invites to affiliate with the CIO. There can be no doubt in the mind of anyone that in this instance Mr. Lewis has encouraged the spread of communism.

Much credit must be given to A. Philip Randolph of New York, head of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, who declined reelection for a third term as president and then resigned from the Congress because it had been financed by the Communist Party.

White people, as well as Negroes, should join in open condemnation of the Negro Communist Congress, its sponsors, and its treasonable declaration which I referred to in my opening remarks.

REP. WM. M. COLMER (D. Miss.)—There are some very prominent white people in national affairs who, I fear, are responsible for stirring up this turmoil among the Negroes. (Applause.) This Negro Congress is nothing more nor less than a communistic affair. And certain organizations who characterize themselves as patriotic American institutions are inviting these communistic Negroes to join them. And I refer to John L. Lewis specifically.

Maiden Affirms Loyalty of Negroes; Denounces National Negro Congress

Washington, D. C.—Cornelius Maiden, Southern Negro organizer for the American Federation of Labor, charged that the National Negro Congress "has been utterly destroyed by the white Communists and CIO members from the East."

Mr. Maiden, who resigned from the Congress along with A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, declared the Negro workers of this country are loyal to American principles and to the American Federation of Labor.

Denouncing the Communist-CIO coup, by which the Congress was dragooned into the Red party line, Mr. Maiden said he would urge the 300,000 Negro members of A. F. of L. unions in the South to repudiate the National Negro Congress. He added:

"Our Negroes of the South will never follow the Communist leaders, nor will they ever become a part of the CIO, nor do they want anything to do with Mr. Lewis' Labor's Non-Partisan League.

"I tried to represent my people of the South in the convention of the National Negro Congress but the Communists howled me down, simply because I, as a member of the Committee on Constitution, tried to put into the constitution of the National Negro Congress a clause saying that no one except Negroes be allowed to become members of the Congress.

"Our people know that the American Federation of Labor has long been fighting for elimination of the poll tax as a condition of voting. The poll tax has been eliminated in all but a few states, and it was the constant fight of the American Federation of Labor down through the years that removed the poll tax in so many of our states. The fight is continuing.

"The same is true of proposed anti-lynching bills. The American Federation of Labor has long been interested in this matter, and the fact that lynching in the South has been so greatly reduced is due in large measure to the intelligent campaigns carried on by the American Federation of Labor and the State Federations of Labor in the Southern states. We would have been much more advanced in all of these great objectives had it not been for the hateful and deterring influences of just such radical groups as those which tore our National Negro Congress into smithereens here in Washington.

"The Negroes of the South have made the greatest progress during the last 75 years that has ever been made by any race of people in any country of the world in a like period of time. Three quarters of a century ago our race was in bondage. Today, we have our schools and colleges, our own merchants, doctors, dentists, engineers, farm-owners, school teachers, bankers, and everything that the white race enjoys. Our progress has been made possible largely through the constant, intelligent and loyal support given us by the American Federation of Labor."

MAX YERGAN DEFENDS CONGRESS

HITS CONGRESS CRITICS

"The great multitude of needy, oppressed, exploited American people, workers of various categories, members of many national backgrounds, and others including 15 million colored Americans, are begining to recognize that their weakness and sufferings have been largely due to their divided state," Dr. Max Yergan declared in a vigorous reply to the red scare criticism of the National Colored Congress of which he is the new elected president to succeed A. Philip Randolph.

He spoke last Wednesday night at a large mass meeting held in Columbus Ave. A.M.E. Zion Church under auspices of the New England Congress for Equal Opportunities. Others on the program were Rev. S. P. Perry, pastor of Grant A.M.E. Church, prayer, singing of Lift Every Voice" by the audience led by Mrs. Mabelle B. Scott with James Prout, pianist; Atty. J. R. Bourne, Dr. R. A. Simmons, Clive Knowles, Charles Wilson, Gad Stansil, vocal solo; and Mrs. M. Cravath Simpson who raised the collection.

A resolution urging passage of the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill was unanimously adopted.

Previous to the mass meeting Dr. Yergan was honor guest at a banquet held by the Eastern New England Congress for Equal Opportunities at Estelle's restaurant. Mrs. Catherine S. Manning was mistress of ceremonies. At the head table were Atty. Matthew W. Bullock, of the State Department of Correction; Atty. John R. Bourne, chairman; and William Harrison, executive secretary; all of whom gave greetings to the distinguished scholar. Other remarks were by Mesdames F. Hartman, Maude Trotter-Steward, and Bertha Pasco Young; Misses Florence H. Luscomb, vice-president of the Mass. Civil Liberties Committee and Zara duPont; Rev. Theodore deLucca of the Italian Baptist Church, Wakefield; Dtrs. Morrison Sharp of Harvard University and M. Cravath Simpson; Reynold Costa, chairman of the Boston N.A-A.C.P Youth Council; George R. Faxon of the Mass. Citizens Union; Claude H. Gordon, president of the Jamaican Associates; Edward Jackson of the C.I.O.; Ben Gordon of the I.W.O.; Otis Hood; Olive Knowles of Labor's Non -Partisan League; Louis E. Pasco of the Equal Rights League, Milton W. Snowden, John W. Schenck, J. Caswell Smith of the Urban League, the Dining Car Employees Union, Michael Tyson of the Furniture Workers Union, Charles Wilson of the Mass. Youth Council; and Dr. S. G. Pavlo of Malden.

Despite a heavy rainfall, more than 800 colored and white citizens thronged to Columbus A.M.E. Zion Church to hear Dr. Max Yergan, president of the National Colored Congress, emphasize that the chief problem confronting colored people today was the protection of existing jobs and civil liberties and the maintenance of peace.

On the issue of jobs, Dr. Yergan said that the National Race Congress recognizes the question of employment as the most urgent and basic confronting colored America. The Congress is committed to an immediate effort to widen the channels of employment. He pointed out that in not a single community in America do colored workers enjoy a natural and normal participation in the available jobs of the community. This is a serious indictment of, and the first charge upon, American democracy, he declared.
American democracy, he declared, he said.

On the question of peace, the Congress is opposed to America's entry into the war. America's war is to be fought here at home. "It is a war against unemployment, against lynching, against disfranchisement of vo-tem. America's task is to build democracy at home.

(Continued on Page 5)

MAX YERGAN DEFENDS CONGRESS

(Continued from Page 1)

Yergan said in part: "Understanding clearly, as we do, the purpose and motive of those who would weaken and divide and if possible destroy the Congress we know the uselessness of arguing with them. Our purpose is constructive; our method must be entirely correct and thereby characterized by boldness; and we are in deadly earnest because our cause is the greatest cause for which any effort can be put forth, namely, the protection and full advancement of an entire people in a potentially truly great country."

HUZZISH A GOOD PLACE TO EAT

LABOR UNION FIGHT LOOMS

Demands That President And Business Manager Be Ousted Voiced

Fears that the Harlem Labor Union is in danger of being put out of business and a strong condemnation of the leadership of the union were expressed in an open letter to members of the Harlem Labor Union sent out on Thursday under the signature of James R. Lawson, former vice-president of the union and present chairman of the Retail Sales Clerks' Unit.

At the same time Lawson demanded that Roger Straughn, president, and William E. Ferman, business manager, answer a series of questions on their activities or else be ousted by the union membership. He also warned the membership that unless something is done quickly, "all of us are subject to be thrown out of work."

In his open letter, Lawson said:

Lawson's Open Letter

"I wish to point out to you a few of the many things that have happened to your Union and about which, if something isn't done and done quickly, all of us are subject to be thrown out of work. You know that a movement is on foot to put the union out of business and Straughn, along with Ferman are playing in the hands of certain enemies of the organization. I have but to cite to you as examples, the Bus Strike Fiasco, the Pawnshop Fumble and the Milady Shop Fizzle to say nothing about the foolish way that negotiations were handled in Crawford Clothing Store, Smilen Brothers, Borden's Milk Farm Store, Paulette Millinery and National Shoes Store.

"I demand that Straughn and Ferman answer these questions tonight or face charges of misfeasance, malfeasance or nonfeasance in office.

"Since Hope Stevens is working for the TWU and Adam Powell is running for the City Council, when will Roger Straughn go to work as an inspector on the bus for selling out in the recent Bus Strike as was reported in The New York Age?

"What kind of labor contract is it that demotes pawn shop clerks to positions of porters—the white boys claiming seniority and doing clerical work only, while the black boys have to sweep and clean every morning?

"Why were the girls in Milady's sacrificed and a bad member allowed to work after a good member, Ernestine McClendon, went to jail fighting to unionize the shop?

"Why does the union permit a girl—and not a member at that—who was placed in the National Shoe Store by Al Linton (who is this fellow?) to hold a job which should by rights go to one of our unemployed sisters?

"Why does the union give the business it has to a white lawyer?

"Why does Straughn refuse to resume our regular weekly Wednesday nightly meetings

"When Reval-Knox Hats Company fired a white salesman last month why wasn't the job given to a colored salesman instead of to a white salesman?

"Why doesn't Straughn pay Dr. Hancock the $15 which the union owes him for speaking in Harlem on March 30?

"Why did Straughn snatch the dues collector's book and stop him from collecting dues although he has not been brought up on charges before the executive board?

"These questions are important, because the correct answers will determine the future policy of the union. If Ferman and Straughn can't answer them and answer them right, they got to go. We are tired of pussyfooting. I have talked with a number of members and we have decided that we want action and we want action now. A fighting, progressive union means shorter hours and better working conditions for all of the members besides more and better jobs for black people throughout Harlem."

RANDOLPH ACCUSED OF CHANGING STAND ON PULLMAN BILL

Porters' Chief Ran Out On Promise, Says Report Of Rail Labor Leaders

ANSWER TO PROPAGANDA

Legislation Introduced After Pledge of Non-Interference Had Been Given

President M. S. Warfield of the Pullman Conductors has sent to Senators and Congressmen copies of a report by the Railway Labor Executives' Association's special committee which has been campaigning for passage of the bill to require the Pullman Company to employ conductors on all-night runs, instead of using "porters-in-charge."

The members of the committee are J. A. Phillips, president of the Railway Conductors and chairman of the association; B. M. Jewell, president of the Railway Employes' Department, A. F. of L.; S. J. Hogan, president of the Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association, and Warfield.

The report charges that A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, broke his promise not to oppose the bill, and thus blocked its progress through Congress after it had been approved by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

Doesn't Injure Porters

Warfield's letter pointed out that "the opponents of this bill sought to create the impression that it discriminates against porters because they are black. There is no foundation for this suggestion, as is shown in the record of the hearings before the Senate subcommittee on May 15, 16 and 17.

"It is the conductors, not the porters, who are the victims of discrimination under the present operating conditions. The bill would correct that discrimination by putting conductors back on the runs from which they have been removed. The porters would not lose a single job; they would simply be relieved of the burden of doing two men's work for the wages of one."

Answer to Propaganda

Warfield explained to the legislators that he sent them the letter and the report "to clear the atmosphere of all false propaganda concerning this bill, so that it may receive the attention it deserves from Congress."

The report first reviews the long and patient efforts made by the Pullman Conductors to settle this dispute with the company by negotiation. Finally, "having no other course open to them, the Sleeping Car Conductors decided to seek a national law to compel the Pullman Company to employ conductors on all-night runs, as a safety measure as well as protection against unemployment."

Senator Sherman Minton of Indiana and Congressman Robert Crosser of Ohio agreed to introduce the bill, the report said, if Randolph would not oppose it.

Randolph's First Position

At a meeting in Chicago, on March 20, 1940, Randolph "refused to put anything in writing," but "he referred to his article in the 'American Federationist' of August, 1939, as sufficient evidence that he would not oppose our bill." In his article, Randolph said:

> "These porter-in-charge jobs only serve to displace a Pullman conductor or dining car steward, thereby bestowing an unfair economic advantage on the carrier."

The committee report continues: "Randolph said he preferred to keep out of the picture, but he would not oppose the bill, and no officer or member of his organization would oppose it.

"With this positive assurance of non-interference, the committee obtained the cooperation of Minton and Crosser, and the bill was introduced. A representative of the Sleeping Car Porters attended the Senate subcommittee hearings. He did not register any opposition."

Makes Sudden "Switch"

So far, Randolph had kept his promise, but now, the report recalls, came a sudden change.

"On June 3, President Warfield called on Senator Minton and was told that Randolph had wired opposition to the bill, and was sending two of his officers to Washington to ask for another hearing by the Senate committee. The Senator said that, under these circumstances, there would be no chance of progressing the bill further at this session.

"Warfield immediately asked President William Green of the A. F. of L. to call Randolph to Washington for a conference to learn the cause of his actions." The conference was held on June 7, and Randolph "offered nothing to justify his conduct. He said simply that he had changed his mind."

"In view of these facts, and the serious damage to the Order of Sleeping Car Conductors," the report concludes, "this committee recommends that appropriate action be taken by the Railway Labor Executives' Association, and that it be referred to the American Federation of Labor for investigation and action."

ARE ANTI-STRIKE LAWS NECESSARY?

The American Federation of Labor has notified Congress that it is opposed to all pending anti-strike measures as unnecessary. We believe such abortive legislation is not only unnecessary, but unwise. Such activities by Congress will alienate the support of the most highly integrated unit of action in this nation, and create suspicion, distrust and antagonism in the one patriotic, dependable group upon which our defense program rests, namely, organized labor.

This much is sure, you cannot intimidate free American labor and confine its exuberance in a totalitarian model straight jacket. If labor becomes suspicious that this world wide fight for freedom and human dignity is spurious and that its own liberty of action and legitimate aspirations are to be circumscribed under the guise of national necessity, it most certainly will not, willingly or graciously, cooperate with a potential Inquisition. Organized labor, the A. F. of L., the CIO and the Railroad Brotherhoods, has come out of its adolescent growing pains into maturity. The turbulance and disorder which signified the transition of our nation from a peace time to a war-time economy is over. Labor is prepared to do its level best, to make bona fide sacrifices for the national interest, but we cannot be expected to be cajoled or intimidated through compulsion. Neither can we expect to be jockeyed into a position where we no longer are the master of our own destinies. Organized labor will yield to no Government, the same instruments through which Hitler destroyed German labor. While we pledge to refrain from strikes in defense industries, we most certainly will not surrender our inalienable right to strike. If Congress thinks otherwise, it is going to force over ten million members of organized labor to unite for political action.

Control of Prices Not All

Mr. Baruch Argues Against Treating the Matter as Separate Effort

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your editorial "The President on Taxes" you say: "The President is completely right" when he draws our attention to the fact "that taxation is a necessary complement of price-control legislation, because the continuing effectiveness of price control is largely dependent upon the restriction of the demand for goods." Quite right.

Too much emphasis has been placed upon price control and not enough on the other things necessary for preventing inflation. In my testimony before the House Banking and Currency Committee I said: "To ease the inflationary pressures we must try to increase supply, either directly by increasing production or indirectly by finding substitutes, or by conservation and simplification. Then we must try to cut off demand by—

"1. Increased taxes which will lessen buying power but above all will help to pay as we go and avoid many of the social and economic aftermaths of war.

"2. By controlling credit so that the government would borrow from individuals rather than banks, further lessening purchasing power.

"Demand can never be cut sufficiently to meet supply and price control plus priorities therefore must bridge the gap."

And again: "I do not believe that you can treat price control as a separate effort. It must be intimately tied up and move in step with all other war controls, wage and rent control, priorities, conservation, commandeering war trade, war finance, and so forth. They are like the fingers of a hand. Without all together the job can't be done satisfactorily."

Further: "Price control must be treated as only a part of the whole of total defense made necessary by the threat of total war. By itself, price control has no value and will fail. Therefore it must be discussed in relation to the whole scheme of industrial mobilization."

When you talk of defense it must be total defense, and if it is total defense it must be defense now and all-out defense.

Bernard M. Baruch.

New York, Nov. 18, 1941.

N.Y. HERALD TRIBUNE 44 11/12/41

Harlem Parley Acts to Improve Negroes' Lot

Committee Will Be Named to Draft Plan on Housing and Cutting Joblessness

Two hundred representatives of schools, churches, social agencies, business associations and other organizations, both Negroes and whites, met for two hours yesterday in Harlem Magistrate's Court, Sylvan Place and East 121st Street, and heard speakers assert that bad housing, poor economic conditions for Negroes and other social injustices were responsible for the recently publicized outbreak of juvenile crime in Harlem.

The Rev. Dr. Robert W. Searle, general secretary of the Greater New York Federation of Churches and chairman of the Social Service Bureau of the Magistrate's Courts, presided.

The conference voted to name a committee of civic officials and Harlem business and social representatives to outline methods of improving Harlem's living conditions. Three magistrates who attended the meeting, Mrs. Anna M. Kross, Raphael R. Murphy and Edgar Bromberger, will join with Dr. Searle and other members of the Magistrates' Social Service Board to help select the committee, which will meet within a week, Dr. Searle said.

Powell Sees Mayor

Meanwhile, the Rev. A. Clayton Powell jr., newly elected Negro City Councilman, was conferring with Mayor F. H. LaGuardia at City Hall. Mr. Powell said that he had made two recommendations for improving the Harlem situation "temporarily." One would be to assign more Negro patrolmen and detectives to precincts on Harlem's fringe, to forestall trouble between Negroes and whites. The other would be to open settlement houses and other recreation places in Harlem to both Negro and white youths, so that they could "exchange ideas." Negroes at present are barred from many institutions serving white youths only, he said. The Mayor asked him to put his suggestions in writing and to list the recreation places which would be opened, and appeared favorable, Mr. Powell said.

Dr. Searle, opening yesterday's conference, asserted that a solution for conditions in Harlem was "perhaps the most profound social problem" facing New York. He said that the city had failed to guard the rights of its Negro minority, and asserted: "The whole community is accomplice to the crime." He stressed the plea that "the major problem here is not crime."

Mrs. Kross, who is sitting in the Harlem Court this week, said that Harlem's crime was purely the result of poverty, unemployment, bad housing and other economic conditions. She said that the 250 extra policemen assigned last week to lower Harlem and the upper Central Park section should be kept there, but made clear her opinion that this was no permanent solution. Calling for a co-operative effort to clear up the basic faults, she said:

"If there is blame I have come to the conclusion that the far greater blame rests on us as citizens and not on the police, the magistrates or public departments."

Mrs. Anna E. Lawson, principal of Junior High School 81, in Harlem, asserted that more help in Harlem schools was urgently needed, "but what do we get?—a cut in the budget." Of the 1,600 girls in her school, she said, 1,400 are "fine and decent," but 200 are "pretty low," with thirty sure to "be behind prison bars in not so many years."

Discrimination Charged

Harold C. Burton, a Negro and a Republican leader in the 21st Assembly District, laid the blame for Harlem's high crime rate on unfair discrimination in relief assistance. "The home relief people don't seem to understand that the colored people need to eat, just like other people do," he cried. This drew a reply and an additional charge from Mrs. Vivian C. Mason, also a Negro, of the Department of Welfare. She reported that home relief budgets were the same for all races, but went on to declare that the real reason for Harlem relief clients' poor living condition was the fact that decent housing there costs far more than in other sections.

"I should like to know," she demanded, "why it is that all Negroes must be shunted to Harlem. . . . I'd like to know what the real estate interests think of this condition." She demanded, "Why can't Negroes get jobs?" and urged that large employers be asked to take more Negro workers so as to cut Harlem's disproportionately high relief rolls. Parole Commissioner Samuel J. Battle, former Negro policeman, upheld her criticism of discrimination against Negroes for jobs, and said that the doors of many defense industries were barred to Negroes. "I feel this matter to be very acute," he said.

There was a momentary flurry when a Negro, who gave his name as E. H. Fernandez, said: "Why don't white people keep out of Harlem unless they have legitimate business here? . . . We are living on the good will of the white people. . . . We are helpless."

Colonel Leopold Philipp, president of the Uptown Chamber of Commerce, rose to declare warmly that "firebrands" were disrupting the relations between Negroes and whites. He was interrupted by shouts from the floor, and Dr. Searle warned the Chamber of Commerce spokesman that if he persisted along the same lines he would have to ask him to take his seat. Colonel Philipp, however, continued that white business men in Harlem were vitally interested in improvements.

Permission to reprint this material must be obtained from Council For Democracy.

NEWS AND FEAT

Released Monthly Council For Democracy, 285 Madison Avenue, New Y

FOUR FREEDOMS

By Raymond Gram Swing
Chairman of the Council For Democracy

FREEDOM OF RELIGION

Our Heritage and Our Goal

THE Bill of Rights is a hundred and fifty years old, which is a natural occasion for retrospect. But it is a minor reason compared with the peril which must be surmounted if these rights are to be preserved.

Rights that have been safe for a hundred and fifty years are not for that reason safe for two hundred years.

It took sacrifice and heroism to establish them. Through the recurring crises of a century and a half, they have been kept intact in the letter, and most of the time in the spirit.

Today these rights are the essence of a world struggle, which will decide whether the current of the future turns sharply against individual rights. A review of the hundred and fifty years of cherished freedoms should spur the inheritors to as great endeavor to maintain them.

President Roosevelt's four freedoms are more than a summary of the Bill of Rights. Freedom of worship and expression are there explicitly. Freedom from fear is there as regards domestic tyranny, with security against the suspension of legal safeguards. Fear of a foreign tyrant, or a foreign doctrine of tyranny, could hardly be guaranteed in such a document. Neither could the freedom from want. These are the goals which a long-free America is now dedicated to attain.

It is clear, the Bill of Rights would be lost in a world subject to tyranny. It also is clear that without the freedom from want, men will be tempted to forego other freedoms in the pursuit of economic security. So the sesqui-centennial of the Bill of Rights calls for more than reverent gratitude toward the past. It must be the reassertion of its bold spirit. It must carry forward the achievement of pioneers.

FREEDOM FROM WANT

F DOM SPEECH

FREEDOM FROM FEAR

Top photos by Stroschl, Scherschel; U. S. Camera, Milwaukee Journal.

Conductors and Rail Clerks Line-up Behind Roosevelt

"Greatest Friend of Labor Ever to Occupy White House," Declares President Phillips; Harrison Boosts "F. D."

Two more big Railroad Labor Organizations—the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks—have joined the Roosevelt parade by formally indorsing the President for re-election.

The Conductors took action through their General Legislative Committee, which is composed of the members of the Board of Directors.

In the October issue of "The Railway Conductor," President James A. Phillips points out that this is only the third time the O. R. C. has indorsed a Presidential candidate. The first to win that distinction was La Follette in 1924, and in 1936 the Order officially supported Roosevelt for a second term.

Conductors

J. A. Phillips

"The events of the last four years have only served to strengthen our confidence in President Roosevelt as the friend of the common man," President Phillips continues. "Today, almost every union man and woman in the United States is supporting the President for re-election because of his past record.

"Greatest Friend of Labor"

"We know, without a doubt, he is by far the greatest friend of labor ever to occupy the White House.

"During his first term, 'Big Business,' which is represented by Wendell Willkie in this campaign, was aided and abetted by a reactionary Supreme Court in scuttling the major part of President Roosevelt's social program. Through normal changes in personnel, the Supreme Court has now become quite liberal in viewpoint, and recent decisions by it indicate that it once again represents the whole nation.

"President Roosevelt's second term has been marked by vicious attempts on the part of a bloc of reactionary Senators and Representatives, both Democratic and Republican, to sabotage legislation benefiting the working man.

"In spite of these major handicaps, President Roosevelt has been successful in doing more for the common people than any other President in our history.

"My opportunities to observe at first-hand the sincere interest of President Roosevelt in the welfare of the working man have convinced me that the common people should not abandon the tried and true friend in what promises to be one of the most critical periods in our history."

Discounts Third-Term Issue

Mr. Phillips dismisses the third-term issue with the statement that the men who drafted the Constitution "realized that it was not the number of terms which a President serves that makes him a good or a bad President, but what he does in office.

"As a consequence, they declined to write into the Constitution a prohibition against the third term."

The O. R. C. chief concludes with this appeal:

"Railroad men have much at stake in the November election. The leading enemies of labor are united in their opposition to President Roosevelt. They are prepared to go the limit in their attempt to defeat him and all that he stands for, because they are confident his defeat will put them back in the saddle, where they feel they rightly belong.

"If they are successful, it will be a great calamity for the working men and women in every industry.

"Go to the polls on November 5 and see that your friends and relatives do likewise. This is your chance to cast a vote for liberty and humanity."

Harrison Enthusiastically for "F. D."

President Harrison, speaking for the Railway Clerks, said in an interview with LABOR:

"I am enthusiastically for the re-election of President Roosevelt. At the very beginning I should like to emphasize what I consider an extremely important point:

"My guess is that railroad workers are almost 100 per cent for the President, and that they will not neglect to go to the polls on election day. That's good, but I hope the railroad workers will do something more.

"All have friends and relatives at home and in other states. Here is a great field for missionary work. President Roosevelt has done much for railroad workers.

"They should reciprocate by getting in touch with these friends and neighbors, especially those who are inclined to oppose the President's re-election, and explain to them how essential it is that this great humanitarian should be kept in power for the next four years.

"The coming election is extremely important—one of the most important in our nation's history—in that so many issues which vitally affect labor are at stake.

Clerks

G. M. Harrison

"Never before has the progress of the working people been so rapid and substantial. Many laws that have been enacted during the administration of President Roosevelt, for the benefit of working people, have been far-reaching in their effect and resulting benefits.

"The growth and development of the labor movement can be attributed to the safeguards that have been placed around the right to organize and bargain collectively. Protection in old age and assistance during periods of temporary unemployment have brought a new degree of freedom and independence to the workers and answered one of the most perplexing problems of human existence.

Better Balance Held Needed

"It is my firm conviction that the reordering of our economic system through the elimination of abuses, and the establishment of a greater degree of control by the people, has resulted in greater security and improved economic opportunities for the average citizen. Federal programs for housing, children and health will bring greater social gains. Reduction in the hours of labor and the minimum wage are of great value to workers.

"The establishment of a better balance between various groups assures to our people to a larger degree enjoyment of the benefits of our democratic way of life.

"The platform upon which President Roosevelt seeks re-election," continued Grand President Harrison, "promises many beneficial advances in our social and economic life, and when taken with the 'New Deal' already realized, promises much hope for a continuation of this progress. World conditions demand his re-election. He is the outstanding champion of free government and democratic institutions.

"In these times it appears clear that the peoples of this Hemisphere have a grave responsibility in this connection. Upon them rests the task of sustaining these free institutions and providing the force and guidance so essential to the re-establishment of human freedom where it has temporarily disappeared.

"It is my firm conviction that the interests of working men and women will be best served by the re-election of President Roosevelt."

LABOR

OCTOBER 15, 1940

PM, WEDNESDA

These sailors fro[illegible] the Nazi battleship Bismarck had [illegible] they arrived back in England. The victory was the best in a long time.

Negroes to March to Capital to Protest Discrimination

By Penn Kimball

Negroes from all over the U. S. A. plan to march on Washington July 1 to demand that the Government take effective action to end race discrimination in defense plants and the nation's armed forces. Organization of a protest parade in the capital is going ahead despite FDR's recent anti-discrimination memorandum to the OPM.

The chairman of the organizing committee is A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL. Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., pastor of Harlem's Abyssinian Baptist Church, are committee members. The drive to rally 100,000 Negroes in Washington against Jim Crowism in the fighting forces and job exclusion in armament factories has been going on for three months. March-on-Washington committees have been formed in major cities throughout the country.

A. Philip Randolph

Administration officials are reported trying to head off the demonstration.

Mr. Randolph and Walter White went to Mayor La Guardia's office last Friday for a conference with Mrs. Roosevelt and Aubrey Williams, NYA director. Mrs. Roosevelt had previously written the March-on-Washington sponsors that she believed that the demonstration was ill-advised. Mr. Randolph and Mr. White were urged to call off the march.

[illegible]day the President issued a proc[illegible] asking the OPM to deal "effectively a[illegible]ly" with discrimination against A[illegible] citizens in defense production." Mr. [illegible]h and Mr. White are in Washington [illegible] in response to a telegraphed invitation from Secretary of War Henry Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox.

Plans for the demonstration are going ahead, however. Committee members feel that nothing short of an executive order from the President is sufficient to deal with a situation which has grown progressively worse with expansion of the defense program. Negroes are almost entirely excluded from aircraft production jobs. They are Jim Crowed in the Army and confined to menial jobs in the Navy. The Air Corps has only recently accepted a limited number of Negroes for training.

According to present plans, Negro protest delegations will march on City Halls in New York, Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles and other large cities on June 27 to ask local mayors to petition Washington for direct anti-discrimination action. The local rallies will precede the July 1 demonstration in Washington, where a parade up Pennsylvania Avenue and a rally at the Lincoln Memorial have been scheduled.

Negro leaders supporting the march have varied political views and varied attitudes toward the war. Mr. Randolph, who resigned as president of the National Negro Congress on the ground that it was Communist-dominated, is on record as strongly favoring all aid to Britain and in general supporting FDR's foreign policy. On the other hand, the march on Washington was recently indorsed by James W. Ford, perennial Communist Party candidate for vice-president, and Left-wing Negro groups are backing it. A furious struggle for control of the political orientation of the demonstration, particularly as respects foreign policy, may develop.

Labor Laws Held Essential To Security of the Nation

Protection of Workers Just as Useful as Flying Fortresses And Other Armament, Declares Colonel Fleming

Labor laws are just as essential as ships, tanks and planes to safeguard the security of the American people. If such laws are destroyed, the nation's liberties will be endangered.

That strong warning was sounded this week by Colonel Philip B. Fleming, administrator of the Wage-Hour Act, in an address to a convention of the United Typothetae of America in Washington.

Labor Defense

Col. Fleming

It was a smashing repudiation of the hue and cry of reactionary propagandists that labor safeguards are imperilling the defense program.

"The most effective way of protecting our liberty," he said, "is by seeing to it that its protection means something vital to those who will be called to defend it. To save democracy we must make democracy work."

That can be done best, he contended, by upholding all labor legislation and putting the unemployed to work.

"You cannot calm their fears of joblessness, you canot kindle their patriotism with mere words," he stressed. "This can only be done by the sober, painstaking work of putting our millions of unemployed back on their feet by giving them self-respecting jobs and hope for the future."

The Wage-Hour Act is one of the laws that will aid America to reach that goal, he insisted. "It is just as useful to us in protecting our freedom as a squadron of flying fortresses," he emphasized.

"By means of it we have raised the wages of nearly a million of our fellow citizens, broken the back of inhuman hours of toil and curbed the use of oppressive child labor in interstate commerce," he said. "We have also released thousands of dollars a day in new purchasing power."

Every time the income of people in bottom brackets is pushed up, "we strengthen the fabric of our society against the day when others will come along to tear it apart," Fleming maintained.

In support of his view, he cited orders issued by the War Department in the last World War and the government's labor policy during the present defense emergency, specifying that reasonable hours, fair working conditions and decent wages are essential for efficiency and high production.

Even Great Britain, while faced with invasion, has recently shortened working hours because it found long hours "inefficient," Fleming pointed out.

THE NEW YORK AMSTERDAM NEWS

The Negro Worker Is the Negro Race

Members of Race Have Made Great Strides in Labor Organiations

By A. PHILIP RANDOLPH

THE problems of the Negro worker are the problems of the Negro race, because, fundamentally, the Negro workers are the Negro race. There is hardly one Negro capitalist in America, in the true sense of the term. Certainly, there is not one Negro capitalist whose capital investments exercise any appreciable influence upon business affairs and industrial trends in the nation.

White Incomes Top Negroes' Efforts at Organization Associated With Many Unions A. F. of L. Organizer is With

The census of 1930 is amply explicit of this point. This census established that there are 11,891,000 Negroes in the country. Of these, 5,503,535 Negroes were gainfully employed. In manufacturing and mechanical pursuits there were 896,592; agriculture claimed 1,987,839; in domestic and personal service there were 1,376,205; business had only 55,995; clerical occupations numbered 82,669; and in the professions, 115,765.

Thus, it is apparent from the foregoing figures that the Negroes in America earn their living, not by receiving rent, interest and profit as the result of the ownership of property, the investment of capital and the exercise of their managerial ability in productive and distributve enterprises, but by selling their labor power in the market from day to day for wages.

In manufacturing and mechanical industries the large majorities of Negroes are unskilled. Only 140,829 out of 896,592 Negroes in manufacturing and mechanical industries are in skilled occupations, while 571,992 were unskilled and 183,772 were semi-skilled.

What do these workers earn?

Recent studies show that in 1935-1936 the median annual family income for white families in the southern rural area was $1,100 compared with $480 for Negro families in the same area. In southern cities of 2,500 population and over, white families had an average income of $1,570 compared with $525 for Negro families. Even in the North Central cities of 100,000 population and over, the average annual income of white families was $1,720 compared with $1,095 of Negro families.

In the southern rural regions, 28% of white families as against 80% of Negro families receive less than $750 per year, nor had the majority of families reached the satisfactory income by 1929, the boom year of prosperity.

What are the Negroes doing about this?

They are attempting to do two things—One: To increase their mechanical skill by securing industrial training in the various industrial schools of the South and trade schools of the North. Not a sufficient number of Negroes, however, are in the trade schools acquiring various forms of skills. In the present defense plan of President Roosevelt, Negro workers will not play as large a role as skilled workers as they should, that is, upon a basis of their present status in the domain of skilled workers.

Efforts should be made by the combined pressure of Negro organizations, however, to secure a fair and equitable consideration in the Government's defense program for young Negroes to secure skilled training and jobs in every trade and calling that may be required effectively to execute this vast defense plan of the Government.

Two: Negroes are attempting to improve their economical lot through labor organization. In the last few years, practically all of the trade unions that admit Negroes and that cover industries in which Negroes are employed, and Negro workers knocking at their doors for entrance.

The most prominent efforts in the last decade among Negro workers to organize were among the Pullman Porters, Dining Car Employes and Red Caps. Ashley L. Totten, International Secretary-Treasurer; M. P. Webster, First International Vice-President, along with other porters in the Pullman industry, played an important role in the building of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, which won an agreement from the Pullman Company in 1937, bringing an increase in income for Pullman Porters of some $2,000,000.

Willard S. Townsend, International President of the United Transport Service Workers of America, together with A. J. McGhee and other active workers have conducted an agressive campaign for the organization of the Red Caps into a vital trade union, which is winning definite achievements for this class of employes.

The fight of the Dining Car Employes has been led by Solon C. Bell, Clarence R. Johnson and George Brown, together with a number of other militant and able men. George Brown was chosen as one of the International Vice-Presidents of the International Hotel and Restaurant Employes Alliance and International Bartenders' League and is one of the few Negroes who is Vice-President of one of the great international trade unions of America.

The International Long Shoremen's Association has several Nero international Vice-Presidents together with a large number of business agents.

In the building trades, there are many Negroes not very well known, who hold responsible executive positions in the local and national set up of these trades.

Out on the Pacific Coast, C. L. Dellums, Fourth International Vice-President of the Brotherhood and Revels Cayton are the two outstanding labor leaders. Revels Cayton is second in command to Harry Bridges, who heads the West Coast Federation of CIO Maritime Unions.

But undoubtedly, the leading Negro leader of the country is Frank R. Crosswaith, who is presently one of the International Organizers of Internationol Ladies' Garments Workers' Union, and also Chairman of the Negro Labor Committee of Harlem. He was at one time Special Organizer for the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and headed the rst Trade Union Committee to organize Negro workers in New York City. As a result of his organizing ability over 50,000 Negroes in New York City have been beneciaries of trade union efforts.

In the packing house industry, Henry Johnson of Chicago, has performed a signal job.

On the staff of organizers of the American Federation of Labor, working out of President William Green's office is Cornelius Maiden, who is an International Organizer and Vice-President at large of the Alabama Federation of Labor.

Thus, in the American Federation of Labor and the Congress For Industrial Organization, Negroes are playing an increasingly important part, as members, officials and organizers.

Unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor are steadily taking steps to advance the organization of Negro workers. Those unions that have color bars in their constitutions are giving thought to their elimination under pressure from agitation from within and without.

The outlook for the growth of power among the Negro workers in the American labor movement is full of promise.

THE NEW YORK AGE

Saturday, September 7, 1940

Red Caps Union Completing Plans For Court Fights On Three Fronts

CHICAGO, Ill.—Swinging into high gear with perfect co-ordinated organizational precision and efficiency, the United Transport Service Employees of America is in the midst of completing preparations for its frontal attack upon the railway industry, in the attempt to successfully secure the well-being of the nation's red caps, station porters and ushers.

With over twenty-five railroad companies covered by contracts which control approximately $2,-000,000 annually in wages, the UTSEA is mobilizing its entire membership for a productive campaign on three major fronts; namely, the 10c bag fee controversy before the Interstate Commerce Commission; the $5,000,000 wage recovery suit before the federal courts and the jurisdictional case before the National Mediation Board. [illegible] hearings on the [illegible] is scheduled [illegible] Sept. [illegible] at the Neth[illegible]el in Cincinnati before [illegible]iner Claude A. Rice of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The hearing is a result of a complaint filed by a passenger and the UTSEA entered the proceedings supporting the passenger's contention as to the illegality of the fee. In addition the UTSEA seeks to determine the status of many of its contracts negotiated on the basis of the bag charge. In connection with this hearing, the Union plans to have the Commission issue suppoenas for nearly fifty witnesses, many of whom will be employees of the various railroad companies. The Union has also inaugurated a campaign to secure over 300,000 protest signatures among railroad passengers.

9 Suits Already Filed

The wage recovery suit is scheduled for a hearing during the latter part of September in the U. S. District Court at Chicago. Although nine similar suits have been filed in various federal court districts, the pivotable suit is maintained in the Northern Illinois district. Last week, additional suits were filed against the Columbus Union Depot Company and the Indianapolis Terminal Company. In an effort to determine the exact amount of wages due and to salvage as much out of the suit as possible, the railroads have taken the position that no red cap can be included in the suits, unless he has authorized the plaintiff in writing to represent him. To-date, over 75 percent of the nation's red caps have signified their desire to be included in the suits in the form of written designations to the Union. The Union has announced that only those signing these designations will be presented to the court for final settlement.

The case before the National Mediation Board involves a dispute between the UTSEA and the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, an AFL affiliate. It concerns the legality of arbitrary scope agreements with railroad companies covering many crafts and classes of employment. This case is probably considered one of the most significant in the history of the Railway Labor Act, since the practice [illegible] operated unfavorably [illegible] of Negro railroad [illegible] not permitted to [illegible] white brotherhoods, and [illegible] hitherto have been forced [illegible] of the industry by the job control mechanisms in many of these agreements.

Randolph Urges Negroes Back FDR War Plans

President of Sleeping Car Porters Skirts Issue of Conscription in Red-Baiting Speech—Pays Tribute to Strong Organization

The second day's session of the convention of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL, yesterday heard A. Phillip Randolph, its president, urge the Negro people to support the war policies of the Roosevelt Administration.

At the opening business session of the convention, held in the 180 West 135th St. Y.M.C.A., Randolph utilized his main address to the one-hundred delegates attending, as a plea to the Negro people of this country to support the warmongering administration.

Randolph, an adherent of the Hillman-Dubinsky school in the trade union movement, did the Negro people a distinct disservice in his speech when he resorted to outright red-baiting. It was evident from the tone of the speech that Randolph is well aware that the Negro people are highly sceptical, many of them flatly opposed to the war character of the Roosevelt administration, and he aimed his address at overcoming such existing hostility.

His main barb was leveled against the Soviet Union's peace policy, and he attempted to slander the Soviet leaders, by linking them with the fascist dictators. He completely exonerated the vicious scheming of Baron Mannerheim against the security of the Soviet Union, and claimed that Finland was the "victim" of an "unprovoked attack."

Randolph joined the Dies-Hoover witchhunt camp in his speech when he called for the expulsion of Communists from the trade union movement.

DODGES DRAFT ISSUE

Main tenor of his address was directed at winning the Negro members of the brotherhood and the Negro people generally to the Roosevelt "defense" program. He skirted completely the issue of peace-time conscription.

Randolph paid tribute to the leaders and membership of the Sleeping Car Porters Union for their excellent accomplishment in building a powerful and still growing union. He singled out for special tribute such officials of the union as Ashley L. Totten, international secretary-treasurer, M. P. Webster, international first vice-president and others for their loyalty, devotion and sacrifice so that the union could be established.

He also reviewed the negotiating activities of the union with the railroads, and announced that the union will conduct negotiations with the Pullman Company in Chicago on Sept. 13 where it will ask a reduction of monthly working hours from 240 to 210 hours in order to increase employment.

Other speakers during the morning and afternoon sessions of the convention were Dr. Willard Uphouse, director of the National Religion and Labor Foundation, Spencer Miller, director of the Workers Educational Bureau of America, and Dr. J. Burton of Chicago.

At today's sessions, a series of resolutions will be introduced to the delegates, several of them typical red-baiting affairs in line with the hysterical war campaign of the Roosevelt government.

Other resolutions to be considered deal with labor unity, the need for preserving labor's gains under the defense program, support of the anti-lynch and anti-poll tax bills, and one condemning the "color bar in the trade unions."

New York Amsterdam News
VOL. XXXI, No. 41
IN TWO SECTIONS
SECTION ONE
NEW YORK, SAT., SEPT. 21, 1940
NEW YORK CITY
ELSEWHERE 10 CENTS

PORTERS RAP REDS

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1940.

PARADE WILL OPEN PORTERS' CONCLAVE

Fifteenth Convention of A. F. L. Brotherhood to Start in Harlem Next Sunday

MRS. ROOSEVELT TO SPEAK

Also to Address Negro Union Are Mayor, Governor, Green, Mead and Miss Perkins

The fifteenth anniversary convention of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, will begin here next Sunday afternoon with a parade through the streets of Harlem and a mass meeting at which Mayor La Guardia, Senator James M. Mead and William Green, president of the A. F. of L., will speak.

Others who will address the convention of this pioneer Negro labor union before it adjourns Sept. 20 will include Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Governor Lehman, Otto S. Beyer, chairman of the National Mediation Board, and Murray W. Latimer, chairman of the Railroad Retirement Board. A. Philip Ranlolph, president of the brotherhood since it was organized Aug. 25, 1925, will preside at the sessions.

Negotiations for revision of the collective agreement between the union and the Pullman Company are to begin Sept. 23, and the convention will give much of its attention to the program to be presented at these conferences. Mr. Randolph said the organization's base objective would be a reduction in monthly working hours from 240 to 210, with no cut in existing pay. Wages under the current contract ranged from $87.50 to $100.50 a month.

Reviewing the union's progress since 1925, Mr. Randolph listed its achievevements under the following main headings:

"Organizing Pullman porters into a bona fide labor union and holding it intact in the face of the opposition of the Pullman Company with its vast resources and during a depression such as we are now passing through.

"Gaining an international charter with the American Federation of Labor.

"Achieving the status of railroad men for the porters and waiters, giving them the benefit of any other railroad men under the Amended Railroad Labor Act.

"Aiding, through persistent agitation, in outlawing the reprehensibel company union plan among railroad men.

"Obtaining in 1937 the first agreement with the Pullman Company, in the face of the company's statement that it would never recognize the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

"Opening a way for other groups of Negroes to organize in labor unions and earning an honored place in the labor movement of this country and wherever the work of the union is known."

Delegates representing 7,200 members will attend the convention here. The opening session will be held at 3 P. M. Sunday in the Salem Methodist Episcopal Church, 129th Street and Seventh Avenue.

DEFENSE PROGRAM BACKED BY PORTERS

But Peacetime Conscription Is Opposed by Brotherhood

Delegates of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters supported the rearmament program and condemned fifth column activities, but opposed peacetime conscription, in resolutions adopted yesterday at the closing business session of the fifteenth anniversary convention of the organization in the Harlem Y. M. C. A., 180 West 135th Street.

Besides expressing approval of the preparedness program, the defense resolution called upon the President and Congress and the heads of various departments of the administration "to see eo it that no discrimination is practiced against American citizens entering all departments of the Army, Navy and Air Corps on account of race or color."

Several resolutions dealing with economic affairs and their relation to Negroes in business and industry were presented to the delegates.

They endorsed the Anti-Lynching Bill and supported resolutions favoring the continuance of WPA, PWA and relief measures as a means of remedying unemployment and voted for the establishment of a thirty-hour week in their own industry.

A. Philip Randolph was re-elected for another term as president. Milton P. Webster of Chicago will remain as first vice president and Ashley L. Totten of New York as secretary-treasurer.

Oscar DePriest Scores Tennis Champion Brown

Kansas City, Mo.—Oscar DePriest, Republican candidate for Congressman from the First Congressional District of Illinois, took a few minutes off while eating breakfast Monday morning to "explain a few things" to Edgar Brown, erstwhile national tennis champion and former editor of a newspaper in St. Louis.

The "calling down" occurred in the Street Hotel cafe and had its origin when Brown, in a taunting manner, made observations anent Mr. DePriest.

The candidate for Congress flew into Brown and flayed him going and coming, taking the opportunity to remind Brown that he had no vote in Chicago, and that if he was caught trying to vote, the prison would have another inmate and the prison barbers would have two hours work cutting Brown's hair and shaving his bewhiskered chin.

The cafe was crowded at the time, and DePriest was cheered roundly.

Tinkham's Speech

CONGRESSMAN Tinkham of Massachusetts did an unusual thing when he addressed the annual mass meeting of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People at Mother Zion Church last Sunday. A Republican himself, he advised the Negro to vote against the Republican party if that party failed to grant its just demands. He said that the continued disfranchisement of the Negro in the South could be charged to the Republican party because it had refused to enforce the Constitution.

THE REPUBLICANS allow disfranchisement and the Democrats practice it. To desert the Republicans and join the Democrats on the disfranchisement issue would be like jumping into a fire to escape from the heat. The only other party, not so much of a party, at that, is the Socialist, which has never made a fight for the Negro. It may become logical for Negroes to organize and support a party of their own.

SOCIALIST VOTE CUT

Thomas Runs Far Behind Dr. Laidler in 1936.

The Socialist vote for Governor in New York State was far behind that cast in 1936, it was indicated in returns from New York city and several upstate points.

Norman Thomas, the party's gubernatorial candidate, received 18,052 votes in this city, compared to 47,051 polled for Dr. Harry W. Laidler in 1936. The Socialist State vote in 1936 was 96,233.

Mr. Thomas received 914 votes this year in Buffalo, compared to Dr. Laidler's 4,356 in 1936; 88 in Chemung county, compared to 125 for Dr. Laidler in 1936, and 191 in Chautauqua county, where Dr. Laidler received 1,021 in 1936.

Communist party headquarters said Israel Amter, candidate for Representative-at-large and the party's only one in the State, received 87,649 votes.

NEW YORK POST, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1940

Why Porters Support Britain

Randolph Sees Negroes' Interest at Stake

By TED POSTON

Tall, deep-voiced A. Philip Randolph, head of the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, was explaining in his offices at 217 W. 125th St. why his union of 7,200 persons will declare itself in favor of giving [illegible] aid—even battleships—to aid the British.

The union is scheduled to do that in a six-day convention starting here Sunday.

"It's a matter of enlightened self-interest," the Harvard-accented labor leader, a mild-mannered Socialist, said. "Negroes don't want Britain to win merely because they love her, but because they love themselves—because they love the democratic way of life and the status of human beings."

"Most Dangerous"

Randolph, target in his day for some vigorous name-calling, went placidly on. The old Lusk Committee, of pre-Dies days, once called him "the most dangerous Negro in America" and later railroad executives characterized him as "a wild-eyed radical uppity Negro hustler who has never made a Pullman berth in his life." Since he resigned as president of the National Negro Congress, charging Communist domination, the Communists have been attacking him.

"If England loses this war," he said, brushing all that aside, "the United States is sure to be militarized, civil liberties will almost certainly be suppressed or destroyed. The American Negro can only hope to win his rights under a democratic system, with a free press, free assembly and the power of protest."

With almost a shudder, he added: "In 'Mein Kampf,' Hitler openly alludes to the Negro as 'half-ape,' and says he is subhuman. If he wins, Negroes can only expect re-enslavement and the status of chattel property.

"We are not forgetting Britain's attitude toward Negro[illegible] particular and darker r[illegible] general; they have been [illegible]ceived, betrayed and oppressed, but they are regarded as human beings.

Making Some Progress

"In the British colonies Negroes are making some progress—slow but sure. It is to the interest of the Negro to support the cause of Great Britain because only in a democratic system can he hope for the ultimate status of free men."

In 1917, when he was a young follower of Eugene V. Debs, Randolph opposed actual entrance into war and still does. During the final days of [illegible] War, he founded the [illegible]ng-er magazine wh[illegible] the spearhead of his [illegible]an-ize Pullman porte[illegible]tually he signed on the [illegible]behalf a contract guara[illegible]ages of $89.50 to $1[illegible] 240 hours' work.

Negotiations now [illegible] would reduce the ho[illegible]. A report on progress [illegible] negotiations will be offer[illegible] the convention, which will [illegible] addressed by Mayor LaGuardia, Gov. Lehman, Eleanor Roosevelt and others.

Green Asks Negro Porters To 'Sacrifice'

Vague on Jim Crow in Ranks of AFL; Makes War-Mongering Plea

William Green, AFL president and principal guest speaker before the opening session of the Fifteenth Anniversary Convention of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters here yesterday performed a masterpiece of evasion in a lengthy speech that completely ducked an issue raised by a previous speaker—the need for organization of unorganized Negro workers.

Over a thousand Negroes, more than a hundred of them delegates crowded every available seat in the Salem M.E. Church at 129th St. and Seventh Ave. as the anniversary convention opened under the chairmanship of Ashley L. Totten, international secretary-treasurer of the brotherhood, an organization of more than 7,000 members.

Green's speech was one of the most rabid warmongering efforts ever delivered by a so-called labor leader before a gathering of workers. The AFL president did everything but declare war, and when touching upon President Roosevelt's recent dictatorial action of giving the British government 50 destroyers without securing sanction of either the American people or its Congress, he said he "heartily approved" of the transaction.

He went on to plead, in Churchillian style, for American labor to "give all its brains, all its brawn and muscle, and all its services" to the pro-war government's armaments program.

Green polished off his speech by indulging in a fuming attack upon the Soviet trade unions, and the Soviet government's peace policy, which was none too enthusiastically received by the delegates and audience.

It was M. P. Webster, international first vice-president of the brotherhood, preceding Green on the rostrum, who posed a series of sharp issues which Green, in his subsequent speech carefully skirted. Webster tackled the burning question of the widespread race discrimination which the Negroes of this nation suffer under, and said that the prejudice extends into the ranks of the American Federation of Labor. He said, despite criticism of many Negro leaders of the Brotherhood's affiliation with the AFL, that it is the duty of the brotherhood to remain in the AFL "and in the labor movement and fight prejudice where it is."

"You can't fight it from the outside," he declared emphatically.

Webster assailed the press for its constant distortion of the Negro people, and singled out the reactionary Saturday Evening Post for publishing stories "which attempt to ridicule the Pullman porter," stories, which he said "are written in a dialect one can hardly understand."

The Negro union leader said that despite the splendid record of organization made by the brotherhood, that out of the 100,000 Negro workers in the railroad industry, the vast majority remain unorganized and neglected by most of the union officials.

[Full details of the convention proceedings will be continued in tomorrow's Daily Worker.]

Daily Worker Sept 16 1940

Santa Acts for Porters

Joey Steuart looks questioningly into [illegible] eyes as he receives a gift. The photo was made at the Christmas party for children given at the Phyllis Wheatley YWCA in Washington, on Monday, by the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and its ladies' auxiliary. Kiddies from all parts of Washington received shoes, clothing and candy.

CROWNED TRAPSHOOTING KING

Meet Sharpshooter T. D. McNeal of St. Louis, who recently wrested the national trapshooting title from Leyton Weston, three-time champion. McNeal also captured the Elks' national award. McNeal, field organizer for the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, copped the crown at the Present Day Gun and Rod club grounds in Elmwood Park, Mo., by winning the national skeet shoot championship.

Pittsburgh Courier 9/14/40

[illegible]e Dept. Band Will P[illegible] as Cops Meet Black [illegible]ts

[illegible] Inspector John P. [illegible]n, [illegible] Police Dept., announced this morning that the famed Police Department band will play between and before the double-header between the Police baseball team and Black Giants at the Polo Grounds next Sunday.

The games are to be played under the auspices and for the benefit of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and will find Cyclone Joe Williams, of the old Lincoln Giants, leading the Black Giants in action.

Beside the Police Band, additional music will be furnished by the Henry Lincoln Johnson Elks Band, under Hubert Finlay. A special flag raising ceremony will be held in which the following will participate: Congressman Joseph A. Gavegan, Alderman John William Smith, Assemblyman James E. Stephens, and Judges Charles E. Toney and James W. W[illegible]

Maury Is Backed by High Court

Maury Maverick, former member of Congress and now mayor of San Antonio, is in another of those hectic battles which he dearly loves. He granted Emma Tennayuca, an avowed Communist, known locally as "San Antonio's Passion Flower," a permit for a meeting in a small room in the Municipal Stadium. Legionnaires and others, probably egged on by Maury's foes, protested, broke up the meeting, and compelled the "Passion Flower" and her followers to flee for their lives under police protection.

Now there's talk of recalling Maury. Probably the movement won't get very far.

LABOR regards the "Reds" as a menace in some instances and nuisances in others. But they have a right to meet and present their views so long as they do not advocate the overthrow of the government by force.

That's the law as laid down by the Supreme Court of the United States in the Hague case. The mayor of Jersey City, acting by authority of a city ordinance, refused to grant a permit for a public meeting to a group he described as un-American and Communistic. The case was carried through all the Federal courts to the very highest, and in every instance the judges, most of them extreme conservatives, ruled that Mayor Hague was dead wrong.

So if the people of San Antonio respect court decisions, Maury has an excellent defense. If they don't care much about court decisions, they might ask themselves this question: What possible harm would have resulted if the "Passion Flower" had been permitted to hold that meeting? Probably it would have been a very dreary affair. Now the "Passion Flower" has gained the end she sought—her name is known from coast to coast.

Deny train drinking in '[illegible]cking increase'

Washi[illegible] May 16 (AP).—Witnesses for railroads and the Pullman Car. Co. today labeled "unwarranted and unjustified" testimony by Pullman employes that there had developed a "shocking increase" in drinking among train passengers, especially women.

"Our records do not substantiate such a statement," Champ Carry, vice president of the Pullman company, told a Senate subcommittee, "and, if true, the conductors failed in their duties, because the rules require they report any unusual incidents."

Carry appeared in opposition to a bill by Sen. Minton (dem., Ind.) to require employment of a sleeping car conductor on every train operating at night, regardless of the number of sleeping [illegible] it carried.

Carry said his company's practice of placing porters in charge of cars when conditions justify dated back to 1877 and did not represent an attempt by the management to eliminate conductors.

James M. Symes, general managers of the Pennsylvania railroad, contended that if additional personnel was necessary the railroads would have provided it the same as they provided air conditioning, streamlining and lower rates to increase passenger business against competition.

Cars handled by Pullman porters, testified Everett E. Pierce, general passenger agent for the New York Central railroad, were "just as well attended and passengers just as well cared for as where porters are working with conductors."

FIFTEENTH ANNIVERSARY

and

BI-ENNIAL CONVENTION

BROTHERHOOD

of the

of

SLEEPING CAR PORTERS

AN INTERNATIONAL UNION

AFFILIATED WITH A. F. of L.

SEPT. 15th–20 1940

INTERNATIONAL BROTHERHOOD OF SLEEPING CAR PORTERS

HEADQUARTERS . . . 217 WEST 125th STREET

• 6 GLORIOUS DAYS •

BI-ENNIAL CONVENTION

Special Features

EXECUTIVE SESSIONS

Y. M. C. A. - 180 West 135th Street

MONDAY - 16th — First Session 9:30 A.M.-12:30 P.M.
Lunch 12:30 P.M.- 1:30 P.M.
Second Session 1:30 P.M.- 5:30 P.M.

Convention Speakers: Hon. Otto S. Beyer, Chairman, National Mediation Board.
Hon. Murray W. Latimer, Chairman, Railroad Retirement Board.
Frank R. Crosswaith, International Organizer, International Ladies Garment Workers Union.
Dr. Willard Uphaus, Director, National Religion and Labor Foundation.

TUESDAY - 17th — Third Session 9:30 A.M.-12:30 P.M.
Lunch 12:30 P.M.- 1:30 P.M.
Fourth Session 1:30 P.M.- 5:30 P.M.
Fifth Session 5:30 P.M.- 7:30 P.M.

WEDNESDAY - 18th — Sixth Session 9:30 A.M.-12:30 P.M.
Lunch 12:30 P.M.- 1:30 P.M.
Seventh Session 1:30 P.M.- 5:30 P.M.
Eighth Session 5:30 P.M.- 7:30 P.M.

Y. W. C. A. — 144 WEST 138th STREET

The Ladies Auxiliary will hold their sessions simultaneously at the above address.

SPECIAL EXTRA

Hon. Herbert H. Lehman, Governor of New York, will speak at Y. W. C. A. Auditorium, Tuesday, September 17th, at 11 a.m.

6 GLORIOUS DAYS

LABOR DINNER — MECCA TEMPLE

MONDAY - 7 P.M. - 135 W. 55th Street
SEPTEMBER 16th

WE HAVE THE HONOR TO PRESENT OUR HIGHLY ESTEEMED AND MOST GRACIOUS
— FIRST LADY —
MRS. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT who will be introduced by
DR. MARY McLEOD BETHUNE

Other Speakers

WALTER WHITE—Secretary, N. A. A. C. P.
JAMES C. QUINN—Secretary-Treasurer, Central Trades and Labor Council of New York.
SPENCER MILLER — Director, Workers Education Bureau of America, A. F. of L.
C. L. DELLUMS—Fourth International Vice-President, B. S. C. P.

$2.50 per plate — Make all checks payable to ASHLEY L. TOTTEN, International Secretary-Treasurer
217 WEST 125th STREET
MOnument 2-5080
Suite 301

PARADE — MASS MEETING — SALEM M.E. CHURCH

129th Street and Seventh Avenue

SUNDAY - SEPTEMBER 15th

PARADE STARTS 1 P. M.

MASS MEETING 3 P. M.

Speakers

Hon. FIORELLO H. LaGUARDIA
Mayor, City of New York

Hon. JAMES M. MEAD
United States Senator

Hon. WILLIAM GREEN
President of the American Federation of Labor

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH
International President, B. S. C. P.

M. P. WEBSTER
First International Vice-President, B. S. C. P.

Musical Program — Admission Free

BROTHERHOOD DAY

THURSDAY - SEPTEMBER 19th

Our Guest Speaker
Hon. MRS. FRANCES PERKINS
Secretary of Labor
A. PHILIP RANDOLPH
International President, B. S. C. P.
M. P. WEBSTER
International Vice-President, B. S. C. P.

MUSICAL PROGRAM
featuring
PROF. FURMAN FORDHAM, Lyric Baritone
MISS MAYE HOOPER, Mezzo Soprano
Y. M. C. A. "All Girls Glee Club"

Tickets with Admission to Four Concessions — One Dollar.

CONVENTION BALL — GOLDEN GATE BALLROOM

FRIDAY EVENING

Secure Your Tickets in Advance.
Only a Few Boxes Are Left.
Admission — One Dollar
Boxes Seating Eight Persons — $4.00

2 Swing Bands
Lucky Millinder and Fess Finlay

Continuous Dancing

15th Anniversary

AL CONVENTION

l Features

DE

MASS MEETING
SALEM M.E. CHURCH

129th Street and Seventh Avenue

AY - SEPTEMBER 15th

MASS MEETING
3 P. M.

Speakers

ORELLO H. LaGUARDIA
Mayor, City of New York

AMES M. MEAD
United States Senator

ILLIAM GREEN
President of the American Federation of Labor

P RANDOLPH
International President, B. S. C. P.

EBSTER
First International Vice-President, B. S. C. P.

Admission Free

BROTHERHOOD DAY

N.Y. WORLD FAIR

THURSDAY - SEPTEMBER 19th

Our Guest Speaker
Hon. MRS. FRANCES PERKINS
Secretary of Labor

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH
International President, B. S. C. P.

M. P. WEBSTER
International Vice-President, B. S. C. P.

MUSICAL PROGRAM
featuring
PROF. FURMAN FORDHAM, Lyric Baritone
MISS MAYE HOOPER, Mezzo Soprano
Y. M. C. A. "All Girls Glee Club"

Tickets with Admission to Four Concessions — One Dollar.

SECURE YOUR TICKETS NOW

CONVENTION BALL

GOLDEN GATE BALLROOM

FRIDAY EVENING

Secure Your Tickets in Advance.
Only a Few Boxes Are Left.
Admission — One Dollar
Boxes Seating Eight Persons — $4.00

2 Swing Bands
Lucky Millinder
and Fess Finlay

Continuous Dancing

niversary

Everybody... invited to meet the delegates to the Bi-Ennial Convention

BROTHERHOOD OF SLEEPING CAR PORTERS

(Pullman Porters, Chair Car Porters, Train Porters, Attendants and Maids, International Union, A. F. of L.)
and their LADIES' AUXILIARIES representing Fifty-nine Divisions in the United States, Canada and Mexico

MISS MAYE HOOPER
Famous Mezzo Soprano who will appear at the Brotherhood Day at the World's Fair.

PROF. FURMAN FORDHAM
Lyric Baritone will sing at the Labor Dinner
and the World's Fair.

THE THREE NATURAL ALABAMANS
Dwaine 6 - Bornice 7 - Gerhart 8
will sing at the Labor Dinner
and the World's Fair.

THE HARLEM Y. M. C. A. ALL GIRLS GLEE CLUB

under the leadership of Prof. Furman Fordham, Director of Musical Activities, and featuring Miss Evelyn Parker, Lyric Soprano and Soloist, will sing at the Brotherhood Day at the World's Fair. Johanne Testman, Isaac Royalle, Pianists.

Other Stars inclusive of Misses Helen Dowdy, Albertha Jackson and Diane Strauhn, Pianist, will appear.

All Fraternal, Benevolent, Civic and Labor Organizations are invited to join our "Trade Union America First" Parade preceding the Mass Meeting Sunday, September 15, 1940. All friends of Labor and the Brotherhood desirous of participating in the parade are urged to register NOW.

BROTHERHOOD OF SLEEPING CAR PORTERS
ASHLEY L. TOTTEN, International Secretary-Treasurer
217 WEST 125th STREET, NEW YORK CITY
Suite 301 Phone: MOnument 2-5080

BROTHERHOOD INTERNATIONAL OFFICERS

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH	Int'l President	New York, N. Y.
ASHLEY L. TOTTEN	Int'l Secretary-Treasurer	New York, N. Y.
M. P. WEBSTER	Int'l 1st Vice-President	Chicago, Ill.
BENNIE SMITH	Int'l 2nd Vice-President	Detroit, Mich.
E. J. BRADLEY	Int'l 3rd Vice-President	St. Louis, Mo.
C. L. DELLUMS	Int'l 4th Vice-President	Oakland, Cal.
THOMAS PATTERSON	Int'l Secretary Exec. Board	New York, N. Y.
J. BENOIT	Int'l Executive Board	Denver, Col.
A. R. DAILEY	Int'l Executive Board	St. Louis, Mo.
H. MURPHY	Int'l Executive Board	Kansas City, Mo.
HENRY YATES	Int'l Executive Board	Cleveland, Ohio
J. BELL, Sr.	Int'l Executive Board	Los Angeles, Cal.
JOHN C. MILLS	Int'l Executive Board	Mason, Wisconsin
T. D. McNEAL	Int'l Field Organizer	St. Louis, Mo.
ERNEST SMITH	Int'l Field Organizer	Chicago, Ill.
B. F. McLAURIN	Int'l Field Organizer	New York, N. Y.

LADIES' AUXILIARY INTERNATIONAL OFFICERS

HALENA WILSON	Int'l President	Chicago, Ill.
KATHERINE LASSITER	Int'l 1st Vice-President	New York, N. Y.
WILLIE MAE DAILEY	Int'l 2nd Vice-President	St. Louis, Mo.
FANNIE J. CAVINESS	Int'l 3rd Vice-President	San Antonio, Tex.
LETITIA MURRAY	Int'l 4th Vice-President	Los Angeles, Cal.
ROSINA C. TUCKER	Int'l Secretary-Treasurer	Washington, D. C.
CARRIE E. WHITE	Int'l Executive Board	Kansas City, Mo.
ELLA JOHNSON	Int'l Executive Board	Tampa, Fla.
ROSA TAYLOR	Int'l Executive Board	Cleveland, Ohio
MARION SAPPINGTON	Int'l Secretary Exec. Board	Pitisburgh, Pa.
NANNIE M. CURBY	Int'l Executive Board	St. Louis, Mo.
ANNE E. WILSON	Int'l Executive Board	New York, N. Y.
VENZIE P. WITT	Int'l Executive Board	Denver, Col.
CARRIE B. McWATT	Int'l Executive Board	St. Paul, Minn.

Hold 15th Anniversary Co[redacted]

[redacted]. F. Roosevelt Addr[redacted]ss

LABOR LEADER EXECUTIVES AT ANNUAL MEET

President Randolph, Webster Hail Gains By Workers'

Governor Herbert H. Lehman told officials and delegates to the fifteenth anniversary convention of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters here Tuesday that "courage and patriotism, so necessary to the success of any cause, must be backed by adequate, disciplined and determined man power, with trained leadership and modern equipment."

The Governor's call to organized labor was heard during the Brotherhood's morning session at the Y.M.C.A., 144 W. 138th St. "Labor has a particularly large stake in defending democracy against ruthless attacks of Dictatorships, whatever they may be labeled—Communist, Nazi or Fascist—are always the enemies of free labor. Wherever tyranny prevails, freedom for the wage earner dies," Gov. Lehman continued.

The warning on Communists was well received by the Pullman porters, judging from the applause given the Governor. Only a few hours before the organization had gone on record as opposed to Communists holding office in the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

The Governor's speech and that of President William L. Green, of the American Federation of Labor, were among the highlights of the convention

(Continued on Page 3, Col. 3)

The Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters "went to town" here in New York this week as members and officials gathered for their fifteenth anniversary convention. In a parade, witnessed by thousands who lined Seventh avenue from 110th to 145th street, the Brotherhood was acclaimed as colored America's No. 1 economic hope. Top picture shows Newbold Morris, president of the City Council, and William L. Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, shake hands after Green's speech at Salem M. E. Church while Randolph looks on with a smile. Second picture, crowds make a futile attempt to get inside Salem Church even though cops say: "It's no use." At bottom photo shows Ashley Totten, secretary-treasurer of the Brotherhood, leading another unit of officers in the parade.

Gov. Lehman Makes Speech At Pullman Porters M

(Continued from Page 1)

which got under way Sunday at Salem M. E. Church, 129th street and Seventh avenue, where Green, A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood, Newbold Morris, president of the City Council, and Milton Webster, vice president of the world's largest all-colored union, were featured speakers. The church session followed a parade lasting more than two hours.

Later Thursday, when Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins speaks to the delegates during a celebration at the World's Fair, the convention will come to an end with the Convention Ball at the Golden Gate, 142nd street and Lenox avenue, Friday night.

Webster Heads Show

First vice president Milton P. Webster [illegible]

"Our 7,200 members [illegible] 000,000 a year, [illegible] as much as we [illegible] started out 15 years [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] union's plan. "I want Negroes to know, though," he declared, "that our contract with the Pullman Company is the greatest economic document ever signed for the benefit of Negroes in America."

His veiled criticism of newspapers was interpreted as referring to publishers who refuse their employees the right to organize by threatening them with dismissal.

"These high-brow leaders," he said, "who meet snobbish whites in downtown hotels to dine and theorize, are definitely not sincere and we can't afford to follow them any longer."

Webster backed his criticism with facts and figures, however.

SEPTEMBER 16, 1940
NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE

Green Attacks Lewis Before Train Porters

A.F.L. Leader Tells Harlem Convention C. I. O. Head Furthers Labor Schism

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, denounced John L. Lewis, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, yesterday as being responsible for the "division which exists within the ranks of labor."

Taking his rival to task before 3,500 persons attending the preliminary session of the fifteenth anniversary convention of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, Mr. Green also assured his audience: "So long as I can express myself, I shall fight against racial intolerance and hatred in America." The assurance came after Milton P. Webster, first international vice-president of the union, charged that the A. F. of L. was not excluded from organizations harboring racial prejudices.

Mr. Green told his listeners, assembled in the Salem Methodist Episcopal Church, 129th Street and Seventh Avenue, that "we have appealed and appealed and appealed" to the C. I. O. to meet with the A. F. of L. to seek a reconciliation.

The leader of the "rebel force," however, knows only one word, Mr. Green charged: "The only word he knows is 'No.' Why don't they tell the people who is to blame? We can't get together while the leader of the C. I. O. says 'No.'"

Mr. Green declared that "the whole philosophy of the American Federation of Labor is that we must unite." He charged that C. I. O. leaders who withdrew from the A. F. of L. to form their own labor organization had not recognized the democratic majority of the Federation.

The president of the A. F. of L. broached the subject of the feud with the C. I. O. by declaring that "the need for unity was never more apparent in the history of this country. . . . We must put that above and beyond every other consideration. . . . We will be invincible once we have established the solidarity of labor."

Loud applause greeted Mr. Green's condemnation of racial discrimination. Presided over by Ashley L. Totten, international secretary-treasurer of the union, the meeting included 100 delegates to the convention from the United States, Canada and Mexico and fifty women delegates to the convention of the International Ladies' Auxiliary of the brotherhood, which will be held simultaneously.

A colorful parade in Harlem preceded the meeting. Witnessed by thousands lining the route, about 2,000 members of ten Negro youth, labor and war veterans' organizations marched with half a dozen bands. Their uniforms ranged from those of the sleeping car porters themselves to purple and golden garbs.

Mr. Green told the meeting: "I bring in an official capacity the assurance of the complete service of the working men and women of the American Federation of Labor. Your union occupies the same relationship in the A. F. of L. as the 105 other affiliates." Recounting his share in the organization of the brotherhood, he said: "It was not a matter of creed, race or nationality. It was a question of men." A leading Negro trade union, the brotherhood received its charter in 1925, and has a membership of 7,200. The auxiliary comprises 1,600 members.

The A. F. of L. leader laid the cause of the European war to racial hatred and said that similar prejudices still existed here. "But I think it is becoming less and less," he added, asserting that his organization was leading the way.

Mr. Green reported that the A. F. of L. now had 5,000,000 members, the largest number in its history. Stressing the important part it played in national life, he said that the organization was working for the repeal of the "notorious and indefensible poll-tax plan now in effect in eight states of the Union" and of the "inhuman and unsocial policy of lynching in the South." Charging that Senate filibustering had blocked passage of such repeals, he challenged that body to put them to the vote.

[illegible] with the government in the rearmament program and while opposing "the participation of our nation in a European conflict upon the battlefields of Europe," urged the dispatch to Great Britain of all military aid short of war.

Repeated illustrations of racial discrimination were given by Mr. Webster in his speech. "Whenever we have an institution with a predominance of white people there is prejudice in it," he charged.

After describing the rise of the brotherhood, he announced that the union was setting out to organize 100,000 Negro railroad workers. Only dining car and Pullman groups were organized, he said, urging "that we work to bring about a better relationship between white peoples and black peoples in this country's labor movement."

The convention begins its business today in the Little Theater of the 135th Street Y. M. C. A. and continues to next Friday. Mayor F. H. LaGuardia and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt are expected to attend the convention dinner tonight at the Mecca Temple, 135 West Fifty-fifth Street.

A. F. L. BAN ON REDS BACKED BY GREEN

Before Pullman Porters He Denounces 'Foolish Men' Who Favor Russian Way

SEES RACE BIAS WANING

Newbold Morris Endorses Fight on Communists, but Pleads for Free Speech

The movement to exclude Communists from membership in unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor was endorsed yesterday by William Green, president of the federation.

Addressing the opening session of the fifteenth anniversary convention of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters in Harlem, Mr. Green denounced Stalin, Mussolini and Hitler as enemies of democracy and free trade unionism.

"There are no bona fide unions in Russia, Italy or Germany," the A. F. of L.; deplored racial prejudice and intolerance and accused men, even in the trade unions, who preach the destruction of our democracy and the bringing to America of a government similar to that of Russia. That is why so many unions are taking the position that Communists cannot be members of the American Federation of Labor."

Porters' Resolution Bars Reds

A resolution to prohibit Communists from holding office in the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters has been adopted by the union's international executive board and will be acted upon by the convention delegates today or tomorrow.

The resolution was praised at the opening session by Newbold Morris, President of the City Council, who said subversive elements should be "abolished" from the labor movement but should not be deprived of the right of free expression.

In his address at the Salem Methodist Episcopal Church, 129th Street and Seventh Avenue, Mr. Green hailed the record of the brotherhood, the first Negro union in the A. F. of L.; deplored racial prejudice and intolerance and accused John L. Lewis, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, of responsibility for the continued split in the ranks of American labor.

"We have been waiting like a bride at the church door for the leader of the rebel group to resume conferences with our committee," the A. F. of L. chief declared. "We have told President Roosevelt that we are ready to meet any place, any time, in an effort to achieve peace, but the head of the C. I. O. says no. It seems the only word he knows is no."

Mr. Green assured the 3,500 delegates and visitors at the opening session that there was no institution in the United States that was "doing more to break down race prejudice and race hate than the American Federation of Labor."

On the legislative front, the A. F. of L. is endeavoring to protect the rights of Negroes, Mr. Green declared, by fighting for passage of laws outlawing poll taxes in the South and making lynching a Federal offense.

Morris Urges Fair Play

Mr. Morris predicted that "Jim Crowism" would disappear from American life within a generation. While denouncing Communists and other "preachers of subversive doctrines," he stressed the importance of protecting the civil liberties of these and all other groups.

Milton P. Webster of Chicago, first vice president of the Pullman porters, told of the union's growth from an infant organization of six members in 1925 to 7,200 today. He said it would attempt to provide organization for 100,000 Negro workers on the railroads, including switchmen, firemen and all other classes of employes.

Mr. Webster agreed with Mr. Green that the question of amicable race relations was being more successfully worked out in the A. F. of L. than in other American institutions.

Other speakers included A. Philip Randolph, president of the brotherhood, and Ashley L. Totten, its secretary-treasurer, who presided. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Mayor La Guardia are scheduled to speak at a convention dinner this evening at Mecca Temple, 135 West Fifty-fifth Street.

NEW YORK DAILY MIRROR

September 16, 1940

Only Human

—By Candide—

No. 1 Pullman Porter

WE ONCE HEARD that it was the son of Abraham Lincoln who was responsible for the fact that all Pullman porters are Negroes — he wanted to do something to carry on the work his father had begun when he freed the slaves.

There is a man in New York now who is still doing great work through these Pullman porters to help his race. His name is A. Philip Randolph. He is head of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters—though he was never a sleeping car porter himself. On Sunday, that Brotherhood opened its 15th convention in New York City.

Randolph's story is an old, old story—the record of a struggle against misunderstanding and ignorant prejudice; a struggle that was bitter and full of defeat in the beginning.

When Randolph was a kid in Florida, he loved books and baseball—right away, he found out how it feels to be "on the outside looking in." Because books and baseball were not for him.

He clerked in a grocery, sold papers, shovelled dirt as a railroad section hand:

"I was never a union member at any of those jobs... Negroes couldn't be union members in those days..."

And there is still plenty of discrimination rooted in prejudice inside of Labor:

The heads of 21 Railway Unions form a central organization known as the Railway Labor Executives Association. Twenty of these unions have clauses in their constitutions which ban Negroes, or segregate them in separate locals—thus these little constitutions double-cross the Constitution of the United States of America.

Randolph's Brotherhood is barred from the Association—but since he began his fight for the Porters in 1925, Randolph has gained from the American Federation of Labor an International charter that guarantees autonomy for the Brotherhood in the A. F. of L.

Randolph landed in New York City when he was 17, went to work as an elevator operator. As Lincoln learned at night, so did Randolph—he haunted libraries, studied in night classes at City College, learned to express in powerful words the crusade that was hatching in his heart. He finally got a job writing for a Hotel Trade Magazine:

"I was fired when I wrote an editorial criticizing the way Headwaiters let their side-waiters gamble for their jobs, and then took a cut from each game...so then I started a magazine of my own..."

He called that magazine the "Messenger"; during Europe's last war, the "Messenger" was tossed out of the mails; Randolph was tossed into jail...

"But only for four days... wasn't considered much of a menace. We criticized the Government for sending our boys to Europe to make the world safe for democracy...before we had given democracy to the Negroes right here at home..."

TOMORROW: He whipped the Reds.

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH

"My father was a Methodist Episcopal Preacher in Crescent City, Florida...we were so poor we ran a little tailor shop in order to add enough to my father's salary to feed the family"....cleaning suits was more profitable than cleaning souls...

DAILY MIRROR MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 16 1940

A. F. L. TO COOPERATE IN DRAFT, SAYS GREEN

Opposition to the Bill Ended—'Times Call for Giving'

Passage of the Burke-Wadsworth bill ends the American Federation of Labor's drive against compulsory military service, William Green, president of the A. F. of L., declared here yesterday. He pledged the full cooperation of the federation's 5,000,000 members in carrying out the provisions of the Draft Bill.

While the measure was under consideration in Congress, the federation took the view that selective service should not be instituted unless the voluntary system of enlistment proved inadequate to meet the nation's defense requirements.

Interviewed as he prepared to leave for Washington after addressing the fifteenth anniversary convention of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters in Harlem, Mr. Green summed up the present attitude of his organization in these words:

"The bill is not as we would like to have seen it, but Congress has decided that it is to be the law of the land, and the American Federation of Labor will, of course, cooperate in carrying out that decision. These are times that call for giving, and we will give."

In his address before the Pullman porters at the Salem Methodist Episcopal Church, 129th Street and Seventh Avenue, Mr. Green declared that A. F. of L. members would give "service of the highest order" in war industries and that the only thing the federation sought in return was maintenance of labor's social and economic gains.

He reaffirmed the organization's support of President Roosevelt's defense program, backed the exchange of fifty United States destroyers for British naval and air bases in this hemisphere and urged all aid short of war for Great Britain.

Letters to The Times

Labor Against Merit Rating

Young-Wadsworth Bill Inadequate for Needs, Federation Head Finds

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK TIMES:

The American Federation of Labor opposes all forms of merit or experience rating in unemployment compensation laws. A statement on the proposed Young-Wadsworth bill released recently by Timothy J. Mahoney, chairman of the New York State Employers' Conference, a group [illegible] promotion of an experience rating system in unemployment compensation laws, undertakes to state the position of organized labor to show that it has no real objection to such a system. He says:

"Diligent effort has been made to determine the position of organized labor in this State and of the national federation with reference to the proposed system of experience rating, but no real objection to the system has been clearly defined."

While Mr. Mahoney may be authorized to argue on behalf of a few large employers in stable industries who want tax cuts for themselves under experience rating laws, he is in no way competent to speak for organized labor. The fact that he has persistently closed his mind to the objections raised by bona-fide labor organizations disqualifies him for the role which he has undertaken as interpreter of labor's interests.

Benefits Called Inadequate

The American Federation of Labor objects to experience rating as proposed by the Young-Wadsworth bill because it is simply a device to reduce the income of the unemployment compensation fund. If the income were excessive in relation to the need for it, tax reductions could be justified.

The plain fact is that this is not the case. The benefits paid under the New York unemployment compensation law are pitifully inadequate to provide reasonably for unemployed workers during the usual periods of temporary unemployment. The required waiting period is too long, the duration of benefits too short, and the amount of the benefit check too small for reasonable protection for many workers.

Mr. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board, has recommended that waiting periods be reduced to one week, that maximum weekly benefits be raised to at least $20 and that the weekly rate be set at 66 2/3 per cent of full time earnings in States whose funds are sufficient. New York requires a waiting period of three weeks and still retains a $15 maximum and a benefit rate roughly approximating 50 per cent of full time weekly wages. Mr. Altmeyer recommended that every State provide for partial unemployment benefits. The New York law lacks this provision. He recommended that the duration of benefits be increased to a uniform period of at least sixteen weeks. New York provides for only thirteen weeks.

The large percentage of workers who exhaust their benefit rights while they are still unemployed, even in a year of improving business such as 1939, shows clearly the inadequacy of the duration provision of New York's law. The unused reserves which have been increasing, and which Mr. Mahoney believes labor has forgotten, should have been used to pay reasonable benefits. Every dollar so used would have returned promptly to business men through the channel of consumers' demand for goods. That is the channel best able to stimulate business activity and provide more employment and more profits.

New York Times

March 18, 1940

Higher [illegible] Advocated

It is no fault of organized labor that the laws have been so miserly and have provided so inadequately the benefits needed to make the unemployment compensation system [illegible] the beginning of the study which [illegible] the enactment of the Social Security Act I pointed out the need for [illegible]ble Federal standards for unemployment compensation benefits. A large majority of the Advisory Committee in 1938 voted for a 5 per cent tax in order to insure funds sufficient to establish adequate benefits. The committee tied on the vote for a 4 per cent tax. Three per cent was adopted simply because it was believed industry should not be asked to assume a larger tax burden.

The benefit scale which it was estimated [illegible] per cent tax would support was [illegible] meager [illegible] that it is apparent [illegible] to date that [illegible] from [illegible] tax (2.7 [illegible] New [illegible]) can support an adequate benefit structure [illegible] that the needed improvements made. To propose that the [illegible] reduced, as it would be under the [illegible]-Wadsworth bill, before adequate [illegible] have been paid, is to waste [illegible] opportunity to establish a reasonable unemployment compensation system [illegible] adding a cent to the present [illegible].

[illegible]dequate Benefits

Mr. [illegible] professes to be unable to understand how experience rating would [illegible] with better benefit standards [illegible] obvious that if the tax rate [illegible] only to replace the amount [illegible] year for benefits, as it would [illegible] the Young-Wadsworth bill, employers would be directly concerned to keep benefit payments at a minimum. They would oppose reasonable improvements in the law. That makes it vital that adequate benefits be established and paid before this incentive becomes operative.

I may quote one State unemployment compensation director's experience with the law: "Experience rating is largely responsible for the protest of employers against the payment of benefits to unemployed workers. These protests often have no actual basis in law. Some employers have adopted the policy of protesting payment of benefits in most every case regardless of merit."

That the New York State Employers' Conference is interested in tax reductions rather than increasing employment under experience rating is clear from their resistance to a plan of experience rating which would permit lower or higher rates according to the experience of different employers but would produce the same average income that is now being paid into the fund. If they were interested in a sound system of unemployment compensation, they would seek that incentive to increased industry which adequate benefit payments would give and would welcome the establishment of a benefit scale as adequate as the present tax rate would permit rather than attempt to perpetuate the present meager benefits by reducing the income of the fund.

If experience-rating formulae provide any incentive to employers to stabilize employment, that incentive would be even greater if rates for unfavorable experience were increased in equal degree as those for favorable experience were increased.

[illegible]lts Seen in Bill

The Young-Wadsworth bill avoids that greater incentive. It is carefully designed to decrease the income of the unemployment compensation fund before a sound system of benefits is created. If the benefits were adequate, the outgo from the fund would be approximately the same as its current income. Tax reductions would not be possible, although tax increases would be unnecessary because the present income can pay for better benefits. This explains the anxiety of the advocates of the bill to get experience rating adopted before adequate benefits are written into the law.

Experience rating does not lessen unemployment. Even under the Wisconsin [illegible] which the individual reserve [illegible] used was designed to place the maximum responsibility for stabilization on each employer, a very small amount of stabilization has been accomplished as a result of the law.

As in [illegible] study by Dr. Charles Myers [illegible] fewer than 11 per cent of the [illegible] firms had achieved any appreciable stabilization because of the act, even including the borderline cases to give the law the benefit of every doubt. These firms were among the larger ones. Although they were fewer than 11 per cent in number, they employed nearly 23 per cent of all the workers.

And offsetting the achievement noted in "stabilization," Dr. Myers found "the development of a tendency to avoid benefits by devices (particularly extreme spreading of work) which do not stabilize employment, and the fact that stabilization increases somewhat the volume of unemployment."

Price Called Too High

That is too great a price to pay for so-called stabilization. The American Federation of Labor still wishes to avoid devices and "policies that crystallize unemployment." Experience rating is such a policy. We are concerned to promote an increase in the number of jobs and to provide security for unemployed workers. It is because experience rating obstructs both these objectives that we oppose it.

Since the experience-rating formula of the Young-Wadsworth bill places so much weight upon the [illegible] experience factor rather than [illegible] individual efforts of the employer [illegible], even that degree of stabilization obtained in Wisconsin cannot be [illegible] result if that bill should be [illegible] in New York. The incentive to stabilize employment is pared to a minimum both by the way in which the employer's rate is calculated and by the absence of a real penalty for failure to stabilize. There is no [illegible]ible incentive in the bill to increase employment as distinguished from some statistical evidence of "stabilization" which may simply mean work spread too thin.

The bill is a device to cut taxes, to reduce the income of the fund, and to prevent the development of a fair benefit structure which will honestly serve the purpose for which the tax was originally levied—the reasonable protection of the unemployed worker and the stabilization and stimulation of industry by maintaining consumer purchasing power on a more steady basis. That aid to industry is a road to reduction of unemployment. It should not be blocked by the short-sighted policy of experience rating.

WILLIAM GREEN,
President, American Federation of Labor.

Washington, March 18, 1940.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1940

LaGuardia Bids For Negro Vote For Roosevelt

Tells Porters Issue Is Smile Vs. Frown; President's Wife Hits Anti-Draft Stand

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia made a bid to win the Negro vote for President Roosevelt last night when he spoke before 750 members of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and their families at the union's fifteenth anniversary convention dinner at Mecca Temple, 135 West Fifty-fifth Street.

Discarding vehemenc and following a facetious approach, Mr. LaGuardia told his audience: "This is going to be an unusual campaign. This is going to be a campaign of the smiles versus the frowns: the smiles of the New Deal and the frowns of the disgruntled."

"We who have appreciated the great progress of the last seven years are going to join the great army of the smiles," he added.

The Mayor rose to speak after Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, another speaker at the dinner, had expressed disapproval of a resolution adopted by the union's executive board last Saturday declaring its opposition to the Burke-Wadsworth bill. She said safety."

"We are not going to trust to last-minute measures in order to save us from war," she added. "The best equipment in the world is not enough."

"I'd like to pledge tonight my cooperation to make this a better country not for you alone but for all of us to live in," Mrs. Roosevelt said at another point. "We'll make this country a safer country to live in if we make it a better one."

Mrs. Roosevelt's remarks prompted Ashley L. Totten, international secretary-treasurer of the union, who presided, to reassure her that the brotherhood was not a political organization.

"It is a labor organization," he said. "However, I reserve the right to say that President Franklin D. Roosevelt is without a doubt the greatest man who has ever stepped into the Whie House."

Mayor LaGuardia, picking up where Mr. Totten left off, said: "Now that the chairman has made it clear that this is an absolutely non-partisan meeting, I think that I shall speak with perfect ease.

"Any gathering of men and women in this country who toil for their living and who have witnessed the progress made in the last seven years and have seen the interest of their own government in their own homes, would naturally be just non-partisan as we all are and vote for President Roosevelt."

Negotiations between sleeping-car porters and the Pullman Company for reduction of working hours from 240 to 210 a month will begin next Monday, A. Philip Randolph, president of the brotherhood, announced earlier in the day at the first business session of the organization's convention.

Only Human

—By Candide—

"George" No. 1

THREE TIMES Negroes had tried to organize Pullman porters; each time they failed —before A. Phillip Randolph, present head of the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, started organizing in 1925.

Today, every sleeping car company in America does business with that Brotherhood.

Randolph gets a salary of $3,600 a year as head of the Brotherhood—"half as much as the lowest paid union president in the country."

But he conceives of his job as far larger than the Brotherhood—he's working for his race, working to give to the American Negro the full measure of democracy that Lincoln ment for them to have when he freed them from slavery.

Randolph's big hope had been the National Negro Congress—but the Reds knifed it...

"I learned their technique first-hand. The Congress was formed in Chicago in 1935. I was sick in New York at the time—but they elected me President."

He resigned last April..."because I was convinced that the Congress was a Communist Front...they crawled in right under our noses and we couldn't stop them.

"As soon as the Congress was formed the Reds formed a lot of paper organizations, like they always do.

"Then these paper organizations sent delegates to the Congress, and these delegates had a right to vote.

"In the Negro Congress the Red delegates (many of them were whites!) concentrated on getting control of the chief committee—the presiding committee, which elects all the officers.

"They took the short cut and it worked. There were 1,000 delegates at the Congress, representing 2 million Negroes...

"But a handful of Reds dictated policy, and it followed the Party line laid down by Stalin from Moscow.

"That story is typical—Reds fought for the Scottsboro Boys —not to save the boys, but to worm their sordid propaganda around. They got an undeserved reputation for being fair fighters in the cause of Justice.

"They are more subtle than the Nazis. The Nazis use bluntness.

"Reds use such tender ideals as peace and religion to cloak their schemes—those are powerful fruits, especially with honest people.

"Why, James Ford, Red Vice-Presidential candidate, is now a member of the Congress Executive Committee—which is supposed to represent church groups and the YMCA's!"

Strong-minded, far-sighted, absolutely fearless and honest, Randolph and the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters have achieved a unique record:

The union has never endorsed any political candidate.

That is a fundamental rule that Sam Gompers wisely enforced upon the American Federation of Labor; it is remembered today only by that union whose members are called "George."

When Philip Randolph was first organizing Pullman porters, he went down to Nashville, Tennessee to deliver a lecture. A mob met him at the train, told him to "git th' hell outa town." Randolph didn't "git"—he kept the lecture date.

17 • DAILY MIRROR • TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1940

Hopes High as Leviton Strike Enters Fourth Week

ELECTRICAL WORKERS SEND PROTEST TO LA GUARDIA ON BEHAVIOR OF THE POLICE

Local 3 Paid Out $30,000 in Benefits to 1,700 Strikers; Van Arsdale Pledges Aid "to Last Dollar"

With the hope of victory running high among the 1,700 strikers at the plant of the Leviton Manufacturing Company, 236 Greenpoint Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., the strike entered its fourth week last Wednesday.

Labor leaders who have participated in many labor struggles throughout the country declare the strike is a model of hard-hitting, effective leadership which must bring the management to its knees within a short time.

Factors which will result in victory for the strikers are:

1. The strike is 100 percent effective. Not a wheel is turning in the plant and all of its 1,700 workers are lined up solidly behind Local 3.

2. The union's action in granting strike benefits from the first week is enabling the workers to stand firm.

3. The union's cafeteria, where coffee and sandwiches are dispensed gratis daily, keeps many a striker going without causing any tightening of belts.

4. The law is on the side of the union. The strikers are fighting to force Isadore Leviton to live up to the Wagner Act.

5. Spirits are running high—and the strikers are determined not to go back to work unless they march back under the victorious banner of Local 3.

So far the union has paid out more than $30,000 in strike benefits, and, according to Harry Van Arsdale, Jr., business manager, "will continue to help these fine, fighting workers to the last dollar of our treasury."

Mr. Van Arsdale also announced that scores of locals of the International Brotherhood of Eectrical Workers throughout the country have pledged to grant moral and financial help until the strike is won.

Action by Board

Action by the National Labor Relations Board, union leaders assert, will shortly compel Leviton to deal with the union, H. H. Broach, leader of the strike said at a recent mass meeting of strikers. The union, Mr. Broach said, has repeatedly offered to negotiate with the management, but so far William Schwartz, attorney for the Leviton firm, has been evasive, hoping to delay settlement as long as possible.

In view of the fact that Local 3 clearly represents an overwhelming majority of the workers—nearly 98 percent—Leviton's tactics are a violation of the law, Mr. Broach said. Action by the Labor Board shortly will result in a decision in favor of the strikers.

The police, union officials charge, have been guilty of marked partiality in the strike and have intimidated pickets by the massing of patrolmen and mounted police.

In a telegram to Mayor LaGuardia, calling upon him to intervene in the strike, the union said:

"The [illegible]ke situation at the Leviton plant, where nea[illegible] stri[illegible] girls and men are on strike against [illegible]rly 1,800 [illegible] wages and shameful and degrading unbelievably low [illegible] threatens to become a public sanitary conditions [illegible] totalitarian behavior of the scandal because of the [illegible] police.

"Hundreds of police, brandis[illegible]hing nightsticks and fingering revolvers, are rapidly co[illegible]verting the area into an arme[illegible]mp."

Labor World Mourns Death of John Possehl

John Possehl, general president of the International Union of Operating Engineers and a labor leader for more than 25 years, died in Doctors' Hospital in Washington, D. C., of a heart ailment September 13.

Mr. Possehl, who was 56, became ill after he had presided at a session of the I. U. O. E. Executive Board meeting at the Hamilton Hotel. He was taken to the hospital the following day.

John P. Coyne, president of the Building and Construction Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor and personal friend of Mr. Possehl for many years, said that his death "will be profoundly felt throughout labor's ranks."

Other tributes came from President Green and many other labor leaders.

Mr. Possehl was elected general president of the engineers' organization in June, 1931, upon the death of President Arthur M. Huddell, and was re-elected at the Engineers' Convention last April. He formerly had served as general secretary-treasurer.

Mr. Green appointed Mr. Possehl a delegate to the meeting of the Governing Board of the International Labor Conference at Geneva in October, 1935.

He served as first vice-president of the building trades department from August, 1932, to August, 1939.

During the World War he was appointed commissioner of conciliation on the Macey Award Board for the Savannah area, and later was chosen an organizer for the I. U. O. E., in which capacity he served until March, 1921, when he was elected a vice-president of the organization. He held this post for 10 years.

Mr. Possehl came to Washington with his wife, Mrs. Emily Possehl, in 1931 when he was elected general president.

Besides his widow, Mr. Possehl is survived by a son, John Possehl, Jr., and a grandchild, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Ferris Talks at Rites

Vincent J. Ferris, secretary of the Allied Printing Trades Council, was one of the speakers at the ceremonies marking the unveiling of street signs and a bronze pavement plaque at Printing House Square, Park Row, Nassau and Spruce Streets, on September 13. The plaque bears the legend:

"Printing House Square, former location of many newspaper and printing houses, including Sun, Times, World, Tribune, Herald. Placed by State Education Department, New York Times, Printing Magazine, New York Herald-Tribune, The Sun, New York Employing Printers Association, Allied Printing Trades Council, 1940."

On Convention Platform

President Green Greets Borough President [illegible] at Convention of Sleeping Car [illegible] Brotherhood, International President [illegible]

ARMORED CAR CHAUFFEURS LAUNCH DRIVE AGAINST BURNS DETECTIVE AGENCY

Local 820 Appeals for Support of Other Unions to Prevent Further Loss of Work Once Done by Members

A vigorous campaign to prevent further inroads by the Burns Detective Agency into the protection field has been launched by Armored Car Chauffeurs and Guards' Union, Local 820, A. F. of L.

The Burns Agency entered the field about four months ago and has taken over a number of payroll jobs which formerly were handled by companies employing members of the union.

Emmett Mullen, president, and Thomas F. Scully, secretary-treasurer, have appealed to other unions, particularly those in the printing industry, to try to use their influence to dissuade employers from using Burns men in place of armored car chauffeurs.

"We know from testimony before the LaFollette Committee that the Burns Detective Agency is a strike-breaking organization and every good union man should do everything in his power to prevent it from getting a foothold in a new field," Mr. Mullen and Mr. Scully declared in a statement.

"The Burns men are taking much of the work formerly done by our men, causing unemployment in the union, and are trying to expand this service as much as possible.

"We feel that we should be supported in this fight not only because it affects our members, but also because it is a fight against a common enemy of all labor."

The campaign of Local 820 has the approval of the Central Trades and Labor Council and of many individual unions. Members of the union deliver and guard hundreds of payrolls throughout New York City, Long Island and Newark, N. J.

Meetings Under Way In Trucking Dispute

Negotiations were still under way as this issue went to press in the dispute of Local 807, Teamsters with the Merchant Truckmen's Bureau, the Highway Transport Association and the Master Truckmen of America.

Terms of a settlement proposed by Mayor LaGuardia were accepted in substance by the union, which has 10,000 members, but were rejected by the truckmen, necessitating a ne wseries of parleys.

The union is seeking the reduction of the work week from forty-four to forty hours with no change in the wage rate and a week's vacation with pay.

William Devery, president, and Thomas L. Hickey, secretary-treasurer, are conducting the negotiations for Local 807. Locals 282 and 816, which were originally involved in the dispute, have reached an agreement with the truckmen.

Radio Strike Looms

A vote to strike, if necessary, to enforce pay demands for sustaining programs upon the major networks was taken by the American Federation of Radio Artists at a meeting in the Hotel Edison.

Representatives of the broadcasting companies retorted they were prepared to put substitute programs on the air.

Contracts between the AFRA and the radio chains expired September 13. The new demands call for a basic fee of $12 for 15-minute programs; $15 for half-hour programs, and $18 for hour shows, with [illegible] standardized at $6 for the first hour and $3 for each additional hour.

Commercial programs would not be affected in event of a strike because the federation's contract with advertisers does not expire until February 2, 1941.

After the vote, the radio performers also voted to accept a mediation offer from William H. Davis, chairman of the State Board of Mediation. Conferences were now under way.

Students Guests of Sleeping Car Porters

A few weeks ago a group of Harlem Evening High School students were invited to attend a Bingo Party sponsored by the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, located at 217 West 125th Street.

Knowing most Bingo parties, and the chances of winning any prize, the group started out, at first, rather reluctantly, being rather tired after four periods of school work (it was after school). We were being more or less polite because of the invitation extended rather than because of our willingness to go—but we had a surprise in store for us.

When the party reached its destination, it was well agreed before hand that all of us would stay for only a few minutes for courtesy's sake, and then make our departure. The Bingo party was in full swing, the meeting hall was crowded as a big prosperous looking gentleman called out the numbers while anxious men and women watched their cards, each hoping he would win one of the many prizes on the table—consisting of electric toasters, pretty dolls, dishes, ash trays and other useful objects.

We looked rather disdainfully for a second over the crowd, each considering it a waste of time to try our luck at the game. Suddenly, a very tall heavy-set gentleman approached us. We immediately recognized him as Mr. George Bynum, a student of Harlem, who had secured for us several large ads for the "Herald" from the Porters' Union. We also learned that he is one of the local organizers of that union.

After being duly introduced to the gentleman, we were surprised to learn that we were really the guests of honor of the "Sleeping Car Porters" for the evening. Our very congenial host introduced us to some of the officers of the organization, expressing regret that Mr. Phillip Randolph, President of the Organization was not present. Our host then proceeded to take us on a tour of the Union's headquarters, which occupies an entire floor of the premises. The suite consists of seven modern y-equipped offices, one large meeting hall, and a small recreational center where members of the organization may enjoy on their day off to play cards, checkers or other table games.

We learned that the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters came into existence just fifteen years ago. Today it is the largest Negro operated union in America, consisting of a membership of over 18,000 persons. The struggle through the first years of its formation was hard and difficult, and it was only through the loyalty of the porters, attendants and maids, that the Brotherhood was able to sign an agreement with the Pullman Company in Chicago in 1937. This agreement brought recognition to the Union. Today, the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, with locals thruoghout the country, is an outstanding symbol of the capacity, will and spirit of the Negro people to stand on their own feet.

Before leaving, a special photographer took pictures of us, thanked us for our visit and expressed the hope that we had enjoyed ourselves.

It was with a mingled feeling of shame and great pleasure that we thanked our host for his hospitality, feeling a great deal richer in the knowledge that we had gained through this visit.

M. C.

DAILY TIMES, CHICAGO, FRIDAY, JANUARY 3, 1941

Negro loses protest to draft segregation

First decision in an organized effort by Negro groups to prevent segregation of races in army service under the draft act today had gone against a Chicago Negro who fired the opening gun in the campaign. He is Ernest Calloway of 3451 Michigan, educational director of the United Transport Service Employes of America.

Several weeks ago circulars were put forth by J. G. St. Clair Drake, a research student at the University of Chicago, calling upon his fellow Negroes, in the name of the "C. O. (Conscientious Objectors) Against Jim Crow," to return their selective service questionnaires to their local draft boards, asserting that they are conscientious objectors on the grounds of Jim Crowism.

OTHER PROTESTS

Along with the circulars were others, reputed facsimiles of Negro newspapers and other publications, quoting official army decisions not to call Negroes into service during January because no place had yet been provided for their training, and navy decisions that Negroes could be enlisted only in mess service branches.

A few days later newspapers received mimeographed letters from Calloway, declaring that he had followed the plan of campaign set up in Drake's appeal, and that he would refuse to accept the call under the draft act "under the present anti-democratic structure of the U. S. Army" until his "participation in the defense of my country can be made on a basis of complete equality."

CLAIM BEFORE BOARD

Last night his claim for exemption came before his draft board, No. 81.

The board held that his objection does not come within the definition of conscientious objection to war by reason of religious training or belief, and it refused to allow it. Members of the board, Heber T. Dotson, chairman; V. George Piriscalo, secretary, and Ben Steward, said the board has no remedy for the ills complained of by Calloway and it did not propose to open its meetings as a forum for their discussion.

The board held further that the case cannot be considered by the draft appeals board because the local board has neither power nor jurisdiction to hear and determine the objections set forth by Calloway. It therefore classed Calloway as a 1A selectee.

THE LOS ANGELES TRIBUNE Sunday, January 4, 1942

[illegible] OF THE YEAR

[illegible] TRIBUNE [illegible]nates for the Negro of the Year, 1941, A. Philip Randolph for his stimulating and harnassing of the growing industrial consciousness of the American Negro.

A. Philip Randolph, who is responsible for the largest single labor organization of Negroes in the country, rendered another great service to his race in the astute statesmanship which resulted in the President's order, banning discrimination in National Defense, and forming the FEP committee.

The FEP committee has taken no revenge on companies which have caused untold injury to Negroes for generations in refusing to hire them as skilled and unskilled labor. Instead, the Committee has accomplished farther reaching aims. By providing a setting in which Negro protest groups and laborers, and white industrialists might meet in a sponsored negotiations, the Committee has accomplished a measure of education of both sides.

For all of this, A. Philip Randolph, whose proposed March on Washington had this result, is responsible.

Statesman, scholar, idealist and yet realist, A. Philip Randolph is clearly the man, not only of this year, but in the results of his activities which the farseeing may already glimpse on the horizon, of many years to come.

Rail Wages

Industry Faced With Boost in Costs as Labor Prepares Demands

5 Brotherhoods Slated to Meet On Friday—"Make Work" Proposals Also on Way

5% to 15% Pay Increase Is Aim

From THE WALL STREET JOURNAL Chicago Bureau

CHICAGO—The railroad industry yesterday was confronted with the long expected demands of labor for increased wages.

Five railroad brotherhoods are slated to meet in Chicago on Friday to consider the following:

1. A general increase in basic wages.
2. Payment of expenses while away from home.
3. Vacations with pay.
4. Train limit bills and other "make work" proposals.

Demands which railroad labor leaders probably will make are expected to increase the annual rail wage bill between 5% and 15% or more annually.

Last year the total railroad wages approximated $1.9 billion, and the basic rail wage rate was at the highest level in the history of the industry. Net income of the country's railroads for 1940 totaled $191 million.

Counter Proposals Likely

Railroad executives are expected to counter these demands with a tactical proposal for basic wage cuts. This already has been done in the case of the non-operating union's demands for vacations with pay, now before a Presidential Mediation Board.

It was learned that the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen have jumped the gun with a list of "make work" and higher pay demands which they have served on the western railroads.

The demands of the operating Brotherhoods—crews which run the trains—long have been expected by rail executives as a result of the sharp increases in the volume of traffic.

The carriers are expected to attempt to protect their earnings by two major moves:

1. An increase in revenues through (a) higher freight rates, and (b) higher passenger fares.
2. Proposal that any increase granted apply only to the period of national defense emergency.

Basic Freight Rate Low

The basic freight rate—as measured by the cents charged to move one ton of freight one mile—is only slightly higher than the record low reached in 1937. But, the carriers are faced with a possible demand of lower freight rates for southern coal to make up for the differential between wages of northern bituminous coal mines and southern (the latter still under negotiation) to enable the southern mines to compete with the northern.

The demand by the non-operating unions for vacations with pay was the opening gun for higher wages in the railroad industry. Since this move, several individual railroads have received from both operating and non-operating employes requests which increase basic wage rates and the annual rail wage bill.

Unless this is an exceptional situation—because of war preparations—a change in the basic wage rate probably will not come about until late in the summer or early fall.

Train limit and "make work" proposals are not expected to loom as important as in the past. The carriers are not far from using their physical properties to capacity and it is doubted that labor making schemes would be as successful at this time as they might have been in the past.

In fact, only two years ago a train limitation bill was passed by the U. S. Senate but was lost in House committee before adjournment of that Congress. Now such an act (which would prohibit trains to 70 cars) would be a great drain on the locomotive supply of the railroads.

Opinions Differ

Union officials were reluctant to discuss specific subjects expected to come up for con-

Please turn to page 4, column 5

Railroads Faced With Boost in Costs as Labor Prepares Demands

(Continued from First Page)

sideration at Friday's meeting—explaining that it would cover the whole matter of the Brotherhoods' relations with the railroads.

In railroad circles it is learned that there is not complete agreement among the union leaders as to what course should be followed at this time and that the present meeting is to arrive at some unity of feeling on a list of common demands.

While it is natural that unionized railroad employes should ask pay increases at the same time workers in other industries are obtaining them, there is some fear of a repercussion from the "make work" proposals at a time when railroad plant facilities will be strained to the utmost in meeting the needs of the national defense program.

Railroad executives are not concerned greatly over the immediate effect of an in-increase in the annual wage bill, but rather how seriously it will affect earnings after the major portion of the defense traffic has been moved.

It is pointed out that the last war, in many respects, brought about the national "railroad problem." When the federal government took over the rails in the last World War, the unions obtained their first foothold in obtaining the much discussed "featherbedding" practices (or "work paid for but not done"). In addition at that time the government forced the carriers to buy much equipment for which they are still paying.

Rail unions in most of their wage discussions consider "net operating income," rather than net income. The latter is what is left after paying all expenses, interest on debt and taxes. It has been only nominal in recent years. In the depression years, the railroads in the aggregate had substantial deficits in 1932, 1934 and 1938 and many of the individual roads in several of the intervening years even failed to cover operating expenses and taxes.

The groups that are to meet here May 16 are the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen; the Order of Railway Conductors of America; the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and the Switchmen's Union of North America. The Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employes is not participating in the meeting.

The five brotherhoods to engage in the forthcoming meeting are groups which did not participate in the earlier demand for two weeks' vacation with pay, demands for which are now being mediated in Washington.

Two of the brotherhoods have already come forth with proposals for "make work" and "make pay" changes in their working rules and these have been aimed principally at the growing use of diesel electric locomotives on the western railroads.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen has served notice on the western railroads demanding certain changes in working rules. These would require two men on each locomotive, which would bring rail motor cars and small 44-ton diesel locomotives within the domain of the firemen. At present the western carriers can operate a Diesel or Diesel electric locomotive with only one man in the cab when the weight on the drivers is less than 90,000 pounds.

Also the demands ask that the western railroads raise their basic rate of pay for firemen to the same levels as are now in effect on the eastern roads, and that the basis of payment be changed to the weight of the total locomotive, instead of the weight on the drivers.

On multiple unit diesel electric locomotives the Firemen's Brotherhood is asking that a fireman be employed on each unit, although there is no fire to tend and nothing to do.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has asked a revision in the basis of compensating engineers working on Diesel electric locomotives, and would base their future rate of pay on the horsepower of the locomotive, rather than the weight on the drivers. Supplementary to this they are asking that an assistant engineer be employed for each additional unit on the multiple unit Diesels.

As some of the large diesel electric locomotives have three and four units, these proposals would call for the employment of two or three "assistant engineers" as well as a like number of unneeded firemen for each train with such type of locomotives.

The brotherhoods' proposal for payment of expenses when away from home is understood to be based upon total hours away from the home station and to call for payment of $1 for each eight hours to cover board and lodging. Thus if a trainman made an eight-hour run to another city, laid over four hours, and then made another eight-run back, he would earn $2.50 for board and lodging. At present the railroads meet the problem of employes away from home through providing way cars and bunk houses.

Rails' Sensational Profits Made With Fewer Workers

President Milliman Says Labor's Efficiency Is Devastating Reply to Lying Propaganda of Press and Fifth Columnists

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

DETROIT, April 2.—A report by the research department of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes brought out in striking fashion this week how the railroads are handling increased traffic and making greater profits with decreased working forces.

Commenting on the revelations, President E. E. Milliman had this to say: "There was nothing romantic in the recent statement of the Association of American Railroads that revenue freight ton-miles for 1941 amounted to 475,000,000,000. But when related to railroad wages, hours and employment and compared with earlier years, they reveal amazing increases in labor productivity and sensational decreases in labor costs.

Blasts Lies

E. E. Milliman

"The revenue ton-miles handled in 1941 were 6.2 per cent greater than in 1929. The number of railroad workers who did this 'handling' dropped from 1,660,850 in 1929 to 1,139,753 in 1942. Total wage payments fell from $2,897,000,000 in 1929 to $2,271,594,000 in 1941.

"With a reduction of 31.4 per cent in total workers and a drop of 21.6 per cent in total wages, the railroads handled 6.2 per cent more business.

Answers Falsehoods

"The increase in railroad labor productivity and decrease in railroad labor costs during the present war, as compared with the first World War, also constitutes a devastating answer to the lying propaganda spread by newspapers and 'Fifth Columnists.'

"The ton-miles handled per employe in 1941 was 88.9 per cent greater than in 1918. For each 1,000 revenue ton-miles handled in 1918 the railroads paid out $6.43 in wages. The wage cost of handling the same 1,000 revenue ton-miles in 1941 was $4.78.

Lower Than in Last War

"In other words, the labor cost last year was 25.7 per cent lower than when we were in the first World War 25 years ago.

"For every hour of employe service in 1918 the railroads handled 73.4 revenue ton-miles. The figure increased to 158.8 per hour in 1941, an increase in hourly output of 116.3 per cent.

"This may be a shocking revelation to Hitler and some of our newspaper columnists, but it will be highly comforting to the 99.9 per cent of Americans who know that national unity and high productive efficiency are essential to our early victory."

Labor Produces More, Gets Less, Check Shows

Labor Research Association Survey Traces Trend to Lower Pay; Sees Progress Made by Unions Being Rapidly Offset

The following article reveals the decline in the real wages of American labor in comparison with the growth of labor's productivity in the past three decades (1909-1939). The article further points out that this trend was to some degree halted by the union struggles of U. S. labor during the period from 1932-1939, but that despite the gains made by union workers in this period, wages still lag considerably behind the growth of productivity.

BY LABOR RESEARCH ASSOCIATION

"Products multiply; goods flow from machines faster and more plentifully. But the people who should be taking the goods from the shelves are often too poor to buy them, too exhausted after the day's work to enjoy them. Many of them have even been displaced from their jobs by the machines. While some are overworked, others are kept idle, losing not only their wages but their skills and their courage."

This quotation, from a report of the Secretary of Labor to the Seventh National Conference on Labor Legislation, gives the same picture that is drawn in cold figures in a recent study by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. This study is entitled "Wages, Hours and Productivity of Industrial Labor, 1909 to 1939" (Serial No. 3. 1150) and was prepared by Witt Bowden.

Its figures show that the tremendous increases in productivity of American labor over the past 30 years have been of relatively little benefit to the working class as a whole except when the workers, through organization and struggle, have been able to force employers to pass on in higher wage rates a part of the increased output.

(Continued on Page 6)

Workers Produce More, Get Less, Survey of Real Wages Shows

(Continued from Page 1)

Productivity and real wages: As the study explains, the "average amount of wages paid for an hour of labor when allowances are made for changes in cost of living measures approximately the purchasing power of wages and indicates roughly what wages earners draw out of the national product per hour of labor. . . . A comparison of real hourly earnings with man-hour productivity indicates roughly whether or not the wage earners' rate of consumption is keeping pace with the basic or man-hour rate of production."

PRODUCTIVITY ROSE

From 1909 through 1939, the productivity of American labor as measured by output per man-hour has risen much faster than the wage earners' rate of consumption as measured by real hourly earnings. Following figures show this:

Manufacturing: Output per man hour, or productivity, rose by 163.6 per cent between 1909 and 1939; average real hourly earnings by only 110.5 per cent.

Bituminous coal mining: Productivity (1909 to 1939) increased 101.5 per cent average real hourly earnings only 72.5 per cent.

Anthracite coal mining: Productivity (1909 to 1939) increased 110.5 per cent; average real hourly earnings by only 72.5 per cent.

Trend in Manufacturing: These figures show that the worker's ability to produce goods has far surpassed his ability to buy them back. In the following table the trend of this exploitation of workers in manufacturing industries is indicated by the course of production per man-hour and real average hourly earnings. To make the trend more readily perceptible, we have converted the Bureau of Labor Statistics figures, which were on a 1923-25 basis, to that of 1909:

Year	Productivity	Real average hourly earnings
	(1909—100)
1909	100.0	100.0
1919	115.4	124.3
1923	151.0	138.6
1929	199.2	149.9
1932	208.0	152.6
1939	263.6	210.5

As noted, productivity per man-hour in manufacturing industries rose in this period by 163.6 per cent and real average hourly earnings by only 110.5 per cent. These figures represent the degree of exploitation of the employed workers; they do not reflect the concomitant result of rapidly rising productivity under a profit system—technological unemployment. Through speed-up and rationalization employed workers are forced to produce an even greater volume of goods with proportionate increases in their earnings, while thousands of others are thrown into the ranks of the jobless.

Two periods contrasted: Of special significance to organized labor is a comparison of the trend of productivity and average real hourly earnings in manufacturing industries during the two periods 1923-1929 and 1932-1939, shown in this table:

	Per cent increase 1923-1929	Per cent increase 1932-1939
Output per man hour	31.9	26.6
Real average hourly earnings	8.2	37.8

"After the World War," the study explains in referring to the labor situation, "there was a policy of non-intervention so far as legislative and administrative agencies were concerned, but the courts were utilized extensively by employers, especially through injunctions, to check the influence of labor organizations." As a consequence in the years 1923-1929, hourly earnings, when adjusted by the index of cost of living, rose only 8.2 per cent; man-power output by 31.9 per cent. Says the study:

An outstanding characteristic of these years was the decline of wages as a proportion of total income payments in manufacturing, the mineral industries as a whole, and steam railroads. Total wages fell from 63.6 per cent of all income payments in these industries in 1923 to 57.1 per cent in 1929."

Employers not only deprived labor of the benefits of rising productivity by their refusal to increase wages accordingly, but also as this government study points out, "The benefits of the rising productivity of labor were no in general transferred through price reductions to consumers, for the index of cost of living was higher during most of the period than in 1923."

It was this widening of the gap between the ability of the workers in general to produce goods and the ability of the masses in general to consume these goods that laid the basis for the economic crisis and depression of 1929-1933.

During the period 1932 through 1939 labor made a better showing. Through widespread organization of labor, as the study admits, "general advances in wages were more easily secured and retained." By organizing into unions workers were able not only to increase their wage rates in greater conformity with rising productivity but were able also to assure these gains through the enactment and protection of beneficial labor legislation.

It should be noted again, however, that the relative gains of labor in the 1932-39 period have not made up for the greater relative loss in the 1923-1929 period. Reactionaries who point out the comparatively "high" wages of the latter period should always be reminded of this fact.

Employers of course have their eyes on the "good old days" of the Harding-Coolidge era when unions were comparatively weak and labor legislation was far from adequate to protect the elementary rights of labor. In their attacks on labor standards and social legislation in the present "defense" period they would turn back the clock a decade or more in an effort to cancel the gains made by the workers in recent years of struggle.

100 AGENCIES DRAFT POST-WAR PLANS

20th Century Fund Reports on Survey of Such Planning Throughout Nation

PRIVATE GROUPS AIDING

35 Federal Organizations and Various Trade Associations at Work on Programs

More than one hundred governmental and private agencies and commercial concerns throughout the United States are making plans for the post-war period, according to a survey made by the Twentieth Century Fund that is being issued today.

The fund's report, titled "Post-war Planning in the United States," was prepared by Dr. George B. Galloway, and describes the work of thirty-five government agencies, thirty-three private agencies, eleven industrial and financial organizations, sixteen trade associations and seven rail, highway, water and other transportation agencies disclosed to have undertaken planning now for the return to peacetime conditions.

Among the major Federal agencies so engaged are the Board of Economic Warfare, headed by Vice President Wallace; the post-war division of the Labor Department, under Dal Hitchcock; the division of research and statistics under the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, which has retained Professor Alvin H. Hansen of Harvard University as special economic adviser; and such other agencies as the National Resources Planning Board, the Public Work Reserve, the Department of Agriculture, the Federal Security Agency, the Treasury Department, the Department of Commerce, the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, Federal Housing Administration and the Federal Power Commission.

An equally long list of private agencies whose study projects generally are of a scale and scope to match governmental efforts includes the Twentieth Century Fund, the Commission to Study the Organization of Peace, Council for Democracy, Rotary International, National Bureau of Economic Research, National Planning Association, Federal Council of Churches, New School for Social Research, National Policy Committee, Social Science Research Council, Council on Foreign Relations, and American Library Association.

In addition, business organizations such as General Electric Company, the National Association of Manufacturers, National Association of Real Estate Boards, American Iron and Steel Institute, American Association of Advertising Agencies, United States Chamber of Commerce, Association of American Railroads, National Automobile Manufacturers Association, and many others are engaged in surveys of post-war expectancies and programs.

Jacksonville Progressive News

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., SATURDAY, MARCH 14, 1942

Scenes From B. S. C. P. Mass Meeting

Pictured above, are the national and local leaders of the BSCP's conference which convened here this week. From l to r, M. P. Webster, first international president; S. L. Bennett, president of local branch, and A. Philip Randolph, national president.

The leaders are shown here with Mrs. Theresa Bailou Griffin, director of local NAACP Youth Council.—Photos by J. Henry.

Text of C.I.O. Executive Board Legislative Resolution

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10. — Constant vigilance to protect its hard-won gains and a program for extending social and labor legislation are the main points of the report of the CIO Committee on Legislation which was adopted by the Executive Board of the organization here yesterday.

The report assailed proposals from "diverse enemies of labor" to retreat the rights to organize and strike and declared that such proposals, if enacted into legislation, would constitute a denial of the American democratic institutions.

Proposals for the defense of the National Labor Relations Act, Walsh-Healy Act and an adequate WPA system were among the specific problems the report considered.

It also stressed housing measures, the Southern poll tax, mine inspection, health, anti-lynching, social security and civil rights issues.

The report follows:

Labor during the coming months must have two primary objectives regarding its legislative program. First, constant vigilance must be exercised to protect the hardwon legislative gains which have been made during the past few years. Second, labor must continue to march onward with a legislative program calling for extended social and progressive legislation for the protection of the people of the nation. These problems will arise in relation to both federal and state legislation.

At the present time the American people are being called upon to defend their basic institutions and our democratic way of life. During this period of stress certain vicious elements are attempting to play upon the fears and emotions of the people in order to impose their policies of reaction and repression of the interests of the people. The legislative program of the CIO is offered as a contribution toward the preservation of what the people seek to defend.

On the basis of this policy the following legislative program is proposed:

NATIONAL LEGISLATION

(1) The National Labor Relations Act

This legislation continues to be the most important in assuring labor unions the right to exist and to continue to live through the protection of the right of workers to organize into unions of their own choosing and to engage in collective bargaining. Labor must demand that this legislation be kept intact without amendments

The numerous proposals which have emanated from the diverse enemies of labor restricting the right to organize or the right to strike in any industries must be fought and defeated. The imposition of any such repressive legislation upon the workers of the nation will contitute a denial of the very democratic institutions which all Americans are determined to preserve.

(2) Wage-Hour and Walsh-Healey Acts

The Wage-Hour law was aimed to protect the most exploited segment of the workers of the nation. At the present time its minimum wage merely provides for 30c per hour. Industry committees operating under the law may fix the wage up to 40c per hour. Certainly these standards do not impose any serious burden on American industry. The maximum hours per week is set at 40 hours. However, this limitation in no way imposes any undue burden or any unsurmountable obstacles because overtime is permitted provided time and one-half is paid for such overtime.

Labor must continue to vigorously oppose any amendments to the Wage-Hour law which would in any way detract from the protection now given to labor under such legislation. In addition, vigorous efforts must be made to extend the protection of this law to millions who have not yet enjoyed its benefits.

The Walsh-Healey Act protects workers employed by those who receive government contracts in the maintenance of an 8 - hour day and 40-hour week and of prevailing minimum wages for each industry. This legislation does not limit the number of working hours but merely protects workers in assuring them payment of time and one-half for overtime.

The Act must be protected against any weakening amendments.

(3) WPA Appropriations

In spite of increased appropriations for national defense, millions of able-bodied workers are unable to find jobs in private industry. Ominous rumblings have been heard already from the "economy bloc" whose efforts will be directed against any adequate appropriations for the unemployed.

The WPA must be provided with an adequate supplemental appropriation for the rest of the fiscal year to provide at least a continuance of the present level of jobs with wages adjusted upward to meet increasing needs. For the coming year a new and broadened work program should be instituted paying adequate wages and without requirements of sponsorship or relief status. Such a program should provide work for all able-bodied workers who cannot get jobs. A comprehensive youth program should be enacted which will provide not only full opportunity for education and training but also give substance to the fundamental right of everyone to a job.

(4) Housing

One of the great unfilled needs of the American people is an adequate supply of decent, safe and sanitary housing. The existing program of government subsidized construction designed for the lowest income groups must continue to be the backbone of any national housing program. The United States Housing Authority program must be enlarged through the adoption of legislation far broader than any considered thus far, with vastly increased appropriations. Furthermore, in order to extend the program to the lowest income groups in all regions, such changes should be made in the law as may be necessary to reach the population of the milling towns, mining towns, and rural areas.

(5) Federal Mine Inspection Bill

In the mining industry many thousands of coal miners have lost their lives because of inadequate safety controls, and these deaths could have been prevented by the passage of a law providing for the federal inspection of mines.

The CIO must vigorously aid the efforts of the United Mine Workers of America in obtaining the passage of an adequate and satisfactory federal mining inspection bill.

(6) Southern Poll Tax

The recent congressional elections have emphasized the fact that certain reactionary congressmen are able to maintain themselves in power as representatives of a minority only because the poll tax disfranchizes the majority of the citizens living in their districts.

The CIO will continue to seek the enactment of legislation intended to prohibit the imposition of State poll taxes as a condition to the exercise of the franchise in federal elections.

(7) LaFollette-Thomas Oppressive Labor Practices Bill

After several years of public hearings by the LaFollette Senate Civil Liberties Committee, legislation was proposed by this Committee which would prohibit the use of labor spies, strikebreaking agencies, armed guards and industrial munitions in order to put an end to the brutal practices of anti-labor corporations against the workers.

No just or logical reason has ever been urged in opposition to this legislation. It has been stymied in Congress in the past by being smothered to death by the reactionaries. Labor must press only the more vigorously for the early enactment of this legislation.

(8) Social Security

The American people are entitled to a system of real security for aged people. The present dual system of state old-age pensions and federal old - age insurance does not take care of our needs in a satisfactory way and does not exhaust the limit of our resources. The CIO must continue to press for the adoption of an old age pension program based upon a flat pension of $60 per month, a supplementary allowance to wives up to a maximum of $90 per month, for each married couple with an age limit of 60 years, and eligibility to all persons, administered through a single federal system. Large groups of American workers who are not yet covered under this legislation should be brought within the system. The additional funds necessary for this program must be secured by taxes upon the higher income brackets and not imposed upon the workers.

(9) Health and Total or Permanent Disability.

One-third of the American people now receive no medical care worthy of its name and the wage earners and low income groups cannot afford adequate medical care because the costs of medical care are disorganized and excessive. Further, the incidence of total and permanent disability is now thrown entirely upon the workers and no adequate provision is made to meet their problem.

Legislation must be enacted which would:

(a) Enact a national health program, including insurance for medical care on a federal basis covering all persons, free medical care for those who cannot afford insurance, cash benefits for temporary disability to workers, and the construction of new hospitals in rural and urban areas throughout the country; and

(b) Establish a system providing for cash benefits in cases of total or permanent disability as part of the federal old-age pension program.

(10) Anti-lynching

Lynching, which has been a bar to the extension of democracy to millions of Negro workers and underprivileged white workers, must be eliminated. The CIO will continue to offer its unstinted support to the early enactment by Congress of anti-lynching legislation.

(11) Civil Liberties

The gains that have been made in the protection of civil liberties through the Supreme Court decisions enforcing constitutional rights must not be curtailed by Congress. The spread of dictatorships abroad and hysterical fears at home must only serve to reaffirm the abiding faith of the American people in the great principles of civil rights and civil liberties embodied in the Bill of Rights and in the social legislation upholding the dignity of the common man.

The CIO pledges itself to the maintenance and extension of our democratic rights and liberties and will combat any attempted legislative invasion of the civil liberties of any part of the American people.

In the last session of Congress, a bill was introduced which may well have resulted in serious suppression of civil liberties. This bill authorized the FBI to make investigation by wire-tapping and other means into what the Department of Justice deems to be interference with the national defense. While the Attorney General has attempted to safeguard the use of wire-tapping by requiring a certificate justifying its use, there is no safeguard upon the broad authority to make other investigations. The bill is a dangerous invasion of civil liberties and constitutional guarantees against unlawful searches and must be fought and defeated.

(12) Taxes

Two tax laws have been passed by the last Congress. The first was a revision of the income tax and federal sales taxes to raise approximately one billion dollars annually. One-half of this burden was placed upon wage earners and low income groups under $1,500 a year. This is the group that receives less than one-third of the national income, yet they are made to assume nearly one-half of the tax burden. The second tax law was an alleged excess profits tax. Under this excess profits tax bill, very few of our large monopoly corporations will actually pay any taxes because they are given such liberal exemptions. While a single worker who receives an income of over $800 a year must now pay income taxes, corporations do not pay any excess profits until they have earned more than 8 per cent of their capital, or more money than they have been making in the past.

In addition, the excess profit bill met the demands of industry that its huge profits from government defense orders remain unimpaired through special dispensation by way of liberal amortization provisions and elimination of previous legislative enactments limiting the amount of profits under government contracts.

The CIO calls for a revision of our tax structure by way of enactment of sound tax legislation, including the elimination of all forms of consumer taxes, direct or indirect, the imposition of a genuine excess profits tax, an end to tax exempt securities, progressive tax rates upon upper bracket corporate and personal incomes, increased inheritance taxes, and a tightening up of administartive loopholes.

STATE LEGISLATION

(1) A series of proposed model State bills will be sponsored and supported by the CIO Local and State Industrial Union Councils in the various States in which the legislatures will be in session this year. These bills will include the following:

(a) Limiting the authority of courts to issue injunctions in labor disputes;

(b) Guarantees of collective bargaining in State contracts;

(c) Establishing State Labor Relations Board to prevent unfair labor practices;

(d) Regulating and controlling the use of Home or National Guards;

(e) State minimum wage and maximum hour law;

(f) Protecting the payment of wages by employers to employees;

(g) Regulation of private detectives;

(h) Prohibiting evictions of persons who are unemployed involved in labor disputes;

(i) Regulating use of deputy sheriffs in labor disputes;

(j) Protection of exercise of civil liberties;

(k) Expanding coverage and benefits under State unemployment compensation laws.

(2) Several model State bills which were drafted by a Federal-State Conference in Washington of representatives of different Governors, have recently been submitted to the various State officials. These bills, under an alleged protection of national defense to prevent sabotage and to provide for the use of Home Guards, may constitute one of the most serious threats against organized labor. This proposed legislation will undoubtedly result in serious inroads in the full exercise of civil liberties, restrict and possibly prohibit efforts of unions to organize unorganized workers and curtail if not eliminate the constitutional and God given right of workers to exercise their right to strike in order not to be relegated to a position of economic slavery.

These bills must be fought and defeated in every State Legislature where the attempt will be made to obtain their enactment.

New York Post

February 19, 1941

OUTLAWING STRIKES BY LAW CALLED CONGRESSIONAL FOLLY.

Dear Editor: The news that the New York Joint Board of the Dressmakers Union affiliated with the International Ladies Garment Workers Union has been able to compel three of the five manufacturers' associations in their industry to agree to establish higher standards of efficiency in their shops is highly significant. Together with the Reuther plan, which seeks to utilize more fully for defense purposes the facilities of the automobile industry which now stand idle nearly half the time, and Philip Murray's proposal to see that the smaller iron and steel plants which are now partially idle should be used more fully, this plan for greater efficiency in the dress industry shows clearly the intense interest that trade unions have in greater output.

This interest of organized labor in greater output as soon as conditions of good pay and continuous employment are assured makes absurd the demands now being voiced by certain reactionary Congressmen for the abolition by law of the right to strike. The number of men involved in strikes this past year was a good deal less than the number who went on strike during 1918, when we were actually at war. There never was a time when outlawing strikes by legislation was less necessary than now.

FRANK R. CROSSWAITH,
Chairman, Negro Labor Committee.

Civil Liberties Union Bars Reds on Staff

National Committee Acts to Destroy Long Precedent

For the first time in its history the American Civil Liberties Union today barred from its governing committees and from its staff Communists or Communist sympathizers who insist on following the Communist party line.

In addition to Communist party and German-American Bund members, supporters "of native organizations with obvious anti-democratic objectives or practices" are prohibited from holding offiec in the union.

This departure from precedent was voted by a majority of the Union's National Committee, meeting in the Town Hall Club, 123 W. 43rd St., this afternoon.

Heretofore the Union has always welcomed some Communist members in its controlling body, in line with its long-standing policy of representing all political parties and faiths.

Dr. Ward Declines.

Dr. Harry F. Ward, for 20 years chairman of the Union, who has been under fire as a Soviet sympathizer in the Union, sent a letter declining to run for re-election.

Choice of a successor was postponed, but John Haynes Holmes, vice chairman and critic of Communist party line followers, will serve temporarily as acting chairman.

Dr. Ward, who is on his way to Mexico for a three-months leave of absence from Union Theological Seminary, had been criticized for retaining chairmanship of the League for [illegible], allegedly Communist-controlled.

The Resolution.

Part of the resolution adopted reads as follows:

"The Board of Directors and the National Committee of the American Civil Liberties Union hold it inappropriate for any person to serve on the governing committee of the union or on its staff who is a member of any political organization which supports totalitarian dictatorship in any country or who by its published declaration indicates his support of such a principles.

"Within this category we include organizations in the United States supporting the totalitarianism of the Sovet Union and of the Fascist and Nazi countries (such as the Communist party, German-American Bund) as well as native organizations with obvious anti-democratic objectives or practices."

About forty directors or national committeemen attended the annual meeting. Those opposed to the resolution started to prepare a minority resolution at the conclusion of the meeting.

Split Widens.

While the split within the union at first was confined to Dr. Ward, later it was extended to other directors, some of whom were re-elected today, subject to the resolution.

PULLMAN, INC., TO BUY UP PART OF OWN STOCK

Reserves 15 Million for Purchases.

An offer to buy up to $15,000,000 of its own stock was made yesterday by Pullman, Inc., to stockholders. David A. Crawford, president, told the stockholders that the directors concluded recently that the retirement of a part of the outstanding capital stock of the corporation would be "in the best interests of the corporation and its stockholders."

David A. Crawford.

Pullman, Inc., is a holding company controling the Pullman company, operator of sleeping car and other railroad equipment, and the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing company, manufacturer of railroad equipment. It now has 3,820,194 shares outstanding. On a basis of yesterday's closing price of 24⅜, if the entire $15,000,000 were used, approximately 600,000 shares would be retired.

Has Huge Cash Balance.

Crawford's letter said that the directors of Pullman, Inc., believe that a part of the corporation's accumulation of cash and government bonds, totaling approximately $53,000,000—more than is needed in the conduct of the business—can be employed to advantage in the purchase and retirement of the capital shares.

Crawford also disclosed that certain large share holders, including one who is a director, have indicated a willingness to offer for sale at least a part of their holdings to the corporation "in connection with federal tax payment requirements." Altho Crawford did not explain further, sources close to the company said the federal tax payment requirements were connected with the payment of inheritance taxes, but declined to disclose the names of the individuals involved.

It was also indicated that if the shares were sold in the regular channels thru the New York Stock exchange the large amount involved might have a depressing effect on prices of Pullman shares.

Working Capital Larger.

"The annual report recently shows an excess of current assets over current liabilities of approximately $75,875,000, which gives the Pullman group of companies a larger amount of working capital than it has had at any time since its reorganization in 1927 when Pullman, Inc., was formed," Crawford said.

He added that since 1930 there has been a net reduction of approximately $125,884,000 in the stated investment in physical properties. Notwithstanding the disbursement of cash dividends in excess of all the net profits earned by Pullman, Inc., and its subsidiaries since the reorganization in 1927, there has been an increasing accumulation of cash and government bonds.

In making the request for the tender of the stock, Crawford said the directors do not want to make any forecast as to the future of the company's business. Estimated earnings for the first quarter of this year are $3,000,000, or 78 cents a share, compared with $2,265,816, or 69 cents a share, in the first quarter of 1940.

Directions for Selling.

The stockholders were told to send a tender accompanying his letter, with the amount and price of the shares they were willing to sell, to the Pullman corporation's agent, J. P. Morgan & Co., Inc., 23 Wall street, New York. As soon as practical after April 15 the Morgan company will inform the stockholders whose tenders have been accepted in whole or in part, and will return any certificates for shares tendered but not accepted.

Later stockholders will be asked to approve a reduction of the capital of the corporation to the extent of the shares purchased and by 54,368 shares previously acquired.

JOBS FOR NEGROES IN DEFENSE SPREAD

Hillman Reveals Responses From Industry in His Drive for Widened Opportunity

TRAINING IN SKILL OFFERED

Curtiss-Wright, Sun Shipyards and RCA Plant Report on Employment Policies

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, May 10—Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management, reported progress today in his drive to persuade defense contractors to employ Negroes to relieve skilled labor shortages.

The Curtiss-Wright Corporation, which makes military aircraft, notified Mr. Hillman that it would employ Negro skilled workers and that "several Negro trainees have been enrolled in the Curtiss-Wright training school and are now receiving instructions which will lead to employment in skilled positions in the Buffalo plant."

The notification was in response to a general letter sent by Mr. Hillman to defense contractors asking them to train and employ Negroes.

Other responses to Mr. Hillman's letter include one from John G. Pew, president of the Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company at Chester, Pa.

Reports Ratio of 10 Per Cent

"At the present time, 10 per cent of our employes are colored men," Mr. Pew wrote. "They are employed in the following departments: Forge and blacksmith shops, foundry, pipe-fitting department, bolting and reaming, riveting, storeroom, yard maintenance, bending shop, garage and janitor service."

G. K. Throckmorton, president of the RCA Manufacturing Company, Camden, N. J., wrote:

"We were mindful of the matter (Negro employment) before the receipt of your letter, and under our policy we had already engaged a substantial number of Negro workers in various lines of endeavor from factory workers to salesmen."

From Montgomery, Ala., A. C. Greeson, president of the Greeson Manufacturing Corporation, wrote:

"At the present time we are using local labor entirely and our crew is about equally divided between white and Negroes. We have several positions held by skilled Negro workers and they are given every opportunity to occupy any job they are capable of handling."

Dr. Robert C. Weaver, chief of the Negro Employment and Training Branch of OPM, cited a recent report from the Michigan State Employment Service to show that expanded activity on the part of the Bureau of Employment Security Agencies was facilitating the integration of Negroes into defense production.

Michigan Placements

The report declared that "2,360 Negro placements were made during the first quarter of this year as compared with 940 for the corresponding period last year."

"Placements of Negroes during this first quarter constitute 7.5 per cent of total placements, while during that period last year they constituted only 4 per cent of all placements," it added.

"Every week placements are being made of Negroes in occupations in which we have never before been able to place them. Screw-machine operators, lathe operators, electricians, gear hobbers (machine shop), welders and skilled foundry workers such as bench, floor and hand molders as well as coremakers of all kinds.

"In two instances increased hiring of Negroes has been reported. In Muskegon, a foundry and machine company is now placing colored men on some skilled jobs, although formerly they have been used only as unskilled labor. Similarly, under the stimulus of increased orders, two establishments in the Port Huron area are now hiring both colored and Mexican foundry workers."

APPEAL TO PRESIDENT

Seventeen Negro Leaders Ask End of Bias on Defense Work

President Roosevelt was urged yesterday to order the inclusion in all defense contracts of clauses forbidding discrimination against applicants for employment because of race, creed or color. The plea was made in an open letter signed by seventeen Negro leaders, all supporters of the economic and foreign policies of the Roosevelt Administration.

The letter declared that Negroes had found it virtually impossible to obtain jobs in aircraft factories and other defense industries and that instances had been reported of Negro youths denied admission to government training schools for defense mechanics.

Included among the steps suggested were the writing into defense contracts of requirements that employment be given to qualified persons without regard for race or religion and the issuance of an executive order prohibiting discrimination in the armed forces and in the government training program for defense jobs.

The signers included A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; Elmer A. Carter, member of the State Unemployment Insurance Appeal Board; the Rev. Dr. George E. Haynes of the Federal Council of Churches, Walter White and William Pickens of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Gertrude E. Ayer, principal of Public School 24.

Other signers were Assistant District Attorney Eunice H. Carter, Layle Lane, vice president of the American Federation of Teachers; Professor Ralph J. Bunche of Howard University, Frank R. Crosswaith, chairman of the Negro Labor Committee; the Rev. A. Clayton Powell Jr., the Rev. William Lloyd Imes, Willard S. Townsend, president of the United Transport Service Employes; Noah C. A. Walters, assistant manager of the Laundry Workers Joint Board; Hobson R. Reynolds of The Pittsburgh Courier, A. L. Jackson and Raymond Pace Alexander.

Pullman to Make Shells for Allies

BUTLER, Pa., June 8.—(AP.)—Wallace Barker, vice president for operations of the Pullman Standard Car Corporation's plant here announced today the company had accepted a $3,000,000 order for shells from the Allied Purchasing Commission.

Re-tooling of the Butler plant, which produced munitions during the World War, will begin immediately and probably will be completed by October. Production of shells, finished except for powder and caps, will begin then on a 24-hour-a-day basis, Barker said.

The plant normally is engaged mainly in the construction of freight cars.

NWLB HELPS UNION IN NO-STRIKE STAND

Acts, 8 to 4, to Give Security to Local at Plainfield, N. J., Which Lost Members

By W. H. LAWRENCE

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, April 3—While A. F. of L. and C. I. O. leaders worked on new methods of putting teeth in their war-time "no strike" policy, the National War Labor Board was reported today to have split 8 to 4 in deciding tentatively to rebuild and make secure a C. I. O. union which had a membership loss of nearly 50 per cent in a four-month period during which it refrained from striking in the face of alleged anti-union acts by the employer.

The first board decision on union security covers the 250 employes of the Walker-Turner Company of Plainfield, N. J., and the United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers of America, C. I. O. The tentative ruling, now being drafted in final form by William H. Davis, NWLB chairman, reportedly found the four public members joining with the four labor members to comprise the majority, while the four employer members dissented.

Continued on Page Six

NWLB HELPS UNION IN NO-STRIKE STAND

Continued From Page One

Point of Wide Controversy

Although the company involved in the case is small, the ruling is considered of major importance nationally since it is the first board policy decision on an issue which has aroused great controversy in and out of Congress and on a question which led to the downfall of the old National Defense Mediation Board.

Formal announcement of the ruling in the Walker-Turner case is not scheduled until next week and it may be delayed beyond that if the public, labor and employer members are able, as seems possible, to reach unanimous accord on a union security decision covering the 25,000 employes in eight plants of the International Harvester Company or the 23,000 workers at the Kearny, N. J., yard of the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Company, a subsidiary of United States Steel Corporation, which once surrendered its yard to the government rather than grant a union maintenance of membership clause.

The formula in International Harvester may be a voluntary "maintenance of membership clause" such as was awarded in the Marshall Field case.

In the Walker-Turner case the board majority was said to have decided tentatively that workers who were union members on Nov. 27, when the dispute with the company began, should be required to reinstate themselves in good standing and remain in good standing, with the penalty for failure to do so being either discharge or loss of seniority rights, depending upon a decision of the company-union grievance machinery. Non-unionists would not be required to join the C. I. O.

Membership Fell Sharply

The board majority was said to have been impressed by the fact that the C. I. O. union represented about 95 per cent of the 250 workers in November, but during the dispute with the company its membership dwindled to about 50 per cent.

The board minority, the employer group, whose dissenting opinion is being drafted by Roger D. Lapham, chairman of the board of the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company, was said to have offered a compromise clause under which union members who did not desire to remain in good standing could escape this obligation, but the proposal was turned down.

Mr. Lapham and his associates were said to feel that the board should not interfere with the right of a worker to decide for himself whether his membership in the union must continue for the life of the contract.

While the NWLB was debating this question of giving security to labor unions which give up the right to strike during the war, members of the "Combined Labor War Board," consisting of three representatives of the A. F. of L. and three of the C. I. O., met with President Roosevelt for a general discussion of labor problems.

As they left the White House, William Green, A. F. of L. president, and Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, confirmed reports that they were attempting to draft a joint policy under which an affiliate of one, suspended for non-compliance with the no-strike policy, would not be chartered by the rival organization.

Fight Move To Oust Railroad Firemen

SAVANNAH, Ga.—A movement has been initiated and being vigorously prosecuted by the Brotherhood of Railway Firemen and Engineman, the effect of which, if successful, will be to deprive some 2,000 or more colored firemen and hostlers of their jobs on 20 railroads in the Southeast.

The movement is being resisted by the managements of the railroads affected on the ground that colored men are adapted to such work, have given efficient service, and that the Negro deserves a square deal.

Furthermore they argue that the natural home of the Negro is in the South, that the labor of him and his family is needed in this section, that to limit further his right to employment in this territary is an economic error and a social injustice.

The scale of pay and the working conditions of the white man and the black man in the firemen's seat are exactly the same. This pay ranges from $150 to $200 per month. The union uses this parity in pay to argue for the employment of white men only.

The railroads in the South employ both white and colored firemen. There are no colored engineers. It is, therefore, the policy of most of the railroads to employ a sufficient number of white firemen to provide for a supply of engineers and to fill other places with colored men. Probably about half of the firemen in the South are colored.

The union could not, and therefore does not, attempt to secure the immediate discharge of the colored firemen but is demanding that after this date no more be employed.

On some southeastern railroads it has already been successful in enforcing its demand. It does not use the language "white" or "colored" in its demands, but insists that only "promotable firemen and helpers" be employed.

The union further demands that when new runs or jobs are established, only promotable men be assigned to them, and it wishes to bar colored men from 'other than steam power,' that is to say, the diesel engines now rapidly being put into service.

Since colored men are not in line for promotion to engineers, the effect of all this is simply to close the door of employment to the colored man who may wish to become a fireman or a hostler.

These demands were first made in March of this year, and to date have not been granted. However, practically all demands made by the railroad labor unions during recent years have been successful, and there is every reason to believe that history will repeat itself in this instance, unless there is a vigorous and united protest from clear-thinking people.

There will be other and more far-reaching effects than the permanent loss to the race of these 2,000 well-paid jobs. There are many thousands of Negroes in railway jobs other than firemen or hostlers in the shops, the section gangs, as truckers, waiters, brakemen, flagmen, porters and the like.

It is a certainty that if the firemen are successful in putting up this ban, the other unions will follow their example, and soon...very soon...the transportation industry which now affords opportunity and fair treatment to thousands and thousands of colored men, will employ only a pitiful few in those menial and low-paid positions that the white man may not wish.

Atty. Keys to Speak on Bee Radio Program

A very comprehensive and enlightening address on the part the Negro has and is playing in art, was delivered Tuesday on the Radio Forum program by Mrs. Frances T. Moseley, prominent civic and social leader and art patron, when she spoke on the subject "Negro Art, 1851 to the Present."

Mrs. Moseley, the 29th speaker of the Radio Forum series, sponsored by the BEE and heard every Tuesday at 1:15 over station WHIP from its Chicago studios in Kimball Hall, cited the advancement being made by the Negro in cultural achievements, and gave a resume of the strides being made by the Negro in art since the latter part of the 19th cenury.

Lawyer Next Speaker

The next speaker on the Radio Forum series is Atty. Ulysses S. Keys, former BEE columnist, and well known professional man. Attorney Keys is a member of the law firm of Prescott, Burroughs and Taylor. He will speak on the subject, "The Lawyer in the Community."

The entire text of Mrs. Taylors address begins on page 16 in this issue. Copies of Radio Forum addresses will be mailed those desiring them without charge. The Chicago Bee invites its readers to listen to these programs which emanate from WHIP, 1480 on the dial, each Tuesday at 1:15 p. m.

NEGRO REPRESENTATION URGED FOR LABOR MEDIATION BOARD

Dear Editor: As chairman of the Negro Labor Committee, an organization supported by unions having over a quarter of a million members in New York City, I want to urge President Roosevelt respectfully and strongly that some outstanding Negro trade unionist, such as A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, be made one of the labor members of the National Labor Mediation Board or else appoint an outstanding Negro to represent the public on that board.

FRANK R. CROSSWAITH,
Negro Labor News Service.

N. Y. Post
3/26/44

Concerning—

NEW YORK CITIZENS COMMITTEE OF ONE HUNDRED

in behalf of

PULLMAN PORTERS and MAIDS

To establish their right of self-organization and the abolition of tipping as a reward for their labor

The Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters is the first and only National Negro labor union in the United States

---

Issued by the Committee

HENRY T. HUNT, Chairman
~~100 East 42nd Street~~
New York City

1. The Citizens Committee of New York is composed of over 100 of the most outstanding men and women of the nation in various walks of life as a glance at the list of names of the Committee will disclose.

2. The Committee was organized January 18th, 1927 and held its first public meeting at the Community Church, 34th Street and Park Avenue, New York City.

3. PURPOSES OF THE COMMITTEE:

   (a) To assist the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters in establishing the right of self-organization of the Pullman porters and maids as against the Company Union known as the Employee Representation Plan.

   (b) To give the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters counsel and support in public opinion and before the United States Boards of Mediation and Arbitration.

   (c) To stimulate public interest in favor of a living wage for the porters and maids and the abolition of tipping as a reward for labor.

   (d) To support fully the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters until the organization has secured the just demands it is striving for and finally takes its place in the ranks of the organized American labor movement.

   (e) The Committee is convinced that the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters is a stable and progressive organization with responsible and capable leaders who recognize their duty not alone to the porters and maids but also to the Pullman Company and the travelling public.

   (f) The Committee is also convinced that the firm establishment of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters will stimulate Negro workers in other industries to organize; making thereby for the elimination of antagonism between workers of both races and for better race relations.

The Committee asks for the support of all fair minded citizens in behalf of these Negro workers whose organization's slogan is SERVICE NOT SERVITUDE.

HENRY T. HUNT, Chairman
Rev. WM. LLOYD IMES, Secretary
ARTHUR C. HOLDEN, Treasurer

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

Wm. H. Baldwin
Abraham Beckerman
Thos. J. Curtis
Dr. Harry E. Fosdick
Arthur Garfield Hays
Morris Hillquit
Rev. John Haynes Holmes
James W. Johnson
Rev. Geo. F. Miller
John E. Nail
Mrs. Gordon Norrie
Amos R. E. Pinchot
Rev. F. Clayton Powell
Mrs. V. G. Simkhovitch
Arthur B. Spingarn
Dr. Norman Thomas
Frank P. Walsh

FINANCIAL COMMITTEE

Wm. H. Baldwin
Arthur C. Holden
Rev. Wm. Lloyd Imes
Mrs. Gordon Norrie
Dr. Norman Thomas

THE COMMITTEE

Dr. Robert W. Bagnall
Forrest Bailey
Abraham Beckerman
Dr. A. A. Berle
Alfred Bernheim
Alexander M. Bing
Julius Bledsoe
Bruce Bliven
Prof. Franz Boas
Leonard Bright
Dr. W. E. B. Du Bois
Katherine D. Blake
Harriot Stanton Blatch
S. John Block
Prof. LeRoy E. Bowman
Prof. Paul Brissenden
Heywood Broun
Edward P. Cassidy
Stuart Chase
Judge Thomas W. Churchill
Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin
McAlister Coleman
Herbert Croley
Anna N. Davis
Prof. John Dewey
Mary E. Dreier
Thomas B. Dyett
Mrs. Charles Noel Edge

JOBS FOR NEGROES IN DEFENSE SPREAD

Hillman Reveals Responses From Industry in His Drive for Widened Opportunity

TRAINING IN SKILL OFFERED

Curtiss-Wright, Sun Shipyards and RCA Plant Report on Employment Policies

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, May 10—Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management, reported progress today in his drive to persuade defense contractors to employ Negroes to relieve skilled labor shortages.

The Curtiss-Wright Corporation, which makes military aircraft, notified Mr. Hillman that it would employ Negro skilled workers and that "several Negro trainees have been enrolled in the Curtiss-Wright training school and are now receiving instructions which will lead to employment in skilled positions in the Buffalo plant."

The notification was in response to a general letter sent by Mr. Hillman to defense contractors asking them to train and employ Negroes.

Other responses to Mr. Hillman's letter include one from John G. Pew, president of the Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company at Chester, Pa.

Reports Ratio of 10 Per Cent

"At the present time, 10 per cent of our employes are colored men," Mr. Pew wrote. "They are employed in the following departments: Forge and blacksmith shops, foundry, pipe-fitting department, bolting and reaming, riveting, storeroom, yard maintenance, bending shop, garage and janitor service."

G. K. Throckmorton, president of the RCA Manufacturing Company, Camden, N. J., wrote:

"We were mindful of the matter (Negro employment) before the receipt of your letter, and under our policy we had already engaged a substantial number of Negro workers in various lines of endeavor from factory workers to salesmen."

From Montgomery, Ala., A. C. Greeson, president of the Greeson Manufacturing Corporation, wrote:

"At the present time we are using local labor entirely and our crew is about equally divided between white and Negroes. We have several positions held by skilled Negro workers and they are given every opportunity to occupy any job they are capable of handling."

Dr. Robert C. Weaver, chief of the Negro Employment and Training Branch of OPM, cited a recent report from the Michigan State Employment Service to show that expanded activity on the part of the Bureau of Employment Security Agencies was facilitating the integration of Negroes into defense production.

Michigan Placements

The report declared that "2,360 Negro placements were made during the first quarter of this year as compared with 940 for the corresponding period last year."

"Placements of Negroes during this first quarter constitute 7.5 per cent of total placements, while during that period last year they constituted only 4 per cent of all placements," it added.

"Every week placements are being made of Negroes in occupations in which we have never before been able to place them. Screw-machine operators, lathe operators, electricians, gear hobbers (machine shop), welders and skilled foundry workers such as bench, floor and hand molders as well as coremakers of all kinds.

"In two instances increased hiring of Negroes has been reported. In Muskegon, a foundry and machine company is now placing colored men on some skilled jobs, although formerly they have been used only as unskilled labor. Similarly, under the stimulus of increased orders, two establishments in the Port Huron area are now hiring both colored and Mexican foundry workers."

APPEAL TO PRESIDENT

Seventeen Negro Leaders Ask End of Bias on Defense Work

President Roosevelt was urged yesterday to order the inclusion in all defense contracts of clauses forbidding discrimination against applicants for employment because of race, creed or color. The plea was made in an open letter signed by seventeen Negro leaders, all supporters of the economic and foreign policies of the Roosevelt Administration.

The letter declared that Negroes had found it virtually impossible to obtain jobs in aircraft factories and other defense industries and that instances had been reported of Negro youths denied admission to government training schools for defense mechanics.

Included among the steps suggested were the writing into defense contracts of requirements that employment be given to qualified persons without regard for race or religion and the issuance of an executive order prohibiting discrimination in the armed forces and in the government training program for defense jobs.

The signers included A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; Elmer A. Carter, member of the State Unemployment Insurance Appeal Board; the Rev. Dr. George E. Haynes of the Federal Council of Churches, Walter White and William Pickens of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Gertrude E. Ayer, principal of Public School 24.

Other signers were Assistant District Attorney Eunice H. Carter, Layle Lane, vice president of the American Federation of Teachers; Professor Ralph J. Bunche of Howard University, Frank R. Crosswaith, chairman of the Negro Labor Committee; the Rev. A. Clayton Powell Jr., the Rev. William Lloyd Imes, Willard S. Townsend, president of the United Transport Service Employes; Noah C. A. Walters, assistant manager of the Laundry Workers Joint Board; Hobson R. Reynolds of The Pittsburgh Courier, A. L. Jackson and Raymond Pace Alexander.

NWLB HELPS UNION IN NO-STRIKE STAND

Acts, 8 to 4, to Give Security to Local at Plainfield, N. J., Which Lost Members

By W. H. LAWRENCE

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, April 3—While A. F. of L. and C. I. O. leaders worked on new methods of putting teeth in their war-time "no strike" policy, the National War Labor Board was reported today to have split 8 to 4 in deciding tentatively to rebuild and make secure a C. I. O. union which had a membership loss of nearly 50 per cent in a four-month period during which it refrained from striking in the face of alleged anti-union acts by the employer.

The first board decision on union security covers the 250 employes of the Walker-Turner Company of Plainfield, N. J., and the United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers of America, C. I. O. The tentative ruling, now being drafted

Continued on Page Six

Pullman to Make Shells for Allies

BUTLER, Pa., June 8.—(AP.)—Wallace Barker, vice president for operations of the Pullman Standard Car Corporation's plant here announced today the company had accepted a $3,000,000 order for shells from the Allied Purchasing Commission.

Re-tooling of the Butler plant, which produced munitions during the World War, will begin immediately and probably will be completed by October. Production of shells, finished except for powder and caps, will begin then on a 24-hour-a-day basis, Barker said.

The plant normally is engaged mainly in the construction of freight cars.

NWLB HELPS UNION IN NO-STRIKE STAND

Continued From Page One

in final form by William H. Davis, NWLB chairman, reportedly found the four public members joining with the four labor members to comprise the majority, while the four employer members dissented.

Point of Wide Controversy

Although the company involved in the case is small, the ruling is considered of major importance nationally since it is the first board policy decision on an issue which has aroused great controversy in and out of Congress and on a question which led to the downfall of the old National Defense Mediation Board.

Formal announcement of the ruling in the Walker-Turner case is not scheduled until next week and it may be delayed beyond that if the public, labor and employer members are able, as seems possible, to reach unanimous accord on a union security decision covering the 25,000 employes in eight plants of the International Harvester Company or the 23,000 workers at the Kearny, N. J., yard of the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Company, a subsidiary of United States Steel Corporation, which once surrendered its yard to the government rather than grant a union maintenance of membership clause.

The formula in International Harvester may be a voluntary "maintenance of membership clause" such as was awarded in the Marshall Field case.

In the Walker-Turner case the board majority was said to have decided tentatively that workers who were union members on Nov. 27, when the dispute with the company began, should be required to reinstate themselves in good standing and remain in good standing, with the penalty for failure to do so being either discharge or loss of seniority rights, depending upon a decision of the company-union grievance machinery. Non-unionists would not be required to join the C. I. O.

Membership Fell Sharply

The board majority was said to have been impressed by the fact that the C. I. O. union represented about 95 per cent of the 250 workers in November, but during the dispute with the company its membership dwindled to about 50 per cent.

The board minority, the employer group, whose dissenting opinion is being drafted by Roger D. Lapham, chairman of the board of the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company, was said to have offered a compromise clause under which union members who did not desire to remain in good standing could escape this obligation, but the proposal was turned down.

Mr. Lapham and his associates were said to feel that the board should not interfere with the right of a worker to decide for himself whether his membership in the union must continue for the life of the contract.

While the NWLB was debating this question of giving security to labor unions which give up the right to strike during the war, members of the "Combined Labor War Board," consisting of three representatives of the A. F. of L. and three of the C. I. O., met with President Roosevelt for a general discussion of labor problems.

As they left the White House, William Green, A. F. of L. president, and Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, confirmed reports that they were attempting to draft a joint policy under which an affiliate of one, suspended for non-compliance with the no-strike policy, would not be chartered by the rival organization.

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

By JAMES H. HOGANS

THE COLORED FIREMAN

When I was a small boy in the South, one of my exciting pastimes was to stand by my father's blacksmith shop, which was near the railroad tracks, and wave to the grimy-faced black firemen as their trains hurtled through our quiet little village.

I haven't been farther south than Virginia in over forty years, but I am told that the picture which used to excite my childish fancy is almost a rarity now.

The black faces that were once a familiar sight in the engine cabs of Southern trains are gradually growing fewer and fewer, it seems, and unless something is done to arrest the elimination, it is only a matter of time when the colored railroad fireman in the South will be as extinct as the Australian dodo bird.

To those of us who retain pleasant memories of the Southland, that is a depressing situation, but for colored railroad labor it is a distressing one.

Just what can be done about it is a problem, since there are so many angles to it. Some of the main reasons, however, are the evolutions that have taken place in late years in locomotive operation and the methods of elimination which the engine drivers' unions have employed against colored firemen.

The age-old rule of never permitting a colored man to advance to the position of engineer has also been one of the angles.

One ray of hope for salvaging the situation, however, is being held through the efforts of Willard S. Townsend of the United Transport Service Employees and A. Philip Randolph of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, to organize the colored firemen.

According to Mr. Randolph, unless colored firemen are organized into one big, powerful union, as are the white firemen, and are able to beat back the menacing tide of racial discrimination, there will eventually be no colored railroad firemen.

He states that an effort will be made by his organization to secure a Senate investigation of the present plight of this group and the methods the enginemen's union is employing to drive them out of the industry.

President Townsend of the red caps' union, whose national organization is making efforts to organize the colored firemen of the Florida East Coast System, when seen in New York last week, expressed an opinion similar to Mr. Randolph's on the necessity for organizing.

Explaining that the Florida East Coast was the only railroad in the country that employed all colored firemen, he said he didn't care to comment on Mr. Randolph's suggestion for a Senate probe of the situation, but he made this statement:

"It is my firm conviction that the economic weaknesses of local colored organizations, isolated from the main stream of the labor movement, are vulnerable to attacks, so there must first be a co-ordination of effort on the part of colored workers in every phase of the railroad industry.

"The Bureau of Labor Standards and Statistics indicates that there are approximately 100,000 colored workers in the railroad industry.

"Certainly, from this number a strong and militant buttress against unfair labor practices could and must be established by judicial and legislative provisions."

Fighting as an independent organization, Mr. Townsend's union has kept all its battles within the framework of legislative acts. It is his labor philosophy that the railroad worker must resort to the lever of law, rather than that of race, to fight discriminatory and unfair labor practices.

Architects, Contractors and Real Estate Men Urged Not to Install or Buy Guth Electric Products

Unfair Edwin F. Guth Co. Sells Direct to Installers of Lighting Fixtures and Other Products. Labor Press Throughout the United States Requested to Inform Electrical Contractors of Unfair Status of Guth Co.

St. Louis Electrical Workers' Union, Local No. 1, which has intensified its drive to organize the unfair Edwin F. Guth Co., 2615 Washington Ave., states that the company sells directly to local contractors, builders and architects as well as to retailers of its lighting and other electrical products.

The Electrical Workers' Union, Local No. 1, is opposed to installing fixtures made by Guth, and has the support of the St. Louis Building & Construction Trades, which also resent the patronage by builders, architects, real estate men and contractors of this Unfair firm when there are many dozens of union firms which manufacture better and just as reasonably priced products.

Business Manager James A. Morrell of Local No. 1 would like the Labor Press throughout the United States to carry the information that the Edwin F. Guth Co. of St. Louis, manufacturer of electric lighting products, is Unfair to Organized Labor. In this manner many out-of-town electrical contractors who would not knowingly handle anti-union products, will be informed. Labor newspapers which carry this news item are requested to send a marked copy of the issue to James A. Morrell, Business Managre of Electrical Workers' Union, Local No. 1, 4249 Gibson Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Union representatives are call-upon hardware merchants and dealers in the electrical lines to urge them not to carry further stocks of Guth products. Firms which refuse to cooperate will be prominently mentioned by Local No. 1 in future issues of the St. Louis Labor Tribune.

In the meantime, the steady picketing of the Guth plant goes on as it has for the past eighteen months.

Organized Labor in St. Louis is determined to help the Electrical Workers to lick the Edwin F. Guth Co. in this finish fight for union recognition and a living wage for its employes.

Western Auto Stores Organized

Louis Renschen, Representative for the Retail Clerks' Local No. 655, stated that his organization and the Filling Station Employes' Local 618 have signed up the Western Auto Stores to a joint contract. Since the Western Auto Stores are now 100 per cent union, Renschen suggested that members of Organized Labor patronize the stores of this firm.

WORKERS ASKED TO FILE FOR R. R. RETIREMENT

Washington, D. C.—The Railroad Retirement Board asked all persons with railroad service prior to 1937 to file statements immediately with the board or their last railroad employer to establish eligibility for retirement payments when they reach retirement age. The board estimated that 230,000 out of 1,200,000 individuals entitled to credit for service before 1937 have not yet submitted statements of service.

By submitting these statements now, Murray W. Latimer, chairman of the Railroad Retirement Board, emphasized, railroad workers can get the full annuity amounts to which they are entitled, with a minimum of delay, when they reach retirement age. They will also guard against destruction or loss of records proving their service.

An individual may count railroad service before 1937 toward his annuity if on August 29, 1935, he was working for an employer subject to the act or was on furlough, leave of absence, or was absent on account of sickness or disability in accordance with an applicable rule or practice in effect on the employer. Employers covered by the act include interstate railroads, companies owned or controlled by such railroads which perform services in connection with rail transportation, sleeping-car and express companies, railroad associations, and the standard railway labor organizations.

LABOR SHORTAGES FOUND IN 78 SKILLS

Few Workers Are Registered in Aircraft, Machine Shops, Shipyards, McNutt Says

STATE OFFICES SURVEYED

Of 978 Tool Designers Needed, 61 Were on List—One Man for Each 40 Airplane Jobs

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, June 29—Serious shortages of qualified workers in aircraft, shipbuilding and machine-shop occupations were reported today by Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator. A labor survey just completed showed that in sixteen aircraft, thirteen shipbuilding and twenty-six machine-shop occupations there were insufficient workers registered with State employment offices to meet employers' needs.

According to estimates of defense employers, 978 tool designers were needed up to June 1, while only sixty-one were registered with State employment offices at the beginning of April. Almost 250 die designers were required, but only sixteen were available. Among airplane woodworkers the ratio of demand to supply was 40 to 1; for detail assemblers in aircraft it was 50 to 1. In shipbuilding no hull inspectors at all were available; twenty-five were needed. Almost 550 loftsmen were needed, but only fifteen were available.

The most extreme shortages, besides those already mentioned, were for ship fitters, template makers, boat builders, marine machinists, aeronautical engineers, aircraft final assemblers and aircraft riveters, tool and die makers and various kinds of machinists and lathe operators.

In all, there were seventy-eight occupations out of 394 surveyed in which the number of workers registered at State employment offices at the beginning of April was insufficient to fill openings then current, let alone expected hirings through the end of May.

A MINORITY OF OUR OWN

If the United Nations win this war the principle of the world-wide legal equality of races will have to be recognized. Since this is largely a war of ideas, and since racial equality before the law has become one of the central ideas on the democratic side, we can almost say that this principle, in itself, may be the deciding factor. The Chinese, the East Indians, the numerous African peoples and many other groups are on our side, or would be so if they were completely convinced that we mean what we say by equality just as unreservedly as the Nazis mean what they say by inequality.

But we Americans cannot very well talk convincingly in these terms unless we prove our sincerity in our own country. Our largest recognizable racial minority is the Negro, who constitutes nearly 10 per cent of our population—assuming, as is generally done, that a small fraction of Negro blood makes a man or woman a Negro. This newspaper was glad to publish this week a letter from William H. Baldwin, president of the National Urban League, pointing out that so long as we "restrict the full partnership of our 13,000,000 Negro citizens" we "reduce our all-out effectiveness and we provide the Axis propagandists with just the sort of material they want."

This problem has nothing to do with social relation between the Negro and other races. The democratic freedoms include the freedom to choose one's friends, of whatever race or religion, The problem is to remove discrimination in opportunities, in jobs, in the armed services and in the basic rights of citizenship. In all these respects the American Negro suffers. He does not yet have an equal chance to learn a skilled trade, to get a job if he does learn, or to join a union if he gets a job. In the Navy he cannot expect to rise above the rank of cook. In the Army, as William L. White writes in the current Survey Graphic, he may attend one of six officers' training camps and may become a commissioned pilot. Even there, however, his opportunities are small compared with his numbers.

This is a national, not a sectional, problem. It can be solved if we apply to it the same mutual forbearance that we think we have a right to expect in India of the British and the East Indians. It has to be solved if the white-skinned majority is to avoid the sinister hypocrisy of fighting abroad for what it is not willing to accept at home.

Helpful to Hitler

To the New York Herald Tribune:

It is a spectacle that should make the gods laugh to see John L. Lewis joining hands with reactionary Republican isolationists like Hoover and Landon in calling on Congress to cease taking any further effective steps to stop the drive which Hitler is making to destroy democracy and establish the Nazis as a master race throughout the world.

It is easy to understand the psychology of Hoover and his group. Some of them probably prefer Hitler to Roosevelt, because Hitler destroys the labor movement wherever his power extends while Roosevelt and the New Dealers tax profits heavily and seek to strengthen the unions as necessary partners in the democratic process of collective bargaining.

But it is not so easy to explain why John L. Lewis lines up with these reactionary isolationists. Perhaps his personal hatred of Roosevelt as well as his dictatorial methods of ruling his own union have made him willing to overlook the anti-labor record of Hoover and Hitler in order to take a crack at the policy followed by Roosevelt and favored by the overwhelming majority of the members of organized labor to stop the Nazis' assault on democracy at all costs.

FRANK R. CROSSWAITH,
Chairman Negro Labor Committee.
New York, Aug. 6, 1941.

N.Y. Herald Tribune 8/8/41

5,333,000 WORKERS IN PUBLIC EMPLOY

Total Earnings in January Were $621,000,000, According to Census Bureau

FEDERAL HOST AT NEW PEAK

Total of 1,370,000 Is an Increase of 218,000 From One Year Ago

By The United Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24—About 5,333,000 persons were employed by Federal, State, county and local governments in January of this year, according to a report by the Census Bureau.

This army of workers earned $621,000,000 in that month, or about one-sixth of the nation's non-agricultural wage payments.

About 3,225,000 workers received salaries aggregating $381,000,000 from State and local governments. The remainder were Federal employes.

The Census Bureau said that the largest group of State and local employes were 1,333,000 teachers and other school employes, who earned $175,000,000 in January. Almost 2,000,000 non-school public employes, earning $206,000,000 in January, were required for the performance of other State and local government duties.

California, Illinois, Massachusetts, Michigan, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania accounted for almost half the number of State and local employes and over half of the January payroll.

The Census Bureau statement coincided with a Civil Service Commission disclosure that civilian employment of the Federal Government's executive branch reached 1,370,110 on June 30, the end of the fiscal year.

This figure represented a new record. It was 63,777 greater than such employment at the end of May and 218,962 greater than at the start of the 1941 fiscal year, July 1, 1940.

The commission noted that most of the increase was in defense agencies. Civilian employment in the War Department jumped from 137,318 on June 30, 1940, to 320,291 on June 30, 1941; the Navy Department from 117,981 to 222,862 in the same period, and the Civil Service Commission itself from 2,780 to 6,709. The Office for Emergency Management, which as the National Defense Council had seventy employes on June 30, 1940, had 3,624 employes on June 30, 1941.

Saturday, May 24, 1941

Become a Citizen--Prepare to Vote

The Negro's strength in affairs which concern his very existence is gauged by his ballot. If you are not a citizen, become one. The United States Naturalization Service has division offices at 641 Washington Street, Manhattan. CAnal 6-2100.

Making Jobs For Negroes

For the first time in history a printing plant under the supervision of the powerful International Typographical Union, A.F. of L. is being manned by 50 % Negro craftsmen. It happened this way:

Early this year several Harlemites, including the publishers of the Amsterdam Star-News, invested money in the Fairlawn Newspaper Printing Corp. of Hawthorne, New Jersey with the stipulation that at least one-half of the employees would be Negroes.

Pursuant to its agreement with the Harlem investors, officials of the printing company—printers of the Star-News—sought to have written into a contract with the Paterson, (N. J.) local, in whose jurisdiction the plant is located, a clause providing for Negro help so as to prevent the seniority rule from barring Negroes in the event the quota of competent craftsmen had not been reached before the agreement was signed.

When the Paterson local declined to write the "Negro Clause" into the contract, Fairlawn officials held their ground and refused to consumate the agreement. Paterson then called on New York's Big Six local to help straighten out the dispute. Meanwhile, Fairlawn hired a number of Negro non-union workers. Big Six asked the publishers of the Amsterdam Star-News to use their influence to compel the plant to sign up, but the publishers refused until after the New York local agreed to provision for Negro employees.

Thus, with the printing plant becoming 100% organized under the I. T.U., an A.F. of L. union, and the business, editorial and advertising departments organized under the American Newspaper Guild of the C.I.O., the Amsterdam Star-News becomes the first Negro newspaper in the country with union labor standards from end to end. This means better salaries and better working conditions for more Negroes. We hope the opening that has been made for Negroes in the Typographical union here will pave the way for more and better jobs for Negro printers throughout the country. We present positive proof that Negro and white technicians can and will work together harmoniously.

9 Negroes Begin Bus Co. Training

By J. ROBERT SMITH.

The first step towards employing Negroes as drivers on buses owned and operated by the New York Omnibus Corporation and the Fifth Avenue Coach Company was taken, Tuesday, when nine men responded to an invitation to call at their office, 603 West 132 St. for physical examination, and training.

Of the 266 who applied for drivers positions, the following men were selected: Charles E. Smith, 31, 272 W. 129 St., married, a graduate of Clark University, Atlanta, Ga. has been driving for 16 years;

Richard Farrell, 35, 128 W 138 St., married, graduate of Summer High School, Kansas City, Mo., 10 years driving experience; Edgar Mitchell, 31, 2440 7th Avenue, married, graduate of Howard University, 12 years experience;

Broad Jump Champion.

Edward Gordon, 31, 2260 Bathgate Ave., married, graduate of the University of Iowa and 1932 Olympic broad jump champion with 18 years driving experience; Hiawatha Lynn, 29, 128 W. 138 St., single, graduate of Livingstone College and has driven for the Federal Bureau of Investigation for more than 12 years;

Leon Black, 35, 217 W. 110 St., married, graduate of Newport High School, Arkansas, 20 years experience; Elmer O. Haney, 37, 461 W. 148 St., married, graduate of Prairie View State College, 23 years experience; Percy Ferguson, 23, 555 Edgecombe Avnue, married, lawyer, graduate of Howard University, 17 years experience;

Vincent Cunningham, 26, 43 St. Nicholas Place, single, graduate of DeWitt Clinton High School, 6 years experience; both Leon J. de Loach, 25, 672 St. Nicholas Ave., married, a native of Brunswick, Ga. with 10 years driving experience and Percy Bryant, who left for Detroit, Mich., Monday night to head up the Ford testing ground at $125 per week, did not show up.

According to Edmund C. Collins, attorney and secretary-treasurer for the bus companies, the men who were selected through the YMCA, State Employment Office, New York Urban League and the Greater New York Coordinating Committee will begin training this week as soon as they have passed the physical examination.

They will then be expected to drive the buses with a regularly employed company instructor on the try-out grounds and after becoming acquainted with the mechanism of the vehicle they will be put on the Fifth and Eighth Ave. routes accompanied with drivers on duty.

Sign Up For Bus Drivers Jobs

Here on nine of the ten men who have been selected by the New York Omnibus Corporation and the Fifth Avenue Coach Company to be trained as drivers. They are seen at the bus companies office, 603 W. 132nd St. receiving instructions from Mr. E. C. Collins, secretary-treasurer of the firms. From left to right seated: Leon Black, Percy Ferguson, Vincent Cunningham, Charles E. Smith; standing: Richard Ferrell, Edgar Mitchell, Edward Gordon, Hiawatha Lynn and Elmer Haney.

Edward Gordon, 1932 Olympic broad jump champion being examined by the bus companies physician as the first step towards becoming a driver on one of the buses. Gordon is a graduate of the University of Iowa, is married and resides in New York. He has been driving an automobile for eighteen years. (Story pg. 11) defense [illegible] at no time will be lost [illegible] seeking equal and full participation in the defense program.

Now that the President has "spoken out" and will soon appoint the Fair Employment Practice committee, it is important that all industries in the defense setup that have barred Negroes from employment should be tried out immediately by Race workers. All cases of discrimination will be presented to this Fair Employment Practice committee, Randolph stated.

"Order Weak," Says White

Walter White, in an address Friday, July 4 in Houston, Texas, called the President's order "weak," which was in direct contrast to Randolph's statement that the order was a "second Emancipation Proclamation."

Celebrate "Victory"

In Washington Tuesday, July 1, the March-on-Washington committee held a "victory" celebration at which Fiorella LaGuardia, mayor of New York City and chief of "home defense;" Walter White, A. Philip Randolph and Miss Jeanetta Welch, Alpha Kappa Alpha nonpartisan lobbyist, delivered speeches which, in general, lauded the President's order but did not express complete satisfaction with it.

Committee Makes Plans

At a meeting of the March-on-Washington committee here July 2, it was decided to place efore President Roosevelt a recommendation that the five-man board (Fair Employment Practice committee) be a mixed group.

Another important step taken at this meeting was the appointment of a sub-committee to gather information regarding training courses being offered in those occupations allied to defense industries.

Frank R. Crosswaith, chairman of the Harlem Labor committee, and Mrs. Layle Lane, member of the board of the American Federation of Teachers, are two of the three members of this sub-committee. The name of the third member was not disclosed "owing to certain unspecified considerations."

Randolph expressed the desire to have the various local committees remain intact. Specific instruction are being forwarded to these separate groups to observe closely the employment tendencies in their respective areas and report any violations of the executive order directly to the national committee.

ON JIM CROW

TURDAY, JULY 12, 1941 THE CHICAGO DEFENDER RELIABLE FOR 36 YEARS

ACT TO 'FOOL-PROOF' FDR BAN

July 12, 1941 The Chicago Defender

DERS SEEK ORCEMENT ENTIRETY

ps To Prevent War From Distorting Measure's Meaning

NEW YORK.—Rising above the general controversy following President Franklin D. Roosevelt's executive order banning all forms of discrimination in national defense industry which caused the much publicized "March on Washington" to be declared "unnecessary at this time" by its director, A. Philip Randolph, five developments are now outstanding:

(1) National Negro Congress this week asked President Roosevelt to take steps to prevent the War department from distorting the meaning of his recent order.

(2) Randolph urged Race workers to apply for jobs in all industries with defense contracts.

(3) Randolph and Walter White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, disagreed on the value of the President's order.

(4) The National March-on-Washington committee Tuesday, July 1 held a "victory" celebration in Washington, D. C., and

(5) Next day 11 of the 15 members of the committee met in New York to make plans for the future.

Asks President to Act

Following an investigation of a $166 million contract which the War department awarded to the Glenn L. Martin Aircraft company, which has refused consistently to even consider hiring Negroes, the National Negro Congress, in a telegram, asked President Roosevelt to take steps to prevent his recent order from being evaded by the War department.

According to the department's officials, the contract, signed June 30, contained no clause stipulating that workers must be hired regardless of race, creed, color, or national origin, because the contract was "discussed" prior to the issuance of the President's order and therefore was not bound by it.

With this new contract, the Martin company now has a total of $616 million in defense contracts. Fearing that Race workers will not get their rightful share of this money and that other companies in the industry may evade the presidential order in the same manner, the National Negro Congress' wire read in part:

". . . We are informed that... any contract upon which any discussion has been held prior to your order is not subject to the provision against discrimnation. . . . If this interpretation . . . is allowed to stand . . . contracts not yet signed amounting to billions of dollars may be authorized without protection against discrimination."

Workers Should Seek Jobs

After the meeting here of the March-on-Washington committee Wednesd[illegible] A. Philip Ran-[illegible] to apply

THE A The Afro-American July 12, 1941

They Addressed D.C. Victory Rally

Speakers at the victory rally celebrating the President's order calling for the end of discrimination in defense industries, held at the Watergate in Washington on Tuesday evening of last week. Left to right are: Mayor Fiorello LaG[illegible] New York, J. Finley Wilson, A. Philip Randolph and Mrs. Mary Church Terrell.

HITS DIC[illegible]R ACTION IN CALL[illegible]FF MARCH

July 12, 1941 The Pittsburgh Courier

ST. PAUL, M[illegible]ly 10—In a bitter telegram [illegible] executive committee of the [illegible] On Washington, Reginald [illegible] chairman of the St. Paul br[illegible] the National Negro Con[illegible] declared that after hearing [illegible]p Randolph's radio speech [illegible] Saturday he was convin[illegible]t the march leader had [illegible] the race.

Calling for a resum[illegible] the plans for the march, [illegible]rged a complete disregard of [illegible]ph's "dictatorial action" at [illegible]lth hour.

AFRO-AMERICAN

July 12, 1941

SHIP-BUILDERS TO HIRE MORE SKILLED LABOR

Negro Workers Expected To Be Doubled By Expansion Program

WASHINGTON.—The Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock company at Chester, Pa., Tuesday told the OPM that it was going to increase by 100 per cent Negro employment in its yards, where 750 colored skilled and unskilled workers are already employed.

Other developments in this field, revealed by Dr. Robert C. Weaver, chief of the Negro employment and training branch of OPM, in a report to Sidney Hillman, associate director general, included:

1. The admittance of Negro trainees in pipefitting, welding, sheet metal and electrical defense courses at Philadelphia for anticipated employment at the Cramp Shipbuilding company yards.

2. The conclusion of an agreement with west coast unions and shipbuilders for the transfer of Negro building trades workers to the shipbuilding yards for immediate construction employment.

Plans for the doubling of the Negro personnel at the Sun Shipbuilding company were outlined to a field representative of Dr. Weaver's office by C. R. Burke, vice president of the shipbuilding firm.

Earlier, John G. Pew, president, had informed OPM that Negroes already constituted 10 per cent of Sun's employes, and that they were integrated into the forge and blacksmith shops, foundry, pipefitting department, bolting and reaming, riveting, storeroom, yard maintenance, bending shop, garage and janitor service.

Burke revealed that an additional 750 Negro workers would be hired in these departments when the employment peak is reached, and that many of the present workers would be promoted to foremen and supervisory positions.

At the Cramp Shipbuilding company, Dr. C. R. Pendleton, director of training, accepted a suggestion of the OPM representative that 100 Negroes be referred immediately from the Pennsylvania State Employment service for examination and defense training in shipbuilding operations at the Mastbaum vocational school annex.

Dr. Pendleton has already referred four Negro trainees to Mastbaum for training in pipefitting, welding, sheet metal and electrical work. Since peak employment is not expected at Cramp's before 1942, a sizeable number of Negro workers will have an opportunity to secure the necessary training.

The west coast agreement for the transfer of Negro building construction workers to shipbuilding construction work in Pacific coast yards was instituted by Dr. Weaver on a recent field trip to that area. The agreement resulted from conferences between union and shipbuilding officials and Dr. Weaver, Dr. Will Alexander, and Leonard Outhwaite of OPM.

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

By JAMES H. HOGANS

MR. BROWN'S THEORIES

In a recent letter to this column, Paul E. X. Brown of Chicago not only takes me to task for my comments on the union division of Pullman porters, but defends this disunity and asserts that a bipartite union system in labor is just as essential for democratic process as is a two-party system in government or politics.

"Each week I read your column," he writes, "and from your writings I have formed the conclusion that you wave the banner of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters [illegible] of the actual fa[illegible] to that organization [illegible] become personally offended whenever any other writer disagrees with your comments.

"Perhaps I don't understand any too well the welfare of Pullman porters, but I know that in your recent article about their union welfare you went far out of the way to cover up some very unfavorable circumstances that must in the near future confront them and other colored railroad workers.

"Regarding their disunity, I cannot appreciate your contention that all porters who do not hold membership in the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters are fifth columnists.

"To the contrary, I contend that two labor organizations among Pullman porters must serve a good purpose or there wouldn't be two.

"In our government, for example, we have had two political parties down through the ages, each of which has served a definite purpose in the scheme of things.

"When we learn the true application of the democratic processes, we shall have gone a long way in solving one of the greatest union problems now confronting our race."

With no intention of questioning the right of Mr. Brown to his theories and beliefs regarding Pullman porters and their labor problems, I do feel that I [illegible] titled to challenge the accuracy of those that are personal.

I cannot recall any occasion in which I have expressed resentment at any writer who disagreed with my comments.

If he refers to my recent reply to John [illegible]eid, which I assume is the case, the explanation is this: Mr. Reid asked me a question which I essayed to answer.

With reference to my waving the banner of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, I could just as well be accused of being an ensign bearer for the red caps, the dining car employees, the baggage and express workers and other colored railroad and Pullman organizations.

So far as news and comments on them are concerned, that, I might explain, is the business of this column; at least that is what I am paid for by this newspaper, anyway.

But I do not claim the honor of being a banner waver for any particular group or organization. However, I frankly admit, I admire the progress some of them have made in the labor field.

When Mr. Brown compares the labor system with that of the government, and asserts a hope for return of the porters to their former state of collective bargaining, it can only be assumed that he means the old system of inside representation as against that of ourside representation.

If that assumption is correct, I recommend that he secure a copy of "The Theory and Practices of Collective Bargaining" by David J. Saposs, former chief economist of the division of economic Research of the National Labor Relations Board, and read what he says on the subject, particularly collective bargining.

"An important factor," writes the noted economist, "in the selection by employees of their own representatives from whatever source they see fit, is that they can thereby develop bargaining specialists who will at least approximate the bargaining representatives of employers.

"The worker at the machine or bench may be exceedingly proficient in the performance of his particular task or trade, but he is, either by temperament or lack of experience, an unqualified bargainer.

"Moreover, being dependent upon a particular employer for his job, he might be induced by fear or pressure to let down in his demands, or sacrifice the interests of his constituents in other ways."

I think that type of labor philosophy is applicable to the porters as well as any other large group of workers.

Coming Conventions

JULY 12-13 — National Laymen's Conference, [illegible] Bordentown, N.J.

JULY 16-19—N.J. State Federation of Colored Women's Clubs, Bordentown.

JULY 16-19 — State Sunday Schoool and BYPU Convention, Rock Hill, S.C.

JULY 17-18—Columbia-Camden District Church School convention, Camden, S.C.

Negro Technicians Still Getting The 'Run-Around'

The Pittsburgh Courier July 19, 1941

Despite Shortage ... Who Are Well Qualified Find it Next to Impossible to Get Kind of ... Qualified to Fill.

By MORGEN S. JENSEN
(Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, July 17—Despite President Roosevelt's recent executive order banning discrimination in defense industries, Negro technicians are being given the employment run-around, it was charged last week by the Brooklyn Council of the National Negro Congress.

Cited as victims of a vicious industrial practice which excludes Negroes from technical positions, even though there is an acknowledge shortage of skilled labor, were Fitzgerald Bramwell, 59 Decatur street, and Charles W. Bingham, 81 Chauncey street, both Brooklynites.

Bramwell is an accredited Engineer. He holds a degree of bachelor of science in chemical engineering from the Institute of Technology, Cooper Union, New York City.

"Hearing, over the air, and reading in the newspapers of the tremendous scarcity of men with technical training," Bramwell almost moaned, "I gleefully set out for the Sperry Gyroscope Company of Brooklyn, a firm holding defense orders running into millions of dollars for production of precision instruments. Applying at their personnel department for a position as Engineering Inspector, I was handed an application blank and instructed to execute it. This I did, but the Sperry people must have thought that I went out of existence, inasmuch as nothing ever was done about it."

Disclosing that his application was mailed in, Bramwell was asked if there were any questions on the blank which might indicate to the Sperry Company the fact that he was a Negro.

"Well," he suggestively replied. "I don't claim that any particular significance should be attached to what I'm going to say. But, the application blank handed to me was initialed by one of the men in their Personnel Department, and this fact was distinctly brought to my atention as I was leaving."

Bramwell returned last week to the Sperry Gyroscope Company of Brooklyn, applying for work in the laboratory, in the drafting department, or as an Inspector of Materials, he said. He was told there might be an opening later in the year, with an explanation that 50 percent of the plant's employees were going on vacation the first two weeks in August and the other 50 per cent during the last two weeks of August. He said he was informed that the electrical testing department was overstaffed, anyway, and that no more men would be taken on until September, when the plant would be in full swing.

Bramwell, downhearted, was just about to leave the Sperry plant as Mrs. Dorothy Funn, executive secretary of the Brooklyn Council of the Negro National Congress, entered. Mrs. Funn, on a semi-weekly "Job Hunt" tour with about a dozen unemployed persons, had an appointment at the plant.

"Alright, since you feel so certain of Bramwell's qualifications we'll give him a test," countered a Mr. Filburn, personnel interviewer, to Mrs. Funn's insistent statements that Bramwell was qualified to fill a technical position. The test was of the oral, or interview type. Bramwell was told to "call back in September."

While Bramwell was being "tested," another colored applicant, George A. Spearing, 2100 Fifth avenue, Manhattan, arrived. He was given a working test, at the conclusion of which he was told that there was at present no opening in his particular field. He was informed that his application would be "kept on file."

Bingham, the second technician charged with getting the employment run-around, holds a certificate in mechanical engineering. Completing a three-year course, he was graduated from Pratt Institute, School of Science and Technology, Brooklyn, a nationally-known institution of learning. So highly accredited is Pratt Institute, that practically all of Bingham's classmates were signed up for highly desirable technical jobs before graduation. In his case industry just didn't seem to classify him as an engineer.

"I have applied for work at nearly every aircraft factory within the Greater New York area," Bingham almost dejectedly related. "The Ranger Aircraft Co., Farmingdale, L. I.; Curtiss-Wright Aircraft, Paterson, N. J.; Republic Aircraft and the Grummond Aircraft, both at Beth Page, L. I., are among those I contacted. However, at every plant the answer was the same: 'Fill out this application and we'll place it on file.' My applications seemingly were always misplaced, because I've never heard anything further from even one of them."

Bingham claims that it is an easy matter for the aircraft plants to determine whether or not an applicant is a Negro, since those at which he has applied for employment demand a photograph of the applicant, as well as his nationality, race and religion.

A ray of hope brightened Bingham's features when he revealed that he was recently summoned by the New York State Employment Service and instructed to file with them an application for a position as junior inspector, draftsman, or machinist, with the Tennessee Valley Authority project, because they're going to hire quite a few men and they'll endeavor to integrate qualified Negro workers into many of the technical jobs which are opened.

Both Bramwell and Bingham, anxious to obtain work at their chosen professions, have passed 12 Federal Civil Service examinations covering technical subjects. Certified many times, neither has received an appointment. Since they have worked at anything that came along, always hoping for the "break" that has not yet arrived.

"It's too deep for us and we simply can't understand it," they nodded in unison. "Every day the newspapers are pleading for skilled men. Radio announcements almost beg for technicians. However, even though they don't say so, they must mean WHITE men. If not, why is it that we can't get a job?"

CHICAGO DEFENDER

July 19, 1941

Fired Red Caps Are Reinstated at Penn Station

NEW YORK. — All red caps recently fired at the Pennsylvania Station following drumhead trials, for alleged failure to give passengers change or receipts on the company's 10-cents-a-bag system, have been reinstated, it was announced by Earl Adams, chairman of Transport Service, Local 602.

The United Transport Service Employees of America, the red caps' union, seeking abolition of the per-bag systems, protested that a score of the men had been convicted of dishonesty on the testimony of a company spotter.

System Called Unfair

Most of the ousted men had long service records, one 28 years, and others were officers or prominent in the red caps' union. hTe actual conditions under which the system works is said to be such that a spotter may trap any red cap whom he desires to entangle.

As it works, the system is said to be all in favor of the company, forces the porter into a "speedup" program, and deprives service of persons who most need it. The pporters are paid 39 cents for each hour worked.

Pennsylvania Station adopted the per-bag system on June 1. Other railroads a[illegible] simultaneously. The red caps' union has already taken le[illegible] steps to defeat the system [illegible] makes it plain that the t[illegible] public needs to know wha[illegible] pening.

NEW YORK AMSTERDAM NEWS

July 19, 1941

Red Caps Sue For Back Pay

Five Ushers Claim Trailways Bus Depot Owes Large Sum

The Trailways Bus Depot, headquarters for several bus companies operating in and out of this city, was sued for $15,000 this week by five red caps who charged that the company owes them that amount in back wages.

The bus terminal involved is located at 241 West 42nd Street, in the Hotel Dixie. William McKelvey, 1450 Broadway, and lawyer for the red caps, filed the suit last Friday in Federal Court.

Floyd Taylor, of Brooklyn; Eugene Zanders, James Sowell, James White and Noah Washington, of Harlem, were listed as the plaintiffs. Attorney McKelvey described the Trailways Depot as one of the most flagrant violators of the wage and hour law in New York.

During the Winter, he added, many of the red caps earn as little as $1 a day. Besides their regular duties, they are also required to clean, mop and sweep the terminal.

The suit was filed, it was learned, after several conferences between lawyers for both sides. One of the company's representatives, L. G. Parzia[illegible] is said to have obtained relea[illegible] from a few of the red caps by [illegible]ing them $25 and a promise that they wouldn't be fired, if they would drop the case.

FIRST LA[illegible]Y LAUDS ORD[illegible]R AS FIRST ST[illegible]

The Fort Worth Wind July 19, 1941

The Executive Order [illegible]e President was highly prais[illegible]y Mrs. Roosevelt as a first ste[illegible] suggested that we may go [illegible] others.

This attitude was expressed i[illegible] following letter addressed t[illegible] Philip Randolph by Mrs. Ro[illegible]velt:

"The White House
Washington
Campobello Island, N. [illegible]
June 26, 1941

My dear Mr. Randolph:

Thank you for your wire. I a[illegible] very glad the march has been post[illegible]poned and delighted that the President is issuing an executive order on defense industries.

I hope from this first step, we may go on to others.

(See FIRST, Page 8)

FIRST—

(Continued From Page 1)

Very sincerely yours,
Eleanor Roosevelt

No person in the country has manifested a finer spirit of sincerity in seeking and working for the elimination of discriminations against Negroes in national defense than has Mrs. Roosevelt, commented Mr. Randolph. While she was opposed to the march on Washington, she has also been opposed to all forms of discriminations on account of race, creed, color or national origin, concluded the National Director of the March on Washington, Randolph.

LAYMEN DISCUSS NATIONAL DEFENSE AT NATIONAL YMCA CONFERENCE

DEFENSE S STILL FOUN N PHILADELP A

The Chicago Defender July 19, 1941

Plants Make Littl ort To Conceal Colo e In Hiring Wor

PHILADELPHIA – NP) —Despite President ose- velt's executive orde ring race discrimination, roes are still on the outsi de- fense employment in thi .

Just last Tuesday, a ch with 14 years experience wa d to a job, paying $65 a wee had been referred by the eers club; he is a graduate o oted Drexel institute, and h rked with the laboratories o city of Philadelphia for a dozen years.

The factory was enthusiastic over his qualifications as the manager spoke to him over the phone. But this engineer had spent much money in going to jobs, only to be refused. He explained that he was colored. There was a half minute of silence and then, "Sorry, we can't use you."

At Cramp's shipyard, made possible by some 132 millions of federal funds, they are still explaining away their recent request for second generation whites, and H. B. Taylor, vice president, says no discrimination is the rule—but no Negroes are being employed.

The same for E. G. Budd, builder of tanks, and whose president E. G. Budd, recently gave $500 to the Douglas hospital, colored. The same too, at the Duponts enterprises in Wilmington.

U. S. Plans Probe Of Red Caps Wages And Working Conditions; Hearings In Chicago

CHICAGO, Ill.—Resulting from the recent adoption of a Senate resolution calling for an extensive investigation into the wages, hours and other conditions and practices of employment of red caps by railroads and terminal companies, the United Transport Service Employees of America, the red caps' union, announced its completion of preparations for the series of hearings which will be conducted by the United States Department of Labor's wage and hour division at Chicago, St. Louis, New York and Washington.

The Chicago hearing began July 15th and the St. Louis hearing will be held July 21st. Dates of hearings in New York and Washington, D. C. will be announced later.

The Chicago hearings cover all railroad terminals in Chicago, all of the terminals of the Illinois Central Railroad and the rail terminals in Minneapolis, Minn.; Milwaukee and Madison, Wis.; Omaha, Neb.; Cincinnati and Columbus, Ohio; Indianapolis, Louisville and the Pere Marquette Station in Detroit. The St. Louis hearing will cover all rail terminals in St. Louis and Kansas City, Mo.; Denver, Colo.; and Little Rock, Ark.

Introduced early this year by Senator Elbert D. Thomas, Chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, the resolution had the full backing of the United Transport Service Employees of America. On the basis of the investigation, legislation will be proposed to strengthen wage- hour legislation as related to red caps, union spokesmen declared.

Thomas Holland, director of the Research and Statistics Department of the wage and hour division has been named by Administrator Philip B. Fleming just as readily."

Among Mr. Barthe's works showing Negro subjects is one called "The Mother" which is reminiscent of Michelangelo's Pieta in St. Peter's in Rome. Notable for its restraint it shows a Negro mother at the insant the body of her lynched son is placed in her arms. The dead Negro rests across her lap in something of the pose in which the figure of Christ rests against the Blessed Mother in Michelangelo's work. "The Mother" was selected for the New York World's Fair Exhibition of Contemporary Art.

Mr. Barthe is now at work on a fourteen-foot bronze figure of a Negro spiritual singer which will form part of the James Weldon Johnson Memorial to be placed in New York City at Central Park near 110th street, southern boundary of Harlem.

—30—

NEW YORK AGE

July 19, 1941

NAL YMCA CONFERENCE

A BYSTANDER

IN ADVERTISING — CIRCULATION — LOCAL NEWS — CLEAN AND PROGRESSIVE BEST WEEKLY NEWSPAPER THE MIDDLEWEST'S BEST

DES MOINES, IOWA, THURSDAY, JULY 3, 1941 PRICE 5 CENTS

PATRONIZE OUR ADVERTISERS

March For Defense Work

No Contracts for Firms Discriminating Against Negroes, Promises F.D.R.

Washington, (By A. E. White for ANP)—Stung to action by the persistence of the organizers of the jobless march, President Roosevelt capitulated from his stand late Tuesday afternoon and promised his conferees that an executive order would be issued from the White House to all holders of defense contracts, declaring that no further contracts would be issued to organizations discriminating against Negroes and that furthermore, contracts would be withdrawn from the present holders if they continued their discrimination.

Further, the President has declared that a five man board will be named immediately to see that the provisions so outlined are carried out to the absolute letter of the order, and to insure this, the President himself [illegible] member of that board.

Upon [illegible]aration, the leaders of the jo[illegible]rch told Mr. Roosevelt they were calling off the march temporarily, but that a memorial meeting would be held here in Washington on the day originally scheduled for the march and that the group would meet at the Lincoln Memorial as originally planned and speeches would be made telling the White, working in close conjunction throughout the entire matter, have had the entire and wholehearted support of hundreds of other well and right thinking Negroes throughout the organization and planning for the March.

And at the conference Tuesday, which lasted all evening it is reported, there was not the slightest deviation from the original intent of the group to stage the demonstration.

The ultimatum is expected within a short time and defense industtries operating under these contracts are to receive the order, not the request, that all discrimination must stop. This is applicable to American citizens of Italian and German descent as well as to Negroes and more than justifies the statement of Dr. Ira DeA Reid, who only recently said the future of the Negro is definitely tied up with other similar groups.

Unyielding in their determination to see the thing through, the sponsors invited to a previous conference were told by the President that such a demonstration would be a bad influence and asked that it be withheld. The sponsors then disagreed with the President and stated they would carry on with their program.

It was then that the President

N. Y. AMSTERDAM STAR NEWS

July 5, 1941

Bus Company To Train Ten

Fifth Ave. Coach Shop To Use Them as Apprentices

Ten Negro high school graduates will be placed as apprentices in the shops of the Fifth Avenue Coach Company, it was announced this week.

The ten youngsters with John E. McCarthy, president of the company called on Mayor LaGuardia at his Summer City Hall, Monday. The Mayor wished them luck and commented that their placement was in line with the President's order that there be no racial discrimination in the mechanical defense program.

The youths are Ernest Martin, 375 Edgecombe Ave.; Samuel Gadsen; 120 W. 123 St.; Andrew Moore, 90 Edgecombe Ave.; John Caldwell, 462 W. 151 St.; Bert Davis, 72 E. 111 St.; Ernest Buggie, 1448 Fulton St.; Caleb Eddy, 74 E. 99 St.; Llyod Edwards, 1084 Fulton St.; Hilton Jones, 1774 Madison Ave.; Forster Sykes, 1040 Herkimer St.

The boys are graduates of the Brooklyn High School of Automotive Trade and the New York Vocational High School.

According to officials of the bus company two will be placed in garages; two in storerooms; five in main shops and one in a paint shop.

Negro Motormen On Brooklyn Trolleys

Six Ne[illegible] motormen were operating trolley cars owned by the Brooklyn-M[illegible]hattan Transit Corporation through Brooklyn streets, beginning the latter part of last week, the Star-News learned, and the forward step is bound to have a far-reaching effect in making large cities follow suit.

The men are Averill Gill, who is assigned to the Cross depot; George Been, Flatbush depot; Lawrence Williamson, 58th St. depot; Frank Wilkins, 9th Avenue depot; George Lougheed, Freshpond depot, and John Powell, 9th Avenue depot. They are all from New York City.

Richard Studinfin, of New York City, who failed the practical test was unassigned. The men were picked from the Civil Service list of Auto Engineering.

Another six are attending school, training to take over as motormen. They are to spend a three-day period in school then undergo a week's duty under the instruction of veteran motormen.

The appointment of Negroes on trolleys in Brooklyn has surpassed many large cities in that respect. Cleveland and Detroit are the only two cities that Negroes are known to be in motormen jobs.

New York City led the way several years ago when the Independent Subway System hired Negroes in all capacities. Many efforts to get the Pennsylvania Rapid Transit system in Philadelphia to place Negroes in those positions have failed. Such cities as Chicago, Los Angeles, Boston, Baltimore, Washington and others have been unsuccessful in getting Negro motormen.

From all reports, the six motormen on the Brooklyn trolleys are performing their jobs ably.

Train [illegible]orters Join Wag[illegible]crease Fight

ST. L[illegible]—A decision that all trai[illegible]ters' locals should take p[illegible] the movement for a 30 per [illegible] increase in wages of railway employees was reached here in the July 15 conference of representatives of the train porters' organization and their parent body, the Brotherhod of Sleeping Car Porters.

The meeting, which called a number of leaders of employee groups, was presided over by A. Philip Randolph, national labor leader and president of sleeping car porters' union.

The Louisiana Weekly

OLDEST AND FOREMOST IN SOUTH LOUISIANA

Issued Every Saturday at 632 S. Rampart St. By The Louisiana Weekly Publishing Co., Inc.

The Only New Orleans Negro Newspaper Served by the Associated Negro Press and International News Photos

Entered N. O. Post Office as Second-Class Matter Under Act of March 3, 1879.

Vol. XV, No. 42 NEW ORLEANS, LA., SATURDAY, JULY 5, 1941 PRICE 5c

FIRMS COMPLY WITH FDR'S ORDER 'JOBS OR NO DEFENSE CONTRACTS'

FDR On Board To Act On Defense Discrimination

(By A. E. White for ANP)

Washington, July 2.—Stung to action by the persistence of the organizers of the jobless march, President Roosevelt capitulated from his stand late Tuesday afternoon and promised his conferees that an executive order would be issued from the White House to all holders of defense contracts, declaring that no further contracts would be issued to organizations discriminating against Negroes, and that, furthermore, contracts would be withdrawn from the present holders if they continued their discrimination.

Further, the President has declared that a five-man board will be named immediately to see that the provisions so outlined are carried out to the absolute letter of the order, and to insure this, the President himself will be a member of the board.

Upon this declaration, the leaders of the jobless march told Mr. Roosevelt they were calling off the march temporarily, but that a memorial meeting would be held here in Washington on the day originally scheduled for the march and that the group would meet at the Lincoln Memorial as originally planned and speeches would be made telling the Negroes what had happened and what to expect in the future.

The order finally issued (1) directed all government agencies concerned with training programs for national defense to take measures to end discrimination; (2) directed the insertion in all government contracts hereafter negotiated a provision obligating th

Aircraft, Steel Iron Industries Give Negroes Jobs

(By The Asso[illegible] Press)

Washington, [illegible] Sidney Hillman's press c[illegible] Friday afternoon, the as[illegible]irector of the OPM outlined [illegible] the 60 or more white newsmen attending, the purposes and conditions of the President's recent executive order, affecting the working conditions of Negroes in defense industries.

After Mr. Hillman had outlined the progress of the OPM in this direction, calling attention to the fact that the OPM had been successful in securing employment for Negroes in camp construction in some 20 camps, airplane plants, iron and steel industries, and ordnance plants, he then went into a discussion of the executive order, which got very little space in the white papers when it was released here.

On the same day, the office of Dr. Rob[illegible] Weaver reported the following progress in the field of defense industry as far as employment for Negroes is concerned.

The Gruman Aeronautical Engineering corporation of Bethpage,

Harlemites Divided on Value of F.D.R. Order

A city-wide questionnaire conducted by the Amsterdam News this week on comments pertaining to President Roosevelt's executive order halting discriminations against Negroes in National Defense industries drew diversified opinions from residents of Harlem and other boroughs.

Dr. L. D. Reddick, curator, Schomburg Collection, New York Public Library, said: "In the sense that the committee got what it asked for, the anti-discrimination executive order of the President represents a clear victory. This is a splendid beginning, if it is only the beginning. Concrete provisions in Government contracts must implement the general statement.

"The next step, then, is for a democratic Army and Navy. But behind all of these piecemeal proposals must come the realization on the part of our Government that if mass murder, hunger, 'a master race' and group humiliation in Europe are awful, they are, likewise, awful in these United States. 'The Four Freedoms at home as well as abroad' should be the slogan. If the Federal Government does not raise this slogan on its own initiative, the Negro people should supply that initiative, beginning now!"

Dr. C. A. Petioni, physician: "The executive order is not sufficient yet until teeth has been put into it. There must be penalties to it so that his order may be binding, otherwise it means nothing."

James Ricks, junior clerk: "The President did not do it on his own goodness and generosity. He was forced to do it."

A. A. Austin, businessman: "It was a very fine gesture on the part of the Negro March-on-Washington Committee to have initiated such a movement and judging from the President's executive order, I think some good will come out of it."

Dr. Catherine D. Lealtad, physician: "I supported financially the march on Washington and I am in favor of any legislation or order that will compel industrialists to give our people employment."

Charles C. Berkley, social worker, Brooklyn: "The Executive order issued by the President is in my mind the result of organized Negro opinion. Before giving an appraisal of this order, it will be necessary for a definition of the word, "Government" to be clarified in order to determine whether it also includes the Army, Navy, Air and Marine Corps.

"I would also like to have an interpretation of what is the present status of industries which have discriminated against Negroes prior to the issuance of the order, since the order states 'that all contracting agencies of the Government of the United States shall include in all defense contracts 'hereafter' negotiated."

Dr. P. M. H. Savory, publisher: "Without a penalty attached, the executive order is without teeth and therefore practically ineffective."

Harry G. Bragg, assistant attorney general, New York State: "I think that as far as the order goes it is probably as much as the President could do, but I am of the opinion that if he had issued an executive order to the effect that those industries which did not employ Negroes would get no more defense work, the order would have been more effective."

Cleveland G. Allen, veteran newspaper man: "The order will doubtless go a long way towards adjusting the Negro in this democratic process of equal opportunities for all groups."

William E. Best, accountant: "I am very curious to know just how the order is to be enforced, when that is known then I will be in a better position to comment intelligently on it."

NEW YORK TIMES

July 21, 1940

CAN OBEY WAGE ACT BY UNION OVERTIME

Employers Need Not Pay Men Twice for Extra Hours, Says Administrator Fleming

CREDIT GIVEN SHOP TERMS

Only Question Is Whether the Premium Puts Week's Pay at Minimum Under Law

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, July 21—All employers who pay overtime under union agreements in force may consider such compensation as paid also to meet the requirements of the Wage Hour Act, Colonel Philip B. Fleming, Wage Hour Administrator, ruled today.

New paragraphs clarifying the relationship of employment agreements to provisions of the Wage Hour Act have been issued to supplement Wage-Hour Interpretative Bulletin No. 4, which describes the minimum wage and maximum hours coverage of Section 7 of the act.

"Some employers," said Colonel Fleming, "have felt that when they pay overtime compensation in accordance with a union agreement they may not take credit for doing so, but, they believe, if they are to meet the requirements of the act, they must pay an amount in addition to the amounts paid under the agreement. The additional amount, they understand, must equal time-and-a-half the employe's regular rate of pay for the number of hours worked in excess of forty-two.

"This is definitely not the case. An employer may properly consider as overtime compensation paid by him for the purpose of satisfying the requirements of the act, any extra compensation he may have paid for overtime work under a union agreement or other agreement.

Need Not Pay Overtime on Overtime

"The act does not require the employer to pay overtime on overtime. Thus, for example, if a union agreement calls for a forty-two-hour week and overtime at time and a half the regular rate for all hours over the forty-two, and an employer complies with this agreement, he is automatically obeying the law.

"However, after Oct. 24 this year, on which date maximum hours allowable will be reduced to forty, if an employer then continues to pay in accordance only with the union agreement, he will not be obeying the law, and his compliance with the union agreement even to the letter will not be an acceptable excuse for violation of the statute.

"At present, if a union agreement calls for a forty-hour week and time and a third after that, and an employe earning a dollar an hour works forty-four hours and is paid $45.32, that is considered compliance, since the employer may always credit himself under the act with amounts paid by him as actual overtime compensation. The act's current requirement here would be but $45. Of course that does not excuse the employer from paying $45.32, which he is required to pay by the union agreement.

"Some misunderstandings," Colonel Fleming continued, "have also arisen in interpreting the act as it operates in connection with a union agreement requiring time and a half for all hours worked in excess of eight hours a day, the normal or regular work day. Here again, it is entirely unnecessary for an employer to pay overtime on overtime—time and a half on time and a half, so to speak.

Single Work Week Is Basis

"The official yardstick for calculation of compensation under the Fair Labor Standards Act is the single work week. Supposing that in one work week an employe puts in ten hours each on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, and on Friday he works eight hours and on Saturday not at all.

"The total thus is forty-eight hours of work, six hours over the present maximum. However, since the union agreement calls for daily overtime compensation at time and a half for all hours over eight, payment for those first four days is $1 each day—$8 for the first eight hours, and $1.50 each for the two overtime hours. The total pay for the week under the agreement totals , the payment of which will isfy the requirements of the act.

"A similar case is presented ere a union agreement necessi- s the payment of time and a for all hours worked on a day or holiday, and where in a work week an employe earn- $1 hourly works eight hours day except Sunday to a total y-eight hours. Tuesday, we'll s a holiday.

Under the union agreement the ployer is entitled to $12 for Tues- y's work. His pay for the week, hen, will total $52 for the forty-eight hours. Some have contended that to be in accord with the act additional payment must be made for the six overtime hours, since Tuesday was a holiday and should be considered separately.

"The Wage and Hour Division, however, considers that any work on a holiday is generally classed as

TUESDAY, JUNE 11, 1940

WAYMEN WIN BIG BACK WAGE AWARD FOR SECTION MEN

Atlantic Coast Line Ordered By Court to Compensate Defrauded Employes

SAFEGUARDS FOR FUTURE

Deductions for Fake Services Banned; Charges Permissible Outlined in Decree

Over 3,000 section hands on the Atlantic Coast Line will soon get a huge back pay "melon" as a result of a long fight waged in their behalf by the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes.

The carrier was ordered by Federal Judge Robert N. Pollard at Richmond, Va., to repay to the employes all earnings chiseled from them in violation of the Wage-Hour Act. The road signed a consent decree agreeing to make the refunds.

Colonel Philip B. Fleming, Wage-Hour administrator, estimated that the repayments would go above $260,000, but Brotherhood officials declared the total is more likely to run as high as $500,000.

Fleming to Check Figures

Exact figures will not be available for several months, since the road was given up to 120 days to compute the sums due each worker. These amounts will be checked for accuracy by Fleming's staff before they are paid out.

President Fred H. Fljozdal of the Waymen hailed the court decision as a great victory for his organization.

"We have been vindicated in our long struggle to get justice for the underpaid men on the Coast Line," he said. "We are happy that the management finally saw the light and agreed to abide by the law. From now on, there is no reason why our union and the management cannot get along in complete harmony."

Nation's Biggest Violator

The Coast Line was branded by the Wage-Hour Administration as the nation's biggest violator of the act. It was charged with making a long list of illegal deductions from the trackmen's pay envelopes to get around the 25-cent-an-hour minimum fixed by the act, beginning October 24, 1938, and 30 cents after October 24, 1939. The road's pay scale had been 20 cents an hour.

The carrier was accused of arbitrarily assessing each maintenance of way employe rent for shacks which either didn't exist, or were unfit for habitation, for water pumps that didn't pump, and for sanitary facilities where there were none.

Imaginary "Services"

It also plastered levies on the workers for imaginary "police protection" against hoodlums; for medical services that weren't provided, for "transportation" that it had always given free, and for many other fake "facilities."

Last year the Wage-Hour Administration started its prosecution of the road, but the carrier resisted the government's action in the courts. Then employes launched civil suits of their own, with the backing of the Brotherhood and under the direction of Vice President T. C. Carroll.

The Brotherhood won smashing triumphs in each of these cases. Federal judges in North Carolina and Georgia denounced the deductions as "subterfuges" and ordered the Coast Line to pay double the wages withheld from employes who brought the suits.

Ran Up White Flag

Carroll had powers of attorney in his pocket from most of the trackmen to bring a flock of additional court actions, but the management finally decided to run up the white flag and submit to the law.

This was done in the consent decree entered in Judge Pollard's court. The carrier is permitted to charge rent for company houses alongside tracks, but these must be liveable and have sanitary facilities. The rents may not go higher than $2 a month for a one-room place to $8 for six rooms. Furthermore, the employes may reject the houses if they want to.

Nearly all other former deductions made by the road, however, are outlawed under the decree.

, the payment of which will isfy the requirements of the act.
A similar case is presented ere a union agreement necessies the payment of time and a for all hours worked on a day or holiday, and where in a work week an employe earn-$1 hourly works eight hours day except Sunday to a total y-eight hours. Tuesday, we'll s a holiday.

Under the union agreement the ployе is entitled to $12 for Tues-y's work. His pay for the week, hen, will total $52 for the forty-eight hours. Some have contended that to be in accord with the act additional payment must be made for the six overtime hours, since Tuesday was a holiday and should be considered separately.

"The Wage and Hour Division, however, considers that any work on a holiday is generally classed as overtime work. And here again, because payment for the eight-hour holiday on Tuesday exceeds payment required for the six hours in excess of forty-two, the standard number fixed in the act, payment in accordance with the union agreement satisfies the requirements of the act."

Boyd Overton New Head of YMCA Institute

Campbell Johnson Resigns After 15 Years' Service

BORDENTOWN, N.J.—Accepting the resignation of Major Campbell C. Johnson "with regret," the Chesapeake Summer School Association, which each year conducts the YMCA Secretaries' Study Institute at the Bordentown School, elected Boyd W. Overton, Saturday, to fill the post of president.

Major Johnson, who has headed the organization for the past fifteen years, cited the pressure of his duties in the defense setup (he is executive assistant to the director of selective service) as necessitating his withdrawal from an active office.

The new president, who is executive secretary of the Walnut Street Christian Association, Wilmington, Del., formerly served as vice president and director.

Advisors Named

For the first time, the association appointed a board of national advisors, as follows:

Dr. Channing Tobias, senior secretary of the YMCA national council; R. B. DeFrance, national personnel secretary; Ralph W. Bullock, national program and research secretary; A. W. Hardy, national army and navy secretary.

The forty-three secretaries and fifteen guests who attended the institute this year came from all parts of the country, Joshua Rose topping the rest for distance by traveling from Oakland, Calif., to be present for the six-day meeting.

Other Officers

Other new officers are:

Wilbur C. Woodson, Detroit, who succeeded Overton; Jesse M. Childs, Cincinnati, southern district vice president; C. Arnold of Washington, and Lloyd A. Lee of Roanoke, Va., to executive committee, and B. M. Craig of Birmingham, Ala., southern corresponding secretary.

Of[illegible] were:

Hil[illegible] of Trenton, secretary; [illegible] Weatherless, registrar-treas[illegible] George W. Hancock, assistant secretary; district vice presidents: H. H. Cain, eastern; E. E. Farley, southern;

Executive committee: Henry K. Craft, Herbert T. Miller and John Redmond; corresponding secretaries: Kenneth A. Morris, eastern, and Miss Henrine Ward, western.

YMCA Secretaries and Laymen Discuss Defense Problems at Bordentown, N.J.

NO. 1—
Shirt sleeves prevailed among the Y secretaries at the panel discussion during the YMCA Laymen's Institute in Bordentown Saturday afternoon. Above is part of the crowd attending the session.

NO. 2—
A capacity crowd (right) sat through a sweltering afternoon to hear the panel discussion on "The Negro and National Defense" by the group shown above, who are, top to bottom:

Major Campbell C. Johnson, assistant to the selective service director; A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; Miss Frances Williams, technician in the Office of Price Administraton; former Judge William Hastie, civilian aide to the Secretary of War;

Ira DeA. Reid, chairman of the discussion and consultant in the Bureau of Employment Security; Warren Banner, Urban League research director; Clarence A. Mitchell, field representative of OPM; NAACP's Walter White, Hubert Delany.

Next to Mr. Delany of the USO is Dr. Charles Wesley of Howard University (back of head) and at the extreme top is executive secretary Channing H. Tobias. The last two named did not participate on the panel.

With an hour to kill before the next session of the YMCA Laymen's Institute at Bordentown, Miss Yvonne Morris of St. Louis decided to utilize the time by catching up on the world news. Her father, O. O. Morris, is the secretary of the St. Louis Y.

Heated discussions plus humid weather prevailed throughout the Saturday afternoon meeting of the Laymen's Institute. Herbert T. Miller, executive secretary of Philadelphia Y, is shown above.

The Pittsburgh Courier July 19, 1941

Need For Mass Pressure Stressed At YMCA Confab

Bordentown Conference Shows Need for Lobby and Organized Opinion to Get Benefits of Defense Program.

By EDGAR T. ROUZEAU
(Staff Correspondent)

BORDENTOWN, N.J., July 17—Only pressure from the masses, directed intelligently against the government, will put into the pockets of Negro workers their share of "tax funds" which are now being distributed by the government in the form of defense billions.

Such was the finding Saturday afternoon of the National YMCA Laymen's Conference, in sessions at the Bordentown State Industrial School, after listening to arguments of Walter White, of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and A. Philip Randolph, of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, on the proven success of the technique of lobby groups and organized opinion in securing attention and favorable action from the government.

DEFENDS MARCH

In a brilliant defense of his "March to Washington" movement Randolph maintained that history shows "the government will not do things for individuals voluntarily, but always bends in the direction of the force with the strongets challenge. "This challenge," he said, "must come from the communities which go to make up government, and the march to Washington was intended as an examination of the behavior of government, as the focal point of community pressure."

White urged a "relentless, consistent and intelligent" fight against discrimination forces. He advised the use of lobby methods, utilization of the courts, a moulding of public opinion and the expose of discrimination in such channels of public information as the radio and the press.

White and Randolph were speakers on a panel discussing the question of "The Negro In National Defense." Additional speakers included Judge William H. Hastie, civilian aid to the Secretary of War; Major Campbell C. Johnson, executive assistant to the Director of Selective Service; Miss Frances Williams, technical consultant to the Administrator of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply.

Also Ira deA. Reid, consultant for minority groups with the Federal Social Security Board; Warren Banner, director of research of the National Urban League; Clarence Mitchell, of the Office of Production Management, and Hubert T. Delany, of the board of directors of United Service Organizations.

In a further elaboration of his contention Mr. White said that segregation was costly to the Negro in the long run, in spite of any immediate gains which might be derived through segregated facilities, he opined that the successful application filed with the War Department by Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, for a military aviation training center for Tuskegee, "would limit aviation training to about 33 students and also prove an obstacle in the current fight to open all aviation centers to Negro trainees."

URGE ALLIANCES

This line of reasoning was ably abetted by Commissioner Delany and Judge Hastie, the latter contending that " we should let the other fellow find the solution to the pattern of segregation over our objection, and not just accept it voluntarily."

In respect to President Roosevelt's recent executive order, banning discrimination in the various defense industries and training centers, it was the consensus of the panel that Negro civic agencies everywhere should play their part by (1) policing the entire defense setup, (2) securing affidavits in cases of discrimination, (3) sending the information to the President's Committee on Fair Practice (as yet unappointed), and (4) to press this committee for action.

In the open question period which followed the panel discussion, Walter P. Offutt, a teacher of Louisville, Ky., made the observation that the panel, in recording its opposition to segregation, "was overlooking the social setups in southern communities".

TOBIAS SPEAKS

This was followed by an address by Dr. Channing H. Tobias, who although not mentioning Dr. Patterson by name, rose to the defense of Tuskegee's president when he urged his listeners not to forget that "If it were not for segregated institutions the Negro would be nowhere today." He opined further that the battle of the Negro must be waged on two fronts—"to hold on to what we have and to make accessible to Negroes the doors of all institutions."

Distinguished visitors present included Dr. Leslie Pinckney Hill, principal of Cheyney State Industrial School; Noble Sissle, of the Army and Navy Division of United Service Organizations, and Col. Howard C. Gilbert, commander of the 372d Infantry, stationed at Fort Dix.

Also making the journey with Col. Howard were Lt. Col. Alexander R. Davis, Major Herbert R. Barrow, Capt. Sylvester Blackwell, Capt. George J. Cole, Capt. DeRuyter Butler, Capt. Charles R. Winthrop, Lt. James A. Mayo, Lt. James R. Hillard, Lt. John F. Burrell, Lt. Vernon F. Green, Lt. Jas. P. Hayes, and Lt. St. Elmo P. Henderson.

Dr. W. R. Valentine, principal of Bordentown State Industrial school, is president of the "Y's" laymen's conference.

The Fort Worth Mind July 19, 1941

NEGRO MARCH ON WASHINGTON COM. MAPS OUT NEXT STEP

At the meeting of the National Negro March-on-Washington Committee at the YMCA, 135th street, New York City, following the decision that the march on Washington was unnecessary at this time, a program was mapped out. It consisted of several definite forms of action:

1. Maintenance of existing local March-on-Washington Committees.
2. The collection of facts and specific causes of violations of the Executive Order to present to the Comimttee on Fair Employment Practice of the Office of Production Management by the local committees.
3. The expansion of local committees by increasing their membership in order that their pressure-power may be developed.
4. A collection of information from local Boards of Education, National Youth Administration and the U. S. Office of Education regarding job-training courses in order to make this information available to unemployed Negroes.
5. To encourage and urge Negroes to apply for jobs in all industries that have defense contracts and to urge and encourage out-of-school youth and unemployed adults to prepare for jobs by seeking and taking up training courses for defense work.

Plans are afoot to set up new local March-on-Washington committees in various cities throughout the country from coast to coast, observed A. Philip Randolph, national director. From reports that have been received by the national office of the Negro March-on-Washington Committee, the overwhelming sentiment throughout the nation is definitely in favor of the decision of the committee that the march on Washington is unnecessary at this time. Communications from fraternal lodges, churches, schools, civic and social organizations, professional, youth and women's clubs all applaud the Negro march-on-Washington movement as the greatest manifestation of Negro mass pressure ever developed in the history of the Negro in America. The consensus of opinion expressed by all strata of the Negro population throughout the country is that the issuance of the Executive Order by the President was the most noteworthy and fundamental victory ever achieved by the Negro people as a result of their mass effort in our country. But the National Negro March-on-Washington Committee is not content with its triumph. It has as its next objective the struggle for the abolition of discriminations in all departments of the Federal Government as well as the policing of the Executive Order, concludes Mr. Randolph.

(See NEGRO, Page 8)

NEGRO—

(Continued From Page 1)

The New York Amsterdam Star-News
July 19, 1941

THE NEW YORK AMSTERDAM STAR-NEWS

Randolph's Speech Explains Why He Called Off March

Editor's Note: Because of the numerous requests that have come to us for information regarding A. Philip Randolph's position in calling off the march to Washington three weeks ago, we are hereunder printing the radio speech he delivered over a coast-to-coast network Saturday, June 28. In it Mr. Randolph makes a forthright statement of facts, and explains his attitude as well as that of the National March-to-Washington Committee.

THE march of 100,000 Negroes on Washington for jobs in national defense which was scheduled for July 1st is off. The march is unnecessary at this time. This decision was reached by the National Committee for the mobilization of Negroes to march on Washington.

The reason for this decision is the issuance of an executive order by President Roosevelt banning discriminations in defense industries on account of race, creed, color or national origin, the attainment of which was the main and vital aim of the march-on-Washington movement. This is the first executive order which has been issued by a President of the United States in behalf of Negroes since the immortal Abraham Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation in 1863.

Some of my listeners may be asking the question: Why the proposed march of 100,000 Negroes on Washington? The answer to this question is that Negroes were being turned down whenever they applied for jobs, regardless of qualifications, in defense industries all over the country. Conferences have been held with various representatives of the Government, but to no avail.

Negroes Now Confused

Meanwhile, a wave of bitter resentment, disillusionment and desperation was sweeping over the Negro masses throughout the country. It was apparent that in order to avoid blind, reckless and undisciplined outbursts of emotional indignation against discriminations upon defense jobs, that some unusual, bold and gigantic effort must be made to awaken the American people and the President of the Nation to the realization that the Negroes were the victims of sharp and unbearable oppression, and that the fires of resentment were flaming higher and higher. In order that this threatening condition might be met with resolute, sober, sane and constructive action, a few Negro leaders came together at the call of the speaker and set up a national committee to mobilize 100,000 Negroes to march on Washington. The proposal met with prompt and [illegible] response throughout the [illegible] The favorable reaction of the Negro masses to this plan to march on Washington for jobs was due to a sense of frustration, futility and defeatism which had come over them as they watched their own communities assume the character of dead economic areas because of the lack of jobs and purchasing power, while in the white communities, the economic life of the people was throbbing, expanding and moving with promise and hope.

White Get Good Jobs

It was natural and inevitable that such a violent and disturbing contrast between the Negro and white communities was due to one thing, namely, that the white section of the population was enjoying participation and integration in national defense employment opportunities, whereas the Negro section of the population was being denied employment opportunities, and yet, both black and white peoples of America are equally taxed for the development and maintenance of our great defense program.

But when this grave situation was brought to the attention of the President, he definitely expressed his deep concern about it and his desire to see discriminations on account of race, color, creed and national origin abolished. He therefore issued a statement to the country and to the Office of Production Management, calling for the recognition of the right of workers to employment in national defense industries without regard to race, creed, color or national origin. The Negro March-on-Washington Committee viewed this statement with admiration. We considered it commendable, but not enough. We therefore called upon the President to issue an executive order that had teeth in it, which would give the Negro people some concrete assurance that they would no longer be given the run-around when they sought jobs in the great defense industries of the Nation.

Negroes Need Opportunities

I know that this order is certain to stir the hopes and aspirations of Negroes throughout the Nation, who only seek opportunities to work according to their qualifications. Tersely put, Negroes seek opportunity and not alms. It is the hope of the Negro March-on-Washington committee that this executive order will represent thousands of jobs and hundreds of millions of dollars in increased wages in Negro communities, which will reflect themselves in higher standards of living, more eduction and recreation for the children, a greater security and assurance of more abundant life.

Act Meets Vital Need

This act of the President does not meet the vital and serious issue of discrimination against persons on a basis of race, color, creed and national origin in various departments of the Federal Government itself. It is the firm and reasoned judgment of the Negro March-on-Washington Committee that the inexcusable practice of discrimination against persons because of race, color, creed and national origin, by the Government itself serves as a cue to and pattern for private employers to commit un-American and un-democratic offenses of discrimination also.

The President has declared in this executive order that it is the policy of the Government not to countenance discrimination on account of race, color, creed or national origin in Government service. Therefore the Negro March-on-Washington Committtee wishes to express the hope that the President may find it possible, in the interest of National Uuity and National Defense, at an early date, to issue a second executive order, complementing and supplementing this one, that will strike down for all times discrimination due to race, color, creed or national origin in all departments of the Federal Government, and which will give reality and force to our profession concerning democracy, and to the great and all-out struggle our country is making to crush and destroy all subversive forces seeking to wreck our democratic way of life.

I now wish to announce and advise the Negro March-on-Washington Committees throughout the country that the march on Washington July 1 is unnecessary and will not take place.

I wish also to advise and urge that the committees remain intact and watch and check the industries in their communities to determine the extent to which th[illegible] are observing the executive o[illegible] of the President.

The BIG PARADE

By RALPH MATTHEWS

The Fruits of Victory

From handbills being scattered around the capital, another job march is in the making. This time it does not seem to be a nation-wide protest as recently concocted and abandoned by A. Philip Randolph and his followers.

This new protest seems to have a strictly local flavor, and seems to be Dr. Randolph's idea lock, stock and barrel, with perhaps none of his astuteness to make it stick.

Mr. Randolph is undoubtedly the race's best poker player when it comes to bluffing his way into a piece of the pot while holding poor hands.

He mastered this technique in the early days of the Brotherhood of Pullman Car Porters when he won a number of concessions by threatening strikes which he had no intention of calling and couldn't have called if he wanted to, because the porters themselves were skeptical of his chances of success.

His march on the capital fell almost in the same category. The march idea was a good one and it scared the pants off of the big shots of the administration to the point that Mr. Roosevelt went through all the motions of correcting the evils of which Mr. Randolph complained—discrimination in defense.

The Worst Expected

There have been a few hired as a result, but there is little real evidence that any of the big industrialists have any honest intention of complying with the President's executive order to employ all, regardless of race, creed or color.

Encouraged by the success of the job march threat, the worst that was anticipated is beginning to materialize already.

Certain irresponsible and misguided leaders are willing to brew up a march on the drop of a hat. We are soon going to find ourselves in the position of the lad who yelled "wolf! wolf!" too often, and somebody is going to say "Come on, march and be damned."

I have often expressed here little faith in the ability or desire of some folk to do much parading for serious purposes. Anything short of an Elks' parade, which gets you nowhere fast, has little appeal to many people, even in times of great stress.

So far the No. 1 job march, which ended in a negotiated peace, seems to have ended in a tremendous victory for the people with whom we were mad.

Heading the list of the five-man committee to insure fair play and no discrimination appears that great and noble labor leader, William L. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

No. 1 Enemy

I know you had to read that name twice as I did, because if the colored worker has an out-and-out enemy in high place, Bill Green and his rotten A.F. of L. constitute it.

Naming him to a committee to safeguard our interests is like hiring the fox to guard the chickens.

The history of the A.F. of L. is replete with anti-race activity, exclusions, doublecrosses and outright thievery of jobs which has done more to keep us out of a livelihood than all of the capitalists put together.

The Southern railroad situation is a blatant example of the ruthlessness of the working man's hatred of his brother of color.

Every contemptible trick and subterfuge has been used to force colored workers further and further down the scale, squeezing them out of jobs which they held with honor for years by the contemptible technique of designating a certain union to do certain jobs and denying colored workers memberships under these new designations.

How Trick Worked

For instance, if the colored union local of railroad window washers held contracts to keep the coaches clean, the whites with the connivance of Green and his gang would get the contract awarded to the local known as the railroad car cleaners, an all-white union, throwing hundreds of colored out of work simply by changing a name.

If the colored folk squawked they were accused of anti-union activity and stood a chance of being blackballed out of all organized labor which was just what the big shots wanted. In short, they not only robbed them, but made it unlawful to call the police.

This is the background of one of the men who has been picked to see that we get a square deal. It would be funny were it not so tragic.

The CIO, of which Philip Murray is the head (he is also a member of the committee) has a little better record, and I am not ready to report on the calibre of the distinguished gentlemen of color who are to be our sentries.

Offhand, I would say, the whole committee would bear close scrutiny for a while before the would-be marchers pack their easy walking shoes down in moth balls.

It looks as if it is going to take a lot of marching up the hill and down again before this fight for jobs is finally won.

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

By JAMES H. HOGANS

BYGONE MELODY

Reminiscences of days when Pullman was music conscious and every Pullman district had a porters' band, orchestra or quartet, was [illegible] last week at Mott Haven.

The relater was Porter Foster Mitchell of the Chicago Central District, one of the members of the once-famous singing foursome of that city.

It was on Monday, and Mr. Mitchell, one of the two remaining porters of the quartet, was on his way to Chicago.

Inquiry disclosed that his musical outfit, like the other melodious aggregations which Pullman once sponsored, had gone with the wind, but it had left behind pleasant memories, he said.

Some of those reminscences were of the time when his quartet toured Cuba with the first Pullman exposition train; some of the special-party trips they had made with industrial executives, and others of concerts they had held in different cities.

"Our quartet was one of the best in the service," Mitchell recalled, "and [illegible] consisted of H. E. Grice, baritone; [illegible] Russell, bass; A. [illegible] tenor, and myself, second tenor. Only two of us are now [illegible]

"In addition to our car trips, we entertained p[illegible] at the homes of such p[illegible] as the Potter Palmers, the [illegible]ours, the McCormicks and other noted families of Chicago.

"Our greatest hit, however, was when we sang before one of the largest audiences of harmony lovers that ever attended a concert at the Chicago Grand Theatre.

"Those were [illegible] days for us, and I think the company made a mistake when it withdrew support from those musical activities, for there was a certain advertising value to them."

WAGE PARLEY BEGINS NEXT WEEK

Managements and Unions to Confer in Chicago on Rise to Meet Cost of Living

STRIKE MOVE DISCOUNTED

Threat of Cessation of Work Called Routine Procedure Under Labor Law

By L. R. N. GNAEDINGER

Negotiations in the most important labor controversy to come to a head since declaration of the unlimited national emergency are to start in Chicago at the beginning of next week with a conference between the railroad managements and unions on demands for an estimated increase of $600,000,000 in wages annually.

A railroad strike at this time would cripple all industry, whether producing goods for the uses of peace or war. For this reason the coming negotiations will be important. Some commentators have suggested that the unions presented their demands in the knowledge that the government would not run the risk of a railway strike at this time, although the official reason given was that the workers feared their wages would not keep pace with the rising cost of living.

There has been no railway strike of any consequence in more than a decade, although many threats that one might be called have been issued. The explanation of this is the machinery for adjudicating railway labor disputes provided by law, but the managements would amend this statement by pointing out that any system which almost invariably gives the workers what they ask—as has the railway labor law since it was enacted—would be conducive to peace.

Desires of Managements

The managements for years have desired changes in the law, but in view of the unlimited emergency it is doubtful that they will try to bring about changes at this time. Rather it would seem that they will yield some increases in wages to the workers. Should this occur it would be the second national increase in wages in the industry since 1929. The other increase put wages above the pre-depression level.

Two demands will be considered at the meeting in Chicago. The five train service unions, with a membership of 350,000 men, demand a 30 per cent increase in basic rates of payment, or sufficient to provide a minimum increase of $1.80 a day for switch tenders and locomotive hostlers, helpers, who now receive $5.06 and $5.51 daily respectively, the lowest for this group of organizations.

The fourteen "non-operating" unions, whose members number 800,000, want increases of 30 to 34 cents an hour, with a minimum wage of 70 cents an hour.

A third demand, for two-week vacations with pay, put forward in behalf of 750,000 workers, who are not in the train service unions, has been shelved for the time being. Preliminary conferences on this point were held by the managements and the workers, but the unions decided not to press it at this time. For one reason, the summer vacation season for this group would be some distance in the

NEW YORK TIMES

July 16, 1941

Kaiser vs. Fuehrer.

To the Editor of The Sun—Sir: That the present war is ideologically a genuine war for democracy is a fact that the American public has been a little slow to appreciate. Undoubtedly this attitude has been due in a large part to the fact that the last war against Germany was sold to us on the basis that it, too, was a war for democracy, and the statement then was not true.

The Germany of the Kaiser did not suppress the rights of free speech, free press and free assemblage. Hitler's Germany does just that, to such an extent that criticism of the Fuehrer is equivalent to treason. The Kaiser never asserted that Germany had a right to dominate the whole world, or that Germans were a master race and all other races were slave races. Hitler has said exactly that in his book "Mein Kampf" and on other occasions; and he practices that philosophy with all its brutal implications in most of the countries that he has been able to conquer.

We cannot win a genuine victory over Hitlerism on behalf of democracy if the fight is conducted by those who believe only half-heartedly in what they are supposed to fight for. That was one of the reasons for the collapse of France. France failed because the working class was infected with communist contempt for democracy and the owning class with Fascist contempt for democracy.

An "all-out" fight for democracy on our part requires not merely effective aid to Britain in the battle of the Atlantic and stopping the flow of essential war material from America to Japan. It requires equally that we must maintain fully the rights of free speech, free press and free assemblage and full rights to criticise the government and government officials, as Britain has so well done.

FRANK R. CROSSWAITH,
Chairman, Negro Labor Committee.

New York, June 10.

N.Y. Sun 6/16/41

J. W. Smith, vice president and general manager of the Boston & Maine Railroad and general manager of the Maine Central Railroad, will represent the Eastern railroads in the management committee at the Chicago conference. George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, heads the Railway Labor Executives Association, through which negotiations of this kind are carried on in behalf of labor.

What the temper of labor in the situation may be is indicated by statements of its spokesmen. In assailing peacetime conscription last August the Railway Labor Executives Association said:

"All information is replete with repetition that big industry again not only is endeavoring to repeat the World War exaction of exorbitant profits, but to outdistance that practice * *  Every evidence points in the same direction as during the last war, concerning which one of the largest industrialists declared that his obligation was to his trustees in preference to his government."

More recently David B. Robin-

Continued on Page Three

AFRO-AMERICAN

July 26, 1941

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

By JAMES E. HOGANS

THE DINING CAR

Looking back on my outstanding experiences on railroad and Pullman cars recently, I came across one of Johnnie Jones, and it reminded me that I hadn't seen him for some time. A visit on Monday to his home, 844 Morris Avenue, New York, which is directly opposite the New York Central's Melrose Building, where he works, was productive of some interesting information concerning the dean of that road's dining car service.

Johnnie Jones

I learned, for instance, something about his present position that is not generally known; his experiences in dining car service after forty-four years, and the rather surprising news that he will be 70 this coming October, and most probably will retire then.

A Remarkable Character

Despite his years, the veteran looks remarkably well, and carries his age lightly; but there isn't anything unusual about that, for Mr. Jones is a remarkable character in several ways.

Entering the New York Central's dining car service by way of the old Wagner Company, in 1897, he was the first colored man to be appointed dining car steward on an American railroad, and the first to be placed in charge of an American railroad commissary as storekeeper, the position he now holds.

Beginning as a waiter, the first recognition that he earned from his employer was in 1900, when he was placed as waiter-in-charge of the buffet and restaurant car of the Saratoga Limited, a summer train then between New York and the famous spa.

At the end of the fourth season on that train, he was called into the office of the general superintendent of the dining car department, who was John R. Smart, and notified that the railroad was so pleased with his services that it had decided to make him a steward.

"I have [illegible] on your h[illegible] Saratoga, r[illegible] official, and I fe[illegible] capable o[illegible] car."

Totally aghast, he [illegible]ered, "You don't mean a regular diner, Mr. Smart?"

Put on Crack Train

"Yes, that is just what I mean," replied the superintendent.

Beginning on the slower trains, he was soon running in charge of the dining car on the Twentieth Century Limited, where he remained until 1934, when he was given the position of storekeeper at Mott Haven Yards.

Contrary to reports circulated at the time, he explained Monday, the change was at his own request, his health not having been as robust as it had been.

"I was offered the choice of several positions, each of higher status than the one I now hold, but were out of New York, and I didn't care to break up my home here," he said.

Favors New Policy

Quizzed about the policy of the railroad in recent years of placing colored men as waiters in charge of restaurant cars, he opined that he thought it was beneficial to both employer and employees, and, from his observation, the latter were making good, he said.

On the subject of trade unionism, however, and what he thought of it as a means of industrial relations for dining car workers, he asserted that it was a question which he didn't care to discuss.

Markedly affable and courteous, Mr. Jones is a native of Richmond, Va., where the beginning of his mental training was received. One can easily surmise, however, that his most useful training has been in the school of every-day experience and common sense.

A tragedy in his life occurred about nine years ago when his wife, the former Miss Mary Lawrence of Albany, N.Y., to whom he was devotedly attached, died suddenly of a heart attack.

His home, which he owns and which is the best kept, from outward appearance, in the block, is capably major-domoed, however, by his sister-in-law, Mrs. William Watson, whose husband is also an employee of the New York Central's dining car service.

PITTSBURGH COURIER

July 26, 1941

Railroadmen

BY HORACE R. CAYTON

BESIEGED BY TWO RIVAL UNIONS—RANDOLPH, TOWNSEND SHOULD AGREE

IN a recent discussion of the problems of the Negro railroad worker with George McCray, labor columnist for the Associated Negro Press, the following facts were brought out: There are two rival union groups who are attempting to deal with the problems of the Negro in that industry—the Transport Service Workers' union and the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

McCray felt that the TSWU, led by Willard S. Townsend, [illegible] much greater freedom [illegible] dealing with this situation [illegible] does the Brotherhood, led by Phillip A. Randolph. The situation is that the Negro railroad worker, in most bargaining units, is a minority group which is not allowed to participate in collective bargaining through the recognized unions. These workers are, however, under the jurisdiction of the various international unions, which jurisdiction Randolph, as a member of the AFL, would not be allowed to encroach. Townsend, on the other hand, represents an independent group who could solicite members from any unorganized group of Negro workers. The purpose of either organization would be to pool the strength of the Negroes in the various occupational groups in the railroad industry to give the present, voiceless Negro railroad worker some mechanism through which to articulate his needs and demands.

Mr. Cayton

WAR MAY OFFER CHANCE

Personally I have a hunch that the railroads might be taken over and operated by the government if and when we go into a shooting war. Certainly anyone who has traveled lately can see that our transportation system is being strained to the utmost and there is talk of priorities in the shipment of freight.

If this should happen—if the railroads are taken over by the government—it will afford the Negro railroad workers an unexcelled opportunity to make a bid for justice. It is imperative then that there be developed at the earliest possible moment some overall vertical organization which would represent this group of Negroes. To illustrate just how pressing is the situation, I want to quote from a letter which I recently received from a Negro fireman in Florida. He writes:

On this particular railroad, we are one hundred per cent colored here and have been since 1912 when the white firemen came out on strike. We Negro firemen remained on the job. We were shot at, some were found dead and others were beaten. But we remained and are still here.

We had an engineer for our representative before the management. He was successful in getting us a memorandum of agreement in book form from the management for us, of which governs our working conditions and rates of pay. He died and we have his wife to represent us as he did before the management. The reason for selecting a woman for our representative, was due to the fact, that we could not have entrusted our jobs to another engineer for representation, because they are in favor of taking our jobs from us. Therefore, we decided it best to have a disinterested party for the job.

Recently the road went into receivership, and now two trustees are appointed by the reorganization that took place on this road recently. What really got us stirred up, along came one by the name of Willard S. Townsend, International President of the Transport Service Employees, telling us that our contract is no good. As I before stated, we were satisfied until this same about, [illegible] don't know what to do.

[illegible] just one of the plights in [illegible] numbers of Negro workers find themselves. In the meantime, Randolph and Townsend don't seem to be able to get together on a plan of organization to bind them into a federation to enable them to, to some extent, protect themselves. Randolph has called two national meetings but failed to produce a workable plan of action. Townsend, for his part, is so anxious to obtain leadership over these workers that he changed the name of his organization so that he could include them—the Red Caps alone cannot support the kind of union he wishes to run. Regardless, however, of all other factors these two men and their organizations should either get together to accomplish this necessary job or one or the other should withdraw and let the other do it.

RED CAPS WIN SECURITY FIGHT

Pitts C. — 7/26

WASHINGTON, July 24—The intensified and bitterly fought four-year-old struggle of the United Transport Service Employees of Ame[illegible] for the complete integration [illegible] the Red Cap into American tra[illegible]tation service came to a di[illegible] and highly successful close la[illegible]k when the Interstate C[illegible]ce Commission [illegible] public [illegible]on in the case [illegible] Stopher vs. Cincinnati Union Terminal Company.

[illegible]ued on Page [illegible], Col. 4)

RED CAPS WIN FIGHT

(Continued From Page 1)

Out of this case the Interstate Commerce Commission definitely established once and for all that Red Cap service in carrying hand-baggage is an integral part of railroad transportation service and that the whole system of "red capping" is placed under the protection of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The New York Age July 26, 1941

Not A Victory

Editor The New York Age:

This writer feels that a serious blunder was made when the projected "March on Washington" was cancelled. It was a tactical mistake. There were many good arguments pro and con but those which favored it far outweighed those against it. The time to strike is when the iron is hot.

It was unfortunate to say the least that a contab which took place of the march designated a "Victory Meeting" for the simple reason that a victory had not been achieved. The Presidential order was certainly a step in the right direction. It was perfectly proper to laud the President for his action and every American citizen ought to be grateful, but the word "victor" used in connection with the Washington contab was a misnomer. The leaders of the affair should have been more careful in their choice of a name for the assemblage.

This was pointed out by Mayor LaGuardia of New [illegible] who made an address. He s[illegible] it was a move toward that [illegible]inciple of equal opportunity [illegible]ot consider this a victor[illegible]ion," continued Mr. La[illegible] but I do rejoice that a wrong of long standing has been recognized. I am too practical to feel that because of the issuance of this order that there will be a great change overnight. But I am certain that the avenue has been opened and we have the vehicle with which to bring to the attention of the proper authorities any form of discrimination against any minority group within the defense industries. As I understand it, I do not believe that any group is entitled to any special privilege or consideration, and, likewise none should ever be discriminated against."

Walter White and A. Philip Randolph, in their speeches both said that the order was not a complete victory and that discrimination in the offices of the Federal Government would be the next point of attack, and that a militant sustained, organized public opinion is necessary to carry out the order.

The fight for absolute justice and equality must go on.

LLEWELYN E. LEWIS
Chicago, Ill.

Age 7/26/41

RACE GETS TWO ON NEW OPM B

24 PAGES 10¢ AND WORTH IT

THE Chicago Defender

WORLD'S GREATEST WEEKLY

COPYRIGHT 1941, BY ROBERT S. ABBOTT PUBLISHING CO.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION: 3

Vol. XXXVII, No. 14 THIS PAPER CONSISTS OF TWO PARTS — PART ONE CHICAGO, ILL., SATURDAY, JULY 26, 1941

ALD. DICKERSON AND WEBSTER NAMED BY FDR

Committee Is Established By President To Hear Labor Complaints

WASHINGTON. — Two members of the Race, Alderman Earl B. Dickerson and Milton P. Webster, labor leader, both of Chicago, were named by President Roosevelt Friday as members of the fair employment practice committee of the Office of Production Management.

Four other men named to the committee, all white, are Mark Ethridge, general manager of the Louisville Courier Journal and Times, chairman; David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation of America; Phillip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and William E. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Both Widely Known

Dickerson, a lawyer, in addition to being a member of the Chicago City council is a national director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which cooperated with the March on Washington committee organized by Randolph to express Race's resentment of its exclusion from defense jobs.

Webster, vice president of the Pullman porters brotherhood, is widely known in labor circles and is expected to represent Randolph on the committee.

The committee was established in an executive order issued by the President, June 26, after A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, had threatened to marshal 50,000 Negroes to march down Pennsylvania avenue in protest of distrimination in national defense employment.

The committee will receive and act upon complaints of discriminatory employment practices of defense contract holders and see that provisions of the President's order are carried out.

Extra Man On Committee

Although the order provided only for a membership of five on the committee, the President named six men to the body. Reason, if any, for his appointing an additional man was not explained.

Procedure for handling complaints arising from violation of the President's order, had been set up prior to the appointment of the committee.

Within three days after the issue of the order on June 25, instructions were forwarded to all regional offices of the United States Employment Service covering methods to

On OPM Board

MARK ETHRIDGE (Chairman)

EARL B. DICKERSON

MILTON P. WEBSTER

WILLIAM E. GREEN

OPM Board—

(Continued from Page 1)

be used to give effectiveness to the announced policy of the administration.

Confer On Procedure

In addition to these instructions it was learned an in-service training course for employes of the New York State Employment service, cooperating agency of the USES, will be instituted in a week or two designed to "adjust the thinking" of the workers and give "implementation" and meaning to the order to the end that its terms and intentions may be successfully carried out.

On Thursday, Dr. Warren Brown, secretary to the National March on Washington committee, conferred here for one hour on the subject of procedure with D. J. Hoose, in charge of in-service training within industry, OPM; and S. Parks Harman, officer in charge, bureau of employment security, FSA.

By virtue of his heading up the regional office for this bureau, Harman is also chairman of the labor supply bureau of the division of labor supply, OPM, for the same area. It is in the latter capacity that he will function as the representative of the fair practice committee.

The basic points covered in the discussions were boiled down to the following method:

How It Will Work

1. Any complaint of racial discrimination is to be reported to the local office of the state employment service. A field worker will be directed to ascertain the facts of the case from the sides of both applicant and employer.

2. In the event the employer is found at fault, he will be informed of the President's executive order and immediate adjustment will be sought.

3. Failure to reach a solution through these preliminary efforts will result in a referral of the case to the office of Harman for review and adjustment.

4. If satisfaction is not then obtained, the entire case is to be referred to Washington for the consideration of and adjudication by the five-man committee.

Harman, who confirmed the authoritativeness of the moves already made, explained it as the desire of his office and that of OPM, to get and settle the complaints as close to their sources as is possible and just as quickly.

The procedure outlined here was said to be the same as that which will be followed in the 48 states and three territories. In this way the necessity for establishing new machinery is expected to be obviated inasmuch as each state is similarly organized as New York in order to participate in the benefits of social security.

Difficulties Antisipated

"There will be a conscious effort," Harman stated, "to use all resources available to implement the national policy as stated in the President's executive order and dealing with the problems of labor supply in national defense industries. The more clearly we all see the problems involved and the reasons for the policy, the less our problems are going to be."

Difficulties are definitely anticipated both by government officials and representatives of the march on Washington. One difficulty identified is evpected to arise out of the activity of "pressure groups of younger white employes" who are seeking to keep out the Negro worker in spite of a probable willingness on the part of employers to hire them.

In the conversation of July 10, Dr. Brown was informed that industry prefers to employ "greenhorns" rather than graduates of trade schools. The reason is that firms engaged in the performance of intricate operations find it easier to acquaint the unmoulded worker from the start with the way they want a thing done than to have to undo what has been taught in the schools, which can only give a fundamental insight into plant operations.

Dr. Brown nevertheless emphasized the importance of Negroes continuing to register for vocational courses wherever it is possible.

The New York Amsterdam Star-News
July 26, 1941

Jersey Utility Hires Colored

Negro Girls Working As Typists After Executive Order

NEWARK, N. J.—The Western Electric Company, Kearney, ended a ban of many years, recently, when it accepted colored girls for employment as typists. This action was taken as the result of the Executive order recently issued by President Roosevelt, demanding the ending of race discrimination in defense employment.

A score of colored girls have been examined by the personnel manager of the large firm and a few are now working. To be accepted, they must pass an intelligence test and be able to type 45 words per minute.

Cooperating with the company in obtaining the best-qualified workers is the New Jersey Urban League, which has been giving preliminary tests for colored girls, forwarding to the company the names of those considered capable of meeting the requirements.

For the first time, colored persons are being hired at the United States arsenals at Picatinny and Metuchen, in large numbers, the men receiving upwards of 70 cents an hour.

Increased employment opportunities for Negroes in industry have also ended exploitation of workers by South Jersey farmers, who are now unable to obtain labor at any price.

W OPM BOARD

E
Defender
EST ☆☆☆ WEEKLY ☆☆

NATIONAL EDITION

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION: 3435 INDIANA AVE., TELEPHONE CALUMET 5656

RDAY, JULY 26, 1941

sey Utility res Colored

o Girls Working Typists After cutive Order

WARK, N. J.—The Western ic Company, Kearney, ended of many years, recently, it accepted colored girls for yment as typists. This ac- was taken as the result of the tive order recently issued by dent Roosevelt, demanding nding of race discrimination fense employment.

score of colored girls have examined by the personnel ager of the large firm and a are now working. To be ac- d, they must pass an intelli- e test and be able to type 45 s per minute.

operating with the company obtaining the best-qualified kers is the New Jersey Urban gue, which has been giving minary tests for colored girls, arding to the company the es of those considered capa- of meeting the requirements.

or the first time, colored per- are being hired at the United es arsenals at Picatinney and uchen, in large numbers, the receiving upwards of 70 cents hour.

ncreased employment opportu- es for Negroes in industry have ended exploitation of workers South Jersey farmers, who are unable to obtain labor at any e.

WILLIAM E. GREEN

DAVID SARNOFF

PHILLIP MURRAY

Roosevelt's Fair Practice Commission Holds 1st Meet; Maps Fight to end job Bias

By EDWARD W. BAKER
(Star-News Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON (Special).—President Roosevelt's Fair Practic Committee held its first executive session Wednesday at 2 o'clock and after setting up the organization and hearing from OPM Directors Sidney Hillman and William Knudsen, agreed to appoint a full time executive secretary to handle the affairs of the body, and to meet weekly every Monday noon in the Social Security building until further notice.

Later in the day the commissioners held a press conference. Mark Ethridge, who was named chairman of the committee by the President when he designated the group last Friday, presided at the meeting.

Director Hillman made an effort to clear the Office of Production Management for any discrimination against workers on account of race or color. Present at the meeting were the entire membership of six.

MARK ETHRIDGE, Chairman
General Manager, Louisville Courier- Journal

Commissioners

MILLON P. WEBSTER
Vice President, Pullman Porters

DAVID SARNOFF
President, RCA

Commissioners

EARL B. DICKERSON
Alderman, City of Chicago

PHILIP MURRAY
President, CIO

WILLIAM GREEN
President, AFL

The Chicago Defender July 26, 1941

By J. ROBERT SMITH

Following a cue, urged by the Amsterdam Star-News, last week, in an editorial captioned, "Give Us at Least Two," President Roosevelt appointed six men including two Negroes on the Fair Employment Practice Committee, Monday.

The appointees are Mark F. Ethridge, vice president of the Louisville Courier and Journal, chairman; Milton P. Webster, first

Continued on Page 11, Col. 4

March Committee Plans New Five-Point Program

NEW YORK—A five-point program to further the non-discrimination achievements already attained by the National Negro March-on-Washington committee was developed this week when the committee met at the 135th street Y.M.C.A. here. The program consists of definite forms of action.

1. Maintenance of existing local March-on-Washington committees; 2. The collection of facts and specific cases of violations of the Executive Order to present to the Committee on Fair Employment Practice of the Office of Production Management by the local committees; 3. The expansion of local committees by increasing their membership in order that pressure-power may be developed; 4. A collection of information from local boards of Education, National Youth Administration and the U. S. Office of Education regarding job-training courses in order to make this information available to unemployed Negroes; 5. To encourage and urge Negroes to apply for jobs in all industries that have defense contracts and to urge and encourage out-of-school youth and unemployed adults to prepare for jobs by seeking and taking up training courses for defense work.

Plans are afoot to set up new local March-on-Washington committees in various cities throughout the country from coast to coast, according to A. Philip Randolph, National Director. From reports that have been received by the national office of the Negro March-on-Washington Committee, the overwhelming sentiment throughout the Nation is definitely in favor of the decision of the Committee that the march on Washington is unnecessary at this time.

Communications from fraternal lodges, churches, schools, civic and social organizations, professional, youth and women's clubs all applaud the Negro march-on-Washington movement as the greatest manifestation of Negro mass pressure ever developed in the history of the Negro in America.

The consensus of opinion expressed by all strata of the Negro population throughout the country is that the issuance of the Executive Order by the President was the most noteworthy and fundamental victory ever achieved by the Negro people as a result of their mass effort in our country. The March-on-Washington Committee has set as its next objective the struggle for the abolition of discrimination in all departments of the Federal Government as well as the policing of the Executive Order.

Defender 7/26

THE N[illegible] YO[illegible]

Fair Practice[illegible] Group Confer[illegible]

First Meeting Held; Wi[illegible] Name Executive Head To Handle Affairs

Continued from Page 1

vice president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, Chicago; Earl B. Dickerson, attorney and alderman, Chicago; Philip Murray, president of the CIO; William Green, president of the A. F. of L., and David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, New York.

The naming of the committee has accomplished the second step in the campaign sponsored by the Negro March-on-Washington Committee, directed by A. Philip Randolph and fully supported by the Amsterdam Star-News in its news columns and editorials the first being the issuing of the executive order.

Learning that Sidney Hillman, co-director of the Office of Production Management, and one of the President's chief advisors in the matter was bent on having only one Negro on the committee, the Amsterdam Star-News took the position that since the matter affected the Negro people moreso than any other and since they initiated the fight, they should have at least two on the committee and voiced its stand in the following editorial:

Give Us At Least Two

"President Roosevelt's five-man commission to prevent discrimination in National Defense production ought to include at least two Negroes. We are surprised that there is any thought that fewer than two are to be named.

"When it became known that the President would name a commission to see that the provisions of his executive order aimed at prohibiting job bias are carried out, it was our candid opinion that a majority of the members would be Negroes. We still feel that way.

"While the order specifies that there shall be no discrimination on account of race, creed, color or national origin, yet everyone knows the action was necessary only because of the plight of the Negro.

"It is he who is being denied jobs on account of his race and color, and Mr. Roosevelt acted only after Negroes had threatened to march on Washington 100,000 strong in a dramatic protest against the injustices.

"When the President issued the order three weeks ago, we hastened to applaud his stand. We applauded because we believed he was sincere in his efforts to check discrimination and to make the way clear for Negroes to be integrated into our National Defense program.

"We don't want to see his efforts sabotaged by inaction and lack of interest. Few white men will be as eager to delve deeply into the problems as most Negroes. So, Mr. President, in order that your pronouncement will get the greatest possible result, we urgently insist that you name at least two Negroes on that commission."

The six-man committee which immediately went into action by holding its first meeting in the Office of Production Management, Wednesday, is to investigate complaints of discrimination against Negroes seeking work in defense industries and the Government.

The committee, which is serving without pay, will investigate complaints and take steps to redress grievances.

Local committees of the Negro March-on-Washington Committee in various cities all over the country, according to Mr. Randolph, will continue to police the recent executive [illegible] that mean-[illegible]

A close up of the members of the commission is shown below:

Milton P. Webster, first international vice president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and chairman of the international executive board who was named a member of the committee appointed by President Roosevelt to investigate complaints of discrimination against Negroes seeking work in defense industries and the Government. He has had the longest experience of any Negro in the labor movement in organizing Negro workers. He is also counsel for the Brotherhood in presentation of grievances and claims and one of the founders of the organization.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor and was formely secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers Union which has a membership of about 50,000 Negroes. He has made many forthright speeches on the right of the Negro to equality in the American labor movement and presented the international charter to the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters in Chicago in 1936. He has always supported Anti-Lynching legislation, the abolition of the Poll Tax and condemned the Daughters of the American Revolution for refusing Marion Anderson the right to sing in Constitution Hall.

Philip Murray, president of the Committee for Industrial Organization, who is also vice president of the United Mine Workers of America. He has more than 150,000 Negroes in the CIO and has taken the position of equal participation for Negroes in the labor movement with all other workers regardless of race or creed.

Earl B. Dickerson, who was formerly assistant attorney general for the State of Illinois, is now alderman of the second ward in Chicago. Mr. Dickerson is well-known in national Democratic with the masses of Negro people not only in Chicago but all over the United States.

Mark F. Ethridge, vice presi-

THE PITTSBURGH COURIER

July 31, 1941

The Pittsburgh Courier

FDR SHOULD END GOVERNMENT DISCRIMINATION

Federal Departments Worst Offenders - - - Untouched By Order

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

[illegible] during the past two or three weeks, has carried [illegible] after column of [illegible] dozens and dozens of articles writ[illegible] columnists, and doz[illegible] by their [illegible], each seeking to evaluate the effectiveness of President Roosevelt's executive order No. 8802.

There is manifest confusion. The Nat[illegible] Association of Manufactur[illegible] powerful organization of industr[illegible] entered the lists last wee[illegible] statem[illegible] presented before the Committee on Migration of Labor, U. S. Hou[illegible] of Representatives.

PRESIDENT'S ORDER EXPLORED AND DISSECTED

Searchingly, it re[illegible], explores and dissects Executive Order No. 8802, issued by President Roosevelt on June 25, 1941, "to encourage full participation in the National Defense program by all citizens, regardless of race, creed, color or national origin," and calling upon employers and labor organizations to act accordingly.

Attention is also directed to the statement issued April 23, 1941, by Sidney Hillman, co-director of the Office of Production Management, decrying the discriminations which have plagued the Negro people, and which have contributed so largely to disunity, and to diminution of that unified morale which must exist if our country is adequately to meet the essential needs of the defense program.

It is [illegible] overlooked that Mr. Hillman [illegible] president of one of the country's most highly organized and tightly-knit labor organizations in the country: the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. He has served in this position since 1915. If any Negroes are members of this organization, it has not been [illegible] advertised.

DISCRIMINATIONS NOT IN INDUSTRY ALONE

The National A[illegible]n of Manufacturers declare[illegible] the implication to be dra[illegible] from the President's order and from Mr. Hillman's statement is that the discriminations prevailing exist only in industry, and implying that it is particularly "shocking" because it is found in defense production industries alone.

It recognizes the fact that many unemployed [illegible]ons hesitate to offer their services, believing that there are prejudices on the part of employers against age, sex, race, color or creed.

It was revealed that the National Association of Manufacturers has advised its m[illegible] that there should be no [illegible] prejudices in employment, [illegible] that the association has adopted a policy that manufacturers should use every available source of labor supply.

It was pointed out that this was no mere "paper" policy. In fact, the statement points out that, during the last few months, in the course of a series of regional meetings of manufacturers, all the officers of the association have advocated that manufacturers should employ Negroes wherever, and whenever possible, in keeping with their general ability and their "acceptability" to white fellow-workers.

[illegible] generally, it is de[illegible] these policies [illegible] employes themselves [illegible] or indirectly put up bar[illegible] against the hiring of persons because of race, color or creed, those not now employed may soon expect to be accepted as rapidly as openings for which they are qualified develop.

NONE SHOULD BE DENIED OPPORTUNITY

Without equivocation, the association went on record by declaring that the members of its organization "shares, with every right-thinking American, regret that any loyal American is denied for any reason the right and privilege of sharing in the effort to prepare their country's defense."

Here is the nub of the present tragic defense situation. The spectacle constantly arises in industrial employment of employes who have been directly and indirectly set up [illegible] against the hiring of certain persons, particularly Negroes. They are prevented from joining labor unions which carry in their constitutions both explicit and implicit regulations preventing Negroes from belonging to such unions, and which prevent them from receiving employment because they are not members of the union. Most of the prejudices against employment of Negroes originates in an overwhelming proportion of cases, it would seem, with labor union workers, and not altogether with management. Constitution and rituals of trade unionism generally recognize and enforce these prejudices.

HOW THE ROUNDELAY WORKS

The "roundelay" usually employed was thus described at the 1940 American Federation of Labor convention by A. Philip Randolph, as follows:

"Under the National Defense setup thousands of Negro workers apply to the various industries for jobs. They are citizens, and yet they are turned away. The employers tell them that the unions control the jobs and they ask them if they have a union card. If the [illegible] says no, they te[illegible] work there. [illegible] does not have [illegible] he [illegible] have a [illegible] have a 'j[illegible] not [illegible] union card.

More intole[illegible] than labor d[illegible] criminations, however, is the [illegible] crimination in the [illegible] the Fe[illegible] Nati[illegible] not over[illegible] ture[illegible] present situation. It com[illegible] government has sou[illegible]ntrate the [illegible] gen[illegible] this issue [illegible] pre[illegible] on industry [illegible] fac[illegible]res the association, "th[illegible] government and la[illegible] will put their houses i[illegible]

[illegible]S PRESCRIBED

[illegible] Executive Order No. [illegible] no pena[illegible] Al[illegible] department [illegible] it [illegible] published, ar[illegible] to [illegible] it by declaring any co[illegible] upon which an[illegible]ion ha[illegible] prior to [illegible]nce of [illegible]der is not s[illegible] the pro[illegible] against di[illegible]n.

The President's ord[illegible] to contr[illegible] "hereafter [illegible]" It is clear that many [illegible] not yet signed, but whic[illegible] been discussed, amounting [illegible]ONS OF DOLLARS may [illegible] authorized with obdur[illegible]gard of the President's ord[illegible]

The President's orde[illegible] directed to departments and a[illegible] of the government concern[illegible] vocational and training [illegible]ms for defense production [illegible] to contracting agencies of [illegible] government.

GOVERNMENT IS SOREST SPOT OF ALL

[illegible] overlooked the fact that the sorest spot of all is Government itself. The order is not also directed to Government [illegible]ments. Unabated segre[illegible] on racial prejudice[illegible] affect the Negro body p[illegible]nnel officers in Govern[illegible]ents [illegible]ntil [illegible] with [illegible]-gard [illegible] just [illegible] colored men s[illegible] wom[illegible] qualified for position[illegible] Government.

With th[illegible]cy [illegible]ing declar[illegible] day [illegible] the President [illegible] of his cabinet, tradition[illegible] of discrimination are [illegible] followed by the U. S. Ar[illegible] S. Navy and the Marine[illegible] well as Federal depart[illegible] Washington.

Genuine pr[illegible]y that national unity is bein[illegible]ht can only be [illegible] treatment of all elements [illegible] American democracy. A Presidential order wiping out the l[illegible] vestiges of present undemocratic un-American practices and discriminations in Government departments should be immediately forthcoming.

An ounce of such direct action will sweep away a ton of political gestures and clever maneuverings.

FEP COMMITTEE TO PROBE FEDERAL USE OF ANTI-BIAS LAW

WASHINGTON, D.C., July 31—An immediate investi-ation of what steps the War Department, the Navy and he Maritime Commision have taken to comply with Presi-ent Roosevelt's Executive Order No. 8802, issued June 25, was agreed upon Monday afternoon by members of the Committee on Fair Employment Practice, meeting in executive session.

Five members of the committee were present: Mark F. Etheridge, chairman, Louisville, Ky.; David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation of America, New York; Earl B. Dickerson, Chicago City Councilman; Milton P. Webster, vice-president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and William E. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organization, was not present, due to illness.

TO EMPLOY SECRETARY

At an earlier organization meeting held last Wednesday, the Committee had agreed to accept no proxies for absent members.

The same five members also attended the organization meeting, held in the office of Sidney Hillman, associated director of the Office of Production Management. This meeting, closed to reporters, was also attended by William S. Knudson, co-director with Mr. Hillman of OPM.

The Committee took the position that it would operate independent of OPM, although it would use the investigatory bodies already set up by the OPM to carry on its operations.

(Continued on Page 4, Col. 4)

To Probe Army-Navy Contract

(Continued from Page 1)

It was agreed that an Executive Secretary should be employed by the Committee, with offices in Washington, to receive complaints and to devise administrative machinery for the Committee.

RACE MEN ARE BEING CONSIDERED

At Monday's meeting, the names of some 30 men were submitted to the Committee. Agreement is said to have been reached on a few choices. Some of the names submitted were those of colored men.

The pay of the executive secretary has not been determined. The limit for such Government employees is $9,000.

Mr. Dickerson urged at the meeting that the work of the Committee be divided on a regional basis and that offices be set up in these regions through which complaints might be cleared. The suggestion was received favorably.

At a press conference following the organization meeting, the Committee was belabored with questions as to what action might be taken against Government departments which discriminated in employment. The Committee was also quizzed about the disposition of contracts since the President's Executive order was issued.

So far, it is believed that the Committee will be limited in its action ot defense contracts unless the public demands enlargement of its powers.

The investigation of the War and Navy Departments and the Maritime Commission, agreed upon Monday, will concern itself with the disposition of contracts since June 25 when the President's order was issued. The Order stipulated that each contract must contain a non-discrimination clause.

There have been reports that the agencies concerned hustled through some contracts without the clause on the grounds that they had been 'discussed" before June 25th.

CHAIRMAN ISSUES STATEMENT

Mark Etheridge, chairman of the Committee, issued a forthright statement of the Committee's policy after the organization meeting. He stated:

"Total defense for America means total utilization of all our resources, material and human. To finish the tremendous production task we have set ourselves, we must use all qualified labor, regardless of race, creed, color or national origin.

"Democracy we can never turn [illegible] and in quantity [illegible] planes, guns and ships which will make our nation the effective arsenal of democracy.

"From a practical standpoint—that of getting the job done—discrimination against loyal and qualified workers for any reason is stupid.

"From the standpoint of democratic aims, it is unforgiveable.

"Guns, planes, tanks and ships alone will not make us strong. If we are to keep men free, we must take positive steps to widen the base of democracy at home while we help to defend it abroad.

'So long as various groups in our population are arbitrarily denied opportunity to take part in the defense program, we cannot expect them to share that feeling of national unity which is crucial to national morale.

"As the President stated in his Executive Order 8802, establishing the Committee on Fair Employment Practice, 'The nation can be successfully defended only with the help and support of all groups within its borders.'"

Pittsburgh Courier

Husband Alleges Wife, In-Laws Attacked Him

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 31 His wife, Mrs. Thelma Harris Ashton, lured him to the home of his mother-in-law in Virginia on July 4 under the pretext of wanting to discuss with him a reconciliation and she, her mother and her two sisters set upon him, Samuel Ashton, alleges in his answer to her suit for a limited divorce.

AFRO-AMERICAN NEWSPAPER

August 2, 1941

AFL Has 17 J.C. Unions

Yet AFL's President, William Green, Is on Roosevelt's OPM Committee to End Color Line in Defense Industries

Aug. 2, 1941 Afro

By A. E. WHITE

For ANP

WASHINGTON

When Congress looks into the discrimination against colored what will be the reaction to the mighty American Federation of Labor, whose president, William Green, was named by the President to be a member of the Fair Practices committee, organized to enforce the recent edict against racial discrimination in defense?

Mr. Green is the undisputed head of an organization which has permitted and still permits its member trade unions to write clauses in their constitutions barring colored from membership in them and specifically setting forth a definite racial characteristic as a prerequisite for membership.

(Continued on Page 2, Col. 1)

AFL Has 17 J.C. Unions

(Continued from Page 1)

From the American Tradebership.

Unions handbook, Bulletin 618, issued in 1936 by the bureau of labor statistics of the U.S. Department of Labor, an official publication of that department, excerpts are listed herein from the constitutions of several international unions, including the A. F. of L.

Another strong union, the railroad group, has some similar stipulations which are set forth also.

Pilots

The [illegible] Airline Pilots' Association [illegible] F. of L. union says, "Any [illegible] person of the white races [illegible] good age and moral character."

Railway Clerks

The Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, an A.F. of L. union says, "Any white person, male or female of good moral character."

Railway Carmen

The Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, an A.F. of L. union, "Any white person between the ages of 16 and 65 years."

Dining Car Conductors

The Brotherhood of Dining Car Conductors, a railroad union, "An applicant for membership must be of the Caucasian race."

Engineers

Grand International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, "No person shall become a member of the brotherhood of locomotive engineers unless he is a white man 21 years of age."

Firemen

Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, railroad union, "Any worker within the jurisdiction who has served for at least 30 days, white of good moral character, sober and industrious."

Railway Mail

Railway Mail Association, an A.F. of L. union, "Any regular mail railway postal clerk or certified railway postal clerk of the U.S. Railway Mail service, who is of the Caucasian race is eligible for membership."

Mates and Pilots

International Organization of Master Mates and Pilots of America, an A.F. of L. union, "Any white person of good moral character."

Switchmen

Switchmen's Union of North America; A.F. of L., "Any white moral person of good moral character."

Telegraphers

Railroad Yard Masters of America; "Any moral white person of good moral character."

Trainmen

Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, railroad union, "Any moral white person between the ages of 18-65."

Wire Weavers

Wire Weavers' Protective Association of America, A.F. of L. "Applicants for membership must be Christian, white, moral of full age of 21."

Conductors

Order of Railway Conductors, railroad union, "Any white man shall be eligible for membership."

Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Conductors, A.F. of L., "Applicants for membership must be white."

Commercial Telegraphers' Union of North America, A.F. of L. union: "Any white person of good moral character who is 16 years of age."

And the joker of them all, the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, Drop Forgers, Helpers, an A.F. of L. affiliate; "Colored, where there are a sufficient number of colored helpers, they may be organized as an auxiliary local and be under the jurisdiction of the white local having jurisdiction of their territory; colored helpers shall not transfer except to another member auxiliary local composed of colored members and colored members shall not be promoted to blacksmiths or helping apprentices and will not be admitted to jobs where white helpers are now employed."

In these industries a large number of colored persons are shut out of employment because of the constitutions of the unions. Test cases are liable to be made to determine whether or not a union has the right to say who shall and who shall not have the right to work at a given trade heretofore closed because the applicant is not white.

Mr. Green's position on the Fair Practices committee will put him in a position to answer a lot of questions on the discriminatory practices prevailing in the A.F. of L.

Already the questions are being readied for Mr. Green to answer and inquirers are pondering the action of the committee with these same unions which are under the A.F. of L. protection and guidance.

AFL CHIEF TO ENFORCE DEFENSE BIAS BAN? HA, HA!

GREEN OF JIM CROW UNION IS PUT ON O.P.M.

But U.S. Body Still Hopes To Fight On Against Labor Color Lines

By A. E. WHITE

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—When Congress looks into the discrimination against Negroes how will it react to the mighty American Federation of Labor, whose president, William Green, was named by the President to be a member of the Fair Practices committee, organized to enforce the recent edict against racial discrimination in defense?

Green is the undisputed head of an organization which has permitted and still permits its member trade unions to write clauses in their constitutions barring Negroes from membership in them and specifically setting forth a definite racial characteristic as a perequisite for membership.

From the American Trade-Unions handbook, Bulletin 618, issued in 1936 by the bureau of labor statistics of the U. S. Department of Labor, an official publication of that department, excerpts are listed herein from the constitutions of several international unions, including the A. F. of L.

Another strong trade union, the railroad group, has some similar stipulations which are set forth also.

The American Airline Pilots association an A. F. of L. union says, "Any moral person of the white races of lawful, good age and moral character."

The Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, an A. F. of L. union says, "Any white person, male or female of good moral character."

The Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, an A. F. of L. union says, "Any white person between the ages of 16-65 years."

The Brotherhood of Dining Car Conductors, a railroad union, "An applicant for membership must be of the Caucasion race."

Grand International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, "No person shall become a member of the brotherhood of locomotive engineers unless he is a white man 21 years of age."

Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, railroad union, "Any worker within the jurisdiction who has served for at least 30 days, white of good moral character, sober and industrious."

Railway Mail association, an A. F. of L. union, "Any regular mail railway postal clerk or certified substitute railway postal [illegible] of the U. S. Railway Mail service, who is of the Caucasian race is eligible for membership."

International Organization of Master Mates and Pilots of America, an A. F. of L. union, "Any white person of good moral character."

Switchmen's Union of North America, A. F. of L., "Any white moral person of good moral character."

Order of Railroad Telegraphers, an A. F. of L. union; "Any white person of good moral character."

Railroad Yard Master of America; "Any moral white person of good moral character."

Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, railroad union, "Any moral white person between the ages of 18-65."

Wire Weavers Protective Association of America, A. F. of L.; "Applicants for membership must be Christian, white, moral of full age of 21."

Order of Railway Conductors, railroad union, "Any white man shall be eligible for membership."

Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Conductors, A. F. of L., "Applications for membership must be white."

Commercial Telegraphers Union of North America, A. F. of L. union; "Any white person of good moral character who is 16 years of age."

And the joker of them all, the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, Drop Forgers, Helpers, an A. F. of L. affiliate; "Colored, where there are a sufficient number of colored helpers, they may be organized as an auxiliary local and be under the jurisdiction of the white local having jurisdiction of their territory; colored helpers shall not transfer except to another member auxiliary local composed of colored members and colored members shall not be promoted to blacksmiths or helping apprentices and will not be admitted to jobs where white helpers are now employed."

In these industries a large number of Negroes are shut out of employment because of the constitutions of the unions. Test cases are liable to be made to determine whether or not a union has the right to say who shall and who shall not have the right to work at a given trade heretofore closed because the applicant is not white.

Green's position on the Fair Practices committee will put him in a position to answer a lot of questions on the discriminatory practices prevailing in the A.F. of L.

Already the questions are being readied for Green to answer and inquirers are pondering the action of the committee with these same unions which are under the A. F. of L. protection and guidance.

CHICAGO DEFENDER

August 2, 1941

OPINION

The President's Anti-Jim Crow Committee

After ten days of struggle, two colored and four white men were named on a committee to carry out President Roosevelt's executive order banning racial discrimination in defense industries.

Originally, the committee was to be composed of five persons, two of whom were to be colored. Both labor and management jockeyed for power to nominate the members and opposition developed to naming more than one colored member. In the compromise effected, the committee was increased to six, divided equally between labor and management, and two are colored.

Now that this is out of the way, it is to be hoped that the committee will get down to work.

The general feeling is that it was a mistake to call off the march on Washington, but the majority of people are willing to give the President a chance to work out a program for settling jim crow in industry without a labor demonstration.

If the President's executive order can do it, this new committee has a chance to demonstrate its effectiveness.

If the committee and OPM fail in their task, and defense industries continue to bar colored workers or appear to comply by hiring a few colored persons in menial capacities, the march on Washington should take place before the snow flies.

We have heard promises before. Nothing will be satisfactory now except that which will quickly bear fruit.

OPM Reports Gains in Job Opportunities

WASHINGTON

Dr. Robert C. Weaver, special assistant to Sndney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management, announced this week new employment policies in two more defense materials plants.

According to Dr. Weaver, the Sperry Gyroscope Company, Inc., of Brooklyn hired its first crew of colored skilled production workers last week and the Ford Instrument Company, also of Brooklyn, placed a colored elevator operator and five maintenance workers, the first colored employees in the company's history.

Employment officials of both companies are reported to have stated that colored skilled workers and helpers will be given employment in any position for which they are trained. hTe Sperry Gyroscope Company has also instituted an upgrading program for clerks and maintenance workers already in the company's employ.

4 Others Line Up

Dr. Weaver also announced that four large manufacturers of military aircraft and equipment, Bendix Aviation Corporation, Philadelphia; Brewster Aeronautical Corporation, Long Island; Douglas Aircraft Company of California, and the Allison Motors Division of GMC, Indianapolis, have increased the number of colored skilled and semi-skilled workers in their plants.

In announcing these developments, Dr. Weaver reiterated his admonition that colored youths register in defense training courses. "These opportunities will mean nothing," he said, "unless those seeking jobs avail themselves of the training facilities open to them."

Curtis-Wright Aircraft plants; Bell Aircraft, Niagara Falls, Grumman Aeronautical, Bethpage, L.I.; Republic Aviation, Farmingdale, L.I., and several other companies have expanded employment opportunities, he pointed out.

400 Women at Work

Miss Thelma McKelvey, special assistant in the labor supply branch of the OPM, has likewise pointed out that more than 400 colored women are now employed as gasmask assemblers in the Edgewood Arsenal at Baltimore.

Placements in the plant of one of the largest parachute manufacturers in the country at Manchester, Conn., have also been announced.

New York Age

August 2, 1941

President's Order To Be Subject Of Mass Meeting Talk

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia will address a public mass meeting held under the auspices of the National Negro March-on-Washington Committee for the purpose of discussing President Roosevelt's Executive Order against discrimination in national defense industries.

The meeting, which will be held in Salem M. E. Church, 7th avenue and 139th street, on Tuesday, August 5th, at 7 p. m., will also be addressed by David Sarnoff, president and general manager of RCA, and a member of the Committee on Fair Employment Practice, appointed by President Roosevelt to investigate cases of discrimination in defense industries. Other speakers will be Walter White, secretary of the NAACP; Bessye Bearden of the National Council of Negro Women; Lester Granger, assistant executive secretary of the National Urban League; Dr. Channing H. Tobias of the National Council of YMCA's; and Frank R. Crosswaith, chairman of the Negro Labor Committee.

A. Philip Randolph, director of the Negro March-on-Washington Committee, and international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters will act as chairman.

—30—

. . Things Seen, Heard And Done . .

AMONG PULLMAN EMPLOYEES

By J. T. REID

Well you can never tell just what is on a porter's mind these days.

The other day I was talking to J. W. Harris who had just bumped in on the Akron run, and if you had heard what he said about the run you would have believed that he was perfectly satisfied. Now I see that he is running to Bayhead, N. J. Also I see that T. M. Morris and L. D. Irvin are runnng to Bayhead. These boys seem to know just where and when to jump.

Speaking of jumping from line to line I notice my good friend, W. W. Milteer has bided off the Detroit run. He is now running to Washington, D. C.

What's this I hear about porter Anderson of the Washington District being voted out of the chairmanship of his local in Washington? Boys, you will never get any place treating a good man like that.

In my opinion Porter Anderson was just about the hardest worker that the Brootherhood of Sleeping Car Porters had in any Pullman District. While, personally I never felt that he was advocating a good cause yet I must admit that I did appreciate the interest he took in his work. For after all, in these days and time it is very seldom that we find one who can be depended upon to do what he can to help his fellowman.

A. H. Williams, everybody at the Ritz Hotel is asking about you. I told them you were now running to Akron, Ohio. Of course, they want to know just what has come over you all at once, and how come you don't want to run to Chicago? Eddie says that you should drop him a line and tell him what to do with those whom you left behind: You know that it would never do for some of the boys whom you ran with to be given the responsibility of straightening out things for you. So if I may suggest: You should get in touch with Eddie.

I wonder whatever has come over W. A. McCray. I see that he too has quit running South and has now taken a run to Cincinnati. Is this run for keeps, Mack, or for relief?

Out in Chicago last week I ran into J. R. Reese, secretary-treasurer of the Pullman Porters and Maids Protective Association. He says that he is very busy getting ready for the seventh annual convention which will be held in Chicago, August 12. According to his report this will be one of the most important meetings that the organization has ever had. Delegates from all of the locals representing the 42 districts in the Pullman Company are planning to attend.

Say what you please but you you will never stop Craney Jones from ordering his Long Island duck dinner.

Here is one for the book: C. Wheeler says: "No reasonable person would insist upon remaining a member of a church, for instance, who spent his time publicly denying its principles and doctrines."

Those who cannot work effectively with their brains should at least work with their hands. Overalls and aprons are as honorable as academic robes. Some of our girls now devoting themselves to glamour would be happier if they cut their fingernails and learned at least to wash the dishes.

Now I am ducking out to see what is going on in other parts of the Pullman World, and if any one asks you which way I went, just say: Get yourself a copy of The New York Age next week and you will find out where that scoundsc went.

Train Porters Meet With Brotherhood In St. Louis

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—The Train Porters Advisory Committee of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters held a conference here last Tuesday in the offices of the Brotherhood Southwestern zone head quarters. The purpose of the conference was to discuss the policy which the Train Porters Locals affiliated with the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters should take on the thirty per cent wage increase which has been initiated by the standard railroad unions.

The conference was under the supervision of A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood; M. P. Webster, first international vice president; E. J. Bradley, third international vice president; and T. D. McNeal, international field organizer in the Southwestern area.

The general chairmen of the Train Porters Locals in attendance at the conference were: St. Clair Crutcher, president of the Little Rock Train Porters Local of the Missouri Pacific Railroad; William Fields, president of the San Antonio Train Porters Local of the International Great Northern Railroad; Dell McKinney, president of the Denison Local of the Missouri Kansas & Texas Railroad; Richard Bennett, president of the Fort Worth Local of the Texas and Pacific Railroad; and C. Smith, president of the Memphis Local of the Illinois Central System.

THE CHICAGO DEFENDER

August 2, 1941

8/2/41

OPM LEADERS TALK THINGS OVER

Earl Dickerson, Chicago alderman and Milton Webster, vice president of Sleeping Car Porters, chat with OPM's Sidney Hillman at first meeting of President's special committee to investigate labor practice in defense industries.—Scurlock photo.

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR US

A. Philip Randolph, the dynamic president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, scored again when his recommendation for the appointment of two Negroes to the Committee on Fair Employment Practice was approved by President Roosevelt a few days ago.

With the pattern of discrimination already well established, it was evident that the industrial plants would evolve some ingenious stratagem to circumvent gracefully the President's executive order against discrimination in the defense industries. Out of a thousand or more Negro applicants they might hire two or three as a clever expedient for escaping the charge of discrimination on account of color or race. With full knowledge of the lengths to which the fanatic apostles of race prejudice are willing to go to enforce their evil creed, Randolph headed them off by calling on President Roosevelt to appoint two Negroes on the Committee that will investigate all complaints relative to unfair employment practices in the defense industries and training centers.

The issuance of the Executive order and the appointment of two Negroes on the Committee on Fair Emlpoyment Practices are two signal victories whose social and economic consequences may extend far beyond the period of national emergency. And they may, with the watchful leadership of Mr. Randolph, become lasting attributes of democracy in America.

The America that gives fair and equal opportunity to all of her citizens regardless of race, creed or color—is the America we shall defend and fight for without COMPULSION.

. . Things Seen, Heard And Done . .

AMONG PULLMAN EMPLOYEES

By J. T. REID

The many friends and employees of the Pullman Company, Pennsylvania Terminal, New York, mourn the passing of Chef C. B. Montague Monday, July 28th.

Chef Montague had a long and enviable career with the company as well as with many outstanding people in America's social and business life. During his sixteen years of service with the Pullman Company, he served the Whitneys, Vanderbilts, Astors, Coreys and Vietors both on their private cars and yachts his highlight trip being his tour of America with Queen Marie of Rumania. For the performance of his arduous duties on that trip, he was awarded a medal by the Queen and it was cherished by him as being his most treasured gift from anyone whom he had ever served.

There is one porter in the Pennsylvania Terminal District whom I know will more than anyone else mourn the passing of Chef Montague. His name is J. L. Hill, one of the outstanding private car porters in the Pullman service. When Hill was first placed in charge of private cars, it was his good fortune to have as chef, C. B. Montague, and Hill when informed of Montague's death had this to say:

"As one of the men in the Pennsylvania Terminal District associated with Chef Montague in private car service, I feel a great personal loss in this man for it was through him that I acquired much of my success on private cars. During the many trips that we were out together, his efforts to maintain that high and efficient service required by our guests were never found in the wanting. His service was one of the most valuable that any chef of our generation has ever rendered to the Pullman private car service. I feel that the Pullman Company, as well as his associates, is a heavy loser through his going, even as they have been a rich gainer thru the quality of his varied contribution during a long period of years. He thoroughly deserved, both for his personality and his work, all of the tributes which his passing will bring to them, his dear wife, and to his former associates.

Last week a great tribute was paid to one of our Pennsylvania Terminal maids Miss Etta Banks. In the Sunday issue of one of New York's great newspapers, P. M., there appeared an article along with Maid Bank's picture telling of her experience as a maid on the Pennsylvania Railroad for more than thirty years. This is the first time to my knowledge that a Pennsylvania Terminal maid has been so honored by the white press in New York. And if we consider the length of service which Maid Banks has accumulated with the Pullman Company, we are compelled to admit that she is worthy of all the good things said about her in that article in P. M.

I personally know by my own experience that the accumulation of that record, took patience and energy. May God grant you, Maid Banks, many more years of the pleasant contacts which you have enjoyed in the past years on your job.

Now folks I must be going, but will be back with more news about THINGS SEEN HEARD AND DONE AMONG PULLMAN EMPLOYEES, so order your copy today, of THE NEW YORK AGE. IT'S ONLY FIVE CENTS. Ask for it in the Porters Check Room in Sunnyside Yards, or you can have it mailed direct to your home for two dollars a year.

— 30 —

See Move In Tenn., To Bar Negro Graduate Students

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—To avoid admitting six applicants now awaiting admission to the graduate and law schools of the University of Tennessee, it is rumored that a committee from the university has been working during the summer on curriculum for graduate work at Tennessee A. and I. State College to be put into effect in the fall. It is also rumored that plans are underfoot to establish a law school for Negroes in Tennessee in the fall of 1942.

Leon A. Ransom, NAACP national legal committee, who with Z. Alexander Looby of this city is handling the cases to open Tennes-

---

NEW YORK WORLD-TELEGRAM, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 6, 1941.

Rail Unions Set For Walkout Vote

Demands Rejected —Mediation Seen

By the United Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—Railway labor brotherhoods prepared today for a strike poll of their 1,150,000 members, and federal mediation to reopen deadlocked wage negotiations appeared inevitable.

A stalemate between management and the 19 unions produced rapid-fire developments yesterday, 13 days after the huge bargaining conference opened.

The carriers' negotiating committee announced rejection of all wage demands. The 14 non-operating brotherhoods, whose 800,000 members have demanded wage increases of 30 cents hourly, ordered a strike vote. The five operating brotherhoods, which have asked a 30 per cent rise for 350,000 employees, took similar action.

Neither labor group set a date for a walkout. Alvanley Johnston, chairman of the brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, said balloting of operating unions would require three or four weeks.

Meanwhile intervention by the three-man federal mediation board appeared certain.

Red Caps Decide to Authorize Strike Vote to Force Railway Pay Increases

Seeking 30c Hourly Wage

Threat Timed With That of the White Brotherhoods

CHICAGO (ANP) — President Willard Townsend and the executive board of the United Transport Service Employes of America, as the "Red Caps" union is called, decided this week to authorize a strike call among the nation's red caps as its next move in the fight to force the railroads to pay an hourly wage of 30 cents per hour. This move came after efforts on the part of the union in a series of conferences with railroad officials over a wage increase met with refusal.

The threatened strike vote comes at the same time the railroad brotherhoods, white, and the non-operating railroad unions, are also mulling a strike vote to force wage demands. The federal court decided some time ago that the red caps were employes of the railroads, a contention which they sought to evade for a long time.

According to the railway labor act, when a strike vote is taken among railroad employes, the National Mediation Board may offer its services to mediate the issues involved. Apparently this is what the red cap union wants. Such a move would be additional recognition of the fact that red caps are a necessary and actual part of the railroad personnel.

Mass Pressure

THAT'S WHAT'S NEEDED TO WHIP UNIONS INTO LINE, CAYTON CLAIMS

BY HORACE R. CAYTON

I HATE to keep harping away on this but if something isn't done about making the building craft unions accept Negroes (or at least set up little jim crow units for them) we won't get any defense building jobs regardless of the Fair Employment Practice Committee. William Green is on the committee, so I wish he would note this complaint which is very similar to the one about which I wrote of in St. Louis some weeks ago. My editors last week interpreted the fact that Green had got together a questionaire about the absence or presence of "the brother" in craft unions to mean that Green was going to fight the color line. Green will never "get that weak." In the first place, Green is not interested in doing anything which would disturb him or his payrollers. In the second place, to do it he would be signing his death warrant.

Mr. Cayton

WHY HE KEEPS HIS JOB

William Green keeps his job because he is willing to go along with anything from reactionary bureacrats to hoodlums and panders—he knows that any time he tried to change any fundamental policy of the A. F. of L., his services to it, as a respectable, sanctimonious hypocritical "front man," would abruptly cease. So dismiss Green from your mind. He is going to do exactly nothing and he can do exactly that much and no more. To the Committee on Fair Employment Practices he is a total loss, and maybe a detriment, for he will be in a position to stall and front for the captains of the various internationals of the A. F. of L.

BUT to illustrate, I am going to tell you about another place where a specific governmental contract requiring Negro skilled building trades workers was sabotaged by the Building Trades of Greater Little Rock (I love that name). It was provided in the contract of the North Little Rock Housing Project that 18 per cent of the skilled and 75 per cent of the unskilled labor should be Negro. The contractor was willing to hire Negroes but skilled Negro workers were informed that they had to have union cards. Prior to the beginning of the Housing Project the Negro Carpenters' Committee on Organization made application to the carpenters' union for a charter. Fees for the charter were paid and a Negro local was scheduled to be organized when Wm. L. Hutcheson, general president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America (and by the way he is one of the "big shots" who make Green jump at the end of a string) wired: "Don't install Negro local until you hear from general office."

ALL TURNED DOWN

With the encouragement of Clifford E. Minton, executive secretary of the Urban [illegible] Committee on Organization, [illegible] together and successively asked for [illegible] admittance to the white local, a separate local or working cards. All proposals were turned down. The tradesmen, however, for 15 months brought unrelenting pressure on the white local and on Hutcheson. Finally, Lester B. Granger of the national office of the Urban League bearded Hutcheson in his lair and forced a showdown. Finding his position indefensible and the pressure too strong, the "big shot" finally gave in and set up a Negro local which was organized July 17 in the Urban League headquarters.

AGAIN I want to ask the question, how will the Committee for Fair Employment Practices be successful when it took 15 months to put Negroes to work when it was provided in the contract—something which can never be hoped for—say in an airplane contract. Now of course the committee can put brother Green on the spot but a lot of good that will do. The only thing Green's bosses can understand is pressure—mass pressure and plenty of it. What the committee can do is to act as a sounding board and to bring out all of the facts so that groups of Negroes all over the country can organize and put pressure on the international unions and on the government. But the men should not sit back and expect the committee to solve anything. The best it can do is to articulate the problem for them.

And incidentally, here is another [illegible] of a union [illegible] needs [illegible] the [illegible] pen- [illegible] who [illegible] to gether [illegible] their number [illegible] Hut[illegible] out- [illegible] he will send his han- dyman Green around to talk business then.

THE NEW YORK AGE
Saturday, August 16, 1941

. . Things Seen, Heard And Done . .

AMONG PULLMAN EMPLOYEES

By J. T. REID

Miss Florence Turner, one of Pennsylvania Terminal's popular maids on the Broadway Limited, to Chicago, was given a surprise birthday party on her return from the boatride up the Hudson Monday night or should I say Tuesday morning, August 5 Many of those who took the trip with her up the Hudson ,participated in the surprise celebration, and tried their best to make Maid Turner feel that they knew nothing of the preparations. Many valuable presents, letters, and telegrams were received. It was a great reunion of Maid Turner's friends in New York as well as a reunion for the four sisters, one just arriving from San Francisco, Cal., in time for the birthday celebration.

Oh yes. Clarence was there too and helped to celebrate.

George Williams, better known to his co-workers as "Barney," spends his layovers with his family down at Asbury Park, N. J., Barney says he just can't resist the wild waves, down by the sea.

If you want to know, what the well dressed men are wearing these days, see M. Harrison and John Rhodes. I understand they have each ordered new slack suits for the month of August. Oh boys, how can you do it riding the Broadway Limited?

News has just reached your columnist that E. N. Barbour of the Pennsylvania Terminal District, has been temporarily transferred to Houston, Texas, on account of ill health. We hope for him a speedy recovery.

C. E. Kendricks, vice president of the Pullman Porters and Maids Protective Association, who operates out of the New York Central District, is spending his vacation with his wife down at Laster Cottage in Spring Lake, N. J. From reports the Kendricks are having a wonderful time, surf bathing during the day, and contract bridge at night. Mr. and Mrs. Kendricks will motor down to Atlantic City before returning to New York.

The Pullman Porters and Maids Protective Association will convene in their seventh annual convention at Chicago Tuesday, August 12 Secretary-Treasurer J. R. Reese says that according to his reports from out of town locals, much progress has been made in the last three months, and an overflow attendance is expected to attend the convention in Chicago.

Some time ago my columnist friend, James H. Hogan, gave me a going-over in the column. Well, I didn't say anything at that time about it, but smarting under his audacious remarks I feel that it is at least my duty to say to my good friend: Men can live without leaders, but they cannot live without principles. Men can replace men. But men cannot replace principles. Leadership, yes: but leadership in the porters group as it is today and its tested traditions. I cannot quit claiming my responsibilty in favor of it. The issue of the Negro today rises above party, above prejudice, above personal affections, above hysteria and above fear. Save our principles and we save our jobs. We as Pullman porters need to be on guard against the seductive word, "leader." Because when translated into certain European languages it has a fearful cannotation. Now I must be going I understand that the Broadway Limited is to come off soon or at least that's the rumor put out by the stove pipe herald, and I want to check on it. So I will be seeing you next week.

STUDY INSURANCE FOR ALL EARNERS

Security Board Experts Gather Data Covering 16,000,000 Now Excluded by Law

40,097,446 ARE ON ROLLS

July Applications for Account Numbers Reached 532,289—8,236,378 Rise in Year

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25 (AP).—The Social Security Board is nearing completion of a three-month study of the problem of extending Federal old-age insurance to 16,000,000 farm hands, hired girls and other wage-earners now excluded from the system. A report to the board's advisory council is due Sept. 15.

Eventual expansion of the law to take in all who work for wages has been the goal of leading social security advocates since Congress passed the present statute, three years ago.

Due largely to unsolved problems of administration, the act's old-age insurance provisions were limited in the main to employes of industrial and commercial concerns.

For weeks prior to the President's address urging expansion, board experts had been trying to work out some system of collecting old-age insurance contributions from farm laborers, domestic servants and casual workers and their employers. Innumerable problems arose, such as the frequent shifting of workers from one job to another; the high proportion of employes to employers, often a one-to-one ratio, and the lack of business and record-keeping facilities of farmers and housewives.

British Stamp System Cited

Establishment of a stamp system similar to England's has been suggested as one way of administering old-age insurance for farm, casual and domestic help. Unemployment stamps are purchased at British postoffices each pay-day and affixed to the employes' unemployment insurance books. The money from the sale of the stamps goes into the government's unemployment fund.

On the basis of 1930 census figures, the board estimates that there are 2,800,000 agricultural workers, 2,103,000 servants and 10,646,294 self-employed workers. The last group includes farmers and fishermen.

The board's advisory council already has recommended that about 570,000 charitable workers be brought under provisions of the act which do not now apply to them.

Amendments introduced at the last session of Congress were designed to extend the old-age insurance system to include seamen and employes of certain banking institutions now excluded.

Rolls Increase 8,000,000 in Year

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Applications for Federal old-age insurance numbered 40,097,446 on July 31, an increase of 8,236,378 over the July, 1937, total.

The Social Security Board received last month 532,289 new requests for account numbers, and certified for payment 14,990 old-age insurance claims amounting to $785,662.

Of the claims certified during July, 8,898 were filed by heirs or representatives of the estates of wage-earners, the single cash payments to these claimants averaging $50.39. The rest came from workers retiring at 65, whose payments averaged $55.36.

More than 184,600 claims for single cash benefits, with a value of about $8,700,000, have been certified since the Federal old-age insurance program became effective on Jan. 1, [illegible]

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

By JAMES H. HOGANS

THE LEMUS DEPOSITION

The ousting of Rienzi B. Lemus as president of the Brotherhood of Dining Car Employees, the organization he founded and headed for almost a quarter of a century, was no surprise to those who have kept track with the labor trend among dining car workers in recent years.

These observers list a number of reasons why they weren't surprised, and expressed the opinion that they didn't believe even Lemus himself was surprised at the action.

As a matter of fact, they not only harbor that belief but say it was an eventuality for which he most likely had been prepared and had desired.

To substantiate their points of reasoning, these observers contend that while Lemus is not an old man, in the sense of age, neither is he a young man, and the rigors of modern labor leadership require a certain degree of physical as well as mental ability.

Secondly, they assert that his type of philosophy regarding labor relations and its effectiveness was decidedly passed; in other words, they say he had lost step with the modern trend of labor developments in the dining car field.

No Idealist

Whether those deductions of the pioneer dining car labor leader are true or not, it is pretty well known by those who have had long acquaintance with him that he always entertained definite ideas concerning what colored labor could and could not do.

In that respect, he has never been an idealist, especially with colored railroad workers. He always contended that the work of a dining car cook or waiter was a craft, and as such it should be organized and implemented to a profitable degree, but he didn't believe it had the power to force its demands.

A dining car wa[illegible] himself once, he appreciate[illegible] limits to which this work[illegible]ght go as a trade unionist, [illegible]t losing on one hand wha[illegible]gained on the other; but h[illegible] no illusions about the bo[illegible]y line.

One of his philosop[illegible] in that connection was, "mon[illegible] is power," and that you couldn't beat the employer with money by force and militancy.

Rejected New Method

Considering that the methods of dealing with those types of employers have only changed in late years, there was an excuse for his thinking that way. The trouble was he apparently couldn't or wouldn't adjust himself to the new order of things.

That at least is the opinion of those who know him and know what he has done for the betterment of dining car workers, with one notable exception.

Strangely enough, that exception is George E. Brown, one of the outstanding labor leaders in the dining car field today. The youthful unionist not only thinks that Lemus had begun to change his attitude toward the new order, but he said he had been surprised at his deposition.

"As a student of the economic side of the railroad business," he said in discussing the incident," Lemus in my opinion is one of the best versed among our race.

"He also knows the industrial side, and from the last talk I had with him he appeared to have relented considerable in his opposition to the methods of trade unionism, as followed by dining car workers.

Meal Charge Blamed

"I think the action of the railroads in charging waiters for meals and lodging and other cheap recourses in wage evasions had something to do with it.

"While I am not conversant with the details concerning his ousting, I was very much surprised when I heard it."

As the first man to establish a labor union among them, no matter what may have been his fault and failings, colored dining car workers owe Lemus a lasting debt of gratitude, is the consensus, however, of all who know him.

R. R. SENIORITY RIGHTS ISSUE IN COURT CASE

CINCINNATI, O., Aug. 28—(By W. Daniel Holder for ANP)—Negro railroad workers the country over are watching the case of Ed Teague vs the G. M. & O. R. R. which is due to come up in the September docket of the fifth circuit court of appeals here with Judge J. D. Martin presiding. Teague is being backed in his efforts to get justice by the International Association of Railway Employees, a Negro organization, in the hope that victory for him will have widespread effect upon working conditions for Negro railroad workers, the country over.

Teague charges that the G. M. & N. railroad (now the G. M. & O. railroad) removed him from his regular run, placing a white fireman with fewer years of service with the company in his job. Since the engine on which Teague had regular run had been stokered it was pointed out that the main reason for his replacement was due to a secret agreement between the railroad and the Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen to re[illegible] colored firemen with[illegible] the railroads were stokered completely.

He therefore feels justified in suing the G. M. & O. for $5,000 as a result of money lost in wages from the change in the pay and regularity of work.

THE NEW YORK AMSTERDAM STAR-NEWS
Saturday, August 20, 1938

Seeking Senate Quiz on the Conditions of Negro Railroad Firemen

Big Four In Background

Accuses Brotherhood Of Attack on Colored Trainmen in South

The most notorious attack yet made upon the jobs of Negro workers is now underway by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen upon the jobs of colored locomotive firemen, states A. Philip Randolph, chairman of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters' Provisional Committee for the organization of colored locomotive firemen.

Under the vicious, un-American and undemocratic pretext of non-promotability, taking advantage of the fact that colored locomotive firemen are never promoted to the jobs of engineers, the white firemen's union is rapidly displacing Negro firemen, whenever Diesel engines displace the coal burner engine. According to regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission, railroad carriers are required to introduce a certain percent of Diesel engines yearly in their service. Thus, the trend is toward the use of Diesel engines practically entirely in future railroad transportation. Unless Negro firemen are organized into one, big powerful union such as the white firemen on the railroads and are able to beat back the menacing tide of racial discrimination by white railroad firemen, which is constantly rising, it is only a matter of time when there will not be any Negro firemen in the cabs of engines in the U. S. A., observes Mr. Randolph.

To the end of breaking the force of this movement to eliminate Negro railroad firemen, an effort will be made by Mr. Randolph and the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters to secure a Senate investigation of the present tragic plight of the colored railroad firemen and the methods the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen are employing to drive colored firemen from the railroads.

A survey of the colored firemen shows that they are steadily decreasing on all the railroads of the southeast and southwest as a result of this systematic and organized attack of the white firemen's union upon them.

However, it is the belief of the leaders of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters that by the unity of the colored locomotive firemen in one vast national organization, colored firemen's jobs may be saved.

"Labor Day Finds Negro Workers With Backs To The Wall"—Randolph

THIS LABOR DAY finds the workers at the cross-roads. Today it is war and destruction they face. Tomorrow when peace comes, it may be famine, pestilence and revolution. In both the workers suffer. Theirs is perennial struggle, suffering and sacrifice. With wars, wages, through strikes may rise, but prices through greed for profits rise too, and the evil days of inflation may come.

During the post-war days of deflation, prices will fall and so will wages, and another awful depression with widespread unemployment will beset the workers.

But while that of the white workers is terrifying, that of the black workers is even worse. Black workers are the first fired and the last hired. They are denied jobs if they don't have a union card and they are denied a union card if they don't have jobs. They are damned if they do, and damned if they don't.

Though America has set herself up and rightfully so, as the arsenal of democracy, black workers, citizens of the country, whose blood has wet every battleground, from Bunker's Hill to Flanders Field, these Negro workers must fight for the right to fight and work to preserve democracy for which our country claims to be fighting.

But out of the travail, sweat, tears and blood of people have come the lofty and majestic currents of inspiration and unselfish devotion to great human and social ideals, faiths and principles.

It may be that the oppressed and outraged Negro people will serve as the supreme test and measure of the quality and character of the democracy, freedom and jusice of the new world order, men now seek and aspire to attain.

This Labor Day finds the Negro workers with their backs against the wall fighting a life and death struggle. Racial discrimination in industry and organized labor challenges them with the dictum, "No further beyond."

But Sleeping Car Porters, Train Porters, Chair Car Porters under the banner of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters are marching forward.

MUST CHOOSE

Redcaps, organized by the United Transport and Service Employes of America, Dining Car employes in the ranks of the Joint Council of Dining Car Employes of the International Hotel Alliance, Colored Locomotive Firemen, Freight Handlers of National Council of Freight Handlers, Express and Station employes, and Negro workers in the AFL and CIO are advancing. More and more the Negro workers everywhere, in various endeavors and callings, are beginning to see the light and realizing the fact that organization is their only salvation, and that they must fight, if need be, organized business and organized labor for their rights.

These are days of world-wide storm and stress, chaos and confusion, doubt and uncertainty. The forces of darkness and barbarism under the totalitarian flags of Hitler and Hilterism, Fascism and Communism, are assaulting the citadel of civilization and human decency. Negro workers, like white workers, must choose the camp they will fight in. They are the camps of totalitarism or democracy. Which shall it be? The answer is clear. It is the camp of democracy—the Brotherhood of man in which there shall be no lines of race, color, religion or national origin.

NEW YORK AGE
September 14, 1940

PULLMAN PORTERS BROTHERHOOD CELEBRATES

HARLEM WIL PLAY HOST next week to the bi-ennial convention of the Brotherhod of Sleeping Car Porters, which also marks the fifteenth anniversary of that organization. A notable array of speakers will join in the celebration, including Governor Lehman, Secretary of Labor Perkins, Mayor LaGuardia, Senator Mead, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

While we have not always agreed with its policies, we feel that the success of the Brotherhood in organizing so large a group of workers and gaining full union recognition for them is worthy of commendation and serves as an example to Negroes in other industries of what may be accomplished through intelligent and progressive leadership.

A sore point with many of the veteran porters has been that the Brotherhood has been led by an outsider, A. Phillip Randolph. Mr. Randolph was one of the early students of labor problems to realize the need for organization among Negro workers and he has devoted the larger part of his life to this work. We don't believe that a less able man, or one who was an employee of the Pullman Company could have secured the results he has been able to bring to the porter group. We think that the criticism of Mr. Randolph among the porters has been due more to their lack of knowledge of the functions of a labor organization than anything else.

Such organizations among Pullman porters as that founded by the late Perry Parker serve a useful purpose in a fraternal way but it could not be called a real labor union, for an effective union of workers must first of all be independent and get its support entirely from the workers. It must also have a staff of experts who can and will give their entire time to a study of the problems of their own organization and how to alleviate these problems.

The Brotherhood has adopted such a policy and consistently adhered to it, even at times when it was hard to make both ends meet. We can remember the time when the Brotherhood was dispossessed because it couldn't meet the rent on its headquarters. The constant moves were due in some measure to financial difficulties. Certainly all has not been clear sailing for the Brotherhood but now after fifteen years they seem entered upon an era of prosperity.

We extend our congratulations to the Brotherhood on having passed its fifteenth birthday and wish for Mr. Randolph and his associates many more years of usefulness to the group they serve.

Negro Congress 1940 Endorses C. I. O.; A. F. L. Lead[illegible] Quits

WASHINGTON, D. [illegible] A. Philip Randolph, a foremost [illegible]ro labor in America and pres[illegible] of the Brotherhood of Sleepi[illegible] Porters, refu[illegible] to stand fo[illegible] as president [illegible] the Natio[illegible]ongress [illegible] that orga[illegible]sed Jo[illegible] Lewis, [illegible]n and the Non-Partisa[illegible]sored by the C. I. O. at the fi[illegible]sion of the Congress which co[illegible]d here last week.

Mr. Randolph a socialist poli[illegible]ally, was one of the founders of the Congress and was elected first president of the organization. His withdrawal as head of the Congress, has been expected for sometimes due to th bitter fght between the A. F. of L. and C. I. O.

A portion of the resolution endorsing Lewis and the Non Partisan League is as follows:

Whereas: Long has the Negro worker awaited the extended hand of organizd labor, and

Whereas: The Negro People should be happy to accept the invitation of John L. Lewis to come to a working agreement with the mighty forces of labor and to go forward to victory, be it therefore

Resolved: that the delegates to this Congress unanimously and enthusiastically accept the invitation of Mr. Lewis to arrive at a working agreement of the National Negro Congress with the forces of progressive labor on the basis of the program of our Congress; and

Resolved: that a Committee of five be appointed by the incoming Executive Committee to explore the possibilities by which the Congress can work together with Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Randolph Speaks To Labor Leaders

By EMORY JACKSON

On his first trip to Birmingham, A. Phillip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, whose name was on the lips of nearly every American a few months ago because of his leadership in the March-On-Washington campaign, said to a group Sunday night, "This question of Negro organization seems to be catching fire. That's a significent thing at this time."

In an exclusive interview to the WORLD he said that his speech last night would be extemperaneous and that he would touch upon the need for organization, job discrimination, the March-on-Washington movement, and legal actions for the rights of Negro labor. He spoke at a pubic mass meeting at the Metropolitan AME Zion church.

He came to Birmingham last Saturday in the interest of organizing Negro locomotive firemen. A three-day meeting of this group was held at Little Masonic Temple Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

A few weeks ago Negro firemen on the L and N Railroad filed a court suit against union and company "violations" of their rights as declared found in the seniority clause and other agreements.

Legalist for this group told the writer Saturday that the court had served both the railroad and the union an that they expected a hearing within a few days.

BIRMINGHAM LABOR LEADERS HEAR RANDOLPH

BIRMINGHAM WORLD
A STANDARD RACE JOURNAL
BIRMINGHAM, ALA., TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1941
VOLUME 11, NUMBER 73

LET'S GO! U.S.A. + ALLIES
KEEP 'EM FLYING

President Of Brotherhood

BIRMINGHAM —(SNS) —Mr. Robert Watkins, president of the local Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and prominent in civic affairs was selected to extend a special greeting of welcome to A. P. Randolph, International President of the Brotherhood, who held a series of meetings here Monday with the porters and firemen.

Mr. Randolph is recognized as the foremost leader and organizer of race workers throughout America.

Mr. Watkins states that "we are exceedingly glad to have Phillip Randolph as our guest of honor."

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1941 THE CHICAGO DEFENDER RELIABLE FOR 36 YEARS

MRS. ROOSEVELT LA GUARDIA AID FIREMEN'S CAUSE

FIRST LADY IS ON COMMITTEE TO SAVE JOBS

Begin Fight To Arouse Public Interest In Firemen's Favor

It was announced at the national headquarters of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters' provisional committee for the Organization of Colored Locomotive Firemen that Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Mayor F. H. LaGuardia have joined in heading a National Citizens' Committee to save the jobs of colored locomotive firemen on railroads in the Southeast and Southwest.

Mrs. Roosevelt will act as honorary chairman and Mayor LaGuardia as chairman of the committee. The purpose of this committee is to mobilize public sentiment in the interest of stopping the displacement of colored locomotive firemen, some of whom are 30 and 40 years in service of railroads in the South from being displaced by white firemen, some of whom have not served on railroads as long as one year.

The plight of the colored railroad firemen, according to A. Philip Randolph, chairman of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters' Provisional committee to organize Colored Locomotive Firemen, has become tragic as a result of a contract—known as a 'non-promotable contract'—which was entered into by certain carriers and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, which assumed to act under and by virtue of the Railway Labor act as sole bargaining agent for all employes of that class employed by the carriers represented.

It results in ousting colored firemen long employed on these railroads and who have acquired certain vested property rights and contract rights of seniority, pension and promotion. This contract definitely closes the door of opportunity for further employment to Negro railroad firemen.

Shut Out

Because of this contract, the Negro firemen cannot now bid on a new run or a run on which a colored fireman died or from which he has been retired because of age, or discharged.

When Diesel engines are installed, which is now a general practice on most railroads, made necessary by regulation of the Interstate Commerce Commission, colored locomotive firemen are denied the opportunity to operate these types of engines regardless of seniority, qualifications or merit, observed Mr. Randolph.

The situation with respect to colored firemen is made doubly difficult also by virtue of the fact that the white firemen's union denies colored firemen membership by constitutional provision, but asserts the right to negotiate contracts affecting all firemen and especially to the end of the eventual elimination of the Negro firemen from the railroads of America.

PAGE TWELVE SATURDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1941 The Pittsburgh Courier

FIRST LADY AIDS RAILROAD

LaGUARDIA HEADS CITIZENS' GROUP TO SAVE JOBS ON ROAD

NEW YORK, Oct. 2—It was announced at the National headquarters of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters' Provisional Committee for the Organization of Colored Locomotive Firemen that Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Mayor F. H. LaGuardia have joined in heading a National Citizens' Committee to save the jobs of colored locomotive firemen on railroads in the Southeast and Southwest.

Mrs. Roosevelt will act as Honorary Chairman and Mayor LaGuardia as Chairman of the Committee. The purpose of this committee is to mobilize public sentiment in the interest of stopping the displacement of colored locomotive firemen, some of whom are 30 and 40 years in service of railroads in the South, from being displaced by white firemen, some of whom have not served on railroads as long as one year.

BARRED FROM GOOD RUNS

The plight of the colored railroad firemen, according to A. Philip Randolph, Chairman of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters' Provisional Committee to organize Colored Locomotive Firemen, has become tragic as a result of contract—known as a "non-promotable contract"—which was entered into by certain carriers and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Esginemen, which assumed to act under and by virtue of the Railway Labor Act as sole bargaining agent for all employes of that class employed by the carriers represented, and which results in ousting colored firemen long employed on these railroads and who have acquired certain vested property rights and contract rights of seniority, pension and promotion. This contract definitely closes the door of opportunity for further employment to Negro railroad firemen.

Because of this contract, the Negro firemen cannot now bid on a new run or a run on which a colored fireman died or from which he has been retired because of age, or discharged.

CAN'T OPERATE DIESEL ENGINES

When Diesel engines are installed, which is now a general practice on most railroads, made necessary by regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission, colored locomotive firemen are denied the opportunity to operate these types of engines regardless of seniority, qualification or merit, observed Mr. Randolph.

The situation with respect to colored firemen is made doubly difficult also by virtue of the fact that the white firemen's union denies colored firemen membership by constitutional provision, but asserts the right to negotiate contracts affecting all firemen and especially to the end of the eventual elimination of the Negro firemen from the railroads of America.

The Philadelphia Independent Sunday, October 5, 1941

Berean Drive A Success

At a recent meeting of the Board of Trustees of Berean School there was much rejoicing because the members went over the top in a "quiet" drive for a reduction of the mortgage on the school property to the amount of $500.00. The members as a whole rallied to the suggestion of the President, Dr. John Grant Newman, at a previous meeting, that each member get out and bring the amount in, and because of his forthright pledge to start the fund, the fine result came to pass.

Among those who responded to visits from the Board members, and who are interested in Berean going forward by making contributions are: Dr. John A. MacCaluum, W. Justin Carter, Esq., A. Philip Randolph, Bertram G. Frazier, Esq., Mr. Quillan H. Claner, Mr. Edward Hopkinson, Jr., Mr. William E. Miller, Dr. John Grant Newman, Dr. Irvin W. Underhill, Jr., Mr. Phillip E. Lueders, Hon. Clinton Rogers Woodruff, Councilman James H. Irvin, Raymond Pace Alexander, Esq., Dr. Cheesman A. Herrick, Mrs. M. Belle Anderson Ouffett, Miss Nancy Allen, Mrs. L. D. Morrell, The Pennsylvania Abolition Society, Mr. William C. Biddle, Dr. Charles A. Lewis.

It was the subject of very favorable comment at the meeting of the fine contributions Mrs. Anderson, principal, secured at her solicitation to help meet this emergency. The trustees are making public and generous thanks to all who helped in anyway. Dr. H. L. Gowens and Mr. Henry Carter Patterson, treasurer of Berean School, were also instrumental in bringing in the final amounts needed. Mr. Arthur Huff Fauset is the Secretary of the Board and Dr. John P. Turner, Bertram G. Frazier and Councilman James H. Irvin are the vice presidents.

The new President, Dr. Newman, has been an active member of the Board for a number of years. He

Rev. Wm. M. Markoe, S.J., Founder, St. Elizabeth's Church, St. Louis, Mo.

INTERRACIAL REVIEW

EDITORIAL BOARD

EDWARD E. BEST, M.D. REGINALD KENNEDY
MATHIEU V. BOUTTE FRANCIS S. MOSELEY
GEORGE K. HUNTON, Managing Editor

Editorial & Publication Office INTERRACIAL REVIEW 20 Vesey Street, New York, N. Y.

Published Monthly by the Catholic Interracial Council

HARRY MCNEILL ..... President
MATHIEU V. BOUTTE ..... 1st Vice-President
HAROLD A. STEVENS ..... 2nd Vice-President
NICHOLAS A. DONNELLY ..... Treasurer
GEORGE K. HUNTON ..... Secretary
EMANUEL A. ROMERO ..... Recorder

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

GERARD L. CARROLL, Chairman
EDWARD E. BEST, M.D.
MATHIEU V. BOUTTE
NICHOLAS A. DONNELLY
ARCHIBALD F. GLOVER
HAROLD P. HERMAN
JAMES J. HOEY
GEORGE K. HUNTON
STEPHEN S. JACKSON
CASWELL P. JOHNSON
REGINALD T. KENNEDY
MAURICE LAVANOUX
HARRY MCNEILL
FRANCIS S. MOSELEY
JAMES C. O'CONNOR
HUDSON J. OLIVER, M.D.
MYLES A. PAIGE
C. G. PAULDING
EMANUEL A. ROMERO
HAROLD A. STEVENS
EDWARD SHERMAN
MACEO A. THOMAS

REV. JOHN LAFARGE, S.J., Chaplain

Vol. XIV OCTOBER, 1941 No. 10

MR. RANDOLPH IS RIGHT

As reported in the New York Times, A. Philip Randolph, representing the Brotherhood of Sleeping-Car Porters delivered a forceful address at the Convention of the American Federation of Labor in Seattle. Condemning the Jim Crow policy of excluding Negroes from membership in labor organizations, he presented a strong bill of particulars, stating the names of the AFL unions which continue to exclude Negroes on the ground of color.

In striking contrast, however, to this clear and forthright indictment of the offending unions, the leaders of the convention merely expressed the fervent hope that these wrongs would be righted. At the same time, they successfully blocked Mr. Randolph's proposal that a committee be authorized to make a survey to determine the extent of the discrimination "within the Internationals and Locals of the AFL." Mr. Randolph asked for action that seemed likely to produce results. This was refused. Instead, the Convention "reaffirmed the stand taken last year in New Orleans."

The Interracial Review is convinced that the task of eradicating this undemocratic and unAmerican policy from all labor unions is the responsibility of each and every member of every labor organization. It must be obvious that labor, as a whole, will be subject to well-justified criticism so long as trade unions deny, either the right to work, or the right to a living wage, by excluding Negroes from membership.

We believe that the many Catholic labor leaders throughout the country have an additional responsibility in combating these practices which so directly violate the teachings of the great Encyclicals.

We feel that the Catholic Press of America which has consistently upheld the rights, the dignities, and the responsibilities of organized labor, should take a definite stand in advocating the elimination of racial discrimination from all unions.

Unless labor bans discrimination within its ranks and becomes actually representative of all labor it must expect to be criticized. The elimination of Jim

THE NEGRO LABOR NEWS

419 1-2 Milam Street Phone Preston 5484

C. W. RICE, Editor-Publisher

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year ----------$2.25 Six Months----------$1.25

Make checkse Payable to The Negro Labor News

1—Advocating better health and living conditions for colored people.

2—Better understanding between the races.

3—The right person on the right joy with the right pay.

4—Encouraging workers to appreciate the dignity of honest work and loyalty to their jos and employers.

5—A close relatonship between employers and a better understanding between workers of every class.

6—More and better Negro farmers..

7—Better schools for colored people.

8—A state institution for delinquent Negro girls.

9—A statewide and managed institution for Negro tubercular.

10—A formation of Negro farm organization through which farm products can be marketed.

Entered as second-class matter January 31, 1938, at the postoffice at Published every Saturday in the week at 419½ Milam Street Houston, Texas, under the Act of March 3, 1879. See Section 530, P. L. and R

HOUSTON, TEXAS, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1941

Discrimination In The C. I. O.

Last week the Associated Negro Press, through Alvin E. White, blasted the A. F. of L. for blocking Negro employment in defense industries and was loud in its praises for the CIO because of its non-discriminatory practices and policies.

The article stated that "when discrimination exists in the CIO union, it is the management of the industres and not the union." We refute this statement by exhibiting a picture elsewhere in this paper showing a group of Negro CIO leaders receiving a separate charter to operate a jim-cow union for the Hughes Tool workers at Houston. The charter was presented by a representative from the national headquarters.

We understand it was agreed that Negroes in the Hughes Tool CIO union were to manage their own affairs separately from the whites. The whites were to collect assessments and make contracts which is practically the same procedure as the A. F. of L. If this is the policy of the CIO union, then what advantage would the Negro have in joining?

CIO leaders know by this time that they cannot operate successfully in the South among Negroes through one central organization.

Why would the CIO attempt to pull wool over the eyes of the Negro by having him believe the white working classes are ready to accept him on equal basis? Why would the CIO try to prejudice Negroes against employers by spending large sums of money in propaganda trying to place the blame on the employers for discrimination that exists in its own union? Why does the CIO attempt to blame the A. F. of L. for the bar against Negroes in defense industries when the CIO controls most of the employment in these industries?

The CIO, to our knowledge, has not called any strikes or used any of the other methods used to achieve their end to integrate Negroes into these industries as other workers. Instead of the CIO actually getting employment for Negroes on the basis of other workers, a large amount of money is being spent on Negro politicians and propagandists to talk about how good the CIO is and the principles upon which it was founded. Yet, the Negro job situation today is worst everywhere, both in private and government industries, since the CIO came into power. In other words, the CIO is as guilty as the A. F. of L., and certain employers in keeping the Negro running in a vicious circle trying to get employment and training in Defense Industries. When the Negro goes to the employer, the employer says that union members won't work by the side of Negroes. When the Negro goes to the unions, they say it is the employer's fault. And, when he goes to the government officials they say the contract has been let and they have nothing to do with the type of workers the employers will use. After all of this, the Negro's case is referred to some survey or investigating committee, then a few high powered Negro leaders are appointed to make investigations, flowery speeches, appoint committees and make more surveys.

If the CIO can do so much for Negroes down here in the South, why are Negroes still barred from the good paying jobs in skilled and semi-skilled departments at the General Motors Corporation in Detroit, Michigan? It has long been the policy of that company to hire Negroes only in the capacity of janitors and porters. The CIO controls the labor policy of this corporation. Instead of forcing General Motors to employ colored people on equal basis with that of whites, the union cites what good it has done at the Ford Motor plant where the company has always employed Negroes on the basis of other workers. It is obvious that the fight at the Ford Motor Company, where Negroes are concerned, was to get a block of some twenty thousand or more dues paying members that would enhance the CIO treasury monthly some fifty thousand dollars.

The CIO constantly refers to its steel workers and miners' union, where black and white work together. This is nothing to brag about. Negroes were in these unions when they were affiliated with the A. F. of L. Negro longshoremen constitute the majority in the Gulf Coast District. They say that they are and have always got along fine in dealing with the whites.

There are 8,000 pullman porters affiliated with the A. F. of L. They too, say that they are satisfied.

The position the Negro should take is not to place their salvation in any particular labor union because of its name, principles upon which it is founded or the scope of its activities but, they should seek to find out just what the union is able to do for them in their particular locality.

The steel workers union may be able to give the Negro every type of protection and rights in the East but, the same organization may not be able to extend protection to Negroes in Texas. To illustrate, the Democrat party for the past ten years has been the heaven for the Negroes in the North. It claims Negroes are better off in that party than they are in the Republican party but, in the South, nearly ten million Negroes are denied the right to vote in the Democratic primary, which primary is tantamount to an election. Why? Because each of these states have state rights, customs and traditions that are even stronger than the national laws.

Then why should the CIIO attempt to make the Negro believe by joining it, it would abolish all racial customs and traditions. This is purely Communistic.

What the Negroes want most is a chance to get employment on the basis of their qualifications and fitness just as all other citizens. They are not concerned as to whether the white workers will admit them to their unions any more than they do to their churches, lodges and societies but, they do want to exercise their constitutional rights as free men, to work and earn a legitimate livelihood without being forced to pay dues to some private jim-crow outfit.

It is time for Negro leadership to wake up and study the problems of the workers. Negro leaders should examine every proposition carefully that is presented to the workers for their endorsement.

The economic salvation of the race rest in the hands of the working classes and we should keep eternal vigilance over this group of people.

White Railroad Firemen Squeeze Negroes From Jobs

They Didn't Want the Work Once, But Feel Different Since Pay Has Risen

By Henry R. Lieberman

Ever since the early post-slavery years Negroes have been stoking the fires on Southern locomotives. It used to be a dirty, back-breaking, low-paying job, and you couldn't get the whites to do it for the money. But today, with wages up and Diesel engines coming in, the whites feel differently about the job, and are driving out the Negroes one by one.

From the look of things, by 1943, when all Southern engines must be Dieselized under an ICC order, Negro firemen in the South will have become as much an economic anachronism as the Confederate dollar—unless, of course, something is done about it soon.

That is why an enterprising young Harlem lawyer named Harold A. Stevens, acting for some 2000 Negro firemen, is planning to start a series of court actions before long. He'll bring the discrimination cases into court on Constitutional grounds. And he intends to name as defendants a number of Southern carriers and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, one of the "Big Four" railroad unions.

Can't Join Union

By a curious twist, the plight of the Southern Negro firemen is the result of social "progress." Until the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen entered the Southern railroad field shortly after the World War, the Negro stoker had little to worry about so far as his job was concerned. Now, with higher wages brought into effect by unionization, the Negro fireman is on his way out.

The Negro fireman, however, is suffering not from too much but from too little unionism. He is barred from membership in the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, which, from the available evidence, is forcing the Southern railroads to displace him.

This is the way the anti-Negro squeeze play has worked:

Back in the early 20s, the Brotherhood negotiated so-called 50-50 contracts with some of the roads, under which the carriers were to replace Negroes with whites until this parity was achieved. Not being members of the union, the Negroes didn't have anything to say about the contracts.

Last February, when the Brotherhood entered into a hiring agreement with the Southeastern Carriers' Conference Committee, representing 25 roads, the squeeze was carried a full-length step forward.

New Contract Worse

"On each railroad party hereto," read the agreement, "the proportion of non-promotable firemen and helpers on other than steam power shall not exceed 50 per cent in each class of service established as such on each individual carrier."

The agreement specified that, until that percentage was reached, no new man should be hired unless he had "promotable" status.

To have "promotable" status a fireman had to be eligible to become an engineer. Since no Negro has ever been allowed to run a Southern engine, the Negro firemen had no "promotable" status under the contract.

Moreover, the February agreement no longer assured the Negroes of half the jobs on Southern engines. The contract stated that the proportion of Negroes "shall not exceed 50 per cent," presumably leaving it up to the roads to decide just when the percentage should be [illegible]

[illegible] interpretation [illegible] have given [illegible]

ance of seniority, according to Stevens, the Harlem lawyer, these rights have been flagrantly disregarded so far as Negroes are concerned.

Except for one road, the Florida East Coast Line, he charges, no Southern carrier employs Negro firemen on its Diesel engines.

When a road installs a Diesel locomotive, he says, the Negro firemen are either shifted to a steam [illegible] or given their walking papers.

Unable [illegible] within the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, the Negro stokers have [illegible] committee under the [illegible] A. Philip Randolph, president of [illegible] Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, [illegible] P. McLaurin, field organizer. They [illegible]

Harold A. Stevens

B. F. McLaurin

Photos by Martin Harris, PM

"TIME PAID FOR BUT NOT WORKED," IS EXPL

Johnston Tells of Exacting Tests Required of Railmen

Split-Second Decisions Involve the Safety of Human Lives, Says Engineers' Chieftain; Insists High Quality Of Service Is Never Properly Compensated

BY STAFF REPRESENTATIVE

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—In rapid-fire order, the five train, engine and switching service organizations on Friday began presenting to the Emergency Board their spokesmen for increased wage rates. The first witness was Carl J. Goff, assistant president of the Firemen and Enginemen. He was introduced by Judge Charles M. Hay, counsel for the five unions.

"We will first offer a witness to give the board a history of these wage negotiations," Hay said.

"Then we shall offer a number of witnesses to present to the board—in as brief, accurate and graphic a way as possible—the work done by the employes in the various crafts we represent. We will show they are skilled men.

"Take 'Em for a Ride!"

"These witnesses will come from the rails, and will give you the picture as accurately as words can give it, but, so that the members of the board can actually see the work done by these employes, we will ask you to take a ride on some typical trains.

"We do not wish to 'take you for a ride'," Hay remarked amid general laughter, "but we would like to take Carter Fort for one." (Fort is the railroads' chief counsel).

"In all seriousness, we would like to have the board take a ride on the engine of a typical fast passenger train, and on both the engine and caboose of a long freight train, so that your findings of facts may be based on actual observation of the work performed. Mr. Fort could go on the cow-catcher.

Compliments the 14 Unions

"Following that, we shall offer some statistical evidence, but not a large amount. Thanks to the very comprehensive presentation which has been made by the 14 cooperating organizations, it will not be necessary for us to add many figures, but we shall have some data applicable particularly to our groups—covering, for example, the so-called 'time paid for and not worked,' the dual system of pay, and other such questions.

"We shall also offer a witness who will present a study of something the railroads never mention—time spent by the employes and not paid for by the carriers—and a study of the time and money spent by employes at away-from-home terminals.

from the chief executive down through general chairmen, general committees, local chairmen, and the rank-and-file members, upon whose loyalty and cooperation the strength of the organization depends.

Recalls Bitter Experiences

Goff was briefly cross-examined by Fort, who asked:

"Why did your organization refuse to arbitrate this wage dispute?

"Two reasons," Goff replied. "First, having a right under the Railway Labor Act to accept or reject arbitration, we felt that it would be to our best interest to decline it and let this board consider the matter.

"Second, we have not forgotten the experience we had with the Western railroads in 1927 and 1928. After an arbitration hearing in this same hall, an award was handed down and we had to fight it through the courts before the railroads would accept it."

Hay then put into the record "Employes' Exhibit No. 61," the ballot used by the members of the five organizations in their almost unanimous vote to strike. The ballot was 1940, and was elected to succeed Mr. Phillips this year. I have participated in all the concerted movements since 1928."

"Now, Mr. Fraser," Hay said, "will you state the underlying reasons for this wage movement?"

Bases of Wage Movement

"We took into consideration five principal factors," Fraser replied. They are:

"1—The kind and character of the work done by the operating men; the skill and efficiency required; the tremendous responsibility in protecting life and property; the hazards of their employment and the value of their services to their employer.

"2—Their steadily growing service performance, as reflected in the exhibits which have been and will be presented to you, and by the widening spread between wages earned and wages paid.

"3—The railroads will be carrying capacity traffic in the years immediately ahead, which means that these operating men must render a full measure of efficient service and assume even greater responsibility, if the carriers are to meet the needs of business and of our government.

In Other Industries

"4—Wages in other industries are moving steadily upwards, and in comparable classifications are now well above the rates of these operating men.

"5—The cost of living is rising, and there is every indication that it will continue to do so."

is work for him. When there is no work for him, he cannot accept employment in another industry. He must keep himself available to return to railroad service whenever he is required, if he desires to protect his standing as a railroad employe.

"He gets no stand-by compensation. He gets no guarantee of employment. He gets no guarantee of any kind. He is employed only when there is work for him to do.

"He is not reimbursed for his away-from-home expense in any way, so he must not only make up his mind to get along on rather thin earnings for a number of years when he has no regular employment, but he must also find a way to finance himself when he is away from home after a period of idleness.

Interesting Seniority Surveys

"The Order of Railway Conductors makes seniority surveys at regular intervals, to determine the terms of service of men who are able to retain regular jobs at the time of the year when business is at a low ebb. We made such a survey in 1938, and another one this year, 1941.

"The 1938 survey showed that the junior employed brakemen in the Eastern territory have average seniority or service terms of 19.6 years, in the South 15.3 years and in the West 15.4 years.

"The junior conductors regularly employed in 1938 had 28.9 years of service in the East, in the South 29.2 years and in the West 27.8 years.

"The 1941 survey included conductors only. It showed the average service terms of the regularly employed conductors to be 27.7 years in the East, 25.8 years in the South, and 23.4 years in the West.

25-Year Apprenticeship

"That is some improvement over the 1938 situation, due to improved business, causing more trains to run, but it will be noted that the junior men employed as conductors has 25 or more years of service on the average.

"In other words, they have to serve 25 years before they obtain regular jobs as conductors, even under present conditions.

"I also want to explain the irregularity of employment location. In nearly every operating district there are outlying runs, away from the general home terminal out of which the men perform most of their service.

"To protect their seniority, even after they have been in the service 25 years, they are obliged to go to these outlying points.

Facts Not Generally Known

"After a man's home has been established for 25 years, he has children in school, and for other obvious reasons it is not practical nor desirable to move his home to these outlying locations. The result is that the man leaves home, to protect his employment, and on many runs which operate six days a week his only opportunity to get home is on week-ends.

Alvanley Johnston, grand chief engineer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, took up the story where Fraser left off. In response to the usual questions on his qualifications as a witness, he said:

"I started service on the Great Northern on September 2, 1892, the day after the Sullivan-Corbett fight, as a wiper. I went to call boy, then became stenographer to the master mechanic.

"I left that job to become a fireman in 1893, and was promoted to engineer in 1897. I ran an engine and became identified with the organization in committee work in 1902.

Greater Responsibility Stressed

"In 1909 I was elected general chairman for the B. of L. E. on the Great Northern. I remained in that service until 1918, when I was elected by the convention of our organization to the office of assistant grand chief engineer.

"In 1925, I was elected to the office of grand chief engineer, and I have remained in that office ever since."

Johnston then described the work of engineers, and the changes in operating conditions which have

Cashen Tells a Graphic Story

DED BY CARL GOFF

sult in serious speed have, the demand on ick reading of exercise of the ment in setnals when any of block signal the interest of nals upon two proper operation and record the of the signals by of the train.

now approached that the men split-second deof these fast is required to 20 or 30 sec-

Compensated important and part of a disaster. If calling for 100 100 per cent of operation of a
of these fast

been told some-

Carl Goff's Career

"With this explanation, I call my first witness, Mr. Goff."

Asked to describe his qualifications as an authority on railroad work and wages, Goff briefly gave the board the highlights of his career, beginning when he "entered service of the Southern Railway as a locomotive fireman in 1904."

From 1911 to 1919, Goff recalled, he was general chairman for his Brotherhood on the Southern, then became a vice president of the national organization, and assistant president in 1938.

"My whole time during the past 20 years has been devoted to railway labor relations," Goff said. "I participated in the train and engine service organizations' movement for an eight-hour day, and was a member of the subcommittee which conferred with President Wilson in 1916, following which Wilson recommended passage of the Adamson Eight-Hour law. I have also served as a member of arbitration boards.

History of Wage Case

"In the present movement for wage increases, I worked with D. B. Robertson, chief executive of our organization, in the preparation of the case. Since June, I have been assigned to deal with the wage matter until its conclusion."

Goff then described the history of the wage case, and the work performed by engineers, firemen, hostlers, hostler helpers, conductors, trainmen, switchmen, yardmasters, switchtenders, dining car stewards, chefs, cooks, and other groups.

He also told how a great railroad Brotherhood conducts its affairs—

THE Switchmen's chief informed the Emergency Board in Chicago that during the World War it was safer on the fields of Flanders than in the switching yards of the United States. He proved his contention with official figures, revealing the extra hazardous character of switchmen's work.

accompanied by "a statement by the representatives of the organizations."

"I now introduce our next witness, H. W. Fraser, president of the Order of Railway Conductors," Hay said to the board. "How long have you held that position, Mr. Fraser?"

"Since August 1, 1941."

"You succeeded Mr. J. A. Phillips, who was for many years president of that organization?"

"I did."

"Now, Mr. Fraser, will you tell the board something of your history—the favorable part of your history—and your background?"

40 Years on Rails

"I entered railroad service in 1900, worked seven years in various railroad offices, entered the train service in 1907, became a conductor in 1909, and served as a conductor on the Santa Fe until furloughed in January, 1929, to take full time service with the O. R. C.," Fraser answered.

"I served as a local chairman, member of the general committee, and later as secretary of the general committee from 1915 to 1929. Since then, I have been connected with the executive office, became a vice president on February 1, 1938, senior vice president on April 1,

Fraser then amplified on reason No. 1—the skill, character, efficiency and responsibility required of the operating employes. He filled in the picture which had been outlined by Goff, describing the work and problems of the various classes of employes represented by the five organizations.

The Making of a Conductor

After Hay introduced the Association of American Railroads' booklet, "The Standard Code of Operating Rules," to show part of the exacting knowledge required of "the various operating men," Fraser turned to the work and responsibility of his own craft—the Conductors.

"A man who aspires to be a railroad conductor," Fraser told the board, "must be prepared to sacrifice home life, social life, community life, to an extent far beyond that demanded of men in other vocations.

"He must also accept irregularity of employment, which will affect his earnings for several years after he enters the service, and even irregularity of employment location.

"Once he enters service as a brakeman, he must make himself available for service whenever there

There also is irregularity of employment hours. From 60 to 70 per cent of the conductors are employed in what we call a 'pool' or 'chain gang' service. These men are subject to call at any hour of the day or night. They have no regular time to go to work.

All Road Service Affected

"A man may be called at 1 A. M. on one trip, at 5 P. M. the next trip, 11 A. M.—at any hour around the clock he is subject to call.

"Moreover, they must keep the office informed of their location. When they leave their homes, word must be left there or elsewhere where they can be found, if needed."

At this point, Hay asked:

"Do all these kinds of irregularity pertain only to conductors, or also to other men in the train and engine service?"

"It pertains to all the men in the road service—enginemen, trainmen and all other classifications alike," Fraser replied.

Must Be 100 Per Cent "Fit"

He went on to tell how a railroad employe may lose his job at any time if the carrier rules him unfit for service because of "impairment of vision," or other physical disabilities.

Also, how employes must pass exhaustive and rigid examinations on operating rules, must be familiar with complicated equipment, and know the "regulations governing transportation of explosives, inflammables, livestock, vegetables and other perishable commodities," and must "keep themselves informed on bulletins or other instructions issued in circular form, or published in the timetables."

A Real Picture Presented

Fraser described the hazards to which the operating employes are subjected, such as the "slack-action" which has been getting worse as freight trains became longer, and the hot boxes, sticking brakes, dragging brake beams, and other dangerous defects for which the men on the train must keep a constant lookout.

He also pointed out the important "public relations" duties of conductors and other train employes, and the problems they constantly face, such as "too free indulgence" by passengers in the liquor which is sold on trains.

In short, Fraser and Goff gave a real picture of the work and living conditions of railroad men—a picture such as is never found in the carriers' propaganda about "aristocrats of labor," who "live the life of Riley" and get high pay for doing little or no work.

Issue of Safety

Members of the board asked questions which showed they were deeply interested. Fort also asked many questions in an attempt to weaken the impression made by Fraser, but without any visible success.

For example, Fort kept stressing the fact that the railroads have diminished accidents and hazards by means of a "safety first" campaign, but Fraser replied:

"The men have supported the movement for safety for a much longer period than it has received official recognition from the carriers. Moreover, improved safety results largely from good operation [illegible] skilled and responsible increased the skill and responsibility required of them and other engine and train service men. He emphasized the following:

Above, Alvanley Johnston, grand chief engineer, B. of L. E.; oval, H. W. Fraser, president, Conductors; left, Carl J. Goff, assistant president, Firemen and Enginemen, studies evidence with Harry Arries, statistician of that Brotherhood.

"1—The building of larger and more complicated engines.

"2—The increase in the size of cars and the lengthening of trains.

"3—The increase in the speed of engines and trains.

"Any man, or crew of men with the job of handling these longer and faster trains," Johnston pointed out, "has to account to the company for a greater amount of equipment and a greater amount of freight; a greater number of passengers. That means greater responsibility.

Carriers Raise Standards

"The carriers themselves show they recognize that these conditions call for greater skill on the part of the men in charge, as is proved by the marked tendency to raise the already high standards required of men in that branch of the service. They are required to take more frequent and more rigid examinations.

"The locomotive engineer is required to be thoroughly familiar with numerous books of operating and other rules. If his run extends over the leased rails of other roads, he must know their operating rules also. The addition of new equipment frequently adds another lot of rules which the engineer must know.

"A considerable amount of the time when the engineer is not actually on duty must be devoted to the study of operating rules and bulletins covering local conditions.

Things He Must Know

"A man must pass a series of rules, mechanical, and air brake examinations to get the position of engineer. He is also required to take periodic examinations on these and other subjects. If he fails to pass, he is demoted or removed from the service.

"The engineer must make certain reports. These require that he closely examine the condition and operation of his locomotive, and record these at the end of his run. With the greater mechanical complexity of modern locomotives, the detection of defects is frequently difficult, and much technical thing of the [illegible] home by [illegible] in the road [illegible] those who [illegible] service to [illegible] to the men [illegible]

"Our positi[illegible] quality of [illegible] ders, he has [illegible] now properly [illegible]

Johnston [illegible] have to spe[illegible] before they [illegible] neer, just [illegible] come cond[illegible] jority of t[illegible] work in a [illegible] like most [illegible] trainmen, [illegible] of irregul[illegible] location.

It [illegible]

Chief ra[illegible] think of on[illegible] make a de[illegible] mony. Reme[illegible] worked a few [illegible] stenographer, [illegible] he "left that [illegible] train service."

The big idea [illegible] parently was to [illegible] ston changed to [illegible] cause it meant [illegible] work. Fort got [illegible] ever, from Johns[illegible]

"I was like a [illegible] They like to be a[illegible] was what I wanted [illegible]

And the Audie[illegible]

Foiled but still ha[illegible] again: "If you had [illegible] over, could you th[illegible] better job than th[illegible] neer?"

"You might want [illegible] lawyer," Hay sugge[illegible] ston replied.

"Oh, no. I would [illegible] job."

After learning the [illegible] up a new line. He p[illegible] many locomotives [illegible] reverse gear, cab co[illegible] great many other [illegible] have improved safet[illegible] conditions.

Carriers Fought S[illegible]

Johnston [illegible] Salzberg [illegible] pointing out that [illegible] Railroad [illegible] Orga[illegible] to go [illegible] safety [illegible] decade to another. [illegible] inevitably [illegible] which, of course, [illegible] skill, character and experience [illegible] this engineer who has reached the [illegible] peak of his profession receives 8 [illegible] apparent even from Decker's opening words:

The Meridian Progress

MERIDIAN, MISS., SATURDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1941

First Lady Speaks At Women's Meet

PORTERS RESOLUTIONS MAY PUT AFL CONVENTION 'ON THE SPOT'

Randolph Awaits Action On Pleas

NEW YORK—(ANP)—At least two and possibly three resolutions to be put before the 61st annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, meeting in Seattle, Washington, for 11 days beginning Monday, by A. Philip Randolph and Milton P. Webster, delegates from the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, are calculated to expose that organization to criticism by all Negroes and many far-sighted whites. At the same time, President William Green, in light of developments of the past few months, will be confronted with the experience of once again being in an untenable position.

Mr. Randolph, besides being the international president of the union, is also national director of of the Negro March on Washington committee. Mr. Webster the first international vice president, is a member of the Fair Employment Practice committee established under the executive order of President Roosevelt of June 25 barring discrimination in national defense employment. Mr. Green, too, has membership on this committee.

The resolutions are six in number and include an endorsement of the FEP committee, anti-poll tax legislation, federal anti-lynch bill, lease-lend aid to Ethiopia, support of Great Britain, China, and Russia against Hitler and Hitlerism, and establishment of a trade union committee against discrimination on account of race, color, religion or national origin.

The first and the last are the ones most likely to draw complaint. Failure of the AFL to give it endorsement to the FEP would in effect nullify whatever usefulness Mr. Green might possess as a member of that committee. There have been almost weekly meetings of the committee since its appointment in early August. Mr. Green is known to have attended very few of these sessions. Many persons have sought to put an interpretation upon the fact that when the group posed for photographers at its first meeting, Mr. Green was the only one who appeared to be avoiding a full view of his face.

REMOVE KNOTTY PROBLEM

On the other hand, in the event that the federation does adopt this resolution it will remove what is presently believed one of the knottier problems so far encountered by Lawrence Cramer, executive secretary for the committee, and that is the question of what to do about unions which refuse to enroll Negroes so that they may be employed in plants where the unions have a closed shop. The questionnaire sent out to affiliated unions last month by President Green to ascertain the attitude of the groups on the race question may be indicative of a changed or modified viewpoint.

Proposal of a committee to act on cases of discrimination may hit a snag too. For 60 years the AFL has the porters union proposed the appointment of an interracial committee to investigate instances of racial discrimination among affiliate unions. Mr. Randolph spoke feeling in its support. The report of the resolutions committee in rejecting it read as follows:

"In lieu of the resolution, your committee recommends that affiliated national and international unions be requested to give the most sincere consideration to policies which will assist to elimi- any tendency to disc-

PITTSBURGH COURIER

November 11, 1941

RANDOLPH SEEKS LABORS' ATTITUDE ON RACIAL BANS

NEW YORK, Oct. 9—(ANP)—At least two and possiblythree resoultions to be put before the 61st annual convention of the America Federation of Labor, meeting in Seattle, Wash., for 11 days beginning last Monday, by A. Philip Randolph and Milton P. Webster, delegates from the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, are calculated to expose that organization to criticism by all Negroes and many far-sighted whites. At the same time, President William Green, in light of developments of the past few months, will be confronted with the experience of once again being placed in an untenable position.

Mr. Randolph, besides being the international president of the union, is also national director of the Negro March on Washington committee. Mr. Webster, the first international vice president, is a member of the Fair Employment Practice committee established under the executive order of President Roosevelt on June 25 barring discrimination in national defense employment. Mr. Green, too, has membership on this committee.

AGAINST LABOR BIAS

The resolutions are six in number and include an endorsement of the FEP committee, anti-poll tax legislation, federal anti-lynch bill, lease-lend aid to Ethiopia, support of Great Britain, China, and Russia against Hitler and Hitlerism, and establishment of a trade union committee against discrimination on account of race, color, religion or national origin.

The first and the last are the ones most likely to draw complaint. Failure of the AFL to give its endorsement to the FEP would in effect nullify whatever usefulness Mr. Green might possess as a member of that committee. There have been almost weekly meetings of the committee since its appointment in early August. Mr. Green is known to have attended very few of these sessions. Many persons have sought to put an interpretation upon the fact that when the group posed for photographers at its first meeting, Mr. Gren was the only one who appeared to be avoiding a full view of his face.

On the other hand, in the event that the federation does adopt this resolution it will remove what is presently believed one of the knottier problems so far encountered by Lawrence Cramer, executive secretary for the committee and that is the question of what to do about unions which refuse to enroll Negroes so that they may be employed in plants where the unions have a closed shop. The questionnaire sent out to affiliated unions last month by President Green to ascertain the attitude of the groups on the race question may be indicative of a changed or modified viewpoint.

CHICAGO DEFENDER

October 11, 1941

this group of freshmen co-eds, members of the class of '45, who have | D. C. From left to right are: Misses Norma Belle Clayton, Lois Ray- | Amelia Jones, of Springfield, Mass.; Deane Curtis, of Pittsburgh

UTSEA GETS BARGAINING RIGHTS F

COAST GROUPS DESERT A.F.L. JIM CROWISM

Mediation Board Certifies Transfer Of Power To New Agency

SAN FRANCISCO. — The last citadel of A.F.L. jim crow unionism among red caps crumbled this week when the National Mediation Board of the U. S. Department of Labor certified the United Transport Service Employees of America as the collective bargaining agency for the red caps and station porters of the Southern Pacific Railroad company and the Ogden (Utah) Depot company.

Certification for two other road companies, the Los Angeles Union Terminal company and the Pacific Railroad company is expected within the next few days, U.T.S.E.A. spokesmen stated.

The certification of the U.T.S.E.A. on these properties extends the contract and certification mileage of the union among station porters to approximately 100,000 operating miles of Class I railroads and brings within its contractual confines over 85 per cent of the major railroad companies employing an appreciable number of porters, union leaders declared.

Early in February of this year, the American Federation of Labor ordered all A.F.L. federal locals of red caps on the West Coast to turn in their federal charters and apply for "auxiliary" charters from the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, a jim crow A.F.L. affiliate, who was demanding jurisdiction over these employees. They were given until March 1 to comply with this order.

However, the employees rejected this effort to restrict their union rights and immediately applied to the U.T.S.E.A. for affiliation.

Under the leadership of General Chairman John R. Hoskins and James A. Gray, president of the big Los Angeles local, over 90 per cent of the employees joined in the transfer of membership to the U.T.S.E.A.

In March, the U.T.S.E.A. invoked the services of the National Mediation Board to legally determine the collective bargaining agency for these groups, which precipitated a six months controversy with the Clerks' union over representation.

The Board assigned Otto F. Beyer, board member, to the case, who in his investigation found that a large majority of the employees had designated the U.T.S.E.A. as their collective bargaining agency.

Se[illegible] Raise In Pay For [illegible]ing Car Employees

[illegible] Thomas Edge and [illegible]onville, officials of [illegible]ing Car Cooks and [illegible] Union, the outlook [illegible] the fight to establish a minimum wage of 70 cents per hour for all dining car employees and to raise wages to at least 30 cents per hour, became very bright this week.

S. Fonville

Representatives of the National Mediation Board cooperating with union officials are negotiating agreements with all railroads to grant the same wage increases to dining car cooks [illegible] waiters [illegible] given to 19 [illegible] operating and non-operating unions in [illegible]dustry. This action will follo[illegible] report of a special fact-[illegible]mittee appointed by [illegible] Roosevelt to study demand[illegible] wage increases by major rail[illegible] unions,

In a report to representatives of the Negro Labor Council investigating labor disputes in which Negroes are involved, Edge and Fonville stated tha' several midwestern roads, including the Great Northern, the Union Pacific, Illinois Central, and the Soo Line had already signed agreements to extend to cooks and waiters the same wage increases granted to other railroad workers. Over 3,000 workers, 2,400 of whom are Negroes, are affected by these agreements.

Ninety-nine per cent of the waiters and cooks in this area have voted to strike if satisfactory wage increases are not received. "Earnings of class A roads have greatly increased," Thomas Edge explained, "the cost of living to the railroad workers has greatly increased; it is simple fairness to raise wages at this time. The average waiter or cook s paid less than $1,000 per year."

Heavy rubber covers have been invented to be slipped over automobile door handles for the protection of other cars that may be parked too close.

AFL Bludgeons Hitler, But Straddles Negro Discrimination

Convention Shelves Petition for Committee to Study Jim Crowism in Labor

By James A. Wechsler
PM's Labor Editor

SEATTLE, Oct. 15.—The AFL is ready for a shooting war with Adolf Hitler, but it still treats Jim Crow as though he were one of the boys. So the Federation's 61st convention, having bellicosely bludgeoned Nazism, refused to appoint a committee yesterday to study evidence of discrimination against Negroes practiced by powerful international and local unions of the AFL.

This painful paradox was unveiled when A. Philip Randolph and Milton Webster, who as representatives of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters are the only Negro delegates in this meeting of labor's fair-haired sons, waged their annual battle against discrimination inside the AFL house. They got a lot of applause, much off-the-record sympathy, and a handful of votes.

This time their effort was made in uniquely auspicious circumstances. It followed an address by Mark Ethridge, the middle-aged southern gentleman who heads the committee appointed by President Roosevelt to fight race barriers in defense industries. Ethridge flatly accused important AFL unions of fostering discrimination and declared that they were playing Hitler's game.

The convention thereupon went on record as affirming its collective distaste for such practices and trusting that time would bring a better day for the Negroes, but it simultaneously voted down Randolph's plea for appointment of a committee to act on the problem.

Debate Is Bitter

It did so after the bitterest, least punch-pulling debate of this predominantly happy convention: a debate in which Randolph, a tall, brooding figure who had listened silently to eight days of anti-Nazi hoopla, savagely charged AFL higher-ups with failure to spread democratic gospel in AFL ranks.

Before Randolph took the floor Ethridge, who is headed for public hearings in Los Angeles on employer discrimination in the aircraft industry, told the convention:

"There has been a good deal of the breaking down of barriers but there are still employers who have no more conception of what this nation stands for than to specify that they will accept only 'white, Christian' applicants. Unfortunately, too, there are still many unions and locals of unions which bar their fellow men because of color. I would not be frank at all with you if I did not say that most of them are yours."

Ethridge asserted that "one big union recently refused to certify Negroes for work in the building trades"; there were also, he said, "cases of tacit agreement between employers and unions to bar Negroes from jobs."

When Ethridge finished, William Green, AFL president, who seemed genuinely pained and saddened by it all, thanked him for his "eloquent and interesting address."

Then Randolph got up. The hall became very quiet. Most of the delegates looked alternately embarrassed and disturbed while Randolph spoke. They conceded, as does virtually everyone on the scene here, that he was telling the truth. They also knew that the hardheaded realists of the AFL would not permit any "hasty action" to deal with the situation.

Randolph Names Names

Randolph's indictment named names and places.

In the vast, sprawling plant of the Boeing Aircraft Co. in Seattle, Negroes are not employed. The company has expressed written willingness to employ them; but it has a contract with the AFL's International Machinists Association. The Machinists Union does not admit Negroes. Randolph challenged Harvey Brown, president of the union, who sat a few feet away from him while he spoke, to "explain this to the United States."

Brown didn't say anything.

Randolph told again the tale of the Tampa shipyards, where hundreds of Negro workers helped the AFL win a strike for union recognition. After the AFL won, its shipbuilding unions signed a contract which excluded Negroes from "all but menial jobs." Randolph declared that John P. Frey, head of the Metal Trades Division of the AFL, was "obligated to make a statement to the United States on this case."

When Frey retorted that it was "the fault of the Ku Klux Klan," Randolph interjected:

"The AFL itself in Tampa is controlled by the Klan."

In Milan, Tenn., Randolph said, the business agent of the "white local" of the Carpenters Union told Negro unionists seeking work:

"I don't recognize any Negro as a union man."

In St. Louis, Negro resident laborers couldn't get employment because of union opposition, although the need for labor was so great that out-of-town workers had to be rushed in.

In Portland, Local 72 of the Boilermakers prevented four companies from hiring Negroes.

Other Cases Cited

Randolph said it happened to Negro plasterers in Kansas City, to Negro painters in Fort Leavenworth, Mo., to Negro shipyard workers in New Orleans. In the bulk of his cases employers were willing to use Negroes; the AFL unions were not.

Randolph flaunted affidavits to prove his points. In submitting his charge he emphasized that he was not damning the whole Federation, but said:

"The public finds it hard to distinguish between the official attitude of the Federation and the policies of its affiliates."

He called upon the convention to "make one step toward progress" by appointing a group, led by Green—who is a member of FDR's anti-discrimination committee—to survey the situation within the AFL. The Resolutions Committee had rejected the idea, proposing instead that the convention "reaffirm the stand taken at New Orleans." That stand placed the Federation squarely on the fence, opposing discrimination verbally but letting local and international unions do as they pleased.

Randolph received a long ovation from a big part of the auditorium. It looked momentarily as if this eloquent, erudite Negro who had won his long battle to organize the Pullman Co. in 1934, might upset the cautious stand of the higher-ups. Then they went into action.

L. P. Lindelholf, heavy-set, gray-haired leader of the painters, pointed out that Negroes had attended the last convention of his union, and that, where discrimination had occurred, it was because the local unions refused to tolerate the presence of even separate Negro unions.

A. Philip Randolph

Bird-beaked, aging John P. Frey, "historian" of the AFL hierarchy, said that "Randolph's statement disturbed me more than any I ever heard in an AFL convention." In tones resembling an amiable snarl, Frey declared:

"The delegate Randolph has an advantage over others here—he studied at Harvard."

"If there is anyone in the United States," Frey said, "to whom the colored race owes most it is to the American Federation of Labor. Instead of hearing one word of appreciation, all we listened to is indictment. I intend to say nothing relative to his personal charges against me."

Two Negro Delegates Wage Annual Fight in Vain

William Green took the microphone away to renew his contention that "a line must be drawn between the official stand of the AFL and the actions of some national or international unions." In the federal locals of the AFL, directly responsible to the national body, Green declared, no discrimination would be allowed; in the rest of the Federation "it takes time to break prejudice down."

Hutcheson Applies Crusher

The crusher was then applied by stentorian, paunchy William L. Hutcheson, ruler of the carpenters. Observing that "I have been one who has always been sympathetic regarding Negro workers," he admonished Randolph to mind his own business and added:

"In our union we don't care whether you're an Irishman, a Jew or a nigger" (yes, he said "nigger").

It was all over. Randolph forlornly rebutted, pledging that "I am able to sustain every charge." It didn't matter. Nobody had challenged his case histories; everybody had simply assured him that he was getting too excited about this subject and trying to build Rome in a day.

There are plenty of powerful AFL unions, such as the Teamsters and the ILGWU, which draw no color line; but when the vote was taken, Randolph's supporters were a scattered, lonely chorus.

Supporting his modest plea was a representative of the Seattle Newsboy Union.

AFL to End Convention P[illegible]ally

Staff Correspondent

SEATTLE, Oct. 15.—After trying for 24 hours, William Green today looked forward to a relatively happy ending for the 61st AFL convention. It looked as if the situation was well in hand.

The threatened floor war between the Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers and Joseph Fay's Brotherhood of Operating Engineers apparently has been averted. Fay, one of the leading characters in Pegler's rogues' gallery and leader of the assault on David Dubinsky last year, had demanded immediate amalgamation of the Firemen and Oilers with his union. The F. and O.'s dissented, insisting they didn't want to associate with Fay and warning that they would read Pegler aloud if the Committee on Adjustment went through its recommendation for the merger.

Joseph Fay

But harassed, well intentioned Bill Green, it appeared today, has persuaded the committee to alter its findings and to recommend amalgamation only after approval by the rank and file of both unions. And Fay, after much wrangling, is reported to have yielded, perhaps preferring to keep his mug out of the papers.

So the issue that threatened to spill racketeering beans all over the convention floor may not arise. Today the convention is scheduled to elect its new Executive Council, which almost certai[illegible] re-electing the old one minus Ge[illegible] E. Browne.

It will also adopt a statement urging international and local unions to shun association with the underworld.

The schedule was slowed up yesterday, first by the battle over Negro discrimination and later by three bitter jurisdictional debates which took up the whole afternoon. One of them—between the Machinists and the Amalgamated Association of Street Car and Railway employes—dates from 1914. The other two also involved the Machinists. In each case the Machinists demanded immediate action; in each instance the convention voted to refer the problems to the Executive Council, an old AFL custom.

In between these esoteric and historic quarrels the delegates voted strong condemnation of Assistant U. S. Attorney General Thurman Arnold for his attacks on the AFL and demanded an investigation of his conduct. Arnold has accused the AFL of joining a conspiracy with Sidney Hillman to keep the CIO out of the building trades; The AFL accuses Arnold of conspiring with the CIO to cut its wage standards in the building trades.

The delegates also expressed their pleasure at the elimination of former members of the NLRB, but warned that the new ones had shown unexpected tendencies to "undermine" craft unionism.

Continued Story

Today is the 1000th day of the Brass Rail strike.

NEW YORK AGE

October 15, 1941

Gov. Polletti and Sen. Barbour Join Fight To Stop Displacement Of Negro Railroad Firemen

CHICAGO, Ill.—The movement to stop the displacement of Negro railroad firemen when Diesel engines are put on is rapidly gaining momentum," states A. Philip Randolph, national chairman of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, Provisional Committee for the Organization of Colored Locomotive Firemen, at the Chicago headquarters of the Brotherhood.

New supporters of the cause of the colored firemen are Lieutenant Governor Polleti of New York State and Senator W. Warren Barbour of New Jersey. Governor Poletti has volunteered his services without cost to assist in the prosecution of the legal aspect of the fight in behalf of colored firemen and expressed his utter revulsion against and condemnation of the policy to displace Negro railroad firemen of twenty and thirty years' seniority rights by white firemen their junior, and branded this procedure as un-American, undemocratic and unjust.

Senator Barbour of New Jer[illegible] has telegraphed Mr. Randolph [illegible] his intention to study the [illegible]lem of the colored Locom[illegible] Firemen and expressed his inte[illegible]est in the fight to save their jobs. A conference is being planned with Senator Barbour with the view of enlisting his support behind a movement to secure the adoption of a Resolution by the Senate to have a Senate investigation of the plight of the colored locomotive firemen and the attendant circumstances surrounding their continuous elimination as a result of death, retirement and discharge, along with the gradual, but constant, introduction of Diesel power," concluded Mr. Randolph.

—30—

Randolph and Webster To Visit Pacific Coast

CHICAGO, Ill.—A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and national director of the March on Washington Committee and Milton P. Webster, first international vice president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and member of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee, will visit the Divisions of the Brotherhood of Sleepng Car Porters on the Pacific Coast, ncluding Seattle, Spokane, Portland, Oakland, Los Angeles and returning will stop at Salt Lake City, Denver, Omaha and Kansas City, for the purpose of holding meetings to discuss the recent [illegible]ent of Railway em[illegible] the general problems [illegible]orkers in National De-

—30—

Afro-American

October 11, 1943

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

By JAMES E. BOGANS

BLAMES [illegible] FOR LABOR [illegible]

Blame for the labor policy of the Pennsylvania Railroad in not promoting colored employees to supervisory positions in its dining car service, such as traveling chefs, can be placed squarely at the door of Local 370, the AFL dining car union, according to Rienzi B. Lemus, founder and former president of the Brotherhood of Dining Car Employees.

The charge was made in a statement to this column in response to its request that he give his opinion of the situation.

The veteran dining car labor leader, who suffered the painful experience of seeing the union house that he built crumble, piece by piece, because he advocated union isolation for colored dining car workers, not only blamed the AFL union's influence for the present policy, but he charged it with having a pernicious effect on the service as well as the labor relations which now exist between the dining car management and the workers.

Basing his comments on the interview held recently with the Pennsylvania's wage and labor supervisor, Warner L. Pipes, he said:

"That Pipes interview, which your column carried, does the railroad management no disservice, furnishes Local 370 with an implied warning, and reveals quite clearly why colored cooks and waiters have not been appointed to supervisory posts in the Pennsylvania Railroad's dining car service."

He agreed with the assertion of the supervisor that the cooks on that road are among the best paid in the country; that their wages exceeded those of the average white hotel cook, and that many have risen from dishwashers to their present position, but he said the supervisor didn't explain the real reason why none had been promoted to a supervisory position, such as traveling chef.

"It is hardly to be questioned," said he, "that the reason the Pennsylvania has no colored traveling chef is due to prejudice; but it is not racial prejudice.

"It is the sort of prejudice often common to men where two groups are constrained by law to carry on as equals, and one comes onto the scene boasting blatantly of what it is going to do to the other."

Recounting the history of his old organization, and how he had succeeded in increasing the wages of cooks and waiters while he was their labor head, he continued:

"I negotiated every cook's wage rate scale on the Pennsylvania Railroad, and knew that I had gone far ahead of the average rate of pay of white cooks in the East, or anywhere else. But I was cautious not to over-emphasize that fact by continually demanding increases.

"I continually warned the men in our meetings that the Pennsylvania's high wages contained a potential threat of invasion in the dining car field by the A.F. of L. and its white cooks, as the B. & A. situation has proved."

"This brought upon the Brotherhood and myself the derisive terms of 'company union' and 'management stooge.'

"So, when the Railway Labor Act was amended, in 1934, with its pro-union principles and proscriptions, the situation became ripe for the overthrow of the organization on the Pennsylvania, New York Central, Boston and Albany and New Haven Railroads.

"Local 370 approached its victory with much boasting about what it would make the Pennsylvania Railroad do.

"Thus was the Brotherhood of Dining Car Employees kicked aside, and the A.F. of L. representative established at Sunnyside Yards as permanent committeeman, ever ready to promote and handle grievances.

"Such a move was unprecedented in railroad labor organizations in that it made grievances fundamental, when always they are incidental.

"Mr. Pipes, whose real functions are somewhat akin to those of a police court judge or justice of the peace, was then brought to Sunnyside Yards.

"I doubt that there is another dining car department in the country which has a similar functionary. He is an indirect creature of Local 370."

The pioneer dining car organizer, nevertheless, admitted that there is nothing in the "constitution, system" which [illegible] the railroad [illegible] in its dining car service.

MERIDAN PROGRESS

October 25, 1941

AFL Leader Calls Negro 'Evil In Labor Movement'

President Green Is Called Upon to Rebuke O'Reilly

Meridian Progress 10/25

NEW YORK, N.Y. — (SNS) — Citing remarks of Harry O'Reilly, regional director of the American Federation of Labor in Chicago, as "insulting to colored people and a menace to the unity of pro-labor forces," the NAACP has requested that President William Green of the A. F. of L., officially and publicly rebuke O'Reilly and Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

O'Reilly is reported as having said to a committee from the Chicago NAACP branch: "I consider the Negro an evil rather than an asset to organized labor. I don't believe all of this discrimination exists against the Negro; if it does, it is the Negro's fault and also his right."

O'Reilly is also reported as having used profanity freely to the committee, which contained women, and to have used the word "nigger" instead of Negro.

The NAACP letter labeled O'Reilly "ignorant as well as insulting," and declared that discrimination against Negroes by A. F. of L. unions was well-known throughout the lavor movement, had been discussed at numerous A. F. of L. conventions, including the convention just closed in Seattle, Wash., and had been the subject of numerous official statements and letters by President Green's office.

"In the light of this history,' said the NAACP letter, "it is ridiculous for Regional Director O'Reilly to say that he does not believe discrimination exists against Negroes in the A. F. of L."

The NAACP also asserted that there had been "almost daily" discrimination against Negro workers by A. F. of L. unions since the launching of the national defense program. Particular stress was laid upon the fact that the A. F. of L. convention, which closed in Seattle October 16, met under the shadow of the Boeing aircraft plant where Negroes have been repeatedly excluded from employment, not by the Boeing company, but by the A. F. of L. aeronautical workers union.

The NAACP letter reminded President Green of the powerful anti-labor forces at work in the country, of the anti-labor legislation pending in Congress and of which have been made to Negro Americans to help defeat this legislation. The letter declared that Negroes were willing to support organized labor when organized labor demonstrated that it would treat Negro workers without discrimination.

Ethridge Raps Union Jim Crow

SEATTLE, Washington—(SNS)—Race discrimination on the part of a union is an "unrelieved tragedy," Mark Ethridge, Louisville newspaper editor and chairman of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice told the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, as he made a plea that labor "abolish all the devices of constitution and ritual" which now bar Negroes and other minority groups from the opportunity to work.

Ethridge spoke as chairman of the Fair Employment Practice Committee which was named by President Roosevelt some months ago to "receive and investigate complaints of discrimination" against potential defense workers because of thei race, creed, color, or national origin.

"Our committee has the means to bring recalcitrant manufacturers into line and undoubtedly means will be found to bring recalcitrant unions into line," he warned.

"But we do not want to do that," he added. "We want your full support and your full acceptance of the national policy."

After recalling the many efforts made to integrate minority groups into the defense program, climaxed by an executive order by the President on June 25, Ethridge continued:

"Unfortunately, there are still many unions, and many locals of unions not all of them engaged directly in the defense effort, which bar their fellowmen because of color. I would not be frank at all with you if I did not say that most of them are yours."

(Continued on Back Page)

Ethridge Raps

(Continued from Page 1)

Citing examples, Ethridge, who as general manager of the Louisville Courier-Journal, deals with 12 unions pointed out:

"We have a notorious case in which an employer subscribed in effect to Hitler's theory that Negroes are best fitted for slavery, or at the very best, for domestic work, but offsetting that, we have a notorious case in which a union, by hypocrisy and trickery, deprived Negroes who were already working of their right to employment."

On the eve of the first hearing of the committee on Fair Employment Practice, to open Monday (October 20) in the Embassy Auditorium, Los Angeles, Ethridge told the unionists that discrimination against workers because of their race, creed, color or national origin, is "a game that this country cannot afford to play in the light of all it has stood for and challenged; it is certainly a game that the union of the United States cannot afford to play unless they want to invite the destruction which has come to their fellow-unionists in Germany and Italy."

Ethridge will preside over the Los Angeles hearing which will be attended by the entire membership of the Fair Practice Committee, with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, represented by proxy.

MEMPHIS WORLD
AMERICA'S STANDARD RACE JOURNAL
MEMPHIS, TENNESSEE, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1941

The Globe Trotter • By Cliff Mackay

Two Labor Stories

TWO LABOR STORIES dealing with Negroes appeared in the news last week. One concerned the attitude of the American Federation of Labor toward black workers, the second came in the form of a resolution passed by one of the largest units in the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

The wide divergence of opinion expressed in these stories is typical of the seemingly insurmountable gap between the philosophy and ideologies of these two branches of organized labor.

Irritating to say the least was the statement of one Harry O'Reilly, regional director of the AFL in Chicago. Mr. O'Reilly is quoted as telling a committee from the Chicago NAACP branch: "I consider the Negro an evil rather than an asset to organized labor. I don't believe all of this discrimination exists against the Negro; if it does, it is the Negro's fault and also his fight."

KNOWS IT EXISTS

Mr. O'Reilly being affiliated with the American Federation of Labor knows that discrimination does exist against Negro workers, no matter how much he chooses to play the ostrich and hide his head against the facts that are all around him. He could not be affiliated with the AFL, the greatest supporters of this economic warfare against black folk and not know it.

No single organization has contributed so much to the "freezing out" of black workers as the American Federation of Labor. And that this organization even at this late day stubbornly refuses to see the "light" was shown during the recent Seattle national convention when the convention refused to even consider lowering the "white only" barriers to membership in the face of increasing public opinion against this anti-democratic stand.

Mr. O'Reilly no doubt was in the convention hall when A. Phillip Randolph, president of the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, the only all-Negro AFL affiliate, made his brave, but entirely futile fight to break down these barriers, through which the AFL machinists, shipyard workers, painters, metal trades unions and more than 118 other affiliated brotherhoods put the "squeeze play" on Negro workers.

AGAINST DEMOCRACY

From the tone of his Chicago statement, he no doubt helped to vote down Mr. Randolph's plea that democracy be reinstated in this wing of the American labor movement.

In direct contrast to the anti-Negro position the AFL has plainly shown it is as determined to maintain was the action of the International Executive Board of the United Automobile Workers one of the strongest affiliates of the Congress of Industrial Organization.

For years Negroes had pleaded in vain for membership in the craft unions the AFL started in the auto industry, then the United Automobile Workers came along and accepted all who were workers, no matter what color their skin chanced to be.

Though this union would take in all members, some of the automobile manufacturers were not quite so democratic. So last week the union went on record as censuring these industrialists, now loaded down with government contracts to build weapons to insure the perpetuation of "democracy" in the world.

RAP DISCRIMINATION

The resolution, written in unmistakable language demanded an end to discrimination against Negroes in plants holding contracts with the union.

It was pointed out that curtailment of automobile production would "seriously aggravate the problem of the Negro worker, and that it would be hard, because of his race, for this class of worker to get transferred from non-defense to defense work."

The resolution passed without a dissenting vote by the executive board resolved that all plant managements "covered by UAW-CIO contracts be immediately notified that any further racial discrimination will not be tolerated; that the international president appoint a committee to make available reports on the problems of Negro workers; that when dissension occurs among Negro and white workers, we recommend that the local union involved establish a joint committee to make a summary and investigation and report to the regional director and national committee."

BACK PRESIDENTIAL ORDER

The United Automobile Workers, it can plainly be seen, are anxious and willing to comply with the President's Executive Order that there be no discrimination in national defense work.

Most of the American Federation of Labor Unions and several of the CIO unions along with a rapidly diminishing number of industrialists still choose to defy the president.

It is this small group, who by their actions say they do not believe in the democratic principles for the preservation of which America is now arming, that must be brought into line, even if it calls for legislation to do so.

The United Automobile Workers have shown that it can be done without this legislation. Other unions, if their members would but practice the same democracy they talk, could do the same.

Porters, Auxiliary Hear Brotherhood Officials

Three national officers of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters were present to witness installation ceremonies for officers of the Ladies Auxiliary, Memphis Division, Thursday afternoon of last week at the Masonic Temple, Fourth near Beale Avenue. They were E. J. Bradley, third International vice-president; T. D. McNeal, International Field Organizer, and Mrs. Mae Dailey, second International vice president of the Ladies Auxiliary, all of St. Louis, Mo.

The local auxiliary, for more than a year inactive, was reorganized during the summer months under the leadership of the following officers:

Mrs. H. F. Patton, president; Mrs. Tom Nesbit, vice president; Mrs. William Glover, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. C. C. Rogers, chaplain.

Members of the executive board are Mrs. E. Hunter, chairman; Mrs. Glover, Mrs. P. S. Smith, Mrs. Rogers, Mrs. H. Fletcher, Mrs L. Goodloe, and Mrs. William Smith.

INSPIRING TALKS BY VISITORS

Installation services got underway around three o'clock, and continued through the greater period of the afternoon. Talks from the national officers proved inspiring and revealing to the large audience. Mr. Bradley reviewed the latest development within the Brotherhood circles, announcing that M. P. Webster, first International vice president of the Brotherhood, was appointed by President Roosevelt to the Fair Employment Practice Committee. "This is perhaps the most important committee set up by the Federal Government Negroes have ever been a member of and is the first time Negroes have ever had the opportunity actually to discuss the policy of the government, and formulate policies that both white and Negro citizens must observe," the visiting officers pointed out.

The Memphis division includes approximately sixty active members Charles Cooper, 801 Cella, secretary-treasurer, pointed out. Purpose of the Ladies Auxiliary is to serve as the official entertaining organization, Mr. Cooper added.

Founded on August 25, 1925, the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters has developed into one of the most influential labor organizations in the country. Its present leader is Attorney Phillip Randolph, of New York City, whose dynamic personality and aggressive leadership have helped the Brotherhood win great prestige in the high council of labor circles.

It is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and has jurisdiction of both sleeping car porters and train porters.

Mr. Bradley and Ashley L. Totten, of New York City, were associated with the Brotherhood at the time it first developed into a national organization. These two porters, Mr. Bradley, in St. Louis, and Mr. Totten, in the East, were working almost simultaneously with porters in their respective sections, and out of their efforts the idea of a national organization was conceived. Mr. Bradley has pioneered in the southwestern division, and is still most active in that section. Mr. Totten is secretary of the Brotherhood.

Victories won by the Brotherhood include shorter hours, higher pay, and official recognition of porters by railroad company as railroad workers.

The Brotherhood meets biennially, their last meeting having been held in New York City. Noted guest speakers at that session included Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, United States Senator Wagner, prominent labor expert in the nation's Congress, and Mayor LaGuardia of New York City. St. Louis, Mo. will be the scene of the 1942 convention.

CHICAGO DEFENDER

October 25, 1943

PORTERS "ALL-OUT" FOR RE-ELECTION OF MAYOR LaGUARDIA

By FRANK BYRD

NEW YORK, Oct. 23—Mayor LaGuardia scored one of his biggest campaign victories today when the powerful Pullman Porter's Union, headed by A. Philip Randolph, came to his aid. Mr. Randolph who is out of town on urgent union business, pledged the Mayor his full support before leaving and, in an interview with newspapermen this morning, Thomas E. Patterson, a high-ranking official of the union declared:

"We are primarily a non-partisan group but we're doing everything we can for LaGuardia. His attitude toward labor has at all times been fair and co-operative, not only to this union but to all other labor unions. Of the two candidates, we feel that he is by far the best man."

DOCK WORKERS FOLLOW SUIT

Close on the heels of this major victory, LaGuardia camp-followers were even more pleased to learn that the majority of Negro longshoremen and dock-workers through their CIO and A. F. L. representatives, had fully endorsed the Mayor for re-election. Union spokesmen from the LeHigh Valley, New York Central and Lackawana Railroad Docks, most of whose Negro workers are Harlem and Brooklyn residents, pledged their loyalty to the LaGuardia forces.

"He made it possible for us to work," Charles Phinizy of the New Jersey Central CIO Local stated. "Before he was elected, racketeers bossed both the New York and New Jersey waterfronts. Strong-arm squads hung around all places where workers shaped in. If you kicked back enough of your pay, all right; if not, you didn't work. Even then it was tough on colored freight-handlers. The Irish and Italians got most of the work. Negroes had to take what was left. LaGuardia helped to change all that. Now, when you are hired, you get a work-number and work according to your seniority. It makes a lot of difference. That's why he's O. K. with us."

O'DWYER, NEW NAME TO HARLEM

The name of the Democratic candidate for Mayor, William O'Dwyer, is a name new to Harlem. Two newspapermen making a poll for a metropolitan daily stood near the entrance to the subway at the corner of 135th and Lenox avenue.

"What do you thin[illegible] O'Dwyer" they asked a man [illegible]

"O'Dwyer"? th[illegible] looking puzzled.

"Well, La[illegible]

"Oh, LaGu[illegible] said, not looking pu[illegible]

That, political observers believers belive, is the answer to what the name O'Dwyer means in Harlem.

PITTSBURGH COURIER

Oct[illegible] 1943

athletic official accompan[illegible] football team here to win over [illegible] ay related the inside story of [illegible]

[illegible] tion was removed on [illegible] that he advocated racial co[illegible] education. The petition was [illegible] left with a Talmadge aide.

RANDOLPH PUTS LEADERS ON SPOT; NOTHING IS DONE

BULLETIN SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 23—Race discrimination on the part of a union is an "unrelieved tragedy," Mark Ethridge, Louisville newspaper editor and chairman of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice told the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, as he made a plea that labor "abolish all the devices of constitution and ritual" which now bar Negroes and other minority groups from the opportunity to work.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 23—The American Federation of Labor, at its convention last Tuesday, brought into the open the fight within its ranks over race discrimination practiced by some of its affiliates controlling training and employment for national defense production.

The outburst came after the resolutions committee had recommended action identical with that taken at the New Orleans convention last year, namely, "that affiliated national and international unions be requested to give the most sincere consideration to policies which will assist to eliminate any tendency to discriminate against workmen because of race, color or creed."

A. Philip Randolph and Milton P. Webster of the Brotherhood of

(Continued on Page 4, Col. 5)

AFRO-AMERICAN

October 25, 1943

of Hitlerism and Fascism is but the racial ideology of prejudiced Americans. Once the Nazi dictator

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

By JAMES H. HOGANS

WONDERFUL! FATHER

Whether or not you believe in the precepts and principles of Father Divine, you will have to admit that there is a certain degree of virtue to some of them.

For instance, he gives a new interpretation to he old Mosaic law, "Thou shall not steal," by insisting that he who breaks that commandment make proper restitution for it.

An example of that was brought to the attention of the Pullman Company recently when a Divine convert remitted a dollar for a towel which she had snitched while traveling on one of its cars.

In a letter to the company, the remorseful disci[illegible] wrote:

"In the yea[illegible] while en route from L[illegible]eles east, I took a tow[illegible] the Pullman car in which I was riding. Being [illegible] follower now of Father Divine, wh[illegible] teaches us to be honest, pay all old bills and return all stolen goods or pay the equivalent for them, please find enclosed $1 for the towel."

The letter was sent by a Los Angeles woman whose name is now, she says, Miss Blessed Abundance.

The Pullman Company no doubt doesn't take much stock in the doings of the little cult leader, but it's a sure bet that it would appreciate a greater number of his converts among its patrons in the matter of linen, since its losses in that particular property run into many thousands yearly.

* * *

PEACE! FATHER

While on the subject of Father Divine, it might be added that his "Peace" exhortations might be followed with profit by some of the dining car union leaders.

In a circular letter to members of Local 370, Chester A. Eaton, New England representative, charges T. A. Jackson, president of the union, with "blitzkrieging" certain candidates for office in the organization.

The controversy, it seems, rages around the job of system chairman for the New York Central's branch of the union, which is a paid job and is now held by Mr. Jackson.

Mr. Eaton says that Dudley Washington, a candidate for the office, will make a better representative for that specific job. He asserts that Candidate Washington not only is better qualified, but he will serve the interests of the men more sincerely.

In comparing the ability and honesty of the two men, he states:

"President Jackson is a good dues collector and contact man, but he will never develop sufficiently to police and negotiate (working) agreements."

From that statement it is obvious that there is war between the two union leaders.

* * *

APPEALS TO PRESIDENT

Although dining car employees voted overwhelmingly in the recent railroad workers' strike vote, [illegible] they were not certified by [illegible] to 43 for strike.

"For reasons unk[illegible] to us, we were not [illegible] before your fact-finding committee as other railroad organizations, who had taken similar steps. We feel that by leaving us at the mercy of the railroads, such action is discriminatory.

"In view of the fact that, for more than two years, disregard of our condition has been to no avail, we respectfully request that Your Excellency find it possible to advise your fact-finding committee to include us in its general and specific investigation."

Mr. Mason explained [illegible] that the President had received his letter and that the answer was quite satisfactory.

* * *

RED CAPS CERTIFIED

Following a conference with the New Haven Railroad by a representative of the Railroad Mediation Board and red cap union officials last week, William H. Brown, New England system chairman, announced that the red caps of the New Haven system would be included in the President's fact-finding committee's recommendations.

RANDOLPH PUTS LEADERS ON SPOT

(Continued from Page 1)

Sleeping Car Porters had sought the establishment of a committee to investigate discrimination.

Mr. Randolph, in a speech which evoked great cheers, said that colored workers in the Ford factory during the strike there "did not see why they should sign up with the A. F. of L. when the A. F. of L. admits it cannot do anything to remove discrimination practiced by some of its internationals."

He called upon John P. Frey, head of the A. F. of L. Metal Trades Department, who read the report of the resolutions committee, to give "a statement to the American public on the exclusion of the Negro from shipyards." He asked Harvey W. Brown, president of the International Association of Machinists, to make a statement on "discrimination against Negroes" in his union.

DEFENDS A. F. OF L. IN TREATMENT OF RACE

He mentioned also the carpenters and painters, and added that something ought to be done about other organizations which were "defying the Executive order of President Roosevelt against discrimination in national defense work."

Mr. Frey deplored Mr. Randolph's speech, saying he "wouldn't be surprised if the indictment finds its way into pamphlet form and is distributed through those sections where prejudice is greatest, making our tosk of organization ten thousand times more difficult than in the past."

"If there is any institution in the United States to which the colored race owes more than any other it is this American Federation Labor," Mr. Frey declared.

Matthew Woll, chairman of the resolutions committee, charged that the purpose of the Randolph-Webster resolution was "to infringe upon the jurisdictional rights of our various national and international unions in the matter of race discrimination" and that most of them already had adjusted their constitutions to remove discrimination.

GREEN PROMISES TO REMOVE BIAS OFFICIALS

William Green, A. F. of L. president, said that Mr. Randolph was indicting the A. F. of L. on the ground that it "refused to take in Negroes," but the Ford case, he added, was "an instance when we were begging them to come in."

If any official of a national union, chartered directly by the A. F. of L. was found discriminating against colored workers, Mr. Green said, "I'll remove him."

William L. Hutcheson, president of the Carpententers Union, and several other speakers denounced Randolph's speech, but the Porters' president retorted that he could substantiate every statement he had made and did no need "Delegate Hutcheson to tell me what to do about this resolution."

In an address preceding the resolution committee report, Mark Ethridge, chairman of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, cited instances of discrimination against colored workers in defense industries and warned that "we can't make minorities the whipping boys of our defense program."

MEMPHIS WORLD
AMERICA'S STANDARD RACE JOURNAL
MEMPHIS, TENNESSEE, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1941

The Globe Trotter

By Cliff Mackay

Two Labor Stories

TWO LABOR STORIES dealing with Negroes appeared in the news last week. One concerned the attitude of the American Federation of Labor toward black workers, the second came in the form of a resolution passed by one of the largest units in the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

The wide divergence of opinion expressed in these stories is typical of the seemingly insurmountable gap between the philosophy and ideologies of these two branches of organized labor.

Irritating to say the least was the statement of one Harry O'Reilly, regional director of the AFL in Chicago. Mr. O'Reilly is quoted as telling a committee from the Chicago NAACP branch: "I consider the Negro an evil rather than an asset to organized labor. I don't believe all of this discrimination exists against the Negro; if it does, it is the Negro's fault and also his fight."

KNOWS IT EXISTS

Mr. O'Reilly being affiliated with the American Federation of Labor knows that discrimination does exist against Negro workers, no matter how much he chooses to play the ostrich and hide his head against the facts that are all around him. He could not be affiliated with the AFL, the greatest supporters of this economic warfare against black folk and not know it.

No single organization has contributed so much to the "freezing out" of black workers as the American Federation of Labor. And that this organization even at this late day stubbornly refuses to see the "light" was shown during the recent Seattle national convention when the convention refused to even consider lowering the "white only" barriers to membership in the face of increasing public opinion against this anti-democratic stand.

Mr. O'Reilly no doubt was in the convention hall when A. Phillip Randolph, president of the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, the only all-Negro AFL affiliate, made his brave, but entirely futile fight to break down these barriers, through which the AFL machinists, shipyard workers, painters, metal trades unions and more than 118 other affiliated brotherhoods put the "squeeze play" on Negro workers.

AGAINST DEMOCRACY

From the tone of his Chicago statement, he no doubt helped to vote down Mr. Randolph's plea that democracy be reinstated in this wing of the American labor movement.

In direct contrast to the anti-Negro position the AFL has plainly shown it is so determined to maintain was the action of the International Executive Board of the United Automobile Workers one of the strongest affiliates of the Congress of Industrial Organization.

For years Negroes had pleaded in vain for membership in the craft unions the AFL started in the auto industry, then the United Automobile Workers came along and accepted all who were workers, no matter what color their skin chanced to be.

Though this union would take in members, some of the automobile manufacturers were not quite so democratic. So last week the union went on record as censuring these industrialists, now loaded down with government contracts to build weapons to insure the perpetuation of "democracy" in the world.

RAP DISCRIMINATION

The resolution, written in unmistakable language demanded an end to discrimination against Negroes in plants holding contracts with the union.

It was pointed out that curtailment of automobile production would "seriously aggravate the problem of the Negro worker, and that it would be hard, because of his race, for this class of worker to get transferred from non-defense to defense work."

The resolution passed without a dissenting vote by the executive board resolved that all plant managements "covered by UAW-CIO contracts be immediately notified that any further racial discrimination will not be tolerated; that the international president appoint a committee to make available reports on the problems of Negro workers; that when dissension occurs among Negro and white workers, we recommend that the local union involved establish a joint committee to make a summary and investigation and report to the regional director and national committee."

BACK PRESIDENTIAL ORDER

The United Automobile Workers, it can plainly be seen, are anxious and willing to comply with the President's Executive Order that there be no discrimination in national defense work.

Most of the American Federation of Labor Unions and several of the CIO unions along with a rapidly diminishing number of industrialists still choose to defy the president.

It is this small group, who by their actions say they do not believe in the democratic principles for the preservation of which America is now arming, that must be brought into line, even if it calls for legislation to do so.

The United Automobile Workers have shown that it can be done without this legislation. Other unions, if their members would but practice the same democracy they talk, could do the same.

Porters, Auxiliary Hear Brotherhood Officials

Three national officers of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters were present to witness installation ceremonies for officers of the Ladies Auxiliary, Memphis Division, Thursday afternoon of last week at the Masonic Temple, Fourth near Beale Avenue. They were E. J. Bradley, third International vice-president; T. D. McNeal, International Field Organizer, and Mrs. Mae Dailey, second International vice president of the Ladies Auxiliary, all of St. Louis, Mo.

The local auxiliary, for more than a year inactive, was reorganized during the summer months under the leadership of the following officers:

Mrs. H. F. Patton, president; Mrs. Tom Nesbit, vice president; Mrs. William Glover, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. C. C. Rogers, chaplain.

Members of the executive board are Mrs. E. Hunter, chairman; Mrs. Glover, Mrs. P. S. Smith, Mrs. Rogers, Mrs. H. Fletcher, Mrs L. Goodloe, and Mrs. William Smith.

INSPIRING TALKS BY VISITORS

Installation services got underway around three o'clock, and continued through the greater period of the afternoon. Talks from the national officers proved inspiring and revealing to the large audience. Mr. Bradley reviewed the latest development within the Brotherhood circles, announcing that M. P. Webster, first International vice president of the Brotherhood, was appointed by President Roosevelt to the Fair Employment Practice Committee.

"This is perhaps the most important committee set up by the Federal Government Negroes have ever been a member of and is the first time Negroes have ever had the opportunity actually to discuss the policy of the government, and formulate policies that both white and Negro citizens must observe," the visiting officers pointed out.

The Memphis division includes approximately sixty active members Charles Cooper, 801 Cella, secrerary-treasurer, pointed out. Purpose of the Ladies Auxiliary is to serve as the official entertaining organization, Mr. Cooper added.

Founded on August 25, 1925, the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters has developed into one of the most influential labor organizations in the country. Its present leader is Attorney Phillip Randolph, of New York City, whose dynamic personality and aggressive leadership have helped the Brotherhood win great prestige in the high council of labor circles.

It is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and has jurisdiction of both sleeping car porters and train porters.

Mr. Bradley and Ashley, L. Totten, of New York City, were associated with the Brotherhood at the time it first developed into a national organization. These two porters, Mr. Bradley, in St. Louis, and Mr. Totten, in the East, were working almost simultaneously with porters in their respective sections, and out of their efforts the idea of a national organization was conceived. Mr. Bradley has pioneered in the southwestern division, and is still most active in that section. Mr. Totten is secretary of the Brotherhood.

Victories won by the Brotherhood include shorter hours, higher pay, and official recognition of porters by railroad company as railroad workers.

The Brotherhood meets biennially, their last meeting having been held in New York City. Noted guest speakers at that session included Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, United States Senator Wagner, prominent labor expert in the nation's Congress, and Mayor LaGuardia of New York City. St. Louis, Mo. will be the scene of the 1942 convention.

[illegible] participants to be considered by the President's fact-finding committee.

In addition to protesting to the board and President William Green of the A.F. of L., of which the dining car union is an affiliate, Claude H. Mason, secretary of Local 370, wrote a letter to President Roosevelt as follows:

"Dining Car Employees' Union, Local 370, a member of the Joint Council of Dining Car Employees, affiliated with the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America, by reason of economic conditions in respect to wages and working conditions on the railroads, took the strike vote which was 9,400

FORT WORTH MIND

November 8, 1941

CHICAGO DEFENDER

November 8, 1941

Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters

OAKLAND, Calif.—Two thousand Negroes jammed the Municipal auditorium in Oakland and heard A. Philip Randolph, International President of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and leader of the famous "March on Washington" movement for jobs and justice for Negroes, tell that the fate of the Negro is tied up with the fate of America.

He said, "Negroes must gird to fight for democracy on two fronts. They must fight to win and preserve democracy in America and fight to help save democracy in the world today. If Hitler wins," he continued, "the fight by minority groups, including the Negro, for justice, freedom and their democratic rights will be impossible and at an end. In the Nazi world, all movements that dissent from and protest against the established decree of the totalitarian state and dictator, are ruthlessly and arbitrarily crushed and outlawed. Only within the framework of the democratic order of society can the Negro, who is yet to win the full stature of constitutional citizenship, fight for equality of opportunity and his rightful place in the sun,' observed the militant leader of New York.

If America goes down, the Negro goes down, and if the democracies go down under the attacks of Hitler and Hitlerism, America cannot remain secure, free and independent—as a republic.

M. P. Webster, First International Vice President of the Brotherhood and member of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee, described and analyzed the President's Executive Order and the purpose, program and procedure of the FEP, indicating the great potentialities of the committee to help advance the economic well-being of the Negro people, but warned that a militant and informed Negro public opinion must always be kept behind the committee to see to it that the President's Executiv Order is properly policed.

Mr. Webster pointed out the u fairness of the policy of wholess condemnation of the A. F. of L. f discriminations of National and I ternational Unions affiliated w it. He observed that it was equiv lent to condemning the Fede Government for discriminati against Negroes in Georgia, but scored the unions in the A. F. of that maintain the color bar agai the Negro and urged a relentl fight against this evil.

The meeting was presided over C. L. Dellums, Fourth Internatio Vice President and Supervisor the Pacific Coast, who gave a brie history of the fight of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and the struggles of the American labor movement for recognition and economic status and power.

Pittsburgh Courier

November 8, 1941

A.F.L. GREEN

BY HORACE R. CAYTON

POWERLESS TO AID RACE WORKERS—WE MUST BE MILITANT

THE AFL convention proved a number of points this column has been stating for a long time. It should be obvious to every one that William Green does not want to do anything about discrimination in the Federation and couldn't, even if he wished. Hutcheson of the carpenters' union and the other big shot presidents of the powerful national and international unions run the show and Green dances to their music. The lesson to be learned from this is that Negroes in their fight for union participation should begin to address their attention to the presidents of these autonomous bodies and stop depending upon and trying to elicit empty promises and commitments from Green. Get this straight—he is only the office boy for the big fellows who really manipulate the AFL.

Mr. Cayton

In the second place the Negro should be convinced that there is no hope of obtaining concessions from the Federation, or its component unions, by making moral appeals. In a time such as this, when the country is making every effort to marshal its economic power to protect the institution of democracy, these unscrupulous labor leaders are unwilling to relax, even temporarily, their barriers against Negroes. No moral persuasion within the Federation itself will be potent enough to make these international unions change their point of view.

MUST DEVELOP MILITANT OPINION

What course then can the Negro follow to force open these closed doors? Two approaches seem possible to me. First there is the hope of some governmental action. This however will come about only when the Negro public is aroused to such an extent that the administration is forced to take action in order to maintain Negro morale. Already some action has been taken and that's all to the good, however, the administration is lukewarm in its attitude and the few palative measures they have taken certainly have not accomplished much.

THE hearings on the west coast, for example, are good but no one should believe for a moment that putting the head of the machinist union on the stand to testify will make his union change their constitution and take out the color bar. The government will have to take much firmer steps than these and sponsor legislation with teeth to get any results. They won't do that until the masses of Negroes are simply up in arms and that's the first task—to develop a militant Negro public opinion.

WHITE SUPPORT IS NECESSARY

The second method of working on this problem is to mobilize as much favorable white public opinion as possible. Many white persons don't know that Negroes are being shut out of most all of the defense work. Those few who are aware of the problem for the most part believe that the appointment of the Fair Employment Practices Committee took care of the situation.

IT IS hard for us to get our problems before the masses of white persons, but if we do it will be a powerful moral force to direct against the unions that are already suffering from "a bad press." The Negro is going to have to find some method of cutting through and presenting his case to the reading public by some dramatic action.

NEED TO ORGANIZE FOR MASS ACTION

Previously this column has proposed that the Negro craftsmen who are segregated and discriminated against by such unions as the carpenters and plumbers, for example, should picket the national conventions of those unions and thus bring to the attention of the American public what they are doin . To do this of course it will be necessary to get these men together in some sort of organization to perfect plans and to raise the necessary money. Again as with similar plans for social action the Negro is checkmated by the fact that he has no organization and no money and apparently no method of getting together to form an organization or raise money.

ONE hope is the formation of local groups such as the Consolidated Trades Organization in Chicago. If a number of these local groups were formed they in turn could get in touch with others and finance delegates to form a national organization of Negro AFL trade unionist.

THE A.F. OF L. CONVENTION

The American Federation of Labor had a splendid chance, at its Seattle convention, to remove the stigma of discrimination that has blemished its reputation for more than half a century. Instead the convention went through its annual trapeze acts, applauded thunderously A. Philip Randolph's indictments of Jim Crow unions, then, turned down overwhelmingly a proposal for an official investigation of the powerful international and local unions charged with discrimination against Negroes.

With affidavit after affidavit to substantiate every charge, Mr. Randolph forlornly pleaded for the appointment of a committee to study the evidence and act on the problem. He avoided generalities and blanket indictments. He was specific, definite and emphatic as he singled out the guilty AFL locals.

He pointed an accusing finger to the Machinists union in Seattle, Wash., to the Metal Trades Division in Tampa, Fla., to the Carpenters union in Milan, Tenn., to Local 72 of the Boilermakers in Portland, Ore., to AFL unions in St. Louis, Mo., to the opposition to Negro plasterers, painters and shipyard workers in Kansas City, Mo., Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and in New Orleans, La. All of these unions bar Negroes from their ranks and prevent them from being hired by companies that have expressed written willingness to employ them. But the convention took no action. It denounced Hitler and Hitlerism, reaffirmed its faith in democratic institutions and democratic tenets, endorsed President Roosevelt's foreign policy, barred convicts from central bodies of the Federation, attended to routine business, and adjourned.

Although Mr. Randolph pointed out how difficult it was for the public to distinguish between the official attitude of the Federation and the policies of its affiliates, his plea for the spread of democratic gospel in AFL ranks went unheeded. In the light of these facts one is led to the inevitable conclusion that there is no appreciable distinction in attitudes between the grand moguls of the American Federation of Labor and their anti-Negro affiliates. The convention was willing to excoriate, denounce Nazism abroad, but it utilized all manner of devices to prevent an official condemnation of Hitlerism in its own ranks.

If, instead of asking for an examination of the charges against prejudiced unions, Mr. Randolph had insisted that the dead rats be removed from under the AFL house, he probably would have been hissed off the speakers' platform or thrown out the convention. For most of the delegates were determined not to disturb the discriminatory policy of the unions in question. How long, O Lord! must Negro labor associate itself with these brazen hypocrites who preach democracy and practice Nazism?

NATION-WIDE RAIL STRIKE

A. Phillip Randolph says race brotherhoods parleying for 30 percent settlement

A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, told the TRIBUNE, in an exclusive statement Friday evening, that Negro brotherhoods of the railway companies will participate in the nation-wide railway strike if the stop work order, called for Dec. 5, is carried out.

On the heels of announcement from Chicago that railway brotherhoods had flatly rejected the terms of President Roosevelt's emergency fact-finding board, [illegible] wage increase [illegible], Randolph was questioned at the Clark Hotel where he is stopping until tomorrow.

The Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters is negotiating for the same settlement, a 30-per cent wage increase, that the other railway brotherhoods are demanding, Randolph stated. Hopes are held out by him that the Presidential Emergency Board will be able to more satisfactorily settle the issue, but if not "[illegible]ral result of unsuccessful negotiations" will be seen. He referred to the strike order authorized by brotherhood members Sept. 5. The Brotherhood of Dining Car Waiters will doubtless go out too, Randolph declared.

LOS ANGELES TRIBUNE

November 9, 1941

Little pity for the AFL

There's no doubt about it, the labor movement in the United States is in grave danger of being shattered by the Government with the tired acceptance of a people beaten down by anti-labor propaganda and disgusted with the abuses of the privilege and power of Labor, in the administrative departments, itself.

Westbrook Pegler, whose sincerity we hesitate to doubt, but whose opportunism sometimes appears too good to be true, has done his work well. Regular doses of the vitriol which flows from the pen of the pale George Schuyler, are calculated to innoculate the system against many aspects of the labor question, and in most instances against the entire movement. Chameleon-like, President Roosevelt, once Labor's bosom friend, has discovered the movement to be a viper in the Administrative bosom, and is turning from it to his one-time foes who are with him, for now, on the subject of U. S. entry into the overseas war, All this is fairly obvious, yet, somehow one is shocked to read among the editorials of the Los Angeles Times, open argument for the abolition of the labor movement. . although why anyone, particularly ourselves, should be so naive as to be surprised at anything smacking of the unprogressive in the Times, we can't herein say.

As a race which is synonymously radical, being necessarily dissatisfied with the status quo, the Negro must feel some concern in any proposal to do away with progressive reforms represented by labor unions and collective bargaining. However, in his heart, the Negro can feel no sympathy with one arm of the Labor movement, namely the American Federation of Labor.

There is nothing good to be said for the AFL on the subject of its race relations. It's history is one of inspired snobbery against the Negro worker, a snobbery which originates, not in the ranks of the white workers, but in the executive councils; and the higher up one goes, the closer one gets to William Green, AFL president; the more pronounced this snobbery, with its vicious effects of keeping Negroes out of trades, becomes.

OOne marvels at the patience of A. Philip Randolph, head of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, in his quietly determined struggle with the union to which his group must, for its best interest, remain affiliated, all the while despising the company with which it must associate. To benefit from the advantage of Alliance with the larger and more wealthy brotherhoods of the railway companies, the Sleeping Car Porters must stay with the AFL, Randolph states.

Queried here recently as to what is accountable for the malignant growth and flowering of prejudice and jim crow in the American Federation of Labor, Randolph replied with subtle eloquence, that the same elements in American citizenry which support separate churches, Young Men and Women Christian associations head the AFL. Sole remedy seen before him is the gradual elimination of this attitude through continued contact with Negroes and consequent education.

For Randolph's sake only, then, do we suffic the impulse to gloat over the fix organized labor, particularly the AFL, finds itself in at present.

Sketch of FEPC work issued in U. S. pamphlet

WASHINGTON — How President Roosevelt and the Office of Production Management are seeking to secure full participation of all American minority groups in the national defense program is explained in a 19-page pamphlet, MINORITIES in DEFENSE released today by the Labor Division of OPM.

The pamphlet outlines steps taken since July 12, 1940, to end defense discrimination, and describes the functions and duties of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, the Negro Employment and Training Branch, and the Minority Groups Branch of the Labor Division of OPM.

According to the pamphlet, the Committee on Fair Employment Practice receives all complaints of defense discrimination and investigates them through the field staffs of the Negro Employment and Training, and the Minority Groups Branch of OPM. If neither Branch is able to adjust a complaint, the case is then certified to the COFEP for further action and redress.

In addition to serving as a Board of Appeals to the two OPM Branches, the Committee (1) deals with the problem of discrimination in government service; (2, maintains contact with contracting agencies of the government concerning enforcment of non-discrimination clauses in defense contracts; (3) establishes contact with state and local agencies in discrimination in employment and coordinates their programs, and (4) maintains contacts with minorities organizations and with other organizations and key individuals.

All complaints of racial or minority discrimination should be addressed to Lawrence W. Cramer, Executive Secretary of the Committee, Social Security Bldg. Washington, D. C. although primary investigations and employer contacts are made by field representatives of the two OPM Branches.

HARLEM ILLS LAID TO ECONOMIC LOSS

Conference on Remedial Steps for Crime There Draws Five Times Number Expected

NEGROES DENY RACE ISSUE

Representative Group to Be Named to Provide Program for Discussion Later

An outpouring of five times as many persons as had been expected jammed Harlem Court yesterday afternoon to discuss with intense interest the conditions that prevail in Harlem and possible remedies for them. More than 200 persons answered the call of the Social Service Bureau of the Magistrate's Courts, which had summoned the emergency meeting.

In two hours of debate representatives of many walks of life—city magistrates, police and parole officials, social workers, school principals and teachers, lawyers, business men, representatives of large real estate interests, and individuals who described themselves as "plain working people"—cast light on many aspects of the complex problem.

Poverty, unemployment, job discrimination against Negroes, lack of housing, lack of proper educational and recreational facilities, inadequate health and hospital arrangements were blamed by most of the speakers for the ills that admittedly exist. Several Negro speakers avowed their conviction that the situation was not fundamentally a race problem, but an economic one.

Remedial Program Planned

At the close of the discussion, which was conducted on a high plane of serious, intelligent effort to get at the roots of the matter, although a few sparks were thrown off when speakers clashed on one or two points, the meeting voted to authorize the appointment of a representative committee to study the matter further and formulate a remedial program for submission to a later meeting.

Magistrates Anna M. Kross, Edgar Bromberger and Raphael R. Murphy, and Dr. Robert W. Searle, executive director of the Social Service Bureau, were authorized to select the membership of the committee. Dr. Searle said after the meeting that it would be a day or two before the names of the members could be announced.

In calling the meeting to order, Dr. Searle said that it was unfortunate that "first page publicity" had given the public the impression that the problem was chiefly one for the police to handle. He said that those familiar with the Magistrate's courts knew that case after case came before them in which "the whole community is accomplice to the crime."

He offered two main objectives to the meeting with the recommendation that the discussion be centered about them: how to make the city at large aware of the basic nature of the problem, and secondly, the consideration of what could and should be done with the resources available to meet it.

Hopes Extra Police Stay

Magistrate Kross said that the problem at root was "not due to the color question," but was a "social and economic one, created by lacks of many kinds." She expressed hope that the extra detail of police sent to Harlem last week after Mayor La Guardia had conceded that conditions there were bad would remain there permanently.

Anna E. Lawson, principal of junior high school 81, at 212 West 120th Street, said that educators in Harlem had "terrific handicaps" to fight against.

"I have in my school 1,600 girls, and 1,400 of them are as fine and decent and upstanding girls as any in the city," she said. [illegible] ness in Harlem should stay out of Harlem." He said that many white men with money visited Harlem "to demoralize our women, our boys and our men." His statement drew considerable applause from the audience.

Colonel Leonold Philipp of 421 West 159th Street, president of the Uptown Chamber of Commerce, took heated exception to some of Mr. Fernandez's remarks, which he took as a reflection on the white business men of Harlem. He charged that it was "firebrands like this man who disrupt the friendly feelings between races."

Several shouts of protest came from the audience and Dr. Searle instructed Colonel Philipp that he could not countenance personalities in the discussion. Dr. Searle explained that Mr. Fernandez had not criticized all white business men in Harlem, but only certain ones he had accused of illegalities.

Colonel Philipp replied that the white business men of Harlem had been aware for some time of the conditions existing in the community and had been making plans that they hoped would relieve matters. He said that it was unfair to blame the white business men in Harlem "for everything."

Magistrate Bromberger said that he was confident all who were present would agree that the use of the term "crime wave" was unfair to Harlem and that "it just [illegible] and attracted great pub[illegible] He said that one of [illegible] problems [illegible]

U. S. DANCERS BACK FROM SOUTH AMERICAN TOUR

Members of the American Ballet Caravan arriving here yesterday on the Grace liner Santa Paula.

Thirty-seven members of the American Ballet Caravan, which is believed to be the first all-American ballet group to tour South America, returned yesterday on the Grace liner Santa Paula.

During their five-month visit they gave a total of ninety performances, appearing in Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay, Chile, Peru, Colombia and Venezuela.

The group was accompanied by Michael Horowitz, its director, and Robert Avray, stage manager. Commenting on the reaction of South American audiences, Mr. Avray said:

"They didn't believe that there were any American ballet dancers and were surprised to find the members of our group really were American.

"I believe that such visits as ours do a great deal to improve our relations with South America. South America used to get all its culture from Europe, but now is beginning to appreciate North American culture."

The average age of the twenty-three women and fourteen men in the ballet is 21.

Also aboard the Santa Paula were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Perry Weimer. They said they traveled nearly 100,000 miles in South America, taking 65,000 feet of motion pictures.

CRIME CONDITIONS LAID TO BAD HOUSING

Isaacs Describes Overcrowding and Other Evils There

Manhattan Borough President Stanley Isaacs joined the growing list of persons who have become convinced that the recent crime wave in Harlem is not a race problem but one of bad housing conditions.

At a meeting of the Citizens Housing Council of New York at the City Club, 55 West Forty-fourth Street, Mr. Isaacs described the overcrowding in Harlem, the high rents and the widespread unemployment. It is a situation that somehow must be relieved, he said.

Mr. Isaacs's topic was "Housing Is Everybody's Business." He declared that this was true "because we have to make this democracy work and all citizens of it suffer from bad housing."

A democracy cannot be successful, he said, unless its people have decent homes and a reasonable amount of freedom from fear and want. There is no doubt, he added, that poor housing promotes crime and disease and it raises tremendously the cost of police and fire protection and the number of free [illegible]

PRESSURE PLANNED BY HARLEM GROUP

People's Committee Formed to Strive for Jobs, New Negro Councilman Says

PICKETING IS PROJECTED

Powell Reveals Strategy for Drive on City Colleges and Telephone Company

Working on the theory that crime in Harlem is due almost entirely to economic conditions, the Rev. Adam Clayton Powell, newly elected Negro Councilman, announced yesterday formation of a People's Committee which will attempt to bring together the Negroes and Puerto Ricans in the area and use their organized strength to get jobs for them.

The organization, he said, would be "nonpartisan and nonpolitical," but he pointed out that "with about 350,000 Negroes in Harlem there is no reason why we can't get 150,000 votes." He made no secret of the fact that political pressure would be tried to "win concessions for Negroes and other minorities."

Thus far only the officers of the People's Committee have been named. Mr. Powell is chairman, Joseph E. Ford is executive secretary, Roi Ottley is director of publicity and Mrs. Chester Chinn is treasurer.

Mr. Powell explained in his study in the Abyssinian Baptist Church, of which he is pastor, that the committee had developed from the People's Committee to elect Powell for Councilman.

Voting Instructions

"Did you notice," he asked, "that in Harlem only 12 per cent of the P. R. ballots were thrown out, while the percentage of voided ballots in the rest of the city was 19 per cent? That was because we distributed 200,000 sample ballots and instructed people to vote "bullet ballots."

"For you?" he was asked.

"Of course," he replied. "The next time we'll teach them to vote for two or three persons, maybe. It's a matter of education."

Mr. Powell said his church had 9,120 dues-paying members and 11,000 enrolled. He is 33 years old and a forceful speaker.

As an example of how the committee intended to use its strength, Mr. Powell explained how he planned to persuade the Board of Higher Education to [illegible] on the staff of the four city colleges.

"Right now," he said, "there are 1,400 persons on the city college faculties. There is a payroll of about $4,000,000. But there are no Negroes on these faculties. The day after I'm sworn in at the Council there are going to be pickets outside the offices of the Board of Higher Education."

"Aren't you going to discuss the matter at the Council?" he was asked.

"Naturally," he replied, "I'll raise a ruckus in the Council, but I think it will look better with two or three thousand people crowding around Park Avenue and Sixty-eighth Street."

Mr. Powell has not yet figured out exactly how to bring pressure to bear on the Police Department to "wipe out discrimination against Negroes." At present, he said, Negroes are used for the most part only at the West 123d Street and West 135th Street stations.

Telephone Jobs

Mr. Powell has completed a plan for getting Negroes jobs with the [illegible]

Times 11/15/41

Letters to The Times

Harlem Seen as a Symbol

Pearl Buck Holds Unrest Is a Growing Revolt Against Racial Prejudice

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK TIMES:

Your editorial of Nov. 12, "The Other Side of Harlem," denies the basic cause for the situation in our country of which the new manifestation of crime in Harlem is only a symptom slight enough for what it signifies. Nor are the constructive measures proposed sufficient. It would be impossible for any accumulation of social welfare work to solve the situation which produces crime in Harlem. We all know that merely to make arrests and impose jail sentences can be nothing but an emergency measure and one which promises no fundamental improvement for the future. But equally palliative are the efforts of welfare workers on the basis upon which they are now organized.

The reason why colored Americans are compelled to live in ghettos, where they are helpless against high rents and miserable housing, is the segregation to which race prejudice compels them. Race prejudice compels colored people to take what work they can get because there are so many jobs Negroes cannot get. Race prejudice makes and keeps Negroes' wages low because some labor unions will not admit colored labor on the same basis as white labor. Race prejudice and race prejudice alone is the root of the plight of people in greater and lesser Harlems all over our country.

Hope Becoming Despair

As a result of the effects of race prejudice a very serious conviction is gradually becoming settled in the minds of colored Americans all over our country. They are coming to see that what they have been taught and have believed is not true—namely, that if colored people can be patient and good and show themselves obedient and humble they will inevitably prove themselves worthy citizens and will therefore receive the rewards of full citizenship. They are beginning to believe, and this in very large numbers, that individual or even collective worth as human beings gains them nothing so long as they are Negroes. The hopefulness natural to their race is now changing to despair. Colored leaders are saying today that no amount of achievement will gain anything for the colored people as a whole, and that, moreover, they no longer believe the people of the United States will fight for democracy. Americans may fight to live and do as they like, they say, but not for democracy.

This conviction of some colored leaders and many more colored people is rapidly permeating the whole twelve millions. When hope is taken away from a people moral degeneration follows swiftly after. Young colored men and women today are giving up hope of justice or security in their own country. When this hopelessness reaches down to certain strata in any society, outbreaks of crime are inevitable. We must expect it in many places besides Harlem. It has already occurred in other cities.

The swiftness with which this long-gathering despair has come to a present head is due, perhaps, more than to any other immediate cause, to the refusal of the majority of defense industries to employ colored labor on anything like an equal basis with white labor. To the colored American this is final proof of the hopelessness of his plight, that even in the defense of his country he is not allowed his share of work.

Crisis Near at Hand

Such is the situation between colored and white peoples at this moment. It is idle to say that the crisis is two steps off and let us attend first to defense and the present war. Crisis between white and colored is not two steps off—it is close, inextricably mingled with this war, because the war against nazism carries race equality or inequality as one of its main issues. It does no good that we ourselves keep the issue hushed and hidden and apart from the thinking of the mass of the white people. The crisis approaches, whether white people are willing to know it or not. It approaches in the world, and with that inexorable march our own people are keeping step.

What then should we do if we are honest believers in the democratic way of life? We must move swiftly and at once, and our President should not fear so to move, to do away with the effects of race prejudice upon colored Americans. Race prejudice cannot be taken out of people unfortunately by surgical operation, although it is an evil and foreign growth. Children do not have it until they catch it from older people. I have frequent proof of this, the most recent being through the 12-year-old son of an American friend newly returned from China.

This white child goes to public school in a New Jersey town. When a class picnic was to be held it was found that the place chosen excluded colored people. To his deep indignation the boy found that his teachers, instead of changing the place, accepted the exclusion and managed by "tactful ways" to see that no colored children came to the picnic. The white boy was shocked to the soul at this injustice in his own land to which he had long looked with love and pride while he was growing up in China. His hurt was personal, too, because his own best friend happened to be a fine colored boy. "I won't go if Henry can't go," was his right decision.

Adolescents Little Prejudiced

Nor do adolescents have race prejudice in anything like the degree that older people have. Recently in Texas there were a championship white football team and a championship colored team at high schools in the same city. Of course their managers and coaches would not schedule them to play each other. But the white team went out one morning by secret arrangement and played the colored team. They said to their coach when they returned: "We just wanted to see which of us was better." As it happened, it was a tie game, and though there is symbolism enough in that ideal ending, the significance of the incident, and of plenty of others like it, is that the boys, colored and white, had no prejudice against each other.

Intelligent white people seldom suffer from race prejudice so severely as ignorant ones, and there are many who would, if they dared, acknowledge that they have none whatever. But too few dare. For wherever the disease of race prejudice is found it is bitter and incurable and dies only with death.

But if nothing can remove race prejudice from those in whom it is ingrained, they should not be allowed to violate our nation's democracy. At least our government can and should see to it that all Americans shall have equal economic opportunity and that colored people in this democracy shall not suffer basely because of their color. It can and should insist that colored citizens shall share the white people. True, we would then be totalitarian rather than democratic; but if that is what we want, let us say so and let us tell the Negro so. Then the white Americans will be relieved of the necessity of hypocrisy and the colored people will know where they are. They may even settle down into a docile subject race, so long as we are able to keep the weapons of rebellion from them—and these include education.

As an American I should deplore any such thing, and yet the world needs this sort of clarification. Democracy now suffers from vagueness because of the lack of relation between principle and action. With all the evils that Hitlerism has, at least it has one virtue, that it makes no pretense of loving its fellowman and of wanting all people to be free and equal. Everybody knows where nazism stands and what to expect of it. Cruel as it is, and dangerous as it is to civilization, it is less cruel, and it may be even less dangerous in the end, than the sort of democracy which is not real enough or strong enough to practice what it preaches. To destroy hope utterly is kinder than to allow it without intending to let it be fulfilled.

Patience Waning

The importance of facing the situation between white and colored people in our own country is twofold—it is upon this rock that our own ship of democracy may go down first, and upon this rock, too, that all peoples may divide into the ultimate enmity. Everywhere in the world the colored peoples are asking each other if they must forever endure the arrogant ruling white race. They feel they have been very long patient, but they cannot be patient forever and they will not. In India such men as Nehru, now again in jail at the hands of white men fighting for democracy in Europe; in our own country colored Americans, as intelligent and well educated as Nehru, barred by their color alone from an equal chance with white Americans to earn their living or to defend democracy—there is a deep, subtle, dangerous relationship between them. We are foolish if we do not realize it.

For in many educated colored Americans hopelessness results not in simple crime but in a rejection of patriotism. There are those, and some of them leaders, who favor Japan in the present crisis, seeing in Japan the future leader of all colored peoples in the world. There are those who prefer Hitler to British imperialism, feeling that if English rule over colored races can be destroyed, then Hitler can be dealt with afterward as the less established evil. At home and abroad the white race has the choice to make—whether it will follow the totalitarian principle of ruler and subject races, even to the inevitable end of rebellion and the worst of wars, or whether peoples of all colors will decide to work out ways of living in mutual harmony and freedom.

Segregation Curbs Patriotism

And yet it may be a mistake to say that this denial of the chance at jobs is more to blame than the resolute segregation in the Army or the practical limitation in the Navy. The colored American, thanks to an education in democracy, now really wants to see his country a democracy. When he defends the United States of America he does not want to do so segregated and limited. This contradicts his idea of a democracy. He has grown up a good deal since the World War. And he has not forgotten that war. He is willing to fight and die again, but not for something he does not possess anyway.

The white American is conscious of this feeling now seething and mounting in the hearts of his colored countrymen. But the white American sedulously avoids acknowledging or indeed even facing it. With the same curious blindness which none of us could understand in France, we white Americans avoid the reality in our own country. We do not want to discover the real truth about the colored American, which is that our prejudice denies him democracy. We refuse to face it because we do not want to change the status of the colored person. We wish to keep him the servant of the white man.

Hypocrisy Seen

I am, I think, realistic and objective on this matter of race, having lived most of my life among colored peoples. My own ancestry is entirely Southern, and I am very familiar with the problems of white and colored in the South. I do not, however, believe their solution is to be found in what the average white Southerner says, in the familiar patter, that the Negro is a childish creature, delightful enough in his place, who only wants to be taken care of and fed and sheltered and treated kindly. That the Negro in the South often glibly falls in with such assertions means nothing, that Negro is afraid of his white master and says what the white man wants him to say. The same Negro quickly expresses himself in totally different terms as soon as he changes his locale and is relieved of his fear.

But be that as it may, the real point is that our democracy does not allow for the present division between a white ruler race and a subject colored race, and we ought to make up our minds as to what we want and then move to accomplish it. If the United States is to include subject and ruler peoples, then let us be honest about it and change the Constitution and make it plain that Negroes cannot share the privileges of responsibility with white citizens for the welfare of the nation, and thus remove the chief reason for the half-tolerant, wholly patronizing contempt of the white for the colored and thereby build in the colored citizen belief in himself. Democratic government must keep apace of science and realize that there is no basis beyond prejudice for the belief that one race is intrinsically superior to another. Continued injustice may make any one inferior, temporarily, regardless of his color.

I read with complete approval of every plan to better the conditions under which colored people must live and work. But until race prejudice is conquered and its effects removed, the bitter fact remains that the colored American knows he will not get a better job for being better educated and better housed or for having in his childhood more playgrounds. He will not be given an equal chance with the white American of his class and ability. Race prejudice will still deny democracy to him.

Are we Americans to go on accepting the stupidities of race prejudice? I know the oft-repeated wearisome defense. Intermarriage is the fearful specter behind everything. On that there is but one answer. Are we to deny to 12,000,000 Americans the rights and privileges of our country, and are we to risk our very democracy itself, by maintaining a determined ruler-subject relationship between white and colored, because some day a few white and colored individuals may choose to marry each other?

Is democracy right or is it wrong? If it is right, then let us dare to make it true.

PEARL S. BUCK.

Perkasie, Pa., Nov. 14, 1941.

Anne O'Hare McCormick is on a brief vacation. Her column, "Europe," will be resumed shortly.

TURES

ork City December 4, 1941

Americans Under The Skin

BY PEARL BUCK
Written for the Council For Democracy

WE Americans have always preferred democracy. We prefer it because we have an instinct about it—a very simple instinct which perhaps is nothing more than a desire to manage ourselves. That is why our ancestors came here in the first place. But where freedom comes from, and how to get freedom, and how to keep freedom, are things we know very little about. The actual sources of freedom we do not know.

Of those sources, I am chiefly concerned with one—equality between the races. It is the most primary of all the sources of freedom. For until we see the end of race prejudice we shall not have democracy triumphant in the world.

The Nazis have given us a perfect demonstration of the value to tyranny of race prejudice. In the tryranny of Nazism one of the easiest ways to divide human beings into the ruler and subject peoples is to use race prejudice as a basis of the discrimination.

Here in the United States, we can make our own peculiar contribution to the solution of the world problem. As believers in the democratic system, we hate tyranny and all its attributes, but the fight for freedom can't be won until we recognize the fact that democracy in its true meaning involves not only lip-service to the doctrine that all men are created equal but a real change in our attitude toward the colored American.

Weakens Our Cause

First we must recognize prejudice for what it is. We must realize that when prejudice against some people exists because of their skins, or because of their creeds, it cuts at the very tap-root of democracy, which gives equal opportunity to every individual. That's the glory of democracy, and we weaken our own cause when we refuse to face those prejudices in ourselves which deny it.

It is my experience that ignorance, and not unwillingness to change, is at the root of race prejudice. Many a white American working ardently and with patriotism for the cause of democrary in the world and the overthrow of tyranny abroad undoes his own work by his attitude toward colored Americans—by his actions toward them, by his continued ignorance of the share which thirteen million Americans of one race alone have in our democracy.

There are thirteen million colored Americans tday who are being told to fight for liberty and equality. Who could blame them if they asked, "Whose liberty? What equality?"

Our colored Americans are not alone. There are the millions of India, and China. The millions of India, without being given the right to choose for themselves, have been forced to support a [illegible]ratic government which has democ[illegible] them democracy. The not given [illegible]hina, the peasants millions of C[illegible]s, have been op- and little farmer[illegible]v their own pressed for years b[illegible]y the edu- warlords, by the rich, b[illegible] cated of their own race.

Facing the Facts

Unless we are willing to face this full front of battle at home, we shall lose, even though Hitler himself is defeated. And we cannot evade by refusal to speak to each other of our weaknesses. The American must not fear to speak of India to the Briton, nor refuse to acknowledge the Negro. And neither he nor the Briton must fear to speak with candor to China about her own Chinese.

There are those who think this is not the time. Not while China is fighting for her life and when even Ghandi avows the prior necessity of destroying the Nazis. They will tell you that if the house is on fire, we had better put out the fire before we start repairing the furniture. I don't agree. Democracy can't win while these contradictions remain unchanged. We shall lose from within.

This war is more than a material war. It is a war which, if the democracies are to win, they must win by clear conviction. We won't get an all-out effort even for defense unless the moral issue is clear for all honest people.

This is what I deeply believe myself. Millions upon millions of people at this hour now approaching crisis wait for leadership toward freedom. Millions, ready to follow, wait for the sign. What better sign could there be than that the enslaved wthin the democracies themselves shall be free? Nothing and no one could prevent victory then!

Pearl Buck, noted author, is a citizen of the world. She has lived in China and Japan, has traveled widely in India and Indo-China, Russia and Europe, and now lives in America. Her novel of Chinese life, The Good Earth, won the Pulitzer Prize in 1931, and she won the Nobel Prize for literature in 1938. Her new novel, "Dragon Seed," will be published soon.

Pearl Buck

• ens Hear Speaker A. P. Randolph

1100 Citiz

GOOD

THE LOS ANGELES TRIBUNE Sunday, November 16, 1941

REFLECTIONS IN a CRACKT MIRROR

by E. P. H.

ERNAGRAM

Mrs. John Hubbard went to the cupboard
(Her John [illegible]ht company home)
She kept he[illegible]
Though of [illegible] was none;
But when [illegible]ards were alon[illegible]

To the persistent vitality of a Texas burr, add the two-fisted fight of Joe Louis, dress it in the swank of an Esquire business executive, motivate with Abe Lincoln's passion for the people, and give it the voice of Leslie Howard with the accent of a Harvard graduate, imbue it with astute suavity of a South American diplomat, the congenial opportunism of James M. Farley, the pithiness of Bacon the essayist, the sharp, dramatic humor of a George Bernard Shaw, and the crusading realism of Richard Wright,—

That is A. Phillip Randolph, founder and president of the powerful Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. In the course of a brilliant address at Second Baptist church two weeks ago, Randolph told a sparkling version of conferences with the Prseident, Mrs. Roosevelt and Mayor La Guardia on the matter of discrimination against Negroes in national defense industries and agencies.

Credited with inspiring and organizing the proposed march on Washington of 100,000 Negroes for the purpose of obtaining the support of the federal government in stopping discrimination, not only in industry, but also in its own agencies, the astute labor leader drew frequent laughs and applause on his 'between-the-line' comments. Listening, I decided that when FDR and Randolph met, it was a matter of polished brass against polished brass, lots of heat without much friction.

At the end of his speech all listeners were in agreement on one thing. They thought, "Well no wonder the President issued that order."

The [illegible]dolph is all [illegible]

Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters' Meeting Goes Over In Big Way

The Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters held their mass meeting at Zion Baptist Church, Tuesday, November 18, 8:00 P. M. with the Honorable Mr. A. Philip Randolph, President of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters of New York and the Honorable M. P. Webster, Vice President of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, also a member of President Roosevelt's committee on Fair Employment for Negroes in the defense industries, were principle speakers.

Mr. Samuel Towles, President of the local branch of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, acted as Master of Ceremonies. Mr. Towles is becoming a master in the capacity as Master of Ceremonies. Several favorable comments were heard throughout the audience of how he successfully handled the meeting.

Mr. Webster, the first speaker, dealt principally with his new position as a member of the President's Fair Employment Committee—in the work they are trying to do, to increase the earning capacity of our group in the defense industries.

Mr. Randolph held the audience spellbound for one hour and eight minutes. You could hear a pin fall during the time he was speaking. After the meeting had adjourned, many of the attendants shook hands with each other congratulating themselves on deciding to attend the meeting. You could hear them say on leaving the entrance, "It was the greatest message as well as inspiring one, that they had ever had the pleasure of listening to."

Wednesday at 11:00 A. M. the local branch held their Brotherhood meeting in the NAACP office 2418 Grant St. At 2:00 P. M. Mr. Webster attended the Chair Car meeting at the Urban League. Mr. Randolph and Mr. Webster an Mr. Towles, paid a visit, with many other members, through the plant and offices of the Omaha Guide Publishing Company.

Wednesday evening at 8:30 the honorable guests were entertained at an reception at the Elks beautiful hall. All seem to of had an enjoyable evening.

Mr. Randolph and Mr. Webster, Mrs. Sims, Mrs. Rome, Mrs. Bell, and Mrs. Taylor, were the guest at dinner of Mr. Towles and Mr. Sims at the King Yuen Cafe, where a reporter of the Omaha Guide dropped in on them and if you had been there you would have thought that the reception at the Elks hall had not adjourned for the evening, but just for a few minutes.

Mr. Webster stated at the King Yuen Cafe, that New York had nothing on Omaha when it comes to entertaining its guests. Mr.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1941

ENT LABOR POLICIES

OMAHA GUIDE

November 29, 1941

SPEAKING.... EDITORIALLY

Farewell To "The Good Man"

Rev. F. P. Jones, Pastor of Mt. Moriah Baptist Church of Omaha, is soon to leave us for work in a larger field. Ten years ago he came to us in this city as a Christian Minister and during all those years he has lived the life of a Christian and a Gentleman.

His leadership as a pastor of his congregation has been excellent, and he leaves a debt free church. He has brought honors to the city and the state through his leadership in the Baptist denomination. He is President of the New Era Baptist Association of Nebraska and is one of the Vice Presidents of the National Baptist Convention.

Every day he has dwelt among us and served us, he has lived a blameless life. Everything he has done among us here has been affirmatively helpful not only in church affairs, but in civic matters as well.

Through the years we have known many good and great men. but none who more fully appreciated the requirements for an AMBASSADOR of the Master, than he. He has borne the burdens of his fellows as another bore them for all the children of men in the Judean Hills two thousand years ago, and as he bears them in Spirit even now.

It is with deepest regret that we part with Rev. Mr. Jones; yet we know his going is best, for he goes where he can render service to a larger number of his fellows.

Farewell to "THE GOOD MAN".

A. Philip Randolph

Mr. A. Philip Randolph visited Omaha last week and delivered one of his excellent addresses on the subject dearest to his heart, "The Welfare of the Worker".

His thesis "Mass Action" was presented with all the learning and skill of a master. And whether you agree with him or not, one had to admire the learning he brought to bear upon his subject, the persuasive and plausible reasoning he employed as he passed from his premise through the body of his discussion to his conclusion.

What he was doing on this occasion, as he has been doing on other occasions for many years, was making an effort to educate the masses so as to have intelligent, constructive action, when it is had at all.

Unintelligent mass action would be "mob action" and the end would be anarchy; utter ruin for all who would employ it.

The first task, then, is education; the second organization; the third action. Within the framework of the Pullman Porters Union Mr. Randolph has succeeded far beyond our fondest hopes. And he has given other organizations the benefit of the knowledge he has gained through his fighting years.

Always, we must remember that in seeking the just solution of a problem so complex as the Negro Problem, we will need the aid of all the constructive forces within the race and the good offices of the friendly few without.

Many of the agencies which cannot give "all out aid" all the time, because they must first live and breathe before they can give any aid at all, must not be condemned too harshly by the men and women who are wholly free to serve completely.

We think it necessary to understand this primary requisite of any workable plan for "Mass Action".

MR. RANDOLPH—Courage, high morale courage, which you exemplify, is always admirable and you have made it understandable and inspiring throughout the ranks of "common men". You have found the way to happiness; the only way there is through service to others.

NEW YORK AGE

November 29, 1941

. . Things Seen, Heard And Done . .

AMONG PULLMAN EMPLOYEES

By J. T. REID

The Pullman Porters Benefit Association of America convened in its 21st annual convention at the Wabash Y.M.C.A., 38th street and Wabash avenue, Chicago, at nine o'clock Tuesday morning, November 18. Delegates representing every Pullman District and agencies in the United States, Mexico and Canada were present. Also delegates from the National Women's Auxiliary representing Louisville, Fort Worth, Houston, San Antonio, Nashville, St. Louis, Birmingham, Schreveport, Jacksonville, Atlanta, Washington, Chicago and New York shared in the opening program. This being the opening day, there were many out of town porters who are members of the Association who took advantage of the opportunity and also attended the opening session Tuesday morning.

Among those from the Pennsylvania Terminal District were M. Harrison, John Rhoades, W. D. Wingate E. W. Asnby and many others whose names we were unable to obtain. There were also many porters from other districts who are members and attended.

According to a statement made by the Grand Chairman E. M. Graham. The past year has been a most prosperous one for the P. P.B.A. of A., the grand chairman said: "We have been able during the past year to increase our membership by more than three hundred."

Much of that increase is due to the activity of the Ladies Auxiliary. These ladies have evidently worked hard to prove to the grand officers that they made no mistake last year when they organized them into a national body.

Officers of the Ladies Auxiliary are; Mrs. Addie Mae Embree, San Antonio, Texas, president; Mrs. Vivian Lucas, Louisville, Ky., first vice president; Mrs. Betty Bennett, Shreveport, La., second vice president; Mrs. A. E. Alexander, Fort Worth, Texas, third vice president; Mrs. Hattie Thomas, [illegible], Ill., secretary; Mrs. Bessie [illegible], Birmingham, Ala., corresponding secretary; Mrs. E. M. Graham, Chicago, Ill., financial secretary; Mrs. Mattie Marshall, Shreveport, La., treasurer; Mrs. [illegible] H. Turner, Chicago, doorkeeper, and Mrs. Birda Richardson, San Antonio, Texas, chaplain.

The official program of the public meeting under auspices of Calumet Local No. [illegible], for delegates and in honor of L. S. Taylor, vice president, the Pullman Company, was well arranged by the program committee. But it was hard for the large attendance to understaid why all the delegates were not seated together as they have always been in the years gone by. If this had been done it would have saved the audience the trouble of looking for them when their names was called by the grand secretary.

The features of the program were the selection rendered by the Pullman Porters Quartet: Messrs. Butler, Harris, Spencer and Thomas; remarks by C. W. Flager, mechanical superintendent, the Pullman Company, were very timely. He proved that hard work on the part of any individual will pay dividends to the worker. In the presentation of the Grand Chairman's Trophies, P. A. Sample never appeared more at his best. This year's winners were: 1st prize, G. F. Flournoy, Atlanta, Ga.; second prize went to Traveling Instructor Clifford S. Jones, Chicago South.

Next week we shall give you the financial standing of the Association. Order your copy of the New York Age today.

—30—

for Omaha and that he considers the Omaha branch of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, one of the finest branches of the entire organization.

Mr. Vernon Booker T. Washington who is chef cook on the Union Pacific, had the pleasure of meeting the distinguished guests at the King Yuen Cafe. Mr. Washington was very much impressed with his introduction and Mr. Randolph with his keen interest in the welfare of the Negro worker asked Mr. Washington many questions about his position with the Union Pacific. Mr. Randolph asked Mr. Washington was it true that the Union Pacific was planning to exclude Negro chefs in the dining car system. Mr. Washington stated that he didn't know, but that they have not hired any Negro chefs since 1938. Mr. Washington stated to the Omaha Guide reporter, that he expected it to be a good idea, in order that his many friends may know who he is ..that he had better say that Mr. Washington, better known as "Sioux Bill".

Thursday at 6:00 p. m. the local branch gave a dinner in honor of their distinguished guests at the Masonic Hall.

CANADIAN UNIONS DENOUNCE GOVERNME

RAIL BROTHERHOODS APPROVE FIGHT ON ORDER-IN-COUNCIL

Unionists Will Not Submit To "Unnecessary Infringement Upon Their Rights"

LABOR WASN'T CONSULTED

Statements by M'Larty And King Refuted; Press Ignores Momentous Conference

By "Labor's" Canadian Representative

OTTAWA, Can., Nov. 27.—The Canadian government's wages-stabilization policy was denounced in strong terms by a conference here under the auspices of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, and attended by the chief Canadian executive officers of practically all affiliated unions and by representatives of the Railroad Transportation Brotherhoods.

The conference requested that order-in-council P. C. 8,253 (which pegs wages, provides for payment of a wartime cost-of-living bonus and establishes a national labor board, details of which were published in LABOR a few weeks ago), be "immediately rescinded as being unsound in principle and impossible of satisfactory and acceptable application."

Amendments Proposed

It added that the new order-in-council is "conducive of industrial unrest and inimical to the country's war effort" as it nullifies the principles enunciated in a previous order upon which "a sound policy of collective bargaining could be developed."

Should the government refuse to rescind the order a series of amendments were drawn up for submission to the government "as a demonstration of a desire to be helpful and cooperative."

It will be recalled that at the Calgary convention of the Congress in September order-in-council P. C. 7,440 (which provides payment of a wartime cost-of-living bonus) was approved in principle, after a lengthy debate and the suggestion of a number of amendments. The conference believes P. C. 7,440 should be restored, with the proposed amendments included.

Makes Cooperation Difficult

Canadian workers, at the outbreak of the war, pledged their fullest support to the government in all steps essential to the prosecution of the war to a successful conclusion.

The conference reiterated this pledge but declared that "the unwillingness of the Federal government to accept the proffered cooperation of the representatives of organized workers makes it increasingly difficult for them to give effect to that policy."

"The workers," it added, "know full well that an all-out war effort demands sacrifices of them and they have shown themselves prepared at all times to make such sacrifices when it has been demonstrated that they were necessary. They cannot be expected, however, to stand idly by [illegible] without protest un-

[illegible] rights of the people of [illegible] conditions which have been established over a long series of years.

Consultation Questioned

When [illegible] was announced, Labor Minister Norman McLarty in a radio address to the nation stated labor had been consulted.

This was vehemently denied by President Tom Moore of the Congress, who presided at the conference. He told the meeting he had attended a conference in Premier Mackenzie King's office on October 15 where J. B. Ward, chairman, General Conference Committee of the Standard Railroad Labor Organizations, and a representative of the Canadian Congress of Labor and of the National Catholic Federation of Workers, were also present.

At this conference Premier King outlined in general terms the government's intention to peg wages and prices.

Labor's Suggestions Ignored

No commitments were made and it was agreed that the whole question would be referred to the National Labor Supply Council, upon which labor is represented. The Council met the next day, the proposed order-in-council was considered and a number of amendments were suggested. These were forwarded the next day by letter to the labor minister.

No reply was received and the government proceeded to make its policy known, first in a radio address by Premier King and later by Labor Minister McLarty.

President Moore's statement was corroborated by J. B. Ward, who was present at the conference with the premier, and by J. A. D'Aoust, secretary-treasurer, Trades and Labor Congress of Canada; John W. Bruce, general organizer of the Plumbers; James Somerville, former vice president of the Machinists; Fred Molineux, vice president of the Painters, and William L. Best, Dominion legislative representative, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen. All these gentlemen are members of the National Labor Supply Council.

Regret Misrepresentations

As a result of this discussion, the conference unanimously adopted a resolution protesting against the public statement made by the minister of labor in his radio address of October 23, "when he implied that proper consultation had taken place."

The conference further expressed its "regret" that any representative of the government "should create such a misleading impression in the public mind as that labor had in any manner been a party to the formulation of the policies incorporated in order-in-council P. C. 8,253."

Hit Labor Supply Council

Consideration was also given to the National Labor Supply Council and the conference declared it was not functioning as had been expected and "in many instances it had been used to mislead the public as to the attitude of organized labor respecting the government's labor policies and in that way the members acting thereon had been placed in a false position."

It therefore requested that the order-in-council establishing this council be revoked.

Although these decisions are of the utmost public concern and probably the most momentous reached by labor since the outbreak of war, the press of Canada has practically ignored them.

The Pittsburgh Courier

RANDOLPH IN INDIANAPOLIS

When A. Philip Randolph, 1st International President of Sleeping Car Porters, appeared in Indianapolis, he was delightfully entertained at the home of Chandler Houston, president of Local Order of Sleeping Car Porters. Mr. Randolph spoke to a large audience at the Senate Avenue branch of the YMCA, Feb. 1st. His subject was "Why The March On Washington Was Called Off." Miss Viola Mayds acted as hostess to a lovely turkey dinner at the Houston home in Lockefield Gardens.

Shown in the picture, left to right: Standing, Lionel F. Artis, housing manager of Lockefield Gardens; [illegible] Houston, vice [illegible] Auxiliary; Miss [illegible] hostess; Dr. Georg[illegible] Seated: Benn[illegible] Detroit, 2nd International President Sleeping Car Porters; Mr. A. Phillip Randolph, 1st President International and Chandler Houston, president local.

AFRO-AMERICAN

December 27, 1941

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

By JAMES H. HOGANS

CHRISTMAS WISHES

To the members of the railroad and Pullman fraternities and to all its friends and readers, this column extends its greetings and good wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year!

* * *

PULLMAN'S QUARTER CENTURY CLUB

The booklet of the Pullman Quarter Century Club, just issued to its members, is an interesting memorandum of the service record of Pullman employees.

Composed of workers who have been in continuous employment with the company for twenty-five years or more, the club is one of the most unique organizations of its kind in the history of American industry.

For one thing, it is doubtful whether any other business organization in the country can boast of as many employees of such long service as this corporation.

According to the booklet, there are 2,711 employees who have been with the company over a quarter of a century, and a large percentage of these have been connected for almost fifty years.

Commenting on that achievement in service longevity, Pullman President [illegible] A. Crawford makes the following observation in the booklet's foreword:

"This booklet is a record of achievement, the achievement of those individuals whose names are recorded herein. Twenty-five years or more of continuous service means that they have worked faithfully and skillfully, for we ask that of our people.

"It means that they have worked with personal satisfaction, or they would not have remained with us so long. It means that they have worked carefully, for they are alive and on the job."

Aside from its usefulness as a reference index, the booklet contains some remarkable data on the service record of the members, whose first, as well as last, names are correctly listed.

It discloses, for example, that the oldest district superintendent, F. C. Helrigel of Chattanooga, Tenn., evidently born and bred in the South, has been with the company since 1886.

Second to him is Vice-President Louis S. Hungerford, who, it was said when he was general manager, was so familiar with the mechanism and structure of a Pullman car that he could tell, just by looking at it, to which part of a car a detached bolt or screw belonged.

Among the porters, the oldest in service are:

F. D. Wright, New York, who began as waterboy with the New Haven Railroad in 1892; J. B. Hughes, Boston; Herbert Smith, Philadelphia; F. C. West, Pittsburgh; W. Ragland, Chicago; W. Starkes, Detroit;

Eugene Anderson, Atlanta; J. J. Jefferson, Louisville; J. Thompkins, Denver; Lee Gillum, Kansas City; Bradley Smith, Washington, D.C.; and E. C. Buck, St. Paul, all of whom have been in the service for more than forty-five years.

NEW YORK AGE

December 27, 1941

Fair Employment Committee Opens Office In Chicago

CHICAGO, Ill.—The President's Committee on Fair Employment practice today opened a branch office here to begin preparations for a public hearing on January 19 and 20 on the employment practices of defense industries and government agencies in Chicago and the tri-state area of Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin.

The Chicago offices are located at Room 1428, Civic Opera Building, 20 North Wacker drive. The preliminary studies and the hearing are part of the government's program to eliminate discrimination against qualified and needed workers because of their "race, creed, color, or national origin," in keeping with an executive order issued by President Roosevelt on June 25, 1941.

In that order the President declared that "the democratic way of life within the Nation can be defended successfully only with the help and support of all groups within its borders," and he called on employers and labor unions "to provide for the full and equitable participation of all workers in defense industries."

The President also created the Committee on Fair Employment Practice and named Mark Ethridge, Louisville publisher, as chairman. Other members of the Committee: William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor, Washington, D. C.; Milton P. Webster, International Vice-President of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, Chicago, Illinois; David Sarnoff, President, Radio Corporation of America, New York City; Earl B. Dickerson, Chicago Alderman; and Philip Murray, President, Congress of Industrial Organizations.

The preparations for the hearing are being made by representatives of the Committee, of the Negro Employment and Training Branch of O. P. M., and the Minorities Groups Branch, OPM. The President's executive order directed the Committee:

1. To "receive and investigate complaints of discrimination because of race, creed, color or national origin" in violation of the executive order.

2. To take "appropriate steps to redress grievances which it finds to be valid."

3. To "recommend to the several departments and agencies of the Government of the United States and to the President, all measures which may be deemed by it necessary or proper" to carry out the

W. C. Taylor of New York; the oldest custodian, Sylvester Brown, New York; the oldest maid, Dora Halloway, New York; the head of the attendants' roster, Matthew Pierson, Chicago, and the senior investigator, Joseph Brown, of Chicago.

* * *

THE RED CAPS' PROPOSAL

Following the recent announcement by the railroads that they would seek a 10 per cent increase in passenger rates, the United Transport Service Employees of America, the railroad red caps' national union, has suggested a method of relieving the carriers, the public and the red caps of that irritating headache, the 10-cent hand-baggage charge.

In a letter to the Association of American Railroads, the union proposed the abolishment of this charge by including this service in the regular passenger rates. The union outlined six points in favor of the plan.

Among those points, it contends that the present system has demoralized the morale and service of the red caps; has been the means of causing annoyance and resentment to the traveling public, and has created problems of administration for the railroads, whose energies for solution might be more profitably expended in devising ways and means for serving their patrons and the nation.

Chicago Defender

Founded May 6, 1905, by Robert S. Abbott, LL.B.

Published by
THE ROBERT S. ABBOTT PUBLISHING CO.
(Incorporated)
3435 Indiana Avenue CALumet 5656

ADVERTISING
Communicate direct with Chicago Defender Office

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION (Payable in advance)—One Year $9.00; six months $1.75; foreign $6.50 per year.

All unsolicited articles, manuscripts, letters and pictures sent to The Chicago Defender are sent at the owner's risk, and The Robert S. Abbott Publishing Company expressly repudiates any liability or responsibility for the safe custody or return of such material.

Defender Platform For America

11/22/41

AMERICAN RACE PREJUDICE MUST BE DESTROYED!

—ROBERT S. ABBOTT

2. The opening up of all trades and trade unions to blacks as well as whites.
3. Representation in the President's cabinet.
4. Engineers, firemen and conductors on all American railroads and government controlled industries.
5. Representation in all departments of the police forces over the entire United States.
6. Government schools open to all American citizens in preference to foreigners.
7. Motormen and conductors on surface, elevated and motor bus lines throughout America.
8. Federal legislation to abolish lynching.
9. Full enfranchisement of all American citizens.

DIESEL ENGINES AND NEGRO FIREMEN

The struggle of the Negro locomotive firemen to gain recognition and tenure is typical of the hurdles over which black labor must leap in order not to be frozen out entirely.

Up to 1919, the Negro stoker had little to worry about the security of his job. Underpaid and unorganized, he was outside the competitive mart, especially in the railways of the South where he was restricted to the unattractive toil of coaling steam locomotives. Now that the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen has invaded the Southern field, now that the Diesel engines are displacing steam locomotives, and that decent wages are scheduled, Negro firemen are being squeezed from their jobs.

At first the elimination of the black worker was gradual. But following a hiring agreement last February between the Brotherhood and the representatives of 25 Southeastern carriers, wholesale dropping of Negro workers became the order of the day.

The agreement stipulates "promotable status" as a basis of eligibility to become an engineer. Since Negro firemen have no "promotable status," it is clear that this clause was inserted in the body of the contract with the intent to disqualify them. This, of course, is a flagrant disregard of the railroad seniority rules.

With the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen barring Negroes from their ranks, the Negro fireman find himself locked out of a job in which he once enjoyed almost complete moncpoly as long as the pay was ridiculously low. There is nothing else for him to do but to organize and gird himself for a fight under the leadership of such man as A. Philip Randolph, president of the A.F.L. Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1941 THE CHICAGO DEFENDER

Hampton Pres. To Aid In Effort To Save R.R. Jobs

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va. — President Malcolm S. MacLean of Hampton institute has accepted membership on a national citizens committee to save colored locomotive firemen's jobs.

The committee sponsored by A. Philip Randolph of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, will work toward stopping the present practice of displacing colored firemen, some of whom have served railroads in the South 30 and 40 years, but are now being displaced by white firemen with less than a year's service.

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia has accepted chairmanship of the committee and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has agreed to serve as honorary chairman.

A. Philip Randolph of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters initiated the drive.

THE AFRO-AMERICAN, NOVEMBER 29, 1941

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

LABOR'S DISLOYALTY

Organized labor is certainly paying President Franklin D. Roosevelt handsome dividends these days for his interest in its welfare.

Followed by the harassment of the coal strike, now comes the annoying threat of a railroad strike.

For the man who has done more to promote and protect that type of labor than any other President in the country's history, this doesn't seem to be fair at all.

There will be no railroad strike, however, despite all the elaborate announcement and plans which the lordly union heads have advertised. But it is just another one of those disturbing events to harass the over-harassed Mr. Roosevelt.

If these were normal times, and Mr. Roosevelt had been less of a constant friend of organized labor than he has proved, there would be some excuse for its actions; but under the prevailing circumstances, no reasonable defense can be offered for the disloyal attitude it is demonstrating.

In the cases of the coal miners and the railroad workers there is, of course, a wide difference.

The parallel between the two cases is so unlike that it cannot be well considered in the same light, notwithstanding that a strike of the latter would have the same effect upon the government and the public.

The point at issue with the railroad workers is one involving increased wages, and for certain classes of those workers that is an economic necessity, considering the rising cost of living.

With the coal miners, however, it is merely an issue of organizational rights and regulations, which certainly is not so important, at this particular time, anyway, that it should play havoc with the nerves of the government, the President and everybody else.

But regardless of the merits of either of the two issues, the feeling is growing that organized labor is being disloyal to the President. And it would be surprising if he didn't possess the same feeling.

HERE AND THERE

Sandy Hooper, a porter of the New York District, resigned from the Pullman service recently, and announced his intention to "take things easy for a time."

Mr. Hooper entered the service in 1921, and during his twenty years of employment, never had a demerit mark against his service record, Pullman officials said.

Mrs. Ballard, a native of Jersey City, is director of the Helen Ballard Music School there.

The new coach sleeper on the New York Central's New York-Chicago Pacemaker is now being operated by Porters L. W. Coltraine, C. E. Kendrick, J. W. Rice, J. W. Goldsmith and J. Hughes.

The death recently of John W. Underwood of Boston marked the passing of one of the most esteemed Pullman veterans of that city.

A pioneer in fraternalism among the porters' group, Mr. Underwood was a charter member of the P.P.B.A., and served the group as an industrial leader before the advent of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

He retired from the Pullman service in 1939, after forty-five years of portering in the Boston Northern District.

THE LOS ANGELES TRIBUNE Sunday, November 16, 1941

RANDOLPH LEAVES

Leaving here Monday, A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, was in Salt Lake City Tuesday where he spoke to audiences, following which he will visit Denver, Kansas City, Omaha, St. Louis, Chicago and Pittsburgh before returning to national brotherhood headquarters in New York.

THE AFRO-AMERICAN, DECEMBER 13, 1941

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

By JAMES H. HOGANS

THE TWO EMPIRES

When the old New York Central train No. 50, with its dark-colored coaches and Pullmans, pulled into the Grand Central Station on Saturday evening, on time as usual, its railroad career as the "Empire State Express" had ended.

On the following morning a streamlined train, the new "Empire State Express," had taken its place, and thus ended the life of one of the most historical passenger trains in America's railroad history.

Placed in service in 1891, when David B. Hill was governor of the State of New York, the old Empire Express was the favorite train of the State's chief executive, legislators and politicians in their travels to and from Albany.

It was the first American train to attain a speed record of 112 miles an hour over a railroad track. Old No. "999," the locomotive that hauled the train, is still used by the Central for exhibition purposes.

In the days when the old Empire started, such accommodations as dining cars were practically unknown, the only eating facilities were those furnished on Pullman buffet cars and way-station restaurants.

Cooked on Oil Stove

The first Empire, which ran between New York and Buffalo, consisted of four cars, one of which was a Pullman buffet. The cooking was by oil stoves.

Many were the stories that Victor Block, Jim Donegal and other Pullman porters, all now dead, used to tell of their experiences on those cars. It was nothing unusual for them to feed 200 passengers from the cubicle of a Pullman buffet between New York and Buffalo.

With the advent of the dining car and the popularity of the train, the buffet service was replaced by regular diners, and for the past twenty-five years or more the Empire had been the railroad's daylight queen.

A Glamour Girl

The Empire's successor, however, is more of a glamour girl.

Advertised as the "world's finest daytime train," the new 16-car streamlined coaches, parlors, tavern cars and diners represent the acme of modernity in beauty, traveling comfort and convenience.

One of the novel features is that each coach has a separate smoking room for men and women. The parlor cars are designed somewhat on the same pattern as the Pullman parlor, although the arrangement of the chairs is not the same. Each chair may be adjusted to any position desired.

Not being built by Pullman, the chair cars are one of the features of the new train that will hardly become popular with the discriminating traveler. Pullman has the exclusive rights to the revolving type of parlor chair.

No Discrimination

Aside from that, the new Empire has everything it takes to make a pleasant trip.

One little item more: Seats in the coaches and parlors are numbered, and the passengers are assigned to seats when tickets are purchased. There is no color or racial distinction to be encountered, such as prevails on the Southern streamlined trains.

* * *

DOUBLE EVENT

Alfred A. Brodie, Pullman supply man at the Grand Central Station, celebrated his forty-ninth birthday on Sunday, and also his second wedding anniversary. He and Mrs. Brodie live at 54 W. 138th Street. Both are natives of Charlotte, N.C.

* * *

VETERAN ILL

William J. (Billy) Patterson, well-known New York porter, suffered a serious attack of illness on Tuesday while on his way to the Pullman doctor, and had to be taken to the Hospital for Ruptured and Crippled, where he is now a patient.

* * *

BENEFIT ENTERTAINMENT

The New York branch of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters will hold a benefit entertainment for its Christmas benefit fund on Saturday evening, December 20, at its headquarters, 217 W. 125th Street.

THE NEW YORK AGE

Saturday, December 13, 1941

Randolph Surprised To Find Many Negroes Who Consider Hitler A Benefactor to Race

Sitting in his office at 217 West 125th street, following his return from a cross country tour which began on September 26th and ended December 5th, A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and National Director of the March-on-Washington movement for jobs and justice for Negroes in national defense, stated that he and Milton P. Webster, first international vice-president of the Brotherhood and member of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee, had addressed some 25,000 Negro and white citizens in the various cities they had visited on an extended tour through the middle and far west, including Seattle and Spokane, Washington; Portland, Oregon; Oakland and Los Angeles, California; Salt Lake City, Utah; Denver, Colorado; Omaha, Nebraska; Kansas City and St. Louis, Missouri; and Chicago, Illinois.

Everywhere there was widespread and profound interest manifested by Negroes in defense employment, and trade unions' and defense industries' attitudes toward Negro workers, he said. Expressions of optimistic faith and hope among Negroes in their right and ability to improve their status as workers and citizens in America today as a result of this national and world emergency were striking and most interesting, observed Mr. Randolph.

Sees Much Confusion

On problems of labor, especially involving the relative importance of the AFL and CIO to the Negro workers in meeting their problems there is much confusion. But the important thing is that Negroes are thinking about these questions and thinking about them hard today.

Great interest was shown by the people in the description by M. P. Webster of the hearings that were held in Los Angeles by the Fair Employment Practice Committee in the various meetings, and the general work of the FEPC in carrying out the mandates of the Presidents Executive Order designed to eliminate discriminations in national defense.

Concluding, Mr. Randolph remarked that in every meeting he addressed he vigorously assailed totalitarianism and advocated the cause of the democratic nations in their fight to destroy Hitler and Hitlerism in the world; but to his regret he noted little interest among Negroes in the outcome of the war, seemingly unconcerned as to whether the democratic or the Axis powers should win the war. In some instances he even found individuals who considered Hitler a benefactor to the Negro although they were opposed to Hitler and his philosophy.

Beautiful Virgin Islands Under Spotlight

A bird's-eye view of the tropical foliage which is common to the natural beauties of the American Virgin Islands and enchanted by its placid blue waters which serve as fringes of the Caribbean, is an attraction to visitors from the mainland and Europe.

'The Neglected' Virgin Islands

(Editor's Note—This is the second of a series of articles on the Virgin Islands by Mr. Totten who is presently engaged in a political conflict, attacking the incumbent administration under Governor Charles Harwood for maltreatment of the islanders who are almost 100 percent Negroes in favor of American whites and native Quislings.)

BY ASHLEY L. TOTTEN
(President Virgin Islands Civic Association)

In 1914, labor agitation started and assumed such large proportions that the Danish government became alarmed and introduced measures of reform. Mere mention of this was distasteful to the Bourbons. Agitation by the natives swept the island. They feared neither the gendarmes or marines from the Danish cruiser Valkyrien stationed there until the day of the transfer. Dating as far back as 50 years ago, the sturdied and more enterprising natives began to realize that the islands offered little opportunity.

Mr. Totten

Migration of professional and skilled workers started. This was followed in later years by a rapid exodus of the laboring classes. At least 3,000 migrated to the republics of Haiti, San Domingo, Cuba, Costa Rica an[illegible] Ponce. It is estimated that 8,000 or more reside on the mainland. So great was this exodus that natives on returning visits could hardly find anyone they knew.

Sent Commissions

During the first years of American rule, Congress sent two commissions to the islands. The first Congressional Commission with three senators and three congressmen agreed after a two-day stay (according to their report February, 1920) that Uncle Sam had bought a sucker lemon for $25,000,000.

The second group, a Negro commission, believed by many as President [illegible]dge's bait to catch the Negro [illegible] rendered a report that was [illegible]egon-holed in the archievs at Washington.

Later in 1932, Herbert Hoover, President of the United States at the time, included in his vacation trip a two-hour visit to St. Thomas, one of the islands, where in that short time he made his very intelligent and amazing discovery that the three Virgin Islands were a poor house.

Happily, other intelligent, liberal minded public spirited Americans thought different. They are loud in their praise of the beauty of the islands, healthy atmosphere, native friendliness and the great strategic value to the United States as a naval base. On the other hand they are also agreed that the islands do not offer any inducements for graft trickanery or racketeering, politically or otherwise.

Quite true there is a diversity of problems but they all run through the same economic channels and can only be remedied by honest, sincere capable executives who have some sense of sympathy and human understanding for the under-privileged classes. To solve their economic problem one must deal with the under dog directly and not through the uppercrust Negro or Bourbon.

Americans Knew Little

It is safe to say that most Americans hitherto charged with this responsibility knew little or nothing about colonization. Any fair, impartial fact finding body will be told by the natives themselves where to look for the terrific blunders alleged to have been made at the expense of the Federal Government either wilfully or because of sheer ignorance.

ATTY. JAMES BAUGH

In the first 15 years 1917-32, there were at least eight naval governors. The claim was set forth that progress was impeded. The governor they said did not remain long enough to know the inhabintants.

Some thought naval officers were kind, others did not think so well of them. Improvements in the care and hospitalization of the sick and sanitation began taking shape. The first Negro naval band of 66 youths under the leadership of Alton Adams a native was organized and served to cheer the masses who had not heard a band concert in many a moon.

Under naval rule natives began holding official positions in the police, sanitation, health and educational departments, a privilege few enjoyed during the days of the Danes.

Landlords boosted their rents sky high and reaped a harvest out of the pockets of the laboring men and their families. This side of the picture looked prosperous but it was only helpful to the few.

Ships Ceased Calling

St. Thomas is not an agricultural island. Out of its snug harbor admitted to be one of the best in the West Indies the masses earn a livelihood. It was difficult for them to understand why ships no longer called for coal, water and dock repairs. Even United States warships engaged in annual maneuvers around Culebra and Vieques were going elsewhere to give their sailors shoreleave.

Prohibition extended to the islands crippled the bay rum industry. The World War had ended the German mercantile ships, the economic backbone of St. Thomas laboring classes would no longer be seen there. Their warehouses and docks were closed and still remain idle.

Sugar cane plantation owners at St. Croix suffering from continued droughts, low market prices and excessive duties appealed to the naval administration in vain. They don't raise sugar canes on battleships and their knowledge of irrigation is washing decks with water supplied from the ocean declared the planters.

Numerous native delegations came to Washington. One of these could not find any department there willing to accept responsibility for the islands. Another group when heard were shamefully divided. They were not agreed whether the islands should have a naval or a civil government. Naval officials contended the government was civil with naval officers as executives for economic reasons. Agitators at St. Croix continued their attack while in St. Thomas opinions remained divided.

Pearson Appointed

Finally in 1932, Paul M. Pearson was appointed first civil governor and the flag of truce was raised between the contending factions.

Pearson was a kindly old gentleman, a Quaker who expressed his belief that the natives should be given a wider opportunity to qualify for executive positions and that a program be drawn up for the rehabilitation of the islands known as "Help Virgin Islanders Help Themselves". Natives rose to such high [illegible]ons [illegible] commissioner of fi[illegible] welfare and sanitation.

In each island he placed Negroes as judges and municipal physicians. Monies were loaned to encourage cultivation of land, giving each person a home with 12 to 20 acres and 20 [illegible]ore years to pay for it. He [illegible]ized the Virgin Island Coop[illegible]atives, advertising native handicraft, which is now a [illegible] profitable concern and the centre of attraction to tourists.

He was able to convince Congress that the islands were shamefully neglected and secured additional appropriations to carry out his rehabilitation program. But there were many in the islands who disliked Pearson. Charges of graft were in the air.

THE NEW YORK AMSTERDAM STAR-NEWS

Saturday, December 20, 1941

'The Neglected' Virgin Islands

Editor's Note: This is the third in a series of articles on the Virgin Islands by Ashly L. Totten.

Lawrence W. Cramer rose to the rank of Governor. He was Lieutenant Governor at St. Croix which office he abolished when he took the reins of government. The better thinking people believed Cramer the most liberal white man to set foot on the islands. During his eight years as chief executive it was difficult to trace the least spark of race prejudice in him.

The story is told by many natives that at a social function given at the government mansion he amazed the light colored Bourbons by dancing with a colored woman. This of course was too much for the "lily whites" who became infuriated and the colored "I Ams" were highly insulted.

Mr. [illegible]

Following the footsteps of his predecessor Cramer worked hard for the future welfare of the islands. Hated by the "lily whites" and the uppercrusts Cramer failed to receive that co-operation he so sadly needed and which the sympathetic underprivileged classes could not give to much advantage. He soon got into difficulties when he recommended appropriations for better public facilities in the islands.

He fought for slum clearance, better hospitalization for the care of the sick, more schools for children and cheaper electric current. Because of the poor at[illegible] given insane patients, [illegible] ments were made for their [illegible] to the St. Elizabeth Hos[illegible] Washington, D. C.

Slum Clearance Not Wanted

[illegible] the forces of destruction [illegible] determined to defeat every [illegible] made. Slum [illegible] not [illegible] current [illegible] would be displeas[illegible] the West India Compa[illegible] the franchise. Certain [illegible] lobbied in Washington against it.

When Cramer recommended that suitable compensation be paid to a poor woman whose little home was demolished by a government truck, they turned it down. Chilled response to a recommendation for more school buildings to relieve the children crowded in the hot school rooms was met for no intelligent reason.

At one time the speaker of the House at the behest of the capitalists argued that the governor should not introduce bills in the Municipal Council and because of his behaviour the Governor had to withdraw from the joint legislative meeting. It was clear to the writer who witnessed this scene that the [illegible] privileged classes had many stool pigeons in their ranks.

Cramer resigned. No reasons were given.

The task of policing the Organic Act falls upon the shoulders of the Municipal council. This requires strict vigilance because [illegible] already too many [illegible] entals down in the islands holding jobs that rightfully belong to the natives and which they contend is contrary to the language expressed in the act.

Unfortunately, however, there are a few natives who do not add much dignity to the positions they hold. While continentals point to the shortcomings of a few and close their eyes to the [illegible]ity who do reflect great credi[illegible] the problems confronting [illegible] land people is the lack of water supply.

Conservation of water during the rainy season is the only means of remedy to combat the severe droughts. With more water the natives could raise enough fruits and vegetables for home consumption. They need water for [illegible] stock farms. If an irrigation pl[illegible] were set up those [illegible] in agriculture would soon find a way to make the islands self-supporting.

In order to promote the tourist trade comparable with the Bermudas, Bahamas and Florida there ought to be running water on the more inviting and beautiful bathing beaches.

Now unless vacationists prefer accommodations in such hotels as the Blue Beard Castle which incidentally is under the management of a capable native with experience on the mainland, it is difficult to find real modern bungalows such as the average big city dweller would desire.

This, however, does not mean that one could not adjust himself to semi-modern home life. It must be remembered that there are also numerous towns and villages on the mainland whose accommodations are not near as comfortable.

THE AFRO-AMERICAN, DECEMBER 20, 1941

Red Caps Want Bag Fee In Fare

CHICAGO, Ill.—The United Transport Service Employees' Union, this week, proposed to the Association of American Railroads that the ten-cent charge for handling passengers' hand baggage at railroad station be abolished through inclusion of this service in the regular passenger rates of railroads.

This proposal of the union, which is seeking an immediate adjustment of an eighteen-month controversy, followed the announcement by the association that a 10 per cent increase in passenger fares would be sought by American railroads before Interstate Commerce Commission soon.

The union outlined six points to the association on why the charge should be eliminated and the service included in the passenger rates sought by the railroads.

Anticipated Objection Answered

Union spokesmen also stated:

"Some may say that the inclusion of this charge in passenger fares is impossible since all passengers do not use red caps' service and therefore should not be charged for that which they do not use.

"To this argument we wish to call attention to the baggage service for which all pasengers are charged and for which only a small percentage of passengers apply.'"

The Pittsburgh Courier SATURDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1941

"THE NEGRO HAS A GREAT STAKE IN THIS WAR" --Randolph

"If The United States Loses, The Negro Is Through In The Western World"

By A. PHILIP RANDOLPH

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Japan has fired upon the United States, our country. We, all of us, black and white, Jew and Gentile, Protestant and Catholic, are at war, not only with Japan but also with Hitler and the Axis powers.

What shall the Negro do? There is only one answer. He must fight. He must give freely and fully of his blood, toil, tears and treasure to the cause of victory for the United States over Japan, Nazi Germany, and world Fascism.

There is no alternative to this decision. There should be no alternative to the obligations, responsibilities and duties of American citizenship.

We cannot escape this fact. We ought not to want to escape it. Happily, the Negro has never sought to escape it in the wars and crises of the past of our country.

Moreover, the Negro has a great stake in this war. It is the stake of democracy—at home and abroad. Without democracy in America, flawed though it be, the Negro would not have even the right to fight for his rights. Under the rule of Japan, Nazi Germany, or Fascist Italy minority groups like the Negro and organized labor are not only without rights, such as freedom of speech, the press, assembly, petition, trial by jury, and habeas corpus, and so forth, they don't have the right to exist. They are liquidated or put into concentration camps for non-conformity to the pattern of totalitarian regimentation.

If the democratic nations are swept under the sword and fire of Hitler and Japan, our America is not secure; and if the United States goes down, the Negro is through in the western world.

MUST ALSO FIGHT ON HOME FRONT

But the fight to stop and destroy totalitarian Japan, Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy and their Axis partners also involves the obligation, responsibility and task for the Negro people to fight with all their might for their constitutional, democratic rights and freedoms here in America—including equality of opportunity to work in all categories of skills upon a basis of ability and merit in the defense and non-defense industries; to full and equal integration to and participation in the army, navy, air corps, and marine; in short, the right to the full stature of constitutional citizenship, free from discriminations, segregations and jim-crowisms of any kind and all kind.

Negroes cannot ask for anything more, nor can they accept anything less.

UNITY NEEDED

Yes, Negroes must fight. We must answer the call for national unity. We must see to it that the United States wins this war and wins the peace. For the interests, future and destiny of the Negro are fundamentally tied up with the interests, future and destiny of our country; and the interests, future and destiny of the United States are tied up with the interests, future and destiny of Great Britain and her allies.

We must fight to preserve democracy and liberty such as we now have in the world so that we may make it sounder and better. And Negroes must demand the right to fight and work along side their fellow white Americans as full and equal citizens, workers and soldiers, sailers, air and marine men.

If we fail to fight to make the democratic process work in America while we fight to beat down Japan and Hitler, we will be traitors to democracy and liberty and the liberation of the Negro people.

THE AFRO-AMERICAN, DECEMBER 20, 1941

Among Railroads and Pullman Workers

By JAMES H. HOGANS

WAGE INCREASE PREFERRED

Following a series of meetings at their New York headquarters last week, union dining car employees expressed preference for increased wages rather than shorter working hours as the alternative in their working conditions.

Preceding the railroad strike vote and the final recommendation of the President's Emergency Committee that non-operating employees be given 10 per cent wage increases, dining car labor leaders contended for shorter working hours for dining car employees, the premise being that the shorter hour schedule would automatically be a contributing force to wage increases.

In the system used for dining car workers, the hour factor is important, and is one of the essential levers in pumping increased earnings.

Apparently the workers proceeded on the theory, however, that a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

Meanwhile, the election of officers of Local 370 of the Dining Car Employees, concluded last week, disclosed that Virginia Wheeler, a waitress on the New Haven Railroad, had been elected a vice-president of the union.

Others elected were:

T. E. Jackson, president; Halton Henry, vice-president; Claude H. Mason, secretary-treasurer; George E. Brown, general chairman of the executive committee;

Richard W. Smith, chairman, and Ossie Long, vice-chairman, Chicago branch; Chester A. Eaton, chairman, and Theodore Chisholm, vice-chairman, Boston & Albany; Joseph Quinn, chairman, and Joseph Callender, vice-chairman, New Haven; Jacob Hammond, chairman, and Henry Johnstone, Lehigh; William Lockhart, chairman, and H. B. Stroud, vice-chairman, Lackawanna; and Archibald Simmons, chairman, and William King, vice-chairman, Erie.

* * *

NO HOLIDAY TRIPS

No Christmas or holiday trips will be granted railroad and Pullman employees between December 15 and January 15, according to notice issued to those workers. Even passes which were issued to employees for pleasure travel during that period have been recalled.

As result of the war declaration and the movement of troop trains, all available employees will be needed for service, the notice stated.

Pullman has increased its porters' force by twenty new men, and has recalled all those on furlough, in the New York District alone.

* * *

VETERANS UPSET

As result of Pullman's losing the parlor-car service on the New York Central's new Empire State Express, ten veteran porters were out of regular runs last week, causing quite an upset in the New York and Buffalo Districts.

One of those displaced, Ernest Johnson, had been running on the old Empire for thirty-five years, and knew every regular rider by name.

Tom Lefthouse, Harry Tibbs, Joe Smith, Al Roane, James Monroe and William Taylor, of Buffalo, all within the 40-year class, were also seeking new runs.

The new streamliner's porters are waiters who have been recruited from the Central's dining car department. Just how efficient they will prove as car attendants is considered problematic by the displaced men since, as they contend, a good porter, like a good waiter, acquires that reputation through experience.

At any rate, it is pretty generally agreed by railroad men that it takes training to make an experienced car porter.

* * *

A SERVICE RECORD

Speaking of wars the other day, Custodian J. Sylvester Brown explained that his branch of the Brown clan had furnished nine fighters in the last World War, and that five of the clan will see service in this war, one of whom is his oldest son, Captain James Sylvester Brown, Jr., of the 369th Coast Artillery Regiment.

Richard A. Brown, another son, is a motorman on the Independent Subway system, and a third son, Robert S., is expected to be called for military service in a few days.

THE NEW YORK AGE

Saturday, December 20, 1941

THE NEGRO AND THE WAR

By A. PHILIP RANDOLPH

Japan has fired upon the United States, our country. We, all of us, black and white, Jew and Gentile, Protestant and Catholic, are at war, not only with Japan but also with Hitler and the Axis powers.

What shall the Negro do? There is only one answer. He must is only one answer. He must fight. He must give freely and fully of his blood, toil, tears and treasure to the cause of victory for the United States over Japan, Nazi Germany and world fascism.

There is no alternative to this decision. There should be no alternative to this decision. We are citizens of these United States and we must proudly and bravely assume the obligations, responsibilities and duties of American citizenship. We cannot escape this fact. We ought not to want to escape it. Happily, the Negro has never sought to escape it in the wars and crises of the past of our country.

Moreover, the Negro has a great stake in this war. It is the stake of democracy — at home and abroad. Without democracy in America, limited though it be, the Negro would not have even the right to fight for his rights. Under the rule of Japan, Nazi, Germany, or Fascist Italy minority groups like the Negro and organized labor are not only without rights, such as freedom of speech, the press, assembly, petition, trial by jury and habeas corpus and so forth they don't have the right to exist. They are liquidated or put into concentration camps for nonconformity to the pattern of totalitarian regimentation.

If the democratic nations are swept under the sword and fire of Hitler and Japan, our America is not secure, and if the United States goes down, the Negro is through in the western world.

But the fight to stop and destroy totalitarian Japan, Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy and their Axis partners also involves the obligation, responsibility and task for the Negro people to fight with all their mikht for their constitutional, democratic rights and freedoms here in America—including equality of opportunity to work in all categories of skills upon a basis of ability and merit in the defense and non-defense industries; to full and equal integration and participation in the army, navy, air corps and marine; in short, the right to the full stature of constitutional citizenship, free from discriminations, segregations and jim-crowisms of any and all kind.

Negroes cannot ask for anything more, nor can they accept anything less.

Yes, Negroes must fight. We must answer the call for national unity. We must see to it that the United States wins this war and wins the peace. For the interests, future and destiny of the Negro are fundamentally tied up with the interests, future and destiny of our country; and the interests, future and destiny of the United States are tied up with the interests, future and destiny of Great Britain and her allies.

We must fight to preserve democracy and liberty such as we now have in the world so that we may make it sounder and better. And Negroes must demand the right to fight and work alongside their fellow white Americans as full and equal citizens, workers and soldiers, sailors, air and marine men.

If we fail to fight to make the democratic process work in America while we fight to beat down Japan and Hitler, we will be traitors to democracy and liberty and the liberation of the Negro people.

— 30 —

PRESIDENT SETS UP LABOR PEACE PLAN THAT BARS STRIKES

1941

Amicable Settlement of All Disputes and Board to Handle Them Also in Formula

INDUSTRY 'TAKES ORDERS'

But Leaders Reiterate Stand That Closed Shop Should Not Be Issue for Arbitration

By W. H. LAWRENCE
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23—President Roosevelt promulgated today a three-point formula designed to guarantee uninterrupted production during the war by providing final arbitration of all disputes between employers and employes. He turned down industry's demand that the closed shop be ruled out as an arbitrable question.

Mr. Roosevelt acted as it became apparent that the industry-labor conference, convened by him, could never reach the unanimous accord he desired, due to the deadlock between the twelve industrialists and the twelve leaders of labor on the question of extending the closed shop to factories now operating under the open shop.

The final agreement on basic war labor policy was forced by the President when he accepted the three points on which industry and labor generally were in accord, and ignored the fourth and final proposition of industry, dealing with the closed shop.

The industry-labor [illegible] was called to meet this afternoon after [illegible] its moderator, and Senator Elbert Thomas, Democrat, of Utah, associate moderator, had reported to the President the deadlock upon the union shop question.

TEXT OF PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Mr. [illegible] read this letter from the [illegible]

"Gentlemen of the conference:

"Moderator Davis and Senator Thomas have reported to me the results of your deliberations. They have given me each proposition which you have discussed. I am happy to accept your general points of agreement as follows:

"1. There shall be no strikes or lockouts.

"2. All disputes shall be settled by peaceful means.

"3. The President shall set up a proper War Labor Board to handle these disputes.

"I accept without reservation your covenants that there shall be no strikes or lockouts and all disputes shall be settled by peaceful means. I shall proceed at once to act on your third point.

"Government must act in general. The three points agreed upon cover of necessity all disputes that may arise between labor and management.

"The particular disputes must be left to the consideration of those who can study the particular differences and who are thereby prepared by knowledge to pass judgment in the particular case. I have full faith that no group in our national life will take undue advantage while we are faced by common enemies.

"I congratulate you—I thank you, and our people will join me in appreciation of your great contribution.

"Your achievement is a response to a common desire of all men of good-will that strikes and lockouts cease and that disputes be settled by peaceful means.

"May I now wish you all a Merry Christmas.

"Very sincerely yours,

"(signed)

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

Industrialists "Stunned"

The industrialists were stunned, as one of them put it, by the President's letter. They had expected an opportunity to present to the

Continued on Page Thirty-two

A. H. COMPTON URGES AID TO PEACE FORUM

1941

Calls on Religious Leaders to Take Part in August Sessions of Williamstown Institute

CLEAVAGE ON WAR HAILED

Argument Will Resolve Into 'Formula of Action' for End of Hostilities, He Says

By ARTHUR HOLLY COMPTON
Nobel Prize Physicist, Co-chairman National Conference of Christians and Jews

Momentous issues produce great diversities of opinion. It is so with the question of war or peace today. Almost by the hour, editorial writers and radio commentators conjure up a thousand good reasons why the United States must eventually enter the war or a thousand good reasons why we should stay out of it. Never before in the history of the country has such a torrent of words been poured over a contemporary question. Like a catalytic agent stirred into the fluid of popular thought, there is hope that these torrential atoms of argument will finally resolve the American will into an effective formula of action.

As the debate rages, we find religionists no more in agreement as to national policy than businessmen, Senators or school teachers. I have talked to large numbers of religious leaders within recent months. There are many of them, devout and sincere, who feel with certainty that the world will never know freedom and peace as long as Hitler and the Third Reich are permitted to stand. Equally devout, equally sincere are those who vigorously oppose war on the interpretation that it is morally and spiritually wrong under any thesis.

That such division of thought exists in the present crisis is not a symbol of weakness in either church or State. On the contrary, this is the true America and the source of its strength. Just as sure as I am that right makes might, I am certain that ultimately we will make our decision as we have made it before, and that it will be better and wiser both for ourselves and the whole world, because it will have been born from the sweated soul-searching of a whole nation rather than the narrow depths of a single brain.

Although I have found great areas of disagreement among religious leaders on the pressing problems of the hour, I have also discovered that there is one question on which all such leaders are now in complete agreement. That is the issue of peace.

Finds Unity on Peace Effort

However heated and acrimonious the point of view of minister, priest or rabbi regarding the steps for dealing with the questions posed by this morning's headlines, I find the clergy united in assuming that the United States must take an active hand in the problems of the world after the war, with the effort to secure a just and durable peace.

There is unanimity, too, in the view that this must not be a coerced peace, built on inequalities and injustices and supported by the weight of tremendous armaments. It must be founded for one thing on a system which will permit all nations equitable access to material needs of their peoples.

Because the world has been so busy with war, it has thus far found little time to talk of peace. Mr. Churchill has consistently resisted the pressure to disclose positive "war aims," limiting himself to the negative one of eliminating the Nazi threat. Our own President has gone no further than to demand for the world four freedoms, "freedom of speech, freedom to worship, freedom from want and freedom from fear."

Whether there is just cause, from the standpoint of national policy and the general welfare, for the heads of the democratic nations to refrain from committing their governments on the questions of post-war policies, is a fit subject for debate. Admittedly the plea of pressure of immediate objectives holds some validity.

In the world today millions of men are toiling over the blueprints of war. The United States, speeding its defense program, is turning out high-speed bombers every few days at a cost of a quarter-million dollars each. Our scientists have been drafted from their peacetime study of new by-products of the soy bean to the design of submarine detectors. Amid all this vast effort for war, who is there to undertake the designing of blueprints for peace?

Peace Blueprints Are Outlined

The blueprints of peace must combine realism with idealism. Those who draw them this time must be able to blend high spiritual vision with a comprehension of the practical difficulties involved in feeding hundreds of millions of hungry mouths. To be lasting, the design for a post-war must provide for the application of science to the problems of trade and international relations, and yet weave in its outlines the noblest concepts of man.

The peace of the last war demonstrated forcibly that the evolving of peace principles cannot safely be left to the machinations of a small coterie of high-placed diplomats. If peace is to be lasting, then it must be inspired by those whose love for justice and freedom will be un[illegible] in every phrase of [illegible] war treaties. Where can [illegible]ders so devoted to [illegible] of peace? If religion [illegible] provide [illegible]mist spoke in vain, [illegible] leaders here and abroad [illegible]ready been active in the [illegible] of a post-war peace. The[illegible] concern with this pro[illegible] already reflected itself in a number of positive declarations. The forthright statements of Pope Pius XII, the Oxford Conference in 1937, the American Council of the World Alliance for International Friendship and the Malvern Conference of Church of England leaders in January are convincing evidence that religion at this hour can provide the leadership which no other segment of the population will take time to produce amid the hurried preparations for war.

The peace which we desire, however, will not be a Baptist, a Roman Catholic or a Church of England peace. It must be born from the united and concentrated leadership of apostles in all religious denominations and groups. The proposals advanced to date have the common fault that they represent the particular point of view of limited and to some extent partisan bodies and are not truly representative of the leadership and common ideals in all religions.

Common Ground for Peace Urged

How urgent is the need for common ground among religious leaders in advocating principles of peace was recently cited by John Foster Dulles, chairman of the Commission to Study the Bases of a Just and Durable Peace, of the Federal Council of Churches, in his remarks before the first North American Ecumenical Conference in Toronto.

When the Versailles Conference met to make the peace following the last war, according to Mr. Dulles, the churches exerted absolutely no influence on its deliberations. The results of this failure on the part of religious leaders to make their influence felt is already documented in history. Mr. Dulles was hopeful, however, that the churches would have a great deal of influence at the next peace conference if the [illegible] win, because of their early [illegible] concern with the prob[illegible] the present time.

The forthcoming I[illegible]ute of Human Relations at [illegible]mstown, Aug. 24 to 29, under the sponsorship of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, plans to discuss the post-war order under the broad theme of "The World We Want to Live In." Bringing together as it does Protestants, Catholics and Jews from all sections of the country and from various strata of American life, this institute holds forth promise of accomplishment hitherto lacking in the previous investigations of this problem.

Clergy, educators, labor leaders, public officials, youth representatives, business men and others have been invited to join in discussions of the new peace from every avenue of concern, economics, sociology, education, politics and religion. For the first time a national educational forum, directed by religious leaders, is to delve into such questions [illegible] the rest of the world has found [illegible]le time to consider.

District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, for example, will head a panel of distinguished citizens who will discuss the rights and duties of "Citizens in the World We Want to Live In." The economic basis of an improved wor[illegible] be forthrightly explore[illegible]rd Coonley of the Nat[illegible] A[illegible]tion of Manufacture[illegible]; A. [illegible] Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Pullman P[illegible]ters; Representative Jerry V[illegible]his of California and Reuben [illegible] Markham, foreign correspodn[illegible] and author of "The Wave of the Past."

Research Results to Be Told

Results of the wide research into the fundamentals of the next peace, now being carried on by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, will be laid before the institute by Dr. Walter Van Kirk of the Commission to Study the Basis of a Just and Durable Peace. How the evil effects of nationalism in our century can be overcome will be discussed by the eminent historian and world authority, Professor Carlton J. H. Hayes of Columbia University.

That South America can make a rich cultural contribution to its northern neighbors will be demonstrated by Nelson A. [illegible]feller and a company of S[illegible]rican statesmen. In its [illegible]ing meeting outstandi[illegible]ans will seek to answe[illegible]tion "Has the Democracy [illegible] Western Hemisphere a W[illegible]re?"

Social scientists, ed[illegible] community leaders, psyc[illegible] and many other experts [illegible] on hand at morning meet[illegible] to probe everyday problems of human relations among Americans. Specialized round-table meetings each noon hour will be le[illegible]y President George N. Shuster [illegible] Hunter College (Faculty and [illegible]dents' section); Dr. William G[illegible]Carr of the [illegible] States Educat[illegible]al Policies Co[illegible]ion (school teachers and administrators); Dr. Clyde R. Miller of Columbia University (youth organizations); John R. Steelman, Department of Labor (business, labor and industry); Dr. Benson Y. Landis of the Rural Life Association (rural organizations); and Rabbi Judah Nadich of Chicago, the Rev. Michael Ahern of Boston and Dr. Ashby Jones of Atlanta (religious organizations).

The 1941 Institute of Human Relations is significant in view of the fact that it is urgent that to the principles of problems of peace be given the best in human intelligence now. To wait until the shelling and bombing have ceased will be too late. Quickly improvised peace treaties can only lead to another and even more devastating war in another two decades. If leaders will press this cause now, if they can stand united in conviction with a great army of right-thinking Americans when the hostilities have halted, the force of their opinions will be irresistible.

As co-chairman of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, it is a pleasure for me to invite the active support of religious leaders and other forward-looking people in the Williamstown Institute. It is our hope, and I believe a reasonable expectation, that the discussion at this institute may materially influence the shape of the peace to come. May I urge you individually to join this, the cooperative crusade for a peace based on justice and freedom, with all the resources at your command.

1942

Capitol Vacation Club Purchases Defense Bonds

Members of the Capital Vacation Club, at their annual banquet held at the Odd Fellows' Home, on Thursday, announced the purchase of $250 worth of defense bonds which will be placed in the organization's treasury.

The club, composed of Pullman porters working out of the Washington Terminal, has twenty-five members, most of whom with their wives were present for the banquet.

Principal speakers included David L. Evans, president of the group; the Rev. Marshall Robinson, W. S. Anderson, John I. Anderson, representative of the James Reese Europe Post No. 5, of the American Legion, and Q. V. Shelton of Cleveland, Ohio.

The club president outlined the purpose of the organization and stressed the need for fullest support of the nation by every one of its citizens during the present emergency.

Mr. Anderson Speaks

W. S. Anderson cited the contributions made to America by colored women of the [illegible] and urged that the wom[illegible] carry on in the tradi[illegible] journer Truth, Harr[illegible] and other leaders o[illegible]

Remarks were als[illegible] Mrs. W. S. Anderso[illegible] Mr. S. B. McCartrey.

1942

Capitol Vacation Club Entertains

Members of [illegible] tion shown ab[illegible] nual banquet, [illegible] day, at the Odd Fellows' [illegible] in Washington, D.C.

In the cent[illegible] et are shown, left to right, J[illegible] Carter, Edward Craig, W. S. Anderson, S. Walton, S. Beasley, and J. Isabel. Below, wives of the members shown are, left to right, Mrs. Daisy Pryor, Mrs. J. M. Fair, Mrs. Albert Sandle, and Mrs. Lucretia Bell.

1942

Vacation Club Gets Ultimatum from Randolph

Washington railroad workers are watching closely the outcome of a controversy raging in pullman porter circles over the ultimatum issued to the vacation club to disband.

A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, is said to have issued the order several weeks ago to the club, composed of brotherhood members who were suspected by local officials of having political aspirations.

The vacation club, of which David L. Evans is president, was organized last fall at which time it was announced that members would use funds raised through public affairs to take vacations this summer.

Believed Political Move

The club allegedly attracted a large number of the brotherhood membership who rallied to the banner of W. S. Anderson, former president of the local. It was suspected by local officials of a political maneuvering.

Mr. Anderson, elected with a large majority, is reported to have resigned this post when Mr. Randolph refused to make the women's auxiliary subservient to the male body during a controversy.

Quit or Be Kicked Out

While Mr. Anderson held no office in the vacation club, it was believed that this organization was the nucleus of a strong political fiction which threatened the local.

It was on this premise that Mr. Randolph, at a public meeting, ordered the club to either disband or have its union membership revoked.

To date no final action has been taken. Officals of the local refused to comment when queried by the AFRO. Members of the club also withheld comment until the matter is settled.

BETTER WAGES FOR RED CAPS

During the latter part of this month, [illegible] 25 to 27, in W[illegible]ton, the President's Commit[illegible] Fair Employment [illegible]ice will hold hearings on [illegible]mination against th[illegible]loyment and upgrading of Negro Americans in t[illegible]oad industry. Since such large numbers of Negro[illegible] employed on the nation's rail system in various ca[illegible]es, it is quite obvious that these hearings are of gre[illegible] moment to the entire Negro people with whose vital economic interests they are so closely and heavily concerned. For that reason, the whole community should support the locals of the United Transport Service Employees Association (CIO), the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters (AFL), and the Dining Car Employees Union (AFL), in gathering and sifting evidence of discrimination to submit to the FEPC.

There is one issue which is sure to be brought out by the UTSEA at the hearings, and that is better wages. The Redcaps have sought to prevent the counting of their tips as part of the 30-cents-an-hour minimum wage guaranteed by the Fair Labor Standard Act. All other trade unions as well as the general public should send telegrams and letters to Congressmen urging that the Amendment to the Fair Labor Standard Act designed to prohibit the counting of tips as part of the minimum wage be reintroduced and passed in this coming session of Congress.

Pullman Maids Doomed as Railroads Cut Frills

NEW YORK — A number of Pullman maids, some of them employed for more than thirty years, will lose their jobs December 1 under a program of elimination of "frills" from railroad services.

Barber and stenographer services on certain deluxe trains will also be abolished as a result of war-time recommendations of the Office of Defense Transportation.

1942

Deferment for Some Rail and Mine Workers

Washi[illegible]ton, May 5 (AP).—General Hersh[illegible]rector of Selective Service, ad[illegible] state directors today that pe[illegible]s engaged in "critical occupatio[illegible]" within the coal production and railroad transportation industries may be considered for deferment from military service as "necessary men."

He declared coal production and railroad transportation were activities necessary to the nation's war effort.

The "critical occupations" in the coal industry were certified to the Selective Service System by the Bureau of Mines. Sixty-two occupations were listed. Seventy-nine railroad occupations considered "critical" were certified by the Office of Defense Transportation.

Chicago $1-Year Men in WPB Posts Listed

1942

Eleven Serve Without Pay In Arms Drive

Washington Bureau of The Chicago Sun.

Washington, March 25.—Forty-two business and industrial executives of Chicago and vicinity are on the rolls of the War Production Board as $1-a-year men or serving without compensation, it was disclosed in a list made public tonight.

The list was divided into three categories: (1) $1-a-year employees, (2) temporary $1-a-year employees whose status had not received final approval pending investigation, and (3) consultants and technical advisers serving without pay.

Chicago and vicinity had 18 men on the $1-a-year basis; 13 on the temporary $1-a-year basis and 11 on the without compensation basis.

Former Connections.

The 18 $1-a-year men and their former connections included:

Wyndham R. Bean, retired; Charles W. Berquist, Western Electric; A. J. Browning, United Wall Paper Factories; Harvey Clements, Bemis Bag Company; Ralph J. De Motle, Sears Roebuck & Co.; Seymour Graham, National Soda Straw Company; J. Howard Hamilton, American Can Company; William V. Kahler, Illinois Bell Telephone; George J. Kelday, International Harvester Company; Douglas Kirk, Quaker Oats Company; James S. Knowlson of Cicero, Stewart-Warner Corporation; George A. Landry, Western Electric; Merrill Meigs, Chicago Herald-American; Paul A. Mertz, Sears, Roebuck; William Kenneth Miller, Consolidated Edison; John Morrow Jr., International Harvester; Morton Claire Mumma, Sears, Roebuck, and Roy Porter, Marshall & Huschert Machinery Company.

The temporary $1-a-year men and their former connections:

Ben Alexander, Masonite Corp.; John H. Bickley, utilities consultant; Joseph L. Block, Inland Steel Co.; Neil A. Fowler, General Box Co.; David E. Gamble, Berg & Beck Co.; F. B. Lautzenheiser, International Harvester; Anthony A. Mulac, United Drill & Tool Co.; William M. Parrish, International Harvester; Alphon Penrod, Western Electric; William A. Singer, Apex Smelting Co.; Morris R. Stanley, Victory Chemical Works; A. Rush Watkins, Ready Foods Co., and W. T. Westervelt, Encyclopedia Brittanica.

Serve Without Pay.

The 11 serving without pay:

Will W. Alexander, Julius Rosenwald Fund; John C. Aspley, Dartnell Corp.; Cornelius J. Byrne, Mandel Bros.; Earl Dickerson, no former connection listed; T. W. Grassell, Wilson Steel & Wire; George E. Hoffman, Crane Co.; Benjamin Holliker, Montgomery Ward & Co.; Robert W. Husband, E. L. Essley Machinery Co.; Robert S. Keeler, Delta Star Electric Co.; Henry P. Nelson, International Harvester, and George R. Ray, Marshall & Huschert Machine Co.

Hillman Accused Of 'Freeze-Out'

Commentator Alleges Clothing Favoritism

Washington Bureau of The Chicago Sun.

Washington, March 25.—A charge that $1-a-year-man Sidney Hillman was directing a War Production Board labor policy that favored his union and 'froze out" others, was heard today by a House military affairs subcommittee investigating war production.

Fulton Lewis Jr., news commentator, told the committee, headed by Representative Charles I. Faddis (Dem., Pa.), he had conclusive evidence that Hillman, still receiving $12,000 annually from the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union (Congress of Industrial Organizations), made it the policy for the WPB to award war contracts for clothing only to factories employing members of that union.

Charles Carroll, a Philadelphia publisher who recently resigned from "the trouble shooting" section of the OPM, told the committee that business was "suspicious" of certain high officials in WPB, including Hillman.

Reporters were excluded from the committee room soon after Carroll began his testimony.

In Cleveland, Lewis said, the Prince Biederman Company, which had been manufacturing women's garments primarily and some men's clothing, applied for an Army contract, and after an investigation, was told that the plant was suitable. "In fact," Lewis said, "the president of the company told me the Army was enthusiastic about the factory."

On Jan. 13, 1942, Lewis continued, H. F. Mueller, president of the concern, received a letter from the Quartermaster Corps in Philadelphia, which said:

"Since our visit to your factory the policy of the Office of Production Management has been changed to award contracts only to factories which manufacture men's clothing."

This, said Lewis, meant only those factories employing Mr. Hillman's union.

LABOR FRONT

GEORGE McCRAY

NEGRO CIO LEADERS SAY RANDOLPH SHOULD QUIT AFL

With the exception of Joe Louis, A. Philip Randolph undoubtedly has the highest news value of any Negro in the United States. In this respect he far outshines his up and coming fellow trade unionist, Willard S. Townsend, president of the CIO's United Transport Service Employes union. This seems to be purely a temporary situation, however, for while Townsend's sun is rising with the united support of liberal and progressive elements in the country, particularly the CIO, the AFL seems to be determined to "black out" Randolph completely.

For the moment anything that Randolph says or does or anything that happens to him is news. He was even an issue at the fifth annual convention of the CIO at Boston. So far as I know, this was the first time a Negro became an issue at conventions representing dominant segment of the American labor movement.

At the CIO convention, Phil Murray made a statement to the convention which indicated he had watched carefully Randolph's efforts at the sixty-second convention of the AFL at Toronto, Canada. Said he while defending a resolution on discrimination: "Might I say . . . that we are the only labor organization I know of anywhere in this country that is giving intelligent consideration to the problems of racial discrimination."

Negro CIO delegates were fearful that the poor showing of Randolph at the AFL convention would cause the CIO to become too easily satisfied with their own efforts. Said Townsend:

"Randolph's acceptance of the do-nothing policy of the AFL is hurting the whole fight against discrimination." Chicago Defender

Boyd Wilson, Phil Murray's administrative assistant in the United Steelworkers of America, asked: "Why does Randolph stand for it; why doesn't he quit?"

W. Richard Carter, general executive board member of the CIO's Industrial Marine and Shipbuilding union, which union expelled several white members at the Baltimore shipyards for inciting racial hatreds, said: "Brother, it simply burns me up to see a Negro leader like Randolph take the pushing around he is getting from the AFL."

NEGROES WON'T TAKE IT—

The "American Federationist," official organ of the American Federation of Labor, devotes its November issue to reporting the proceedings of the Toronto convention This issue carries a picture of Milton P. Webster addressing the convention on an anti-discrimination resolution, but quotes Randolph as saying: "Twenty million people cannot be kept down. . . The Negro people are not going to continue to take it."

Meanwhile, the CIO took a most important step this week to strengthen its Anti-Discrimination committee. Murray, on suggestion of Joe Curran, is reported to have appointed another Negro, Ferdinand Smith, able national secretary of the left-wing National Maritime union, to membership on the committee.

The National Maritime union, like the United Automobile Workers union, has been waging a most successful campaign against prejudice and discrimination against Negro defense workers. Much of the success which the National Maritime union has achieved in getting berths for Negroes on ships owned by companies which had refused to use Negro seamen, is due directly to union leadership. He led and won the fight for mixed Negro and white crews, and for the placing of a Negro captain in charge of at least one Liberty ship.

It is also reported that the Automobile workers with the backing of President R. J. Thomas is asking why Walter Hardin has not been made a member of the committee. At present Hardin is a member of the Inter-Racial Committee of the United Automobile Workers union. Present members of the CIO's anti-discrimination committee are James B. Carey, chairman; Willard S. Townsend, secretary; J. Leary, Boyd Wilson and Ferdinand Smith.

WORLD-WIDE LABOR UNITY AND RACE

IN THE WIND: A pretty substantial rumor has it that this discrimination issue will become not only a major issue between the CIO and the AFL when unity negotiations open early in December, but is taking on international importance. The American, British and Soviet Trade unions are trying to work out a plan for world-wide cooperation to win the war and to guarantee a democratic peace.

Main stumbling blocks are AFL antagonism to Soviet trade unions, its "peace-on-our terms" attitude toward CIO, and its refusal to do anything to bring about enlightened racial attitudes within the AFL. The question is how long will the British Trade Union Congress continue to dicker with the AFL before accepting the CIO into full partnership?

May Quit FEPC

It has been rumored that Lawrence Cramer, executive secretary of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee may resign his position to accept a teaching post at Harvard University. Reasons for the intended resignation are reported to be that his present job is what is known as a "a hot spot," heads of governmental departments being said to be resenting the quiet manner in which the Quaker-born secretary has kept pressing home the point of complying with the Presidential order of integrating colored men into jobs, to white employers.

Randolph May Run for Congress

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

NEW YORK — (ANP) — A. Philip Randolph, national director of the March on Washington movement, has been named a candidate for congressman-at-large from this State by the American Labor party.

The candidacy was made known Saturday afternoon along with the announcement that New York City's comptroller, Joseph D. McGoldrick, would head up the party's ticket.

ALP Strategy

In naming a full slate for the State elections, the ALP is apparently going through with the threat to upset the applecart of the Democrats, bring about the election of Thomas E. Dewey, the Republican standard-bearer, and place the blame on Chairman Farley. Both the left and right wings of the ALP are unalterably opposed to John J. Bennett and wholeheartedly for Senator James M. Mead whom the former defeated.

The nomination of Randolph is being viewed as a move to draw upon the strong prestige he holds among colored people throughout the city and State. In the event the ticket is actually entered the party expects to collect about a million votes, mostly at the expense of the Democrats.

LOS ANGELES TRIBUNE

January 4, 1942

NEGRO OF THE YEAR

The TRIBUNE nominates for the Negro of the Year, 1941, A. Philip Randolph for his stimulating and harnassing of the growing industrial consciousness of the American Negro.

A. Philip Randolph, who is responsible for the largest single labor organization of Negroes in the country, rendered another great service to his race in the astute statesmanship which resulted in the President's order, banning discrimination in National Defense, and forming the FEP committee.

The FEP committee has taken no revenge on companies which have caused untold injury to Negroes for generations in refusing to hire them as skilled and unskilled labor. Instead, the Committee has accomplished farther reaching aims. By providing a setting in which Negro protest groups and laborers, and white industrialists might meet in a sponsored negotiations, the Committee has accomplished a measure of education of both sides.

For all of this, A. Philip Randolph, whose proposed March on Washington had this result, is responsible.

Statesman, scholar, idealist and yet realist, A. Philip Randolph is clearly the man, not only of this year, but in the results of his activities which the farseeing may already glimpse on the horizon, of many years to come.

FLAT $24 INCREASE WAGES FOR PORTERS AND $21.60 BACK PAY

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—In the international offices of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters in New York City, A. Philip Randolph, international president, announced that the organization had signed an agreement with the Pullman company for an increase in pay of ten cents an hour or $24 a month.

This will represent an increase of over two million dollars for the Pullman porters, maids, attendants, and bus boys in the Pullman service. This group of workers will also reecive $21.60 a month for three months of back pay extending from September to December 1, observed Mr. Randolph.

TRAIN PORTERS GET BACK PAY

Wage increases were also secured by the Brotherhood for train porters who are members of the organization, representing $22.80 per month with 7½ per cent back pay extending from September to December 1.

The head of the porters' organization pointed out that various carriers with which the Brotherhood holds contracts, are being signed up rather rapidly for increases in pay ranging from ten cents for the non-operating group, including chair car, parlor car, coach and buffet porters, with the back pay of nine cents an hour; and also including train porters in the operating group at one and one-half cents wage increase with the seven and one-half per cent back pay of a three-month period.

It is estimated that the increases for the members of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters will run much above 2½ million dollars, stated Randolph. Mr. Randolph points to this notable achievement of collective bargaining for colored workers by the Brotherhood as indicative of a new era in the economic life of Negro workers in America.

Pullman Wage Hikes Exceed $2,500,000

Jan. 3 '42

NEW YORK. — The signing of an agreement with the Pullman Company calling for pay increases aggregating more than two and a half million dollars for its employees was annunced last week by A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

The increase for Pullman porters, maids, attendants and bus boys amounts to 10 cents an hour, or $24 a month. In addition, these workers are to receive three months' back pay at $21.60 a month.

[illegible] Benefited

Inc[illegible]0 per month, plus 7[illegible] back pay from Septemb[illegible]mber 1 for train porte[illegible] also covered by the agree[illegible]

Mr. Randolph pointed out that additional agreements are being signed with various carriers with which the brotherhood holds contracts.

These include 10-cent increases for the non-operating group, including chair-car, parlor-car, coach and buffet porters, with back pay at 9 cents an hour; 9½-cent increases, with back pay at 7½ cents, for train porters in the operating group.

FAIR JOB PROBERS

(Continued from Page 1)

fact that I have a three-year-old daughter makes the final decision more difficult.

NEED DEMOCRACY ON HOME FRONT

"However," he continued, "I want your readers to know that my position has not resulted in the losing of friends. I have a thorough appreciation of the fact that we must practice real democracy at home before we can preach about democracy abroad.

"Our work with the FEPC has proven conclusively to me that big industry will go along with the program. The weight of public opinion has been of such a nature that business executives have been more than willing to co-operate.

"I have had the finest of association with both the members of the committee and those industrialists whom we have touched," he continued.

MAY RESIGN

"My gravest concern now is the permanency of the program which we are putting into effect. We realize that the present emergency will someday pass, and with it the FEPC. But we want to so correlate our work that when the emergency is over, Negroes will not be the first fired and the last hired. To this end we are working towards a permanent set-up within the personnel administration and the Labor Department."

Cramer insisted however, that he has not resigned . . . as yet. He had no answer to the allegation that his wife was reported in Cambridge last week—house-hunting.

CHICAGO DEFENDER

January 3, 1942

R.R. Workers Win Increase In Salaries

ST. LOUIS. — (ANP) — A wage increase of $8,720 a year was gained for 197 train porters and brakemen in an agreement signed here Monday, Dec. 15, by the Brotherhood of Trainmen, Brakemen, Porters, Switchmen, Firemen, and Railway Employees, Inc.. whose headquarters are located in Oklahoma City, and the representatives of four railroad companies, the brotherhood announced.

The agreement signed after seven months of negotiations, also brought a guarantee for a shorter work month in decreasing the number of miles traveled monthly by the railroad employes.

The railroads affected are the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad company, St. Louis and San Francisco Railway in Texas, the Brownwood, North and South railroad and the Fort Worth and Rio Grande railroad. Several southeastern railroads, will be affected by wage increases as soon as this brotherhood finishes negotiations with the management of these railroads.

By the agreement signed in St. Louis, each of the 197 colored trainmen affected will receive $157.80 per month instead of $125 for 5,500 miles traveled monthly and additional pay for every mile in excess of 5,500.

The colored trainmen, brakemen and train porters were represented by Steve Bennett, general president, and Vernon C. Coffey, general employes' representative of the brotherhood. Mr. Bennett resides in Oklahoma City and Mr. Coffey in Kansas City, Kans.

Coffey and Bennett were formerly officers in one of the American Federation of Labor unions and were forced to incorporate by reason of having their charter revoked by A.F.L., allegedly because they represented colored trainmen, firemen, etc.

According to Coffey, the big five and the several white brotherhoods whose membership is made up of white men have seen to it that the increases granted by the President's fact-finding board in mediation only applies to white switchmen, firemen, flagmen, brakemen. "The colored men must look to their own unions to gain this increase," he said.

A device has been invented to determine the vitamin content of some foods in eight hours instead of requiring laboratory tests lasting weeks.

FAIR JOB PROBERS MAY LOSE CRAMER

Jan 3, 42

(Special to The Courier)

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 1—In an exclusive interview with the Pittsburgh Courier here, Lawrence W. Cramer, executive secretary of the Fair Employment Practices committee, denied categorically that the reason for his contemplated resignation from his post was based on the grounds that he found he was playing the role of a "martyr" and was losing caste with his friends.

Said Mr. Cramer:—"It is true that I have been offered a position to teach at Harvard. It is also true that I am seriously considering the offer. It has been a lifelong ambition of mine, and the

(Continued on Page 4, Col. 4)

COUNT BASIE STARS ON RADIO PROGRAM

NEW YORK CITY, Jan. 1—Count Basie, famous exponent of swing, starred on the Coca Cola Spotlight radio program Tuesday night over a national hookup. Basie is one of the leading contenders in the Courier Band contest.

News Cavalcade of 1

NAMES THAT MADE NEWS IN 1941

Marva Louis ... Randolph ... Powell

Outstanding News Stories Of 1941.....

MYSTERIOUS FIRE SWEEPS THROUGH principal business district of Mound Bayou, all-colored town in Mississippi, causing loss of over $50,000.

* * *

ADOLPHE FELIX EBOUE, CIVIL GOVERNOR of Chad, rich province in French Equatorial Africa, defies Hitler and Petain and welcomes Free French leaders thereby giving them important military base that keeps alive the spirit of France.

* * *

ELEVEN GUN SALUTE GREETS Brigadier-General Benjamin O. Davis upon his arrival at Ft. Riley, Kans., to take over command of the Ninth and Tenth cavalries. Later ordered to capital and attached to army general staff.

* * *

W. T. BROWN, JR., PROMINENT CHICAGO UNDERTAKER and former Mayor of Bronzeville, killed as his auto overturns near Dixon, Tenn. Eight thousand view body in Chicago, and detail of police required to handle crowd of 30,000 at his funeral.

* * *

COL. ANDERSON PITTS OF CHICAGO is named new commanding officer of the 184th Field Artillery, formerly the Old Eighth Illinois Infantry, at Fort Custer, Michigan.

* * *

DR. D. ORMONDE WALKER, PRESIDENT OF WILBERFORCE university, is ousted from office and Bishop R. R. Wright is named acting head until a successor is chosen.

* * *

ALD. EARL B. DICKERSON AND MILTON P. WEBSTER, both of Chicago, named by President Roosevelt as members of the Fair Employment Practice Committee to probe into job discriminations against Negroes on National Defense contracts.

* * *

BODY OF DR. WILLIS N. HUGGINS, noted New York educator and historian, who disappeared December 23, 1940, is found in the Hudson river. No motive for suicide is known.

* * *

DR. DAVID V. JEMISON OF SELMA, ALA., elected to succeed the late Rev. Lacey Kirk Williams as president of the National Baptist Convention in bitter election battle with Rev. Junius C. Austin at meet in Cleveland, Ohio.

* * *

OPEN TRIAL IN DETROIT, MICH., charging John Roxborough, co-manager of Joe Louis; Everett I. Watson, manager of Roscoe Toles, and sixty others, including Ex-Mayor Richard Reading with conspiracy and bribery in connection with numbers game. Their convictions followed later.

* * *

MAYWEATHER BROTHERS, WILLIE AND FLOYD named as chief heirs of the late Lettie Kolvin, Indian woman, who died leaving oil estate valued at 15 million dollars. Mitchell Knighten, Chicago, files suit claiming he is rightful heir to fortune, stating he was once husband of Lettie.

* * *

ATTORNEY PATRICK B. PRESCOTT, JR., appointed judge of the Municipal court of Chicago by Gov. Dwight Green. Later denied seat by Chief Justice Edward Scheffler who questioned validity of governor's appointment. Prescott to file mandamus proceedings to gain seat.

* * *

MRS. MARVA LOUIS, WIFE OF HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION Joe Louis, starts action for divorce in Chicago, charging cruelty. Offers Five Point reconciliation plan which Joe ignores, but later files answer to suit. Marva awarded $200 per week allowance pending hearing, and reconciliation takes place at Master-in-Chancery office. Joe and Marva go on second honeymoon.

* * *

ADDIS ABABA RECAPTURED. Haile Selassie returns to throne amid triumphant welcome of natives who suffered under iron-rule of Italian conquerors. Selassie issues proclamation banning slavery forever from Ethiopia.

* * *

U. S. SUPREME COURT RENDERS DECISION in case of Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell calling for uniform transportation facilities in suit filed by the Congressman who had been Jim Crowed in inter-state travel on railroad.

* * *

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ISSUES EXECUTIVE ORDER calling for Office of Production Management to cooperate in wiping out discrimination in job placements in National Defense program. March-On-Washington committee, headed by A. Philip Randolph, cancels plan for invasion of capital.

* * *

J. ERNEST WILKINS, JR., SON OF PROMINENT COLORED Chicago lawyer, is first student to receive Master of Arts degree at University of Chicago at age of seventeen.

* * *

DR. JOHN LAWLAH, DIRECTOR OF PROVIDENT hospital, Chicago, named head of Howard University Medical school, Washington, D. C.

* * *

U. S. CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS orders Ira T. Bryant ousted as secretary of A.M.E. Sunday School Union after case had been pending for several years.

* * *

RICHARD WRIGHT, AUTHOR OF "NATIVE SON," the novel that proved to be one of the best sellers, awarded the Spingarn Medal. Orson Welles, noted producer, dramatized the novel for stage purposes and starred Canada Lee in principal role.

* * *

DR. WALTER D. COCKING, dean of the University of Georgia School of Education, and Dr. Marvin S. Putman, president of Georgia Teacher's college, dismissed by Gov. Eugene Talmadge who charged that they advocated racial equality in schools. General Education Board withdraws financial support.

* * *

FOLLOWING A SENSATIONAL TRIAL during which metropolitan dailies throughout the country carried prejudiced accounts with few exceptions, Joseph Spell, chauffeur for wealthy Mrs. Eleanor Strubing, was acquitted of rape charges which she brought against him.

* * *

THE CAMPAIGN LED BY THE NATIONAL AIRMEN'S Association for the admission of Negroes into the United States army air corps, ended in partial victory when the Jim Crow 99th Pursuit Squadron was established at Tuskegee institute.

* * *

WASHINGTON POLICE WIPED THEIR BOOKS CLEAN of a series of unsolved rape attacks in the capital with the arrest of Jarvis R. Catoe, a taxi driver, who confessed attacks on seven women of both races. Catoe was later convi

DYNAMIC EVENT

Roosevelt ... First Te

Cavalcade of 1941

1941
Powell

Outstanding News Stories Of 1941.....

MYSTERIOUS FIRE SWEEPS THROUGH principal business district of Mound Bayou, all-colored town in Mississippi, causing loss of over $50,000.

* * *

ADOLPHE FELIX EBOUE, CIVIL GOVERNOR of Chad, rich province in French Equatorial Africa, defies Hitler and Petain and welcomes Free French leaders thereby giving them important military base that keeps alive the spirit of France.

* * *

ELEVEN GUN SALUTE GREETS Brigadier-General Benjamin O. Davis upon his arrival at Ft. Riley, Kans., to take over command of the Ninth and Tenth cavalries. Later ordered to capital and attached to army general staff.

* * *

W. T. BROWN, JR., PROMINENT CHICAGO UNDERTAKER and former Mayor of Bronzeville, killed as his auto overturns near Dixon, Tenn. Eight thousand view body in Chicago, and detail of police required to handle crowd of 30,000 at his funeral.

* * *

COL. ANDERSON PITTS OF CHICAGO is named new commanding officer of the 184th Field Artillery, formerly the Old Eighth Illinois Infantry, at Fort Custer, Michigan.

* * *

DR. D. ORMONDE WALKER, PRESIDENT OF WILBERFORCE university, is ousted from office and Bishop R. R. Wright is named acting head until a successor is chosen.

* * *

ALD. EARL B. DICKERSON AND MILTON P. WEBSTER, both of Chicago, named by President Roosevelt as members of the Fair Employment Practice Committee to probe into job discriminations against Negroes on National Defense contracts.

* * *

BODY OF DR. WILLIS N. HUGGINS, noted New York educator and historian, who disappeared December 23, 1940, is found in the Hudson river. No motive for suicide is known.

* * *

DR. DAVID V. JEMISON OF SELMA, ALA., elected to succeed the late Rev. Lacey Kirk Williams as president of the National Baptist Convention in bitter election battle with Rev. Junius C. Austin at meet in Cleveland, Ohio.

* * *

OPEN TRIAL IN DETROIT, MICH., charging John Roxborough, co-manager of Joe Louis; Everett I. Watson, manager of Roscoe Toles, and sixty others, including Ex-Mayor Richard Reading with conspiracy and bribery in connection with numbers game. Their convictions followed later.

* * *

MAYWEATHER BROTHERS, WILLIE AND FLOYD named as chief heirs of the late Lettie Kolvin, Indian woman, who died leaving oil estate valued at 15 million dollars. Mitchell Knighten, Chicago, files suit claiming he is rightful heir to fortune, stating he was once husband of Lettie.

* * *

ATTORNEY PATRICK B. PRESCOTT, JR., appointed judge of the Municipal court of Chicago by Gov. Dwight Green. Later denied seat by Chief Justice Edward Scheffler who questioned validity of governor's appointment. Prescott to file mandamus proceedings to gain seat.

* * *

MRS. MARVA LOUIS, WIFE OF HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION Joe Louis, starts action for divorce in Chicago, charging cruelty. Offers Five Point reconciliation plan which Joe ignores, but later files answer to suit. Marva awarded $200 per week allowance pending hearing, and reconciliation takes place at Master-in-Chancery office. Joe and Marva go on second honeymoon.

* * *

ADDIS ABABA RECAPTURED. Haile Selassie returns to throne amid triumphant welcome of natives who suffered under iron-rule of Italian conquerors. Selassie issues proclamation banning slavery forever from Ethiopia.

* * *

U. S. SUPREME COURT RENDERS DECISION in case of Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell calling for uniform transportation facilities in suit filed by the Congressman who had been Jim Crowed in inter-state travel on railroad.

* * *

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ISSUES EXECUTIVE ORDER calling for Office of Production Management to cooperate in wiping out discrimination in job placements in National Defense program. March-On-Washington committee, headed by A. Philip Randolph, cancels plan for invasion of capital.

* * *

J. ERNEST WILKINS, JR., SON OF PROMINENT COLORED Chicago lawyer, is first student to receive Master of Arts degree at University of Chicago at age of seventeen.

* * *

DR. JOHN LAWLAH, DIRECTOR OF PROVIDENT hospital, Chicago, named head of Howard University Medical school, Washington, D. C.

* * *

U. S. CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS orders Ira T. Bryant ousted as secretary of A.M.E. Sunday School Union after case had been pending for several years.

* * *

RICHARD WRIGHT, AUTHOR OF "NATIVE SON," the novel that proved to be one of the best sellers, awarded the Spingarn Medal. Orson Welles, noted producer, dramatized the novel for stage purposes and starred Canada Lee in principal role.

* * *

DR. WALTER D. COCKING, dean of the University of Georgia School of Education, and Dr. Marvin S. Putman, president of Georgia Teacher's college, dismissed by Gov. Eugene Talmadge who charged that they advocated racial equality in schools. General Education Board withdraws financial support.

* * *

FOLLOWING A SENSATIONAL TRIAL during which metropolitan dailies throughout the country carried prejudiced accounts with few exceptions, Joseph Spell, chauffeur for wealthy Mrs. Eleanor Strubing, was acquitted of rape charges which she brought against him.

* * *

THE CAMPAIGN LED BY THE NATIONAL AIRMEN'S Association for the admission of Negroes into the United States army air corps, ended in partial victory when the Jim Crow 99th Pursuit Squadron was established at Tuskegee institute.

* * *

WASHINGTON POLICE WIPED THEIR BOOKS CLEAN of a series of unsolved rape attacks in the capital with the arrest of Jarvis R. Catoe, a taxi driver, who confessed attacks on seven women of both races. Catoe was later convicted.

DYNAMIC EVENTS OF YEAR 1941

Roosevelt ... First Tenant ... Big Fortune

Joe Louis' battle "outside of the ring" began with this scene. (1) Mrs. Marva Louis and her attorney, Bindley C. Cyrus, seem to be enjoying the lawsuit at this moment in which Mrs. Louis was seeking a divorce from the champion. (2) William A. Little, well known Chicagoan, is elected Mayor of Bronzeville, and has something to smile about after going through a stormy campaign in which he won over four other contestants. (3) And here is the end of a "little disagreement." Marva and Joe leaving the master-in-chancery office after he had stopped the proceedings and he and Marva patched things up. It was the beginning of their "second honeymoon." (4) Dr. John B. West, new medical director of Provident hospital, and (5) Dr. Homer V. Wilburn, chief of staff. (6) Laying the cornerstone of Ida B. Wells housing project. Robert R. Taylor of Chicago Housing Authority is shown standing near Bishop W. J. Walls (extreme right). (7) A. Philip Randolph, head of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, who originated the "March-On-Washington" idea which resulted in President Roosevelt issuing his famous Executive Order resulting in the formation of the Fair Employment Practice committee. (8) Rev. T. W. Smith, Columbus, Ga., breaks ground for the Negro Army and Navy Y.M.C.A. for soldiers at Ft. Benning. (9) Rev. A. Clayton Powell Jr., newly elected New York alderman. (10) Chicagoans stage "Demonstration for Democracy" parade down South Parkway in opposition to segregation.

forever from Ethiopia.

* * *

U. S. SUPREME COURT RENDERS DECISION in case of Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell calling for uniform transportation facilities in suit filed by the Congressman who had been Jim Crowed in inter-state travel on railroad.

* * *

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ISSUES EXECUTIVE ORDER calling for Office of Production Management to cooperate in wiping out discrimination in job placements in National Defense program. March-On-Washington committee, headed by A. Philip Randolph, cancels plan for invasion of capital.

* * *

J. ERNEST WILKINS, JR., SON OF PROMINENT COLORED Chicago lawyer, is first student to receive Master of Arts degree at University of Chicago at age of seventeen.

* * *

DR. JOHN LAWLAH, DIRECTOR OF PROVIDENT hospital, Chicago, named head of Howard University Medical school, Washington, D. C.

* * *

U. S. CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS orders Ira T. Bryant ousted as secretary of A.M.E. Sunday School Union after case had been pending for several years.

* * *

RICHARD WRIGHT, AUTHOR OF "NATIVE SON," the novel that proved to be one of the best sellers, awarded the Spingarn Medal. Orson Welles, noted producer, dramatized the novel for stage purposes and starred Canada Lee in principal role.

* * *

DR. WALTER D. COCKING, dean of the University of Georgia School of Education, and Dr. Marvin S. Putman, president of Georgia Teacher's college, dismissed by Gov. Eugene Talmadge who charged that they advocated racial equality in schools. General Education Board withdraws financial support.

* * *

FOLLOWING A SENSATIONAL TRIAL during which metropolitan dailies throughout the country carried prejudiced accounts with few exceptions, Joseph Spell, chauffeur for wealthy Mrs. Eleanor Strubing, was acquitted of rape charges which she brought against him.

* * *

THE CAMPAIGN LED BY THE NATIONAL AIRMEN'S Association for the admission of Negroes into the United States army air corps, ended in partial victory when the Jim Crow 99th Pursuit Squadron was established at Tuskegee institute.

* * *

WASHINGTON POLICE WIPED THEIR BOOKS CLEAN of a series of unsolved rape attacks in the capital with the arrest of Jarvis R. Catoe, a taxi driver, who confessed attacks on seven women of both races. Catoe was later convicted.

1941 News Review

January

JANUARY 4

Mystery shrouds disappearance in New York of Dr. Willis N. Huggins, former Chicago educator.

Duke Ellington, band leader, wins Chicago Defender No. 1 band contest. Awarded trophy by Joe Louis, world's heavyweight boxing champion.

British withdraw recognition of Italian conquest of Ethiopia. Map plans to induct 184th field artillery (old Eighth Illinois regiment) into federal service.

JANUARY 11

Col. Oscar Randall named to lead 184th field artillery to Camp Custer, Mich., for war maneuvers.

Hold funeral services for Dr. I. H. Holloway, former Mayor of Bronzeville, in Chicago.

"Trap" Lewis and 16 others jailed by U. S. on dope charges in Chicago. Mystery fire sweeps heart of Mound Bayou, Miss. Loss estimated at $50,000. Railroad workers get $7,000,000 pay boost. 70,000 men wait pay increase set for March 1.

Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity awards Lionel F. Artis, housing manager of Indianapolis, and editor of Kappa Journal, achievement laurel wreath at confab in Kansas City, Mo.

JANUARY 18

CAIRO.—Ethiopian natives kill 4,000 Italians; capture 7,000.

Prison gates close on big Mid-west dope ring in Chicago.

Great Britain sets up jim crow bomb shelters in London as war spreads.

Expect white-wash of Memphis police terror reign against Negroes.

FWA chief bans discrimination against Negroes applying for work on housing program in Washington, D. C.

Gov. Dwight Green takes oath of office on Bible presented him by Rev. A. J. Carey, at inaugural ceremony in Springfield, Ill.

Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis assigned by War department to command Ninth and Tenth cavalry, Fort Riley, Kan.

Ida B. Wells homes, Chicago's federal housing project, gets first tenants.

JANUARY 25

Nation's Negro flyers blast Jim Crow air unit at confab in Chicago.

Order restored at Tuskegee Institute after six days of strike activities.

Four Negro priests ordained at St. Augustine seminary, at Bay St. Louis, Mississippi.

Clarence R. Johnson appointed consultant to National Defense Advisory Commission, Division of Labor Supply, at Washington, D. C.

Eunice Wilson Anderson, of Detroit, files suit for $50,000 against Chicago police officers William Davis and Oscar Ridley.

Preston Bowie, Barefield Gordon, Ernest Calloway, and St. Clair Drake swear before Chicago Defender officials that they will never fight in armed forces of the United States so long as the country maintains policy of racial segregation.

February

FEBRUARY 1

Thirteen soldiers of Harlem's 369th

One of the highlights of the inauguration of President Roosevelt was the musicale given by Negro artists in Washington at which the President's wife (1) was honored guest. Others, left to right, are Mrs. Emory Smith, Mrs. J. G. Hamm, Miss Arnetta Randall and Thomas H. R. Clark. (2) We speak in terms of millions when we talk about these three. Here are the Mayweather brothers, Willie and Floyd, of Kansas City, Kans., who were named heirs to 15 million dollars in Oklahoma oil royalties left by their relative, Lete Kolvin, an Indian woman. But Mitchell Knighten of Chicago (in center) says he was once married to Lete and has filed his claim thereby tying up the millions for awhile. (3) The largest housing project built by the gov-

Ethiopia.

* * *

E COURT RENDERS DECISION in case of Conrthur W. Mitchell calling for uniform transportation uit filed by the Congressman who had been Jim nter-state travel on railroad.

* * *

OOSEVELT ISSUES EXECUTIVE ORDER calling
Production Management to cooperate in wiping out n in job placements in National Defense program.
Vashington committee, headed by A. Philip Randolph, for invasion of capital.

* * *

ILKINS, JR., SON OF PROMINENT COLORED yer, is first student to receive Master of Arts degree of Chicago at age of seventeen.

* * *

WLAH, DIRECTOR OF PROVIDENT hospital, ned head of Howard University Medical school, Wash-

* * *

COURT OF APPEALS orders Ira T. Bryant ousted of A.M.E. Sunday School Union after case had been everal years.

* * *

GHT, AUTHOR OF "NATIVE SON," the novel that one of the best sellers, awarded the Spingarn Medal.
s, noted producer, dramatized the novel for stage purarred Canada Lee in principal role.

* * *

D. COCKING, dean of the University of Georgia Education, and Dr. Marvin S. Putman, president of her's college, dismissed by Gov. Eugene Talmadge who they advocated racial equality in schools. General ard withdraws financial support.

* * *

A SENSATIONAL TRIAL during which metropolitan hout the country carried prejudiced accounts with few seph Spell, chauffeur for wealthy Mrs. Eleanor Strub-itted of rape charges which she brought against him.

* * *

N LED BY THE NATIONAL AIRMEN'S Associadmission of Negroes into the United States army air in partial victory when the Jim Crow 99th Pursuit s established at Tuskegee institute.

* * *

POLICE WIPED THEIR BOOKS CLEAN of a olved rape attacks in the capital with the arrest of e, a taxi driver, who confessed attacks on seven women
Catoe was later convicted.

1 News Review

ary

RY 4

disappearance in Willis N. Huggins, ucator.
band leader, wins
o. 1 band contest.
Joe Louis, world's champion.
recognition of Italiopia. Map plans to rtillery (old Eighth nto federal service.

RY 11

ll named to lead to Camp Custer.
euvers.
ices for Dr. I. H.
Mayor of Bronze-

d 16 others jailed
harges in Chicago.
s heart of Mound
stimated at $50,000.
get $7,000,000 pay
wait pay increase fraternity awards using manager of editor of Kappa t laurel wreath at ity, Mo.

RY 18

natives kill 4,000 00. on big Mid-west
go.
up jim crow bomb
as war spreads.
of Memphis police terror reign against Negroes.

FWA chief bans discrimination against Negroes applying for work on housing program in Washington, D. C.

Gov. Dwight Green takes oath of office on Bible presented him by Rev. A. J. Carey, at inaugural ceremony in Springfield, Ill.

Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis assigned by War department to command Ninth and Tenth cavalry, Fort Riley, Kan.

Ida B. Wells homes, Chicago's federal housing project, gets first tenants.

JANUARY 25

Nation's Negro flyers blast Jim Crow air unit at confab in Chicago.

Order restored at Tuskegee Institute after six days of strike activities.

Four Negro priests ordained at St. Augustine seminary, at Bay St. Louis, Mississippi.

Clarence R. Johnson appointed consultant to National Defense Advisory Commission, Division of Labor Supply, at Washington, D. C.

Eunice Wilson Anderson, of Detroit, files suit for $50,000 against Chicago police officers William Davis and Oscar Ridley.

Preston Bowie, Barefield Gordon, Ernest Calloway, and St. Clair Drake swear before Chicago Defender officials that they will never fight in armed forces of the United States so long as the country maintains policy of racial segregation.

February

FEBRUARY 1

Thirteen soldiers of Harlem's 369th

One of the highlights of the inauguration of President Roosevelt was the musicale given by Negro artists in Washington at which the President's wife (1) was honored guest. Others, left to right, are Mrs. Emory Smith, Mrs. J. G. Hamm, Miss Arnetta Randall and Thomas H. R. Clark. (2) We speak in terms of millions when we talk about these three. Here are the Mayweather brothers, Willie and Floyd, of Kansas City, Kans., who were named heirs to 15 million dollars in Oklahoma oil royalties left by their relative, Lete Kolvin, an Indian woman. But Mitchell Knighten of Chicago (in center) says he was once married to Lete and has filed his claim thereby tying up the millions for awhile. (3) The largest housing project built by the government in a colored community is the Ida B. Wells project in Chicago. Here Robert R. Taylor, vice chairman of the Chicago Housing Authority, is presenting a key to the first tenants, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Warren. The project will house 1,662 families. (4) Our voices in government in action. Here stands Rep. Charles Jenkins and Rep. William Warfield at Springfield, Ill., in the midst of a discussion regarding the rights of our race to work without discrimination on all government leased contracts. (5) It took some clever generalship to pilot Dr. David V. Jemison of Selma, Ala., to the presidency of the National Baptist Convention of America, and here he is shown in Cleveland thanking the delegates for their support. Dr. Harten, Brooklyn pastor, stands nearby.

News Cavalcade of 19

RACE ACHIEVEMENTS SHOWN

Moscow ... Washington ... Chicago

Anti-Aircraft regiment, burned in mystery fire at Oswego, N. Y.

Police of Richmond, Va., charge 23-year-old Nathaniel Boone with setting his home afire, causing death of his two children, mother-in-law and another woman.

Admiral C. W. Nimitz tells special committee from National Medical association in Washington, D. C., that if Negroes are allowed to enlist in navy "they would be so superior in general to the whites that they would have to be made petty officers, and the whites would not tolerate this." This, he explained is one of the reasons for navy color-line.

Georgia governor pardons 17-year-old Marie Hatfield, charged with assault on white woman in Columbus.

First AME bishop's council to be held after the general conference of last year, will convene in New Orleans, February 13-17, with Bishop F. L. Green as host.

Plan fire-trap probe after 5 lose lives in Chicago conflagration.

Joseph Hughes becomes Mayor of Bronzeville for second time in Chicago.

Native officers of French Congo jail Nazi chieftain at Leopoldville, Belgium Congo.

Richard Wright, author of Native Son, awarded Spingarn medal at New York.

Epharim J. Still, mayor of the oldest American town owned and governed by Negroes, died at Lawnside, N. J., January 27.

FEBRUARY 8

Chicagoans storm city counsel, demanding traction job guarantee.

FEBRUARY 15

Adolphe Felix Sylvester Eboue, civil governor of Chad, rich province in French Equatorial Africa, defies Hitler and Petain.

One dead, six injured as fire destroys Club DeLisa, Chicago night club.

Chicagoans in mammoth demonstration for Democracy. 1,000 march in pa-

Plan first memorial services to honor late Robert S. Abbott, of Chicago Defender.

Edward M. Sneed, Democratic committeeman of Chicago, named in fix scandal.

Conceal details in death of Private Paul Mayo, 10th cavalry, mysteriously slain at West Point, N. Y.

Boston's 372nd Infantry to be inducted into federal services March 10.

MARCH 8

Bishop James W. Brown killed by auto in New York City.

1,000 pay tribute to late Robert S. Abbott, editor and publisher of Chicago Defender, during memorial services at Chicago.

For injuries received in auto accident in 1939, Mrs. Emma S. Gilbert, of New York, was awarded $10,000 by jury.

William O. Walker, publisher of Cleveland Call Post, elected president of Negro Newspaper Publishers' association at confab in Chicago.

Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune says she will resign from duties at Bethune-Cookman college which she founded at Daytona Beach, Fla., in order to devote more time to her work as director of NYA.

Plan auction sale to dispose of Binga Bank properties in Chicago.

MARCH 15

Plan action to avoid sale of Binga bank in Chicago.

Request for federal investigation of mysterious shooting of Ellis Reed Jr., at Fayetteville, N. C., made by United Alumni association of Chicago.

Evanston, Ill., all set for gala Bronzeville ball.

London's anger of Ethiopians rising to fever pitch as patriots report Mussolini troops slaughtering natives.

By posting $13,000 bond, Father Divine escapes jail at New York for default of $5,900 judgement against him to Mrs. Verinda Brown.

Dr. R. Percy Barnes, professor at

1941 NEWS NAMES

BRIG. GEN. BENJAMIN O. DAVIS—elevated to highest active ranking ever held by Negro in the United States army and assigned to inspector general's office in Washington, D. C.

CORNELIUS R. COFFEY—Awarded the Dwight H. Green trophy by the National Airmen's Association of America as the flyer having made the greatest contribution to the advancement of aviation in 1940.

RICHARD WRIGHT—awarded the Spingarn medal for writing "Native Son," best seller of 1940.

WILLIAM O. WALKER—Cleveland editor and publisher elected president of the Association of Negro Publishers.

REV. A. CLAYTON POWELL—conducted successful fight for jobs with bus companies in New York and was first Negro elected to membership on city council under proportional representation plan.

CONG. ARTHUR W. MITCHELL—pursued fight against denial of first class passenger privileges to Negroes by railroads in the south to favorable decision from the United States Supreme court.

HAILE SELUASSIE — Resumed seat on throne of Ethiopia and issued edict liberating all slaves in domain.

ELIE LESCOT—Former Haitian ambassador to the United States elected president of Haiti.

ETHEL WATERS—honored before 8,000 persons at annual Chicago Defender tea.

JOSEPH SPELL — acquitted of rape charges brought against him by Mrs. Stribling for whom he was employed as chauffeur in one of the year's most sensational court cases.

DR. DAVID V. JEMISON—elected president of the National Baptist convention of America in one of the stormiest sessions of the organization's history.

WILLA BROWN — successfully completed experiment set up to demonstrate ability of Negroes as flyers, the outcome of which was the admission of Negroes into the United States army air corps, and organized the only CAA approved aviation course in the public schools of this country.

JARVIS R. CATOE—Washington taxi driver, convicted of rape attacks on seven women in the nation's capital.

DR. GEORGE W. CARVER—disclosed new treatment for pyorrhea.

ADOLPHE F. S. EBOUE—civil governor of Chad, rich province in Equatorial French Arfica, defied Hitler and Petain.

ATTY. PATRICK B. PRESCOTT—appointed municipal judge in Chicago to fill unexpired term of office.

JOHN ROXBOROUGH—co-man-

artillery (formerly Eighth Infantry, Illinois National Guard).

DR. D. ORMONDE WALKER—ousted as president of Wilberforce university and succeeded by Bishop R. R. Wright, Jr., who formerly held post.

DR. JOHN LAWLAH—appointed dean of medical school, Howard university.

DR. JOHN B. WEST—named to directorship of Provident hospital, Chicago.

MARIAN ANDERSON—presented with Bok award as Philadelphia's most outstanding citizen established foundation to aid aspiring artists.

J. ERNEST WILKINS—earns masters degree at University of Chicago at age of 17.

IRA T. BRYANT—well known layman loses long fight with A.M.E. church for control of publishing house at Nashville, Tenn.

ALLEN MOTEN—son of famous educator arrested in St. Louis for impersonating an army officer.

THOMAS LEE GAY—of Detroit, quits United States Military academy charging that he was discriminated against and abused by school officials and students.

MAYWEATHER BROTHERS — Kansas City stockyards workers, named by Oklahoma Court along with Izora Alexander Lee as three major heirs to huge fortune amounting to $15,000,000 left by late Lete Kolvin, Indian woman.

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH—international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters organized and directed the threatened march on Washington which resulted in the issuance by President Roosevelt of an executive order calling for an end to discrimination against Negroes by defense contract holders and setting up the Committee on Fair Employment Practices.

DEAN DIXON — conducted the symphony orchestra of the National Broadcasting Company in a series of concerts.

JAMES W. FOWLER—became the fifth Negro to complete United States Military academy at West Point, N. Y.

VALORES J. WASHINGTON—appointed by Gov. Dwight Green of Illinois to state commerce commission.

WILLIAM E. KING—appointed by Gov. Dwight Green of Illinois to state industrial commission.

MITCHELL KNIGHTEN—Chicago roofing contractor challenges claim of Mayweather brothers and Mrs. Lee.

CRYSTAL BYRD FAUSET — named to important post of Office of Civilian Defense.

W. C. HANDY—published his autobiography.

THELMA BERLACK BOOZER—

TRAGEDIES IN WOR

Brown's Auto Death ...

valcade of 1941

-Aircraft regiment, burned in tery fire at Oswego, N. Y.

olice of Richmond, Va., charge 23-r-old Nathaniel Boone with setting home afire, causing death of his children, mother-in-law and an-r woman.

dmiral C. W. Nimitz tells special mittee from National Medical as-ation in Washington, D. C., that if roes are allowed to enlist in navy y would be so superior in general the whites that they would have be made petty officers, and the tes would not tolerate this." This, explained is one of the reasons for y color-line.

eorgia governor pardons 17-year-Marie Hatfield, charged with as-lt on white woman in Columbus.

irst AME bishop's council to be after the general conference of year, will convene in New Orle-, February 13-17, with Bishop F. L. en as host.

lan fire-trap probe after 5 lose lives Chicago conflagration.

oseph Hughes becomes Mayor of nzeville for second time in Chicago.

ative officers of French Congo jail i chieftain at Leopoldville, Belgium go.

ichard Wright, author of Native , awarded Spingarn medal at New k.

pharim J. Still, mayor of the oldest erican town owned and governed Negroes, died at Lawnside, N. J., uary 27.

FEBRUARY 8

hicagoans storm city counsel, de-nding traction job guarantee.

FEBRUARY 15

dolphe Felix Sylvester Eboue, civil ernor of Chad, rich province in nch Equatorial Africa, defies Hitler Petain.

ne dead, six injured as fire de-ys Club DeLisa, Chicago night b.

hicagoans in mammoth demonstra-for Democracy. 1,000 march in pa-

Plan first memorial services to honor late Robert S. Abbott, of Chicago Defender.

Edward M. Sneed, Democratic committeeman of Chicago, named in fix scandal.

Conceal details in death of Private Paul Mayo, 10th cavalry, mysteriously slain at West Point, N. Y.

Boston's 372nd Infantry to be inducted into federal services March 10.

MARCH 8

Bishop James W. Brown killed by auto in New York City.

1,000 pay tribute to late Robert S. Abbott, editor and publisher of Chicago Defender, during memorial services at Chicago.

For injuries received in auto accident in 1939, Mrs. Emma S. Gilbert, of New York, was awarded $10,000 by jury.

William O. Walker, publisher of Cleveland Call Post, elected president of Negro Newspaper Publishers' association at confab in Chicago.

Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune says she will resign from duties at Bethune-Cookman college which she founded at Daytona Beach, Fla., in order to devote more time to her work as director of NYA.

Plan auction sale to dispose of Binga Bank properties in Chicago.

MARCH 15

Plan action to avoid sale of Binga bank in Chicago.

Request for federal investigation of mysterious shooting of Ellis Reed Jr., at Fayetteville, N. C., made by United Alumni association of Chicago.

Evanston, Ill., all set for gala Bronzeville ball.

London's anger of Ethiopians rising to fever pitch as patriots report Mussolini troops slaughtering natives.

By posting $13,000 bond, Father Divine escapes jail at New York for default of $5,900 judgement against him to Mrs. Verinda Brown.

Dr. R. Percy Barnes, professor at

1941 NEWS NAMES

BRIG. GEN. BENJAMIN O. DAVIS—elevated to highest active ranking ever held by Negro in the United States army and assigned to inspector general's office in Washington, D. C.

CORNELIUS R. COFFEY—Awarded the Dwight H. Green trophy by the National Airmen's Association of America as the flyer having made the greatest contribution to the advancement of aviation in 1940.

RICHARD WRIGHT—awarded the Spingarn medal for writing "Native Son," best seller of 1940.

WILLIAM O. WALKER—Cleveland editor and publisher elected president of the Association of Negro Publishers.

REV. A. CLAYTON POWELL—conducted successful fight for jobs with bus companies in New York and was first Negro elected to membership on city council under proportional representation plan.

CONG. ARTHUR W. MITCHELL—pursued fight against denial of first class passenger privileges to Negroes by railroads in the south to favorable decision from the United States Supreme court.

HAILE SELUASSIE — Resumed seat on throne of Ethiopia and issued edict liberating all slaves in domain.

ELIE LESCOT—Former Haitian ambassador to the United States elected president of Haiti.

ETHEL WATERS—Honored before 8,000 persons at annual Chicago Defender tea.

JOSEPH SPELL — acquitted of rape charges brought against him by Mrs. Stribling for whom he was employed as chauffeur in one of the year's most sensational court cases.

DR. DAVID V. JEMISON—elected president of the National Baptist convention of America in one of the stormiest sessions of the organization's history.

WILLA BROWN — successfully completed experiment set up to demonstrate ability of Negroes as flyers, the outcome of which was the admission of Negroes into the United States army air corps, and organized the only CAA approved aviation course in the public schools of this country.

JARVIS R. CATOE—Washington taxi driver, convicted of rape attacks on seven women in the nation's capital.

DR. GEORGE W. CARVER—disclosed new treatment for pyorrhea.

ADOLPHE F. S. EBOUE—civil governor of Chad, rich province in Equatorial French Arfica, defied Hitler and Petain.

ATTY. PATRICK B. PRESCOTT—appointed municipal judge in Chicago to fill unexpired term of office.

JOHN ROXBOROUGH—co-manager of Joe Louis, convicted in De-artillery (formerly Eighth Infantry, Illinois National Guard).

DR. D. ORMONDE WALKER—ousted as president of Wilberforce university and succeeded by Bishop R. R. Wright, Jr., who formerly held post.

DR. JOHN LAWLAH—appointed dean of medical school, Howard university.

DR. JOHN B. WEST—named to directorship of Provident hospital, Chicago.

MARIAN ANDERSON—presented with Bok award as Philadelphia's most outstanding citizen established foundation to aid aspiring artists.

J. ERNEST WILKINS—earns masters degree at University of Chicago at age of 17.

IRA T. BRYANT—well known layman loses long fight with A.M.E. church for control of publishing house at Nashville, Tenn.

ALLEN MOTEN—son of famous educator arrested in St. Louis for impersonating an army officer.

THOMAS LEE GAY—of Detroit, quits United States Military academy charging that he was discriminated against and abused by school officials and students.

MAYWEATHER BROTHERS — Kansas City stockyards workers, named by Oklahoma Court along with Izora Alexander Lee as three major heirs to huge fortune amounting to $15,000,000 left by late Lete Kolvin, Indian woman.

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH—international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters organized and directed the threatened march on Washington which resulted in the issuance by President Roosevelt of an executive order calling for an end to discrimination against Negroes by defense contract holders and setting up the Committee on Fair Employment Practices.

DEAN DIXON — conducted the symphony orchestra of the National Broadcasting Company in a series of concerts.

JAMES W. FOWLER—became the fifth Negro to complete United States Military academy at West Point, N. Y.

VALORES J. WASHINGTON—appointed by Gov. Dwight Green of Illinois to state commerce commission.

WILLIAM E. KING—appointed by Gov. Dwight Green of Illinois to state industrial commission.

MITCHELL KNIGHTEN—Chicago roofing contractor challenges claim of Mayweather brothers and Mrs. Lee.

CRYSTAL BYRD FAUSET — named to important post of Office of Civilian Defense.

W. C. HANDY—published his autobiography.

THELMA BERLACK BOOZER—appointed dean of newly established

TRAGEDIES IN WORLD OF NEWS

Brown's Auto Death ... Georgia Prison

tion for Democracy. 1,000 march in pa-

Dr. R. Percy Barnes, professor at

While Stalin is busily engaged in chasing Hitler out of Russia, behind the lines works Robert Robinson (1), an American who went to Moscow several years ago and is now employed in the engineering department of the Moscow Machinery Construction Institute. (2) Noted Race women gather in Washington to attend the National Council of Negro Women and confer with Mrs. Roosevelt; left to right: Mrs. Rebecca Taylor, Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Mary Bethune, Mrs. Robert S. Abbott. (3) Atty. Richard E. Westbrooks and his office staff compiling records in the celebrated Mitchell case in which Westbrooks won the case for the congressman before the U. S. Supreme Court involving the Jim Crow issue on railroads. (4) Atty. Leon M. Despres, left, congratulates Felix Braxton of Jackson, Miss., for his excellent testimony in federal court in the million dollar wage dispute between the Red Caps and seven major railroads. (5) Five Chicago attorneys, Dickerson, Mollison, Moore, Gibson, Stradford, who fought the Hansberry restrictive covenant case before the U. S. Supreme Court, were honored last year for the gallant fight. (6) Elder Solomon Lightfoot Michaux "showering blessings" on a crowd attending dedicatory services of a federal building in Washington in which President Roosevelt (in rear) took part.

1941 NEWS NAMES

BRIG. GEN. BENJAMIN O. DAVIS—elevated to highest active ranking ever held by Negro in the United States army and assigned to inspector general's office in Washington, D. C.

CORNELIUS R. COFFEY—Awarded the Dwight H. Green trophy by the National Airmen's Association of America as the flyer having made the greatest contribution to the advancement of aviation in 1940.

RICHARD WRIGHT—awarded the Spingarn medal for writing "Native Son," best seller of 1940.

WILLIAM O. WALKER—Cleveland editor and publisher elected president of the Association of Negro Publishers.

REV. A. CLAYTON POWELL—conducted successful fight for jobs with bus companies in New York and was first Negro elected to membership on city council under proportional representation plan.

CONG. ARTHUR W. MITCHELL—pursued fight against denial of first class passenger privileges to Negroes by railroads in the south to favorable decision from the United States Supreme court.

HAILE SELUASSIE — Resumed seat on throne of Ethiopia and issued edict liberating all slaves in domain.

ELIE LESCOT—Former Haitian ambassador to the United States elected president of Haiti.

ETHEL WATERS—honored before 8,000 persons at annual Chicago Defender tea.

JOSEPH SPELL — acquitted of rape charges brought against him by Mrs. Stribling for whom he was employed as chauffeur in one of the year's most sensational court cases.

DR. DAVID V. JEMISON—elected president of the National Baptist convention of America in one of the stormiest sessions of the organization's history.

WILLA BROWN — successfully completed experiment set up to demonstrate ability of Negroes as flyers, the outcome of which was the admission of Negroes into the United States army air corps, and organized the only CAA approved aviation course in the public schools of this country.

JARVIS R. CATOE—Washington taxi driver, convicted of rape attacks on seven women in the nation's capital.

DR. GEORGE W. CARVER—disclosed new treatment for pyorrhea.

ADOLPHE F. S. EBOUE—civil governor of Chad, rich province in Equatorial French Arfica, defied Hitler and Petain.

ATTY. PATRICK B. PRESCOTT—appointed municipal judge in Chicago to fill unexpired term of office.

JOHN ROXBOROUGH—co-manager of Joe Louis, convicted in Detroit of criminal conspiracy along with several policy barons and ex-Mayor Reading.

JOE LOUIS—successfully defended his heavyweight boxing title seven times during year for new record.

COL. ANDERSON PITTS — assigned to command of 194th field artillery (formerly Eighth Infantry, Illinois National Guard).

DR. D. ORMONDE WALKER—ousted as president of Wilberforce university and succeeded by Bishop R. R. Wright, Jr., who formerly held post.

DR. JOHN LAWLAH—appointed dean of medical school, Howard university.

DR. JOHN B. WEST—named to directorship of Provident hospital, Chicago.

MARIAN ANDERSON—presented with Bok award as Philadelphia's most outstanding citizen established foundation to aid aspiring artists.

J. ERNEST WILKINS—earns masters degree at University of Chicago at age of 17.

IRA T. BRYANT—well known layman loses long fight with A.M.E. church for control of publishing house at Nashville, Tenn.

ALLEN MOTEN—son of famous educator arrested in St. Louis for impersonating an army officer.

THOMAS LEE GAY—of Detroit, quits United States Military academy charging that he was discriminated against and abused by school officials and students.

MAYWEATHER BROTHERS — Kansas City stockyards workers, named by Oklahoma Court along with Izora Alexander Lee as three major heirs to huge fortune amounting to $15,000,000 left by late Lete Kolvin, Indian woman.

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH—international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters organized and directed the threatened march on Washington which resulted in the issuance by President Roosevelt of an executive order calling for an end to discrimination against Negroes by defense contract holders and setting up the Committee on Fair Employment Practices.

DEAN DIXON — conducted the symphony orchestra of the National Broadcasting Company in a series of concerts.

JAMES W. FOWLER—became the fifth Negro to complete United States Military academy at West Point, N. Y.

VALORES J. WASHINGTON—appointed by Gov. Dwight Green of Illinois to state commerce commission.

WILLIAM E. KING—appointed by Gov. Dwight Green of Illinois to state industrial commission.

MITCHELL KNIGHTEN—Chicago roofing contractor challenges claim of Mayweather brothers and Mrs. Lee.

CRYSTAL BYRD FAUSET — named to important post of Office of Civilian Defense.

W. C. HANDY—published his autobiography.

THELMA BERLACK BOOZER—appointed dean of newly established school of journalism at Lincoln university of Missouri.

MARVA LOUIS — instituted suit for divorce against husband, Joe Louis, and later withdrew suit after effecting reconciliation.

MRS. ADA DEMENT—elected as president of National Association of Colored Women's clubs.

rade protest against racial discrimination.

Henry Wilcox, former insurance employe at New Orleans, accused in murder conspiracy.

Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis leaves Washington, D. C. for Ft. Riley, Kan., to take command of 9th and 10th cavalry.

886 families in Chicago face eviction due to slum clearance programs for housing projects.

Atty. Alva Bates, Chicagoan, named assistant attorney general of Illinois by Gov. Dwight Green.

FEBRUARY 22

Wilberforce university student, Mack L. Hurry, age 15, missing two days, found dead in field near school campus.

British erase racial bar in royal air force at London.

Eleven-gun salute greets Brig. Gen. Benjamin Davis upon arrival at Ft. Riley.

Chicago veterans organization honors draftees about to leave for camp.

March

MARCH 1

Miss Harriet Griffin wins first prize over 2,000 contestants in Chicago city-wide singing contest conducted by Phil Spitalny.

Natives at Cairo, Egypt, help England whip Italian invaders. Il Duce's troops in trap, face annihilation.

Howard university, selected by committee on engineering defense training, to study explosives at Washington, D. C.

Graham T. Perry, Chicago attorney, appointed assistant attorney general of Illinois by Atty. Gen. George Barnett.

MARCH 22

Ethiopians route 7,000 Italian troops. Expect fall of Addis Ababa. National Airmen's association accuse war department of deception in inferring that there will be no discrimination in air training on basis of race.

Rev. Clarence H. Cobbs, of Chicago, settles libel suit against Chicago Defender.

South fears decision in Congressman Mitchell jim crow case. Atty. Richard E. Westbrooks, Chicago, predicts victory for plaintiff.

Clayton Britt, 17, of Fayetteville, N. C., who killed Private Ellis Reed, Jr., Chicago soldier, ordered held for trial.

Mrs. Robert S. Abbott, widow of the late Chicago Defender publisher, answers spite suit in Chicago court.

MARCH 29

Atty. Charles J. Jenkins, veteran member of Illinois state legislature, scores Dr. Frederick D. Patterson for his speech on jim crow training base for Negro air cadets at Tuskegee.

W. T. Brown Jr., Chicago undertaker and former Bronzeville mayor, killed as his auto overturns near Dixon, Ten-

Here's a little news from the state where Governor Talmadge is driving out educators. (1) Members of coroner's jury inspect back of colored prisoner on Rising Fawn work camp, Dade county, Trenton, Ga., where inhuman sweatbox practices are carried out. (2) Charred exterior of a two-and-one-half story frame house in Montclair, N. J., where 10 children and two adults were burned to death when an oil stove was dropped. (3) All bad men are not dead. Jersey City police drag John Gary, 64, a porter, from his home after a gun battle in which he stood off more than 50 officers for an hour. Gary killed his stepdaughter, wounded his wife and several policemen. (4) Delegation of boys from Illinois State Training artillery (formerly Eighth Infantry, Illinois National Guard).

DR. D. ORMONDE WALKER—ousted as president of Wilberforce university and succeeded by Bishop R. R. Wright, Jr., who formerly held post.

DR. JOHN LAWLAH—appointed dean of medical school, Howard university.

DR. JOHN B. WEST—named to directorship of Provident hospital, Chicago.

MARIAN ANDERSON—presented with Bok award as Philadelphia's most outstanding citizen established foundation to aid aspiring artists.

J. ERNEST WILKINS—earns masters degree at University of Chicago at age of 17.

IRA T. BRYANT—well known layman loses long fight with A.M.E. church for control of publishing house at Nashville, Tenn.

ALLEN MOTEN—son of famous educator arrested in St. Louis for impersonating an army officer.

THOMAS LEE GAY—of Detroit, quits United States Military academy charging that he was discriminated against and abused by school officials and students.

MAYWEATHER BROTHERS — Kansas City stockyards workers, named by Oklahoma Court along with Izora Alexander Lee as three major heirs to huge fortune amounting to $15,000,000 left by late Lete Kolvin, Indian woman.

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH—international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters organized and directed the threatened march on Washington which resulted in the issuance by President Roosevelt of an executive order calling for an end to discrimination against Negroes by defense contract holders and setting up the Committee on Fair Employment Practices.

DEAN DIXON — conducted the symphony orchestra of the National Broadcasting Company in a series of concerts.

JAMES W. FOWLER—became the fifth Negro to complete United States Military academy at West Point, N. Y.

VALORES J. WASHINGTON—appointed by Gov. Dwight Green of Illinois to state commerce commission.

WILLIAM E. KING—appointed by Gov. Dwight Green of Illinois to state industrial commission.

MITCHELL KNIGHTEN—Chicago roofing contractor challenges claim of Mayweather brothers and Mrs. Lee.

CRYSTAL BYRD FAUSET — named to important post of Office of Civilian Defense.

W. C. HANDY—published his autobiography.

THELMA BERLACK BOOZER—appointed dean of newly established school of journalism at Lincoln university of Missouri.

MARVA LOUIS — instituted suit for divorce against husband, Joe Louis, and later withdrew suit after effecting reconciliation.

MRS. ADA DEMENT—elected as president of National Association of Colored Women's clubs.

Howard university, selected by committee on engineering defense training, to study explosives at Washington, D. C.

Graham T. Perry, Chicago attorney, appointed assistant attorney general of Illinois by Atty. Gen. George Barnett.

MARCH 22

Ethiopians route 7,000 Italian troops. Expect fall of Addis Ababa. National Airmen's association accuse war department of deception in inferring that there will be no discrimination in air training on basis of race.

Rev. Clarence H. Cobbs, of Chicago, settles libel suit against Chicago Defender.

South fears decision in Congressman Mitchell jim crow case. Atty. Richard E. Westbrooks, Chicago, predicts victory for plaintiff.

Clayton Britt, 17, of Fayetteville, N. C., who killed Private Ellis Reed, Jr., Chicago soldier, ordered held for trial.

Mrs. Robert S. Abbott, widow of the late Chicago Defender publisher, answers spite suit in Chicago court.

MARCH 29

Atty. Charles J. Jenkins, veteran member of Illinois state legislature, scores Dr. Frederick D. Patterson for his speech on jim crow training base for Negro air cadets at Tuskegee.

W. T. Brown Jr., Chicago undertaker and former Bronzeville mayor, killed as his auto overturns near Dixon, Ten-

Here's a little news from the state where Governor Talmadge is driving out educators. (1) Members of coroner's jury inspect back of colored prisoner on Rising Fawn work camp, Dade county, Trenton, Ga., where inhuman sweatbox practices are carried out. (2) Charred exterior of a two-and-one-half story frame house in Montclair, N. J., where 10 children and two adults were burned to death when an oil stove was dropped. (3) All bad men are not dead. Jersey City police drag John Gary, 64, a porter, from his home after a gun battle in which he stood off more than 50 officers for an hour. Gary killed his stepdaughter, wounded his wife and several policemen. (4) Delegation of boys from Illinois State Training school for Boys at St. Charles, Ill., acting as pallbearers for their 16-year-old colleague, James R. Williams, who was killed by housefather. (5) Exhuming body of Wilbert Smith for coroner's inspection. Smith, extradited from Detroit to New Orleans, was killed by a policeman shortly after his arrival. He had been charged with the murder of a New Orleans' policeman. (6) Body of W. T. Brown Jr., well known Chicago undertaker, arrives in Chicago for burial. Brown was killed when his auto overturned near Dixon, Tenn. Eight thousand persons viewed his body and his funeral was one of the largest ever held on the South side.

NEGRO LABOR NEWS

January 10, 1942

PULLMAN PORTERS GET PAY INCREASE IN NEW CONTRACT

NEW YORK CITY—In the international offices, here, of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, Phillip Randolph, international president, formally announced, last week, that the organization had signed an agreement with the Pullman Company for increase in pay of ten cents an hour, or $24 a month.

This will represent an increase of over two million dollars for the Pullman porters, maids, attendants, and bus boys in the Pullman service. This group of workers will also receive $21.60 a month for three months of back pay extending from September to December 1, Randolph said.

Wage increases were also secured by the brotherhood for train porters who are members of the organization, representing $22.80 per month with 7 1-2 per cent back pay extending from September to December 1.

The head of the porters' organization pointed out that various carriers with which the Brotherhood holds contracts are being signed up rather rapidly for increases in pay ranging from ten cents for the non-operating group, including chair car, parlor car, coach and buffett porters, with the back pay of nine cents an hour; and also including train porters in the operating group at nine and one-half cents wage increase with the seven and one-half per cent back pay of a three-month period.

It is estimated that the increases for the members of the Brotherhood of Sleping Car Porters will run much above two and one-half million dollars, stated Randolph.

.. Things Seen, Heard And Done ..

AMONG PULLMAN EMPLOYEES

By J. T. REID

There are some things that people tell to you that make you stop and think. You realize what the little boy must have meant, when he kneeled down to say his prayers before going to bed and said: "Lord take care of me through the night, and turn me loose in the morning. There were many long faces among the porters when they received their pay checks last week and you couldn't blame them, for they had been told that they were to get an increase. But when they got their checks they found that the increase had not yet arrived.

But boys don't forget, the Pullman Company is not going to violate the President's fact finding Committees order, that all railroad workers wages are to be increased. Since 1926 when the Pullman Company were declared to be a Carrier they have treated with their employees in accordance to railroad Class Legislation. When the Brotherhood of Trainmen put in for an increase in salaries for their members, every railroad employee was included. As you already know there are many men and women who do not belong to the Brotherhood of Trainmen, but, like the porters, they always share in any increases granted to Railroad workers. That is one of the good things about the Railway Labor Act it covers all railroad workers even though there are many units among railway workers who are not represented at the conference between the railroad management and the Brotherhood of Trainmen, but the Railway Labor Act when properly interpreted represents that group which is not present.

In fact no increases or decreases are ever considered unless the representatives of the Brotherhood of Trainmen are consulted. And what ever agreeemnt is reched between them is always shared by all railroad workers and Pullman porters. attendants and maids being classified by the Railway Labor Act as railroad workers they automatically share also. Now, don't worry about your increase you will get it because the representatives of the Brotherhood of Trainmen has made it possible for you to get it. If they had not threatened to call a strike among the railroad workers of the United States, no railroad workers would have recieved any increase in their salaries.

Porter Maurice V. Vaughner of the Chicago Western District who has been in the Cook County Hospital for the past two months doesnt seem to be much improved. I am sure that he would be glad to have any of his friends pay him a visit or send a card. Well, of the things that could happen in the coming New Year, here is one that has just happened for the book; J R. Reese took a flying trip to Greencastle, Ind., where he was to take part in a HOCKEY GAME. It's funny how some people get into so many things, who would have ever accused our good friend Reese of playing hockey? Happy New Year Folks.

—30—

NEW YORK AGE

January 10, 1942

'The Neglected' Virgin Islands

Editor's Note: This is the fifth in a series of articles on the Virgin Islands by Ashly L. Totten.

From St. Croix is it alleged that white Americans, inexperienced and incapable, hold subordinate jobs under natives but receive higher salaries. The explanation given is that it costs a white American more to live in the islands than it does a native.

Mr. Totten

Factual evidence of these and other injustices must be presented, and if true will be corrected, states Governor Harwood, the present incumbent.

The native people are plain and outspoken. They are not fearful of anyone. He knows that, so does the writer. It is a source of pleasure to natives and other interested Americans to know that he feels that way about it. However, when evil operates in the dark and sinister minds are active, these natives will nurse the jobs they are likely to lose.

Unlike Puerto Rico and other island possessions, these natives have no one at Washington to represent them. When in trouble it is expected that mass action of those residing on the mainland will be taken in their behalf. This is usually resented by the privileged few.

A resident commissioner voted into office would probably have the desired effect. This is the one thing Secretary Ickes will oppose.

Brought Prosperity

As it stands now twenty-five years of American rule has brought prosperity to the Islands for which they are thankful to Congress and the President of the United States. Practices of caste, selfishness and other products of ignorance when removed will bring more cheer, sunshine and happiness in every home. Until then the rehabilitation program will remain a mockery insofar as the under-privileged classes are concerned.

Now it is well to observe how the laws governing the citizenship status of Virgin Islanders operate. When the islands came into American ownership the natives were told that they would be considered citizens of the United States after one year.

Article Six of the Sale Treaty reads, "Those Danish citizens remaining in the islands shall be given one year to appear before a Danish Court of Record and retain their Danish citizenship in default of which they shall be held to have renounced it." Since no native retained their Danish citizenship, it was quite logical to believe that they were citizens of the United States but Congress thought otherwise and passed a law declaring all natives citizens of the Virgin Islands under the protection of the United States.

Because of the confusion that followed, Virgin Islanders on the mainland started agitation and caused Congress to pass a law which became effective February 28, 1928, that all natives born in the Islands and residing there on March 17, 1917, at the time of the transfer are citizens of the United States.

Continued Agitation

Continued agitation by the American Virgin Islands Civic Association brought about an amendment which became effective on June 28, 1932, declaring all native born residing in the United States and its possessions citizens of the United States, but those residing in foreign countries Virgin Island aliens.

Strangely enough, a native in the latter class cannot ever return to his native home. American consulates refuse to vise passports but in the Islands it is alleged foreigners hold governmental positions. One man said to be a Federal employee is or was until recently the British Vice Consul.

The Organic Act [illegible]es that consid[illegible] the appo[illegible] jobs in th[illegible] law has been ignored for the following reason.

When the "privileged few" represented in the Municipal Councils and their clique want certain favors done they evidently agree with certain executives to slip in a few of their friends from the mainland. The islands have seen some of the most incompetent, ill-prepared white men holding office whose only contribution is to bask in the sunshine of ease with a dull mind [illegible]sed by the vast amount of [illegible] they consumed.

The Bourbons and uppercrusts close their eyes to such behaviour. They hush up complaints about the waste lands in rubbish and not cultivated. They care little or nothing about public health, education and other improvements, as long as something is done to block taxation on the manufacture of rum or other commodities.

Read by Few

Most island newspapers carry a small circulation and are read by just a few. There are some six or seven that never reach the masses. Apparently their editors cater to each group or clique for it is seldom that an editorial opinion appears with sufficient teeth in it to get at the root of things and be effective.

A common expression is heard when an injustice is upon the lips of everyone. It is this. If the Island leaders are seeking job placements or expect to secure free scholarship for their children to some college on the mainland, they cannot agitate against the evils from which the under-privileged classes suffer.

While there are many capitalistically minded people in the Islands, even those who are wealthy are most dependent on the government for support. Political patronage is the first order of the day. Even some of the legislators cannot explain intelligently the economic life of the laboring classes. It is safe to say that no one is willing to make a sacrifice.

The islanders are yet to produce a leader with guts and manhood not venal but dependable and will stay put.

---

caught that hold-up man last night and protected mother."

"How did you . . . but Ah didn't . . ."

"Of course, you didn't. What could you do?"

"That's right. What could Ah . . ." The elevator boy broke off. He looked at Sonya and smiled, a hurt sort of smile.

The girl patted his brown hand and looked away, feeling very proud and happy. Here was one cause which had triumphed.

Oscar Lee was crying.

Next week's story, "Lost Time," by James E. Ferrell is an unusual one, which should prove intensely interesting to young and old, male and female alike.

AMSTERDAM NEWS

January 10, 1942

NEGRO LABOR NEWS

January 17, 1943

PULLMAN PORTER INVENTS DEVICE FOR DERA[illegible]

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The story of a Pullman porter who invented a device to put derailed cars back on railroad tracks will be told in "The Negro Worker," fifth in the "Freedom's People" series to be presented over the National Broadcasting Company's red network from 12:30 to 1 p. m., EST, Sunday, January 18.

The porter, William James Dixon, was returning home to see his daughter graduate when a car of the train he was working on was derailed. While Dixon watched train crews tediously working to replace the car on the rails, the time for the graduation passed. Dixon resolved to find a way to reduce such delays. He invented a re-railer now used by railways the world over.

"Freedom's People" is sponsored by a national advisory committee with which the U. S. Office of Education cooperates to tell the story of Negro participation in all phases of American life—industry, agriculture, sports, music, public afairs, literature and war work. This broadcast in the series is devoted to work of Negroes in such fields as agriculture, industry, mining, shipping, domestic work and railroading.

A. Philip Randolph, a national labor leader, who has probably done more to solve Negro labor problems than any other person, will describe the increasingly important role of Negroes as welders, riveters, machine operators, and other skilled workers in war supply industries. Randolph will speak from Chicago. Following his remarks the broadcast will sketch Negro participation in war work.

The Southernaires, Negro quartet famous on the radio and concert stage for more than 15 years, will sing several numbers. The 12-voice De Paur chorus and the NBC staff orchestra are regular features of the series.

Other dramatized scenes will report the work of T. M. Campbell and J. B. Pierce, first Negro argicultural extension agents appointed by the Department of Agriculture, and their influence on farming practices in the South. Representing Negro argicultural youth and national president of the New Farmers of America will speak briefly.

To make possible the "Freedmon's People" series, the Rosenwald Fund and the Southern Education Foundation have made funds available. The NBC and stations of its red network contribute broadcasting facilities.

The series is under supervision of Dr. Ambrose Caliver, specialist in Negro education in the U. S. Office of Education, and William D. Boutwell, chief of its radio division. Scripts were written by Irve Tunick and musical arrangements by Dr. Charles Cooke. Negro Labor News 1/17/43

PITTSBURGH COURIER

January 17, 1942

Race Inventor, Randolph, Southernaires To Appear On "Freedom's People" Program

Pullman Porter to Tell Story of Re-Railer Invention—First Race Agricultural Agents on Broadcast.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 15—The story of a Pullman porter who invented a device to put derailed cars back on railroad tracks will be told in "The Negro Worker," fifth in the "Freedom's People" series to be presented over the National Broadcasting Company's red network from 12:30 to 1 p. m. EST, Sunday, January 18th.

The porter, William James Dixon, was returning home to see his daughter graduate when a car of the train he was working on was derailed. While Dixon watched train crews tediously working to replace the car on the rails, the time for the graduation passed. Dixon resolved to find a way to reduce such delays. He invented a re-railer now used by railways the world over.

PROGRAM TELLS STORY OF RACE

"Freedom's People" is sponsored by a national advisory committee with which the U. S. Office of Education cooperates to tell the story of Negro participation in all phases of American life—industry, agriculture, sports, music, public affairs, literature and war work. This broadcast in the series is devoted to work of Negroes in such fields as agriculture, industry, mining, shipping, domestic work and railroading.

A. Philip Randolph, a national labor leader who has probably done more to solve Negro labor problems than any other person, will describe the increasingly important role of Negroes as welders, riveters, machine operators, and other skilled workers in war and peace industries. Randolph will speak from Chicago. Following these remarks the broadcast will sketch Negro participation in war work.

The Southernaires, Negro quartet famous on the radio and concert stage for more than [illegible] years, will sing several numbers. The 12-voice De Paur chorus and the NBC staff orchestra are regular features of the series.

FIRST AGRICULTURAL AGENTS INVITED

Other dramatized scenes will re-

THE AFRO-AMERICAN, JANUARY 24, 1942

Porters on 4 Lines Get Wage Increases

NEW YORK.—Train porters in the employ of the Illinois Central Railroad of Chicago, the Missouri Pacific in St. Louis, and the Texas and Pacific of Fort Worth, Tex., have received wage increases of $22.80 a month or 9½ cents and hour as a result of negotiations by the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

The Brotherhood also secured a wage raise of $24 a month for the parlor car porters on the Alton Railroad of Chicago.

The Brotherhood is now negotiating for a wage increase for train porters on the International Great Northern; the Missouri, Kansas and Texas; the Cotton Belt; Burlington Lines, Chicago and Milwaukee; Soo Line; Chicago and Northwestern and the Atlantic Coast Line.

AFRO-AMERICAN

January 17, 1942

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

By JAMES H. HOGANS

ORGANIZED UNITY

The value of organized unity, in these days and times, was brought clearly home to the Pullman porter, the dining car worker and the red cap in the recent railroad wage awards.

For the first time in railroad history they were included as beneficiaries of the maximum rate of pay in a railroad wage agreement. Heretofore, they always came in at the smaller end.

It was through no philanthropic consideration, however, that they didn't do so this time. What, then, was the reason? The simplest answer is: organized unity, plus intelligent and resourceful leadership.

What the combination may accomplish is strikingly illustrated in the case of the red caps' union. Despite its youth and isolation, its achievements during the past year have been a remarkable demonstration of aggressive and forceful leadership.

One of its major accomplishments, for example, was in forcing a Federal investigation of the entire red caps' system; secondly, in having the Interstate Commerce Commission rule on the relation of red caps' service to railroad passenger service; thirdly, having the red caps included in the maximum wage raise.

The union has also been the most consistent fighter against racial discrimination in the railroad field, and the first to question the right of the Railroad Adjustment Board to exclude officers of organizations in which the membership is predominantly colored from participation in selecting members to the board.

But, while the red caps' leadership has led the fight against racial intolerance and job discrimination in the railroad field, the porters' leadership has waged a similar fight along a larger front.

The porters' leader, A. Philip Randolph, and his March-on-Washington Committee, have not only done much to correct flagrant discrimination in Federal employment and defense projects, but their insistence in publicizing the situation forced President Roosevelt to take the stand he has against it.

The dining car leaders have been less spectacular in their fight in that respect, having confined themselves exclusively to the dining car field, but the progress they have made there is significantly shown in the recent wage awards.

Taken as a whole, each of the three unions has shown the value of organized unity during the past year. It is to be deeply regretted that this unity does not extend to the three organizations and their leaders. Some day, perhaps, it will.

* * *

CHICAGO VISITORS

Ted Allen and Edwin Bramlette, Pennsylvania dining car employees of Chicago, were in New York last week.

* * *

VETERANS' MEETING

The Retired Pullman Porters' Association of New York will hold its quarterly meeting Monday, February 2, at the 135th Street YMCA.

MAC LEAN MAY SUCCEED ETHR

RUMOR SAYS CHAIRMAN TO RESIGN POST

Pressure Of Business Is Cited As Reason For Giving Up Job

Reports were circulated here Monday as the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice met to hold a hearing on job discrimination in this area, that chairman Mark F. Ethridge was resigning his post.

Ethridge, who is publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal, is said to have found that the arduous duties of the post required too much of his time and that his private business would not permit him to continue.

Rumors are that the chairmanship will be offered to Dr. Malcom C. MacLean, president of the Hampton institute. It is not known whether he will accept but it is felt that the Hampton prexy would make an excellent executive.

For a time it was feared that executive secretary Lawrence Cramer was resigning also. Cramer had been offered a post teaching at Harvard. He has decided to remain with the committee.

Other predictions have been made freely here this week regarding governmental posts which vitally affect Negroes.

It is said that with the de-emphasizing of the OPM which took place when Donald Nelson of Chicago was elevated to chief of new War Production board, Sidney Hillman's post no longer becomes important. Hillman is expected to be made the secretary of labor.

It is probable according to this prediction, that Robert Weaver and his entire staff will have to be absorbed by the FEPC. In the absence of any definite action, no description of the necessary shifts was available, but it was said the Dr. Will W. Alexander, former head of Farm Security administration, but now also a race relations adviser under Hillman, would be sheltered in FEPC also.

The present secretary of labor, Mme. Perkins, will, it is said, move over to another cabinet post, that of secretary of social security while Paul McNutt will take over the portfolio of secretary of war.

The flourishing rumors did not dispose of Secretary of War Stimson but the cooperative spirit of the civilian side of the present war department setup will keep eyes glued upon any proposed change.

FEPC—

(Continued from Page 1)

tatives of the Stewart Warner corporation who admitted that there were no Negroes among their 8,000 employes and conceded that the company may have been in the error in the past.

However, W. [illegible] Mathis, personnel director for the company, assured the committee that in the future there would be no discrimination on account of race, creed or color and promised that qualified Negro workers would be employed in the immediate future.

The Buick case was then called and attorneys for the committee presented a number of witnesses, among them two Negroes and three Jews. The witnesses testified that they had completed courses at Illinois Institute of Technology preparatory to employment with the Buick Aviation Engine company, and had been denied employment because of their race or religion.

They testified that from one class of 25 students Buick hired 15 Gentiles and one Jew, refusing to employ eight Jews and one Negro student who had stood at the top of the class.

The Buick officials denied that they had deliberately overlooked the Negro student and contended that although they did not employ a single one of seven Negro graduates they had not discriminated against them.

For almost three hours members of the committee cross-questioned the officials of the compnay without securing an admission that there had been any act of discrimination. The company officials pointed out that they had 51 Negro employes but admitted that none of these men were skilled workers.

In response to a question concerning William Curry, a Negro graduate of Morehouse college and holder of a private pilot's license, Wooliver pointed out that Curry had been offered employment as a janitor since that was all he was qualified for.

Although Ald. Earl B. Dickerson pointedly indicated that the officials had testified that there would be categories in which Negroes might be used in the future, the officials contradicted themselves and denied such a statement had been [illegible]

The o[illegible] reluctantly admit that the [illegible] of race and religion [illegible] application blank served no [illegible] and agreed to discontinue this practice.

Attendance at the hearing Monday was so great that over 200 extra chairs had to be provided to accommodate the large audience.

Mayor Edward J. Kelly appeared at the opening session of the hearing and welcomed the committee to the city and offered the cooperation of his office.

Other speakers included Senator William A. Wallace, who as chairman of the Illinois State Commission on Urban Conditions Among Negroes, made available to the committee the commission's findings on discrimination in employment; A. L. Foster, executive secretary of the Chicago Urban League; H. I. Barron, executive secretary of the Bureau on Jewish Employment Problems and Eugene J. Brock, acting chairman of the Local Supply committee.

F. H. Sherlaw, state director, division of training for WPA, asked by Alderman Dickerson if he were a federal employ, answered yes.

"Then" inquired Dickerson, "when there is discrimination don't you realize you are disobeying the

PLAN JOB PROBE

Lawrence W. Cramer, executive secretary of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice (left), and Atty. George M. Johnson, assistant executive secretary, arrived in Chicago on Tuesday morning as final plans were made for the public hearing of the committee on Monday and Tuesday in the Council Chamber, City Hall.

Porters On 3 Roads Get Wage Hikes

NEW YORK CITY—Train porters in the employ of the Illinois Central Railroad of Chicago, the Missouri Pacific in St. Louis, and the Texas and Pacific of Fort Worth, Texas received wage increases of $22.80 a month or 9½ cents an hour —as a result of the negotation of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood, said this week.

The brotherhood also secured a wage raise of $24 a month for the parlor [illegible] on the Alton Railroad of Chicago.

Plans are underway for the negotiation of wage increase agreements by the brotherhood for train porters on the International Great Northern; the Missouri, Kansas and Texas; the Cotton Belt; Burlington Lions, Chicago and Milwaukee; Soo Line; Chicago and Northwestern and the Atlantic Coast Line, said Randolph.

UDGE ON FEPC

PAGE NINE

"LABOR UNITY WILL BENEFIT RACE"--RAN

CIO-AFL PEACE WILL AID NEGRO WORKERS IN BREAKING BANS

CHICAGO, Jan. 29—When questioned about the meaning of unity between the AFL and CIO to Negro workers, A. Philip Randolph, International President of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, stated at the mid-west headquarters in Chicago, that unity in the labor movement will improve the lot of all workers in America, which includes the Negro.

IN A STATEMENT MR. RANDOLPH SAID,

"If the American Federation of Labor and the Congress for Industrial Organization do not unite, the workers are certain to lose some of their vital gains during the post-war period when employment declines. Specifically, Negro workers will benefit because Negroes can more effectively fight to break down racial discriminations in a united labor movement. In a united labor movement there will be a larger number of unions the Negro can marshal to attack barriers in trade unions on account of race, color, creed or national origin.

MUST FIGHT FOR RIGHTS

"But Negro workers must understand that in a united or divided labor movement, they must fight for their rights. There is no magic and easy road to Negro workers eliminating the color bar in trade unions.

"One of the most important results of unity between the AFL and the CIO is possible unity among Negro workers themselves, who are now members of these two bodies, for an effective fight for their rights in the annual conventions, the City central bodies and the State Federations of one powerful labor movement", he concluded.

The Y's Man

Volume 18 Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 31, 1942 No. 21

RANDOLPH AT MONSTER MEETING

The citizens of Indianapolis will have a very rare opportunity to hear America's number one orator and most talked of and listened to Negro when Asa Phillip Randolph comes to the Monster Meeting Sunday afternoon. The Industrial organizations affiliated with the YMCA are coordinating their forces to bring the general public the best program of many years. They have found in Mr. Randolph, a leader they are eager to follow, a philosopher in labor relations who will give a fair appraisal of the labor situation and point out the path of cooperation between capital and labor that will make our democracy a living reality.

Mr. Randolph is a product of Southern rearing and Eastern education. Working up from the ranks of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters which he helped to found, he became first general organizer and later International President of this powerful union. He is the man responsible for the proposed "March on Washington" aimed at abolishing discrimination in national defense industries. He is the man Dr. Tobias termed "Unpurchasable." He is the man Walter White called "The Greatest living American." He is the man who was lauded on our rostrum by Mordecai Johnson, and Max Yergan. He is all these things and more. Come and hear him. Come early if you want a seat.

The music for the occasion will be pro-

(cont. on page 2, col. 1)

A. PHILLIP RANDOLPH

Full House For Benefit

The Big Five Team from the Cincinnati YMCA will oppose the Kingan all Star Quintet before a full house tonight for the benefit of the Infantile Paralysis Fund. All seats reserved were engaged two weeks before the meet and general admission sales have already topped expectations. The usual league game fans will all be out as the regular games will be played as a prelude to the main event. Ticket holders to the dance will be admitted to the game on their dance tickets as long as standing room is available. Better come early if you want to see a good game. The tickets are on sale for 25 cents plus tax. Basket ball Saturday night.

INTERCOLLEGIATE CLUB

The club is looking forward to their meeting on Sunday, February 1. At this time the club will be reorganized for the second semester. All members who have signed for membership during the past year are asked to re-new their pledge. Elaborate plans for the club program were made when the executive committee in joint session with the program committee met Wednesday evening, January 28. Along with the regular business meeting, the group will hear a special message by the dynamic A. Phillip Randolph, President of the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

The Rev. Hartsock of Tabernacle Baptist Church held his audience well in his discussion on "Youth and His Search for God." Several young members of his congregation were visitors. A brief period of questions followed. One of the particular interest was relative to attendance of young at our churches. Rev. Hartsock revealed that this was a problem in his church and in many others. He then outlined some projects which had been used to stimulate attendance, frankly he admitted that his efforts had not been any to fruitful .

RACE"--RANDOLPH

No. 21

TE CLUB

forward to their bruary 1. At this eorganized for the embers who have during the past
new their pledge.
club program were tive committee in program committee ng, January 28. A-business meeting, special message by p Randolph, Presi-nal Brotherhood of

of Tabernacle Bap-audience well in his and His Search for members of his con-
s. A brief period of ne of the particular attendance of young
v. Hartsock revealed em in his church and then outlined some een used to stimulate he admitted that his any to fruitful .

de to the main event.
e dance will be ad-
n their dance tickets oom is available. Bet-u want to see a good e on sale for 25 cents
Saturday night.

that they inserted [illegible] papers asking for Gentile employees only.

T. H. Erickson, personnel manager of Bearse, and Elmer Hensor, president of Simpson, both promised to remove any further reference to religion and to cease discrimination.

Studebaker Quizzed

Walter S. Gundeck, director of industrial relations of the Studebaker Corporation, under questioning on the above by Dickerson as to whether his plant in Gary, Ind., had any colored engineers, replied, "No, but we do have one of the yellow race."

Majestic Radio

Howard Gates, president of the Majestic Radio Company, testified that his plant would not approve discrimination and that a plant representative and employment manager who did discriminate against colored had been fired.

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

By JAMES H. HOGANS

LABOR INDIVIDUALISM

Despite the every-day proof against it, there are some railroad and Pullman workers who still cling to the old idea that organizational representation is not necessary in labor relations.

They are what may be called labor individualists, and under the provisions of the railway Labor Act they do have a certain degree of protection. But it is flimsy protection at best.

It has been demonstrated time and again of late that non-organizational representation in labor relations is not only ineffective but it is costly.

In the first place, it carries no definite force with either the employer or the labor-law agencies. In fact, the latter usually ignore such representation in cases of grievance and claims.

Aside from that, it frequently permits—through ignorance, of course—the employee to present grievances and claims that are not legally supported by the facts in dispute.

A case of this kind occurred recently when a Pullman porter employed a lawyer to represent him in a grievance case with his district office.

According to both, the Railway Labor Act and the agreement between the Pullman Company and the porters, this porter was entirely within his right, so far as his choice of representation was concerned.

The trouble with the case, it developed, was that the porter had no grievance under the rules of the agreement. Evidently the porter's counsel didn't know that, but the porters' union representatives did, and most likely would have advised him of that fact had they been consulted.

The moral of the case is that the day of labor individualism has passed. It simply doesn't work any more.

* * *

PLANS BIG INSTALLATION

Plans for an auspicious installation of its recently elected officers are being made by Local 370 of the Dining Car Employees' Union, it was learned from those in charge of the preparations.

Edward Flore, international president of the union and a vice-president of the A.F. of L., is scheduled to be one of the prominent labor leaders at the ceremonies, which will be held in New York, February 23, at one of the large halls.

* * *

OTHER NOTES

Popular Jimmy McLaughlin, formerly Pullman station agent in the Boston District, started on his new job as traveling inspector last week.

Mr. McLaughlin is succeeded by John D. Fine of New York, whose position as station agent here is being filled by James Hogans, also of New York.

Porter Robert Adair of the Chicago Central District, looking trim and keen in his Pullman uniform, with the insignia of the Golden State Limited on its sleeves, was a recent visitor to New York on an extra car.

President Willard S. Townsend of the red caps' international union is expected in New York this week, and will stay here for ten days or more inspecting the red caps' system at the Grand Central Station.

Classes of instruction for newly employed porters are being conducted at Yard[illegible] lor a[illegible] Ballard.

This [illegible] takes the means of exp[illegible] its profound sympathy to Traveling Chef Perry Potter of the New York Central Lines, in the recent death of his wife.

AFRO-AMERICAN

February 7, 1942

OMAHA STAR

February 13, 1942

Omaha Star, Feb. 13, 1942

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH TO BE AWARDED SPINGARN MEDAL

Pullman Porters' Chief Is Honored For March On Capitol Drive

NEW YORK—A Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and head of the March on Washington Movement, is to be the twenty-seventh recipient of the Spingarn Medal, awarded annually to the Negro who has performed the most distinguished service for his race during the year.

The Spingarn Medal Award committee of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People made its decision Saturday, Jan. 31. It was stated that the medal is to be presented to Randolph in recognition of the dramatic culmination of his years of leadership in the field of labor organization and national affairs in the mobilization of Negro mass opinion in 1941 in a March on Washington to exercise the constitutional right of citizens of a democracy to petition their government peacably for the redress of grievances—this being done when all other methods failed.

The committee said that Randolph's leadership was instrumental in the issuance of Executive Order 8802 and the establishment of the Committee on Fair Employment Practice both of which profoundly affect the basic economic status of the Negro and other minority groups.

Stating that Randolph is among the distinguished leaders of this generation, the committee concluded by saying: "In all that Mr. Randolph has done, not only for the Negro, but for America, he has acted without thought of self."

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE

February 17, 1942

Mayor Assails Unions Which Shut Out Negro

Tells Committee on Fair Employment Law Should Be Used to Punish Bias

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, testifying yesterday at a hearing before President Roosevelt's Committee on Fair Employment Practices holding its first New York hearing at the Bar Association Building, 42 West Forty-fourth Street, said that racial discrimination was a nation-wide problem practiced by some labor unions as well as by other elements of the population.

"I often say politically imprudent things," Mr. LaGuardia said. "I'm not afraid. I'll say this now: Many of your labor unions won't take a black man in. What are you going to do in a situation like that?"

Mr. LaGuardia answered his own question about what should be done by recommending adoption of a suggestion advanced to the committee earlier in the hearing by Lieutenant Governor Charles Poletti. After holding that the situation in New York state and other places with regard to discrimination was "very, very dark indeed," Mr. Poletti called on all governmental agencies to enforce to the limit regulations against discrimination. He proposed that penal laws be amended to punish those who print want adds specifying race, religion or color.

Mr. LaGuardia made clear that he had selected many Negroes for jobs, but made clear that the never appointed a man "merely because he is black." Any Negro he appointed, Mr. LaGuardia said, received his job because of his ability.

Three Concerns Accused

All contracts for war materials now contain the provision that no person may be barred from working on the jobs because of his race, creed or color. Despite this regulation, the committee holds that there is such discrimination, and after hearing numerous witnesses on the general situation of discrimination, heard three special allegations of it. The witnesses, accused by individuals, all of which denied the charges, were Curtiss Wright Corporation, Fairchild Aviation Corporation and Becton & Dickinson Co., medical supply firm.

The committee includes Dr. Malcolm Mac Lean, president of Hampton Institute, chairman; David Sarnoff, head of Radio Corporation of America; Mark Ethridge, general manager of "The Louisville Courier-Journal"; Earl B. Dickerson, Chicago Alderman; Frank Fenton, representing the American Federation of Labor, and John Brophy, of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

The discussion centered around discrimination against Negroes in defense industries, but anti-Semitic, anti-Catholic and anti-alien feeling and tendencies were also discussed. The Rev. Dr. John P. Boland, chairman of the New York State Labor Relations Board, speaking on behalf of Catholics, said that the objectives of the committee were identical with those of the church.

Appeal Against Prejudice

Dr. Robert W. Searle, executive secretary of the Greater New York Federation of Churches, speaking for Protestants, said that in this time of war [illegible] needed the use of every p[illegible] pair of hands, and "whoever [illegible] the skill of any man on [illegible] of race or creed comes pe[illegible] treachery. Speaking [illegible] theme, Rabbi J. X. Co[illegible] that a huge reservoir of [illegible] had not been drawn u[illegible] city because of pre[illegible] led over from peace tim[illegible]

The problem [illegible] mination against aliens w[illegible] first by G. P. Bro[illegible] secretary of Loyal [illegible] German Origin defense com[illegible]. At the opening of the afternoon session Dr. MacLean read into the record a statement of the committee's views that aliens even of enemy countries should not be dismissed from non-defense jobs. In defense industry the cases of aliens should be left to the War or Navy Departments, he said.

AN AWARD MADE ALMOST TOO LATE

ST. LOUIS AMERICAN

February 19, 1942

St. Louis American, Thursday

The bouquet was almost ordered too late, the wreath of achievement all but placed years after the fact. Such must be the appraisal of the Spingarn Medal Award announced last week by the NAACP. It was finally given to A. Philip Randolph, the veteran leader of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

Randolph earned and deserved this distinction, this very Spingarn Medal at least a decade ago. For reasons we know not, except that Randolph in his early struggle for recognition of the Negro Pullman porters as an organization was regarded in some quarters as a "radical." Whenever a Negro speaks up for his rights he is first labeled a radical—and in a sense he is radical in that there have been too few such strong men. Year after year, men whose work and contributions were far less lasting and often ephemeral, were named as Spingarn winners. In the days of Randolph's strength, and in the days of his hardest trials and award would have been like a strong tonic to those weary supporters of the Brotherhood. Randolph himself did not need it—he was born to keep on fighting against great odds—even against the scorn and ridicule of some of his own people.

The St. Louis American takes especial occasion to record these comments. For here in St. Louis and the midwest, 14 years ago coming March 15th, the first issue of the St. Louis American was printed, and in that issue was stated the cause of the Pullman Porters under the new leadership of A. Philip Randolph. This newspaper thought that the Negro Porters had as much to be recognized as an organization as the white Pullman conductors. It believed that all Labor had a right to organize, not just WHITE labor. So in the early struggles of the American it took to bosom this early struggle of the Pullman Porters.

The Pullman Porters in 1928 had an unpopular cause in St. Louis, even among some Negroes. St. Louis was one of the largest Pullman centers, and the Pullman company waged a bitter fight here against the organized porters. It's then superintendent of the porters was a modern Simon Le Gree. But worse was when the opposition Negro press came out against the Porters and ridiculed and labelled leader Randolph as a Negro smart alec stirring up trouble. It even attacked his neatness of dress—he wore spats and often a flower in his lapel. Yet from his mouth came the finest and most convincing speeches heard on any American platform. This opposition under the Pullman company favor roasted and belittled A. Philip Randolph.

The above incident of 14 years ago is deliberately recited here, not as an "I told you so" or in the spirit of strike back, not at all. It is detailed in order to show how often true leaders whose cause is opposed by powerful interests and seems hopeless are set aside for a temporary leader who takes the easy way (often with a few dollars on the side). When the objective appears impossible—like fighting against the extension of jim crow in Missouri—it is only through a true and strong and persistent leadership can ultimate victory be won. No compromiser or appeaser ever won a hard fight. But they have lost a great number.

A. Philip Randolph would not compromise or quit even when the Pullman company might have made his "retirement" a financial success. If Randolph had been one of "practical leaders" we sometimes hear about in St. Louis, and not a 'dreamer and seeker-after-the-impossible,' he might have gotten enough money to buy himself a block of gold mine stock, several shares in the Standard Life Insurance company and a few hundred dollars of our Peoples Finance Corporation stock here in St. Louis. That is how our more practical leaders acted, which cannot be condemned since they were hoping to build up their fortunes. But the acquiring of money does not necessary spell true leadership; often, as in Randolph's case, the ability to deny one's self, to "starve" awhile, counts more so far as the interest of the people is concerned.

The awarding of the Spingarn Medal to A. Philip Randolph by the NAACP is one of its finest awards, and brings us to set down these rather obtuse facts of Randolph's background. Save a pardon for us if plain writing is too strong. It is just the way we feel about real leaders.

THE OMAHA STAR, OMAHA, NEBRASKA, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1942

U.S. Needs All Its Mens, Says Dr. M. S. MacLean

'Can't Win War Without Utilizing Full Power Of Production

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—"This nation cannot win the war unless it utilizes to the fullest extent the skills of the millions of men who comprise its vast minorities," said Dr. Malcolm S. Mac Lean, president of Hampton institute, and newly appointed chairman of President Roosevelt's Fair Employment Practices commission, Saturday upon leaving the Hampton campus to assume for the first time, the duties of his office at special hearings in New York, Monday and Tuesday on discriminatory practices unheard of in the state of New York.

Dr. MacLean, whose appointment to succeed Mark F. Ethridge, of the Louisvile Courier-Journal as chairman of the FEPC was announced by the White House on Feb.10, said that "the committee will continue its services to the nation by uncovering discriminatory practices wherever they exist."

The committee was established on June 25 by executive order of the President, which stated that, "there shall be no discrimination in the employment of workers in defense industries or government because of race, creed, color or national origin."

Ethridge, who has served as chairman since the body's formation, will continue as a member. Others on the FEPC are Earl Dickerson, William Green, Philip Murray, David Sarnoff and Milton Webster.

MacLean, who was director of the general college of the University of Minnesota before coming to Hampton in 1940, will continue actively as president of the college. He will be off the campus for hearings of the committee, but a staff under Lawrence Cramer handles the regular work of the organization in Washington.

MacLean said that "the information being gathered by the committee of Fair Employment Practices will unquestionably be of the greatest usefulness to all educational institutions as well as the War Productions board, as the material will bring about a greater degree of realism in the ongoing reorganization of processes of education of minorities all over the country."

He predicted a closer tie-up in the future between education and the needs of industry, a tie-up that would result in better training and more opportunities to all people, regardless of race, creed, color or national origin.

1941's Ten Outstanding Persons Chosen By Calvin's Newspaper Service

Randolph Heads List To Receive Floyd J. Calvin Award

By L. BAYNARD WHITNEY

NEW YORK (C)—A. Philip Randolph, President of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, has been chosen this year by the staff of Calvin's Newspaper Service to head the list of the annual ten outstanding Negroes, whose accomplishments and press notices have exceeded all others. Certificates of award, which were established in 1939, in memory of Floyd J. Calvin, distinguished journalist, are to be given to Joe Louis, Mary McLeod Bethune, Marian Anderson, Congressman Arthur Mitchell, Adam Clayton Powell. W. C. Handy, Eddie (Rochester) Anderson, Count Basie, Dean Dixon besides Mr. Randolph.

The outstanding event of the year 1941 was the threatened March on Washington, organized by Mr. Randolph which obtained from the President of the United States, barring racial discrimination of employment in defense industry, a proclamation. This was followed by the formation of a bi-racial committee, Fair Practice Employment Committee. Thus, Mr. Randolph became the Man of the Hour.

The second on the list is Joe Louis, whose outstanding accomplishment of the year was not his routine fistic victories, but his setting an all-time example of racial fairness by staging a benefit bout for the lily-white U.S. Navy. Although his action was severely critized in some quarters, then consensus of opinion was on the side of Louis and those who believe in returning good for evil.

Mrs. Bethune's interest in youth and its problems has aroused a national interest in the tregedies, disappointments and frustrations which have faced Negro youth in this country. Of supreme value in helping to solve these many problems, has been the keen interest through Mrs. Bethune of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, who has labored tirelessly with Mrs. Bethune in this field. Her early hardships and her victory over circumstances has made her an ideal of Negro youth and have earned her third place for the Floyd J. Calvin awards.

Marian Anderson, the Negro's universal good-will ambassador reached the pinnacle of local honors last year when she received the Bok Award for having done the most in bringing prestige to her native city of Philadelphia. She is the first member of her race to be so honored and the nature of the Bok Award was one more instance in which Miss Anderson transcended all racial demarkations. Yet, Miss Anderson remained loyal to her race in again refusing, in one outstanding instance, to sing before an audience in New Orleans where her race would be insulted.

Congressman Mitchell's well publicized service to the race during 1941 was his victory against the railroads that travel thru the South wherein the U. S. Supreme Court upheld the principles of "equal accommodations for equal fare regardless of race. Altho many were disappointed because the Court did not blast the roots of Jim Crowism (a point which the court was not called upon to rule on), the aftermath of the decision created favorable traveling conditions for the Negro in various parts of the country. Generally, Congressman Mitchell's victory was hailed as an important milestone in the progress of the Negro in America.

The election to the New York City Council of Dr. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., pastor of Harlem's Abyssinian Baptist church, was remarkable for its demonstration not only of the voting strength of Negro Harem, but also the support which came from white churches and community organizations. Fortuitors, of course, was Powell's friendship with victorious Mayor F. H. LaGuardia. The young minister's political campaign—his first and ONLY one—was managed as well as that of a Tammany veteran (but cleaner). Calling it a "Peoples' Crusade," it had the effect of unifying the community. Already popular with the masses for his labor battles, Powell became a "solid" favorite during his fight for Negro bus drivers in Harlem.

"Father of the Blues," an autobiography by W. C. Handy is the interesting story of a hard working, hard sweating youngsters who evolved into the accepted representative of the Negroes sorrows and discouragements as expressed in that style of music known as the blues. For 1941 Handy's story adds one more strong stone to the rising structure of racial struggles—with victory at the end. This victory includes not only a going publishing business, but top honors were given Handy when Hollywood released a movie based on his music.

Radio comedian Eddie "Rochester" Anderson leads the field in hilarious entertainment for millions on Jack Benny's radio program. Altho he works for Benny, it is not too much to say that Rochester equals Benny in drawing power. His comedy is both natural and intelligent without "low comedy" flavor. Recently, he was featured in Look Magazine, showing his home life in Hollywood. Rochester is doing a great service to the race thru his art of laughter.

Count Basie's band, now appearing in Philadelphia with Hattie McDaniel, and on the Pepsi Cola hour marks a distinct era for Negroes in radio. Two of our most outstanding good will Negro radio sustaining programs, appearing for from 1 to 10 years, respectively, on each Sunday, were not able to achieve this distinction, regardless of their most deserving merits. However, indispensable they may be those who are on the sustaining commercial programs get a fixed salary, usually much lower than their services deserve. A commercial program, on the other hand, goes up in the money. As the first colored band ever to "go commercial" on radio, Basie has opened to the Negro the door to the treasure house of radio profits.

Young Dean Dixon, guest conductor of the NBC Philharmonic Orchestra for two weeks last summer, scored a tremendous hit among music lovers of the race in a field seldom studied by Negroes. Music, a field which has generally remained universally democratic, expressed no undue surprise when Dixon weilded the baton over 65 white musicians, who previous voted unanimously as having no objection to Dean on account of race. The season's highlight was his appearance at the City College Stadium on the night of August 10th, when he received a great ovation. David Sarnoff, President of the NBC, publicly expressed the policy of no racial discrimination and praised Dean Dixon for the excellence of his performances and the dignity of his personal conduct.

Those top ten were in the opinion of Calvin's Newspaper Service, the outstanding headline making achievers of the year 1941.

Field Secretary Eugene Davidson testifies before FEPC at Tuesday hearing.

Here Are Few Quotes From Speakers at FEPC Hearings

Short statements in behalf of the city, state and the several religious groups were made at the opening of hearings before the F. E. P. Committee Monday excerpts from which were:

Mayor F. H. La Guardia for New York City:

"The approach (to the problem) must come not from the head but from the heart otherwise all the committees and laws will not help. . . . This problem cannot be solved locally. It is national. We are in an abnormal period, a war period when all manpower must be used. We are in a bad fix and are going to continue to be. . . . We must create a state of mind to break down prejudices built up by tradition. . . . The big problem is that of economic security. If that is solved, the other problem would become secondary."

Hon. Charles Poletti, Lt. Governor for New York State:

"I believe we should have more and vigorous action by the committee (Governor's), additional state legislation, and enforcement of the laws by local officials and the federal government."

Father John Boland, chairman State Labor Relations Board, for Catholics:

"The question that is being settled by combat today is the inherent dignity of man. . . . In the final analysis it is Christianity that is being attacked and not just Democracy and its freedom. . . . Could not Hitler's of the world reply to our shocked question, 'When will the [illegible] stop persecuting the Jews?' by [illegible]ion question, 'When w[illegible]ns stop discriminating [illegible] Negroes?'"

Dr. Robe[illegible] Searle, Greater New York Fe[illegible]on of Churches, for Protestants:

"We are fighting against vicious ideas, against a ruthless oppression of minorities, against the attempt to destroy freedom and justice."

D'ya Like Words and Dots . . . Here Are Some on FEPC

For people who prefer to read with dots between their sentences, here are a few notes on the FEPC hearings. That wa. Earl Brown of the Governor's committee ad libbing with the Mayor just behind the press table. . . . Watching the proceedings intently was Samuel A. Allen, State Welfare Department, and assistant corporation counsel Eardlie John, local branch NAACP. . . . When asked about rumors that he would appoint a Negro magistrate either in New York or Brooklyn, Butch said; "I wouldn't ask the Mayor about it" . . . The Negro press didn't get a heluva lot of cooperation from Harry C. Levin, information division of OEM; the metropolitan papers not much better. . . . Judging from the number of Curtis-Wright subsidiaries cited, it appeared that all Wrights were All wrong. . . . The president of Becton-Dickinson Company has no prejudice; in fact he employs Negroes in his home, and has a personal retirement list of his pensioned employees. . . . The Mayor got a laugh when he told of a La Guardia Airport leasee who had advertised for a "Christian" stenographer because that was discrimination too close to home. The leasee jumped salty when the mayor handed him a 30 day vacate notice. . . .

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

By JAMES H. HOGANS

MEDALIST RANDOLPH

The selection of A. Philip Randolph as the winner of this year's Spingarn Medal may be appraised from several angles, although they are closely related.

In choosing the labor leader, the Medal Award Committee made a choice that is not only deserving of honor, but one that will likely meet the general approval of the race.

The second, but none the less significant angle, is the field of activity from which the selection is made. It showed that the committee recognized the fact that no one particular field of endeavor is responsible today for the social and economic advancement of the race.

This year's award is a distinct tribute to the field of labor and to the achievements of one of its eminent leaders.

There is still another angle. It goes back to the troublesome days of 1925, when Ashley L. Totten, Roy Lancaster and the late William H. Desverney, then Pullman porters, induced Mr. Randolph to launch his Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters' movement.

Editor, then, of a social and labor magazine, with a rather precarious existence, the organizer of the movement was looked upon with a certain degree of timidity and fear by the conservative element of his race.

This element admired and respected his superb attainments as a writer and orator, but they were, in the main, definitely afraid of his revolutionary social and labor theories, and dubbed him a radical agitator.

In short, Mr. Randolph was a brilliant outcast, so far as the representative leaders of those days were concerned. But a change in their attitude was noted shortly after he began organizing the Pullman porters.

This effort gradually brought him national prominence, since the Pullman porter was viewed as a sort of national institution.

Armored with that distinction, it wasn't long before he was highly accepted, even by the conservatives, as the labor leader.

That he eventually arrived to the labor leadership of the race is a fact which few will attempt to dispute, but his entrance was through the Pullman porters.

In this connection, he and the porters have common ground for respect, for each has contributed largely to the labor growth and prestige of the other. Putting it more bluntly, they have made each other in this field.

* * *

EMULATING JOE LOUIS

Emulating the example of Joe Louis to the navy by treating racial intolerance with racial tolerance, colored employees of the Pullman Company are donating handsomely to the Emergency Fund Drive of the American Red Cross, according to Pullman representatives of the New York and Pennsylvania Terminal Districts.

In the former district, one porter is reported to have given five dollars to the fund, and expressed regret at being unable to give more.

* * *

BIG TIME

Plans have been completed for the installation ceremonies of Local 370 of the Dining Car Employees' Union, which will be held Monday evening, February 23, at Park Palace Casino, 110th Street and Fifth Avenue, New York.

A galaxy of prominent civic and labor leaders have been invited and are expected to attend, among whom are Mayor F. H. La Guardia, Commissioner John P. Boland, of the State Labor Relations Board, A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and the Rev. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., newly elected city councilman.

President Edward Flore of the Hotel, Restaurant and Employees' International Alliance and Bartenders' International, will preside at the ceremonies, which will be followed by music and refreshments.

* * *

PREDICTED TROUBLE

S. R. Corrothers of New York, general organizer of the United Transport Service Employees, predicted as early as last September that some sort of questionable disaster, such as the Normandie destruction, would occur on the New York piers, unless more natives and fewer foreigners were employed there.

Mr. Corrothers was engaged in organizing the colored railroad pier workers, and in relating his observations to this columnist, remarked: "They are going to have a mess down there some day. All aliens and no colored are employed on those piers."

* * *

P.P.B.A. REPRESENTED

The Pullman Porters' Benefit Association, headed by E. M. Graham, Chicago; T. M. Blanton, Philadelphia, and W. C. Taylor and C. P. Loving, New York, was noticeably represented at the funeral rites of Mrs. Bertha Tarpley Sample, wife of Comptroller P. A. Sample, on Wednesday in Jersey City.

AFRO-AMERICAN

February 21, 1942

THE OMAHA STAR, OMAHA, NEBRASKA, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1942

LADIES' AUXILIARY OF THE BROTHERHOOD OF SLEEPING CAR PORTERS

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters held their regular meeting Thursday, February 19th, at the home of sister Sarah Washington, 1714 North 28th Street. The meeting was called to order by the President, sister Selma Clark singing the Brotherhood theme song.

Our guest speaker for the evening was Mr. S. Edward Gilbert, Editor of the Omaha Star, and President of the Negro Chamber of Commerce. He spoke on the Defense Saving Stamps and Bonds program and the YMCA. We also had two other visitors from the Brotherhood with us in the persons of brothers Raymond Towles, Pres., and Taylor Murrell, Secretary-Treasurer.

The sick of our organizations are: Brother Smith, Brother Harris, Brother [illegible] and Brother Morgan. All are reported to be improving. Our meeting was very interesting. The hostesses, Sister Sarah Washington and Sister [illegible] served a delicious luncheon.

The next meeting will be held Thursday, March 19th, at the home of sister Voner, 2537 Binney Street.

Sister S. Clark, President
V. Beasley, Reporter.

Unions Battle Over Negroes

Special

MOBILE, Ala.—An inter-union battle of considerable magnitude involving CIO and AFL affiliates is going full blast down here. The issue is centered on the Negro worker. The prize is dominance in the Gulf ship-building area. The entire problem carries with it serious and ominous implications.

If nutshells come big enough, here is the situation in one:

The CIO union some time ago admitted Negroes to membership when it organized the workers of the Alabama Drydock Company. The company hires 9,000 men, of which 20 per cent are Negroes working in semi-skilled and unskilled jobs. The union is seeking a contract with the company.

The AFL union right now enjoys contractual relations with the Gulf Shipyards which employs no Negroes. Heretofore the union has even barred them from membership. A negro had better not go within shouting distance of the yards.

The AFL union is fighting the claim of the CIO union that the latter has a majority of the workers at Drydock and is therefore entitled to a contract. Hearings to determine whether there shall be a plant election are being held by the National Labor Relations Board.

Having sunk a cool 150,000 smackers into the drive to organize whatever Negroes it can that the CIO haven't already collected at Drydock, the AFL is sparing no means, nor printers ink for that matter, for in the Mobile Journal union publication of January 15 a front page streamer heralded in bold type—"AFL ENDORSES SHIPBUILDING TRAINING FOR NEGROES."

Although the CIO is in the lead in organizing Negroes and might want to go even further, say, in getting them upgraded, it might simultaneously lay itself open to more bitter attack and thereby give validity to the AFL charges of ruing the "Southern Standard."

Expose Eleven Firms At FEPC Hearings

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

The President's Fair Employment Practice Committee, with all seven members present, opened up for two days of business Monday and heard 11 firms holding defense contracts in New York and New Jersey cited on charges of racial discrimination. The sessions were conducted in the Bar Association Building, 42 West 44th Street, and were witnessed by 200 persons.

With introductory remarks by Mayor La Guardia and Lt. Governor Charles Poletti, the hearings got under way with the new man, Dr. Malcolm S. [illegible] president of Hampton [illegible] presiding for the first time. [illegible]e Davidson, field representative for the committee, handled what amounted to the prosecution.

The represe[illegible] of various church and go[illegible]ntal groups, however, state[illegible]des before the cases were [illegible]. The first of them, Father [illegible] Boland, chairman of the [illegible]bor Relations Board, spe[illegible] Catholicism, declared th[illegible] question being settled by combat today is the inherent dignity of men." Dr. Robert W. Searle of the Greater New York Federation of Churches read the resolutions of both the Federation and that of the Federal Council of Churches in which both denounced the present biased attitude of holders of defense contracts.

State Group Scored

Representing New York State, Poletti scored the inaction of the Governor's Committee Against Discrimination in Defense Industries, accusing it of spending "too much time talking;" told of the legislation that the state has passed to curb the evil, and offered a series of recommendations, the application of which might effectively implement all these efforts.

Among his suggestions was one that private employment agencies should in some way be stopped from aiding would-be violators of the executive order who choose these agencies in preference to the government regulated state employment services. He also thought district attorneys should prosecute violators of the order, under state laws.

Mayor La Ghardia, for the city, viewed the problem as a national one that the heart and not the head would have to solve. He struck at labor unions which discriminate against minorities in their membership requirements, and then put in [illegible]plea for the foreign born and [illegible]ens.

Osmond K. Frankel, president of [illegible] National Lawyers Guild, spoke [illegible]or the legal profession; Rabbi J. X. Cohen for the Jew; Henry W. Pope of Welfare Council for the Negro, and Edward Corsi for the foreign born.

Firms Accused

Following the recess the committee heard three companies cited for violation of the executive order. They were Curtis Wright Aeronautical Company, the Becton and Dickinson Company of Rutherford, N. J., makers of medical and surgical supplies, and the Fairchild Aviation Company of Jamaica. All entered a general denial of discrimination.

The Becton - Dickinson firm, firm, which hires 1003 persons, has no Negroes, about 12 Jews and about 25 aliens, according to I. C. Newbury, its controller. The aged and feeble president, Col. F. S. Dickinson, a founder of the company in 1897, when asked if he was prejudiced in his employment policy, said it was to the contrary. Why, he employed Negroes in his household; in fact, he has a private pension list of his "retired" household help. The old man was prevented by his counsel from permitting his colored maid from testifying.

The Fairchild company had to explain why it hired neither Negroes nor Jews. Robert Brown, youthful personnel director for the company, got into considerable difficulty when the committee sought to draw from him an explanation of "this illusive thing you call character," as Dr. MacLean mimicked.

Testifying on the Jewish question at Fairchild, Isadore Goldstein told how he had warned another Jewish applicant to mark "Catholic" on his aplication where it called for religion since the applicant's name was not indicative of his race. P. S.: He got the job.

Tuesday morning brought a continuation of the situations. Those hauled onto the carpet were Sperry Gyroscope Corp., Ford Instrument Company, a Sperry subsidiary; Babcock and Wilcox, boilermakers of Bayonne, N. J.; Carl L. Norden and Company, Titeflex Metal Hose Company, Newark; Continental Can Company, Passaic; Isolantite, Inc., Belleville, N. J., and Julius Kayser.

Although the charge involved discrimination against Jews, the Titeflex company succeeded in making out a fairly good case in its policy toward Negroes. The company says it employs between 50 and 65 Negroes in various departments.

V. P. Hamilton, general manager for Isolantite, sought to place responsibility on the Chemical and Oil Workers Union, local 22026 (AFL) with which the firm has a closed shop agreement, charging its members refused to work with Negroes. No sooner had he uttered the words than Mr. Fenton, AFL member of the committee, jumped on him and said: "You tell this committee here and now that you'll take Negroes in your plant and I'll personally lift the charter of that union if it refuses to cooperate." Hamilton made categorical reply that he would.

Audience Applauds

So significant was this statement that it brought the first and only outburst of satisfaction from the audience. Questioned later on this point, Mr. Fenton explained that as director of organization for the AFL, he has the authority to revoke the charter of any federal union which demonstrates an attitude inconsistent with the announced policy of non-discrimination of the organization. His authority does not, however, extend to international unions, autonomous bodies in themselves, therefore the International Machinists Union is out of his reach.

Substantial contributions were made in the way of testimony by the labor division of the Works Production Board through Edward Lawson, field representative; Guichard Parrish, director of Negro Affairs, local National Youth Administration; the American Jewish Congress, and various affiliated unions of the Congress for Industrial Organization.

The committee went into executive and secret session Wednesday morning to consider the evidence and testimony offered. Just what decisions they will reach, if any, will remain a dark secret for the next few weeks.

SUGGESTS NATIONWIDE PROTEST AGAINS

RANDOLPH URGES MASS ACTION ON WAR PREJUDICES

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Because of the widespread and continued discriminations against Negroes in the Army, Navy, and all departments of the armed forces; the insult of the Red Cross in segregating the blood of Negro people; together with attacks upon Negro soldiers in Alexandria, La., Fort Bragg, and other places in the country, A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, suggests that a series of public mass meetings to protest these flagrant, outrageous and indefensible discriminations against Negroes be staged from coast to coast by the various Negro organizations—civic, educational, women's, youth, political, religious, fraternal and otherwise—in the various cities.

Randolph stated in the international headquarters of the Brotherhood in New York City, that some unified, concerted and nation-wide protest of the Negro masses is essential and imperative at this time to shake official America—governmental, industrial, and labor—into the consciousness and realization of the fact that Negroes as American citizens have a right to play a role upon a basis of equality in defense industries as workers and the armed forces as soldiers, sailors, and air men and in the government as office and professional employees, as well as on the policy-making boards of the nation.

SUGGESTS MAY FOR MEETINGS

The month of May is suggested by Randolph as the time to stage these monster mass meetings with Negro and white leaders—who are dedicated to uncompromising integration and equal participation of Negroes in the defense industries and the armed forces of the country—as speakers.

Mr. Randolph points out that now is the time for Negroes to speak up and speak out in defense of their rights and interests, and if they don't do so they are doomed to relegation to the status of virtual vassals and peons in the country.

NEW YORK AMSTERDAM NEWS

February 28, 1942

A. F. of L. Executive Declares He's Ready to Oust Union Unless It Admits Negro Members

Frank Fenton, director of organization for the A. F. of L., representing William Green, union president, pledged Tuesday that he would suspend the charter of a union in Belleville, N. J., if the union persisted in barring Negroes from employment.

Mr. Fenton's statement is believed to be the first time that a high ranking official promised specifically to suspend or expell a union which barred Negroes from membership and was made at the final public hearing of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices on Tuesday.

The statement came when Kenneth B. Hamilton, manager of the Isolantite, Inc., at Belleville, N. J., admitted that the company had on January 12th inserted a newspaper advertisement for white girls saying that in previous advertisements the company had not specified white girls and as a result employees at the plant threatened to quit if Negroes were hired.

"Why didn't you hire some Negroes and find out?" Fenton asked him.

Hamilton cited the company's closed shop and said the hiring of Negroes would cause real trouble.

"You hire the Negroes," Fenton replied, "and if they don't take them into the union I'll guarantee I'll lift the charter."

The union is the Chemical and Oil Workers Local 22,082, which has a contract at the plant. It is a federal local, which means it is chartered directly by the federation which controls its officers and policies. The federation, under its constitution, would have no power to act against a local union which is part of an autonomous international union. The international unions, which comprise the overwhelming bulk of the federation's membership, have the right to specify their own qualifications for membership.

LABOR'S FRONT

By J. Robert Smith

If the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee is to mean anything to the colored working man, it is incumbent upon its members to seek more power and authority either from the President or the Congress of the United States. The two-day sessions here last week revealed that with the Committee's present long-range educational program, before intolerant industrialists become tolerant, the war may be over and the colored man may be occupying the lowest rung of the economic ladder.

J. Robert Smith

The committee has no power to subpoena witnesses to its hearings. It has no power to punish violators of the executive order banning discrimination in defense industries and as a consequence many witnesses did not appear and many firms directed their attorneys to inform the committee that they did not practice discrimination as they hired one or two colored to every five hundred white employes, and in menial capacities at that.

Pleading short notice, some firms asked for a postponement of their hearings. All in all, the hearings were just a grand public gesture, an exhibition of good intentions with nothing materialistic in the actual securing of jobs for colored people obtained.

A Vicious Circle

Many manufacturing executives testified that they had never heard of the President's executive order and did not know of the existence of the FEPC. Most of the cases closed with members of the committee "beseeching" violators to comply with the spirit of the order so as to attain national unity and speed up production to whip the Axis. All violators agreed.

The only recourse the committee has to punish continued violators is to recommend to the President that their contracts be abrogated. Such a move at this time is inexpedient for the Chief Executive would not cancel contracts with such firms as the Sperry Gyroscope Co. and Wright Aeronautical Corp., manufacturers of vital essentials, and well-known discriminators because they are reluctant to hire colored workers. Therefore, the long-range educational program seems to be the only remedy. In the meantime, while it operates like the mills of God, the colored man is being expressed to his grave from starvation.

Agree With Dickerson and Fenton

The following question was asked members of the committee by the Star-News: "Do you believe that the FEPC needs more power to carry out the spirit of the President's order and to give jobs for Negroes right away as well as to look forward to legislation?"

President Malcolm McLean, of Hampton Institute; Mary [illegible] ridge, of Louisville, Ky., and [illegible] Brophy, of the CIO, went on record as declaring that the committee was vested with sufficient power to live up to the order, but the group was too young to think in terms of legislation.

David Sarnoff, president of RCA, and Milton P. Webster, of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, Chicago, preferred to be silent on the matter. Earl [illegible] Dickerson, Chicago alderman, in a forceful statement, said, "Yes, and it is within the power of the President to do so without having to resort to Congress." Frank Fenton, of the AFL, stated, "If the committee is given a job to do it should see that the job is thorough and that there is enforcement of its edicts."

This column agrees with both Dickerson and Fenton.

Order Means Nothing

Without enforcement power the executive order means nothing. Furthermore the order should be amended to include provisions in contracts to eliminate the use of race, religion and color in application blanks of employment agencies, one of the contributing sources that serve as recognized barriers to prevent colored workers from gaining a living.

Another proviso should be that defense industries should not be allowed to execute a closed shop agreement with companies that discriminate. That will help to end the discriminatory practices of certain locals and unions.

Lack of Public Sentiment

It is not surprising to note that manufacturers did not know of the order and of the committee. The nation's press and radio said very little or nothing whatsoever about them. They have always disregarded the problems of the colored man except when he commits a crime he is given front page space.

The recent hearings were given very little space, the radio ignored them. In contrast to this they whipped up public sentiment to oust Mrs. Roosevelt from the OCD and halt the pensions of Congressmen. Overnight, the press and radio can stimulate sufficient public interest to pass the Anti-Lynch Bill. On that, too, they are silent.

If we are to get the best that there is in America to be able to hold our own against the Axis powers, our productive power has to be speeded up, and that means that every colored man who is able to work must be put to work.

It is, therefore, the duty of the newspapers and the radio to see that intolerant industrialists face the issue squarely and renounce their vicious old custom for the salvation of all.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1942

AGAINST BIAS

T

ut the spirit of der and to in-oes right away,
orward to legis-

lm McClean, of e; Mark Eth-
, Ky., and John
O, went on rec-that the Com-
with sufficient
o the order and young to think tion.

president of
P. Webster, of of Sleeping Car preferred to be tter. Earle B. alderman, in a said, "Yes, and ver of the Presi-
thout having to
" Frank Fen-stated, "If the a job to do it job is thorough enforcement of rees with both ton.

Nothing

ment power the means nothing.
order should be le provisions in nate the use of color in appli-
f employment he contributing as recognized
t colored work-living.

should be that should not be a closed shop companies that t will help to atory practices
d unions.

Sentiment

ng to note that not know of the committee.
and radio said
ing whatsoever
y have always roblems of the t when he com-
is given front-

ngs were given the radio ig-ontrast to that,
ublic sentiment
evelt from the e pensions of vernight, the n stimulate suf-rest to pass the
On that, too,

t the best that a to be able to ainst the Axis
tive power has and that means man who is be put to work.

he duty of the e radio to see ustrialists face and remedy custom for the

Highlights in Testimony Heard before President

Unpatriotic New York and New Jersey Defense Plants Have Slick Reasons for Not Hiring Colored and Jews; Many Deny Charges of B

LaGuardia Says N. Y. Is Model

World's Largest City Appoints All Races to Public Office.

Hubert Delany Is Tax Commissioner; Mayor Says He Has Ability.

New York's Chief Druggist "Good."

No Jim Crow Policy Just Takes "Guts."

(Continued from Page 1)

tional problem. Neither New York City nor any other city can do it all.

"You know I could stop now and not appoint another colored person for twenty-five years and still some of the other places wouldn't catch up. We're in abnormal times—we're in a bad fix—what we must be thinking about is education of our young people.

Fired Anti-Jew

"The other day we had a $21 week stenographer job advertised for Christian only. Turned out to be at LaGuardia Field. That was too near home. We sent a girl, Christian, of course, found the advertiser to be a tenant of the city.

"I didn't wait. I gave him thirty days' notice and suspended the employment agency. He claimed he sent an ad to the agency asking for citizen and that the agency misunderstood and wrote Christian.

"Nothing has been said here about some labor unions which won't take a black man in. If we're going to approach this question, we must dissect it, open it up wide. It's been a lot better since the President ordered all defense plants to hire workers without discrimination."

New York Hearings Not Up to Chicago's

The hearings themselves demonstrated the necessity of having all the ducks in a row in order to present an effective case.

Compared with the Chicago hearings last month which were well prepared, the New York hearings were mainly talk. Reason is that the four largest of the twelve firms cited before the committee claimed that they did not receive notice to appear until two days before the opening last Monday.

They thus contended that they were not prepared to answer charges of violation of the Presi-

Hampton President Sits for First Time with the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practise.

Jews and Colored Are Barred from Some of the Defense Plants.

Many Firms Agree to Change Labor Policies.

Witnesses Put Finger of Discrimination on Plant Managers and Officers.

BACKGROUND

NEW YORK. — The President's Fair Employment Practice Committee investigating discrimination in defense industries in violation of the President's Executive Order 8802, outlawing such practices, held two-day hearings here last Monday and Tuesday.

Sitting as members of the committee were: President Malcolm MacLean of Hampton Institute, new chairman of the committee who succeeded Mark F. Ethridge, Louisville publisher, as chairman. (Mr. Ethridge is still a member of the body);

David Sarnoff, RCA president; Earl B. Dickerson, Chicago alderman; John Brophy, CIO; Frank Fenton, AF of L.; Milton P. Webster, vice-president of Sleeping Car Porters.

Lawrence Cramer is executive secretary of the body and Eugene Davidson, field representative, conducted the hearings.

The committee heard charges of discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion and national origin against ten New York and New Jersey firms. The following is the testimony in part:

Curtiss-Wright Aeronautical Corporation

Paterson, N.J., 17,000 employees, 121 colored (maintenance only). Received notice of hearings only two days before. Committee granted them right to answer charges at a later date.

Irvin Abramson, State president of N.J. CIO Council, said that there was unequal labor representation on the Paterson Vocational Training School Advisory Board in that four board members were from Wright's, and that since January 2, 1940, there had been 7,500 persons trained at the school, none of whom was colored. This school was training employees for Wright's airplane factory.

Kelly of the board of education said Vocational School takes no colored because there are no prospects for employment of colored persons at Wright's.

Electrician Offered Laborer's Job

Robert Smith, 39, Brooklyn, N.Y., graduate in engineering from Ohio State University in 1932; consulting engineer in Columbus, Ohio; taught in Brooklyn High, 1919-26, said:

"Wright advertised for an electrician and when I applied, the company refused to employ me except as janitor at 54 cents an hour."

Mrs. A. M. Curtiss, president of Paterson NAACP said: "After a year's work, I got Wright's to accept 6 men. They put them all in the foundry department."

Becton-Dickinson Co.

E. Rutherford, N.J., makers of surgical and medical supplies; 1003 employees, no colored.

L. C. Newbury, controller; Col. P. S. Dickinson, founder and president; William Gaunt, personnel manager; F. S. Kellogg, attorney, all pleaded that notice had been received too late and were also granted right to answer specific complaints at a later hearing.

Mrs. Jonathan Gibbs, wife of a physician, and Mrs. Velma Hendricks quoted Dickinson as saying that the company does not employ colored. Colored doctors and dentists have sent thousands of dollars into this company.

Controller Queried

Mr. Newbury was questioned by the committee as follows:

Q—How many employees?

A—1003 last Saturday.

Q—Is it a national business with defense contracts?

A—Yes.

Q—How many colored?

ored; one in maintenance, 2 in final assembly and one on drill press.

William Pringle (member of Class of 30 which finished Jamaica Vocational High School) said:

"I was the third man in line. The first two were hired. When I got to the front, they told me that my training in auto mechanics would place me in line for a job in bench work but not in the machine shop. I said that I would take that and they said, 'Okey, we'll call you.' I haven't heard from them.

"The whole class was hired except eight Jews and myself. One Jew, who wrote 'Catholic' on his application, and didn't have a Jewish name, was hired. They didn't hire one Gentile either because they said he had been in Wall Street for forty years."

Put 'Catholic' on Application

Isadore Goldstein testified: "I was with the boy who wrote 'Catholic' on his application. I told him to do it when I saw they weren't hiring Jews."

Robert Brown, 25, personnel manager, said: "We have four colored employees now, one on the drill press, two on final assembly and one in maintenance. Since December we've received 15,000 applications. We hired 250. Of this number 56 were colored and we hired five."

COMMITTEE—Do you deny that you refused to employ these two Jewish boys because they were Jews?

BROWN—Yes, I do.

COMMITTEE—Why do you have this reference to race and religion in the application?

BROWN—Just a habit. Just to have it in there.

COMMITTEE—What should be your attitude if a colored or Jewish person applied now?

BROWN—We're not hiring now — especially men in draft age.

Sperry-Gyroscope Corp.

Brooklyn, N.Y. 11,212 employees, 21 colored, 8 in maintenance work and remainder in semi-skilled and skilled capacities but charge is company still discourages colored applicants, hires them only for special jobs and refuses aliens and Jews.

Abraham Boyarsky, 33, compiler of mailing lists, testified:

"I received a call from the General Employment Agency on June 5, from Todd of the agency, asking for names and addresses of graduates of the Brooklyn Tech. Vocational School. I was told [illegible] were interested in the list [illegible] had an order fr[illegible] company for sev[illegible] machine shop op[illegible]

[illegible] and No N——s

[illegible] told that they wanted C[illegible]ans and no n——s. I said so far as the n——s are concerned I can't tell them. He said I can tell by addresses. I told him my charge was two cents a name. He wanted to pay only one cent a name.

"I asked why the boys couldn't apply directly to the plant. He said no. I turned the lists over to him. When I got list back, names were checked off, apparently of persons who met their qualifications — names of Ger-

President's FEPC in Session in New

Note serious expressions on faces of members of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee, investigating defense discrimination, as they listened to a witness during two-day hearings in New York last week.

Left to right they are: Frank Fenton, A.F. of L.; Mark Ethridge, Louisville publisher and former chairman of the committee; Milton P. Webster, vice-president, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; Malcolm MacLean, president of Hampton Institute and new

That's a hypothetical question.

COMMITTEE — Well, you're a lawyer. Do you say your policy is non-discriminatory?

HITCHCOCK — Yes.

COMMITTEE — How many colored do you employ?

HITCHCOCK — I can't tell.

Witness Refused

James H. Sheldon, chairman of the board of education of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi Association, prepared to testify. The commission declined to accept his testimony because he could not reveal its confidential sources.

DICKERSON — Mr. Chairman, I move that unless at the next hearing of this case the company brings in confidential records in answer to all the charges, this witness and all other witnesses be permitted to testify.

DR. MacLEAN — The committee will take that in consideration.

Ford Instrument Company

New York, a subsidiary of the Sperry Co., 3,400 employees, 60 colored, no skilled, all in maintenance — company kept promise to employ colored but did not give them skilled jobs as promised. Company permitted to answer charges later.

Babcock-Wilcox Company

Bayonne, N.J., makers of boilers; approximately 500 employees, no colored.

A. W. Elbert, company counsel, said: "Our company does not intend to discriminate against colored persons."

COMMITTEE — Do you have application blanks asking race, color, etc.? What is the purpose of it?

A—It shows racial aptitude.

Q—Where did you get that — from James's psychology?

A—From employment experts.

Q—You would be glad to eliminate the race question from your application blanks, wouldn't you?

A—Well, we may need it sometime, like in connection with this hearing — you asked how many colored, Jews, etc., we had.

Q—Do you want to bind your company by saying that racial differences matter in employment?

A—We only need that information for your committee.

MR. ETHRIDGE — Our committee wouldn't have to come in to investigate if companies like yours hadn't kept such records.

Carl L. Norden Company

New York City, makers of bombsights and precision instruments; has no colored employees.

Investigator testified that Eugene Hack, personnel manager, had said that the company did not hire colored.

HACK — We have no policy against hiring colored. It's highly precision work. We have a subsidiary outside of New York where apprentices are trained. Two hundred are in class now and about 20 are colored. They work at that plant.

Titeflex Metal Hose Co.

Newark, N.J. Only evidence against this company was that it inserted ad in Detroit daily, on November 28, asking for Gentiles only.

Percy L. Proctor, vice-president, testified:

"The company has no policy against hiring colored as they have 65 colored workers — secured through Robinson of the Urban League. The shop is CIO and our colored employees are doing well; we have no policy against hiring Jews; 200 are employed.

"We don't deny the ad was inserted. What we're trying to do now is to find out who inserted it."

Continental Can Company

Passaic, N.J., 600 employees, three of whom are colored.

Howard P. Allen, personnel director, said that the company is not interested in religion or racial extractions and that the policy is no discrimination. Three colored are employed, one is chief of replating department.

"The reason no colored was hired recently," he testified, "is that no colored applied."

Isolantite Inc.

Belleville, N.J., ceremac insulators; 745 employees, no colored.

The charge was made that this company inserted an ad in the Passaic Daily Herald on January 12 for "white girls."

Kenneth B. Hamilton, general manager, and E. H. Evans, attorney, were called:

COMMITTEE — How do you expect to get applications from colored when you advertise for white girls only?

EVANS — The shop is 100 per cent AF of L and the white girls have said that if colored are hired, they'll walk out.

MR. FENTON (of the committee) — Why don't you hire some colored and try it? What's the name of the union?

EVANS — The Chemical and Oil Workers' Union No. 2206.

FENTON — "You hire colored and I'll guarantee that if they don't admit colored, I'll lift their charter. (Loud applause from audience.)

Okonite Company

[illegible]

Julius Kayser Company

[illegible]

's Committee

ias but Still Employ Whites Only

York

chairman of the committee; David Sarnoff, RCA president, and John Brophy, CIO. Inset at right is Earl B. Dickerson, Chicago alderman, the other member.

[illegible] executive order outlawing discrimination in defense firms.

Consequently they asked for and were granted the right to appear at a later hearing, time and date of which were not set.

All Chicago Firms Notified

In the Chicago hearings, all firms had been notified far enough ahead of time and the responsible employers were called on the carpet and made public statements of their present hiring policies and their plans for the future.

In the case of the Okonite Company of Passaic, N.J., the committee's witnesses were not present and the case was postponed. In the case of the Julius Kayser Company of Brooklyn, the charges were dropped without prejudice but no reason was given for the action.

Pope Speaks

Henry W. Pope of NYC Welfare Council urged the committee not to consider excuses of employers such as "my white employers would object" or "we have colored janitors and we'll hire other maintenance employees."

"We want no compromise," he stated. "We hold that full and equitable employment does not mean 'token employment' or employment of a few in order to give color of compliance with the President's order."

A—None at present, sir.

Denies Refusing Women

Colonel Dickinson was questioned as follows:

Q—Did you tell these two women that you didn't hire colored people?

A—No. I did not.

Q—What would you do if colored people applied at your plant for applications?

A—I'd give them applications but we can't use them.

Q—What we want to know is, will you afford colored applicants the same treatment as whites?

A—Yes.

At one point Dickinson attempted to go into matter of his family's hiring policy of colored people; how he had originally come from N.C., etc., but Chairman MacLean ruled that this was irrelevant and refused to allow him to continue.

Fairchild Aviation Corp.

Jamaica, N.Y.; 910 employees, 4 colored.

mans and Jews were marked and not a single one was hired."

Harry Feld, 34, Jewish, who applied for employment, said:

"I was told at first that I could be used but was turned down when the interviewer saw that my religion was Jewish."

Miss Jean Kitzer, an interviewer for the American Jewish Congress, said she saw an ad in N.Y. Times, asking for "Apprentice Machinists — Christian Americans — between ages of 18 and 23, needed 500 at $18 a week."

"I called the General Employment Agency which also goes under the name of General Placement Bureau and asked for an appointment.

John Coffey of the agency confirmed information given her by Jack Brownstein (not present as he works at defense plant in Baltimore but an affidavit had been accepted from him) that the ad was placed for the Sperry Co.

Marked Applications

"Another ad, placed for Sperry by another company, was marked W * X * and the asterisks indicated that they would take only that kind of worker: W for white, X for Christian. However, without asterisk, it meant they preferred white Christians but would accept others."

A requisition from the NY State Employment Service, Order No. 0307 asked for 100 machine apprentices. Mr. Coleman of the Metal Trades Association said that it was for Sperry. It asked for W * X * Amer. Born*, Amer. and Northern European ancestry*.

Horace B. Hitchcock, counsel for the company, said:

"The policy of our company is not to discriminate but to seek to employ qualified persons on the basis of skill, ability and training."

COMMITTEE—If the charges of Miss Kitzer were true, wouldn't that be in violation of the President's order?

HITCHCOCK — I can't say.

BETH.-COOKMAN LIBRARY TO BE DEDICATED MARCH 1

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla.—The Harrison Rhodes Memorial Library at Bethune-Cookman College will be dedicated at 3 p.m. Sunday, March 1.

STORER STUDENTS TO HEAR PREXY ON FOUNDER'S DAY

HARPERS FERRY, W.Va.—President Henry T. McDonald will deliver the address at the seventy-fifth anniversary Founder's Day pro gram at Storer College on February 27.

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

By JAMES H. HOGANS

MR. TOWNSEND AND THE JAPANESE

Despite their evident loyalty to the land of their birth, like all other workers and residents of their race in this country, native-born Japanese are being looked upon with distrust and disapprcval by the whites of Americ.a.

Since Pearl Harbor, this feeling is quite natural, but it is none the less palpably unfair to loyal American-born Japanese.

This was pointed out by Willard S. Townsend, president of the United Transport Service Employees, in a recent letter to Walter Winchell, noted newspaper and radio commentator and now a naval lieutenant commander, protesting an alleged slur concerning the Japanese red caps at Seattle, Wash.

"While visiting in Los Angeles and other Pacific Coast cities," wrote Mr. Townsend, "I was informed that you stated either in the press or by radio that 'The Japs had taken over the Seattle railroad stations.'

"For your information, this union has represented the Japanese employees in the Seattle railroad stations and you may be interested to know that these American sons of Japanese ancestry are giving more and receiving less than many lip-service Americans.

"Their Japanese-American Citizens' League has been instrumental in buying over $25,000 worth of defense bonds, and has formed an intelligence unit to assist our Federal Bureau of Investigation in ferreting out those who oppose our American way.

"Despite all their efforts to indicate loyalty, their lot is a hard one, and cer.ainly such an untimely statement does not make for their comfort."

Mr. Townsend's defense of the Japanese red caps will not likely get much applause from Afro-Americans, due to the fact that the Japanese in this country have never evinced any noticeable inclination or desire to join hands with them in fighting racial prejudice and discrimination here.

Their lot in that respect on the Pacific Coast has not [illegible] unlike that of the colored [illegible] the South, but they have [illegible] kept significantly aloof [illegible] American colored ma[illegible] of the Filipinos, the[illegible] sistently courted the [illegible] of the whites.

That, however, [illegible] minimize in any manner the justice of Mr. Townsend's appeal for fairness to them.

* * *

THE D.C. INSTALLATION

To the detached observer, as was this columnist, the installation of dining car union workers in New York Monday evening of last week was an interesting affair.

It was the biennial induction of the officers of Dining Car Workers' Union Local 370, which was organized six years ago by the rebel members of the old Brotherhood of Dining Car Employees.

The union's membership has grown from the 160 to 1400, officials disclosed at the meeting.

Presence of a large number of women indicated that wives and sweethearts are taking a more practical interest in matters which have to do with their men folks' livelihood and working conditions.

Also of significance was the array of official guests from the different culinary unions who took part in the installation ceremonies.

Their attendance was a fairly good illustration of how colored and white labor leaders are working to promote better industrial conditions and more cordial racial relations among and between white and colored workers in the culinary industry.

* * *

INJURY STATISTICS

An analysis of injuries reported by Pullman porters and attendants in the New York Zone in 1941 revealed that the largest number of personal casualties occurred among those between 36 and 45, according to the zone's safety supervisor.

The analysis lists 9 injuries to men under 36; 68 to men between 36 and 45; 27 to those between 46 and 55, and 30 to those between 56 and 65, during the year.

Careless handling of berth equipment, doors, windows and passengers' baggage; getting on and off moving cars; foreign substances entering eyes, burns, scalds, razor blade cuts and broken glass were listed as the most common cause of injuries.

NEGRO LABOR NEWS, SATURDAY, MARCH 7, 1942

TP WORKERS REFUSE TO JOIN AFL; MEET AT MARSHALL

TEXARKANA, Texas—The nearly 2000 colorel employees on the Texas and Paficic Failroads, continue refuse to take memkership in the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, affiliate of the AFL, despite the fact that the organization won the collective bargaining rights through an election held sometime ago. According to Ed Carter, general chairman, the workers have formed independent locals at every point from Fort Worth, Texas, to New Orleans, La., where they have joined one hundred per cent.

The workers on the TP are employed as semi-skilled mechanics, mechanic helpers, blacksmiths, coach cleaners, store house men and section labor. The coach clearners wefe the first to take the fight against the color bar and discriminatory practices in the AFL to court. They protested a NLRB certification of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen as the bargaining agency on the grounds that the organization barred Negroes from active participation in the affairs of the union. A temporary injunction was granted against the union an dthe matter was tied up in court more than two years until finally the United States Court of Appeals sustained the AFL. The court battle was led by C. W. Rice, of Houston, who acted as agent for the workers, under the National Federation of Railway Workers which later was dissolved. Recently, the workers have reorganized under the leadership of Edward Carter into the International Association of Railway Employees.

The unions are making plans to determine the bargaining agency. It is believed the independents will win over the American Federation. A special system meeting is called at Marshall, Sunday, March 8.

PITTSBURGH COURIER

March 7, 1942

NEGRO TRAINMEN PROTECTED UNDER FAIR PRACTICE ORDER

NEW YORK, Mar. 5—The Department of Industrial Relations of the National Urban League, through its secretary, Franklin O. Nichols, hailed as a signal victory for Negro firemen and engineers on certain southern railroads the opinion furnished by John Lord O'Brien, General Counsel of the Office of Production Management.

This opinion held that common carriers of nation-wide importance such as railways operating in interstate commerce are included within the meaning of the term "defense industries" as it is used in the Executive Order 8802 and that any carrier whether interstate or local, which contracts formally in writing to carry troops or equipment holds a "defense contract" and is therefore subject to the obligations imposed upon defense contractors by Section 2 of the Executive Order.

In giving the story back of this momentous opinion, Mr. Nichols related: "Almost from the first time that railroads in the southern section of the United States of America were developed, Negroes have been serving as locomotive firemen. In August, 1941, in a letter to The Pittsburgh Courier, Mr. Willard Townsend, international president of the United Transport Service Employees of America, called attention to the threatened loss of jobs by Negro locomotive firemen in certain railroads in the south due to a non-promotable contract entered into between the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and certain railroads.

The Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and the United Transport Service Employees of America have called attention to the fact that this contract threatens to gradually eliminate the Negro firemen completely from this division of railroad service.

This is a significant decision in it offers for the first time a dealing with this serious matter opportunity to focus in the light of publicity an obviously deliberately planned program eliminating Negro workers from a class of railroad industry.

NEW YORK AMSTERDAM NEWS

March 28, 1942

LABOR'S FRONT

By J. Robert Smith

The investigation relating to the recent fire that has the luxury liner Normandie resting on her side in the mud in New York Harbor, concluded its findings with a report to the effect that there was no sabotage and the cause was purely accidental.

J. Robert Smith

The majority of the workers on the ship at the time of the fire were white and at least 65 percent were aliens. The few colored workers employed were ordinary laborers. The aliens held the responsible positions such as checkers, foremen, gang foremen and general foremen.

There is no chance for advancement for colored dock hands down on the pier. They are confined to unloading ships and freight cars and there is a reason for that. The jim-crow and discriminatory policies of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Steamship Employes make no bones to let colored members know that the whites have priority in the enjoyment of the privileges that the union affords.

Beside the fact that the colored members belong to a jim-crow auxiliary unit with their own constitution, the whites have seen to it that their colored brothers who pay the same dues have no autonomy whatsoever.

In the constitution of the grand lodge (white) there is a proviso which states, "All white persons, male or female, of good moral character, who have had actual experience, shall be eligible to membership." Since the revision of the constitution at Denver, Colorado, in May, 1931, the colored unit was formed.

In the constitution of the auxiliary it is also emphasized that "colored persons of good moral character are eligible for membership," but these colored members cannot represent themselves in System, District or Terminal board meetings, and at grand lodge conventions. They must be represented by the local, division or district chairmen who are all white.

For fear that the colored brothers expose the undemocratic practices of the union, in their rules and regulations under "Funds and Publications Forbidden," is inscribed, "Solicitation of funds by any means, for any purpose whatsoever or the publication of papers, books and periodicals is hereby forbidden."

Independent Union

The brotherhood is independent, neither affiliated with the CIO or AFL. There were once 2,000 colored members, now there are only about 150 left, 216 of that number having joined the United Transport Service Employes of America (colored), Local No. 51, of which Sylvester L. Corrothers is general chairman. They were chartered last Sunday. The remaining 1,634 members are today not unionized after leaving the brotherhood disgustingly.

The brotherhood handles all work for the New York Central System and that is one of the main waterfront sources where colored workers look to for a living.

The Governor's Committee

With the passage of the many labor laws now pending in Albany banning discrimination in concerns with defense contracts, an investigation of the brotherhood, with headquarters at 111 W. 48th St., by the Governor's Committee on Discrimination and Employment would aid considerably in putting more men to work and thereby speed up shipment of munitions to the war zones.

It would also help to lessen the possibilities of sabotage, since it is a well-known fact that the colored man can always be faithfully and patriotically depended upon. He is called upon to shoulder a gun and shed his blood to protect his country, but on the other hand his country prefers to give bread to aliens who do not care to fight for her protection, while the loyal colored American starves.

While this column is a firm believer in trade unionism solely for the protection of the worker, it is at the same time inimical to those unions, and there are many, that are the main factors in preventing colored workers from earning a livelihood.

If we are to win this war, such unions must either change their policy voluntarily or coercively and failing to do so should be denied the right of operation. It falls within the power of the Governor's Committee to rectify such wrongs in New York State and the brotherhood is an ideal example to begin with.

NEW YORK AGE

March 28, 1942

Negroes Should Fight Against 40 Hour Week Abolition -- Randolph

"Reactionary Southern Senators such as Smith of Virginia and Cox of Georgia are bent upon the emasculation of the wage and hour law which provides for the 40 hour week and a minimum wage. These Senators are long time enemies of organized labor and have fought every measure for the improvement of the conditions of the workers that has been presented to the Congress. Their position, there fore, on the discontinuance of the 40 hour week should be rejected and condemned," says A. Philip Radolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car porters at the headquarters of the Union in New York City.

Continuing, Mr. Randolph observed "that Negro workers in America have benefited greatly from the wage and hour law and 40 hour week and minimum wage provision, and it would be a catastrophe to the workers in the lower wage brackets—in which category workers of the Negro masses fall—for Congress to yield to the clamor of these southern tory senators and congressmen, and wipe this legislation off the statute books.

CHICAGO SUN

March, 1942

Hillman Denies Favoritism in War Contracts

Commentator's Charge Of Bias for Union Called Slanderous

Washington Bureau of The Chicago Sun.

Washington, March 27.—Sidney Hillman, through his department's legal adviser, Edward F. Prichard Jr., today emphatically denied charges made earlier this week that he was guilty of favoritism in awarding Army contracts.

Prichard, legal adviser to the War Production Board's labor division, told a House military affairs subcommittee investigating dollar-a-year-men in the WPB, that Hillman had asked him to reply to the "baseless and untruthful slanders."

On Tuesday Fulton Lewis Jr., radio news commentator, charged before the committee that Hillman's office had influenced the War Department to award contracts only to firms employing members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union (C. I. O.), from which, Lewis said, Hillman was receiving $12,000 a year.

"The issue presented by Lewis' charges is a simple one," Prichard said. "It is an issue of fact and truth. If what Lewis says is true, it is a serious mater. If what he says is untrue, then he can only be characterized as a purveyor of irresponsible falsehoods."

As to the procurement policy, Prichard said, the one in effect with respect to clothing contracts "is the policy laid down by Mr. MacKeachie (Douglas C. MacKeachie, director of WPB's division of purchase) on Feb. 13, 1942. No other policy is in effect today or has been in effect.'

Concerning Lewis' charge that factories employing ACWU workers got contracts over International Ladies' Garment Workers Union (A. F. of L.) factories, Prichard made emphatic denial.

Prichard said the Benjamin Clothing Company has received substantial awards including one for 30,000 overcoats as recently as this month and that the Prince Biederman Company had never put in a bid for Army coats. Lewis had charged that bids from these two companies were refused by the Army because of their union affiliations.

At the close of the hearing, Chairman Charles I. Faddis (Dem., Pa.) told reporters that the investigation would be temporarily adjourned with a possibility of resuming in a few weeks.

THE OMAHA STAR, OMAHA, NEBRASKA, FRIDAY, MARCH 13, 1942

Dr. MacLean Says FEPC Will "Crack Down" On Jim-Crowism In Defense

Says Ignorance on Part of Employer and Employee Responsible For Complaints of Discrimination

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—President Roosevelt's Fair Employment Practices Committee has already made a considerable study of discrimination in defense employment and will carry its work much farther for the good of the nation and the good of all minorities, Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of Hampton institute, and chairman of the FEPC, told a student and faculty audience in Ogden hall Sunday night.

Speaking of discrimination, Dr. MacLean stated that "a lot of alleged discrimination is not discrimination at all, but arises on the employer's side from ignorance of the fact that there are any Jews or any Negroes who have the skills that they so much need." He added that "ignorance on the part of those who seek defense jobs, of the right, clear, solid procedure for getting those jobs," was another factor which contributes to charges of discrimination.

"This doesn't mean that there isn't widespread practice of discrimination in defense industry," Dr. MacLean declared. "Some is highly malicious, and it is that which is against all minorities that the committee is determined to crack down on with all the legal force that it can wield."

FROM: Arthur Northwood, Jr.

Bureau of Special Services
TIME Inc.
Rockefeller Center, New York City

I feel so sure you won't want to miss this article from the new issue of TIME that I'm sending you a marked folio.

U.S. AT WAR

Culver, International

FREDERICK DOUGLASS, NEGRO DEFENSE APPRENTICES, VETERAN JOHNSON
A miracle got few results.

Unquiet Potomac

There has been a bad lag in the actual movement of U.S. war material to Russia and Turkey. The long-tried patience of Joseph Stalin—smothered with promises, fed with a trickle—is near the cracking point. Turkey, which unofficially promises to go anti-Axis for the barest trifle of Lend-Lease aid, is now getting desperately nervous, because no U.S. aid arrives. The President, seeing the Lend-Lease clearance papers, takes it for granted that the goods have been shipped, does not know that they have been sidetracked by the U.S. Army & Navy for other uses.

Washington correspondents were told these things last week as facts—by responsible people in the Administration who should know. Certainly a bitter behind-the-scenes battle was under way in Washington. The State Department, the Lend-Lease Administration, the agents of Information Coordinator Bill Donovan were fighting to get aid to Russia and Turkey before the Japs and Germans closed all possible routes of aid. The Army and Navy Departments were fighting to get all possible aid to United Nations forces now in combat; to mount offensives, if possible; to build up defenses at vulnerable points.

It looked as if the unified command of the U.S. needed a little more unifying.

Economic Union

The U.S. and the United Kingdom joined hands this week in a Declaration of Principles which may well be the foundation stone of future economic relations between the two countries. The agreement moves to exorcise the specter of post-war debts; to break down tariff barriers on a scale undreamed of; to cement a post-war economic union. In Washington Acting Secretary of State Sumner Wells and Britain's Ambassador Lord Halifax signed the agreement.

By the agreement's terms, the President is given power to set the value of Lend-Lease aid at any figure he pleases. Against these debts, the President will balance the value of Britain's services by: 1) fighting the war virtually alone for a year and a half; 2) continuing to supply men & materials now. And in the final peace settlement the U.S. and Britain are bound to break down the imperial preferences and the Smoot-Hawley Tariff.

A statement was issued at the same moment in Washington and London: "Its [the agreement's] aims will be . . . to expand production, employment, and the exchange and consumption of goods which . . . are the material foundations of liberty and the welfare of our peoples."

RACES

White Man's War?

In Philadelphia, Negro Harry Carpenter was held for treason* when he told a Negro Army sergeant: "This is a white man's war, and it's no damn good."

Negroes have fought ably in every U.S. war since the Revolution. In the Civil War, the Union had 170,000 black soldiers under arms. But when the first Negro leader, Frederick Bailey Douglass, asked why they were paid less than white soldiers, President Lincoln temporized. Negroes should be glad they could serve at all, said Mr. Lincoln. They had more to fight for than any white man.

Since World War I, the Negro's status as a U.S. fighting man has gone backward. Of the 1,078,331 Negroes registered for the draft in World War I, more than 34% were drafted (less than 27% of the white men registered were taken). Some 380,000 Negroes served as soldiers—10% of the whole Army. The 292,000 Negro troops the Army expects to have at the end of 1942 will come to 8% of the U.S. armed forces in World War II.

* The appropriate charge would have been sedition ("attempting to cause disloyalty" of a soldier in time of war).

Some of the best U.S. soldiers in 1917-18 were black troops. The famed 15th Infantry (now the 369th Coast Artillery) from Harlem stayed longer under fire (191 days) than any other regiment, yielded no prisoners, gave up no ground, suffered casualties of 40%. Negro veterans still grin delightedly when they recall the "Battle of Henry Johnson," in which a pint-size onetime Red Cap from Albany, N.Y. killed, wounded and routed a party of 25 Germans singlehanded.

Barred Gates. In spite of the shortage of skilled labor, black citizens are unwelcome in many war industries. As the war boom got going last year, President Asa Philip Randolph of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters planned to forestall discrimination in defense plants by a protest march of 50,000 Negroes on Washington. When he got wind of the plan, Franklin Roosevelt sent for Porter Randolph. After their conference, the President issued an executive order forbidding color discrimination in defense industries. Negroes thought the President had passed a miracle second only to Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation. The President followed up his order by setting up a Committee on Fair Employment Practice.

FEPC has held innumerable meetings, has sent field agents scooting about, has as yet got few results.

▶ Of an estimated 3,900,000 unemployed, 800,000 are Negroes (20%), although Negroes constitute only 10% of the total population.

▶ Last year the Federal Security Administration found jobs for 79,617 unemployed workers. Only 853 were Negroes.

▶ In Belleville, N.J., 600 girl members of the Chemical & Oil Workers Union threatened to quit if Isolantite, Inc. hired Negro girls. (A.F. of L.'s Frank Fenton retorted by threatening to remove the union's charter.)

▶ In the constitutions of 24 national and international unions (of which ten are affiliated with A.F. of L.) membership is

Harris & Ewing, Morse-Pix, Wide World

ILLINOIS' McKEOUGH, BROOKS, NASH
The voters will be allowed to participate.

barred to Negroes. But all C.I.O. unions accept Negroes.

▶ In Detroit's boom center, Ford lifted a challenge to other defense plants, a hope to Negroes, by admitting Negroes to its apprentice school, distributing defense jobs proportionately.

U.S. Negroes last week, like all U.S. citizens, were deeply impressed by Japan's successes in Asia. They noted that Japs are not white men. But U.S. Negroes did no cheering for Japan. As individuals, U.S. Negroes were bitterly, resignedly or indifferently conscious that the realities of U.S. life still barred them from full equality of citizenship. Nevertheless, most of them would still prefer to be potential citizens of a fighting democracy than the slaves of a conquering dictatorship.

The 13,500,000 Negroes of the U.S. remained semi-citizens who wanted to be allowed to do their share of working or fighting to keep the U.S. free.

POLITICS

The People Take a Beating

When the citizens of Illinois go to the polls on April 14, in the first important U.S. primary election of 1942, they will find that the results were cut-&-dried last week. The people will be allowed to participate in the elections—but only to participate. For in Illinois the original purpose of the primary—to let the voters in each party choose their own candidates by themselves—has long ago been lost. Party bosses have willingly relieved the people of this responsibility.

The tickets will be: Republicans—C. Wayland Brooks v. Warren Wright and Ralph E. Church; Democrats—Raymond S. McKeough v. Paul Douglas. These names meant only one thing in a year of war and peril—that politics-as-usual dominated Illinois.

C. Wayland ("Curly") Brooks is an oldtime rabble-rouser, a flag-waving Billy Sunday orator who can jerk tears from any group of mothers with a recital of his own World War I experiences (wounded seven times, bemedaled thrice). He is the candidate of the Chicago Tribune's Roosevelt-hating publisher, Colonel Robert R. ("Bertie") McCormick. The lank Colonel had tried vainly to get Brooks elected to high office for years, finally got him by when the State went Republican in 1940. Frizzle-haired, heavy-set Curly Brooks, like his sponsor, was one of the most violent of Isolationists before Pearl Harbor. His only opposition in the primary:

Warren Wright, stocky, stodgy State Treasurer, a veteran campaigner for small offices, who won his first election in 1940, and who is now, as an officeholder widely unknown in his State, making the race chiefly for experience. Ralph Church, trumpeting ex-Congressman, who turned up as a last-minute candidate, undecided whether to run for Senate or House.

Raymond Stephen McKeough, now Congressman from Cook County, was picked by Chicago's famed Kelly-Nash machine as the candidate to oppose Brooks, when Mayor Ed Kelly failed to get an endorsement from President Roosevelt (TIME, Feb. 9). Old (78), horse-loving Pat Nash, who got rich tearing up Chicago's streets and inserting sewers therein, picked him for the practically honorary post (the Kelly-Nash machine gets all the upstate patronage, anyway). When he was tapped, McKeough spoke up with a lump in his throat: "Whatever I have accomplished in public life, I owe entirely to the Honorable Patrick A. Nash, the greatest patriarch in the Democratic Party's history in all America."

Congressman McKeough, whom the enemy Tribune immediately dubbed "Small Potatoes" McKeough, is no ball of fire. In his seven years in Congress he has sponsored no important legislation, has made few speeches on the floor, has rubber-stamped all New Deal legislation, with only one painful exception: he voted last August against extending the draft. He has saved his slambang oratory so exclusively for Cook County that he is relatively unknown downstate, even to most party leaders. His only opposition:

Paul Douglas, 49, an absent-minded economics professor at the University of Chicago, now a Chicago alderman who acts as gadfly to the machine, a New Dealer who has little downstate appeal.

Result of the primary was in the bag: it would be Brooks v. McKeough. After April 14, the citizenry would again get a chance to watch the workings of the old Illinois maxim—anyone with a machine and $1,000,000 can be Senator from Illinois. Now there were two machines, plenty of money, plenty of politics-as-usual. In Illinois, in the 1942 elections, the voters would have little to choose between. Whether voters in other States would have better choices remained to be seen.

THE CAPITAL

The Memory of Fish

Ham Fish's memory went dead. The gangling, trumpet-tongued Congressman was on the witness stand in Washington, called there to explain his relations with George Sylvester Viereck, veteran Nazi propaganda agent. Viereck was on trial, charged with failing to tell the State Department all about his activities. One Government witness was George Hill, World War I buddy and for some 20 years office clerk to Ham Fish. Because he had once denied knowing Agent Viereck, Hill himself was tried for perjury a few weeks ago, had been sentenced to two-to-six years in jail. He took it like a man who was loyally suppressing a big secret. But in court last week, Hill admitted that:

▶ He had served as handy man of a propaganda ring managed by Viereck and Prescott Dennett, Washington publicist.

▶ Ham Fish had introduced him to Viereck, after Fish had held a long conference with the Nazi agent in Fish's private office.

▶ Viereck then instructed him to mail out, under frank of Minnesota's late Senator Ernest Lundeen, copies of an isolationist speech Lundeen made in the Senate.

▶ Fish provided Viereck with a mailing list of some 100,000 names.

Ham Fish strode in with majestic dignity. But his memory was in bad shape. He could not be sure whether he had introduced Viereck to his secretary, George Hill. All such details had faded into a fog. Prosecutor William Power Maloney asked suavely whether it was a coincidence that Viereck's views as a Nazi propagandist "coincide so closely with your views as a Congressman at this time." Mr. Fish could still shout. He leaned forward, shouted: "The man who made that statement lies." Maloney asked him whether he referred to Viereck. Fish replied: "I am referring to you. . . . I didn't come here to be insulted."

Said Maloney: "I think the American people have been insulted."

WORLD BATTLEFRONTS

STRATEGY

Pincers & Counter-Pincers

There was a huge unbalance in Axis strategy last week. There were also signs that deadly weights might soon be laid on the scales of war to right it.

The immediate stumbling blocks to Axis domination of the great land mass of Eurasia are Russia, China and the British Empire.

The Axis is in position to squeeze both Russia and the treasure of Britain's Empire, India, from east and west. But last week Germany was at work on Russia's western flank and Japan was at work on India's eastern flank. Japan was not yet attacking Russia's eastern flank, Siberia; Germany was not yet attacking India's western flank, the Middle East. But both were apparently preparing exactly those attacks.

In the Middle East, Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, who spent last week boxing his own shadow on the sand, seemed to be building up his strength for a real drive on Suez. New concentrations of German troops were in Sicily, Greece, Bulgaria; Hermann Göring was in Italy; something was in the wind.

China's War Minister Ho Ying-chin warned the world (see p. 18) that Japan would probably launch an attack on Russia within a month. In Chungking the official Central Daily News did a little goading: "Russia . . . should take the initiative and strike first, rather than wait to be struck."

Allied Plan? If these double pressures were indeed on the calendar for spring, what could the U.S. and Britain, on the war's periphery, do about them?

They could act with China to put a counter-pincer on the Japanese pincer in the Indies. This would have to be done by building up a striking force in Australia sufficiently strong to work its way up through the Indies and make a juncture with the Chinese; it would be a U.S. and Australian force, and it would not be ready by spring.

The Allies could act with Russia to put a counter-pincer on the German pincer in Europe. This would entail an assault in force on Europe timed to coincide with a major Russian drive. It would depend on the British. Apparently the Germans fear such a move. There have been rumors that Hitler would invade Sweden soon—as a counter-counter pincer on the expected counter-pincer on his pincer. Last week, with no ostensible reason for doing so, the Stockholm correspondent of the New York Times went out of his way to suggest the possibility by denying it: "Swedish and neutral observers here believe that the Germans are sufficiently occupied in Russia not to want to tackle the Swedish Army."

The war, as always, was a race against time. The big question in the race, also as always, was: Have the Allies a plan?

SUPPLY

Roads Men Live By

Germany and Japan cannot in one convulsion seize all the great land and human masses, all the vast concentrations of productive power which oppose the Axis. But the Germans and the Japanese can try to isolate and choke the world's greatest land mass, Eurasia, where the greatest masses of fighting people, the Chinese and the Russians, block their paths to dominion (see col. 1). They were doing a fair job of choking last week. They were reaching for, and blocking, the land and sea roads by which the war matériel of the Americas reaches the warriors of Eurasia (see map).

China's Roads. Because the Japanese have closed China's coast line, China must breathe through roads and railways leading to unconquered seaports. The Japanese, closing on Rangoon, were closing the entry to China's arterial Burma Road. But China had an alternative. In the wild, peaked plateau where China and India meet, just above invaded Burma, some 20,000 Chinese stonecutters, some 100,000 other laborers blasted, hewed and dug away at a substitute route into India across 10,000-foot peaks, across three great rivers, across many another vast obstacle between Sichang in China and a border railhead (Sadiya) in northeastern India.

Could they finish their incredible task in time? It took hundreds of thousands of laborers two years to build the easier 330-mile stretch to Sichang. But necessity and good pay spurred these laborers; their bosses were the same Chinese geniuses who had created the Burma Road. Perhaps a hopeful Chinese spokesman had that fact in mind when he announced that Chiang Kai-shek in New Delhi had, among other feats (see p. 24), arranged a satisfactory war route from India to China.

Failing supplies via India, China must fall back on two devious, difficult routes from Siberia, across the long reaches of Mongolia and Sinkiang. Truck roads, now built and usable, touch Russia's trans-Siberian railway system at two points. Over these lines recently China has received some of Russia's captured German booty—Mauser rifles, machine guns, anti-tank and anti-aircraft guns. But Joseph Stalin's own interior war traffic jams his railways, and his outward routes to the United Nations are none too sufficient and secure.

Russia's Roads. Last week there was news of a great, new U.S. supply center on the Persian Gulf. Through the Gulf, and then overland by highway and railway, through renamed Persia to Soviet ports and railheads on the Caspian Sea, the U.S. was sending war goods to Stalin's Armies. Aircraft assembled at the Gulf delivery points were flown directly to Russia. And, as it had already done in Eritrea, the U.S. Army was providing supply bases for future U.S. forces in the Middle and Near East.

From the U.S. and Great Britain, Russia still has a North Atlantic route to Archangel. But this is not enough; it imposes heavy convoy burdens, and Archangel is weather-shut most of the winter.

The Crossroads. Vital life lines lead to and through the Indian Ocean. The Germans and the Japanese have not yet choked off those lines, but they are squeezing hard.

Germany has closed the Mediterranean to regular convoys, is driving at the Suez terminus through Libya. Its spring threats of action in the Caucasus and through Turkey are also threats to the Indian Ocean and its seaways. The Japanese have narrowed the Axis pincers from the east. If the Axis finally shuts the pincers and controls the Indian Ocean, China's hopes of supplies through Russia and isolated India will vanish; the only remaining feasible routes from the U.S. to the Middle and Near East will be lost. Russia would have to fall back on uncertain, insufficient Arctic routes.

Just off Africa, athwart the only Indian Ocean lanes now reasonably open to the United Nations, lies Vichyfrance's Madagascar. If it became a base for Axis warships, submarines and planes, it would give Japan and/or Germany complete control of the Indian Ocean crossroads. Madagascar in Axis hands would be a disaster comparable to the loss of Singapore.

BATTLE OF THE PACIFIC

End of a Dream

On the terrace of the Hôtel des Indes in Batavia, the brown men in white coats were as quiet and wonderful and attentive as ever. They padded softly, bearing long cool drinks to the linened Dutch civilians, the officers in Dutch, U.S. and British khaki, white and blue. In the crowded, varied city itself, tropic life went on: in the shops of Chinese, impenetrable behind their prayerful squints; in murky canals thick with scum and bathing Indonesians; in streets hot and sunny between the frequent rains, pocked here & there by a Japanese bomb, but still busy with the traffic of a colonial capital.

From Batavia on the west to Surabaya on the east, Java's excellent highways were thick with armored cars, with the harnessed and ever-useful water buffalo, with pedestrian natives in economically cut trousers and casual skirts. At Bandung, the Army's mountain headquarters and fortress, patrolling aircraft droned in and away.

Britain's General Sir Archibald Wavell, the U.S. Army's Lieut. General George H. Brett, the Dutch Army's Major General Hein ter Poorten, the U.S. Air Forces' Major General Lewis Hyde Brereton, the Allied Navies' Vice Admiral Conrad Emil Lambert Helfrich huddled in a swirl of blue and khaki staffers. In view through the windows of their three-storied headquarters, the mountains and volcanoes of Java dreamed in the sun and rain.

Just eastward from Java, across a narrow strait, lay the gentle island of Bali. Sturdy, handsome Balinese men and their bare-breasted women labored in the rice fields, or consulted flowers, or did nothing —with patience and thoroughness and devotion to the important business of being alive. War and the Jap were very near, and everyone knew it, but Java and Bali, to the last, clung to the forms of colonial pleasantry, to the ways and the life that were now like a passing dream.

Bali Down. The dream faded fast. At Java's western tip, beyond the Sunda Strait, the Japanese clinched their hold on southern Sumatra, its oil, its tin, and its vantage for assault on Java. To the east, Japanese planes performed their usual preparatory ritual: bombs on Dutch and Portuguese Timor, more bombs on oft-bombed Surabaya's naval base; bombs on Bali; and, to the rear, where Australia juts toward Java, bomb after heavy bomb on the tiny, tinny port of Darwin.

Then, in ships and barges, the Jap troops came. They were not quite ready for Java proper. They swarmed into Timor, where insufficient Dutch and Australian troops had moved in with the slender garrison in Portugal's half of the island. They pushed into Bali's dozing harbors, on to the palm-fringed shores.

The Battle for Java was on: Timor and Bali were necessary approaches to Java. So the Dutch fought fiercely on land; Dutch, U.S. and British aircraft concentrated over the Jap convoys. Admiral Helfrich's Dutch and U.S. cruisers, destroyers and naval aircraft opened up with everything they had on the Jap's naval

Wide World

THE BURMA ROAD
Gone was its business.

TRANSPORT

Cook's Confined

After 15 years of Belgian control, Thos. Cook & Son, that uniquely British institution, became all-British again. The British Custodian of Enemy Property sold its impounded shares to the big four British railways,* turned over its banking business (travelers' checks, etc.) to Grindlay's private bank. Cook's most valuable asset—its name—stayed put.

Thomas Cook, a teetotaler printer and lecturer, began his famed endeavor 101 years ago. He chartered a Midland Railway excursion train to carry a temperance convention from Leicester to Loughborough (24 miles) for a shilling a head. A Cook's tour from Leicester to the then-remote wilds of Scotland in 1846 was so popular that many of the 350 one-guinea tickets were resold at scalpers' prices before the trip began. By 1851 Mr. Cook's novel business had mushroomed to such impressive proportions that it brought 165,000 visitors to London's famed Crystal Palace Exhibition—the first of what was to become a golden series of Cook-aided world's fairs.

Frank Beaven—The New Yorker

"THOMAS COOK & SON. ALACKADAY!"

Cook not only showed Britons their way around the world, but helped them build (and defend) their Empire. In 1868, for his first tour to the Holy Land, he made special safe-conduct treaties with Bedouin chiefs in Syria and Palestine. In 1884-85, when Chinese Gordon went to his death at the hands of the "Fuzzy-Wuzzies" at Khartoum, Cook's, by then master of all tourist transportation on the Nile, took charge of his transport. Later (and too late) Cook's carried the 17,000 troops, 130,000 tons of war materials, 70,000 tons of coal, 50,000 tons of other supplies sent to relieve him.

Bermuda, and many a Caribbean island, owes its early tourist popularity to Thomas Cook. The world's first conducted tour by air was a 1927 New York-to-Chicago flight, in a plane chartered by Thos. Cook & Son for the Dempsey-Tunney fight. Shortly thereafter, the firm was absorbed by the expanding Belgian firm, Wagons-

* London Midland & Scottish, Great Western, London & North Eastern, Southern.

here's one business where paper profits are what they want

The answer to that one's easy—the paper business. But to get the most out of each precious yard of paper calls for alertness in nosing out shortcuts and money-savers all down the line. Turning out paper by the mile calls for speedy, secure splicing and piecing, with a minimum of shut-down time for the giant paper machines.

For years manufacturers spliced with a gummed product which needed moistening or heating; a certain yardage of paper was wasted at every splice because of moisture-stains. Moreover, humidity made this material slippery, greasy and virtually nonsticking. The Industrial Tape Corporation tackled that problem and turned up with Permacel, a special lightweight tape that sticks at a touch, needs no moistening at all, and forms the necessary splice. Paper manufacturers who use the Permacel trick report more economical production because of less spoilage, less shutdown time.

Working out new ways of making valuable materials go further and last longer, is an old specialty of ours. Now that industry's vast contribution to defense often involves decided changes in manufacturing methods, our engineers may be able to help you with valuable suggestions-in-tape.

GOOD BUSINESS NEWS

THE INSIDE STORY OF A TWO-WAY PROFIT!

DECREASED production costs INCREASED sales

IN THE fiscal year ending MAY 31st, 1940, the COSMOS CO.* did a business of $3,210,671 and wound up $95,214 in the red.

Without knowing the inside story, you might shrug this off as a case of bad management.

The facts prove otherwise. They show that this well-operated company, producing a quality product, in good demand, was seriously handicapped because its banking connection lacked vision and imposed many restrictions upon the manufacturer. Inability to supplement working capital with accommodations as needs required, resulted in production peaks and valleys that made unit costs excessive.

On June 1st, 1940 the company began to finance through Commercial Credit by cashing their receivables and obtaining advances against inventory located in their premises. From that day the story was different.

With an ample amount of working capital instantly available, production went on a regular schedule, and unit costs dropped. In five months, without any increase in sales volume, there was a profit of $59,465.

As the year went on, the improved financial position permitted an expansion of sales, bringing additional profits in higher ratio. Comparison shows:

AS OF	SALES	NET PROFIT
5-31-41 (12 mos.)	$3,907,080	$128,579
11-30-41 (6 mos.)	2,464,509	98,110

Over the year-and-a-half period net worth increased from $719,647 to $957,745, and without any additional capital investment.

* * * *

This is no exceptional example. Commercial Credit's OPEN ACCOUNT and INVENTORY Financing Plans stretch capital dollars beyond the limits of any routine financing. Thousands of concerns have used it . . . with amazing results. Why not get facts and figures to show what it could do for your company. Write for a copy of the new booklet—"THE TREASURER'S DILEMMA". Address Dept. 1002.

A fictitious name, but the facts and figures, taken from our files, can be verified.*

COMMERCIAL CREDIT COMPANY

"Non-Notification" Open Account Financing

BALTIMORE

BOSTON NEW YORK CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO LOS ANGELES PORTLAND, ORE.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS MORE THAN $60,000,000

Lits (the Pullman Co. of Europe). But to the thousands of Cook's tourists—from maharajas to U.S. clubwomen—Cook's was still Cook's.

Even before the Custodian of Enemy Property took it over, Thos. Cook & Son (as so often before) had gone to war for Britain. Most of its work now is "handling intricate arrangements of international travel for business and Government officials." Its huge vacation camp at Prestatyn, Wales, has become a military training base; its Egyptian machine shops (set up to service its luxury fleet of Nile steamers and "dahabeahs") service the B.E.F.'s war machines. Only in North America does Cook's still book pleasure trips, and travel is confined to the Hemisphere—which any self-respecting Cook's employe finds confining indeed (see cut, p. 65).

But at war's end, Thos. Cook & Son dreamers see all kinds of brave new travel: weekend air trips from New York to London and Paris; tractor-treaded excursions into areas where no car or train or plane can go. They have never forgotten old Thomas Cook's cherished belief: if enough people travel to enough places, international understanding must follow.

WALL STREET

Dividend Cuts

Two of the biggest U.S. corporations cut their first quarter common stock dividends last week. Chrysler declared $1 against $1.50 last year; Du Pont will pay $1.25 against $1.75. A month ago General Motors declared 50¢ against $1.

Many smaller companies did the same: Bigelow-Sanford from $1 to 50¢, Columbia Broadcasting from 45 to 30¢, West Virginia Pulp from 50 to 25¢, Lake Shore Mines (gold) from 50 to 20¢, Toolmaker L. S. Starrett from $1 to 50¢.

These reductions did not, in all cases, reflect lower profits. Chief explanations: 1) higher taxes; 2) cash must be saved for war work and post-war adjustments.

Stott's Scheme

The New York Stock Exchange tried out a new scheme to get more business last week, and it worked. The scheme: "special offerings," by which big blocks of listed stocks, ordinarily sold off the exchange floor, can be lured back to the ticker.

Off-the-floor sales became a problem after Britain began selling her $950,000,000 worth of U.S. stocks in 1940. Because the regular market looked too weak to handle these huge selling orders, British agents went to syndicate groups, set a style. Last year, known off-the-board sales of listed stocks were 8,420,577 shares—one month's business for the entire exchange.

But young Robert L. Stott, exchange board of governors chairman, thought all listed stocks should be sold on the floor, or what was a stock exchange for? So he cooked up the "special offerings" plan, spent ten months getting the SEC and exchange members to O.K. it. The commission on a "special offering" is six to twelve times that on regular sales, is ample is not good enough when fuel oil shoots into DIESEL cylinders

EXPERT RIFLEMAN

Two hundred twenty-three bulls-eyes in 250 shots qualifies a soldier for the Army's highest marksmanship medal. But when Cooper-Bessemer tests a fuel-injection nozzle, it must score 100%.

Needle-like streams of oil (they look like fine wires in this photograph) issue from .012-inch holes in the nozzle tip, at just the angle to deliver the right amount of fuel into each test-tube—to insure uniform spray into the engine cylinder. Inaccuracy in one hole rejects a nozzle.

Insignificant detail, you think? No, a most important test in building a Cooper-Bessemer diesel. It illustrates the perfection of the fuel injection system, every part precision-made and rigidly tested—fitted to a tolerance of one ten-thousandth inch. Like the human heart, this system keeps its great machine steadily at work with an even, metered flow of fuel always under controlled pressure.

That is why you see these famous engines in central power plants, pumping stations, locomotives, ships, and remote mines, running smoothly, efficiently and trouble-free, years upon end.

THE COOPER-BESSEMER CORPORATION, MT. VERNON, OHIO

The Heart of a Diesel is its fuel injector system. Fuel oil, injected into cylinders in needle-fine sprays, is ignited by intense heat generated when air is compressed by pistons to one-sixteenth atmospheric volume. A diesel has no carburetor, no spark plugs. Thermal efficiency is 40% higher than in a gasoline engine, nearly double that of the best steam engines.

Cooper-Bessemer

ENGINE BUILDERS SINCE 1833 FOR DEPENDABLE LOW-COST POWER

RANDOLPH AND WEBSTER TO SPEAK IN N. O.

Southern Labor Group Sponsors Meeting April 19-21

NEW ORLEANS, La. — A. Philip Randolph of New York City; Milton P. Webster of Chicago and a host of outstanding local speakers will address public sessions of the Southern Labor Conference which opens at Union Bethel A. M. E. church, Thalia and Liberty streets, with a large public mass meeting at 2:30 p.m. on Sunday, April 19.

Mr. Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, is considered one of the most conscientious labor leaders in the country. He is widely known as a keen student of Negro problems, an outstanding and uncompromising fighter for the rights of Negroes and an orator of unsurpassed ability. At the Sunday mass meeting Mr. Randolph will speak on the subject "The Negro, the War and the Future."

Mr. Webster, first vice-president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and a member of President Roosevelt's Fair Employment Practice Committee, is nationally known as a labor leader and for the yeoman work for Negroes by him on the FEPC in ferreting out and eliminating discriminatory practices against Negroes in defense industries. He will speak on the subject "The Negro Worker, the President's Executive Order and the Fair Employment Practice Committee." Mr. Webster has the reputati n of being one of the ablest speakers in America.

Purpose of Conference

T. D. McNeal, international field organizer of the organization, who arrived from St. Louis a week before the opening date to coordinate plans for the conference, states that "The Southern Labor Conference, being sponsored by the New Orleans Division of the Brotherhood, has as its aim, object and purpose the following: (a) To bring together groups of Negro workers in different lines of endeavor to review, with expert guidance, the problems facing workers in general and Negro workers in particular. (b) To analyse and discuss the part to be played by Negroes in winning the war for democracy and winning democracy for the Negro, with the view of having the Negro community understand all angles of our present situation in order that we may move ahead intelligently and without undue loss of effort. (c) To awaken Negro workers from their inertia and to the fact that if there is to be any economic and social salvation for us, it must and will come from within—that we cannot afford to rely on outside forces."

Conference Sessions

In addtion to the Sunday mass meetings, the following sessions, all open to the public, will be held: Monday morning, April 20, registration at 9:30. 10 a.m. keynote address by A. Philip Randolph. 11:30 a.m. an address by Rev. H. P. B. Johnson of Union Baptist Seminary. Samuel Hoskins, city editor of the Louisiana Weekly, will be the leader of discussion.

Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock John P. Corcoran, instructor at Xavier university, will speak. A. B. Meneliks will be the leader of discussion.

Monday evening at 8 o'clock, under the chairmanship of F. E. Del-

CHICAGO DEFENDER

April 18, 1942

PITTSBURGH COURIER

April 23, 1942

Pittsburg Courier april 23, 1942

Railroad Discrimination Subject Of Chi Meeting

Townsend Calls Conference To Consider Job Restriction In Railroad Industry— Meeting In Chicago May 2.

CHICAGO, April 23—(ANP) — Preparation to help make available workers for the railroad industry needed in the present emergency and to end jim-crow and discrimination against Negroes and other minorities in the railroad service was launched on Thursday following a conference between Willard S Townsend, president of the United Transport Service employes; A. A. Timms, representing the International Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers, Local [illegible], and Ishmael P. Flory, field organizer of the National Negro Congress.

The conference made plans for a Chicago [illegible] against discrimination [illegible] railroad industry to be held at 10 a.m., Saturday, May 2.

TO PROBE JOB RESTRICTIONS

Open to all railroad workers, regardless of race, color or creed, who are willing to fight this practice, the conference will deal with the question of the exclusion of Negroes from certain trades in the reailroad industry, such as electricians, firemen, switchmen, machinist, engineers, etc. This conference will be a preliminary step to calling for an investigation of discrimination by the railroads by the President's Fair Employment Practice committee.

In a statement to the press, Willard Townsend, chairman of the arrangements committee, declared, "Discrimination against Negroes in the railroads by railroad managements has long been a notorious practice. It involves not only the matter of the denial of jobs to Negroes but also the exclusion of Negroes in certain jobs in the past years. This practice by the railroad is not in line with the effort to win the war; it obstructs national unity and weakens national morale. It is like an enemy within weakening the American people in the face of the Hitler danger. It is even more vicious in face of the need for help in railroads which are so vital to our defense."

APRIL 25, 1942

THE PEOPLE'S VOIC

THE THIRD ANNUAL "National Negro Achievement Day" got under way last week when A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and leader of the proposed "March on Washington," told Herbert L. Cook, chairman of the Citizens' Coordinating Committee, that solidarity and unity of purpose must be foremost in the minds of the nation's leaders. "Democracy," said Mr. Randolph, "must be the right of the Negro as well as the rest of the world."

SATURDAY, APRIL 25, 1942 The Pittsburgh Courier

RED CAPS' UNION IS SEEKING CIO

SEES GREAT GAIN IN UTSEA JOINING POWERFUL GROUP

CHICAGO, April 23. (ANP)—Willard S[illegible]wnsend, hard-fighting national president of the [illegible] United Transport Service Employees of America, s[illegible] this week that the UTSEA is now engaged in negoti[illegible]ith Phil Murray, president of the CIO, to clear the way for bringing Townsend's 25,000 railroad employees into the CIO.

If the deal goes through, it will represent the greatest gain the CIO has been able to make in the railroad industry. With the A. P. Randolph's Pullman porters already in the AFL, the affiliation of the UTSEA with CIO will give each of the dominant labor groups an international union completely controlled by Negroes.

STATES REASON

In a letter to George F. McCray, director of the Midwest Labor Service bureau, Townsend gave the following reasons for seeking to end five years of existence as an unaffiliated organization:

"We are now a strong and well established organization with contracts with all the important railroads in the [illegible] States and since we are [illegible]aware of the problems conf[illegible] labor and our country under [illegible]stress of war and the need to [illegible]eve victory as quickly as pos[illegible] we want to pool our strengt[illegible]ith labor and management for [illegible]e common good.

CINCY MEETING TO DECIDE

"Moreover," Townsend stated, "we hope by our example of seeking organic ties with organized labor, to strengthen the first to integrate Negro defense workers and all other workers into the labor movement and into the industries of our nation."

Final disposition of the question of affiliation with the CIO will be made at the UTSEA convention in Cincinnati, May 17-19.

NEW YORK TIMES

APRIL 27, 1942

[illegible]NGAUTHORITY TO HAVE NEW HEAD

N.Y. Times April 27, 1942

Mayor Suggests Position for Professor E. B. Butler, New Appointee to Body

TWO OTHERS ALSO CHOSEN

A. P. Randolph, Union President, and Commissioner Wilson Named for City Agency

Mayor La Guardia announced yesterday appointment of Professor Edmond Borgia Butler of the Fordham Law School as a member of the New York City Housing Authority and said he would be recommended for chairman of that body. The Mayor announced also appointment of A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and William Wilson, Commissioner of the Department of Housing and Buildings, as members of the authority.

The new appointments, the Mayor said, were made necessary because Gerard Swope, former chairman, had entered Federal service, as had former Commissioner William H. Davis, while Commissioner Hugh Robertson was unable to continue because of illness. The authority designates its own chairman, on recommendation of the Mayor.

Functions of Authority

The Mayor said the functions of the authority remained important despite the fact that the war had halted its construction program. The need for intelligent planning continued, he said, so that building could be resumed immediately after the war.

Pointing out that the authority has constructed $100,000,000 of low-cost housing in the last eight years, the Mayor declared that the program for additional buildings, interrupted because of shortage of essential materials, must be resumed as soon as the conflict ended.

Professor Butler will serve for the unexpired term of Mr. Swope, ending on Feb. 17, 1945. The Mayor did not disclose the unexpired terms to which his two other appointees were named, but said all three men would take oath of office some day this week.

Butler in Many Activities

Professor Butler, who is 45 years old and who lives at 3240 Henry Hudson Parkway East, the Bronx, was graduated from Fordham University in 1916 and from Fordham Law School in 1920. He became a lecturer in the law school in 1928. Since 1928 he has been in partnership with Raymond D. O'Donnell in private practice.

He is a member of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York and the New York State Bar Association and is also a member of the directorates of the Greater New York Fund and the Welfare Council of the City of New York. For thirty years he has been active in the affairs of the St. Vincent de Paul Society in the Bronx.

From June, 1934, to Jan. 1, 1938, he was secretary of the Emergency Relief Bureau. He is chairman of the advisory committee of the Department of Welfare. A former president of the Fordham Alumni Association, he is now chairman of the executive committee of the National Catholic Alumni Federation.

Mr. Randolph, a Negro, was formerly editor of The Messenger, a publication devoted to advancement of his race. In 1925 he began to organize Pullman porters in the face of strong opposition. Later he became general organizer and finally international president.

VOL. 56. No. 49. NEW YORK, N. Y., SATURDAY, MAY 2, 1942

Name A. Philip Randolph To Housing

A. Philip Randolph Appointed To City Housing Authority

Mayor LaGuardia on Sunday announced the appointment of A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and director of the March On Washington movement, a member of the New York City Housing Authority. At the same time he also appointed as members of the authority Prof. Edmond H. Butler of the Fordham Law School and Commissioner of Housing and Buildings William Wilson.

The new appointments, the Mayor said, were made necessary because Gerard Swope, former chairman, had entered Federal service, as had former Commissioner William H. Davis, while Commissioner Hugh Robertson was unable to continue because of illness. The authority designates its own chairman, on recommendation of the Mayor.

Pointing out that the authority has constructed $100,000,000 of low-cost housing in the last eight years, the Mayor declared that the program for additional buildings, interrupted because of shortage of essential materials, must be resumed as soon as the war ends. The need for intelligent planning, he said, must continue so that building can be resumed immediately after the end of the war.

The appointment of Mr. Randolph to the authority follows years of agitation on the part of the New York Age and other organizations for a Negro as member of the

OMAHA LABOR INSTITUTE PLANNED FOR MAY 23-24

1942

Outstanding National Figures To Appear On Program

The Omaha Labor Institute, sponsored by Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, Local No. 32; Protective Order of Dining Car Waiters, Local No. 465; Hotel, Restaurant and Tavern Employees, Local No. 732; Hod Carriers and Building Laborers, Local No. 1140; Omaha Urban League; Omaha Central Labor Union; and the Nebraska State Federation of Labor in cooperation with Workers Education Bureau of America, Omaha Municipal University will convene in Omaha, Saturday morning, May 23rd, at 10 o'clock running through Sunday, May 24th.

The theme of the meeting will be: "The Negro, Labor and War." Among those who are expected to participate in thee Institute are:

Gordon C. Preble, President, Omaha Central Labor Union; Reverend E. F. Ridley, Pastor St. John's A.M.E. Church; Dr. Roland Haynes, President, Omaha Municipal University; Spencer Miller, Jr., Director, Workers Education Bureau; A. Phillip Randolph, Int'l Pres., Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; Dr. Mordecai Johnson, President Howard University; Colonel A. Robert Gunsberg, U. S. War Department; Milton Webster, First Vice Pres., Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, Frank Honton, Director of Organization, American Federation of Labor; Mark Ethridge, Chairman, Fair Employment Practice Committee; Judge William H. Hastie, Civilian Advisor to Secretary of War; Layle Lano, Vice President, American Federation of Teachers; Dr. Mollie Rao Carroll, Bureau Labor Standards, U. S. Dept. of Labor; Shepard Witman, Associate Professor of Government, Omaha University; Cecil H. Dunaway, Field Office Manager, Social Security Board and Roy Brewer, President, State Federation of Labor.

Shows Wide Difference from Whites

Pay But $237 a Year In Mississippi

ATLANTA, GA. — In the lead editorial this month, "The Southern Frontier," publication of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, Inc., calls attention to the marked discrepancies between the pay of white and Negro teachers. The Frontier hails the increasing number of suits by colored teacher associations against public boards of education to equalize teachers' salaries.

The table of average yearly salaries in the South released by the Frontier is as follows:

State	White	Negro
Alabama	$ 816	$387
Arkansas	625	367
Florida	1,133	569
Georgia	886	398
Louisiana	1,026	368
Mississippi	750	237
North Carolina	916	647
Oklahoma	1,059	923
South Carolina	939	388
Tennessee	887	580
Texas	1,195	704
Virginia	912	598

"The question of salaries is mere-

(Continued On Page 12)

Attacked For 'Red-Baiting'

Ford, Collins Denounce Labor Head for Attitude Taken in Column

Frank R. Crosswaith, chairman of the Negro Labor Committee, was under fire last week being accused of "red-baiting" by James W. Ford, of the Communist Party and Charles A. Collins, business agent of the Hotel and Club Employes Union, for the slant taken in his column "Around and Beyond" published in the Star-News the week of April 18.

Crosswaith in his writing is alleged to have labeled a dinner-forum sponsored by the Negro Labor Victory Committee of Greater New York which was held Wednesday night as being Communistic.

In his column, Crosswaith said in part: "The Communists have been unceasingly at work forming and supporting spurious Negro unions or 'onions,' Negro Labor Committees, Negro Labor Temples and what not. After having collected thousands of signatures on the streets of Harlem to show the Germans that the 'Yanks are not coming,' they are now creating a Negro Labor 'Victory' Committee."

Slanders Group

In denouncing the writer's attitude, Collins in his letter said in part: "At this moment when it is necessary for the Negro people to achieve the greatest degree of unity it is regrettable that Mr. Frank Crosswaith should use his column to slander a group of Negro trade union leaders who are trying to utilize their position and prestige in the great labor movement of America to further the cause of Negro liberation."

Stating the object of the dinner meeting, Collins continued to state that "a group of elected Negro trade union officials from the CIO, AFL and independent unions met some time ago to discuss ways and means whereby the labor movement, especially the Negroes in the labor movement, could play a much bigger role in the victory program of our country, and also in the ceaseless struggle against discrimination in our national life. "They very correctly set up no organization, elected no officers, drew up no by-laws, but decided to hold a dinner forum to which every Negro trade union official would be invited to express his opinion.

Invited Crosswaith

"The first thing I did was to send a member of the arrangements committee to interview Messrs. A. P. Randolph and Frank Crosswaith to seek their guidance, cooperation, and yes, their leadership. Our efforts were unsuccessful. They did not respond. What should we have done when Mr. Crosswaith ignored our invitation?"

When informed of Collins' statement that he was invited to the meeting, Crosswaith denied it to the Star-News.

Great Harm Done

Ford stated in part in his letter, "now is the time for the greatest unity of the nation. Those who red-bait are doing just what the anti-Negro elements, defeatists and pro-Fascists in our midst want, and so often inspire to destroy unity.

"My earnest opinion is that a tragic error is made and great harm done to the cause of national unity, when we do not scrutinize with [illegible] care the accuracy of [illegible] and opinions in these [illegible] for our nation and [illegible] people."

[illegible] the dinner were [illegible], Hotel and Restau[illegible]ployes Union; Helen Blanchard, Women's Trade Union League; Councilman A. Clayton vice president CIO.

N. Y. AMSTERDAM NEWS

May 9, 1942

NAACP BULLETIN

Vol. II—No. 2 FEBRUARY, 1942

FBI TO INV[illegible] SIKESTON

Randolph Gets Spingarn Award

Twenty-seventh recipient of the annual Spingarn Medal Award is A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and head of the March on Washington Movement.

The Spingarn Medal committee made its decision the last day of January. It was stated that the medal is to be presented to Mr. Randolph in recognition of his years of leadership in the field of labor organization and national affairs and in the mobilization of Negro mass opinion in 1941 in a March on Washington to exercise the constitutional right of citizens of a democracy to petition their government peacably for the redress of grievances—this being done when all other methods failed.

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH

The committee said that Mr. Randolph's leadership was instrumental in the issuance of Executive Order 8802 and the establishment of the Committee on Fair Employment Practice both of which profoundly affect the basic economic status

(Continued on page 2, col. 2)

THE PEOPLE'S VOICE May 2, 1942

Ministers Unite in Battle Against Racial Discrimination

Members of the Baptist Ministers Conference of Greater New York and vicinity, the Interdenominational Minister's Alliance, and the AME Zion Minister's Alliance set the precedent for ministers throughout the nation when they united in one body and heartily endorsed the movement of the March-on-Washington Committee, under the leadership of militant A. Philip Randolph, to go en masse to Madison Square Garden on June 16 in a mass meeting against all forms of discrimination; and in so doing, they also pledged themselves and the full support of the 457,000 or more Negroes they represented by them to support fully the movement; and in a solid front help break down discrimination and secure citizenship rights for Negroes throughout America.

The resolution of the united ministers further declared 100 per cent support for the National Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, the national and local NAACP, the National Urban League, the Negro Labor Committee, the friends to the Negro Labor Committee, the Modern Trends Association, the American Virgin Island Association, the Central Manhattan Medical Association, and many other organizations that are giving their influence and money to see that the mass meeting at Madison Square Garden does not fail inattendance or intent of purpose.

The action followed the address of Dr. Lawrence Irving of the New York division of the labor union at the ministers conference, Metropolitan Baptist church. Dr. Irving, in a masterful address, cited the barbarous lynching at Sikeston, Mo., the mobbing and shooting of Negro soldiers at Alexandria, La., shooting and killing at Ft. Bragg and Camp Dix, discrimination in the USO, segregation of Negro blood by the Red Cross, segregation in the navy condoned by Secretary Frank Knox, segregation in the air corps, and exclusion of Negroes from policy-making bodies of our local and national government as compared with the heroic deeds of Crispus Attucks, our black boys at San Juan Hill, Kelly the messman and Dorie Miller at Pearl Harbor, and other Negro heroes who willingly pay the supreme sacrifice for our country.

With 13,000,000 Negroes as a potent part of the American nation, the speaker declared, it is time to form a solid front and secure a guarantee of the principles of democracy here at home, then victory at home will mean victory abroad.

Rev. T. S. Eldridge, president of the Baptist Ministers Conference, presented the resolution. Immediately it was adopted by motion and seconded. Rev. George Hinton, president of the Interdenominational Minister's Alliance, assured the support of that organization; and Rev. W. O. Carrington, president of the AME Zion Minister's Alliance, endorsed the support of his group.

The office of the united ministerial group in Theresa Hotel, Rev. T. S. Eldridge, chairman, promises immediately to begin contacting every minister, pastor, official and members throughout the various churches in support of the movement.

PEOPLE'S VOICE
PEOPLE'S CHOICE

AFRO-AMERICAN

May 2, 1942

25,000 Colored Butchers in Amalgamated Meatcutters

NEW YORK—Inclusion of 25,000 colored in the 125,000-man membership of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butchers Workmen of North America was revealed in a letter from Patrick E. Gorman, president, and released this week by A. Philip Randolph.

Mr. Gorman's letter was addressed to President J. Vernon Burke of the Web Pressmen's Union in San Francisco and dealt with the material reduction in discrimination against Jews and Catholics since the Pearl Harbor attack and the persistent discrimination against colored.

Unfair - Un-American

Branding the practice unfair, unpatriotic and un-American, Mr. Gorman stated that colored should be given the same opportunity to work in war industry, and industry generally, as any other citizen.

As far as the International Meatcutters' Union is concerned, he stated, a pledge was given the President before the declaration of war of all-out support. That is also the organization's pledge, though with more fervor, in these days of war, he declared.

TRAINMEN GET BOOST IN WAGES

LITTL[illegible]k., April 30—One hu[illegible] ninety-seven brakemen [illegible] recently received a [illegible]pay from $125 to $157.[illegible]nth with the Frisco [illegible]as revealed in an ag[illegible] by the Trainmen [illegible]rakemen Union whi[illegible]rters in Oklahoma [illegible] Employe representati[illegible] the agreement included L. [illegible]yl, general chairman; Vernon C. Coffey, national representative and Steve Bennett, general president.

Each of the 197 men affected receives $157.80 per month instead of $125 for 5,500 miles monthly, and additional pay for every mile in excess of 5,500 miles.

Vital changes were made in the status of the organization's title at a recent meeting held at the YMCA in Kansas City, Mo. Present among the group were brakemen and porters who represented the Frisco, Missouri Pacific and Santa Fe Railroad Companies. It was unanimously agreed that the future title of the organization would be Brotherhood of Trainmen, Brakemen and Porters.

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

By JAMES H. HOGANS

RAILROAD PATRIOTISM AND THRIFT

NEW YORK

From all reports and indications, railroad and Pullman workers are responding handsomely to the government's appeal to buy war savings bonds.

Buying these bonds, says the government, is one of the very important ways in which the individual can show his patriotism in the present crisis, and at the same time practice the thrift habit.

To make this convenient and practical, the government has requested all large employers to establish and administer a method by which their workers may buy bonds on the installment or payroll allo[illegible]lan.

The pl[illegible]n in effect with the [illegible]arrier companies sin[illegible]y, but only in recent [illegible]ve the companies made [illegible]certed drive for its operation.

A typical explanation for that is furnished by President D. A. Crawford of the Pullman Company in a recent statement to employees.

"The management of the company," stated Mr. Crawford, "has not heretofore countenanced direct personal solicitation for employee subscriptions for any purpose whatever, but we cannot fail to respond to our government's demand that this matter of patriotic duty to buy bonds be put directly up to each and every employee."

Under the payroll allotment plan, an employee may subscribe for as many bonds as he feels he is able to afford, and the deduction from his pay may be as low as $1 per month or as high as he thinks expedient.

It was learned last week that the dining car employees of the Pennsylvania Railroad alone had bought over $25,000 worth of war bonds to date, and that 95 per cent of them had subscribed to the payroll allotment plan.

Some of the employees have subscribed for bonds for the entire duration of the war, it was said, and had considered it "a good investment" at that.

Pullman employees have also been sold lately on the payroll plan. In the New York Central and Pennsylvania Terminal Districts, always brotherly rivals, there is now on a race as to which will turn in the larger list of subscribers.

* * *

CIO EYES RAILROAD FIELD

The CIO has been blinking at the railroad labor field for several years, but recently it has been boldly eyeing this field. Therefore, the news last week from Chicago about the UTSEA's talking turkey with that organization didn't come as any surprise to those conversant with recent activities of CIO representatives in the East.

For several weeks these representatives have been holding conversations with unaffiliated railroad workers and those workers who recent became affiliated with the Townsend organization.

Working under the direction of the railroad division of the Utility Workers' Organizing Committee, a CIO set-up, it is said that these representatives have contacted Alvin C. White and other leading Eastern officers of the National Council of Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees, with the idea of getting that organization to come into the CIO fold.

While the National Council has been rather dormant in the past year, it is thought that these leaders have been lending a willing ear to the CIO's affiliation talk.

The consensus of Eastern railroad leaders regarding the UTSEA's report is that such a consummation would be the most fortunate thing that could happen to that organization.

Mr. Townsend himself has never been opposed to the CIO. In fact, he has made advances to that organization before, but was told at the time that it was not interested in the railroad field.

Seemingly, that attitude has undergone a change, for it is showing significant interest here lately.

* * *

HERE AND THERE

D. N. Dunn, New York porter, is spending several weeks in Hot Springs for his health.

O. M. Ford, the porter who made copy for the Worcester, Mass., Chamber of Commerce, is still a patient at Harlem Hospital.

Others of the New York area on the sick list are: Roderick Redwood, dining car official; Walter Clark, waiter, and Porters W. Hawkins, J. Thomason, Maxwell, H. H. Brown, E. [illegible] Samuel, R. Hill, A. T. Hutt, A. Johnson, W. B. Garland, G. [illegible]ton and F. W. Edmondson.

BUCKEYE REVIEW-Youngston, O.

May 5, 1942

Highlights of the Randolph Address

* * * * *

Negroes don't control their labor power.

The Negro is in the middle with organized labor on one side and organized business on the other.

Stay out and keep race prejudice in; get in and drive race prejudice out.

Negro professional men must establish closer contact with the Negro masses.

Negro professional men and educators possess no power; the power is in the masses.

The salvation of a people must come from within.

Things are won because people fight for them; we are down because we are weak.

Whatever we get we have got to take.

Negroes have never tested their power; never tested their strength.

In our fight for our rights we have nothing to lose but our chains.

It is better to die standing on our feet fighting for our rights than on our knees begging for them.

There are not 25,000 Negroes in anything that can be put in motion overnight.

We are entitled to every kind of right—political, economic, social—that any one else has.

Nothing counts but power—P - O - W - E - R.

Negroes who haven't got the guts to fight for their rights ought to be slaves.

Where Were They Last Friday?

The Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance provided a rare treat for Youngstown Negroes last Friday night, and Youngstown Negroes failed to take advantage of the opportunity to hear one of their outstanding leaders.

A small audience was on hand to hear the inspirig address of A. Phillip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, but these folks who did hear him will not soon forget the message he brought. Never before have Negroes been given such a clear call to action. Never before was the case of the status of the Negro in America made understandably.

There are some of our leaders who shrug their shoulders and say that we do too much talking. In the main they are right, but with Randolph it is a different matter. For years Negroes have known of the courageous way he led the Pullman porters to victory against the greatest of odds. For years they have known that A. Phillip Randolph is not just a talker, but a man of action as well.And that is just the kind of a man our big shots need to hear and hear often. Especially should they have heard him counsel the business and professional men to get closer to the masses of Negroes. Some day the Negro masses who support the Negro business and professional men will come to the realization that they are supporting men who forget them in the great struggle for their rightful place in this democracy. Some day the masses will demand that the men they support return that support by giving of their time and means to carry on the battle for freedom.

Yes, our leaders and those who unblushingly put themselves in that category, missed hearing a real leader tell from experience how some victories can be won. It was a speech intended for them, but most of them were absent.

The question before the house is: Where Were They Last Friday Night.

LET US BE CONSISTENT

One of the obstacles in the way of attaining full democracy for the Negro in America, is the Negro's own confusion of purpose often aggravated by irrational and inconsistent views. Seldom has there been a wholesome unanimity on vital issues. A divided council is a positive deterrent to objectives that require the resolution of the collective will. It is common knowledge that representative government yields more readily to mass action than to unsupported individual representation. A solid front against most of the evils about which we complain daily would do more than mitigate them. It would crack the wall of opposition—an opposition that owes its strength to the absence of effective, consistent challenge.

These things are elementary. Yet our super intellectuals and the so-called militant voices are often responsible for the confusion in our ranks. The initial stages of the proposed "March on Washington" met with more caustic criticism from certain Negro quarters than from official Washington. Had the White House been familiar with the virulence of the dissent in our own midst, it might have discounted the strength of the backers of the "March" —and the issues involved would have been ignored.

Fortunately Mr. A. Philip Randolph, the originator and organizer of the "March on Washington" was tenacious enough to reach the objectives sought. Although the proposed mass demonstration at the nation's capital was dubbed a "crackpot idea;" and though some quarters felt that it was unnecessary since the Congress and the President of the United States through letters, telegrams and sundry petitions were already quite conversant with the grievances and demands of the Negro people, Mr. Randolph nevertheless won an unprecedented victory. His "crackpot" idea resulted in an Executive Order abolishing discrimination in all defense industries. Moreover, the placing of two Negroes on the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice was a direct sequel to the extension of the 'crackpot idea."

However, we have not had such success in other matters equally important. For instance while some were decrying segregation in the army, others were advocating the establishment of military units manned exclusively by Negro soldiers and commanded by Negro officers. In other words they were making a plea for complete segregation. Such a position is, of course, indefensible. In the absence of a "forty-ninth state" there is little to recommend such a plan, when in the same breath we clamor for integration of Negroes in the armed forces of the nation.

On the question of maltreatment of Negro soldiers by hostile southern communities, again there was a division of opinion. Some argued that the U. S. government should protect its black soldiers wherever they may be stationed. For, to move them elsewhere on account of their being objectionable to a segment of the population is to make a dangerous concession at a time when the black man is called upon to make sacrifices and prepare for the defense of the American democracy. Others disagreed with this view, and pleaded for the removal of Negro troops stationed in the South, to northern camps where they will not be subjected to terrorism and mob violence. The fallacy of this argument is that it overlooks the possibility of the occurrence of similar incidents in the North. Should that happen—and it can happen —then, what is to be our position? If we are to be consistent, we will say send our soldiers to western camps. Suppose the West should object, then what? To pursue, therefore, such a course to its logical end would ultimately mean agitation on our part for the removal of the Negro from this civilization. We must remember that the South has no monopoly on race prejudice and discrimination. The Negro faces segregation in the North. East, South, and West. The difference is only one of degree.

These contradictions and inconsistencies are not doing us any good whatever may be the motives that inspire them. The unity of our own people on the issue of democracy for the Negro, appears to us to be the main consideration of the Negro people in this crisis. We must choose now whether we want full democracy partial democracy, or no democracy at all.

Eastman Is Made 'Czar' Over All Transport; Revolutionary Changes for Rails Forecast

LABOR

May 12, 1942

NEGROES HOLD 9.6 PER CENT OF R.R. JOBS IN U.S.

Figure Indicates Number Of Men Only Who Serve On Roads

NEW YORK — Male Negroes constituted 9.6 per cent of all the employees in active railroad service in 1940, reports Labor Research association, summarizing statistics released by the Railroad Retirement Board. Of the 1,666,161 workers whose wages during 1940 were reported to the Board, 159,608 were male Negroes.

Class I railroads employed 127,674 of them, the Pullman company, 11,517.

"In addition, the Class 1 switching and terminal companies, the Railway Express Agency, and Class II and III railroads each reported between 4,000 and 5,000 Negro male employees," the Board's annual report states.

On Class I railroads, Negroes were employed mainly as maintenance-of-way laborers, shop and stores laborers, and freight handlers. There were also large numbers employed as janitors and cleaners, helpers in maintenance of equipment and stores, chefs and cooks, waiters and kitchen helpers and train attendants.

Average compensation of Negroes in 1940 was substantially lower than the earnings of other employees with an equal amount of service, the report found.

For employees with 12 months of service on Class I railroads, Negro extra-gang men averaged only $768 for the year compared with $1,025 for other extra-gang men; Negroes in other maintenance-of-way labor jobs averaged $763 for the year compared with $987 for whites; Negro shop laborers averaged $1,042 and whites $1,208; Negro freight handlers $1,041 compared with $1,286 for whites.

Says the report: "The difference in levels of compensation is apparently not traceable to the fact that Negroes include a larger proportion of casual or shortime workers in the occupation.

"On the contrary, the figures clearly show that among Negroes the percentage of employees with 12 months of service was higher than among other employees in the same occupational group; also among employees with less than 12 months of service, Negro males were on the average credited with a somewhat larger amount of service than the white workers."

For example, Negro freight handlers with 4.3 months of average service in 1940 had annual compensation of only $182 against $225 for other freight handlers with an average of only 3.8 months service.

The Pullman company in 1940 employed 7,997 porters and only 3,520 other Negro males. Negroes accounted for 94 per cent of all train attendants and their average compensation was $1,052 in 11.2 months of service in 1940.

Labor Laws and Safeguards Are Seen Headed for Discard

Coordinator Says Full-Crew and Train-Limit Acts Should Be Abandoned; Tighter Restrictions on Freight And Passenger Traffic Ordered

By ALBERT H. JENKINS

Revolutionary transport changes which will have far-reaching effects on railroad labor were forecast this week as sweeping new powers were conferred upon Joseph B. Eastman, director of defense transportation, and he bombarded the country with orders and statements.

President Roosevelt issued an executive order giving Eastman wide authority over all "rubber-borne" transportation—private automobiles, taxicabs, busses and trucks. Even the War Production Board and the Office of Price Administration were to "conform" to the "policies, programs and measures" laid down by Eastman in this field.

As the Office of Defense Transportation already had broad powers under an order issued by the President last December, Eastman is now practically a "czar" over all forms of transport.

Labor's Gains Are in Peril

[illegible] and statements indicate that [illegible] wartime authority to reverse [illegible] overnight, laws and safeguards [illegible] won after long struggles be[illegible] legislatures, commissions and [illegible]

[illegible] Eastman told a Federal-state "trade [illegible] in Washington that "the railroads [illegible] who are powerful politically, have [illegible] state restrictions upon the size and [illegible] motor vehicles." These restrictions should be [illegible] out now, he said.

Moreover, Eastman added, state "full-crew" and "train-length-limit" laws should be abolished, though these laws are the result of long and thorough debate in state legislatures and have been upheld by the highest legal tribunal in the land, the U. S. Supreme Court.

Is "Czar"

J. B. Eastman

By his recent "General Order No. 1," Eastman forbade shipment of "merchandise" freight by rail unless cars are loaded to a minimum of six tons, that minimum increasing to 10 tons after September 1.

This week Eastman pointed out that, as a result of his order, rail merchandise freight car loadings dropped by 23.7 per cent in the week ended April 23, compared to the same week a year ago.

Traffic Diverted to Trucks

Now Eastman has "amended" his General Order No. 1 by "prohibiting use of closed freight cars in any kind of intra-city freight movement where utilization of motor vehicles is possible." In other words, trucks instead of railroad cars are to be used to carry such freight.

Passengers will be shifted from trains to busses according to an Eastman statement, which says:

"The O. D. T. is actively considering steps to restrict and limit passenger travel * * * elimination of duplications in service on competing lines, reduction or elimination of luxury equipment such as private, club, lounge, parlor, and sleeping cars. * * *

"It will be necessary to readjust schedules. This will undoubtedly call for fewer trains in some territories and districts, and perhaps the complete elimination of trains used for pleasure and other non-essential travel.

"Where train service is discontinued, the affected communities must be served by bus."

Such a policy will probably enable some railroads to discontinue passenger trains which they have long wanted to discontinue but could not because of objections by local communities and state commissions.

Turn to page three, col. five

"Land of The Noble Free"

By LAYLE LANE

THE MOMENTUM which the March-On-Washington Movement gathered in its year or more of existence is an incouraging indication that Negroes in every walk of life are determined that the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution shall apply to them as well as to their fellow white Americans.

More than this, the growth of the Movement is an evidence of the success of the intelligent and militant leadership of A. Philip Randolph; a leadership which cogently expresses itself in the slogan, "Winning Democracy for the Negro is Winning the War for Democracy." Neither determination nor leadership is sufficient alone for an organization and back of the movement a carefully worked out plan of membership. Fortunately, too, the Movement has the support of both the Negro church and the Negro press.

The plan to have a mass meeting at Madison Square Garden as a first step in a program of action has fired the imagination of Harlem and dozens of its citizens are daily giving their resources and their talents to make the meeting a success. It's an inspiration to hear the gray-haired president of the Sons of Georgia announce a donation of $75 from his group; to read just one of the 600 slogans, "Let's blitzkrieg the Color Line"—prepared by Fred Perry and his fellow artists; to hear a carpenter pay for a $5 sponsorship out of his first pay on a job which he feels the Movement helped him to secure; to hear a fine young photographer pledge his aid in giving publicity through his camera; to know that a young electrical engineer after months of a run around, has secured work in his profession; to which young people forthrightly and self-confidently express themselves; to hear another young man tell of securing fifty members in two days time. These and many more similar instances make one realize how good it is for man to walk together.

It's not surprising, though, that as the membership grows its policies and methods become obscured by its varied makeup. Among the hundreds who are sincerely working for Negro advancement there are found a few who have their own axes to grind. Some have their eyes on the 1942 elections and what may result for them; others are sure they are the only ones who never make mistakes; others want to carry racism to the vicious extreme that whites have; still others want an interracial organization; others want the movement to issue a statement on war completely divorced from the objective of the March-On-Washington Movement.

It will therefore be necessary from time to time to state clearly to the public our policies and objectives.

First, the March-on-Washington Movement is non-political. Its members as individuals, belong to the political parties of their choice. This very fact makes it impossible to tie the movement, and wisely so, to any political organization. This does not mean, however, that the Movement will not take measures which involve political action to advance its program. For example, it will require national legislation to make the FEPC a permanent administrative agency and efforts to elect representatives to pass this legislation is therefore a legitimate activity of the March-on-Washington Movement.

The Movement, though confined to Negro membership and control, is racial not on the grounds of color but on the basis of our common disabilities. It has no intention of being enslaved to the theory of race and color, the very thing we are fighting against. It will cooperate with white people whenever it is deemed advisable on specific issues and on specific occasions. It was decided to do so with regard to the program for the Madison Square Garden mass meeting and to ask Mr. Wendell Willkie, Miss Pearl [illegible] Robert Agar and representatives of the three religious faiths to speak on that occasion. The speakers were suggested by Mr. [illegible] by the Planning Committee, by the Program Committee and accepted by the membership in one of its weekly meetings.

I take this opportunity to correct the news release in the People's Voice of May 2nd, which indicated I had acted on my own in inviting white speakers. Since the person who wrote the release and the publicity director from whom the information was secured are both members of the movement and had access to the facts, the motives for publicizing such inaccuracies are questinoable. Accuracy of news is a fundamental policy of a responsible reporter and likewise a must for the Negro press; especially since Mr. Pegler's attack indicates which way the winds of censorship are likely to blow next.

The war position of the March is expressed in its slogan (quoted previously) which indicates to anybody the Negro is 100 per cent concerned with winning the fight for democracy. With the knowledge of the Detroit housing riots, of the Sikeston lynching, of the flagrant discrimination everywhere, of the virtual peonage of more than half of the Negro population, a leadeship is neither honest nor wise to take any other position.

Saturday, May 16, 1942....

To Bring Case Of Odell Waller, Condemned Negro Sharecropper, Before U. S. Supreme Court Again

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The case of Odell Waller, Negro sharecropper, of Gretna, Virginia, will be brought before the United States Supreme Court once more on a petition for a re-hearing, it was announced by the Workers Defense League immediately following the Court's refusal on May 4 to accept jurisdiction in the case. John F. Finerty, League counsel, has asked stay of the execution, now set for May 19, so that the Supreme Court may act on the petition for rehearing.

Waller is sentenced to die for killing his white landlord, Oscar Davis, in a dispute over crop shares in which he claimed self-defense. His case was appealed to the Supreme Court by the Workers Defense League on the ground that he was tried by a jury from which non-payers of the poll tax were systematically barred, and that a jury made up entirely of white taxpayers could not be impartial. The League presented affidavits showing that over 80 per cent of the population of Pittsylvania County, Va., were unable to pay ther poll tax and were thereby barred from grand and peiit jury lists in the county.

The case has attracted wide support from labor unions and Negro organizations throughout the country. The Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and the National Association for Advancement of Colored People have given strong cooperation to the WDL's campaign to save Waller's life.

Miss Layle Lane, vice chairman of the Workers Defense League, who is chairman of the program committee of the Negro March on Washington Movement and vice-president of the American Federation of Teachers, declared:

"The high court decision on Waller's case is a blow to Negro rights. But it is also a slap at every poor man, white or Negro, who asks for real democracy in America. We think we have a right to know whether the Supreme Court's refusal to hear the case means that the court thinks it is perfectly all right to bar poor people generally, or any other group of people, from jury service."

—30—

"MUST WIN VOTE BEFORE WAR ENDS"

MILITANT LEADER URGES NEGROES TO FIGHT POLL TAXES

HOUSTON, Tex., [illegible] Addressing monster mass meeting in the B[illegible] church in Houston and the St. Paul M[illegible] San Antonio, Texas, A. Philip Randolph [illegible] President of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters [illegible] tional director of the [illegible] Washington Movement [illegible] called for all-out mass de[illegible] tions in the South to wipe [illegible] the vicious poll tax and white primary system so that Negro citizens as taxpayers in the role of property owners, as tax-makers, and as workers may exercise their constitutional rights to vote and [illegible] voted for.

Randolph stated that Negroes must realize the necessity of winning the right to vote in the South before the war ends, while world opinion is watching the profession and practice of the democratic process everywhere. After the war it may be too late, he concluded.

WEBSTER CITES WORK OF FEPC

Milton P. Webster, first international vice-president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and member of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, pointed to aircraft and war production firms in the Chicago and Milwaukee areas that have barred Negro workers but are now employing them as a result of the action of FEPC. He warned however, that the effectiveness and constructive future of the Fair Employment Practice Committee depends upon an informed and militant Negro public opinion.

Chester, Pa. [illegible] above named men are from [illegible] 41st Engineers.

To Infantry, [illegible] Benning, Ga.: Sergeant Edgar [illegible] Davis, New York City; Co[illegible]al Randall C. Morgan, Chicago, Ill.

To Quarterm[illegible], Camp Lee, Va.: St. Sergeant Longie McKitchen, Pittsburgh, Pa.; St. Sergeant Walter Lewis, Cleveland, Ohio; Corporal Charles H. Fields, Baltimore, Md.; Corporal Izear Holmes, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Private First-Class Joseph Lawson, Chester, Pa. The above named men are from Quartermaster Detachment. Corporal Edward F. Cardwell, Gary, Ind., The candidates for the infantry are from the 41st Engineers; Corporal Cardwell from the Reception Center.

PITTSBURGH COURIER

May 16, 1942

THE AFRO-AMERICAN, MAY 16, 1942

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

By JAMES H. HOGANS

OUR DECEASED NEIGHBOR NEW YORK

Outsiders say New York City people are hard, callous, and have neither a neighborly nor neighborhood spirit.

As one refutation to that reputation, the column presents this week one of the obituary tributes paid the late Mrs. Viola Williams at her funeral rites at Mother Zion A.M.E. Church on Tuesday of last week.

Mrs. Williams, who died suddenly on May 1, at her home in the Dunbar Apartments, formerly lived for many years in West 135th Street, between Lenox and Seventh Avenues.

Entitled, "Our Deceased Neighbor," the tribute came from the residents of that block, and said, in part:

"It was with profound sorrow that we, the neighbors and friends of West 135th Street, received the news of the passing of Mrs. Viola Williams, who lived in our midst for several decades.

"To many of us, she was simply Viola Williams; to others, she was just 'Bob,' and to the children she was 'Boboo.'

"Children she simply adored. Anybody's, everybody's children found their way into her arms. And from the tot to the adolescent, there was no one like 'Boboo.'

"To us she was the good neighbor. The kind of neighbor who was never too tired to run in and see an ailing neighbor; never too busy to stop and give a cheery greeting; never so occupied that she couldn't discuss little neighborhood matters.

"Those were the kind things about her we are remembering, those were the things that will cause her [illegible] to live in our memory as a [illegible] respected and good neighbor."

RED CAPS [illegible]

Cincinnati [illegible] the focal point next w[illegible] red caps of the count[illegible] for their third bienni[illegible]on, and they are all s[illegible]

Among th[illegible] convention [illegible] Sidney Hillman, d[illegible] division of V[illegible]oard; Dr. A. Clay[illegible] New York City co[illegible]ellman [illegible] Dickerson, Chicago alder[illegible] Alfred Baker Lewis, me[illegible] of the board of directors o[illegible] NAACP, and Theodore Ber[illegible] UTSEA attorney.

The following are some of the Eastern officers and delegates of the UTSEA who will attend the convention:

John R. Lee, S. R. Corrothers, John Bowers, E. L. Parrot, Ted Langston and John Nickens of the New York Central System; Earl Adams, E. C. Robinson, R. T. Ashe and C. M. Dixon, Pennsyl-

MAY 16, 1942

THE PEOPLE'S VOICE

Classes Continue

Free classes for transit jobs will continue at the Brotherhood of Sleeping C[illegible] hall, 217 W. 125 st., a[illegible] exam for conductors [illegible] was held Saturday, [illegible] are being conducted [illegible] Harlem Transit Committee, Monday and Friday evenings at 8 p.m., Monday and Tuesday mornings at 10 a.m.

THE CHICAGO DEFENDER
SATURDAY, MAY 9, 1942

What the People Say

(The Chicago Defender does not vouch for the authenticity or truthfulness of letters printed in this column, nor do letters contained herein express opinions or views of the Defender. All letters must be signed with name and address of writer. Confine them to 150 words.)

MARCH ON WASHINGTON

Dear Editor: I have read with interest a recent letter in your column contributed by Mr. H. F. Lewis in which he attempted to correct certain impressions as to where the real credit for the idea of a march on Washington movement should go. According to his version, the Council of Negro Organizations under the leadership of Mrs. Irene McCoy Gaines, initiated and planned such a demonstration before it was taken by Mr. Randolph and the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and put upon a nationwide scale. A campaign was launched here in the city with the sale of buttons from which enough funds were raised to send a delegation to Washington. After reading these facts, I found myself very confused and so I set about getting the truth about the whole matter and thereby clarify my own mind as well as many others.

These then are the [illegible] facts: the idea of a mass de[illegible]ration meeting in the nation's [illegible]al to force the President to do [illegible]thing about the rampant disc[illegible]tions in the armed forces a[illegible]fense industries was born in [illegible] mind of Mr. A. Philip Randolph [illegible] a train while travelling somewhere in the South early in 1941. It was conceived, nurtured and brought to maturity after long weeks of careful silent consideration. It was then discussed with Milton P. Webster, vice president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; Walter White of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Lester Grainger of the National Urban League.

The Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters then initiated the drive and gave it impetus and other organizations joined in. All this took place before the Council of Negro Organizations launched its own campaign as a sporadic off-shoot of the larger real idea. The National March on Washington committee is fully responsible for the planned demonstration which brought about the President's famed Executive Order No. 8802 abolishing discrimination in defense industries and set up the Committee on Fair Employment Practices to investigate violations of these rules. Subsequently, the proposed march was called off, but the national body with its local chapters held itself intact under the same name so that at any time further action was needed, it might be mobilized for immediate action.

Following this plan of strategy, the national director, Mr. A. Philip Randolph has issued a call for giant demonstration meetings in strategic points throughout the country to convince the people and the executive branch of the government that the Negro people are ready to fight to the last man for the democracy which is being denied them. Such a thing therefore must naturally be the biggest thing yet carried out by Negroes and calls for absolute unanimity among all groups in order to give it the greatest possible success.

I was therefore astounded to learn that in a recent meeting the Council of Negro Organizations by executive action voted to break away from the Chicago chapter of the March on Washington and to put over the Chicago demonstration under its sole leadership. Such action must be regarded as treasonable in times like these when we are fighting for our future existence and like India are bargaining for our just rights which have for so long been denied us. It is to be hoped, however, that such action will only serve as greater impetus to other groups and individuals that we may band together in the common cause which rises above such petty selfishness.—Helen S. Davis, 2307 Warren boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

Saturday, May 23, 1942 THE NE

. . Things Seen, Heard And Done . .

AMONG PULLMAN EMPLOYES

By J. T. REID

Well the Florida trains are off, and the boys have started to bump. Yes, sir, the time has now arrived when you and no other man knows where he will make his next trip. I see that John Rhodes, M. Harrisson and George Williams have bumped back on the Broadway Limited to Chicago. They replaced J. L. Hill, J. Shed[illegible] and W. Wilkins. Two of these men have bumped in on the head car which is known as the coach car on this train. In other words, that which they once refused they are now glad to have. This should be a lesson to our good friend C. H. Rains who seemingly gets a kick out of telling you that he wouldn't operate on that old coach car. But, of course, we understand because our experience has convinced us that even a baldheaded barber insists on telling hair-raising stories.

Maid Julia Scott, of the Chicago Western District, who operates on The Liberty Limited to Washington, D. C., is without a doubt one of the most clever and witty in the Pullman service. When she was informed of the marriage of Thomas Oliver, she said: "I didn't know that the old codger was in the market for a wife or I might have considered him myself." Well, Maid Scott, we think that you have been spared much pain and again what would the boys on the liberty have thought of you turning them down for Oliver? Then again you should remember that you have been operating on the Liberty Limited for many years, in fact, you were one of the first picked to operate on this train when it was first put in service between Washington and Chicago in 1928. And here is something else you should consider: the majority of men, especially porters, believe in platonic love—after death.

According to a report from J. R. Reese, secretary-treasurer of the Pullman Porters and Maids Protective Association, the Chicago Eastern Local [illegible] the "conscientious" observ[illegible] in Chicago looking more wa[illegible]an an old-fashioned Sox out[illegible]er in a high wind.

Porter C. E. Kendricks has been called upon to relieve Porter Instructor Major Taylor in the New York Central District. Porter Kendricks seved in this capacity some months ago and evidently must have served satisfactorily, otherwise he would not have been recalled. As I have always claimed, any skilled craftsman can do a pretty good job with poor tools. I once asked Kendricks what part of his work among the porters was most distasteful to him. He replied "Listening to Porters mistry their conditions." Now I personally know that that is true. There are a few thoughtful members among the porter instructors who have worked to improve these things, and some have been successful, but I venture the statement that no real progress can ever be made until the porters are made independent and entrusted with more discretion. I realize that, as Mark Twain says, "If you entrust a man with discretion he may discretion you out of house and home." There is always that danger, but one or two experiences with poor porter instructors should convince the Pullman management of a most discouraging record made by some of their top porter instructors who are still trying to kill two birds with one stone, "instead of using a shotgun." Porter Kendricks is one man in my opinion who holds himself aloof from indiscriminate familiarities; this I know will help him.

Tests For Medical Corps Announced By The War Department

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The War Department announces an examination August 10—13, both dates inclusive, for the purpose of qualifying candidates for appointment as first lieutenants in the Medical Corps, Regular Army, to fill vacancies occurring during the fiscal year 1943.

The examination is open to all male graduates of acceptable medical schools in the United States and Canada who have completed one year's internship in an approved hospital and who will not be over 32 years of age at the [illegible] Syracuse;

Cornelius Thompson, Philadelphia; Harvey Kyles, Harrisburg; James Ford, Baltimore; Elmer Traynham, Pittsburgh; Joseph Grayson, Newark, N.J.;

William Brown, president of the New England branch of the UTSEA, New Haven; Mrs. Priscilla E. Brown, international president of the women's auxiliary, New Haven; Mesdames Mabel Jackson, Jeane Johnson and May Richardson, New Haven; Catherine Thomas, Providence, and Obediah Thomas, Providence; James O. Cannady, UTSEA vice-president, Boston; Laurence Dansuell, Back Bay local; George Davis, South Station local; Richard Hamme, also of Boston, and Charles M. Gray, Worcester, Mass.

* * *

RPPA ELECTS OFFICERS

The Retired Pullman Porters' Association of New York met May 4 at the Harlem YMCA and elected the following officers:

John H. Mingo, president; Horace Stokein, of Springfield, Mass., vice-president; Thomas E. Griffin, secretary-treasurer; E. F. Robinson, chaplain, and J. L. Francis, sergeant-at-arms.

The following program committee was appointed: James H. Hogans, an advisory member; R. L. Wade and M. L. Johnson, active members.

New members and visitors at the meeting were: Sylvester Brown, recently retired; Ernest Durham and P. Stephenson of Philadelphia.

Superintendent John F. Carroll of the New York District, Mr. Brown and Mr. Stephenson were the guest speakers.

* * *

HERE AND THERE

Instructor W. C. Taylor of Mott Haven is on a three-week vacation.

P. A. Sample, PPBA comptroller, was an attendant at the funeral rites for Mrs. Viola Williams.

Porter A. W. Goins of 47 E. 128th Street, New York, was

ABANDONMENT OF PASSENGER TRAINS HINTED BY EASTMAN

NEW YORK AGE

May 30, 1942

Rail Business to Be Diverted To Trucks; Restriction Placed on Passes

(Continued from page one)

Eastman's orders and statements on shifting freight and passenger traffic from trains to busses and trucks seem inconsistent with dire warnings which the O. D. T. is issuing on the shortage of rubber tires.

The O. D. T. "has arranged a series of meetings throughout the United States to explain the seriousness of the rubber situation to shippers, truckers, tire dealers and the general public."

Thus, the O. D. T. warns of the tire shortage, yet diverts freight and passengers from steel-shod trains to rubber-tired vehicles.

Eastman recently wrote the railroads urging them to cut down on free transportation for their employes and other persons, and making definite recommendations. As a result, the carriers have adopted the following "restrictions":

Restrictions on Passes

The Eastern roads ban "free transportation for personal travel" for employes with less than five years' service. Employes with five, 10, 15 and 20 years' service can "request" free transportation for from one to four trips a year, but only for the following purposes:

1—To enable "furloughed employes in military service" to visit their homes, and to enable their wives and children to visit them at military posts.

2—To enable "active and pensioned employes" and their wives and children to visit "members of their immediate families" at military posts.

3—"For definite emergency travel," as in cases of serious illness or death.

Western Roads Go Farther

The Western roads are adopting these same restrictions, plus an additional one limiting free transportation to or from military posts to only one trip a year, regardless of the employe's length of service.

However, the Western roads permit up to three free trips a year for "school children traveling to and from school."

Eastman's attitude on another subject of interest to rail labor was shown this week in a letter to J. G. Luhrsen, executive secretary of the Railway Labor Executives' Association.

Overlooks Rail Labor

The letter said that Eastman still believes the International Highway Forwarders' project should be allowed to go through. That is a scheme for running American trucks through Canada between Detroit and Buffalo. It has been opposed by railroad workers on both sides of the boundary.

"Railway Age" says that "directors of the Association of American Railroads, holding their regular monthly meeting in Washington, spent most of the day discussing wartime transportation problems with Director Eastman of the O. D. T. and members of his staff."

Eastman has shown little inclination to discuss these wartime problems with the representatives of rail labor.

On Thursday, Eastman "banned all grain movement over the Great Lakes," by a drastic order forbidding ships to haul grain from America or Canadian ports. This huge grain traffic must be carried by the railroads, Eastman said, so that the lake ships can concentrate on carrying iron ore.

Randolph Declines Housing Post

A. Philip Randolph has declined the appointment to the New York City Housing Authority made April 26 by Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia, it was learned by The New York Age on Monday.

Mr. Randolph's declination of the appointment was made in a telegram he sent while in San Antonio, Tex., on a speaking tour recently and he followed it with a letter to the Mayor expressing regret at his inability to accept the proffered appointment, saying he felt that the position was too important for anyone to fill who did not have the proper time to devote to discharge of official duties.

At the present time, Mr. Randolph, who is international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, is busy mobilizing sensiment of Negroes behind the March on Washington Movement's mass meeting which will be held at Madison Square Garden on June 16, to focus attention on the fight for real democracy for Negroes.

The March on Washington Movement last year cancelled its scheduled march on the nation's capitol after President Roosevelt agreed to issue an exucutive order banning racial discrimination in private industries holding war contracts and in branches of the government.

Sponsors of the movement feel that the President's executive order has helped considerably in the fight for democracy but declare that there is still too great a degree of prejudice in this country.

"The Negro is in no mood," says the committee, "for relinquishing his efforts in acquiring all democratic rights insured to all Americans," and the New York rally is the first of a series of mass meetings that are to be held in cities throughout the country, including Chicago and Washington, D. C.

Pittsburgh Courier SATURDAY, JUNE 13, 1942

NAACP Raps Shipbuilding Plan

Says Separate Shipyard Would Lead to Inequalities and Violation of President's Order Banning Discrimination in Nation's War Industries—Want Workers Integrated.

NEW YORK, June 11—Separation of shipbuilding workers into white and colored crews "leads inevitably to misunderstanding and antagonism and frequently to differentials in working conditions," it was asserted Saturday by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in a letter to the Sun Shipbuilding and Drydock company at Chester, Pa.

The letter, addressed to Joseph G. Pew, president, said the association "views with concern" the announcement that the company will hire 9,000 Negroes in a separate shipyard. This is diametrically opposite to the principles for which our country is fighting, the association said.

N.A.A.C.P. made clear that it does not question the importance of the proposal to the 9,000 Negroes who would be hired. It stated, however, that the plan may be in violation of the President's Executive Order 8802, which specifically bans discrimination in war industries. Developments of the last few months during which white and colored Americans have begun to work side by side on an equal basis in plants in the North and South are most desirable, the N.A.A.C.P said.

"All Americans are fighting in a common cause to preserve the democratic way of life here and in other parts of the world," the association stated, pointing out that segregation is undesirable. [illegible] would make it easier [illegible] tion is cut to shu[illegible] in which the segrega[illegible] working, but that if the [illegible] of the minority are integra[illegible] a plant along with workers of the racial groups, discrimination would not be as easy.

AFRO-AMERICAN
June 20, 1942

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

A PROMISE FULFILLED

NEW YORK

The announcement last week that the United Transport Service Employees of America had become an affiliate of the CIO, and that its president, Willard S. Townsend, had been inducted as a member of the CIO general executive board, marked the fulfillment of a promise made five years ago by the red caps' union leader.

In 1937, when a delegation of union-minded red caps met in Chicago and organized the International Brotherhood of Red Caps (now the UTSEA) they elected Townsend president, mainly for his activity in bringing that meeting about.

It was soon discovered, however, that, while the red caps were union conscious enough, they were attempting to function as independent or separate groups, a situation that got them little consideration.

So, in 1938, another meeting was held in Chicago, unifying the different local and sectional groups into a national body.

The Western group was solidly for the retention of Townsend as the leader of the unified organization, but the Eastern delegation fought for the election of A. J. McGhee, then president of the Brotherhood of Red Caps and Station Porters of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Mr. Townsend won, however, largely on this promise made at the 1937 meeting:

"Elect me as your leader, work with me faithfully and loyally, and I promise you that in five years we will not only make radical improvements in the industrial status and working conditions of red caps, but we will put the red cap on the railroad labor map."

How well he and his loyal supporters have succeeded in accomplishing those things needs no explanation here. The remarkable fight for labor rights and consideration made by the red caps in the last five years, under the most disheartening circumstances, is generally known.

Of recent significance, however, is the [illegible] of their union by the p[illegible] an atonomous organiza[illegible] the seating of their leader as a member of the most important committee in the organization.

Added distinction is given to the latter incident because of the fact that the red caps' leader has received, in one bound, an honor that A. Philip Randolph, the Pullman porters' leader, has been denied by the rival A.F. of L. organization, despite his ability and the many years he has been connected with it.

If Mr. Randolph is ever elected to the general executive board of the A.F. of L., he will have to thank the red caps and the CIO for it.

In inducting Mr. Townsend as a member of his general executive board, President Philip Murry said:

"In electing you as a member of our general executive board, we want America to know that the COI is opposed to any and all forms of discrimination between one worker and another based upon considerations of race, creed, color or nationality, and is pledged to work with vigor to[illegible] they may be found in American [illegible]."

* * *

NO CREW COFFEE

According to our Pullman contemporary, James T. Reid, Pennsylvania Railroad and Pullman crews will not be served with coffee from its dining cars, an order to that effect being issued on May 31.

Even passengers will be confined to one cup of coffee at a meal, Mr. Reid reports.

That is bad news for Pullman porters who run over that railroad; for a cup of steaming hot coffee, after being up all night making beds, shining shoes and seeing that no passenger walks off his car while asleep, has always been a sort of morning tonic for the porter.

While it is true that coffee, like gasoline, has become a luxurious commodity of late, to deny it to the crew does seem an exaggeration of the situation.

But, then, railroad and Pullman crews will probably not be surprised by the order, since the dining car department of most large railroads is generally considered the least co-operative department, as far as [illegible]

LABOR
June 23, 1942

[illegible]ed best of all.

PULLMAN CARMEN GOADED TO REVOLT

Company's Antagonistic Attitude Is Blamed for Unauthorized Walkout

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., June 18.—Members of the Brotherhood Railway Carmen at the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing Company here were forced to strike again this week—for the fourth time in 16 months—because of the management's bitter anti-union attitude.

The first walkout was early in 1941, when the company refused to deal with the union. Federal conciliators worked out a settlement, but the company reneged on its promises, and the unionists walked out again.

Recently, the union sought to negotiate a new contract improving working conditions and [illegible] for pay adjustments in some classifications. The company refused even to confer with the union, insisting that the Carmen continue terms of the old agreement "or nothing at all."

Goaded Into Action

Though the Brotherhood did not authorize a strike, "the company's antagonistic attitude forced the men to walk out," Charles Burchfield, a vice president of the Carmen, declared.

Another factor causing the strike was the company's layoff recently of over 600 men of its force of 1,900 workers, on the claim that it had finished a contract for box cars. The union charged the company ordered lay-offs in an effort to weaken the organization.

Federal conciliators and War Department representatives were hard [illegible] Thursday, when LABOR went [illegible] trying to obtain a settle-

THE AFRO-AMERICAN, JUNE 6, 1942

Randolph Backs USO Drive Among Porters

NEW YORK.—Liberal contributions to the USO from all members of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters were urged last week by A. Philip Randolph, brotherhood president.

Letters addressed to all divisions of the organization and units of the ladies' auxiliary expressed Mr. Randolph's endorsement of the campaign in which the USO is attempting to raise a $32,000,000 war fund by July 4.

June 1942

A. F. L. Union Cuts Fees for War Workers

Teamsters' Board Sets $10 as Initiation Rate and $12 as Highest Monthly Dues

Special to the Herald Tribune

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 15.—The executive board of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, voted today to limit initiation fees for war workers to $10 in place of the previous scale which in some instances ran as high as $60, it was announced by Daniel J. Tobin, president of the union.

The executive board also limited to $2 a month the maximum dues which any local might charge members engaged on war work. Some locals had charged as high as $3.50 a month.

Many building trades unions have been under sharp criticism on the ground that they slowed work on war factories and Army camps by charging such high rates for initiation that skilled workers could not pay and were forced to remain idle. The general union practice is for the international or parent body to fix the share of the dues it must get, and to leave to the individual local the right to set the amount it charges members. The reason for this is that some locals have greater expenses than others.

The new scale makes the teamsters' initiation fee one of the lowest among the craft unions in the A. F. of L. The theory behind the initiation fee is to protect the investment in the union which an old member has made by years of dues paying. The oldtimers argue that they have built u pthe wage scales and benefits, and that a newcomer should pay before he can gain them.

Redcaps Fail to Collect In Suit for Back Wages

$1,600,000 Action Against 8 Railroads Dismissed

CHICAGO, June 15 (AP).—A suit filed in behalf of 1,068 redcaps to collect $1,600,000 from eight railroads was dismissed today by Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan.

The International Brotherhood of Red Caps sued the carriers for $1,600,000—double the total of back wages the men contended was owed to them under the wage-hour law from October, 1938, to April, 1940. The plaintiff said the roads failed to pay the redcaps the difference between the tips they collected and the minimum wages fixed for the period. The judge ruled, however, that the testimony of nineteen redcaps at the hearing last year did not prove their contention.

Defendants were the Milwaukee, Rock Island, Santa Fe, Pennsylvania, Western Indiana, Illinois Central, North Western and New York Central Railroads.

June 1942

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

GEORGE RINGOLD

NEW YORK

Fate, that vagabond of life, had played George Ringold some unkind tricks in his day, but the last one was the unkindest and least deserved of all.

Generous to the point of extravagance, where the needy were concerned, he would have given his murderers the last cent he had, had he thought they were actually in want and needed it.

Ringold, who went under the name of Frank Ringle in the Pullman service, died in Harlem Hospital on May 25 from stab wounds received on Saturday night, May 16, when waylaid and robbed as he entered the hallway of the apartment house in which he roomed.

His use of an alias was traceable to the once-common practice with Pullman porters, when they changed from one district to another, to change their names. He worked in the old Jersey City District of the Pennsylvania railroad before coming to the New York District, where he had been employed for thirty-five years.

During his employment here he not only earned the reputation of being one of its "best" porters, but by his courteous and sympathetic disposition, gentlemanly deportment and stable character, cultivated a friendship among his fellow workers that was a frequent subject for comment.

The extent to which this amity was reciprocal was conspicuously illustrated while he [illegible] hospital, and later [illegible] lay in the Jam[illegible] funeral chapel, [illegible] were held Thu[illegible] evening.

Not since the death of Casper White, one of the porters killed in the railroad wreck at Little Falls, N.Y., two years ago, had so large a number of Pullman porters and their families paid such marked respect to the passing of one of their group.

THE [illegible]

The [illegible] single event [illegible] ties at which [illegible] shows up to be [illegible] a substantial number of the community and his race, than at his annual [illegible] service.

This event is now held in every large Pullman district. Porters of the New York Central and Pennsylvania Terminal Districts in New York held theirs on Sunday before last at the Church of the Master, Presbyterian, on Morningside Avenue.

Aside from an impressive program, the attendance at the service was the largest in recent years.

* * *

UTSEA's PROGRAM

Following the recent convention in Cincinnati, the publicity department of the United Transport Service Employees of America announced the following ambitious program of the organization:

Enrollment of 25,000 members by 1944, the instituting of an insurance department within the organization, and a campaign for liberalization of the Railroad Retirement Act in its relation to red caps and station porters.

The latter feature of the program again demonstrates that this organization is alive to some of the economic problems of its retired members and is to be highly commended.

It was also disclosed that the convention had voted for the organization to become an autonomous affiliate of the CIO, a decision that surprised no one who was familiar with the matter.

* * *

HERE AND THERE

Miss Geneva Stroud, who has been teaching in Garner, N.C., during the past winter, is spending her vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Stroud, of New York. Mr. Stroud is a veteran dining car employee of the D.L. & W.

Dining car employees of the D.L. & W. are mourning the death on May 23 of George McLean, veteran waiter, who had been ill for two years.

New York Amsterdam News

June 13, 1942

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH, national director of the March-on-Washington Movement, who declined Mayor LaGuardia's appointment as a member of the New York Housing Authority, has just announced that the secretary - treasurer of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, of which Randolph is international president, has been authorized to buy $25,000 worth of Government war bonds.

CHICAGO DEFENDER

June 13, 1942

Train Porters Buy $25,000 U.S. Bonds

It was announced at the headquarters of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, here at the close of the three-day session of the international executive board by A. Philip Randolph, international president, that the board had authorized Ashley L. Totten, international secretary-treasurer, to purchase immediately $25,000 worth of government war bonds.

Pittsburgh Courier SATURDAY, JUNE 13, 1942

NAACP Raps Shipbuilding Plan

Says Separate Shipyard Would Lead to Inequalities and Violation of President's Order Banning Discrimination in Nation's War Industries—Want Workers Integrated.

NEW YORK, June 11—Separation of shipbuilding workers into white and colored crews "leads inevitably to misunderstanding and antagonism and frequently to differentials in working conditions," it was asserted Saturday by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in a letter to the Sun Shipbuilding and Drydock company at Chester, Pa.

The letter, addressed to Joseph G. Pew, president, said the association "views with concern" the announcement that the company will hire 9,000 Negroes in a separate shipyard. This is diametrically opposite to the principles for which our country is fighting, the association said.

N.A.A.C.P. made clear that it does not question the importance of the proposal to the 9,000 Negroes who would be hired. It stated, however, that the plan may be in violation of the President's Executive Order 8802, which specifically bans discrimination in war industries. Developments of the last few months during which white and colored Americans have begun to work side by side on an equal basis in plants in the North and South are most desirable, the N.A.A.C.P said.

"All Americans are fighting in a common cause to preserve the democratic way of life here and in other parts of the world," the association stated, pointing out that segregation is undesirable and would make it easier when tension is cut, to shut [illegible] in which the segregated [illegible] working, but that if the [illegible] of the minority are integrated into a plant along with workers of the racial groups, discrimination would not be as easy.

AFRO-AMERICAN
June 20, 1942

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

A PROMISE FULFILLED

NEW YORK

The announcement last week that the United Transport Service Employees of America had become an affiliate of the CIO, and that its president, Willard S. Townsend, had been inducted as a member of the CIO general executive board, marked the fulfillment of a promise made five years ago by the red caps' union leader.

In 1937, when a delegation of union-minded red caps met in Chicago and organized the International Brotherhood of Red Caps (now the UTSEA) they elected Townsend president, mainly for his activity in bringing that meeting about.

It was soon discovered, however, that, while the red caps were union conscious enough, they were attempting to function as independent or separate groups, a situation that got them little consideration.

So, in 1938, another meeting was held in Chicago, unifying the different local and sectional groups into a national body.

The Western group was solidly for the retention of Townsend as the leader of the unified organization, but the Eastern delegation fought for the election of A. J. McGhee, then president of the Brotherhood of Red Caps and Station Porters of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Mr. Townsend won, however, largely on this promise made at the 1937 meeting:

"Elect me as your leader, work with me faithfully and loyally, and I promise you that in five years we will not only make radical improvements in the industrial status and working conditions of red caps, but we will put the red cap on the railroad labor map."

How well he and his loyal supporters have succeeded in accomplishing those things needs no explanation here. The remarkable fight for labor rights and consideration made by the red caps in the last five years, under the most disheartening circumstances, is generally known.

Of recent significance, however, is the [illegible] of their union by the [illegible] an atonomous organization, and the seating of their leader as a member of the most important committee in the organization.

Added distinction is given to the latter incident, because of the fact that the red caps' leader has received, in one bound, an honor that A. Philip Randolph, the Pullman porters' leader, has been denied by the rival A.F. of L. organization, despite his ability and the many years he has been connected with it.

If Mr. Randolph is ever elected to the general executive board of the A.F. of L., he will have to thank the red caps and the CIO for it.

In inducting Mr. Townsend as a member of his general executive board, President Philip Murry said:

"In electing you as a member of our general executive board, we want America to know that the COI is opposed to any and all forms of discrimination between one worker and another based upon considerations of race, creed, color or nationality, and is pledged to work with vigor to [illegible] they may be found in American life."

* * *

NO CREW COFFEE

According to our Pullman contemporary, James T. Reid, Pennsylvania Railroad and Pullman crews will not be served with coffee from its dining cars, an order to that effect being issued on May 31.

Even passengers will be confined to one cup of coffee at a meal, Mr. Reid reports.

That is bad news for Pullman porters who run over that railroad; for a cup of steaming hot coffee, after being up all night making beds, shining shoes and seeing that no passenger walks off his car while asleep, has always been a sort of morning tonic for the porter.

While it is true that coffee, like gasoline, has become a luxurious commodity of late, to deny it to the crew does seem an exaggeration of the situation.

But, then, railroad and Pullman crews will probably not be surprised by the order, since the dining car department of most large railroads is generally considered the least co-operative department [illegible]

LABOR
June 23, 1942

liked best of all.

PULLMAN CARMEN GOADED TO REVOLT

Company's Antagonistic Attitude Is Blamed for Unauthorized Walkout

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., June 18.—Members of the Brotherhood Railway Carmen at the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing Company here were forced to strike again this week—for the fourth time in 16 months—because of the management's bitter anti-union attitude.

The first walkout was early in 1941, when the company refused to deal with the union. Federal conciliators worked out a settlement, but the company reneged on its promises, and the unionists walked out again.

Recently, the union sought to negotiate a new contract improving working conditions and providing for pay adjustments in some classifications. The company refused even to confer with the union, insisting that the Carmen continue terms of the old agreement "or nothing at all."

Goaded Into Action

Though the Brotherhood did not authorize a strike, "the company's antagonistic attitude forced the men to walk out," Charles Burchfield, a vice president of the Carmen, declared.

Another factor causing the strike was the company's layoff recently of over 600 men of its force of 1,900 workers, on the claim that it had finished a contract for box cars. The union charged the company ordered lay-offs in an effort to weaken the organization.

Federal conciliators and War Department representatives were hard at it Thursday, when LABOR went to press, trying to obtain a settle-

THE AFRO-AMERICAN, JUNE 6, 1942

Randolph Backs USO Drive Among Porters

NEW YORK.—Liberal contributions to the USO from all members of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters were urged last week by A. Philip Randolph, brotherhood president.

Letters addressed to all divisions of the organization and units of the ladies' auxiliary expressed Mr. Randolph's endorsement of the campaign in which the USO is attempting to raise a $32,000,000 war fund by July 4.

NEW YORK AGE

July 11, 1942

Ashley L. Totten And Committee Discuss Virgin Islands Problems With Officials Of Interior Dept

WASHINGTON, D. C.— Headed by Ashley L. Totten, president of the American Virgin Islands Civic Association, a committee conferred with Department of Interior officials here Wednesday on problems of health, agriculture, job placements and labor conditions in the Virgin Islands.

Beside Mr. Totten, other members of the association at the two and three-quarter-hour conference with Guy J. Swope, director of Territories and Island possessions, were the Rev. George M. Plaskett, Ralph Bough, Julius A. Thomas, Dr. James L. Wilson and Miss Margaret Harris.

In welcoming the committee, Mr. Swope said: "We are happy to have you come down here for a friendly discussion on the Virgin Islands and its problems." Also representing the Department of Interior, was Mr. Kleindix, who had known Mr. Totten from the days of the Pearson administration, and who is thoroughly familiar with all of the intricate problems of the islands.

Dr. James L. Wilson presented an analysis of the health and sanitary problems of the islands saying that the safety of the three islands—St. Croix, St. Thomas and St. John—is threatened by inadequate hospitalization and by a public health program whose operation is handicapped by poorly trained nurses.

Declaring that continentals and natives are often forced to go to Puerto Rico or visit the mainland in order to obtain adequate hospital service, Dr. Wilson said that poor people who cannot afford such travel, often die from lack of attention. He also said that the work and efficiency of the naval and army bases are jeopardized by the present obsolete hospitals.

To correct this situation, Dr. Wilson recommended the building of two modern hospitals; eradication of the high infantile morbidity and mortality rate; special service for the obliteration of mosquitoes; standardization of nurse training in the hospitals; pasteurization of milk in St. Croix, improvement in the sewerage system in the towns and improvement of the latrine system in the rural districts in St. Croix; and public health work on pulmonary tuberculosis and the prevalence of malnutrition, secondary anemia, dental cares and veneral diseases.

Mr. Swope, listening to the report with rapt attention, told Dr. Wilson that his presentation was a masterpiece.

Other Conditions Discussed

The agricultural, labor conditions, job placements, differential wages of government employees and matters relating to the rights of citizenship were presented by Dr. Totten and oral arguments followed.

The committee has been assured that definite steps will be taken to correct many of the evils contained in the report and was asked to cite specific cases which were presented. Mr. Totten argued that more dams were needed in the islands for the conservation of water and that in the erection of these dams both economy and engineering skill must be adhered to. He also stated that the general belief that the native people of the Virgin Islands are not agriculturally minded is erroneous. He pointed to the fact that in days of his childhood the lands were cultivated to the top of the hills and so numerous were fruits and vegetables that children made wilful waste of them by stoning others with them while at play.

He said that the failure to cultivate the land was due to poor labor leadership on the one hand and the fact that landowners, denied benefit payments, forced to pay six dollars ($6.00) per ton tax on their low sugar income, became discouraged and began turning their plantations into stock farms. Continuing, he stated that the Homestead Project could not be expected to benefit the small landowners as well, if the price asked for these small acre farms are to remain as high as they are at the present time. Mr. Kleindex supported Mr. Totten's contention and pointed out the fact that the homesteaders were up in their payments until two years ago, at least 90 per cent.

Committee Encouraged

The Department of Interior offers great hope in the prosecution of the Farm Security Administration and has assured the committee that definite steps will be taken for the protection of the native people against the possibility of air-raid or bombardment, by sending in foodstuffs and material for building by armed ships.

If and when the material can be secured, a hospital above the ballground at St. Thomas with 100 or more beds will be constructed. Recommendation for a hospital at St. John, to cost $40,000 with 15 beds is a part of the tentative program. At Kings Hill, St. Croix, a large hospital is to be erected for major cases and the remaining two hospitals in each town to be remodeled and used for clinic cases.

The committee has been assured that the entire program though tentative is almost sure of approval. Mr. Swope in his closing remarks to the committee expressed himself as being overjoyed to find that the Association had made such a comprehensive study of the condition of the islands and stated that it was the first of any of the island committees appearing before the Department with unanimity of purpose and an intelligent and high sense of cooperation. He further expressed his desire for continued cooperation and assured the committee that the advice of the Association would in the future always be taken into consideration on all matters affecting the Virgin Islands.

PEOPLE'S VOICE

July 18, 1942

Virgin Islands Needs Stressed

As a result of two recent murders in the Virgin Islands, the participants of which were natives and white continental soldiers, the American Virgin Islands Civic Association, Ashley L. Totten, president, started agitation for Negro soldiers to be sent to the islands in an attempt to improve the problem of social relationship with the native people.

Totten pointed out to the Secretary of War that white soldiers were responsible for race feeling in the islands whose population is 90 percent Negroid and that in the absence of women their own race immorality is now rampant.

As a remedy Totten [illegible]d the Secretary of War [illegible] sending Negro troops to [illegible] with white marines and [illegible] jackets.

Railroads Persist In Labor Bias

CHICAGO (FP)—There will be a shortage of 320,000 men on US railroads by the end of 1942, according to Defense Transportation Director Joseph B. Eastman, but the railroads continue discrimination against Negroes.

A request that the President's fair employment practices committee put an end to this situation has been made by the railroad manpower committee of the Chicago Negro Labor Win-the-War Conference.

Copies of petitions to President Roosevelt have been sent to AFL, CIO and railroad unions by Secretary Emmett N. Brooks, local 660, Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers (AFL), who also is secretary of the manpower committee. The conference represents 40,000 Negro unionists here.

The long-standing railroad practice, the petition charges, is to deny employment to Negroes in many classes of work, particularly in the better-paid skilled trades and to keep them off better jobs to which their seniority entitles them.

Roosevelt is urged to convene immediately a national hearing in Chicago, the nation's railroad center, and to make a thorough investigation of discriminatory practices.

Labor Organizations Need Investigating

By MANNING JOHNSON

(Ed. Note—Manning Johnson, president, Bar and Grill Employes, Local 341; delegate NYState convention of the CIO; delegate Greater NY Joint Council of the United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employees of America. Twelve years an organizer of labor; served as chairman of the Pennsylvania Railroad System Board of Adjustment; former delegate to the Central Trades and Labor Council, AFL; delegate to the NYState Federation of Labor. Attended several conventions of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes International Alliance and Bartenders International League of America, AFL, and served as business agent of Local 302, AFL for more than 4 years.)

SPECIAL

The Congress of Industrial Organizations (CIO) and a number of Unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor (AFL) have taken a very healthy and encouraging stand against discrimination and for equal rights for Negroes. They have made some serious beginnings in the right direction. A great deal of their work is marred, however, by minority of labor actions of a small leaders in high and influential places who still maintain a policy of exclusion of the Negro. One of the classic examples of discrimination and exclusion is in the railroad industry. There leaders of labor have decreed that their organizations shall not only by lily-white but where Negroes cannot be kept completely out they are to be organized into jimcro locals under the jurisdiction of the nearest white local union.

A careful study of the constitutions of the various unions in the transportation industry reveals that the unions take upon themselves responsibility of denying Negroes the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, barring them from membership, and supporting the policy of non-employment of Negroes in many crafts.

A quotation from the Constitution of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen states:

Section 7. (Clause (a) Any white person between the ages of 15 and 65, who believes in the existence of a Supreme Being, who is employed at the time he or she makes application for membership as railroad, electric, or motor car builder or repairer on any class of cars, shall be eligible to membership in the brotherhood.

Clause (c). On railroads where the employment of colored persons has become a permanent institution, they shall be admitted to membership in separate lodges. Where these separate lodges of Negroes are organized, they shall be under the jurisdiction of and represented by the delegate of the nearest white local in any meeting of the joint protective board, federation or convention where delegates may be seated."

These clauses speak for themselves. Clause (a) shows very clearly that the union was founded on the premise of complete exclusion of Negroes and consequently leaving them without any instrument of collective bargaining.

Clause (c) is a revision of the Constitution that was necessary in order to meet the problems that a large group of Negroes presented in the shops. The union says in effect we will take you but you will have neither voice nor vote in matters affecting you. Your status is that of a mendicant and a beggar. We do not want you but since you insist upon an organization we will give you a separate or jimcro one with white representatives governing all your affairs.

This is one of the most brazen, cowardly insults and expressions of prejudice and racial hatred ever tossed into the face of Negro labor. It is a dastardly attack on their integrity and intelligence and a flagrant violation of democratic rights.

U HELP SOMEONE KNOW WHEN YOU GIVE TO THE USO.

NEW YORK AGE

July 4, 1942

10,000 NEGROES HEAR APPEAL TO BAN COLOR LINE

July 1942 - Chicago Defender

Leaders Air Charges of Discrimination.

More than 10,000 Negroes packed the Coliseum last night to protest alleged discrimination by the government against members of their race serving in the armed forces and in war industries.

The rally was sponsored by a nation-wide organization seeking full social, economic, and political equality for the Negro race.

Charles W. Burton, an attorney and regional director for the movement, said he was speaking for 15,000,000 Negroes in America and asserted, "We desire to integrate Negroes in all phases of the war effort, in the army, navy, air corps, and in war industries."

Firmly Rooted, He Charges.

Walter White, secretary of the national association for the advancement of colored people, said, "Six months after Pearl Harbor finds discrimination based on skin color as firmly rooted in the thinking of the white world as it ever was."

White charged that a group of southern senators almost completely dominate the federal government and prevents elimination of the color line.

"It is ironical that Negroes must fight for the right to fight when the world is threatened with destruction," he said. "There are 15,000,000 of us, more than one-tenth of the nation's population, an untapped but rich source of man power," he said.

Urges Pacific Charter.

White asserted that what was needed was a Pacific charter following the points of the Atlantic charter. "Nothing less will convince the brown, yellow, and black peoples of the orient and the world that President Roosevelt's four freedoms will apply to them as well as whites," he said.

"Prove to all people that this war for freedom is just that and we will fight like fury for that freedom."

Others on the speakers' rostrum were A. Philip Randolph, member of the President's committee on fair employment practice, and Dr. A. B. Terrell, president of the Chicago Physicians' association.

. . Things Seen, Heard And Done . .

AMONG PULLMAN EMPLOYEES

By J. T. REID

We are happy to report that Mrs. Williams has recovered from her illness and has returned to her duties behind the counter in the restaurant at Sunnyside Yards. She looks fine, considering the suffering she has passed through. There is one thing that cannot be overlooked, Jerry is all smiles again. I wonder if it's because he is so happy that she is back or is it because his wife has relieved him of the responsibility of paying off the help. Anyway, he is stepping around like a chicken.

Speaking of chicken reminds me of John Rhoades. Out in Chicago one day last week, his old friend, J. L. Hill, stopped by for breakfast. Of course, John knowing that Hill was due in that morning, made elaborate preparations to entertain him on his arrival. John himself went about preparing the meal knowing that Hill was an old private car man. He didn't want to be caught napping, so he called up his butcher and ordered two spring chickens which he cooked Maryland style.

Now anyone who knows their chicken would have thought that Hill would have been pleased with all this elaborate preparation, but not Hill. The first thing he asked for when he sat down to the table was: "Will you please pass me the mushroom gravy, so that I can get started on my way." Continuing he said: "You know I have lots of work to do."

This remark coming from Hill made John feel that his friend was rubbing it in, and right away he said to him: "You should be in the Army where men eat what they are served."

Well, John [illegible] can bluff any woman [illegible] her to do as she [illegible] but you can't bluff our [illegible] Hill, by not having mushroom gravy when you serve him fried chicken.

I got a great kick out of an argument between two porters last week in the washroom at Sunnyside Yards. One fellow said: "I was surprised at an editorial in one of our daily newspapers, but since listening to your views on the present day conditions of this country I am convinced that your interpretations are no different from those of others of our race. In fact many of you feel that now is the time to press the white man for social equality. While I feel that this is no time for racial bickering, we have Negro papers whose editors are well qualified to present our side of the question. Do they do it?"

Now getting back to that editorial entitled "We'll Win This War But Not With Words," the second paragraph stated: "But the over-optimism and over-confidence doesn't come from the mass of the people." The readers of that editorial didn't like the grammar: They claimed that the word "doesn't" should have been "don't."

These men went on with their arguments on grammar construction. But it would seem to me that "over-optimism and over confidence" can be taken as a single phrase describing a single attitude of mind, therefore, I would appreciate comments from my readers. It might help us to settle the question on "doesn't and don't."

It was a shock to the many friends of Willie Scott to hear of his sudden death last Sunday, June 21. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved family and friends of our deceased co-worker.

. . . . Marie Do
BEAUTY AND RON SPONSORED BY LARIEUSE BEAUTY BI
The Larieuse Beauty Bureau was est congratulated their Rabulan and Ray heartiest congratulations.

* * * *

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH'S CELEBRATE 28th ANNIVERSARY:

For the past several weeks the A. Philip Randolphs have had occasion for much congratulations and best wishes, but their most precious and cherished event occurred on Thursday when the nationally known couple celebrated their twenty-eighth anniversary. Although Mr. Randolph, who left the city Wednesday to attend the March-On-Washington Movement's mass meeting to be held in Chicago, on Friday night, the international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and chairman of the movement, took time to send the following telegram to his wife:

My dear wife, I am congratulating myself upon my twenty-eight years of marriage with you and hope that we will have 28 more. Buddy."

The Randolph were married June 25, 1914, at St. Philip Church with the then assistant rector, the late Rev. Edward W. Daniels, officiating. Mrs. Addie Perkinson was maid of honor and Austin W. Serrant, best man.

* * * *

The Militant

JULY 4, 1942

The Negro Struggle

"LABOR WITH A WHITE SKIN CANNOT EMANCIPATE ITSELF WHERE LABOR WITH A BLACK SKIN IS BRANDED" — KARL MARX.

By Albert Parker

What Now?

In an editorial entitled "What Now?" the Pittsburgh Courier (June 27) has in its own way posed the problems facing the March-on-Washington movement.

"It was an impressive gathering. . ." says the editorial, of the movement's June 16 Madison Square Garden rally against Jim Crow "with but a single thought: i.e., the ending of discrimination against Negroes in the war effort.

"The meeting has become history, the newspaper clippings have been collected, the assorted orators and singers have departed to their respective homes, and the lengthy resolutions have been sent to high officials who are now aware (not for the first time!) that Negroes are dissatisfied with a Jim Crow status.

"Well, what now? Eighteen thousand Negroes have cheered the obvious, but what are they going to do about it? What have the leaders of the movement told them to do about it? We do not know and we doubt that anybody else knows.

"No definite move or series of moves have been suggested or advocated.

"All we have so far are earsplitting generalities and blowsy platitudes. We do not have a program. Nor does there exist any machinery for carrying out a program if there were one.

"It is one thing to get a mass of people together and steam them up to go places, but it is quite another thing to organize them effectively to execute a prescribed program.

"We believe that much can be accomplished by organizing the masses of American Negroes IF the organizers possess vision, courage and especially administrative ability."

The editorial then declares that "The nearest approach we have had to an intelligently administered mass movement is the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People with its 70,000 dues-paying members, its well-written propaganda, its trained staff and its army of volunteer local officers."

True, the editorial admits, there is "tremendous room for improvement in the program, tactics and administration" of the NAACP. But the March-on-Washington, it claims, seems to be "covering the same ground no less ineptly" and is "consequently unnecessary." Then it concludes as follows:

"And so, having staged another mass meeting, what now? Is there going to be any new action? If so, what kind, where and when?"

DIFFERENT APPROACHES

Many of the points raised in the Courier editorial are similar to those raised in THE MILITANT. But it should be clear [illegible] that the basic approach of the Courier and THE MILITANT to [illegible] the March-on-Washington movement are [illegible]

The Courier from the very beginning has criticized the movement as "unnecessary." Last year it was one of the few Negro papers to condemn and oppose the proposed March on Washington. Acting as though it had a monopoly on the Negro struggle, and expressing dissatisfaction because it had not been consulted about the creation and aims of the movement, it sided with the forces that were trying to call off the March. The Courier's executive editor, P. L. Prattis, complained only a few weeks ago that Randolph was building a movement that might get out of hand and implied that it might be a good thing if the movement [illegible] promised last year or [illegible] they think it can be made into such a movement.

And that, precisely, is the reason why in their new mood they do not consider the NAACP to be the organization they need. We do not wish to enter into a criticism of the NAACP now. It has done very good work in its field, and it should be supported in that work. This work has been carried on primarily in legal action, court cases; the NAACP also deserves praise for some very effective propaganda and publicity work. But it is not a movement of mass action. It has never seriously tried to organize mass actions. It has a large member-

For example, after raising pertinent questions, the Courier does not answer them. To its own question, "What Now?", the editorial has no answer — unless it be that the NAACP should be strengthened and improved. The movement has no program for achieving its just demands, the editorial remarks. Obviously, without the right program the demands will not be achieved. But the Courier does not itself say what the right program is. If the March-on-Washington movement is only doing what the NAACP is doing, then vice versa the NAACP is only doing what the movement is doing. Then why does the Courier imply that the solution of the Negro people's problems lies in building the NAACP alone — which by implication also does not have the necessary program?

It is not exactly correct to say that Randolph and his colleagues don't have any program. They do have a program of sorts. Randolph's program, as expressed at the Madison Square Garden rally, is for him and a few others probably including the NAACP secretary, Walter White, to go to Washington and have a "frank, candid and plain talk" with Roosevelt. What he proposes to do when Roosevelt rejects most of the demands of the movement, he does not now say, but his failure to say anything is not a hopeful indication.

Now what does the Courier think about that for a program? It does not say, but from the character of most of its own proposals, its readers will agree that it cannot criticize this "program" because it is the Courier's own program, it is all that the Courier itself has ever proposed!

WRONG ESTIMATE

The trouble with the Courier on this question, and the reason for its negative approach, is that it has failed to correctly and fully estimate the change in the thinking of the mass of Negroes that has become apparent especially since Pearl Harbor. Courier editorials have often commented on this change, but evidently the writers of these editorials don't really appreciate the extent to which this change has already taken place.

Summed up briefly, the Negro masses are ready to FIGHT for their rights NOW, and they want to build a movement that will organize and lead this fight. The reason they rallied to the March-on - Washington movement last year was because Randolph assured them that "the regular, normal and respectable method of conferences and petitions, while proper and ought to be continued as conditions warrant, certainly don't work" and because he told them that what is needed now is a movement of mass action and mass pressure. They are rallying to it again today, because they still think it is the [illegible]

Black Dispatch - July 11, 1942

The Southwest's Leading Journal

Mayor La[illegible] signs first petition presented by Union for Democratic Action to President asking for elimination of discrimination in armed forces while the following well-known people look on: Alfred Baker Lewis, Mary Simkhovitch, J. Finley Wilson, Jack Altman, Newbold Morris, Dr. Frank Kingdom, Rachel Carrothers, Herbert Agar and Fannie Hurst.

Thursday, July 16, 1942

THE CALIFORNIA EAGLE

MAYOR WELCOMES NAACP CONVENTION

Continued fr[illegible] 1-A

Washington, D. C., [illegible] James J. McClendon, Detroit, Michigan; and Thomas N. R[illegible] United States Department [illegible] Agriculture, Washington, D. C. At 2:15 the same day the d[illegible] continued with Sidne[illegible] and St. Louis, Mo., pre[illegible] Thomas T. Hall, Tulsa, Okl[illegible] George M. Johnson, Jr., a[illegible] executive secretary of the [illegible] Employment Practice Comm[illegible] Washington, D. C., and W[illegible] T. Hardin, UAW-CIO, Detroit, Michigan.

Wednesday at 8 p. m., Mrs. Charlotta A. Bass, editor of the California Eagle, Los Angeles, gave the main address, and Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, chairman of the Fair Employment Practice Committee also addressed the large audience. The benediction was given by Father H. R. Moore.

Today's business session will open a discussion of "Protecting Civil Rights During an Emergency" by Thurgood Marshall, New York, and will continue in the afternoon at 2:00 until 4:00 p. m., with Lionel Barrow, New York, presiding; and Thomas L. Griffith, Los Angeles, Walter Gordon, Berkeley; Roscoe Dunjee, Oklahoma City; Carl Johnson, Kansas City; and Mrs. Lucille M. Jackson, Baltimore, Md., Contributing.

This evening's session will be the Youth Night Session with John Kinloch, president of the Los Angeles Junior Council presiding, and the Gilbert Allen Youth Singers will furnish the musical program. E. Frederic Morrow, New York will speak to the group, and Rev. James H. Robinson, New York will give the principal youth night address. Walter Huston, movie actor, will attend, and representatives from the Chinese Youth Group, the Spanish Speaking People's Congress and the Junior Division of the Jewish Community Council will bring greetings from their organizations.

Tomorrow's business session will concern itself with "Strengthening the N.A.A.C.P. [illegible] Organization" [illegible] Mrs. Daisy L[illegible] J. Baker, R[illegible] ison S[illegible] will [illegible] the di[illegible] 2:00 p. m., the di[illegible] continue specifically on Regional and branch Executive Secretaries, Fund Raising Activities, Youth Work. Also at this time the Thalheimer Prize, Honorit Scrolls, and Life Membership Medals will be awarded.

Friday night's mass meeting the Spingarn Medal will be presented to A. Philip Randolph, International President of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, New York, By Bishop J. A. Gregg, Kansas City, Kansas. The invocation will be given by Rev. Clayton D. Russell.

Saturday at 9 p. m., will be the election of members of the nominating committee, a report of the resolutions committee, and a report of the Time and Place Committee.

Sunday, July 19, at the Shrine Auditorium, Wendell Willkie will give the main address, which will be broadcast over a nation-wide hook-up.

The Courier from the very beginning has criticized the movement as "unnecessary." Last year it was one of the few Negro papers to condemn and oppose the proposed March on Washington. Acting as though it had a monopoly on the Negro struggle, and expressing dissatisfaction because it had not been consulted about the creation and aims of the movement, it sided with the forces that were trying to call off the March. The Courier's executive editor, P. L. Prattis, complained only a few weeks ago that Randolph was building a movement that might get out of hand and implied that it might be a good thing if the movement were not revived.

The Courier editorial last week, despite its militant phrases and some of its timely questions, must therefore be regarded as only another effort to discourage the building of a movement of mass action which the Negro people want and need.

THE MILITANT, on the other hand, has championed the movement against its conservative and reactionary critics ever since the idea for a March-on-Washington was raised. It has urged the masses to support the movement and build it as an instrument for mass struggle. We too have of course criticized the leadership of the movement, but from a different direction and for a different reason. Our aim was and is to show the mistakes and shortcomings of the leadership of the movement, so that the rank and file would be better able to correct them and to build a stronger and more effective organization. Our approach has been positive and constructive, the Courier's has been negative.

[illegible] promised last year at Detroit they think it can be made into such a movement.

And that, precisely, is the reason why in their new mood they do not consider the NAACP to be the organization they need. We do not wish to enter into a criticism of the NAACP now. It has done very good work in its field, and it should be supported in that work. This work has been carried on primarily in legal action, court cases; the NAACP also deserves praise for some very effective propaganda and publicity work. But it is not a movement of mass action. It has never seriously tried to organize mass actions. It has a large membership, no doubt, of "70,000 dues-paying members;" but these members do little more than pay dues and most of them never do anything else for the NAACP. Furthermore its membership and leadership is for the most part not of the working class, but professionals and white collar workers. It is for this reason too that the working masses don't look to the NAACP for leadership in the arena of mass struggle, altho they still respect it for the work it has carried on in its own field.

Before the criticisms of the Courier editorial writers can help to advance the Negro struggle, they must first become aware of the change that is taking place and they must seriously consider the need for working out an effective and constructive program able to accomplish the things that the programs of the past and the present have not been able to.

Next week this column will give its own answer to the question, what now?

Social Equality Is Under Spot Says FEPC Speaker

COFEP MEMBER SAYS NO WHITE SOUTHERNER CAN CHALLENGE NEGRO'S CIVIL RIGHT AS CITIZEN

Here Is a Gist of Ethridge Speech at Birmingham At The Opening Hearing of PCFEP

"FULL CIVIL RIGHTS EMBRACE RIGHT TO VOTE"

WASHINGTON.—(ANP)—Of great importance to the American Negro is the speech delivered by Mark Ethridge, former chairman of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices, at the opening of the hearings of that committee recently in Birmingham.

Many white southern papers have carried excerpts that particularly pleased them. These excerpts for the most part, reflect the real attitude of that part of the country toward the Negro:

In part Mr. Ethridge said:

"This is a time for all of us, particularly for us of the south, to be boldly realistic. We are too often inclined to confuse the rational and emotional approach to the problem of the Negro and the white man living together amicably and peacefully, with the full opportunity, within our economic limitations, for both to improve themselves and their lives.

"No white southerner can logically challenge the statement that the Negro is entitled, as an American citizen, to full civil rights and to economic opportunity.

"Full civil rights embrace the right to vote, the right to justice in the courts, the right to share equitably in the tax burden and in the distribution of tax moneys for public health, for public education, for public improvements such as streets and sidewalks and parks.

"Economic opportunity embraces the right to work according to one's own skill. I do not believe any white southerner who sincerely believes in the meaning of this country, or in the future of this country, or who subscribes to the fundamental tenets of democracy will challenge these statements.

"Where we get into the field of emotional tension is when somebody mentions social equality, the bugbear of jim crowism or segregation.

"Individual members of the committee have their own ideas about that and I do not pretend to speak for them, but the committee has taken no position on the question of segregation of industrial workers. It has recognized that the President was not endeavoring in Executive Order 8802, to write a social document.

"I believe it is perfectly apparent that Executive Order 8802 is a war order, and not a social document.

"Had I conceived it to be, I would not have accepted membership on the committee, because I would have regarded it as a perfectly futile, if not dangerous, gesture on the part of the President; because I would have considered it a federal fiat demanding, for instance, the abolition of social segregation against the general peace and welfare, and because I would consider a federal order of that type to be in the Nazi dictatorship [illegible] people and to stimulate them into giving the evidence of self-discipline and the example of willingness to sacrifice which will shame the demagogic, and challenge the admiration of decent white people.

"The decent Southern white man has an obligation too, to internal harmony and to the advancement of both races.

"Too many white southerners listen with fear or credulity to stories of 'incidents' some of which, at least, are legendary and come out of pre-Civil war days.

"Too many white people who should have more sense apparently have their spy-glasses out for challenges to so-called white supremacy. To me that is a degrading admission for a people who are in charge of the election machinery, of the courts, of the legislative bodies and nearly all of the wealth, in charge, in short, of every instrument of power.

"The decent southern white person can make the greatest contributions to that (referring to the tensions brought about by war). If he is not willing to break down segregation—and he is not—he can at least see that it is not achieved on the brutal standards of a Ku Klux Klansman. He can see that it is made as painless as possible.

"Moreover, he can interest himself in the legitimate aspirations and the legitimate demands of the Negro population. He can see to it that the distribution of public utilities and public benefit & such as sewer and water connections, street and sidewalk paving, parks and playgrounds, public health, nursing and hospital facilities—come to the Negro upon the basis of population and need and fairness rather than upon his ability to muster votes.

"He can interest himself in full justice in the courts for the Negro. All of us can, I believe, greatly improve the Negro's status as a citizen if we strike out the dishonest and evasive laws which bar not only him but in so many southern white people, from participation in elections.

"The southern white man can purchase his own security, his own happiness and his own self-respect only in that measure in which he is willing to accord them to the Negro."

Washington Negro officials were astonished when they read this

THE CALIFORNIA EAGLE
[illegible]6, 1942
[illegible] 23, 1942

DR. MALCOLM S. MacLEAN . . . chairman of the President's Fair Employment Practice committee, as he told an applauding session of the NAACP National Conference "without romancing, without rosy optimism, and without expectation of dispute, I can tell you the achievements of the President's FEPC have been extraordinary."

Los Angeles, Calif., Thursday, July 23, 1942

FEPC Denies Metal Co.'s Request

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 23.—At its July 6 meeting the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice refused the request of Reynold Metals Company of Richmond, Virginia, to be permitted to retain disclosure of religion and color on its job application forms. The committee has an established policy calling for the elimination of this item on pre-employment forms which, it feels, is a necessary means for reducing discrimination based on religion or color.

At the same meeting, the case of the Schatz Manufacturing company of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., was heard. The company has been called to answer charges of discrimination against Negroes in employment.

Requests by the Carl L. Norden company of New York City and the Titeflex Metal Hose company of Newark, N. J. for a review of findings made against them by the FEPC have been granted by the committee, Lawrence W. Cramer, executive secretary, announced today.

The companies, both of which manufacture war products, had been cited for discrimination against Negroes and Jews in violation of Executive Order 8802, by the President's committee after its New York hearings last February.

The Norden company and the Titeflex company will be given opportunity to argue on the record of testimony before the committee in its Washington office on July 21.

The committee modified its direction in the case of the Fairchild Aviation corporation of Jamaica, New York. The company was excused from making a monthly report on the number and classification of its workers, race and religion. The company had been cited for discrimination against both Negroes and Jews.

[illegible] of human nature [illegible] in all pressure [illegible] white or black, [illegible] or labor, to capitalize [illegible] the moment and the situation [illegible] gains. It is perfect[illegible] that some Negro leaders [illegible] adopted the 'all or nothing' [illegible]

[illegible] many of the leaders have [illegible] to see in Executive Or[illegible] a new 'Emancipation [illegible]' and have magnified [illegible] and its possibilities.

[illegible] many of them ignore the history and tradition of this section and take refuge in the unrealistic idea that the federal power [illegible] invoked to perform some [illegible] to convert human nature [illegible] what it is. We ought to have [illegible] enough by now to know that [illegible] federal government has only [illegible] power as we freely accord it; [illegible] experience with prohibition should have taught us that a federal enactment is effective only as [illegible] conforms to the will of the people and as they respect it.

[illegible] I repeat, those Negro leaders and those Negro newspaper editors who demand 'all or nothing' are giving cruel and disillusioning leadership to their people; [illegible] than that, they are playing [illegible] the hand of white demogogues [illegible] two or three times have piled up tragic consequences by playing upon the emotions of a people.

[illegible] southern Negro cannot afford to drive from his side, in his march to a greater fulfillment of his rights, the southern white men of good will who have been his chief asset and his chief aid. He must recognize that there is no [illegible] in the world—not even in all [illegible] mechanized armies of the [illegible], allied and axis—which could force the southern white people to the abandonment of the principle of social segregation. It is a cruel disillusionment, bearing the germs of strife and perhaps tragedy, for any of their leaders to tell them that they can expect it, or that they can exact it as the price of their participation in the war.

"They would do better to learn, and to tell, plain truths to their [illegible] [illegible] the changes which have taken place in Mr. Ethridge's own city of Louisville, they point out the things which may have influenced some of the strong sentiment expressed. Among these were the recent attempt on the part of Negro citizens of Louisville to have equal use of the fine municipal library, which has been denied them in the past. They also point to the equal salary law recently passed for teachers and the fact that Negroes elected their own representative to the state legislature from Louisville in the person of Charles Anderson.

Members of the committee are silent on the speech but it was hailed throughout the south as a masterpiece and a correct presentation of the south's attitude toward Negroes.

Mr. Ethridge's pronouncement has made official Washington stop to consider each member of the committee separately and weigh the merits in his particular benefit. A closer inspection of the individuals brings to light some interesting facts, which when discussed give cause for alarm among Negroes as to just what the Co FEP really is.

PHONE ADams 9729

SENTINEL

AND WORTH MORE

A FEARLESS INDEPENDENT ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY

OUT OF CITY 7c IN CITY 5c

VOLUME X—NUMBER 42 LOS ANGELES, CALIF., THURSDAY, JULY 16, 1942 LEON H. WASHINGTON, JR., PUBLISHER

WHITE (NAACP SECRETARY) — Victory At Home Is Vital As Victory Abroad

RANDOLPH (SPINGARN MEDALIST) — Better To Die Fighting Than Live Begging

WILKINS (ASST. NAACP SEC.) — We Must Win Four Freedoms At Home

THE CALIFORNIA EAGLE
Thursday, [illegible]

A Program for Americans: Win This War!

Certainly there is no American citizen who can differ with this fundamental purpose to guide our steps in a moment of great national peril. It must be the basic consideration of all our activities, because upon it alone all else revolves and is dependent. To lose the war would be disaster. WE MUST WIN.

The soldier must train and fight. He must risk his life and determine to inflict the greatest possible damage upon his enemy.

The riveter must rivet, the welder weld; each, according to his own capacity and position, must contribute toward winning the war.

How, then, can American Negroes, considering their peculiar, unjust and often vicious limitations, serve this cause most effectively?

They can serve it through an unending, bitter attack upon every restriction which bars their full mobilization, in industry and the military alike.

And of first importance in such a campaign is the full understanding of what is the true source of these restrictions.

Is it the people? No, since the people's viewpoint on race and racial restrictions are carefully cultivated products of deliberate miseducation and the fact that they were born in a society dominated by reaction. This reaction stretches throughout the nation, being at its heighth in the South, where oppression's age-old tools, miseducation and prejudice, consequently flourish. The people are misinformed. The people are misled. The people are victims in this situation, not causes.

Is the Government the source of restrictions against Negro people? No. The Government is a means by which the most powerful element of the national life expresses itself at any given moment. It is reactionary and detrimental to the people's interests when reaction holds the bulk of power in the nation. It is liberal and devoted to the people's interests as the people's causes unite and become one. That is, the people's influence upon Government grows as the demands of special groups of the people are drawn into a common demand. For instance, when the lemon pickers of Florida and the orange ing a federal law against exploitation ing a Federal law against exploitation of agricultural labor, both their special interests are strengthened and both will benefit from this legislation, possible only through unified action.

What is the overwhelming power in our national Government today? The will to win the war, supported unquestionably by the solid millions stand as a boulder in the way of adequate prosecution of the war. Safe from the wrath of the people, since only 20 per cent of their home constituencies are able to vote, these men dare sell-out to the agents of Fascism, wound their country's war effort through way-laying defense appropriations, scuttling necessary war legislation, and, most important, preventing the government's forthright action against many who bite the war effort in the back through employment discrimination. Yet even these enemies of victory must twist their stand into a false support of the war — they say, "We cannot relax discriminations against Negro people for this would injure the morale of the South and so hinder the war effort," thus betraying their fear of the nation's dominant determination — winning this war.

If it is not the people and not the Government, what is the source of the restrictions against the Negro people in industry?

Let us be logical. The Negro people are an army of skilled and unskilled workers who, in the production line against Hitler, are an overwhelming weight upon the scales of the United Nations. Who would oppose the use of such a formidable host against our common enemy? The people? Only as they are misled. The government? Only as it is pressured by a rank but potent minority of Congressmen and Senators (mostly poll-tax elected), civil and military administrators. What force in our American life is left? THOSE WHO WOULD RATHER WE LOSE THIS WAR. Right? Those giants of finance capital whose foul alliances with Germany, Italy, Japan and British imperialism are an open, international scandal! Those expatriated conspirators of the Ethiopian invasion (remember the relentless continuance of oil shipments from American Fascists to their Italian comrades, — in the face of overwhelming opposition from the bulk of U. S. public opinion?) those villains of the Scrap-Iron-to-Japan campaign (remember the personal loans to the Japanese government of a certain monarchial automobile manufacturer recently hailed as a burning patriot?); those arch-traitors of the synthetic rubber agreements (remember the prevention of U. S. synthetic rubber production by a firm exposed by the Department of Justice AFTER December 7?). Is it not reasonable to assume that these forces are continuing their association with the Fascist world through wounding America's war effort, restricting employment of vitally needed workers and inflicting the double injury of destroying these workers' morale?

THE CALIFORNIA EAGLE
Thursday, [illegible]

[illegible]

By C. A. B.

If there was ever a time in the history of this nation when Negro Americans should be solid in their faith in the American Government, it is now.

I remember just a few years ago the Tuskegee report of a year's lynchings tallied five and six per southern state. Last year's report gave one lynching in the entire nation. The shocking incident at Texarkana, Tex., last week was announced, according to good authority, on the Tokyo radio DURING THE TIME that it occurred. If true, this fact fits in well with the new Fascist strategy for dividing the American Negro from the rest of war-bent America through the leveling of every bombardment upon his normally high morale.

The commonly called "second World War" differs fundamentally from the blood bath of 20 years ago. That one was a family argument among Bourbons. This one represents a genuine upsurge of the oppressed peoples of the earth battling a fierce reaction of the rulers of the earth. Just as the war is different, so is the American Negro's status in the nation's industrial life different from that he held during the last conflict.

Twenty years ago labor unions, by and large, were closed to Negroes. Today, standing as it were on the threshold of a new world, labor unions have been first to recognize the injustice that was being perpetrated against one-tenth of the nation's population. This realization was hastened through

[redacted]

At the present, Negro labor has been and is being integrated into all branches of union labor.

When A. Philip Randolph organized the Pullman Porters, it was a fine, timely stroke. It served a definite, constructive purpose. But today the square-shooting labor union is making an heroic fight for the participation of Negroes, not on the old basis of segregation, but on a new, working system of complete integration.

Since I am well mindful of the early, heroic struggles of Mr. Randolph, I cannot help but stand in amazement at his current fit of red-baiting. In his speech Friday night at Second Baptist church, Mr. Randolph held that supporters of the Second Front, part of the established policy of the U. S. Government (SOVIET-BRITISH-AMERICAN PACTS), were "Russian agents," interested only in the welfare of the nation. Myself an ardent demander of an immediate Second Front am then a Communist!

I cannot imagine any sincere member of such an oppressed group as the American Negro raising the Red cry. Personally, my politics are quite well known. I was Western Women's Division chief of the 1940 Republican campaign. My only "radical" move was support of Al Smith in 1928 because I believed this man from the gutter had simple faith in the common people and because I could not tolerate the policies espoused by Herbert Hoover.

Today, with equal fervor, I urge an immediate Second Front. So I am a Communist.

We Communists are a select crowd, if nothing else. To date we include President Franklin Roosevelt, Prime Minister Winston Churchill, Lord Beaverbrook, Lord Strabolgi, John Cohee, and the Los Angeles Times!

[illegible] population. But in the effort to win this war is the use of ALL available man-power, thus, even before war's declaration, we secured Executive Order 8802 and the Fair Employment Practice Committee. The Executive Order places the stigma of presidential disapproval upon discriminatory employers. The FEPC spanks them into line through threatening loss of war contracts. Paul V. McNutt, War Man-Power Commissioner; War Production Board chief, Donald M. Nelson; President Roosevelt and Vice President Wallace, — all have basted racial discrimination in industry, discrimination which hinders the war effort, the war effort which is the overwhelming power in our national government today.

If the government is all-out for war, why, then, does it not outlaw employment discrimination immediately and completely, as a war measure? It does not because of the presence of the poll-tax Representatives and Senators in our Congress. They, with a handful of unfound-out Congressional saboteurs from other parts of the country, [illegible] the true source of restrictions against Negroes in the U. S. today. The Fascist forces who would RATHER WE LOSE THIS WAR.

What constructive and effective program can be used against this plot? 1—Full use of the Presidential Policy as established by Executive Order 8802 and the investigatory power of the Fair Employment Practice Committee. Absolute refusal to be content with token hirings. Militant, organized campaigns to destroy every war-hindering discrimination at hand through citation to the Fair Employment Practice Committee, public exposure, and a bellowing, insistent demand for immediate action.

2—Tight, bitter attack upon the poll-tax. (218 signatures from Congressmen are needed to get the Geyer Anti-Poll Tax Bill out of committee, 123 have been secured, 45 in the last four weeks, 13 the last day reported.) Force every representative vulnerable to pressure from any

CHICAGO DEFENDER

JULY 25, 1942

The Labor Front

By GEORGE F. McCRAY

SAYS NEGRO RAILROAD WORKERS SHOULD ORGANIZE FOR SELF-PROTECTION

For many years now the Negro railroad worker has been taking a beating. Today no group of workers in the United States needs the protection of a strong and democratic labor movement as badly as these workers.

Geo. F. McCray

There are well over 100,000 Negro men and women employed in the industry. They are found in various classifications of work such as porters and maids, firemen, switchmen, and maintenance of way workers, car cleaners, red caps, oilers, hostlers, cooks, waiters, trainmen, carmen, and helpers for blacksmiths, machinists, and boilermakers. There is also a large group of terminal warehousemen and freight station laborers.

Certain occupations like pullman porters, red caps, maids and maintenance of way employes, and cooks and waiters on many roads are almost completely manned by Negroes. Almost exclusively, however, Negroes are to be found in the custodial, service or laboring classifications in the industry.

SUBJECT TO RIGID JIM CROW SYSTEM

Throughout the industry Negroes are subjected to a jim crow system that embodies all the crudities and refinements developed for his suppression. This is true in pite of the fact that each of the occupations in the railroad industry in which Negroes work is covered by the jurisdiction of a recognized labor organization. Most of these organizations are affiliated with the A.F.L. or are independent. Two are affiliated with the C.I.O.

The C.I.O. unions led by Bill Townsend's United Transport Service Employes of America and the Utility Workers Organizing committee are offering full equality and participation to the Negro workers. Unfortunately, Bill Townsend's organization is the only really established union the C.I.O. has in the railroad industry.

In contrast the attitude of the C.I.O., the powerful railroad brotherhoods and the unions affiliated with the AF.L., excepting Randolph's Pullman Porters, regard the Negro pretty much as a nuisance. This latter group of unions often flatly refuse to admit Negroes. Occasionally they admit Negroes and push them off into Jim Crow locals without voice or vote in their own or the union's affairs.

In other instances Negroes are admitted into the union, required to assume all the financial obligations of membership, but get very little if any aid from the international in presenting grievances or fighting for better wages, hours, and working conditions.

In times like these, it is well to remember that these Negro railroad workers enjoy neither freedom from fear, nor freedom from want. Negro blacksmith, boilermaker and machinist helpers along with other workers in the industry are stubbornly [illegible]ed promotions. And not [illegible] most railroad jobs closed [illegible]es, but Negro firemen, [illegible]men and brakemen are being [illegible]matically and often brutally [illegible]laced.

DEFENSIVE STEPS TAKEN BY NEGROES

In the face of this situation Negro workers have done what they could to protect their interests. Some of them have accepted the segregated, Jim Crow, voiceless locals ;some have paid and are continuing to pay dues to international unions and "brotherhoods" that really do little for them. Still other Negro workers established strong bargaining unions composed primarily of Negroes and holding contracts with all the major railroads. Others have sought protection in small, isolated, regional unions composed solely of Negroes and held together usually by one or two men.

These smaller, regional, separated groups have achieved about all that could be expected of them under the circumstances. Since the railway labor act provides for compulsory adjustment and arbitration of grievances presented by an organization on behalf of individual employes, these small groups have been able to offer their members a limit-

AFRO-AMERICAN

July 11, 1942

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

By JAMES H. HOGANS

SHIFTING THE BLAME

NEW YORK.

Now that America is beginning to realize the evils of racial discrimination, which its industrial, political and labor leaders have fostered in the nation's labor life, there is a noticeable tendency on the part of these leaders to shift the blame.

Speaking recently at the labor victory meeting in New York, Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the War Man Power Commission, said:

"There are still too many employers who stipulate on their hiring schedules that certain jobs are barred to colored persons; too many who hire them only for certain service jobs or assign them to work below their best skill."

Like most political leaders, the WMPC director would have us believe that the blame for this lies solely at the doorsteps of the employers, which is not the whole truth.

Political leaders and the white labor leaders are just as much responsible for this state of affairs as the industrial leaders. The fact that they have awakened to the seriousness of the situation doesn't lessen the degree of responsibility which may be charged to each.

It was through the organizational strategy of the "Big Four" railroad unions, aided and abetted by political leaders, that black railroad firemen in the South are gradually being eliminated from the engine cab.

And it was through the machinations of the railroad union leaders and the politicians that colored brakemen and trainmen are no longer seen on railroad passenger trains.

Even in the lower-paid jobs, labor leaders have been permitted the authority to exclude workers solely on the ground of color, although they do it by what might be termed union strategy.

For example, there is a colored man who has been an elevator operator at the Grand Central Station in New York for the past ten or more years, and, according to the system of seniority, is eligible to any elevator job in the station, yet he is not allowed to run a passenger elevator there, except as a substitute.

One of the strategies of the white station employees' union is to abolish the title of a vacant job when the applicant is undesirable to the union, as was done last winter in the case of another colored boy, although he was a member of the union.

These citations, however, are no defense for the employers' side of the situation. There are colored workers in both the railroad and Pullman service whose job assignments are below their training and ability, and over which the unions have no control.

Two of the latter are John W. Ballard and C. P. Loving, porter instructors of the New York Central and Pennsylvania Terminal districts, respectively.

[illegible]

NEW YORK AMSTERDAM NEWS

July 25, 1942

Around and Beyond

By Frank Crosswaith

"GIVE the people light and they shall find the way out," is one of the world's oldest and most reliable truism.

Mr. Crosswaith

The readers of this column are all creditably acquainted with, and properly appreciative of, the brilliant background of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and the career of its indomitable leader, Mr. A. Philip Randolph. Thereby, making an introduction unnecessary except to say that we have chosen as our guest for this issue Mr. Randolph and his views appearing in the current issue of the "Black Worker," official organ of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. These views deserve to be read and understood by every Negro desirous of taking part seriously in our struggle for justice and equality in the United States and elsewhere.

By A. PHILLIP RANDOLPH

"The Communists have long ranted and raved about their fight for the down-trodden Negro. According to their official organ, no one but the Communist could be trusted to champion the unpopular cause of the Negro. They tried to get all of the mothers of the Scottsboro boys to parade them throughout the country as an appeal to the sympathy of the Negro and white public for funds, and they collected hundreds of thousands of dollars and as proof of their love for and devotion to the Negro people.

"Being artful and cunning, they formed and are forming all sorts of organizations to rope the Negro in such as the League for Struggle for Negro Rights, the Southern Negro Youth Congress, the National Negro Congress, the Negro Labor Victory Committee and others.

Promised to Make Film

"Communists even went so far as to get the Soviet Government to promise to make a film depicting the economic, political and social injustices of the Negro in America. This, of course, was before Litvinoff had come to America and secured recognition for the Soviet Union. So much enthusiasm was worked up about this film, that a large group of well-known Negroes went to Russia to participate in the movie.

"But the ways of government are [illegible], and diplomacy is full of [illegible]. Before this well-meaning but misguided group of Negroes had arrived in Soviet Russia or soon thereafter, Russia was given recognition by the United States, and, of course, there was no film of how Negroes were victimized by racial discriminations, segregation and Jim-Crow.

"While there was no ethical explanation for the run-around the ever generous gave the Negro, it was carefully explained with appropriate Marxian dialectics that the recent correlation of forces rendered the making of the proposed film in the Land of the Soviets against the interest of international amity and the working class.

"It was just an instance of the Communists promising Negroes the moon in order to razz them. Making a film of the horrors of injustices vented upon Negroes was intended to embarrass Uncle Sam. But when President Roosevelt made a diplomatic pact with Joe Stalin, the Communists wouldn't then give their boots for the uplift of 20 million Negroes with all of their miseries, lynchings, poll taxes and what not.

"And, today, what do we find? We find that the Communists have become Number One Enemy of the Negro people. Although Negroes are still the victims of lynchings, white Primaries, the Poll Tax, mob law and sharecrop exploitation, and are Jim-Crowed and treated like second-class citizens, the Communists advise them to submerge and forget their grievances and abandon their right for their democratic rights for a SECOND FRONT and the salvation of Soviet Russia. Now, we want to see Russia win over Hitler, but Negroes are not going to permit the Communists in America who take their orders from Soviet Russia to tell them what to do about their problems in America.

"Only to Save Russia!"

"It is a matter of common knowledge that the Communists would sacrifice America, the Negro people and heaven and [illegible] for Soviet Russia.

"Bent upon using and capitalizing every incident, they can find to advance the Communist Party and Soviet Russia, the [illegible] who ignored the fight for Odell Waller because they were not permitted to lead and mess it up, clutched with their filthy fingers the throat of Odell Waller dead, and in sack cloth and ashes, wept over his execution in a memorial meeting they held in New York City. Everybody knows the Communists had no interest in Odell Waller. But since the case was made famous and of national and international significance, and, too, since they saw the Negro people greatly aroused over it because of the brilliant fight waged by the Workers' Defense League for the black sharecropper, with the fine and unselfish guidance of Susan LaFollette, his attorney, John Finerty, Mor[illegible] secretary of the league, [illegible] Murphy, representative, and others, the Communists wanted and has tried [illegible] horn in for unholy and selfish [illegible] gle for the Negroes' democratic rights, made sacred by the blood of Odell Waller. Yes, the Communists have become the Number One Enemy of the Negro."

[illegible] clerical job in the company's operating department; and it is not likely that they'll ever be promoted beyond their present jobs, unless there is a radical change from the present employment policy.

Mr. McNutt was entirely correct in what he said about the industrial leaders, the employers; but he should have amplified the list of those who have "permitted the luxury of discrimination" in America's industrial life.

* * *

LABOR LEADER HONORED

Willard S. Townsend, international president of the United Transport Service Employees of America, was tended a testimonial reception on Thursday evening, July 2, at the Good Shepherd Community Center, Chicago, by a committee of civic, political and social leaders of that city.

The affair was in honor of the UTSEA leader's recent election as a member of the executive board of the CIO, and for the part he has played in the civic, political and labor life of his race.

Randolph Tells F.D. He Let Us Down

Silence Said to Indicate South Is Stronger Than U.S. Government

(Continued from Page 1)

known tenor, Roland Hayes, by Georgia cops.

"Certainly you must know," the President was told, "that colored people are reaching such a point of desperation that they are beginning to express a willingness and determination to die right here in America to attain a democracy which they have never had."

Want Full Rights Now

"If the colored man is not given his full rights now, then the battle for democracy is lost," the letter added.

The complete text of the letter, released by the March-on-Washington Movement which is directed by Mr. Randolph, follows:

Dear Mr. President:

As representatives of national organizations, speaking for millions of Americans, particularly colored people, we who tried without success to see you on July 1 feel that in refusing to intervene in the case of Odell Waller, the government of the United States has failed us.

Called "Stab in the Back"

The Waller case became a symbol of the typical sort of injustice accorded colored people in America. Waller's electrocution is a "stab in the back" to a group of people who are asked to defend their country, but whom their government apparently does not intend to defend.

By the government's failure to go on record publicly in this case, it has let the colored people down. In failing us, the cause of Hitlerism at home has been aided.

Everyone with any understanding of this case has conceded that Waller should not have been executed because of a mere technicality. It is unthinkable in a government of the people, by the people, and for the people, that a man must die because of an error of his trial counsel.

Supreme Court Failed

The U.S. Supreme Court, by its refusal to grant an argument on the admittedly important constitutional question of poll tax juries involved in Waller's case, did not fulfill its larger function of interpreting the law in the interest of human liberty.

This is the Supreme Court which you picked, Mr. President, a court which you strove to appoint for the very reason that in the early days of your administration you smarted against those restrictions and technicalities of the Supreme Court which thwarted the efforts of the New Deal.

Waller Was Doomed

The government knows as well as we do that Waller was doomed from the beginning. It knows that he was the victim of a vicious economic and political system perpetuated by the poll tax and racial oppression, a system in the making of which Waller had no part, but whose crushing burdens rested upon him and others of his economic class.

It knows that an impoverished and underprivileged colored man in Southern courts is handicapped in the matter of obtaining competent counsel who will raise and prove the [illegible]ex and technical questions in a manner required by [illegible] Supreme Court.

tence to life imprisonment where there is doubt as to a man's degree of guilt is so small a thing—yet the Governor hardened his conscience against the appeals of thousands of public-spirited citizens who were interested in this case.

Final Appeals Made

Colored people in this country, having exhausted all other known channels of appeal, petitioned the President of the United States as a last resort.

They asked you to appeal publicly to Governor Darden to grant a stay of execution, during which time a non-partisan Commission of Inquiry could investigate the circumstances surrounding the conviction of Waller by a poll tax jury.

They further pointed out that a stay of execution would permit Waller his final chance on a writ of certiorari before the full U.S. Supreme Court in the fall term.

Race Embittered

You must be aware, Mr. President, of the complete disillusionment and embittered resentment of the colored masses in this country, a discontent which is taking organized form. You must be aware that colored morale is admittedly a national problem in view of the war effort.

You must realize that in this case every known instrument of the democratic process was utilized, only to end in total failure.

Certainly you must know that colored people are reaching such a point of desperation that they are beginning to express a willingness and determination to die right here in America to attain a democracy which they never had.

Hemmed in on all sides by the poll tax and jim crow restrictions in the South, robbed of economic and social opportunities throughout the entire country despite your Executive Order No. 8802 establishing the Fair Employment Practices Committee, they have always turned to the Federal government as the one agency which enforced the Constitution and from which they could expect the rights and common decency to which every citizen is entitled.

Interview Denied

Impelled by the force of a spontaneous outcry throughout the nation upon Governor Darden's refusal to commute Waller's sentence, we came to Washington to seek an interview with you, Mr. President. And what was the response?

Although we tried until nearly midnight to reach you, our delegation was shunted from one department to another. Its efforts were thwarted by one official after another who would not act because he did not feel it was sufficiently important to safeguard the interests of 13,000,000 American citizens.

The question of saving Waller had gone beyond legal grounds and was now a question of national morale at a moment when morale was crucially important.

These officials were unable to see the broad similarities between the Tom Mooney case and Waller's case, although both achieved national importance because of the indignation of an organized group of people. In the Mooney case the protests of organized labor, in the Waller case the concern of many liberals and the protests of outraged colored people were finding expression.

Our Main Grievance

The delegation was made to feel most poignantly the lack of sensitivity and intelligence with which high administration officials approach the colored man's problems.

The insulting phrase "We try to do all we can for your people" is indicative of the separatism with which public officials are prone to view questions involving the colored man, whose main grievance is precisely the failure on the [illegible] to treat him the mood of a people determined no longer to take a "licking lying down."

Failure to get any public response from you, Mr. President, leads us to ask this question: Is the southern bloc to be permitted to retain the kind of stranglehold in Washington which makes it impossible for you, our President, to maintain the great humanitarian approach for which you have fought so vigorously?

This tragedy of errors comes at a time when the United Nations are desperately trying to hold back the Axis forces and when the eyes of the colored peoples of the globe are fixed upon the pattern of democracy which America sets for colored people.

Your failure to grant a Commission of Inquiry, as was granted in the case of Tom Mooney by President Wilson, will be interpreted as a refusal because Waller was colored.

Waller's execution has intensified a wave of determination for a showdown on the question of total democracy for the colored man which cannot long be held back by leaders who use the bargain and compromise method.

It was the signal for the barbarous forces in this country to renew the unleashing of their venom of hatred upon the colored people.

Brutality Breaks Loose

Within two weeks after Waller's electrocution, the press has reported the lynching of Willie Vinson, 25-year-old colored youth in Texarkana, Tex.; the slaying of Private Jessie Smith, 25-year-old colored soldier by a cop in Flagstaff, Ariz., and the brutal beating and jailing of the noted colored tenor, Roland Hayes, and his wife in Rome, Ga.

These fascist-like brutalities in America are grist for the propaganda mills of the Axis powers and undoubtedly will be used to destroy the faith of [illegible] the hon-would have electrified the world as a demonstration that American democracy has a single standard of justice, an act which would have found its way into the hearts of the peoples of India, Africa, South America, China and the Pacific Islands.

More than than, your silence has been viewed by the enemies of democracy at home as an indication that a single region, with its policy of openly flaunting the denial to colored people of the constitutional rights guaranteed to every citizen, is stronger than our national government.

Many Losing Faith

Don't you see, Mr. President, this is not a repetition of anything that has happened before in the history of colored-white relations? With the world in the agony of a war for the survival of sheer human decency, the race issue in America is crucial to the whole struggle. If the colored man is not given his full rights now, then the battle for democracy is lost.

Our concern is that many people, colored and white, are losing faith in the method of democratic mediation as a way to the achievement of freedom. The colored people will yet be listened to in the halls of government in Washington. The time will come when colored lives will not be sacrificed on the altar of reactionary and behind-the-scene politics.

As all Americans remember Pearl Harbor, colored Americans will remember Odell Waller and the new list of victims added since his execution, and we solemnly pledge that they shall not have died in vain.

Furthermore, we call upon enlightened public opinion in America, before it is too late, to free you, our great President, and to free our country from a poll tax Southern bloc which decides the fates of American citizens whom it does not represent.

Very truly yours,

AFRO-AMERICAN

July 25, 1942

ws that well-trained awyers find it almost le to practice in these because of the venom-
saults made upon their ives in a number of ern towns.

must be aware of the brusault made several months
n Tennessee upon a mem-
f this very delegation who e acting dean of Howard versity Law School and a nber of the national legal mittee of the NAACP.

t must be aware of recent stances where colored law-ers who have been barred rom trying cases before the courts have been stoned out of town. In the face of these intimidations and brutalities, the colored man, unless he has the money to pay stupendous prices for highly competent counsel, has no choice but to secure the services of a charity lawyer who has no real comprehension of difficulties confronting him.

Refused to Face Issue

Members of the U.S. Supreme Court, according to reports, privately conceded the importance of the question as to whether or not a poll tax jury was a jury of Waller's peers when Waller himself was too poor to pay the poll tax; nevertheless they refused to face the issue and permitted Waller's case to be thrown back into Governor Darden's lap.

A man of Governor Darden's political associations, member of the Byrd-Glass machine, the political beneficiary of the poll tax system in Virginia could not be expected to respond to the broader social issues of the Waller case.

Commutation of a death sen-part of the na on a par with a ther citizen.

Doubt Wallace's Sincerity

Vice-President Wallace, with whom the delegation sought a hearing, attempted to evade the group and made it necessary for Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune to run after him in order to be heard.

His curt response "I can do nothing—it is out of my jurisdiction," raises a doubt as to the sincerity of his recent admirable speeches about the "revolution of the common people."

It is a humiliating fact that no action could be got until it was rumored that the delegation, sickened by this traditional "run around" was planning to throw a picket line around the White House.

Shortly thereafter, Elmer Davis, head of War Information, summoned the group to his office. Without for one moment suspecting Mr. Davis's integrity, it must be said that the purpose of the interview was, among other things, to warn the delegation of the national consequences of a picket line at the White House during this period of the war effort.

The delegation impressed upon Mr. Davis that Presidential intervention in the Waller case would no doubt prevent the necessity for intervention later as an emergency measure, when the pent-up resentment of colored people had reached the boiling point.

Does South Rule Nation?

With all the fervor at its command, this delegation tried to acquaint these officials with the allied na

esty and integrity of American democracy, and hasten the deterioration of the morale of the enslaved peoples of the world which hangs precariously on this faith.

Colored citizens are demanding to know why Nazi saboteurs on trial are being given every opportunity to defend themselves, while American citizens are being hanged to cotton gins and shot down like dogs.

You have let slip an opportunity to do an act which

A. Philip Randolph, national director of the March on Washington Movement.

Frank R. Crosswaith, director, Negro Labor Committee, member N. Y. Housing Authority.

Anna Arnold Hedgeman, Negro Women, Incorporated.

Layle Lane, vice-president, American Federation of Teachers.

Rev. William Lloyd Imes, pastor, St. James Presbyterian Church, New York.

Leon A. Ransom, acting dean, Howard University School of Law.

Pauli Murray, chairman, NAACP Annual Student Conference.

AUGUST 1, 1942 THE PEOPLE'S VOICE

"THE GREATEST honor second to receiving it is the distinction of presenting the Springarn Medal," said Bishop J. A. Gregg, of Kansas City, as he presented the coveted award to A. Philip Randolph, 27th Springarn Medalist. Norman Siminoff, Foto.

AUGUST 22, 1942 The Pittsburgh Courier

Railway Workers To Hold Parley On Job Problems

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 20—According to reports from the Brotherhood of Trainmen, Brakemen, Porters, Switchmen, Firemen and Railway Employes, Inc., 2,500 railroad men will be represented in Kansas City at a national meeting August 27-28. The convention will be held at the YWCA, and the men will represent six different railroad companies.

The purpose of the meeting is to get closer co-operation between the unions, and fight discriminatory practices handed out to the men; to select representatives in all the western, middle west, southeastern, southern and southwestern states, and wherever Negroes are employed, to form committees on railroad manpower, to see that the President's Executive Order 8802 is put into execution. Additional plans are to have representatives of the trainmen union go to Chicago, where a national hearing by the CoFEP will be in session.

Among the many delegates expected are: Vernon C. Coffey, Kansas City, Kan.; L. H. Hoyl, Kansas City, Mo.; L. W. Fairchild, Popular Bluff, Mo.; S. L. Howard, Memphis, Tenn.; John Benion, St. Louis, Mo.; P. Moppin, St. Louis, Mo.; Herald McPherson, Springfield, Mo.; R. L. Pettis, St. Louis, Mo.; Ira Saville, and William Eldridge, Omaha, Neb.; Omak Ezell, Mobile, Ala.; Henry T. Kurn, Hugo, Okla.; W. B. Mitchell, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Hurley Bibbs, Valley Park, Mo.; B. O. Crayne, Kansas City, Mo.; George Hiram, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Henry Winston, Springfield, Mo.; U. V. Weathers, St. Louis, Mo.; Clinton Messengale, Springfield, Mo.; Leroy A. Tease, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Frank Gilliam, New Orleans, La.; J. F. Price, St. Louis, Mo.; and others.

AMSTERDAM NEW YORK STAR-NEWS
Saturday, August 22, 19

McLaurin In Job Vacated By Randolph

Post on Governor's Committee Is Filled; Successes Reported

By J. ROBERT SMITH
(Star-News Labor Editor)

It was officially announced at a labor press conference called by Frieda S. Miller, industrial commissioner of New York at the State Building Monday, that Benjamin F. McLaurin, of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, had replaced A. Philip Randolph, who resigned as a member of the Governor's Committee on Discrimination in Employment.

Mr. McLaurin

The appointment came on the heels of a recommendation made to the commissioner last June when this writer in his column, "Labor's Front," suggested that Randolph resign from the committee due to lack of time to render the required service and that McLaurin be named in his place.

Need Trained Negroes

It was brought out at the conference that one of the serious problems facing the committee at this time is the indifference of Negroes to qualify themselves for defense jobs by attending the various defense training schools in the city.

The commissioner gave an overall picture of the work that her field representatives had done during the month of July including the placement of nine Negroes in the Fairchild Corporation, which was one of the recalcitrant firms summoned to appear before the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee for its discriminatory policies last February.

While Negroes comprise only 1.2 percent of the 180,000 employes in 120 State war industries recently investigated by the committee, Miss Miller told reporters that Negro employment is increasing steadily and also predicted that thousands more will move into armament production before the end of the year.

Seeking Negroes

The commissioner, who is chairman of the committee, stressed the fact that the proportion of Negroes in these plants a year ago was considerably less than at the time of these visits and that rechecks during the past few weeks indicate that the majority of the companies are now actively seeking Negro workers.

"For example," she declared, "one plant which employed 60 Negroes in March added 29 in May, another [illegible]reased its Negro staff from [illegible]105, and still another which never used a colored person on production in the past, has accepted a sizeable group for its training school.

"As the result of pressure by our committee and other groups, one New York firm, which previously excluded them, now is hiring eight Negroes to every white person and will continue to do so until a fair proportion is reached. Many plants have upgraded Negroes to supervisory jobs and others have taken on Negro technicians."

"These are just a few examples of the [illegible]

Company out of a total of [illegible] workers. Following the committee's appeal, the company liberalized its practices and on June [illegible] 125 Negroes on production work. Some of this group were being trained as expert mechanics.

Declaring that many employers working on war contracts have voluntarily recognized the need for relaxing employment specifications based on race, religion or national origin, Miss Miller revealed that the use of appeal and persuasion by the committee has brought tangible results in many cases and promises of complete cooperation in others.

Miss Miller's analysis of the committee's activities during the past four months shows that 120 employers, with a total of nearly 200,000 employes, have been investigated by her field representatives following receipt of complaints from groups or individuals. In the majority of these cases it was determined that while the specific complaint was unjustified, the policies and practices of the companies appeared to be definitely discriminatory.

Provisions of the law were explained and second visits scheduled to check on compliance. While no complete tabulation is available, Miss Miller said that almost all of these plants have commenced to hire persons from groups discriminated against in the past.

Vicious Circle

The commissioner said that last year when the committee started its work, it found that defense training schools were linked in "a particularly vicious circle." Few members of so-called minority groups were accepted on the ground that employers wouldn't hire them, she explained, and employers, at the same time, were excusing their failure to employ such people by pointing out that trained candidates were not available.

"During recent months, the committee has kept in constant touch with the vocational defense schools to bring a better balance into the student body in keeping with our objective," Miller declared. "As the U. S. Employment Service plays a major part in the selection and placement of trainees, we have also emphasized the problem to that agency.

"A decided improvement has been accomplished and we are confident it will continue. In one school, for example, where no Negroes were enrolled two months ago, 22 are in training today. We are also presenting the schools and

S, FRIDAY, AUGUST 28, 1942

Life-Long Friend Quits Talmadge Over School Issue

Sandy Beaver Accuses Governor of 'Political Dictation Over Education'

Atlanta, [illegible] 28 (AP). Blaming Governor Eugene Talmadge for the "tragedy" facing the University System of Georgia, Sandy Beaver announced here he was resigning as chairman of the board of regents and said, in a letter to the governor, that his action "marks the end of a lifelong friendship and association between us."

At the same time the Gainesville, Ga., educator, who previously served on the board from 1933 to 1940, said he was relinquishing his post as chief of the governor's staff.

"Utterly Destructive."

Stating in his letter yesterday that he had "openly approved many of the policies which you in the past have advocated," Beaver said he was now resigning because "the course you are pursuing with respect to the University System is utterly destructive of that system."

Ten units of the system were suspended by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools last year after it had accused Governor Talmadge of "unjustified and unprecedented political interference" in revamping the board of regents in order to remove seven educators.

"I have struggled with you from the first day you embarked on this ruinous course to get you to change your attitude," Beaver said in his letter. "Now I am forced to recognize that nothing can induce you to give up the political dictation which you have set up over education in Georgia."

Denies Co-Education.

Denying that state educators had ever advocated racial co-education, Beaver said Talmadge was attempting to create a "fake issue" in his campaign for re-election. Beaver added that the state constitution prohibits Negroes and whites from attending schools together.

Declaring that students and faculty members will desert Georgia colleges unless the accredited rating is restored, Beaver said the "exodus" already had begun from the University System while enrollment in private schools of the state had increased.

Turning to the governor's attacks on the Rosenwald Foundation Beaver said, "No foundation has ever suggested to us anything contrary to our Southern ideas on race relations."

gust, 29, 1942.

Randolph May Be Congress Candidate

By Ernest E. Johnson

NEW YORK, (ANP)—A. Philip Randolph, national director of the March on Washington movement, has been named a candidate for congress-at large from this state by the American Labor party and will run in the event the party is unable to prevent the nomination of Atty. Gen. John J. Bennett for governor by the Democratic party.

The candidacy was made known Saturday afternoon along with the announcement that New York City's comptroller, Joseph D. McColdrick, would head up the party's ticket unless Sen. James M. Mead, choice of President Roosevelt and the New Deal element, is given the Democratic nomination by the State convention. Bennett is being backed by State Chairman James A. Farley, and claims majority support of delegates.

In naming a full slate for the state elections, the ALP is apparently going through with the threat to upset the applecart of the Democrats, bring about the election of Thomas E. Dewey, the Republican standard-bearer, and place the blame of chairman Farley. Both the left and right wings of the ALP are unalterably opposed to Bennett and wholeheartedly for Sen. Mead. However, there is no certainty that the latter will get the nod.

The nomination of Randolph is being viewed as a move to draw upon the strong prestige he holds among Negroes throughout the city and state. In the event the ticket is actually entered the party expects to collect about a million votes mostly at the expense of the Democrats. Negroes for the past 12 years, except in New York's mayoralty contests, have been strong Democrats. By naming Randolph, some of this strength can be siphoned onto the ALP on the voting machine.

While Tammany Hall, the New York county democratic organizations, is pledged to Sen. Mead, certain de-

CLARION CALL FOR UNITY

There must be somebody somewhere, in whom the Negro believes and who can get the ear of the 20 million blacks, unify them, and make a consolidated effort to make Congress pass legislation abolishing all jim crow laws, and I am sure if enough pressure is brought to bear upon the President he could not help but endorse the same, and also goad Congress into enacting anti-jim crow laws.

For God's sake! Are we going to sit idle and not beat the iron while it is at white heat, for a seat at the post-war peace table?

The Jew, the Italian, the Chinaman, the Jap, the Indian and all nationalities will be represented there and poor Mr. Negro will not have any representation at all.

Don't you think it is time that we wake up and quit playing cheap politics like that played at Madison Square Garden in which one faction tries to steal the show or spot light. It is a disgrace.

I believe that Philip Randolph if given half a chance, could organize committees all over the United States and call a convention and get results. It is not that we haven't got enough Negroes with abiliy to put this thing across; it is that there is too much crab-oligy among us. Think of he committee that the Jewish people have "fronting" for them in addition to the 500 delegates representing 83 communities that met in Chicago May 16th at the Jewish Congress.

I am sure that every Negro in America is eager to pour every ounce of strength he has into a common melting pot for a unified struggle against fascism and jimcrowism. Now that we can eulogize Stalin without being called a Communist we should be considering a place in the sun where a man is a man regarless of his creed or color.

Men and Women

Ferdinand Smith, left, of New York, executive secretary of the National Maritime Union, chats with Frank Bruno, white, agent for the Union in Memphis, Tenn.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 29, 1942 THE CHICAGO DEFENDER

President Quits As Pullman Porters Vote To Join CIO Union In Chicago

By GEORGE F. McCRAY

The national executive board of the Independent Pullman Porters and Maids Protective association announced from its Chicago headquarters this week that the association had set up a committee of five persons to open negotiations for eventual affiliation with the United Transport Service Employes of America (CIO) of which Willard S. Townsend is president.

The Porters and Maids organization claims a membership close to 1,000 workers opposed to affiliation with the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters headed by A. Philip Randolph.

While Willard Townsend (UTSEA-CIO) was in Washington, D.C., conferring with Phillip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations on a policy to protect the interests of Negro workers during peace negotiations between the CIO and AFL, preliminary negotiations with UTSEA were being held by the porters and maids. Representing UTSEA were John Yancey, international secretary-treasurer and Eugene Frazier, general organizer. Representing the Porters and Maids were J. R. Reese, C. E. Hendricks, Paul Brown, and W. A. Scott.

J. T. Ree of New York, former president of the Porters and Maids, resigned his position rather than participate in negotiations to convert the Porters and Maids organization into a full fledged union. Local labor observers held the view that these developments mean labor strife only if peace negotiations between CIO and AFL fail.

These negotiations were held at the eighth annual convention of the association. An address was given by Paul E. X. Brown, managing editor of the "Railroad Review." He spoke for the building of a national publicity program and the reorganization of the affairs of the association for its alignment with constructive forces in the labor world.

The national ladies auxiliary was represented at the convention by Mrs. Leotha Harris, Chicago; Mrs. Nathaniel Greer, Cincinnati, and Mrs. C. Wynn of Cleveland.

C. E. Kendricks was elected temporary president of the association to conduct the business of the organization pending the outcome of negotiations with UTSEA.

Saturday, August 29, 1942 AMSTERDAM NEW YORK STAR-NEWS

Around and Beyond

By Frank Crosswaith

HAVING spent more than 28 years in the cause of labor, beginning at a time when trade unionism was as objectionable to the average Negro as Ku Klux-ism and Naziism are objectionable to all Negroes and civilized whites today, we cannot escape feeling a measure of pride and spiritual satisfaction over the slow but steady growth of the legitimate trade union movement among Negro workers. Those years of service should give one the right to speak occasionally on matters affecting labor. A very wise man once said: "Never assert yourself authoritatively and affirmatively before you possess knowledge and understanding of the particular subject about which you express an opinion." Another cautious gentleman wrote: "Never attempt discussions of mundane matters with the uninformed, for such practices tend to degrade the power of reason and logic. A superior mind teaches first, then discusses." To which this humble Columnist adds: Amen!

Mr. Crosswaith

Action on Job Front

The principle of organized action for workers is becoming generally accepted among our people. It is becoming so generally accepted, that even racketeerism, burglary, narrowed nationalism with a mercenary motive, are beginning to raise their ugly heads and are being accepted by some as labor organizations. Sections of our race from which used to come eloquent sermons warning the people against "labor unions" and "labor agitators" are now chanting hymns of praise and labor endorsements. From those among us who once served as resonant sounding boards for the unsocial and unenlightened propaganda of the open-shoppers we now hear talks about the good inherent in trade unionism.

Of course, it is just as easy for an individual to go from one extreme to the other when moved by the compelling forces of egoism, ignorance, selfishness and personal hatred or friendship. But this question of trade unionism, because it is destined to play such a vital role in reforming and reshaping our world, and eventually bring human relationship closer to those christian ideals that have spiritually stirred the hearts and souls of men through the centuries, must be treated coldly, intelligently and constructively. When the door of freedom and justice is firmly opened to the Negro, it will be the calloused hands of labor that will open it with the key of power through organization across lines of color or religion. Regardless of the many evil deeds directed against the Negro by sections of white labor, the fate of the Negro and the fate of the white worker is identical, and neither of them will ever be free unless the other is free. Every socio-economic and political gain made by white labor is shared by the Negro whether or not it was no intended. Likewis., every socio-economic and political disadvantage directed against the Negro whether in Dixie or elsewhere will adversely affect white labor.

Elected by White Majority

Both groups are steadily becoming aware of that fact. For the second time in the history of the American labor movement, a Negro is elected by a white majority in a Southern state to the office of vice president of a state federation of labor. When the delegates to the 36th annual convention of the North Carolina State Federation elected Haywood Williams they struck a most effective blow against the ignorance, the bigotry and poverty of the South, and they bore a hole through the thick curtain of prejudice enabling the Negro to catch a glimpse of the light and sunshine which that curtain has so long hidden from his view and from the view of white workers.

That 32-year-old Negro tobacco worker who has been a union man only five years, has a great opportunity for service. No doubt, our self-appointed, inexperienced and un-informed self-appointed, inexperienced and uninformed He should be on guard against such advice. Whenever he is in need of advice he should with pride turn to those who know what it is all about. There are Negro leaders in both the A. F. of L. and the CIO such as A. Philip Randolph, of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, Thomas Young of the Building Service, Noah Walters of the Laundry Workers, Layle Lane of the Teachers Union, Edith Ramson of the I. L. G. W. U. and others, rich with experience and information, who would be glad to advise him and thus serve the cause of labor and their race.

At the recent convention of the New York State Federation of Labor, a Negro delegate from the Dining Car Employees Union succeeded in having the convention endorse a resolution calling for the elimination of all "white clauses" from the constitutions of A. F. of L. unions and urging that Negro workers be encouraged to join such organizations. We are making progress in spite of all the obstacles we face.

The path of the Negro is the path of labor—the legitimate, bona fide trade union movement—regardless of persons in it whom we like or don't like.

Saturday, August 29, 1942 THE NEW YORK AGE

J. T. Reid Resigns As President Of Pullman Porters Association

By PAUL E. X. BROWN

CHICAGO, Ill.—Condemning the poll tax Congressmen of the South and the Nazi practices here in America of Governor Talmadge of Georgia and Alabama's Governor Dixon, executives of the Pullman Porters and Maids Protective Association closed here this weekend their eighth annual convention.

This annual gathering of Pullman porters was marked by a stormy session that bestirred the most conservatives of the delegates. The whole convention was thrown into confusion at the outset when the national president, J. T. Reid, who had served the group for five years, in his annual address unleashed the full power of his pen in unbridled fury on the executive board, and having set the stage, without warning demanded that the body accept his resignation as of now, and refused to accept the chair for the conduct of the annual convention business.

President Reid in his address pointed out that during his tenure of office he had been criticized, but that this represented a type of freedom existing in the organization. Further he pointed out that this organization must not yield to force but must strike back harder in the days to come. "We are [illegible] in self-defense and for self-preservation," he said.

Even though President Reid told of the work of his administration and demanded that the group be ever alert to protect the interest of the organization during the days ahead, he failed to offer a workable program for offensive protection.

Perhaps, the best program for future protection of his group of workers and the means whereby this labor organization can be saved, was offered by George F. McCray, labor editor of the Chicago Defender and the Associated Negro Press, who told these workers frankly and without reserve what they could expect in the future labor movement and that as an independent they had reached the end of their ability to be an activating force in the whole labor world. He stressed the importance of the organization considering their aligning themselves with the more important aggressive forces in the labor movement and that now was the time to take their place in the sun. He decried the dormant, inactive, listless leadership of the Protective Association in all the problems confronting the railroad labor field.

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

By JAMES H. HOGANS

A CONSTRUCTIVE SUGGESTION

Pullman Superintendent J. J. Lambert of New York has suggested a unique and constructive idea for retired porters of the Pullman service to ponder over.

Addressing the members of the Retired Pullman Porters' Association of the New York and Pennsylvania Terminal District recently, at their quarterly meeting, he remarked that he thought it would be a fine thing if the organization would enlarge its scope by making it national in character.

"It is a pleasure to me," said the Pullman executive, "to attend one of your meetings and see so many of you, whom I know, looking so hearty and well.

"I think the object of these meetings is a very commendable thing for the promotion of that contact which you all desire and which contributes in a large measure to the elimination of loneliness that comes with a retired life.

"To my way of thinking, however, you should strive to make your association national in scope, so as to include all retired porters of the Pullman service."

Contacted several days later at Mott Haven Yards, Mr. Lambert explained, in discussing his suggestion, that while his remarks had been purely personal, he thought the Pullman Company would not be averse to giving consideration to the plan once it was effected.

Whether the suggestion will be followed by the association remains to be seen, but Thomas E. Griffin, recently elected secretary, was very much enthused about it, and saw no reason why it couldn't be followed.

He said he thought the Pullman Porters' Benefit Association might be one of the media by which the plan could be launched, as most of the porters are members of the organization.

The [illegible] York Districts are not the only ones, however, which have a retired porters' organization. The three Chicago Districts have one, which was established several years ago.

* * *

PULLMAN BASEBALL

The colored employees of the Pullman car-building plant at Bessemer, Ala., have a baseball team that is "tops," according to Car Builder, official organ of Pullman manufacturing plants.

The team plays in industrial league games sponsored by the YMCA of that city, and is composed of the following:

Jesse Stoutmire, Jesse Dansby, Eddie Hayes, Floyd Ray, Sam Benefield, Harry Kirksey, William Edwards, Charlie Moseley, Alexander Williams, Elon Mims, Ben Washington, Richard Fitts, Grady Zeigler, Henry Dubosse and Ivory Edwards.

James Johnson is the manager and Walter Davis, secretary.

* * *

TRAGEDY

A regrettable tragedy among Pullman porters occurred in the Illinois Central Railroad Station at Chicago, Monday of last week, when John (Jack) Lee, a Boston porter, was crushed to death between a moving train and a station abutment.

An unusually stout man, his train was pulling out of the station when it is reported, he attempted to recover his stepping box after the train had started.

Porter Lee lived at 104 Howland Street, Roxbury, and was one of the best-liked porters in the Boston District.

Funeral services were held Friday morning in his home town.

AFRO-AMERICAN

August 30, 1942

ern States, like Florida, Georgia, and South Carolina.

One of the most popular courses was taught by Dr. Fernando Ortiz, the world-renowned Cuban anthropologist, who loses no opportunity to indicate that there is no scientific basis for believing in "superior" or "pure" races.

No Segregation

As there is no segregation at the university, the colored students participated recently in the varied activities connected with the six-week session.

Tuition here is cheap: $10 per unit. Room and board—and Cuban food is delicious—can be obtained for as little as $20 per month, and the fare from Miami is less than $30 round trip.

PITTSBURGH COURIER

Saturday Sept. 5, 1942

Sleeping Car Porters To Meet In St. Louis

NEW YORK, N.Y., Sept. 3—It was announced at the headquarters of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, New York City, by the international president, A. Philip Randolph, that the third biennial convention of this union will be held in St. Louis, Mo., in the People's Finance building, September 13 through the 19. Delegates will be in attendance at this convention from the 70 or more local divisions, including sleeping car porters, chair car porters, train and coach porters.

The Brotherhood, an international union, offiliated with the American Federation of Labor, recently purchased $25,000 worth of War Defense bonds from the government.

At this convention, the delegates will legislate on matters involving the post-war status of porters, attendants and maids in the railway industry, and will select delegates to the next annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, which will be held in Toronto, Canada in October.

During the time the Brother-

NEW YORK AGE

AUGUST 5, 1942

President Roosevelt Refuses To Meet With Randolph's Committee To Discuss Negro-White Relations

According to A. Philip Randolph, national director of the March On Washington Movement, President Roosevelt refused to grant a conference to a committee of Negro leaders to discuss serious, deepening and threatening racial tensions of Negro-white relations.

Realizing that there is more trouble ahead in the areas of racial relations unless some firm, positive stand is taken by the President to halt the wild, reckless and brutal attacks upon Negro civilians and soldiers, and various forms of discriminations in different parts of the country, and in the armed forces, Mr. Randolph dispatched to the President the following telegram on August 1st:

"In view of the growing intensity of feeling of bitterness and resentment among Negroes because of the recent developments involving Negro-white relations such as Odell Waller execution, the lynching of Negro soldier at Flaggstaff, Arizona, lynching of Negro at Texarkana, Texas and Sikeston, Missouri, and the brutal attack upon Roland Hayes, noted Negro singer, together with discriminations against Negroes in the armed forces, the Government and defense industry, I wish, with a committee of responsible Negro leaders, to request a conference with you at an early date convenient to yourself, to discuss the status of the Negro in the present war emergency in the interest of national unity, effective defense and victory for the United Nations and the cause of democracy. The committee is as follows: Walter White, Secretary, National Association for the Advancement of Colored

(Continued on page 12)

B

NEGRO LABOR NE[illegible] SEPTEMBER 12, 1942

Pullman Porters Convention Will Be Held In St. Louis

NEW YORK CITY—It was announced at the headquarters of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, New York City, President A. Philip Randolph, that the third biennial convention will be held in St. Louis, Mo., September 19th.

Delegates will be in attendance at this convention from the seventy or more local divisions including sleeping car porters, chair car porters, train and coach porters who are employed by the Pullman Company and a number of other railway lines.

To Consider Post War Status

At this convention the delegates will legislate on matters involving the post war status of porters, attendants and maids in he railway industry and will select delegates to the next annual convention of the American Federation of Labor which will be held in Toronto, Canada, in October.

During the time the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters holds its convention, the International Ladies Auxiliary to the Brotherhood whose international president is Mrs. Halena Wilson, will hold its second biennial convention in St. Louis. These will be the largest conventions the Brotherhood and its Auxiliary have held in the history of the movement, stated Mr. Randolph.

The Brotherhood, an international union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, recently purchased $25,000 of war defeense bonds from the government.

NEW YORK AGE

SEPTEMBER 5, 1942

Milton P. Webster Heads Sub-Committee Of FEPC To Probe Railroad Workers Problems

A subcommittee has been set up by the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, and Milton P. Webster, 1st international vice-president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, has been appointed its chairman for the purpose of probing the problems of the Negro railroad workers including firemen, hostlers, brakemen, switchmen, shop crafts, and other related railway vocations, on the question of discriminations practiced against Negroes by displacing them with younger white workers and denying them promotional rights.

Chairman Webster of the Committee is now having a nationwide investigation of these discriminations conducted by competent and expert investigators, and FEPC plans to hold hearings on these discriminations where the officials of railroads and unions will be called for cross-exammination and witnesses allowed to testify with respect to discriminatory practices in the railroad industry on account of race, color, religion or national origin.

All railroad workers who have been victims of any form of discrimination on account of race, color, religion or national origin should communicate with M. P. Webster, chairman of the subcommittee or with the executive secretary, Lawrence Cramer, or the chariman of FEPC, Dr. Malcolm S. McLean, and send in their case backed up with facts and evidence of a personal and documentary form.

The Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters according to A. Philip Randolph, is making an independent investigation of these various forms of discrimination against Negro workers for presentation to the subcommittee of FEPC. This investigation has been carried on by B. F. McLaurin, international field organizer of New York City; T. D. McNeal, international field organizer of St. Louis; and Attorney Harold Stevens of New York City. Recently they completed a trip carrying them to Richmond, Norfolk, Asheville, North Carolina, Savannah, Atlanta, Charleston, Augusta, Jacksonville, Tampa, and Miami, gathering cases of discrimination of the white railroad workers' unions and the carriers.

. . Things Seen, Heard AMONG PULLM EMPL

By J. T

These are the days when you can hear every kind of argument among porters particularly among new men just entering the service. If these new men would only stop and think in terms of their own future they wouldn't pay any attention to some of the things that are being told to them.

I feel that the porters, especially these new men who are being taken on on account of increased demands for Pullman cars should be started off on the right foot. They should be warned of what is waiting for them when they are put in charge of a car whether it is a standard or a tourist car. These men should be impressed with these facts: It is Pullman service that you are rendering and the people that are in your car are Pullman passengers. It makes no difference who they are and where they came from; if they are holding Pullman tickets, they are entitled to Pullman service. Don't look at his clothes or even try to think of his ability to give gratuities; just try to please him and make his trip a pleasant one and get him or them off your car without any complaints. If you don't receive anything from him or them at all you will at least have done your best to make a Pullman passenger out of them. Once we learn the knack of looking at wrong things in the right way we can find a lot of extra fun in life and in folks.

The sad news of the passing of one of our old retired porters has just reached your columnist. I am therefore, passing it on to you. W. Agee, who was retired some time ago, has now passed to the Great Beyond. It was a shock to us of the Pennsylvania Terminal to learn of his passing. It is hard to think that one so highly esteemed by his co-workers should have passed without us being notified. Yet that's what happened. W. Agee was an outstanding character among the P.T. porters. May our loss be heaven's gain.

We are happy to report that porter O. Carpenter is coming along fine in Sea View Hospital. A postal card from his wife states that he has gained eight pounds since he entered there August 14. According to her, they are still draining his wrist. Just when they will operate is not known. But for the benefit of those who would care to write and find out the visiting days, here is the address: O. Carpenter, 111-22 175th street, Jamaica, N. Y. I am sure Mrs. Carpenter will be glad to furnish you with the necessary data.

Dear John: Some rough people have been given the power of smoothing down the troubles of others, like a piece of sandpaper. But don't forget a fish denies the existence of the sea until it is caught. So we take life for granted until we are left high and dry.

M. Harrison, please note: Do not forget that the opportunity of a lifetime must be grasped during the lifetime of the opportunity.

—:o:—

Meatless and fishless Wednesdays in Washington's 32 government cafeterias are expected to save six tons of the two products weekly.

New York Amsterdam News
2340 Eighth Ave.—Phone ACademy 2-7800
Founded December 4, 1909

C. B. Powell—President, Editor and Managing Director
Y. H. N. Savory—Secretary-Treasurer
Dan Burley—Managing Editor
Julius J. Adams—Associate Editor
Lillian Sharpe Hunter—Circulation Manager
David J. Sullivan—Advertising Manager

Owned and published every Saturday by Powell-Savory Corp., publication office, 14 Stockton Street, Trenton, N. J. New York office, 2340 Eighth Avenue. Brooklyn office, 1980 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. Entered at post office of Trenton, N. J., as second class mail matter.

National Advertising Representative, W. E. Ziff Co., offices, 270 Madison Avenue, New York; 608 South Dearborn Street, Chicago.

MEMBERS OF THE AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATION AND ASSOCIATED NEGRO PRESS

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

	1 Year	6 Months
In U. S. A.	$3.50	$2.75
Foreign	5.00	3.50

Saturday, August 1, 1942

Proper Leadership

C. C. SPAULDING is one of our outstanding men in the world of insurance, banking and civic leadership. His recent election to membership on the powerful Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York is one of several national honors which have come to him in a long and constructive career.

When Mr. Spaulding speaks on any question, the nation listens; and his talk on the subject of proper leadership to the Negroes in North Carolina recently is worthy of study beyond the borders of his native State.

Mr. Spaulding said, among other things:

"The American Negro has before him the greatest opportunity in all his history. I am wondering how wisely he will use it. Have we the leadership, the calm, good judgment, to press our claims for justice, to seek every possible opening industrially, civically, yes, but at the same time not to be stampeded into false hopes or present unattainable aims? Many gains can be made now. Others can be lost or greatly delayed if the wrong technique is used. Many advantages will never reach us until we really prepare for them, sacrifice and measure up to their responsibilities.

"I want the same things the radicals want," the white-haired, elderly statesman of the Negro continued. "I want them the same way they want them, but I know from long and wide experience that reason, good judgment and cooperation are far more swift and effective methods than the types of ill-considered pressures which create enmity and stifle cooperation."

There is a need for the calm, good judgment of which Mr. Spaulding speaks and it is all the more pressing because of the growing response of the Negro to radical leadership that would tear down overnight that which has taken years to build. One branch of Negro leadership would condemn opportunity for employment if it is segrated. Another branch would accept jobs for the people under such conditions. One branch of Negro leadership supports the swing of the masses toward racial nationalism; another branch asserts that integration of the Negro into the American system is the only solution. The radical elements in all camps are clamoring to be heard. They are cropping up on all sides with ill-planned, ill-conceived and dangerous proposals which range all the way from national race riots to civil disobedience campaigns throughout the nation.

It is wrong to seize upon situations born in this emergency, and upon acts and words by those in power and to twist these to fit selfish, starry-eyed ambitions and purposes. The misconception of President Roosevelt's Executive Order 8802 is one of which we speak. As we pointed out recently in these columns, President Roosevelt's Executive Order is no social document. It does not open an avenue whereby existing social injustices may be rectified. It is worded carefully, concisely to fit only the purpose for which it was issued: that of getting this country's war industries off the assembly lines and out of the factories as quickly as possible. Read it again:

"I do hereby reaffirm the policy of the United States that there shall be no discrimination in the employment of workers in defense industries or Government because of race, creed, color or national origin. It is the duty of employers and labor organizations to further [illegible] and this order to provide for full [illegible] participation of all workers in defense industries without regard to race, creed, color, or national origin."

It is indeed strange that our leaders did not at once see that the order issued by the President is not the solution of our wider problem for full integration as Americans, socially, economically and politically. Calm, good judgment as advocated by Mr. Spaulding would make it plain that advice from the White House to White America is needed to help us acquire our other objectivs. He could not order such changes in attitudes, because there would be few ears—white, of course—which would listen, let alone obey. Our claims for justice must be made through sacrifice, more sacrifice, and a conscientious measuring up to their responsibilities.

RACE AGITATION BY REDS SUBJECT OF DIES INQUIRY

Charge Communists Aim at Transit Line.

1942

BY JOHN FISHER.

[Chicago Defender Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 1.—The Dies committee is investigating reports of agitation by Communists to raise racial issues in the nation's capital, particularly against the local transit company, it was learned today.

The President's committee on fair employment—on the basis of alleged complaints that the Capital Transit company refused to hire Negro bus and street car operators because of their race—issued an order yesterday directing the transportation company to bring its employment policy into line with the President's executive order that there shall be no discrimination against war workers because of race, creed, color, or national origin.

Disputes Commission's Charges.

The local transportation company had been declared a war industry, thus bringing it under the jurisdiction of the committee on fair employment practices which operates within the War Man Power commission. The company has denied the charges of racial discrimination and declared it hired more Negroes than any other privately owned local transportation company in the nation. It reported 565 Negroes in employment, as about 10 per cent of its total pay roll.

The Dies committee investigation centers on the stabbing here the other day of a bus driver, in which case the assailant, a young Negro, carried Communist literature and admitted attending massmeetings at which speakers identified with the Communist movement urged a campaign against public utilities to demand the hiring of more members of his race, even suggesting violence, according to records of the Dies committee and the police.

Evidence Manufactured.

The assailant disclosed that he had been urged by district Communist leaders to apply to the transit company for employment as an operator. According to Dies committee investigators it was assumed by the agitators that he would be turned down. Then his application and an affidavit by him could be used as evidence to be presented to the President's committee on fair employment.

Investigators said that this theory was borne out by the fact that he told the police he was making $206 a month at his present job, while the pay of a bus driver runs between $120 and $140 a month.

Charged with Slashing Driver.

Following rejection of his application, the man, now in custody, remained standing behind the driver on a bus, refused to heed the driver's request that he move to the rear to clear the aisle for incoming passengers and insisted upon leaving by the front door instead of the rear exit. Finally, when the bus reached a stop the man slashed the driver in the neck with a long [illegible] and fled, but later was appre[illegible] by the police. The driver was [illegible] from a hospital after 11 st[illegible] had been taken in his neck.

The arrested [illegible] was found to carry Commun[illegible]phlets on his person, [illegible]ing 75 new member[illegible]ist party in the Distr[illegible] to replace 75 members o[illegible]ty who had gone into the armed forces of the country, according to the Dies committee and police records.

Attends Communist Meeting.

Also, these records showed that he attended a rally of Negroes here on Nov. 3 at which A. Clayton Powell Jr., Harlem member of the New York city council and a follower of the Communist party line, according to the [illegible] spoke on a simi[illegible]lities in New [illegible] when [illegible]

MAN OF THE PEOPLE

Most inconspicuous figure at Convention sessions, yet the most important man among the throngs was A. PHILIP RANDOLPH, soft spoken mystical-faced man of contrasts.

A full view of Randolph's not easily read face is afforded in the picture to the left, all three shots the excellent work of TRIBUNE photographer Leonard Grimes.

In the bottom left photo are Randolph and his lieutenant, C. L. Dellums of Oakland, second vice president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; and in the last picture, Oscar Soares, boss of local porters shows his chief the books.

24 years ago the most "dangerous Negro in America," A. Philip Randolph is still that

By Almena Davis

Twenty-four years ago, the War Department which caused his arrest for writings in his "Messenger" magazine, called A. Philip Randolph, this year's Spingarn medalist, "the most dangerous Negro in America". Well, today, passing judgement on the same basis which inspired the War Department's description of A. Philip Randolph is still the most dangerous Negro in America.

That is a wonderful thumbnail sketch; at 52 to be considered equally, if not more so, as vigorous, powerful, and [illegible] a force as one was considered at 28. If the War Department, were it constituted as that one of 1918, could be induced to label A. Philip Randolph thusly, "the most dangerous Negro in America today", the phrase would be more [illegible] dolph, schooled in political science and economics, was considered the "most dangerous Negro in America" because he nurtured ideas about the effectiveness of mass action by oppressed minorities. In 1918, A. Philip Randolph, who edited a monthly magazine which he called "the most radical Negro magazine i nAmerica," was called "the most dangerous Negro in America" because he envisioned the importance of the Negro in organized labor and the importance of organized labor to the Negro.

MORE ASSURANCE

In 1942, the only change is that he has seen the [illegible] with no change; his liking for the basic things in men is unaltered.

For instance, "one of the most distinguished men of this generation", comes to Los Angeles and puts up at the comparatively humble Clark hotel. Undoubtedly any hostelry in Los Angeles or Hollywood would welcome him. And during his stays, he is a familiar figure on the Avenue, walking the two blocks from his hotel to the Brotherhood Headquarters; consulting reference books in the Vernon library; attending social fetes, given by persons of all social strata.

His presence in the local Brotherhood headquarters, for all the contrast his appearance [illegible] strangest contrast is his frequent use of the word masses before the "Brothers", and their unamazed acceptance of the broad A. He is dressed with quiet, good taste in a grey suit with spotless shirt cuffs and collar and an equally spotless handkerchief peeping from his breast pocket. His hands are well-cared for; his carriage assured and graceful. But mainly, it's his manner of speaking that is so impressive. He speaks to the least important "Brother" as if he were speaking to the Pullman president; that, undoubtedly, must be why the men worship him, have such confidence in him. His manner toward them is suited to anyone of any rank; they need have no uneasiness that he'll "lay an egg", as one fellow puts it.

MYSTICAL FACE

He has a strange, mystical face, as Philip Randolph has. When he sits writing, his eyes downcast toward the paper, the heavy, smooth lids give his face a sealed look, and when he raises his eyes to [illegible] tor operating, portering.

Marriage came about in 1915 and two years later, he and Chandler Owen launched the Messenger. A year later. Randolph was arrested in Cleveland by the Department of Justice, because of his militant stand against the World War, but released after a few days.

He became an instructor of social science in a private school; ran on the Socialistic ticket for New York Secretary of State; at other times for the Assembly and Congress. As early as 1917, he had organized a union of elevator operators and participated in organizational campaigns.

ORGANIZE PORTERS

Then in 1925, he and a small group launched in a Harlem recreation Center, a campaign to organize sleeping car porters. Randolph was elected president and general organizer. Negotiations with the Pullman company began in 1928 and dragged on until 1937, when A. Philip Randolph signed a contract with the [illegible]

Randolph "most dangerous Negro"

(Continued from Page 5)

wanted it that way, was much less, but with the illness of his wife, the Brotherhood, at one of its conventions, ordered the Executive Board to force an increase on the president. It was raised and raised again at subsequent conventions until now, a recent action, he gets $4,200 per year, plus $7.00 per day for expenses while away from home.

LEGENDS

The legends of Randolph's unusual honesty are, relatively speaking, as numerous as there ar membership cards in the Brotherhood, (8 out of 11,000 porters). There are the glorious stories told of blank, signed checks given him by Pullman officials, which he promptly tore up and deposited in gilt-edged waste baskets at the executives' feet. They must be true for Randolph betrays no evidence of enjoying any illgotten gains and Pullman officials have nothing but respect for and awe of him.

The affairs of the Brotherhood in excellent running order, capably handled in their respective areas by his lieutenants, Randolph has turned his attentions now to mass action of the Negro on the broader front of the entire race. It was his "March on Washington", readers have been told often, which won Executive Order 8802. Outgrowth of that, he has set up "March on Washington" committees in several cities, plans one for Los Angeles.

Touched by genius in dealing with people, nothing but success is anticipated for his latest move. The reason—he knows people en masse, which he (would pronounce faultlessly), or individually. He knows the technique of leadership, which is not to threaten, bluff or cajole into action, but to lead through knowledge of the needs and desires of men.

[illegible] than all 27 of the golden medals which NAACP executives have presented through the years.

In 1918, A., (for Christian sounding Asa), Philip Randolph, Florida-born son of an AME clergyman, was considered "the most dangerous Negro in America" because he challenged the United States' protestations of "making the world safe for democracy" when the raped virgin was in constant terror in the crusader's own domain. In 1918, A Philip Ran[illegible] of many of his ideas and advocates them with more surety and before wider audiences than before, there is little change in A. Philip Randolph, none to make him any the less "dangerous", by War Department standards of 1918.

There is little change in the conduct of the man either. Today, universally admired as "one of the most distinguished leaders of this generation", A. Philip Randolph remains the simple, quiet friendly man he was 24 years ago. His taste for simplicity has met [illegible] present could one succeed in separating him from it, is most exemplary of this. He sits behind the desk in the office, a spotlessly clean office, but a very undecorated one. The desk, presented by the widow of one of the "Brothers", is plain, a mite scarred; the chairs are miscellaneous; the floor linoleum. There are no buzzers; he steps to the door and calls whomever he wants.

A. Philip Randolph is a man who speaks in flawless, almost elocutionary diction; the [illegible] looking beyond you into your future.

Briefly, the chronology of his life is this: born in Crescent City, Fla. Apr. 15, 1889, he spent a poor childhood, in which he helped to earn the family income with odd jobs, and later as a section hand on a railroad.

Completing high school at Mary McLeod Bethune's Cookman Institute, he traveled North, sandwiching in courses in political science and economics between varied jobs; waiting table, eleva[illegible] Company, giving the [illegible] $2,000,000 in pay increases and shorter hours with [illegible] pay.

The fight was financed entirely by porters' funds. Today, the brotherhood is possibly the most solvent of any Negro organization in the country. Including President Randolph's salary of $4,200 per year, it costs over $200,000 per year to run the union; the Brotherhood has almost that much in reserve.

Until a few years ago, Ran-

(Continued on page 7)

[illegible] in 1938 to buy the farm where Ma had lived in slavery. I found the old gentleman, the last of a great family of planters, in a shanty in Sugar Valley. He had been obliged to sell his property many years before and now he lived in penury with his second wife, a nearly lifeless invalid.

Joe Mann came out into his unkempt yard to talk to me. He spoke of Pony, my mother, his first wife's favorite slave.

"You come of a great family for singin'," he said. "Do you remember that song your great-granddaddy made up? It was a song that went, "He never said a mumberlin' word.' "

I told him I had sung that spiritual about the Crucifixion in most of the capitals of Europe.

The song was my great-granddaddy's personal version of the story of Jesus on the cross, a tragedy which had moved him because he, too, was a man of sorrows.

Wasn't it a pity an' a shame,
An' He never said a mumberlin' word,
Wasn't it a pity an' a shame,
An' He never said a mumberlin' word,
oh,
Not a word, not a word, not a word!
Dey nailed Him to the tree,
An' He never said a mumberlin' word,
Dey nailed Him to the tree,
An' He never said a mumberlin' word,
oh,
Not a word, not a word, not a word!

When we were children, mother sometimes seemed cold and hard. She was never unkind, she was never unjust. She simply was thoroughly persuaded of the difference between right and wrong, and she steadfastly refused to relax her moral judgments. My older brothers, if they found her discipline unbearable, took to running away from home. It was hard for us to understand why Ma, who was so jolly when there was no wrong in sight, should be so much more severe with her own children than she was with outsiders.

I remember seeing my mother cry only once, and that was when my sister Mattie, her only daughter, died; and to me, who grew steadily

[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

The Chairman and Members

of the

Executive Board

New York Division

Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters

have the honor to invite you to be present at the Brotherhood Biennial Convention

Labor Dinner

in honor of the Leaders of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters

at the

Mecca Temple

135 W. 55th St. New York City

Monday, September 16th, 1940 at 7 p. m.

R. S. V. P.

Ashley L. Totten,

Int'l. Sec'y. - Treas.

$2.50 the Cover

Leaders of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters
and
The Ladies' Auxiliary

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH	International President
ASHLEY L. TOTTEN	International Secretary-Treasurer
M. P. WEBSTER	1st Int'l Vice-President
BENNIE SMITH	2nd Int'l Vice-President
E. J. BRADLEY	3rd Int'l Vice-President
C. L. DELLUMS	4th Int'l Vice-President
B. F. McLAURIN	Int'l Field Organizer
T. D. McNEAL	Intl. Field Organizer
ERNEST SMITH	Int'l Field Organizer
T. T. PATTERSON	Adjuster of Claims
O. W. BYNUM	Field Organizer
W. F. ROBERTS	Field Organizer

Ladies' Auxiliary

HALENA WILSON	International President
ROSINA C. TUCKER	International Secretary-Treasurer
KATHERINE LASSITER	1st Int'l Vice-President
WILLIE MAE DAILEY	2nd Int'l Vice-President
FANNIE J. CAVINESS	3rd Int'l Vice-President
LETITIA MURRAY	4th Int'l Vice-President

Speakers

MRS. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT - - - Guest Speaker

DR. MARY McLEOD BETHUNE - - Director of Negro Affairs
National Youth Administration

WALTER WHITE - - - - - - - - - - Secretary
National Association for the Advancement of Colored People

JAMES C. QUINN - - - - - - - Secretary-Treasurer
Central Trades & Labor Council of New York

SPENCER MILLER - - - - - Director, Workers' Education
Bureau of America, A. F. of L.

C. L. DELLUMS - - - - - Fourth International Vice-President, B. S. C. P.

●

Musical Program

●

ASHLEY L. TOTTEN,
International Secretary-Treasurer,
Chairman.

Sponsors for the Testimonial Labor Banquet in honor of
The Leaders of the
Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters

MAYOR FIORELLO H. LaGUARDIA
WILLIAM GREEN, President A. F. of L.
Honorary Sponsors

LIEUT.-GOVERNOR CHARLES POLETTI

ROBERT R. MATTHEWS, Chairman
N. Y. Executive Board, B. S. C. P.

DR. E. R. ALEXANDER
JAMES E. ALLEN
W. T. ANDREWS
GERTRUDE E. AYER
ROGER BALDWIN
DOROTHY BELLANCA
MARY McLEOD BETHUNE
BRUCE BLIVEN
JOHN BLOCK
JUDGE JANE M. BOLIN
CHARLES W. BURTON
WILLIAM A. BYRD
CHARLOTTE CARR
EUNICE H. CARTER
FANNIE M. COHN
ELEANOR G. COIT
GEORGE S. COUNTS
HENRY K. CRAFT
FRANK R. CROSSWAITH
JOHN DEWEY
THOMAS B. DYETT
DR. L. M. ERVIN
DR. L. H. FAIRCLOUGH
WALTER FRANK
DR. J. T. W. GRANADY
LESTER B. GRANGER
ARTHUR GARFIELD HAYES
ANNA ARNOLD HEDGEMAN
ADOLPH HELD
T. ARNOLD HILL
REV. JOHN HAYNES HOLMES
PROF. SIDNEY HOOK
JAMES H. HUBERT
REV. WILLIAM LLOYD IMES
MORDECAI JOHNSON
EUGENE KINCKLE JONES
FREDA KIRCHWEY
HARRY W. LAIDLER
RAYFORD W. LOGAN
THOS. J. LYONS
GEORGE MEANY
NEWBOLD MORRIS
FERDINAND Q. MORTON
DR. PETER M. MURRAY
REV. A. J. MUSTE
RHEINOLD NEIBUHR
REV. JAMES MYERS
DR. GODFREY NURSE
JUDGE JACOB PANKEN
WILLIAM PICKENS
FLORIA PINKNEY
LANGDON W. POST
REV. C. B. POWELL
JAMES C. QUINN
ALEX ROSE
JOSEPH SCHLOSSBERG
ADELAIDE SCHULKIND
ROSE SCHNEIDERMAN
GEORGE SCHUYLER
ARTHUR B. SPINGARN
NORMAN THOMAS
OSWALD GARRISON VILLARD
LOUIS WALDMAN
NOAH A. WALTER
JUDGE JAMES S. WATSON
REV. PAUL E. WEST
SARAH WEST
FRANCES HARRIET WILLIAMS
MAX ZARITSKY
CHARLES S. ZIMMERMAN

440

ST. LOUIS TO FEATURE BLACKOUT IN

MOWC GROUP SEEKS TOTAL COOPERATION

Demonstration To Follow Mass Meeting For Democracy

ST. LOUIS—A 15 minute blackout, August 14, will be a feature of the mammoth protest being planned by the St. Louis' March-on-Washington committee, it was announced Saturday, by T. D. McNeal, general chairman of the local committee.

The time for the demonstration has been set for the period between 9 and 9:15 p.m., Central Standard War Time, Friday, August 14, and the cooperation of all Race business places, homes, clubs and individuals is being sought. The blackout will follow the mass meeting.

To further stimulate interest in the meeting and make it one of the most impressive ever staged by the racial group here, churches, social clubs, lodges, and other groups have been asked to cancel all meetings and programs for Friday night, August 14, in order to make it possible for a united front of real magnitude to be presented.

Principal speakers will be Walter White, veteran N.A.A.C.P. leader, Milton P. Webster of President Roosevelt's Fair Employment Practices committee and A. Philip Randolph, recent Spingarn medalist, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and who is father of the "March on Washington" movement.

PITTSBURGH COURIER

August 1, 1942

RANDOLPH PRAISED

Barberton, Ohio — Our group should be thankful for having a man like A. Philip Randolph who has the courage, in face of many dangers, to fight for the rights of his race. It is a pity that we do not have more of his kind. Too many of our leaders sanction jim crowism for personal gain.

H. A. DAVIDSON,
[illegible] Second Street, Northwest

ASK FEPC TO PROBE R. R. BIAS

LOS ANGELES, Calif., July 30—Milton P. Webster, first international vice president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and a member of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, has asked the committee to conduct a thorough and complete investigation of the whole problem of displacement of Negro locomotve firemen by white firemen of lesser seniority rights and the policy of several railroad com[illegible]nies in refusing to hire Negro[illegible] take the place of Negro fir[illegible] who have died or have bee[illegible]d or retired.

The companies involved are Seaboard Air Line, Louisiana and Nashville, Southern, Atlantic Coast Line, Louisiana and Arkansas, Illinois Central, Central of Georgia, The Georgia and a number of others.

The committee is also asked to investigate the secret contracts negotiated by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen with the carriers containing non-promotable clauses which provide that no worker can become a fireman who is not eligible also to become an engineer. Negroes are not eligible to become engineers.

NEW YORK AGE

August 1, 1942

Their Conference In Washington On Virgin Islands Bears Fr[illegible]

Exactly five days after their conference with heads of the Department of the Interior in Washington, D. C., these executives of the American Virgin Islands Civic Association were gratified when the Hon. Guy J. Swope asked Congress for $4,597,000 to build new hospitals and other public health facilities for the Virgin Islands.

Shown [illegible] to right: Dr. Jam[illegible] Ralph J. Bough, Re[illegible] Plaskett, Ashley L. [illegible] Julius A. Thomas, all officers and members of the executive committee of the American Virgin Islands Civic Association.

THE AFRO-AMERICAN, AUGUST 1, 1942

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

By JAMES H. HOGANS

PULLMAN UNAPPRECIATIVE, SAYS READER

According to a Chicago reader, this column recently erred in asserting that, outside of its employment policy, Pullman was impartial in its appreciation and treatment of its colored employees.

In a letter to the column, the reader who signs himself "Fair Play and Square Deal," not only charges the company's management with promotional unfairness, but accusese it of downright racial prejudice.

"Have just read your column in the AFRO-AMERICAN of July 11, as I do each week," he writes, "and find it quite interesting and newsy.

"In the last three paragraphs of that article, in which you touched on the employment policy of the Pullman Company, you made a true statement of the facts, and hit the nail on the head regarding the promotion subject.

"Here in Chicago, there is another instructor who is also tops, when it comes to the technique of mechanics and service, by the name of Clifford Jones, and there are others of outstanding ability that you might know who are making their contribution to the efficiency of the Pullman organization.

"But, despite the long speech of Mr. Harry Guilbert at our memorials this year on the record and contributions of the colored man, I and some others question the sincerety of it all. We like the Double V at home as well as abroad, and would like the theory put into practice.

"Senority, fitness, ability and loyalty mean nothing, it seems for the colored employee. He is stepped over, stepped around and shoved around, regardless of how hard he works or how many hours he puts in.

"There is no hope for promotion, but he is supposed to be both dumb and blind as to what is going on around him.

"On the other hand, the white employee is advanced by leaps and bounds. Furthermore, he is given every consideration in the matter of railroad passes and rates for himself and family, regardless of his length of service.

"I know, for instance, an intelligent and loyal colored employee whose pride and chagrin caused him to refuse the suggestion, when he asked for a Pullman pass for his wife, who was not well and was making a trip to her home, that she ride in the day coach part of her trip and go back to the sleeper at night and buy a berth.

"At one time we were advised to pay for a berth when traveling on personal business and request for a refund for it, but even that consideration is now denied us.

"The irony of it all is that you may get passes for yourself or family over the railroad you operate, but in no case are you given a Pullman pass with such transportation.

"No, Pullman is not appreciative of its colored employees, otherwise its employment and courtesy policies would be much different from what they are."

* * *

GOT WHAT HE WANTED

Although Thornton H. Smith, the New York Pullman porter who was fatally stabbed last week, couldn't realize nor appreciate it, he got in death what he wanted.

A fervent member of the Brotherhod of Sleeping Car Porters, he requested repeatedly that, in the event of death, he wanted the brothers and sisters of that organiaztion to give him a funeral in uniform accompanied by a band.

This wish was respected Wednesday, when the members of the Brotherhod, its women's auxiliary and band, escorted his body from the James Veal's Funeral Parlors to the Memorial Baptist Church, where the rites were held.

* * *

VETERANS' MEETING

The Retired Pullman Porters' Association of New York will hold its quarterly meeting on Monday, August 3, at the Harlem branch of the YMCA, West 135th Street.

All active and retired members of the Pullman service are welcome to the meeting said John H. Mingo, president of the association.

NEW YORK AGE

August 1, 1942

Webster Pushes Case Of Negro Ry. Firemen Before The F.E.P.C.

LOS ANGELES, Cal. — Because of his rich experience and extensive knowledge as a result of long activity in the labor movement as a leader and executive of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, as first international vice-president, M. P. Webster, who is a member of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, officially presented for the consideration of the Fair Employment Practice Committee, the deplorable plight of the colored locomotive firemen on railroads in the Southeast and Southwest of the country, such as the Florida Board Air Line, Louisiana and Nashville, Southern, Atlantic Coast Line, Louisiana and Arkansas, Illinois Central, Central of Georgia, The Georgia and a number of others.

Mr. Webster called for a thorough and complete investigation of the whole problem of displacement of Negro locomotive firemen by white firemen of lesser seniority rights and the policy of these railroads refusing to hire Negroes to take the place of Negro firemen who have died, have been fired or retired. According to Webster, the program will be to hold hearings of the Committee where various parties to this question of the elimination of Negro firemen from the railroads will be brought before the committee for examination and testimony.

"By this method it is hoped that the secret contract negotiated by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen with various railway carriers containing non-promotable clauses that provide that no worker should become a fireman who is not eligible also to become an engineer on the railroad. Since, of course, Negroes are not eligible to become engineers, they cannot become firemen in as much as the next step of promotion from a fireman is that of engineer," stated a Phillip Randolph, who is the chairman of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters Provisional Committee for the Organization of Colored Locomotive Firemen.

AMONG PULLMAN EMPLOYES

By I. R. SEID

We have often wondered just how the retired porter feels after he has been cut adrift from his co-workers. Your columnist went so far as to ask some of these veterans just how they wiled away their leisure hours and what did they do with themselves when these lonesome moments arrived. They all seem to have mapped out a different method for combating their lonesomeness.

W. Aggie and R. C. Frazer, both of Jersey City, and who operated out of the Pennsylvania Terminal up to the time of their retirement, have set up little stationery stores over in Jersey City. They say that this new occupation has taken much out of their loneliness. In fact, they claim that being called upon to answer the many question asked by their little friends who frequently visit their place of business, makes them feel that they are still in the Pullman service.

Harry Stalings, formerly the sign-out man in Sunnyside Yards, when he was taken off the sheet and put back on the road, said that his longing for that contact which he had enjoyed for so many years as sign-out man, made him feel so forlorn that he gave up the road and applied for his pension. After his request was granted, he went down to his home in North Carolina, but he found it much too quiet for the life he had led for so many years in the Pullman service. His longing for that social contact which he had enjoyed in New York City and with the boys soon made him feel lonesome and he gave up the idea that he could spend the remainder of his days in the land where he was born. The last report shows that he is now back in New York and is looking fine.

But here is still another of these old veterans who thought that they had everything all mapped out for that day when they would retire from active service: and he is none other than our old friend, R. A. Ingram. Ingram, as you know, was retired only a few years ago on account of his health, which seemed to have failed him after the death of his wife. He, too, was at one time employed in the sign-out office in Sunnyside Yards and enjoyed a wide circle of friends among the porters operating in and out of the Pennsylvania Terminal District. Before he was appointed porter instructor by J. T. Mitchell, he operated mostly on Pullman private cars. He and P. A. Sample were inseparable. They both were taken off the road, and given positions in Sunnyside Yards. Sample was appointed welfare worker, and special investigator for the Pullman Company and Ingram was given the job as porter instructor and they still were together. Now, Sample is comptroller of the P.P.B.A. of A., out in Chicago and Ingram is spending his lonely hours down in Kembridge, Va. Those of you who would like to write him can do so by addressing him: R. A. Ingram, R.F.D. No. 2, Kembridge, Va. Porter instructor C. P. Loving just received a card from him asking him to send him some papers or magazines. Now boys let's get busy and write our old friend Bob.

Dear John: How could you trust M Harrison to perform such an important duty? Maybe some day you will wake up, and I hope that DAD won't be standing [illegible] What's wrong with our P. T. [illegible] They seem to have [illegible] blame for everything except the inventions on Pullman cars. Don't [illegible]

PITTSBURGH COURIER

STANDARD NEWSPAPER OF THE NEGRO WEST

Main Office . . . . . 2628 Centre Avenue [illegible] Street
Telephone: Mayflower 1401 [illegible] burgh, Pa.

Published at Pittsburgh, Pa., every Sa[illegible]
THE PITTSBURGH COURIER PUBLISHING COMPANY, Inc.

ROBERT L. VANN, EDITOR
(MEMORIA IN AETERNA)

SUBSCRIPTION RATES:
$4.00 Per Year in Advance; $2.50 Per Six Months in Advance;
Single Copy, 10c
Foreign.....$6.50 Canada.....$5.00

Entered as second-class matter at the Pittsburgh Post Office, May 10, 1910, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Incorporated Under the Laws of Pennsylvania, 1910

INTERSTATE UNITED NEWSPAPERS, INC.
National Advertising Representatives
545 Fifth Avenue, New York City — Murray Hill 2-5452

The Pittsburgh Courier does not guarantee either the use or return of unsolicited manuscripts and photographs.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 1, 1942

LABOR AT THE CROSSROADS

The half million organized colored workers undoubtedly read with alarm the warning given by Wayne Lyman Morse, so-called public member of the War Labor Board, at its meeting last week, that the laws against treason will be applied to anyone in a labor organization who tries to bring about work stoppage over jurisdictional disputes.

Nor were they reassured when three days later Roger D. Lapham and Cyrus Ching, industry members of the WLB, called upon Labor to live up to its no-strike vow and appoint an arbiter in a speeific jurisdictional dispute on pain of government intervention.

These are straws in the wind and they indicate in which direction the wind is blowing.

Labor today seems to be at the crossroads, faced with the momentous problem of deciding whether or not it will accept government dictation and control.

There is a war in progress with the earth as the stake, and Labor wants to win that war in order to preserve its nation, its independence of action and its very identity.

On the other hand, Labor is reluctant to surrender its independence of action for fear it may never get it back, being frankly skeptical of the self-sacrificing patriotism and good intentions of many of the erstwhile industrialists, financiers, merchants and corporation lawyers who are heading the managerial revolution in Washington.

Labor realizes that it is only a short step from considering a jurisdictional strike treasonable to considering ANY strike treasonable; the reasons for outlawing the one being as cogent as the reasons for outlawing the other, so far as the central authority is concerned.

It is chiefly a matter of opinion, and things being as they are, Labor has a good idea what and whose opinion will prevail.

There is a widespread feeling in the ranks of organized labor that once the right to strike is surrendered, it will eventually lose all the advantages and privileges gained by a century of sacrifice.

This is not, of course, a racial problem specifically, but it nevertheless concerns a half million colored workers, three-fifths of whom have entered the ranks of organized Labor since 1937 and profited by increased wages, shorter hours and vacations with pay.

Undoubtedly Labor would be more willing to relinquish its prerogatives if the vast war production effort were being more largely directed by its elected officials with industrialists and managers subordinated to them rather than the other way around.

The slowly gathering drive for a ceiling on wages, ostensibly to halt inflation, does nothing to weaken Labor's apprehension.

HEIL RANKIN!

Soldiers and sailors of the United States are risking their lives on a dozen battlefronts across the face of the earth, but Representative Rankin of Mississippi struggled hard last week to prevent them from voting in the November elections.

He and his poll tax compatriots from the lower South fought all day on the floor of Congress against what Rankin called "the beginning of an attempt to destroy the election laws of the States."

The fear of the Rankinazis was that through the proposed law, the black men risking their lives on land and sea might be privileged to cast ballots for candidates in the forthcoming election with possible dire results for the incumbents who now misrepresent them in Congress.

Rankin harped that the provisions of the proposed law violated the rights of sovereign States, and his associated Rankinazis echoed him at every turn, to the disgust of representatives from democratic areas who naturally favored the bill.

Nevertheless, the tactics of the Rankinazis succeeded, for while the House passed the bill, it protected the poll tax in eight States against wartime suspension by a 2-to-1 vote.

So a black soldier who has faced hell in New Guinea, Egypt, England or Australia, and a black sailor who has withstood showers of bombs, will not be able to vote in the next election in the poll tax States unless they remembered to pay the tax out of low wages or no wages before being drafted or enlisting to fight for democracy.

The unreconstructed South has won another victory. Heil Rankin!

A DEMOCRATIC, EFFICIENT UNION

In the very near future workmen in the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company will have an opportunity to vote for a collective bargaining agency, at a National Labor Relations Board election. This election is one of a series at the properties of the United States Steel Corporation. Every such election held to date has gone overwhelmingly in favor of the United Steelworkers' of America, an affiliate of the CIO, which is headed by Philip Murray, one of the outstanding labor leaders in the history of the American labor movement.

Thousands of Negroes are employed in the Tennessee Company; more thousands are employed in other U.S. Steel subsidiaries. It is to those workmen which we direct this message.

The United Steelworkers' of America, formerly the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, is the only union ever to unionize the gigantic steel industry. There are nearly 1,000 steel companies under contract, which employ nearly 600,000 workmen. Wages of steel workers have been raised to the point where the common labor rate is the same as the average rate of six years ago! And the Union has just won another 5½-cent-an-hour wage increase in "Little Steel" which it will extend to United States Steel companies.

The Union's record in protecting workmen through seniority, in winning vacations, in establishing machinery to settle grievances peacefully is equally impressive.

The publishers of this paper in Pittsburgh are well acquainted with Mr. Murray and many other leaders of this Union. We know that they are out to improve the welfare of ALL the workers in steel, regardless of race or creed.

It is noteworthy to recall what the National War Labor Board said about the United Steelworkers of America, in handing down the recent award in the "Little Steel" case. This is worth remembering:

"The Union asking for security in this case is worthy of the freedom and responsibility of a voluntary and binding maintenance of union membership and check-off. The United Steelworkers' of America, on the record, is one of the most democratic, responsible

EDITORIAL

By GEORGE S. SCHUYLER

(This column represents the personal opinion of Mr. Schuyler, and in no way reflects the editorial opinion of The Pittsburgh Courier.—The Editors)

Along with Horace Cayton and Marjorie McKenzie, I am concerned about the future of hte NAACP, the March-On-Washington movement, and the general leadership of the Negro masses in the current crisis. Mr. Cayton reports that the recent NAACP confab was just another talkfest ending with the usual resolutions, and I can well believe it, knowing the whole routine from A to Z by heart. However I do not share the Cayton view that the March-On-Washington movement is any threat to the NAACP, more's the pity.

It seems to me to be time for some plain speaking about this whole matter of leadership, and I am glad that it is coming in for more careful analysis.

* * *

The March-On-Washington movement is A. Philip Randolph. Mr. Randolph knows how to appeal to the emotions of the people and to get a great following together, but there his leadership ends because he has nowhere to lead them and would not know how if he had. Every person has his or her limitations, and of course Randolph has his. He has the Messianic complex, considerable oratorical ability and some understanding of the plight of the masses, but the leadership capacity and executive ability required for the business at hand is simply not there. The original March-On-Washington move is now admitted to have been a failure else the current agitation would not be necessary. Moreover there is no organizational set-up or observable administrative ability to keep the M.-O.-W. movement alive and functioning. Organization is not merely a matter of ballyhoo and oratory, it is a science, and one that is largely a closed book to Mr. Randolph. Mass leadership in times like these also requires a little more guts than any of the Negro leaders possess. I know of none willing, like Nehru and Gandhi, to go to jail.

* * *

The March-On-Washington movement is no threat to the NAACP, but that is not saying so much for the NAACP. Despite all the drool about how many Negroes Garvey organized, the fact remains that the NAACP has organized more Negroes for group progress than any movement in American Negro history. However, the fact that after 30 years it can muster no more than 70,000 members out of 13,000,000 people is a sad reflection on its program and its leadership. It could have had and should have a million members but it stubbornly persists in pursuing a course that fails to capture either the imagination or the support of the wide masses of Negroes. Its structure which was basically bad in 1909 when it was founded, has not been changed. It is still doing something FOR Negroes rather than WITH them. It has been against all those things that any normal Aframerican is against, but it has construed "advancement" too narrowly. It has become known as a "protest" organization, almost always on the defensive, waiting for something to happen. What few offensives it has launched have been none too impressive.

* * *

The NAACP suffers the initial handicap as a mass organization of being run by a self-perpetuating oligarchy which the members have no means of swerving or influencing. Consequently it is not as responsive to the wishes of its members as it would be were it democratic. Effective opposition to any administrative policies is therefore impossible.

The Association is swathed heavily in the mantle of tradition and is still run as if we were back in the dear, dead days before and after World War I. It "slept" the great opportunity it had to represent the Negro workers of the country within the Labor Movement. It "slept" the great opportunity to foster and direct a campaign of consumer co-operative education and organization among Negroes. It failed, until recent years, to have any sort of youth movement, and now that it has one it has no program. Its educational program has been scarcely visible and extremely inefficient. Although half the Negroes are in agriculture, it has never had any program for them save to protest the broiling of some hapless oaf. Its campaign for educational equality has been a real bright spot, succeeding because it is positive and touches masses of people personally. With two million Negroes in domestic service, however, it has neither message nor machinery for them.

* * *

As a group we have been advancing two steps and slipping back three. Segregation is more nationwide than ever before. The "blood theory" is more rampant than ever. Social ostracism is the order of [illegible] and social pollution leaves clutter but

"Victory Is Vital to Minorities"

Thirty-Third Annual CONFERENCE

of the

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION

FOR THE

ADVANCEMENT

OF

COLORED PEOPLE

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

JULY 14—JULY 19, 1942

•

REGISTRATION BUREAU

and

CONFERENCE HEADQUARTERS

Second Baptist Church

2412 Griffith Avenue

Please Preserve This Program

248

LOS ANGELES BRANCH OFFICERS

President.....THOMAS L. GRIFFITH, JR.
First Vice-President.....REVEREND L. G. ROBINSON
Second Vice-President.....WALTER L. GORDON
Third Vice-President.....DR. H. CLAUDE HUDSON
Secretary.....ZELLA M. TAYLOR
Financial Secretary.....GEORGE A. BEAVERS, JR.
Treasurer.....DR. ALBERT A. BAUMANN
Program Director.....HAZEL WHITAKER

Executive Committee: Fay E. Allen, Edward C. Atkinson, Charlotta A. Bass, Dr. S. M. Beane, Reverend J. L. Caston, Arthur Cole, Floyd C. Covington, Elizabeth St. Charles Edwards, Clarence O. English, John E. Hargrove, Augustus F. Hawkins, Charles H. Matthews, Loren Miller, Clarence Muse, Claude E. McKinney, A. J. Williams, Clarence S. Smith, Frederick M. Roberts, Baxter S. Scruggs, and J. H. Shackelford.

CONFERENCE COMMITTEES

General Conference Committee: Reverend L. G. Robinson, Chairman; Mrs. Hazel Whitaker, George A. Beavers, Jr., Dr. H. Claude Hudson, Mrs. Charlotta A. Bass, Clarence O. English, Edward Atkinson, Mrs. Gertrude Hicks, and Dr. S. M. Beane.

Finance Committee: Albert A. Baumann, Chairman; Baxter S. Scruggs, J. H. Shackelford, H. A. Reeves, Rev. Frederick D. Jordan, Clarence S. Smith, Samuel W. Thompson, Claude E. McKinney, Thomas J. Duckett, Mrs. D. L. Funchess, and Rev. Clayton D. Russell.

Housing Committee: Mrs. Ethel Atkinson, Chairman; Mrs. Jessie Terry, Mrs. A. C. Richardson, Mrs. Harriett Harrison, P. C. Parks, Mrs. Ella B. Johnson, Mrs. Harriett White, Walter L. Gordon, Sr., Edward Hawkins, F. M. Pitts, Mrs. Vassie Brown, Mrs. Gerald C. Moore, Mrs. Joseph Oliver, Mrs. Arthur Browning, Mrs. Clarissa Matthews, Mrs. Lola Beavers and Mrs. Tommie L. Reeves.

Registration Committee: Mrs. Zella M. Taylor, Chairman; Mrs. Lessie Postell, Mrs. Alice Cunningham, Miss Mary Dudley, Mrs. Theodosia Hampton Washington, Mrs. Georgia Hardimon, Mrs. Lillian Fentress, Mrs. Irene Bradford Terrell, and Mrs. Pansy Harangue.

Information Committee: Reverend J. L. Caston, Chairman; Samuel W. Thompson, LaVolta Phelps, William D. Smith, Reverend Eugene Robinson, J. H. Crump, Lorenzo Bowdoin.

Publicity Committee: John Kinloch, Chairman; Loren Miller, Leon H. Washington, Jr., Gilbert Lindsey, Almena Davis, James Erwing, Harry Levette, Lawrence LaMar, Mrs. Mattie Stafford, Fay M. Jackson, J. Cullen Fentress and William T. Smith.

Music and Program Committee: Hazel Whitaker, Chairman; Hall Johnson, Samuel Brown, Gilbert Allen, Noreen Forney, Anna Griffith Morrow, George R. Garner, Dr. Thomas King, Mrs. A. C. Harris Bilbrew, Madame Mozelle Te Outley, William Gillespie, Parker Scott, and Mrs. Zelma Duke.

Citizens' Committee: Frederick M. Roberts, Chairman; Mrs. Elizabeth St. Charles Edwards, Mrs. Mabel V. Gray, Dorothy Guinn, Dr. E. I. Robinson, Dr. N. Curtis King, Mrs. Jessie Coles Grayson, William Bowers, Louis M. Blodgett, Frank A. Harvey, J. L. Hill, William H. Johnson, Norman O. Houston, T. A. Greene, P. N. Lester, Attorney Crispus A. Wright, William H. Nickerson, Jr., Dr. A. A. Foster, Attorney Ivan James Johnson, III, Floyd C. Covington, Mrs. Bessie Burke, Reverend A. Wendell Ross, Attorney Clarence A. Jones, Assemblyman Augustus F. Hawkins.

Welcome Committee: Reverend Frederick D. Jordan, Chairman; Rev. J. Raymond Henderson, Mrs. Nellie V. Conner, Dr. Mahlon C. Cooley, A. J. Williams, Dr. Jerome G. Hatcher, Mrs. Della Williams, Mrs. Emma Spencer, Mrs. Frances Comfort, Mrs. I. V. Lawson, O. R. McMillan, Mrs. Mary E. Talbert, Mrs. Ruby Stapler, Mrs. Lillie Baker, Reverend Herbert A. Foster, S. P. Johnson, Rev. Frank A. Harris, Cleveland Morrow, Mrs. Viola McLemore, Julius A. K. Ficklin, Juanita Miller, Horace Clark, Arthur Browning, John Fowler, Clinton Rosemond, J. M. Edwards, Mrs. Ida Aldridge, Mrs. Mary Lee Grimes, Supervisor Gordon L. McDonough, Homer L. Garrott, Mrs. Margaret Scott, and the following clubs and fraternal organizations: Alta Qualidad Social, Smart Set, Delta Sigma Theta, Phi Beta Sigma, Alpha Phi Alpha, Kappa Alpha Psi, Zeta Phi Beta, Omega Psi Phi, Graduate Nurses, Outdoor Life and Health Association, Five and Over Charity, Phys-Art-Lit-Mo, Prairie View College Social, 7th Regiment, California State Guard, and Women's Political Study Clubs of California.

Decoration Committee: Mrs. Faustina Johnson, Chairman; Alma Frances, William S. Gillespie, Elijah Cooper and Negro Florists of Los Angeles.

Transportation Committee: John E. Hargrove, Chairman; Malmore Hibler, James Parker, William Bryant, Mr. Pearl, Al Robinson, Elmo Dinkins, Ray Matthews.

Souvenir Program Committee: Jimmie Smith, Chairman; Fay M. Jackson, Josephine Brown, Anita Grant.

Usher Committee: Walter Marshall, Chairman; and the Union Usher Board of the City of Los Angeles.

GENERAL INFORMATION

THE CONFERENCE HEADQUARTERS AND REGISTRATION BUREAU will be located at Second Baptist Church, 2412 Griffith Avenue. Registration fees $1.00. Mail and telegraph service will be maintained at the registration offices. Registration entitles one to an official badge and admission to all sessions and entertainments of the conference.

MEETINGS.—All mass meetings during the week will be held in Second Baptist Church. The Sunday mass meeting will be held at Shrine auditorium.

BUSINESS SESSIONS.—All business sessions will be held in Second Baptist Church.

LENGTH OF SPEECHES.—Speakers at mass meetings are requested to observe as closely as possible the time limit of thirty minutes.

Speakers at the business sessions are requested to observe the time limit set by the chairman.

HOURS OF MEETING.—The evening mass meetings will begin promptly at 8:00 o'clock, with the musical program lasting one-half hour. Promptly at 8:30, the platform party will take its place upon the rostrum and speakers will begin. The morning sessions will begin at 9:00 o'clock and will run through until 12:00 o'clock noon, except where noted in this program. The afternoon sessions will begin at 2:00 P.M. and run until 4:30 P.M.

RATES.—Upon registering, persons from out of town will be assigned to stopping places which have been thoroughly investigated by the housing committee. Stopping places in private homes will be $1.00 per person, and for two persons, $1.50. If the delegate wishes to eat breakfast only, the price will not exceed 50c per meal. There will be a food concession in the church which will serve meals for 50c.

ENTERTAINMENT.—An introductory period will be held at Second Baptist Church, Tuesday evening, 6:00 to 8:00 P.M., prior to the evening mass meeting of the conference.

The Senior and Junior branch will give a dance at the Shrine Pavilion Saturday, July 18, 11:00 P.M. All delegates will be admitted free.

The branch has arranged a sight-seeing trip followed by a barbecue at Val Verde, California, Saturday afternoon, 3:00 P.M.

ANNUAL REPORT.—The thirty-second annual report (for 1941) of the N.A.A.C.P. will be on sale—price 10 cents per copy.

GROUP PHOTOGRAPH.—On Friday, July 17, at 12:15 o'clock noon, a photograph of all delegates, members, and visitors will be taken. The photographer will exhibit proofs Friday afternoon, and orders can be placed for delivery before leaving Los Angeles. The price of the photograph will be $1.00.

CRISIS.—The July issue of the official organ of the N.A.A.C.P., The Crisis, will be on sale. Annual subscriptions may also be placed. By the year $1.50. Single copies, 15 cents. Books by and about Negroes will be on display and may be ordered through the Crisis Book Shop, 69 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

MUSIC.—The N.A.A.C.P. expresses herewith its appreciation to the choruses and the individual artists who are contributing their musical talents.

OPENING MASS MEETING

Tuesday, July 14, 8:00 P.M.

Second Baptist Church, 2412 Griffith Avenue

THOMAS L. GRIFFITH, JR., Los Angeles, Calif., Presiding

8:00-8:30—MUSICAL PROGRAM

Combined Choirs of the Second Baptist Church

Madame Mozelle T. Outley and Anna G. Morrow, Directors

Josephine Cooper, Soloist

INVOCATION.....REV. J. RAYMOND HENDERSON

The National Anthem

Welcome Address for the State of California

GOVERNOR CULBERT L. OLSON

Welcome Address for the Los Angeles Branch

THOMAS L. GRIFFITH, JR., President

"Lift Ev'ry Voice and Sing".....AUDIENCE

ADDRESS.....ROY WILKINS, Assistant Secretary, New York, N. Y.

Benediction.....REV. BAXTER C. DUKE

OPENING BUSINESS SESSION

Wednesday, July 15, 9:00-12:45 Noon

Second Baptist Church, 2412 Griffith Avenue

N. W. GRIFFIN, Jacksonville, Fla., Presiding

THE NEGRO IN THE WAR EFFORT

A. Civilian Defense, Health and Welfare

Crystal Bird Fauset, Office of Civilian Defense, Washington, D. C.

Dr. James J. McClendon, Detroit, Michigan

Thomas N. Roberts, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

B. The Armed Services

Appointment of Committees: Credentials, Resolutions, Time and Place

2:15 P.M.-5:15 P.M.

SIDNEY R. REDMOND, St. Louis, Mo., Presiding

C. Employment and Training

Amos T. Hall, Tulsa, Oklahoma

George M. Johnson, Jr., Assistant Executive Secretary Fair Employment Practice Committee, Washington, D. C.

Walter T. Hardin, UAW-CIO, Detroit, Michigan

MASS MEETING

Wednesday, July 15, 8:00 P.M.

Second Baptist Church, 2412 Griffith Avenue

C. L. DELLUMS, Oakland, Calif., Presiding

8:00-8:30—MUSICAL PROGRAM

Senior Choir First A.M.E. Church

Jester Hariston, Director

INVOCATION.....REV. F. D. JORDAN

Address.....MRS. CHARLOTTA A. BASS, Editor, California Eagle, Los Angeles, California

"Lift Ev'ry Voice and Sing".....AUDIENCE

Address.....DR. MALCOLM S. MACLEAN, Chairman President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, Washington, D. C.

Benediction.....FATHER H. R. MOORE

BUSINESS SESSION

Thursday, July 16, 9:00—12:00 Noon

Second Baptist Church, 2412 Griffith Avenue

DR. J. C. MCKELVIE, Long Branch, N. J., Presiding

PROTECTING CIVIL RIGHTS DURING AN EMERGENCY

. Under the Federal Civil Rights Statutes

Thurgood Marshall, New York, N. Y.

11:45 A.M.—Meeting of the National Board of Directors

2:00 P.M.-4:30 P.M.

LIONEL BARROW, New York, N. Y., Presiding

B. Under State Statutes

1. Civil Rights Statutes

   Thomas L. Griffith, Los Angeles, California
   Walter Gordon, Berkeley, California

2. Criminal Defense

   Roscoe Dunjee, Oklahoma City, Okla.

3. Police Brutality

   Carl Johnson, Kansas City, Missouri
   Mrs. Lillie M. Jackson, Baltimore, Md.

NOTE: Both sessions will deal with the technique of handling these different problems with ample time for discussion from the floor.

YOUTH NIGHT

MASS MEETING

Thursday, July 16, 8:00 P.M.

Second Baptist Church, 2412 Griffith Avenue
JOHN KINLOCH, Los Angeles, California, Presiding

8:00-8:30—MUSICAL PROGRAM
Gilbert Allen Youth Singers
Gilbert Allen, Director

INVOCATION.....REV. KARL E. DOWNS

Address.....E. FREDERIC MORROW, New York City

"Lift Ev'ry Voice and Sing".....AUDIENCE

Youth Night Address.....REV. JAMES H. ROBINSON,
Member, National Board of Directors, New York, N. Y.

Awarding of Essay Contest Prizes.....WALTER WHITE, Secretary
N.A.A.C.P., New York, N. Y.

Benediction.....REV. H. MANSFIELD COLLINS

BUSINESS SESSION

Friday, July 17, 9:00-12:00 Noon

Second Baptist Church, 2412 Griffith Avenue

E. FREDERIC MORROW, New York, N. Y., Presiding

STRENGTHENING THE N.A.A.C.P. AS AN ORGANIZATION

A. The Washington Bureau

Walter White

B. Conducting Membership Campaigns

Mrs. Daisy E. Lampkin, Miss Ella J. Baker, Randall L. Tyus, Madison S. Jones

C. The Bulletin, The Crisis, and Publicity

Roy Wilkins

12:15 Noon—CONFERENCE PHOTOGRAPH

2:00 P.M.-4:30 P.M.

DR. J. J. MCCLENDON, Detroit, Mich., Presiding

D. Regional and Branch Executive Secretaries (Employed)

Gloster Current, Detroit, Michigan

E. Fund Raising Activities

Eardlie John, New York, N. Y.

F. Youth Work

Madison S. Jones, Jr.

G. Awarding of Thalheimer Prize, Merit Scrolls and Life Membership Medals

MASS MEETING

Friday, July 17, 8:00 P.M.

Second Baptist Church, 2412 Griffith Avenue

MISS YOLANDA BARNETT, Louisville, Ky., Presiding

SPINGARN MEDAL NIGHT

8:00-8:30—MUSICAL PROGRAM

People's Independent Church of Christ Choir

Mrs. A. C. Harris-Bilbrew, Director

Elihue Sloan, Soloist

INVOCATION.....REV. CLAYTON D. RUSSELL

Presentation of 27th Spingarn Medal to A. Philip Randolph

BISHOP J. A. GREGG, Kansas City, Kansas

Acceptance.....A. PHILIP RANDOLPH, International President, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, New York, N. Y.

"Lift Ev'ry Voice and Sing".....AUDIENCE

Benediction.....REV. E. W. RAKESTRAW

BUSINESS SESSION

Saturday, July 18, 9:00—12:15 P.M.

Second Baptist Church, 2412 Griffith Avenue
GEORGE M. JOHNSON, Washington, D. C., Presiding

I. Election of Members of Nominating Committee

II. Report of Resolutions Committee

III. Report of Time and Place Committee

MASS MEETING

Sunday, July 19, 2:30 P.M.

Shrine Auditorium

MRS. DAISY E. LAMPKIN, Pittsburgh, Pa., Presiding

2:30-3:00—MUSICAL PROGRAM

Festival Negro Chorus of Los Angeles

Hall Johnson, Conductor

INVOCATION ..... DR. S. M. BEANE

The National Anthem

ADDRESS ..... WALTER WHITE, Executive Secretary, N.A.A.C.P.

"Lift Ev'ry Voice and Sing" ..... AUDIENCE

ADDRESS ..... WENDELL L. WILLKIE

"God Be With You Till We Meet Again" ..... AUDIENCE

Benediction ..... BISHOP WILLIAM A. WASHINGTON

YOUTH CONFERENCE PROGRAM

With the exception of the meetings listed below, the youth delegates will join the senior delegates in business sessions and mass meetings.

Tuesday, July 14

10:00 P.M.—Reception to Youth Council delegates

Wednesday, July 15

9:00-10:30 A.M.—Election of delegates to Committees

Time and Place Committee

Resolutions Committee

Conference Credentials Committee

Thursday, July 16

9:00 A.M.-12:30 P.M.—Youth Council Problems

Report of Activities

N.A.A.C.P. Youth Program

Friday, July 17

9:00-10:30 A.M.—Youth and Post War Problems

Reports of Committees

5:30-7:30 P.M.—Youth Council Banquet

Roy Wilkins, guest speaker

LIFT EV'RY VOICE AND SING

Lift ev'ry voice and sing
Till earth and heaven ring,
Ring with the harmonies of Liberty;
Let our rejoicing rise
High as the list'ning skies,
Let it resound loud as the rolling sea.
Sing a song full of the faith that the dark past has taught us,
Sing a song full of the hope that the present has brought us.
Facing the rising sun of our new day begun,
Let us march on till victory is won.

Stony the road we trod,
Bitter the chast'ning rod,
Felt in the days when hope unborn had died;
Yet with steady beat,
Have not our weary feet
Come to the place for which our fathers sighed?
We have come over a way that with tears has been watered,
We have come, treading our path thro' the blood of the slaughtered,
Out from the gloomy past,
Till now we stand at last
Where the white gleam of our bright star is cast.

God of our weary years,
God of our silent tears,
Thou who has brought us thus far on the way;
Thou who hast by Thy might
Led us into the light.
Keep us forever in the path, we pray.
Lest our feet stray from the places, our God, where we met Thee,
Lest our hearts, drunk with the wine of the world, we forget Thee,
Shadowed beneath Thy hand,
May we forever stand.
True to our native land.

Words by JAMES WELDON JOHNSON
Music by ROSAMOND JOHNSON

Copyright by Edward B. Marks Music Co.
R.C.A. Building, Radio City
New York, N. Y.

PROGRAM NOTES

PROGRAM NOTES

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Atlanta	Dr. N. C. McPherson
	Eugene M. Martin
Baltimore	Carl Murphy
Birmingham, Ala.	Dr. E. W. Taggart
Boston	Dr. John B. Hall
Charleston, W. Va.	T. G. Nutter
Chicago	Earl B. Dickerson
	Bishop W. J. Walls
Cleveland	Hon. Harry E. Davis
	L. Pearl Mitchell
Des Moines, Ia.	S. Joe Brown
Detroit	Louis C. Blount
Falls Village, Conn.	Dr. William Allan Neilson
Ithaca, N. Y.	Major Robert E. Treman
Los Angeles	Thomas L. Griffith, Jr.
Newark, N. J.	Grace B. Fenderson
New York	Lillian A. Alexander
	Dr. Allan Knight Chalmers
	Marion Cuthbert
	Hubert T. Delany
	Douglas P. Falconer
	Lewis S. Gannett
	John Hammond
	Rev. John Haynes Holmes
	Dr. William Lloyd Imes
	Hon. Herbert H. Lehman
	Dr. O. Clay Maxwell
	Mary White Ovington
	Hon. Charles Poletti
	A. Philip Randolph
	Rev. James H. Robinson
	Col. Theodore Roosevelt
	Amy E. Spingarn
	Arthur B. Spingarn
	Hon. Charles E. Toney
	Dr. Elizabeth Yates Webb
	Dr. Louis T. Wright
Oklahoma City	Roscoe Dunjee
Peekskill, N. Y.	Alfred Baker Lewis
Philadelphia	Isadore Martin
Pittsburgh, Pa.	Homer S. Brown
Richmond, Va.	Dr. J. M. Tinsley
St. Louis	Sidney R. Redmond
Topeka, Kans.	Hon. Arthur Capper
Washington	William H. Hastie
	Dr. Charles H. Thompson
	Frances Harriet Williams

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION
for the
ADVANCEMENT OF COLORED PEOPLE

69 Fifth Avenue, New York

NATIONAL OFFICERS

President
Arthur B. Spingarn

Chairman of the Board
Dr. Louis T. Wright

Acting Chairman of the Board
Hon. Charles E. Toney

Vice-Presidents
Mary McLeod Bethune
Nannie H. Burroughs
Godfrey Lowell Cabot
Hon. Arthur Capper
Dr. Walter Gray Crump
Bishop John A. Gregg
Rev. John Haynes Holmes
Manley O. Hudson
Hon. Ira W. Jayne
Hon. Caroline O'Day
Rev. A. Clayton Powell
Oswald Garrison Villard
William Allen White

Treasurer
Mary White Ovington

EXECUTIVE OFFICERS

Walter White, Secretary
Roy Wilkins, Assistant Secretary and Editor, "The Crisis"
Thurgood Marshall, Special Counsel
Daisy E. Lampkin, Field Secretary
Ella J. Baker
E. Frederic Morrow
Randall L. Tyus
Assistant Field Secretaries
Charlotte B. Crump, Publicity and Promotion
Madison S. Jones, Jr., Youth Director
Frank D. Reeves, Administrative Assistant, Washington Bureau
Richetta G. Randolph, Clerk of the Conference

FOR VICTORY
BUY
UNITED STATES
WAR BONDS
AND STAMPS

THE MILWAUKEE JOURNAL TUESDAY, AUGUST

Cotton picking time

Photo From "Fair Is Our Land"

The Green Pastures of Roland Hayes

Famous Negro Tenor Recalls the Days on a Georgia Farm When He Learned Plowing and Singing From His Pappy; and Learned Perseverance From His Thrifty Mother

The childhood story of the little Negro boy who in later years has become one of the great tenors of his race — Roland Hayes — is told in the current issue of Atlantic Monthly. The following excerpts are from Hayes' verbal report, as set down by his friend and Brookline (Mass.) neighbor, Dr. MacKinley Helm.

My father never liked the 10 acre farm where I was born. Nevertheless he was a good worker—under compulsion. When he had to, he could straddle row upon row of young cotton plants, between daylight and dark, and chop the soil with his hoe in a frenzy of sustained, if impatient, performance. After a day of such passionate labor he felt, I suppose, the need of a durable rest, and the next morning he would find himself a comfortable place in the shade.

Pa taught us children to plow behind an ox named Ned, who wore a bell of a size and bigness of tone which our small farm never quite seemed to require for purely locative reasons. I early suspected my mother of having fixed that bell to Ned's collar so that she might be assured of the continuity of his employment.

One hot midsummer day, when Pa had been put to work with the ox in the cornfield, Ned's bell began sounding out an unusual rhythm. Ma, who ever kept both ear and eye upon the problems of our straitened domestic economy, sharply reminded Pa, across the width of field, of the absolute indispensability of his patriarchal occupation. Presently the bell jingled again with obedient regularity.

Ma, thinking to reward Pa with a mollifying dipper of cool water from the spring, went out to him in the heat of the afternoon. She found him taking his ease under a shady tree. There he sat, smoking his pipe and contriving, with a rhythmical motion of his wrist, to produce from a tethered cowbell a convincing imitation of Ned at work.

* * *

The forests, not the fields, furnished my father with his substantial contribution to our daily bread. At break of many a day in the fall of the year he would appear from the hunt with meat to eat and skins to be traded for salt and flour from the outside world.

What with the meat Pa fetched from the hills, to supplement Ma's careful husbandry of the produce of the farm, I do not remember that we children—I had six brothers and sisters—ever went hungry. A few steps from the kitchen door stood a smokehouse with a pit for curing hams and flitches of bacon and sausages. We stuck our hogs just before Christmas, and through the long month of January we tended a hickory fire whose smoke filled the aromatic chamber where the meat was hung, done up in muslin and wired to the rafters. I cannot remember a season, while my father lived, when there was not a piece of smoked meat to flavor our food—the string beans and fresh corn that we ate in summer, and the rice and potatoes of our scantier winter diet.

In my childhood I admired my father's wonderful gift for making music. I believed there was no sound in nature that he could not imitate. His voice brought deer, bear and partridge within range of his gun. He taught me to identify the songs of birds, himself repeating and answering their melodies over and over again.

In transactions with untamed life, my father made an offering of his whole nature. When he called a deer, he was a buck himself. It is perfectly clear to me now that he opened the way for me to become a musician by showing me how to offer my body, in imitation of him, to receive the music which he taught me to discover in the natural world. I learned from my father how the body follows the imagination.

I early learned from my father to let my imagination do fluently what many singers have learned to do only through the repetitive use of destructive vocal exercises. I am 55 years old now, and yet, because my father taught me that the body follows the mind without stress and strain, I am conscious of no wear and tear on my vocal equipment.

* * *

Although my mother did not like to have my brothers go to breakdowns, where corn likker and bad girls circulated freely, she was willing to let us enjoy diversions invented by church members. And above all, we learned to make parties of the routine events of our lives.

Occasionally, when I was a boy, I was allowed to watch the dancing at the Garlington house or at the John Tate farm. Church people could go to those dances without taking part, but frequently they would be moved to give themselves to dancing and rioting. Then they were likely to be reported to the deacons and brought before the elders, who would exhort them to repent. Unrepentant members were turned out of the church forthwith.

Will Garlington blew the quills at the Garlington dances, and Ren, his brother, one of the neighborhood toughs, cracked the bones and called the sets. The elderly itinerant musician, Jim Kirby, who boarded at our house when he was in the Flatwoods—I called him Uncle Nat—played the fiddle and beat straws, and Jesse Tate picked the banjo.

Many of the musical instruments and a good deal of the music were of African origin. Quills are joints of bamboo, tied together with string in an arrangement like the pipes of Pan. You blow across the open tubes and produce tones like those of a steam piano or calliope, but mellower.

In Africa a bone cracker cracks real bones, but in Georgia we used simulacra carved from hickory wood. A good bone cracker can crack bones with both hands, clacking out the rhythms required for buck and wing dancing. I learned to blow quills and my brother Robert beat straws, so that, although we were not often allowed to go to the Garlington house, we could make music of our own when Uncle Nat was stopping with us.

So closely contiguous were the sacred and profane worlds in the Flatwoods that their music was nearly identical. To be sure, there were different texts, inequalities of mannerism, gesture, and vocal expression, and conflicting emotions. Yet, curiously enough, there was very little overt lewdness in the secular songs. Coarseness appeared in them only by implication. There was the "Roustabout Song," for example:

> Rock me, Julie, rock me,
> Rock me like a baby,
> Rock me slow and easy.

The melody went like a spiritual. With the substitution of the holy name for "Julie," you might have had a characteristic religious song. You had to know — you could not have discovered it from words or music — that the singer was thinking about a night he had spent with his girl.

In my childhood I knew a considerable number of African songs, but when I went North I forgot them, and it was not until I began to meet native African musicians in Europe, many years later, that I was able to recall the old melodies laid away in the bottom drawers of my mind. It is the greatest misfortune that so little original African music has survived among us—the earthy, natural music that our forebears brought with them in slave vessels from the dark continent.

* * *

Most of what I know about my ancestors I learned from the stories my mother told me. Ma was a woman of great character, and she was more and more dependent upon the solid rock of her character, she was soft and warm only once. The last time I saw her she broke through her devout reserve for a single moment, after more than 15 years of resistance to my vocation, and said, "Son, you are the continuation of me."

* * *

Pa was hurt in a logging operation on Horn's mountain, so grievously that his body could not be mended. He died in my mother's arms. Stilled utterly, the fine, lusty voice that people stopped to listen to when he called hogs down from the mountain; cold and quiet in death the nimble fingers that had been quick and skillful to furnish a house for his family; mercifully abated the terrifying pain; and ready for its rest the racked body.

The funeral past and done, Ma took stock of our condition. She calculated that it would be a good two years of hard work for all of us before we could pay off the debts which had accumulated while Pa was sick. Then she could take us to the city for the serious business of getting us an education for life. Ma hired an additional piece of land from Babe Hendricks, across the lane from the home farm. My brother Robert and I — I was 11 — were obliged to leave school and go to work on the new piece. We burned it off and planted it on shares. I learned to plow in that field.

In a field on Babe Hendricks' own place, where I worked for wages when I was not busy at home, my mother one day caught me preaching to Molly, a blind horse we had bought after Ned, our old ox, died. She heard me out, all the way through the "Dry Bones" sermon from the book of Ezekiel; and then she came out from her hiding place behind a cornstack.

"Son," she said, "I am glad to hear you singin' all dem Bible words. I'm glad you listen to what de preacher says in church. Now get along to yo' work, and try to earn yo' 50c."

After Pa died, there were times when we desperately needed meat and flour and had no money in the house to pay for them. It was at that time, although I could not confide everything to her, that I began to think of my mother as a tower of strength. If she was severe, she was also righteous and strong, and I leaned upon her strength. I needed then and later—although I do not profess always to have understood that need—not kindness so much as discipline. Many a peremptory rebuff lay ahead of me. I was a timid, perplexed, uneducated Negro boy. I had to learn [illegible] be a man in a world in which [illegible]ege is reserved for children o[illegible]rent complexion.

MRS. BASS BLASTS A. P. RANDOLPH

MRS. CHARLOTTA A. BASS . . . EAGLE editor, who jolted the Annual Conference of the NAACP and set the tenor of all its deliberations following her address, as she blasted the position of A. Philip Randolph and his March on Washington Movement. More than two intervening news columns separate Mrs. Bass and Randolph (across page). Full text of the editor's speech appears on this page. "It may," said one observer, "change the history of the Negro people in America."

'FASCISM MUST BE WIPED FROM FACE OF EARTH,' MRS. BASS TELLS NAACP

Calmly assaulting the divisionist position of A. Phillip Randolph and the March on Washington Movement, the speech of Mrs. Charlotta A. Bass, EAGLE editor, delivered before nearly 4,000 jolted spectators at the second session of the Thirty-third Annual Conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People will "rank as one of the historic statements of the American Negro people." Full text of the address follows:

(Note: Speech delivered by Mrs. Charlotta A. Bass, editor of The California EAGLE, to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, July 15, 1942, at Second Baptist church, Los Angeles.)

We are gathered here tonight [illegible] great decision for the whole free world. Our armies stretch from the blazing sands of Egypt to the wastes of Australia, from the battle lines of the noble Russian defense to the blue vastness of the Pacific. Our enemy is unmatched throughout history as the symbol of all things men hate, loathe, and despise. He is the counter-revolution to every people's movement from Bunker Hill to the barricades of St. Petersburg. He is the foul breath of mankind degraded beyond all imagination. He annihilates one million human beings because they are Jews. He turns twenty free nations into a league of the enslaved. He calls Negroes half-apes. He considers the Emancipation Proclamation the greatest mistake in American history.

If such, then, is the nature of our enemy, the theme of this convention, "Victory Is Vital to Minorities," is justified. Above and beyond and over all else, the United Nations must win this war, for if it is lost, not only freedom, but the right to fight for freedom, is lost. It is lost for the whole world. It is lost to India and China, Africa, and Alabama. We, as Negroes, must force ourselves to a realization of the awful stakes for which the current conflict is fought. We must ask ourselves, if it is lost, who will rule America? The answer we know in our hearts. America will be ruled by the very Fascists whom we detest in our national life today. It will be ruled by Gov. Eugene Talmadge, Father Coughlin, the Ku Klux Klan, Gerald L. K. Smith, Joe Rankin, Bilbo, Dies, Hitler, Tojo, Mussolini, Goebbels, Goering, Goebbels and Gestapo.

Let us, then, be realistic. Let us, like Paul Revere, ride and shout the alarm to every Negro home that the Fascists are at our gates ready to ride in and take over the minds and souls of our people. Let us, like Patrick Henry, thrill our people with the fact that we have a choice between life and death, that we can choose life for our people and our children only by the ultimate sacrifice of our lives, if necessary, and that we are willing to make that sacrifice in order that our people may be free.

Let us, like Thomas Paine, call upon our people to arise from their lethargy because the forces of tyranny are at our door. Let us, like Abraham Lincoln, remind our people that we cannot live as a half-free people in a world where more and more people are being made free. Let us remind our people that they cannot be free while others are slaves. Let us remind our people that if they do not fight to be free, they will be slaves to the Fascists.

Let us remind our people that the Fascists are our enemies from within, that they are the agents of our enemies from without, that they are the ally of our enemy who seeks our destruction, our slavery, our death. Let us remind our people that the Fascists are those who would betray our country for a mess of pottage, those who would betray their birthright for a place in the kitchen of our enemy, those who would betray their birthright for a place at the table of our enemy with our women as their concubines.

Let us remind our people that the Fascists are those who would betray our women into the houses of our enemy, that the Fascists are those who would betray our children unto the slave ships of our enemy, that the Fascists are those who would betray our souls unto the slave market of our enemy.

Let us remind our people that the Fascists are those who would betray our souls unto the slaughter pen of our enemy, that the Fascists are those who would betray our souls unto the furnaces of our enemy, that the Fascists are those who would betray our souls unto the torture chambers of our enemy, that the Fascists are those who would betray our souls unto the Gestapo of our enemy.

Let us remind our people that the Fascists are those who would betray our souls unto the Devil himself, that the Fascists are those who would betray our souls unto the Devil Hitler, that the Fascists are those who would betray our souls unto the Devil Hitler for a place at his table, that the Fascists are those who would betray our souls unto the Devil Hitler for a place at his table as his concubines.

Let us remind our people that the Fascists are those who would betray our souls unto the Devil Hitler for a place at his table as his concubines, that the Fascists are those who would betray our souls unto the Devil Hitler for a place at his table as his concubines

Saturday, September 12, 1942

NEW YORK AGE

While Labor Leaders Confer With President, Negroes Cannot Get A Hearing, A. Philip Randolph Says

"While William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, and Philip Murray, of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, confer with President Roosevelt on matters affecting labor, the Government and the war whenever some condition arises which in their judgment requires a conference, upwards of twenty million Negro Americans who are making the supreme sacrifice in the war for the victory of the United Nations, cannot get a hearing with the Commander-in-Chief of their country," A. Philip Randolph told reporters in the national headquarters of the March On Washington Movement here in New York City, on Friday.

"The question of the right of the Negro to confer with the President on questions involving the interest of the Negro people, the war, and the Government has become a paramount and central issue," says Randolph. "To use the refusal of the President to meet with representatives of the Negro people in conference is tantamount to the recognition of of the Negro as second class citizen, and the Government a policy long advocated by Southern political demagogues that Negroes have no rights that white people are bound to respect. While a single conference with the President itself is not so important since no miracle can be wrought through such a conference, the right of conference with the President in the interest of the Negro people through representtaives of Negroes who are Negroes is fundamental to the recognition of Negroes as full-fledged American citizens," Mr. Randolph continued.

"At the present time when the President wants to discuss matters vital to the status of Negroes in the war effort, he calls upon William Alexander, chief of Minority Groups Service in the War Manpower Commission or Dr. MacLean and Lawrence Cramer, chairman and executive secretary of the Fair Employment Practice Committee, who are white men. While these men have the highest character and command the widest respect of the Negro people throughout the country for their splendid and constructive work in the interest of the Negro people, nevertheless, not being Negroes, they cannot accurately and properly tell the President of the true state of feeling of the Negroes about this war and the treatment of the Negroes by the Government," Mr. Randolph said.

"Only Negroes can tell the president this," he declared. "It is for this reason that the Negroes must wage an uncompromising crusade to demand no only a conference with the President, but the right of conference with the President at any time when in the judgment of the Negro people themselves, such a conference is necessary, taking into consideration of course the burdens of the President during the state of war.

"If the President can see a representative or representatives of other groups in this country, despite the many problems of this war emergency, it is right and fair, and proper and necessary that he should see representatives of the Negro poeple in conference, on matters affecting the Negro, the Government and the war," concluded Mr. Randolph.

Make 'Freedoms' Count For Race, Porters Plead

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 17—The Brotherhood of Sleeping Car, Train, Chair Car, Coach Porters and Attendants, under the theme of winning the war and holding present gains, are in their 17th anniversary and third biennial convention here. The meeting was opened Sunday afternoon, when an overflow crowd attended the mass meeting at Lane Tabernacle CME Church, with Rev. N. W. Clark, pastor.

WEBSTER PRELATES WORK OF FEPC

Milton P. Webster of Chicago, first international vice-president, and a member of President Roosevelt's Fair Employment Practices Committee, told of the work of the Brotherhood in launching the "March on Washington" movement and of the many advances that have been made possible through this effort.

Mrs. Helena Wilson of Chicago, international president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, was vociferously applauded when she told of the important work the women were doing in the struggle for economic emancipation, and how the "housewives" program can do much to help win the war by conserving materials.

"The greatest strikebreaker in the world is a man's wife," was another telling statement of President Wilson as she plead for the wives to stick together, and, if they had to take man's place in the war effort at home, to get ready to do so. She cited the difference between the $50 per month the porters once got and the $113 now received, translating it into terms of added property, bonds, clothes, and home comforts.

RANDOLPH GIVEN GREAT OVATION

An ovation was given President Randolph, who responded with a speech that outlined the purposes of the 1942 meeting, to study ways and means of preserving the gains that have been made to date by the Brotherhood and the "March on Washington Movement," and to make sure that the Four Freedoms come to the Negroes as well as to others, who are fighting this Great Fight of All Fights to quash the dictatorships and make the peace that is to follow something real for all.

Business sessions are being featured daily with the Ladies Auxiliary sessions opening Thursday morning, at the Wheatley branch YWCA.

Pittsburgh Courier

Negroes Greeted at Kaiser's—By Union Discrimination

Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, regional director here of the War Man Power Commission, was working last night to solve a problem of discrimination that arose when 30 Negroes reported for work in the first batch of New York workers at the Henry J. Kaiser West Coast shipyards.

Mrs. Rosenberg

The Negroes refused at first to sign up when they were told by AFL union agents after their transcontinental trip, that the only work for them was as painters' helpers or laborers. Later 29 of the Negroes signed on these terms and U. S. Employment Service (USES) officials and Kaiser representatives in Portland went to work on breaking down the ban.

Officials Hopeful

Officials were hopeful that an agreement could be reached shortly whereby Negroes in the Kaiser yards would be admitted just like whites to all jobs confined to men. The Negro haters of the union insisted they would hold out in classifications in which women were employed.

The lone dissenter was asked to remain in Portland, without working, at the company's expense, until the union ban on Negroes had been adjusted, but he refused.

Mrs. Rosenberg said that the AFL union with which Kaiser has a contract and to which all his workers must belong had assured her office, before the USES took over the Kaiser hiring here, that Negroes would be employed in all categories.

Clears Company

"The Kaiser company does not discriminate," she said.

From other sources, it was learned that Mrs. Rosenberg had refused to fill the original order for men for the Kaiser job when she learned that no Negroes could be accepted into the union. Later, in the belief that this barrier had been removed, the USES took over the hiring.

Here's how they left New York, only to meet Jim Crow unionism on the Coast.

Here's What Happened At Portland

By Cecelia Ager

PORTLAND, Ore.—The 490 New Yorkers aboard the Henry J. Kaiser shipyards special arrived here this morning, Kaiser-like, five minutes ahead of schedule. Four hundred and sixty of them were happy men. The other 30 had been tactless enough to be born with black skins.

Cecelia Ager

It seems there was a misunderstanding. All the men aboard signed up in New York City as laborers, with assurance they would be classified according to crafts upon arrival. But union representatives and company personnel officials boarded the train this side of St. Paul and began their job then and there.

According to Marion Hill, spokesman for the Negro group, the union representatives threaded their way through the cars, in which there had been no segregation, reclassifying the white men without experience as helpers in the various crafts, but ducking that procedure with the Negroes. The Negroes were finally informed, Hill said, that they first would have to qualify for reclassification.

Since many of the white men on the train had no previous mechanical experience, and at least 19 of the Negroes could qualify as boilermakers' helpers on the basis of actual experience, and five of them already held union cards with affiliated AFL locals in the East and had those cards right with them to prove it, it began to look to those 30 men as if they had been deliberately misled.

Getting off the train they were sure of it. While the others were assembled in groups according to their reclassified status to receive the employment slips and be photographed for their shipyard identification badges, the 30 Negroes were told they could sign up as:

¶ Painters' helpers at 95 cents an hour.

¶ Laborers at 88 cents an hour.

That's all. That's the way it is. Sorry. Seven signed up, or "renegged" as Hill put it. What nobody apparently told these men was that anywhere along the line from the moment they were born they hadn't what used to be called a Chinaman's chance to join Local 72 of the AFL Metal Trades Dept.

For the Kaiser yards here have a closed-shop agreement with Local 72, and Tom Ray, secretary and absolute monarch of Local 72, turns even whiter with controlled rage at the merest suggestion that maybe he might admit Negroes to his union, maybe.

After seven of the 30 Negroes signed up, the company announced that it had arranged lodgings for the other 23 for the night, and started discussions of the problem.

Early tonight, Mike Miller, general manager of the Kaiser yards, said that all of the 23 had signed up as helpers or laborers.

Half an hour later, Hill denied that he had signed, although he said nine of the others had signed as painters' helpers and 13 as laborers.

He said he had talked by phone from Miller's office to Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, and Monroe Dowling of the USES in New York. Hill said they had tried to persuade him to stay on until they could straighten out the situation. He refused, and said he was returning to New York. He said he had been given $10 for expenses and a ticket by Miller.

Hill said that he did not want to cause trouble to either Kaiser or the war effort, but that he did want to "crack open" the discrimination of Local 72.

The Negro workers all were quiet and orderly, they enjoyed their box lunch and the ship-launching the company quickly arranged for the workers to see. They say the trip out was fine. And the rest of the guys on the train were good guys.

They all lived to get here in peace and a lot of harmony, for one of the Negroes had brought his guitar.

Memo to Tom Ray

"It is fundamental that the life of no American soldier—of any race or creed or color anywhere in the world—shall be put in jeopardy because of the prejudice of any employer, any worker—or any employers' or workers' organization anywhere in America. —PAUL V. McNUTT, War Man Power Director.

The Pittsburgh Courier SATURDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1942

ONS TO BE INVESTIGATED BY AFL

AFL UNION AGENTS REFUSE TO ALLOW NEGRO PAINTERS

Negro Labor News -- Oct 10/42

NEW YORK CITY—The refusal of AFL union agents to permit 30 Negro workers imported to Oregon this week by the Kaiser Shipyards to sign up as anything but painters' helper and laborers is boon to Axis victory, the NAACP said. In a wire to William Green, at A. F. of L convention in Toronto, Canada, said:

"National Association for Advancement of colored People hopes that convention of American Federation of Labor will unequivocally condemn attitude taken by Local 72 of A. F. of L. Metal Trades Department of Portland, Oregon, and of Tom Ray, its secretary, who attempted to prevent Negro workers for Kaiser's shipyard from working except as painters' helpers and laborers.

"We ask American Federation of AFL Asked To Remove Color Bar

Labor to go further and not only condemn color bars in all A. F. of L. unions where they exist but to take unequivocal and concrete action to eliminate such restrictions on pain of expulsion from the American Federation of Labor. Any action short of this would stulify American Federation of Labor both with respect to its asking privileges and immunities for white workers while denying them to Negro workers and also because barring needed workers from war industries directly contributes to Axis victory, which would lead to enslavement of all workers."

Mrs. Rosenberg Lauded

Learning that Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, regional director of the New York War Manpower Commission, had at first refused to fill the Kaiser order because of the unions anti-Negro stand and had taken the order only when she was informed that the barrier had been removed, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People commended Mrs. Rosenberg on her forthright action against labor union discrimination and expressed the hope that other officials will follow her example.

Along with 460 white workers, the 30 Negro workers arrived at the Henry J. Kaiser Shipyards on October 1. The union representatives boarded the special train on which there had been no segregation and reclassified the white workers without experience as helpers in the various crafts. Many of the white men on the train were without previous mechanical experience.

Of the 30 Negroes at least 19 could

Most Negroes Could Qualify for Jobs qualify as boiler makers' helpers on the basis of actual experience, and five already held union cards with affiliated A. F. of L. locals, but the Negroes were allowed to sign up only as painters' helpers at 95 cents an hour or as laborers at 85 cents an hour.

At first the Negroes refused to sign up, but later all but one signed as helpers or laborers. Marion Hall, the Negro who refused to sign returned to New York. He was given a return ticket and $10 for expenses by the general manager of the Kaiser yards.

LOS ANGELES TRIBUNE

October 12, 1942

Randolph asks AFL for anti-discrimination council

TORONTO, C.—A. Philip Randolph, international president and M. P. Webster, first international vice-president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, delegates to the A. F. of L. Convention, introduced a resolution calling for the establishment of a Minorities Committee On Discrimination on account of race, color, religion, or national origin, before the body Tuesday. A similar committee has been set up by the CIO.

The resolution which had not been passed at press time, reads:

WHEREAS, it is necessary that the complete manpower of the nation be mobilized for use in the armed forces and defense industries for the victory of the United Nations and since discrimination on account of race, color, religion, or national origin is a bar to this effort; therefore, be it

RESOLVED, that the 62nd convention of the A. F. of L. set up a minorities committee composed of representatives of the various minority groups in the A. F. of L. such as Negroes, Jews, Catholics and others, for the purpose of thoroughly exploring the question of discrimination practiced against minority groups of unions affiliated with the A. F. of L. and various industries with a view to mapping out plans and maknig recommendations to the Executive Council and subsequent conventions to abolish these forms of discrimination as being against sound trade union principles and giving aid and comfort to Fascism in America, and it be further

RESOLVED, that the President of the A. F. of L. be authorized, in cooperation with the Executive Council, to set up a minorities committee on discrimination on account of race, color, or national origin, to investigate various forms of and cases of discrimination that may be presented to it or that may come to its attention in any way, and that funds be provided for transportation and stenographic services and other incidental expenses to the carrying out of the purposes of this resolution of the complete abolition of discrimination in unions affiliated with the A. F. of L. and it be further

RESOLVED, that this committee plan a systematic educational progarm among the members and officials of the A. F. of L. for the enlightenment of the workers on the necessity and value of unity in the labor movement without regard to race, color, religion or national origin.

Referred to Committee on Resolutions.

Says Green Will Order End Of Ban Upon Race

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 8—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, will make immediate investigation of charges that union officials are discriminating against Negroes in the Kaiser shipyards, according to a spokesman for the AFL early this week.

An agent for Henry J. Kaiser and his Portland, Oregon, shipyards came to New York recently with instructions to hire 20,000 workers. For some time, the agent signed hundreds of laborers—skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled—but no Negroes.

JIM CROW AGAINST NEGROES

The oversight was quickly called to the attention of federal government officials and also to high union officials and it was learned that Local 72 of the AFL's Boilermakers' Union, a unit of the Metal Trades Department recently meeting in Toronto, was refusing to classify Negroes—including the 30 out of a list of 490 hirelings arriving in Portland from New York a few days ago, who were restricted to work as laborers and painters' helpers. Kaiser, it has been confirmed, has a closed-shop contract with Local 72.

The prevailing pay-schedule for the two groupings in which Negroes were granted permits to work were painters' helpers at 95 cents an hour and laborers at 88 cents an hour.

EVEN SKILLED NEGROES SNUBBED

The "joker" turned out to be the fact that while many of the white men on the special train bearing the mixed group of workers to the Portland shipyards were definitely non-skilled, at least 19 of the Negroes were skilled and qualified as boilermakers helpers on the basis of actual experience, while five of them already held union cards with affiliated AFL locals in the East and had those cards with them to prove it.

These cases of superior classification of Negroes over white workers in the group from the East made no material difference. The most skilled of them were told they would have to work out painters' helpers and laborers—"or else."

ANTI-NEGRO UNI

Seventeenth Anniversary

and

THIRD BIENNIAL CONVENTION

Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters

Train, Chair Car, Coach Porters and Attendants

★ - ★

"A Winner Never Quits
and
A Quitter Never Wins"

Saint Louis, Missouri
September 13-19, 1942

Officers

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH.....International President
ASHLEY L. TOTTEN.....International Secretary-Treasurer
M. P. WEBSTER.....1st International Vice-President
BENNIE SMITH.....2nd International Vice-President
E. J. BRADLEY.....3rd International Vice-President
C. L. DELLUMS.....4th International Vice-President

Lay Members of International Executive Board:

A. R. Dailey, Joe Benoit, Henry Yates
T. T. Patterson, Jack Mills, James Bell, Sr.
H. Murphy (deceased)

International Field Organizers:

Ernest Smith, Chicago
B. F. McLaurin, New York City
T. D. McNeal, St. Louis

Mass Meeting Program

Sunday, September 13th, 1942
Lane Tabernacle C. M. E. Church, Newstead and Enright Aves
3:00 P. M.

Chairman, T. D. McNeal, International Field Organizer

Star Spangled Banner.....Assembly
(Led by Choir)

Invocation.....T. T. Patterson
(Claim Adjuster—Eastern Zone)

Welcome Address.....Rev. N. W. Clark
(Pastor, Lane Tabernacle)

Welcome Address.....Joseph P. Clark
(President Central Trades and Labor Union)

Greetings.....E. J. Bradley
(3rd Vice-President)

Singing—"Hold The Fort".....Assembly

Introduction of National Officers

Solo "O Divine Redeemer"—Gounod.....Miss Josephine Buck

Address.....Milton P. Webster
(Chairman International Executive Board)

Selection ..... Choir

Address.....A Philip Randolph
(International President)

"We Shall Not Be Moved".....Assembly

— BUY U. S. WAR BONDS AND STAMPS —

Convention Sessions

5th Floor, Peoples Finance Building, 11 N. Jefferson Avenue

REGISTRATION: Monday, September 14th; 9:30 to 10:30 A. M.

FIRST SESSION: Monday Morning, September 14th; 10:30 A. M.

SECOND SESSION: Monday Afternoon; 2:00 P. M.

THIRD SESSION: Tuesday Morning; 10:00 A. M.

FOURTH SESSION: Tuesday Afternoon; 2:00 P. M.

BIG SOIREE for DELEGATES and MEMBERS
Tuesday Night, 9 'til 1, 5th Floor of Finance Building . . . Your Badge Is Your Ticket

FIFTH SESSION: Wednesday Morning; 10:00 A. M.

SIGHT-SEEING TOUR FOR DELEGATES
Leaving Headquarters at 1 P. M. Wednesday

SIXTH SESSION: Thursday Morning; 10:00 A. M.

SEVENTH SESSION: Thursday Afternoon; 2:00 P. M.

Big 17th Anniversary and Convention Cabaret
Dance at Castle Ballroom. Ewing and Olive Sts.
10 P. M. to 2 A. M., Thursday Night
Admission $1.10 including tax

EIGHTH SESSION: Friday Morning; 10:00 A. M.

— BUY U. S. WAR BONDS AND STAMPS —

SONGS

The Star-Spangled Banner

Oh, say, can you see, by the dawn's early light
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming?
Whose broad stripes and bright stars through the perilous fight,
O'er the ramparts we watched were so gallantly streaming?
And the rockets' red glare,
the bombs bursting in air
Gave proof thro' the night that our flag was still there.
Oh, say does that star-spangled banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free,
and the home of the brave?

Oh, thus be it ever when freemen shall stand Between their loved homes and the war's desolation;
Blest with victory and peace,
may the Heav'n rescued land
Praise the Pow'r that hath made and preserved us a nation!
Then conquer we must, when our cause it is just;
And this be our motto:
"In God is our trust!"
And the star-spangled banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free,
and the home of the brave.

★ ★

We Will Not Be Moved

(Tune of "I Shall Not Be Moved")
Chorus:
We will not, we will not be moved
We will not, we will not be moved
Just like a tree planted by the waters,
We will not be moved.

Randolph is our leader,
We will not be moved,
Randolph is our leader,
We will not be moved,
Just like a tree planted by the waters
We will not be moved.

The union is our protection
We will not be moved
The union is our protection
We will not be moved
Just like a tree planted by the waters
We will not be moved.

Because we are united
We will not be moved
Because we are united
We will not be moved
Just like a tree planted by the waters
We will not be moved.

Hold The Fort

We meet today in Freedom's cause
And raise our voices high;
We'll join our hands in Union strong,
To battle or to die.

Chorus

Hold the Fort for we are coming
Union men be strong
Side by side we battle onward
Victory will come.

Look! my comrades, see the Union
Banners waving high,
Reinforcements now appearing,
Victory is nigh.

See our numbers still increasing
Hear the bugles blow
By our Union we shall triumph
Over every foe.

Fierce and long the battle rages,
But we will not fear
Help will come when'er its needed
Cheer, my comrades, Cheer

Trade Union Committee to Abolish Discrimination on Account of Race, Color, Religion or National Origin

Resolution No. 12—By Delegates A. Philip Randolph, Milton P. Webster, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

WHEREAS, It is necessary that the complete manpower of the nation be mobilized for use in the armed forces and defense industries for the victory of the United Nations and since discrimination on account of race, color, religion, or national origin is a bar to this effort; therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That the sixty-second convention of the A. F. of L. set up a minorities committee composed of representatives of the various minority groups in the A. F. of L. such as Negroes, Jews, Catholics and others for the purpose of thoroughly exploring the question of discrimination practiced against minority groups by unions affiliated with the A. F. of L. and various industries with a view to mapping out plans and making recommendations to the Executive Council and subsequent conventions, to abolish these forms of discrimination as being against sound trade union principles and giving aid and comfort to Fascism in America, and be it further

RESOLVED, That the President of the A. F. of L. be authorized, in co-operation with the Executive Council, to set up a minorities committee on discrimination on account of race, color, religion or national origin, to investigate various forms and cases of discrimination that may be presented to it, or that may come to its attention in any way, and that funds be provided for transportation and stenographic services and other incidental expenses to the carrying out of the purposes of this resolution of the complete abolition of discrimination in unions affiliated with the A. F. of L., and be further

RESOLVED, That this committee plan a systematic educational program among the members and officials of the A. F. of L. for the enlightenment of the workers on the necessity and value of unity in the labor movement without regard to race, color, religion or national origin.

Referred to Committee on Resolutions.

Chicago Defender 10/3/42

Dining Car Workers Ask Wage Boost

Dining car unions affiliated with the Joint Council of Dining Car Workers demanded Sept. 25 that 47 class A railroads increase pay 20 cents per hour and allow a union shop.

The demands made upon the carriers were provoked by the increased cost of living said a union spokesman, and because of the low mimimum wage of the railway industry which is lower than 80 per cent of defense industries.

The demands stated:

"We propose that you agree that all employees represented by the organization who are eligible for membership in this organization shall become members in good standing of this organization within 60 days from the date of this proposal is accepted and made effective and shall remain members in good standing of this organization as a condition precedent to continued employment; provided that these conditions shall apply to employees hired after date they are effective, but these employees will be allowed a period of 90 days from the date hired to secure such membership.

"The increase in rates of pay we propose and request is that all wage rates now in effect be increased 20 cents an hour provided that no employee shall be paid a rate of less than 70 cents per hour. Piece work, tonnage or other methods of payment to be adjusted to give effect to these proposed increases."

CHICAGO DEFENDER

October 3, 1942

AFRO-AMERICAN

October 4, 1942

afro 10/4/42

Mrs. Roosevelt, LaGuardia Back R.R. Firemen's Fight

NEW YORK. — The fight to save jobs long held by colored locomotive firemen on Southern railroads has gained the support of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Mayor LaGuardia of New York, according to A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

The First Lady will serve as honorary chairman of the brotherhood's provisional committee for organization of these firemen, Mr. Randolph said, and LaGuardia as its chairman.

White Union Blamed

Colored firemen are being gradually eliminated from these jobs, the committee points out, through practices of the white Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, which has assumed the role of bargaining agent of all such employees, although it bars colored workers from membership.

Under its contract with some of the roads, colored firemen may not bid on a new run or a run on which a colored fireman died or from which one has been retired or discharged. Veteran firemen are being displaced by whites with as little as a year's service.

PITTSBURGH COURIER

October 10. 1942

Pittsburgh Courier Oct. 10, 1942

RANDOLPH SAYS 'DIES LIED ON RACE LEADERS'

NEW FORK, Oct. 1—In the international headquarters of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, A. Philip Randolph stated that there was a definite conspiracy of southern politicians to smear Negro leaders with the hope of discrediting them with the American people which will serve to give the demagogues of the South wide field to spread their poison of prejudice throughout the nation.

He pointed to the attack of Martin Dies on the respected and able leaders such as Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune of the National Youth Administration, William Pickens of the U. S. Treasury, E. Franklin Frazier, sociologist of Howard university and Dr. LeRoy Holmes of Howard university, attempting to connect them with the Communist Party and Communist front organizations.

—VV—

PEOPLE'S VOICE

October 3, 1942

People's Voice Oct 3, 1942

Randolph Elected 17th Time By Porters' Third Convention

ST. LOUIS—The third biennial convention of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters closed at the end of last week in St. Louis, Mo. "It was the largest in the history of the porters' union, which was born 17 years ago in New York City," stated international officers at convention headquarters. A. Philip Randolph and all incumbent officials were reelected.

The convention backed the fight of the United Nations against the axis powers and demanded that Negroes continue the fight for their democratic rights at home during the war.

Negro workers and the Negro masses were urged to organize to advance and defend their rights in the post-War world.

Resolutions endorsed the March On Washington Movement, the fight of India for independence, the Fair Employment Practice Committee, calling for its restoration to complete independence, with responsibility to the President; the abolition of discrimination in the armed forces, the government and defense industry. "Officers and members of the brotherhood were urged to put 10% of their wages into defense bonds," said International President Randolph.

The Ladies' Auxiliary to the brotherhood held its Convention simultaneously under the leadership of Helena Wilson of Chicago.

13 • DAILY NEWS, MONDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1942 ★★★

Urge Randolph For Labor Post

The appointment of A. Philip Randolph, International President of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, as one of labor's representatives on the new Economic Stabilization Board was urged upon President Roosevelt yesterday by Edgar G. Brown, director of the National Negro Council, of Washington, D. C. Speaking at the Union Baptist Church, 240 W. 145th St., Brown commended Randolph as "one of the truest and most [illegible]nt spokesmen for the 13,000,000 Negroes of the United States."

Porters Hit Plan for Wage Freezing

CHICAGO. — Adjustment of their wages and hours before the proposed program of government wage freezing becomes effective is being sought by members of the Pullman Porters and Maids' Protective Association.

In a letter to the War Labor Board this week, the association declared that its members' low income and long hours, already long neglected, represented an even greater hardship in view of increased living costs, and asked that this situation be remedied immediately, lest the stabilization program leave them at present levels.

October 10, 1942
Afro-American

THE AFRO-AMERICAN, OCTOBER 10, 1942

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

By JAMES H. HOGANS
NEW YORK

DISTURBING NEWS

Two pieces of disturbing news came down the railroad turnpike last week. One was a report that Director Joseph B. Eastman of the ODT had recommended to the Interstate Commerce Commission that dining car service be abolished on all railroads whose operations do not exceed 700 miles.

The other was the rumor that the New York Central Railroad would discontinue the operation of all Pullman parlor cars, after this month.

The latter report has already been substantiated to a certain extent, for most of these cars were withdrawn from service the first of the month, and it was officially said that the few remaining ones would probably meet the same fate by the first of next month.

This means that a considerable number of veteran porters, who have never operated in any but parlor car service, will be thrown out of employment, since only a few are physically capable of operating in sleeping car service because of their age.

It was explained by official representatives that the withdrawal of the cars was due to the railroad's shortage of coach cars and the impossibility of securing equipment to build them. The Pullmans will be converted into coaches, they said.

While it is problematic as to what action may be taken in the dining car case, the recommendation is viewed with alarm by dining car employees.

Union representatives, however, do not think that the recommendation will be seriously considered, but said it would be fought in the event it was.

* * *

BOGUS PORTER

Pullman car service employees have been advised to be on the lookout for a bogus porter who has been operating out West and probably is now making his way East.

Described as being 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighing 180 pounds and very dark, the spurious porter attracted attention by telling conflicting stories about the district to which he belongs.

* * *

VACATIONING

H. B. Stroud, local representative of dining car employees of the D. L. & W., left New York last week for Raleigh, N.C., where he will spend a month vacationing.

* * *

MISS ALICE TAYLOR

The passing of Miss Alice Taylor, sister of Porter Instructor W. C. Taylor and aunt of Mrs. Rosa Wetherless and Mrs. Etta Warren, members of the Women's Auxiliary of the P.P.B.A., was an event of sorrow to all those who knew her.

Miss Taylor, who was 74, died suddenly at her home, 308 McDonough Street, Brooklyn, Friday morning, September 25, shortly after Mr. Taylor, with whom she lived, left for work at Mott Haven Yards.

Like her brother, to whom she was devoted, she took a deep interest in all the social and fraternal activities of the porters' group, and was said by friends to have grown "femininely sweet with her years."

Oct. 17, 1942

S ANGELES TRIBUN

Mrs. Murray reports on BSCP confab

Home this week from the Convention of the Ladies Auxiliary to the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, Mrs. Letitia Murray, as an international delegate, brought an interesting report of the proceedings in St. Louis.

Held Sept. 16-19, the convention was unusually constructive and interesting, Mrs. Murray reported. Praised particularly were the hostesses' old fashioned Southern hospitality and the biennial address of President Helena Wilson.

The needs of the families of the Brotherhood were stressed in the addrss to the body by A. Philip Randolph, international counselor of the Ladies Auxiliary. Other speakers included representatives of the Consumers' Division of the Government.

Mrs. Murray [illegible]ticipated as a leader of the p[illegible] discussion on "Woman's Responsibility in Today's Crisis." Another Angeleno, Mrs. Emily Johnson, was among participants on the panel. For the third consecutive term, Mrs. Murray was elected fourth international vice president of the Ladies Auriliary and supervisor of the Pacific Coa[illegible] zone. In appreciation of her [illegible] delegates and members [illegible] Pacific Coast zone pre[illegible] with a bouquet of red [illegible] Ardella Mutall of the [illegible] Division, made the pre[illegible].

Mrs. Murray is serving her second term as president of the Los Angeles Division of the Ladies Auxiliary of the B. S. C. P. She is a charter member of the Women's Political Study club; a member of the NAACP, and a devout member of Hamilton church. She is married to R. J. Murray, prominent in local Brotherhood activities.

NEW YORK AGE

October 10, 1942

Oct. 10, 1942 — N.Y. Age

A. Philip Randolph Speaks At Princeton Univ. Forum

PRINCETON, N. J.—At the invitation of Dr. Dana G. Munro, dean of the School of Public and International Affairs, A. Philip Randolph spoke to the forum on international affairs at Princeton University, September 30th on "The Negro and the War." He discussed the fight of the Negro for his democratic rights, pointing out that the Negro was playing a major role in America today in teaching the country the basic lessons of democracy which may save it from the fires of a devastating era of fascism. He pointed to the South as the center of racial obscurantism, and economic reaction which already is fertile ground for sowing the dragon teeth of totalitarianism.

He urged the [illegible] to support the fight for [illegible]e of Negro liberation no[illegible] sake of the Negro alone, [illegible] the interest of American democracy and freedom. Following the talk, there were questions and discussion which ranged from the FEPC, and the position of the Negro on the war effort, to the attitude of the Negro toward intermarriage.

[illegible]TERDAM STAR NEWS

October 10, 1942

Around and Beyond

Oct. 10, 1942

By Frank Crosswaith

IN A RECENT speech by an Army General who is entrusted with the military defense of one of the most important sections of our country, the speaker very forcefully expressed his opposition to " LABOR and BUSINESS BLOCKS" during the present crisis. He asserted that the American people will not tolerate the formation and activities of any kind of "BLOCKS."

Mr. Crosswaith

Shortly after having read the above referred-to speech, we were exposed to the nauseating duty of reading a statement from one whom many people consider among the natons outstanding BLOCK HEADS, Mr. Martin Dies, chairman of the Dies Committee which was created by Congress to investigate and uncover the activities of all un-American subveersive groups within the nation. The statement dubbed as Communists such outstanding Negro Americans as Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, president of the Bethune-Cookman College, Daytona Beach, Florida and president of the National Council of Negro Women; Prof. E. Franklin Frazier and Dean William Pickens, all of whom are rendering invaluable service to the nation as a part of the Federal Administration. In the opinion of Mr. Dies these eminent Americans are Communists because of their connection with the Robert Marshall Fund which was created to promote a social order based upon the principle of production for use instead of for profit.

From the day of its birth the chairman of the Dies Committee has been considered by organized labor and by many liberal and progressive elements of the nation as endeavoring to make of the Committee a most reactionary instrument and knowingly or unknowingly, as an invaluable aid to the promotion of anti-American undemocratic propaganda among the people of the United States. While still in its swaddling clothes the Committee was also very clearly recognized and identified as being an agency in opposition to President Roosevelt and to the socially enlightened and progressive program that he was advocating under the banner of the New Deal.

The first murmur of Martin Dies and his Committee was appreciated by all far-seeing elements as being the voice of that minority of the American people who are determined to continue their interpretation of our constitutional right "to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" as granting to the financially and industrially powerful the divine right to rob and exploit the working class. And of course, anyone who is unable to accept this "dark-ages," interpretation of the constitution will be considered by Mr. Dies as being un-American and a Communist.

Unfortunately whether they know it or not, the American Communists, by their own conduct have played deliberately the game of these American Tories and thus placed into the hands of the Dies Committee a most handy weapon of attack. We still can hear ringing in our ears some of the old Communist slogans such as "Away with the ballot box, forward to the barricades," "Self-Determination in The Black Belt," "The Yanks are not Coming" and so forth; and we are still unable to forget their destructive activities among Negro workers beginning with their brazen and determined attempts to destroy the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and wreck the Negro Labor Committee. This however does not justify the Chairman of the Dies Committee labelling as Communists everyone and anyone who sincerely believes in genuine democracy and in the other principles which the Communists have been using more or less as a football.

The very next day after the appearance of the Dies piffle, the press of the nation carried a most encouraging statement from the Archbishop of Canterbury in which this eminent British Clergyman denounced as un-Christian "an economic order whose chief mainspring was the profit motive." Clearly, if the Archbishop was an American and dared to express those views, Martin Dies would undoubtedly have labelled him as a Communist and would have sought to drive him out of office.

In a brief exchange of views with a friend, we overheard the folowing remark: "Poor Martin Dies! Perhaps the last part of his name was deliberately chosen for him because of his mental state. If this is so, then he should take it seriously and call in an undertaker; thereby providing unprejudiced worms with what is likely to prove an unsatisfactory meal." In response to which we replied "Amen!"

A Militant Paper

PEOPLE'S
The VOICE
AMERICA'S GREATEST NEGRO NEWSPAPER

Serving All People

VOL. 1, NO. 35 NEW YORK CITY, OCTOBER 10, 1942. 10c A COPY

Liberty Ship Slides Down Ways

West Coast Launching Is First of Kind

WILMINGTON, Cal. – The SS Booker T. Washington was being rushed to completion at the Terminal Island yards of the California Shipbuilding Corporation this week following the launching last week of the first Liberty ship to be named for a Negro. The 10,500-ton vessel is scheduled to be turned over to the USMaritime Commission this month.

American democracy in action was underscored stirringly Tuesday (September 29), when the Washington slid down the ways to join this nation's growing fleet of Liberty ships. A crowd of 6,000 persons, including many outstanding Negro leaders, witnessed the launching. The seventy-fourth ship to be launched by Calship in 367 days, the Washington hit the water just 42 days after its keel was laid.

Among the spectators were three of Booker T. Washington's direct descendants; his only surviving daughter, Mrs. Portia Washington Pittman; and two granddaughters, Miss Fannie Pittman and Miss Louise Washington.

Principal speaker at the ceremonies was Mary McLeod Bethune, founder of the Bethune-Cookman College in Florida, and director of the division of Negro affairs of the National Youth Administration.

She said: "This is not just another cargo vessel, this is a ship that epitomizes the true spirit and ideal of democracy. This is a ship named for a great man, not just a great Negro—a great American who happened to be a Negro. This is a ship built by the skill and toil and sweat of black men, white, yellow and red Americans—working side by side in harmony and cooperation, proving to the world that, given a chance, democracy can work. As this ship is christened and launched today, may it stand forever as the true symbol of liberty and freedom, epitomizing the spirit of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man."

CAPT. MULZAC LEAVES

Hugh Mulzac, bespectacled, modest Brooklynite who within a few days becomes the first Negro in 20 years to sail the high seas in command of a commercial vessel with a mixed crew, kissed the boro a tentative goodbye late Tuesday.

Mulzac was recently named skipper of the recently-christened 10,000-ton Liberty freighter, Booker T. Washington, by Edward Macauley, deputy administrator of the War Shipping Board. His appointment was conditioned on his success in rounding up a Negro and white crew of officers and men.

Having fulfilled this condition with the aid of the National Maritime Union, Captain Mulzac left for Fort Trumbull, Conn., to take a 14-day refresher course.

IMPRESSIVE VIEW of the 10,500-ton Liberty ship SSBooker T. Washington, 75th to be launched within a year and two days. She is more th 400 feet long and will be delivered to the USMaritime Commission in about two weeks. Her keel was laid August 19—(Photo Norman Simin

New Leader — Oct. 24, 1942

Chatter

Inside and Out

By ROBERT TREVOR

THIS WEEK'S NMU JAB FOLLOWS HARD on exposure and double-dealing by union officials who were too close to the oil companies. Rumoring around are stories concerning Charles Abar, personal friend and bodyguard to M. Hedley Stone of the NMU.

Abar, according to talk, was long suspected of having connections with the Lake Carriers Association. In fact, it was rumored that the organizing drives on the Lakes were stymied because of Abar. Angry members, who could not prove these insinuations, were nevertheless able to get him transferred the hell away from the Lakes and to Port Arthur. Then the NMU gained some ground, enough to worry the Lake Carriers Association, anyway. Whereupon Abar quit his $60 a week job with the NMU and rushed back to the Lakes, where he functioned unofficially. He was brought up on charges and suspended for one year—a mild sentence when you recall the 99-year suspensions which hapless anti-Communist oppositionists in the NMU were handed. Abar has since rushed to New York to weep on Stone's shoulder and plead for reinstatement. Strange though that neither the Daily Worker nor the NMU press have mentioned his case—even he is one of the inside boys.

* * *

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH, A LEADING NEGRO UNIONIST, may take his Sleeping-Car Porters out of the American Federation of Labor in protest over the discrimination by AFL unions against the Negro and the hedging tactics of the Toronto Congress. Randolph's Sleeping-Car Porters would form a union as one more independent union.

* * *

AMSTERDAM STAR NEWS

October 31, 1942

Amsterdam — Oct 31/42

ON THE LEVEL

By Carl Lawrence

EXCEPT FOR OUR QUESTIONABLE "LADIES OF THE EVENING" WHO SPECIALIZE IN PEDDLING PHONY LOVE, HARLEM'S CRIME RECORD IS DEFINITELY NOT AS BAD AS IT WAS. THAT'S A GOOD INDICATION THAT WE HAVEN'T BEEN TALKING IN VAIN. NEVERTHELESS, WE MUST NOT FORGET THAT TALK IS CHEAP BECAUSE IT IS OFTEN USED AS A SYNONYM FOR "SHOOTING THE BULL."

House thieves and muggers and murderers are probably "laying low" until we, the people, have forgotten. Let's outsmart these sidewalk crooks and relegate them to the rear, where all thugs belong.

It's too bad we've been talking (and not acting) so much. Of all the correspondence received so far on this subject, the interest shown by Mrs. Eva Parks was most impressive. Mrs. Parks, if you don't know, is president of the Women's Guild (Grace Congregational Church). Members of that organization expect your reporter to say a few words on crime this Sunday evening (308 W. 139th) at eight o'clock and, for once in my life, I'm really grateful for the opportunity to tell church workers what I think they can do to help the cause of decency in this community.

But this piece was supposed to concentrate on A. Philip Randolph again in the hope that he'd see the point and stop associating with the AFL's organization of thugs and race-haters. I see by the front page where Brother Randolph is of the opinion that he can best serve his people by staying in the American Federation of Labor and fighting until Jimmy Crow is finally liquidated.

Now actually, I've never talked much to Brother Randolph on labor and its aims but I respect and admire him because he is one man who appears to be as honest as the days are long. As many of my friends know, I hate fraud and deceit and this thing called "selling out the race." I despise and hate even more the labor leader who poses as a "right guy" while collecting dues from members of the union and graft from the boss.

On the latter point, I'm overly suspicious and I am seldom in a mood to forgive those who betray labor's trust. From what I've been able to learn, Brother Randolph is straight. He's first interested in the members of his union. I can say the same thing for Ashley Totten, Ben McLaurin and all other officers of the Brotherhood; but I am unable to say that for some of the others who are supposed to be advising Randolph with respect to this March-on-Washington Movement.

I suspect a few are trying to "take him for a ride." That's where politics is involved. Randolph, you must understand, has little interest in politics as such. He's neither here nor there. Unfortunately, I think, he has allowed himself to become associated too much with the known red-baiters. He admits, for instance, that he'd never dare associate intimately with Republicans, Democrats or those charged with the responsibility of running the American Labor Party. But there's nothing wrong, says he, in giving the Communists hell. There are many who will agree with him, but darn few who will put it in print. You can't be a liberal and do that. So I'm convinced that a few of Randolph's March-on-Washington advisors are giving him the wrong steer.

Which means that the good brother is in a tough spot. On the one hand, he's bedevilled by such race-hating punks as Tom Ray and Dan Tobin and, on the other, he is plagued by those who advise him to rap the Communists. Take my word for it, Brother Randolph is on the wrong track in both instances.

I'm crazy, meanwhile, about the method he uses to keep his union out of politics proper. That's smart and it's a pity the other trade unionists wouldn't take a cue from him. But to accomplish that and stop means defeat. And our friend Randolph is too good to be sacrificed like that. Let's urge him again and again to quit the AFL. Let's tell him to leave that organization to the Uncle Toms. Let's help him to do that. If you're the wife of a Pullman Porter, talk to your husband and influence him to talk to Brother Randolph. After all, he's a member . . . ain't he?

Hitting your head against a stone wall isn't easy. Occasionally, you get tired and disgusted and you wonder whether it was worthwhile in the first place. Let's prevent that from happening to A. Philip Randolph. He has sacrificed much in his struggle to build the mightiest all-colored labor organization in America. Wage earners, black and white, ought to be grateful for what he has done. And Randolph couldn't express his appreciation in any better manner than to quit Race Hate, Inc. (the AFL) and affiliate with John L. Lewis or the CIO.

In the post-war era, the sun will rise daily on an America more beautiful than ever. War veterans and trade unionists will be in power and we'll be an integral part of both organizations. Our current phony leaders will be lost because there will be no place for them in the world of tomorrow. A real man, honest to those who believe in him, will occupy a position of importance. Such a man is A. Philip Randolph today. Let's hope that his place in American life will remain that way.

AFL's Green Rejects Lewis's Peace Plan; Negro Delegates Push Fight on Jim Crowism

'No Place' for UMW or Its Leader in Peace Talks

By James A. Wechsler
Staff Correspondent

TORONTO, Oct. 12.—As far as AFL President William Green is concerned, John L. Lewis is neither wanted nor welcome at the coming AFL-CIO unity conferences.

Green bluntly declared last night that there is "no place" for the United Mine Workers or its leader in the peace talks, as a result of the UMW's withdrawal from the CIO. He said that Lewis's presence could only "increase the difficulties" of the negotiators.

At the same time the AFL chief rejected the idea that the AFL-CIO meetings should be replaced by a "general labor conference," including all unaffiliated unions, as well as units of the two national organizations. He said he didn't believe FDR would initiate such conference.

Green's comments were provoked by Lewis's pronouncements Saturday in Cincinnati. In a press conference, the mine union president derided the AFL-CIO unity moves, made clear that no meetings could be meaningful without his presence, blasted Brother Green on a variety of counts, and approved a reporter's suggestion that President Roosevelt call a larger labor meeting, at which the UMW, the typographical unions, the railroad brotherhoods, and the other independent bodies would be present.

"In my opinion, President Roosevelt would not care to call such conference," Green said.

Leaves Door Open

In spurning Lewis's blueprint for one big labor family, Green left the door open, however, for a "separate peace" between the AFL and the mine workers' union. He reiterated the stand he took earlier in the week—that the AFL would do business with anybody.

While Green refused to comment directly on Lewis's attacks on him, the AFL head interpreted Lewis's declarations as evidence that the UMW President wasn't breaking down the doors to get back into the AFL. With regard to Lewis's withdrawal from the CIO, Green observed briefly:

"He seems to have the happy faculty of destroying the things he creates."

The exchange enlivened the week end recess of the AFL convention sessions, and it also projected again the issue of whether Green's word is AFL law, or whether Lewis might still seek to stage a backroom coup in co-operation with other AFL higher-ups.

Tobin Echoes Green

Speculation centered chiefly on the role that William L. Hutcheson, czar of the AFL Carpenters' Union and a controlling figure in the executive council, might play in any coming Lewis manoeuvers. Hutcheson, who shares Lewis's Republican politics, is a member of the AFL "peace committee," scheduled to open talks with the CIO next month. His secretary said last night that he couldn't be reached for comment.

The two other members of the negotiating body—Daniel J. Tobin, president of the Teamsters' Union, and Harry C. Bates, head of the Bricklayers — generally echoed Green's comments. Tobin said Lewis could not attend the AFL-CIO talks "unless the CIO wanted him" and expressed doubt that FDR would summon an over-all labor conference.

John L. Lewis: the AFL wants no part of him at the coming labor peace talks, either.

As for Lewis's demand that Green get out of the way before the miners return to the AFL, Tobin said:

"I don't think we can accommodate him. It's not fair for him to set conditions, anyway. But Lewis has said a lot of things in the past—such as his statements that he never would leave the CIO."

Bates also declared "that the miners are not included in the AFL-CIO conferences, but emphasized that "if the miners want to come back, we'd deal separately with them, as with other unions, like the typographers."

So on the surface today Lewis faced this Hobson's choice—speedy, inelegant return to the AFL or a lone role during the AFL-CIO parleys. It is considered certain that FDR won't rescue him by summoning a labor show at which the miners' leader could perform. But don't count Lewis out of the AFL picture so long as Brother Hutcheson is around.

Waring's Speech Draws Fire Here

A New York officer of the American Legion yesterday took Roane Waring, recently elected National Commander of the Legion, severely to task for his speech before the AFL convention in Toronto.

In that speech, Waring advocated shooting strikers who held up war production.

Roland S. Morgan, executive secretary of the Electrical Construction Post 1137, said the speech reflected "in effect the attitude of a paid employe of the Axis."

"Hitler's propagandists," he said, "could not have done a better job than this. Shooting is how Hitler handles the French and Norwegian workers who rebel against forced labor."

Morgan concluded by asking that "members of his own Legion family" censure Waring for "his lack of understanding of war labor problems."

The Electrical Construction Post is composed of members of the United Electrical and Radio Workers of America, Local 3.

Machinery to Deal With Discrimination Is Demanded

Staff Correspondence

TORONTO, Oct. 12.—Two lone Negro delegates to the American Federation of Labor convention were preparing today for the annual convention battle over union discrimination against Negroes.

The fight was expected to come, as it has in the past, over resolutions sponsored by A. Phillip Randolph and Milton P. Webster representing the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. With the convention oratory over and resolutions slated to occupy the delegates throughout the rest of the week, the discrimination issues was expected to reach the floor either late today or tomorrow.

There was no indication yet that the conflict would end on a different note than at previous conventions—support of resolutions condemning discrimination in general, but refusal to set up machinery to deal with specific cases in individual AFL unions.

The Negro delegates are seeking creation of an AFL minorities committee "to investigate various forms and cases of discrimination that may be presented to it." Its jurisdiction would cover any examples of anti-Catholic or anti-Semitic prejudice in AFL unions as well as Jim Crowism. Past conventions have pigeonholed this resolution.

Randolph said last night that the most serious offenders were the machinists' and the boilermakers' unions. It was the boilermakers' union that was involved in the recent dispute at the Kaiser Shipyard.

'Some Progress' Admitted

While "some progress has been made in the past year" as a result of the "pressure" of the Fair Employment Practice Committee (FEPC), Randolph declared the situation was far from remedied. AFL president William Green is a member of the FEPC and has pleaded hard for abandonment of anti-Negro bans by all AFL unions. He steadily has refused to challenge the autonomy of individual unions, however.

It was reported that the resolutions committee already has voted to submit a declaration denouncing discrimination, but ignoring Randolph's demand for a special committee to act on the problem. This sidestep will meet strong resistance from Randolph and Webster, but whether any AFL higherups will come to their defense remains highly problematical.

There are a lot of AFL leaders who share Green's unhappiness on the matter, resent Jim Crow statutes, and feel that the AFL as a whole is suffering for a few individual sins. But they don't like to fight about it.

Apart from the Negro debate, no major conflict over resolutions on public policy is anticipated. There may be a sharp fight, however, over the long-standing jurisdictional dispute between the carpenters and the machinists—unless the executive counsels succeeds in keeping it off the floor. It all goes back to 1914.

Strike at Cartridge Plant

Special Correspondence

EAST ALTON, Ill., Oct. 12.—The Western Cartridge Co. plant was shut down yesterday for the second time in six weeks, following an unauthorized strike. American Federation of Labor officials urged the strikers to return to work.

A. Phillip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, wants the AFL to halt discrimination in individual unions. (Story ◄.)

nan Porters Stay in AFL

AMSTERDAM
York STAR NEWS Star-News

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1942 IN TWO SECTIONS SECTION ONE 10c

We'll Remain in and Fight, Randolph Declares After Negro Snub at Convention

Rejects Nation-wide Pressure for Union to Quit and Join C.I.O. Group

Disregarding country-wide pressure demanding the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters withdrawal from the prejudice-ridden American Federation of Labor, A. Philip Randolph told the Star News that the Brotherhood intended to "stay in the AFL and fight."

Mr. Randolph, who was questioned on his return from the Federation's 62nd annual convention in Toronto last week, pointed out that the AFL was a railroad union and it was to the best advantage of workers in that field to keep their affiliation there.

Urges CIO Powers

On the other hand, those who favor the Brotherhood's withdrawal assert that the United Transport Service Employees Union is a CIO affiliate, dealing with the same agencies controlling railway employees under whose jurisdiction the Brotherhood operates.

As at previous conventions, Randolph assailed race discrimination and Jim Crow practices, declaring that, "The American Federation of Labor cannot say it is democratic unless it cleans its house and says that regardless of race, color, and creed, any worker can join the AFL union—and that any union which does not have this spirit of democracy will be expelled."

Citing the urgency of mobilizing manpower in the war emergency, he blasted the International Machinists, the Boilermakers and others of being guilty of "color clauses."

Carpenters Assailed

Other brotherhoods that took a tongue lashing from the leader of the Sleeping Car Porters included the Carpenters Union which bars Negro members. Randolph cited a recent instance where a local in Texas barred Negroes from working on a housing project for Negroes because white workers threatened to strike if they were employed.

Having no answers, AFL chiefs listened to his speech in silence and adopted a week-kneed reso-

Continued on Page 2

Oct. 17, 1942 AMSTERDAM NEW YORK STAR-NEWS

Randolph Takes Fight to A. F. of L. Meet—

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH, PRESIDENT of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, arrives in Toronto as a delegate to the American Federation of Labor's convention. The famed leader of the March-on-Washington-Movement is expected to play a conspicuous part in the fight against Jim Crowism during the AFL's annual conclave.

AFL Convention Hears Call:

Wipe Out Union Anti-Negro Bars

By George Morris

It was during an informal discussion at a Toronto luncheon that a Canadian reporter innocently asked a high official of the AFL:

"Mr. ——: Don't you think Randolph delivered a fine speech?"

The AFL official looked at him with a smile as if to say "you poor fish, you obviously don't know much about affairs on our side of the border," but he replied:

"Yes, Randolph is a good speaker. But we get that speech every year."

That just about sizes up the attitude of most top AFL officials to the annual demand that something be done to wipe out the anti-Negro bans and discrimination in many affiliates of the AFL.

A. Philip Randolph, President of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, who with secretary-treasurer Milton P. Webster were the only two Negroes at the AFL convention, had that afternoon delivered a smashing indictment against certain AFL unions for maintaining anti-Negro bars, and he did it on the convention floor in the very face of the officials of those organizations.

BRUTAL TRUTH

The delegates listened to him attentively for nearly a half hour (for they heard the brutal truth), gave him fair applause, but voted for a substitute to his union's resolution—a meaningless general expression against race bias, that requires no one to do anything about the situation.

Randolph's resolution was formulated to meet the usual objections that have been raised at previous AFL conventions. It asked the convention to name a committee composed of "representatives of various minority groups in the AFL such as Negroes, Jews and Catholics" for the purpose of "exploring," the discrimination situation and making recommendations to the executive council or subsequent convention on steps to abolish various forms of discrimination. The resolution further provided for such committee by the executive council to carry out an investigation and to conduct an educational drive in the AFL against all forms of discrimination.

The report of the resolutions committee delivered by Matthew Woll, not only closed its eyes to rampant anti-Negro discrimination but boasted that the AFL has always been "the outstanding organization in the United States" against discrimination.

FOUR CATEGORIES

Randolph pointed to four main categories of anti-Negro discrimination. First, are some 15 or 20 unions with constitutional bars or lily-white rituals. Practically all of the unions in the railway department are in this category, the boilermakers and machinists, for example. Secondly, there are those unions that have no bars, but by practice and custom refuse to admit Negroes, as the electrical workers, plumbers, pipe fitters. Thirdly, are unions which permit Negroes to join, but give locals the right to bar them, especially if they are located in the South. Fourthly, are unions which provide jim crow auxiliary units, with no voting power, as in the Railway Clerks.

As a practical example of what this discrimination means, Randolph described how a group of Negroes shipped from New York to work for Henry J. Kaiser at Portland, found themselves classified as laborers at lower pay when they reached the destination, although 19 of them were skilled men, and were hired as such. Tom Ray business agent of the boilermakers reclassified them. The number of Negroes so victimized has passed the hundred-mark since Randolph made his speech and the Boilermakers Union is sitting tight on its constitution.

Connected with Randolph's speech is an earlier one he delivered on his union's resolution calling for freedom of India. That resolution was pigeon-holed with the Anglo-American Trade Union Committee.

TOBIN'S ATTACK

It was on the following day, shortly before [illegible] themselves with Randolph's political views. But, quite conspicuously, there were only empty chairs.

A. PHILLIP RANDOLPH

Without in the least depreciating the Randolph speech, one is struck by the possibility he had to strengthen it. He could have at the same time called attention to some of the good examples in the AFL, for, as he said, there are from 250,000 to 300,000 Negroes in the AFL. He could have cited Tobin's own union. He might have cited the CIO which on the whole is playing an historic role in the fight against discrimination. Such distinction between progress and reaction puts the whole question in a positive light to the very people Randolph and all progressives seek to win for a struggle against discrimination. It is not a problem of the Negroes alone.

So with respect to India, Randolph threw the British and American working class in one basket with the capitalists as one solid opposition to India freedom. There was neither distinction between progressives and conservatives, nor between leaders and rank and file. As a matter of fact, at the very moment that Randolph was speaking, there was seated upon the platform Jack Tanner, British fraternal delegate and leader of a progressive tendency in the British Trade Union Congress. There were also delegates on the floor who represented AFL affiliates that had voted for free India resolutions, but they, unfortunately became weak-kneed.

The entire episode dramatized once again that Negro discrimination is eating into the AFL like a cancer. The annual speech about it is made on the floor, but nothing happens. It is high time that the fight on this disease is taken up with the same vigor as on other major evils. And it must start today if it is to register to any degree in the locals or at the next convention.

Such action as that of the Boilermakers' Union at the Kaiser yards ranks with the worst anti-Negro scandals, and should be treated as such. Today such action amounts to sabotage of the war effort and undermining of morale.

freedom of India. That resolution was pigeon-holed with the Anglo-American Trade Union Committee.

TOBIN'S ATTACK

It was on the following day, shortly before adjournment, that Daniel Tobin, President of the Teamsters, received the floor on a point of personal privilege. His speech was a denunciation of Randolph but contained nothing to refute his charges. Tobin is head of one of the unions that does not have Negro bars and includes a large number of Negroes in its ranks. Obviously he was put forward to make the speech because most other AFL leaders come from unions that are too vulnerable on the race question. Tobin also took sharp issue with Randolph on India, in his effort to justify the convention's action.

Tobin did concede that Randolph's charges would apply to perhaps 10 per cent of the AFL's affiliates.

The fact that Randolph had to face that entire convention, and no white delegate stood up to support him, is a disgrace. There were delegations there from unions of the AFL that have thousands of Negroes in their ranks. The Hotel and Restaurant Employes, Ladies Garment Workers, and others. While Randolph spoke this writer looked to the table where delegates of the International Ladies Garment Workers were seated. They are men who still speak of themselves as socialists and they have often identified

AFL Dodges on Negro Discrimination

Convention Resolution Leaves Union Officials Free to Push Negroes Around

By James A. Wechsler
PM's Bureau

TORONTO, Oct. 14.—It took the American Federation of Labor's 62nd convention exactly 26 minutes to bury the issue of anti-Negro discrimination in AFL uinons.

For 25½ minutes the delegates heard A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and one of the two Negro delegates to the meeting, demand creation of an AFL committee to fight Jim Crow. Assailing AFL leaders for "dodging" the proposal, he charged that their speeches about democracy were "boloney," named AFL's biggest names, pleaded for reversal of the Federation's long-time refusal to interfere with discriminatory practices in individual AFL bodies.

In 30 seconds, the convention voted him down. The only dissenting "no" was shouted by Milton P. Webster, Randolph's co-delegate from the Porters Union.

The convention's stand was registered in approving a statement submitted by the Resolutions Committee as an "alternative" to Randolph's propsoal. The declaration indicates that the Federation is firmly opposed to discrimination in general and is preparing to do nothing about it. It echoes similar pronouncements made by innumerable AFL meetings in the past. It means that AFL officials who push Negroes around can continue to do so with impunity—at least as far as any reprisals by the Federation are concerned.

The AFL's Unmentionable

For several hours yesterday it appeared as if the Federation officialdom was hoping to avoid any public airing of the issue. The report of the Resolutions Committee, submitted by John P. Frey, secretary, skipped back and forth and neatly overlooked the race resolution. A couple of lengthy orations drove a lot of the delegates to the nearest bars or restrooms. When the unhappy unmentionable reached the floor it was after 5 o'clock, everybody was thinking about cocktails, and about half of the 600 delegates already were among the missing.

Then Frey read the committee's trapeze act. As he spoke, Randolph, a tall, dignified figure, walked expressionlessly toward the platform. AFL president William Green, looking like the man who wished he wasn't there, recognized Randolph immediately after Frey finished. It was an old sequence. Green, who is genuinely unhappy about the Negro situation, but doesn't want to get into a row with anybody, knew what was coming. The hall got very quiet.

"We have heard many grand and splendid speeches at this convention," Randolph declared, "and if a man from Mars had come here he would have thought most of the speechmakers believed in democracy. When he learned that many of the same men denied Negroes the right to join their unions he would reach the conclusion that these speeches are boloney."

AFL Called Undemocratic

"The American Federation of Labor cannot say it is democratic until it cleans its house and says that regardless of race, color, and creed any worker can join any AFL union—and that any union which does not have this spirit of democracy will be expelled from the Federation."

Citing the urgency of the war manpower situation, Randolph assailed "four types" of discrimination inside the AFL:

¶ More than 15 unions affiliated with the AFL have "color clauses" or "ritualistic provisions" that bar Negro workers. Among them, he listed the International Machinists Assn., the Boilermakers Union and the Department of Railway Employes, Randolph said.

¶ "Many other" AFL unions have "unwritten laws" to keep Negroes out, he charged. Naming the Electrical Workers, Plumbers, and Pipefitters, Randolph described some of the devices employed to keep their memberships white. One union constitution provided, he said, that workers could gain entry to the union "only if recommended by present members—and no Negroes ever will be recommended."

¶ Some international unions have no national ban on Negroes, but permit locals to do as they please, Randolph noted. Citing the Carpenters' Union as an example, Randolph recalled that members of a Texas local threatened to strike on a housing project if Negroes were employed. The housing project was for Negroes.

¶ Randolph also blasted unions which create "undemocratic auxiliaries" — Jim Crow units for Negro members. He pointed out that the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks had organized such auxiliaries for Negroes.

Tom Ray Blasted

Tom Ray, secretary of Local 72 of the Boilermakers, and union czar at the Kaiser Shipyards, was bitterly denounced by the Negro spokesman. Randolph recalled that Ray "boarded a train and read the riot act to Negro workers" who journeyed to Portland from New York to work at the Kaiser yards. Then Randolph observed that Charles J. MacGowan of the Boilermakers' Union, in an address to the AFL convention Tuesday, had assailed the NLRB for "treason" in certifying a CIO complaint at Kaiser and "threatening to hold up" production.

"How does Mr. MacGowan classify discrimination that limits the manpower of our vital shipyards?" Randolph asked.

Most of the delegates in the hall had remained quiet and attentive while Randolph was speaking. He got a relatively big hand when he finished. But he didn't sway any votes.

This year none of the AFL higher-ups answered back, as they had in the past. They took it all and looked at their watches with relief when the speech was over.

AFL's answer to Randolph had been given in the Resolutions Committee report declaring:

"It is unfortunately true that because of geographical situation and other reasons there still remains a degree of discrimination, not only against the colored race, but against other groups because of their racial origin; but we have no hesitancy in comparing the record of the AFL on the question of race discrimination with the activities of any other organization in the United States and Canada.

"We are doubtful whether any other method than the educational one can make the progress which is necessary, for experience has been that where compulsory methods are applied, prejudices are increased instead of diminished."

As they say in Brooklyn, wait till next year.

Julius Hochman . . . Story ➤

AFL Suspends 4 Over Graft

Staff Correspondence

TORONTO, Oct. 14.—President William E. Maloney of the AFL's International Union of Operating Engineers has suspended the four officers of Local 106, Albany, who pleaded guilty to charges that they accepted payment for issuing "permit cards" to non-union workers on a Government project.

Announcement of Maloney's action was made here yesterday at the 62nd AFL convention. It followed receipt of word from Syracuse that the four local officials had confessed violating the "kickback" statute and been fined $10,000.

The disclosure of Maloney's crackdown was the first reference to racketeering at the current AFL meeting. In recent years that issue has caused bitter debate, leading to the slugging of David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, by John Fay, of the Operating Engineers, two years ago. Dubinsky had been pressing for drastic AFL action against the boys who provide copy for Westbrook Pegler.

This year no resolutions on racketeering have been introduced. The ILGWU delegation hasn't raised the point and everybody else seems content not to bring it up.

In his telegram to the four offenders Maloney said they had been suspended "pending a hearing, the date of which will be arranged later."

War Che[illegible]sed To Fight [illegible]abor Propagand[illegible]

Special Co[illegible]

TORONTO, Oct. [illegible].—A [illegible] creation of a "war chest" to combat anti-labor propaganda circulated by the National Association of Manufacturers and other groups was placed before the American Federation of Labor convention yesterday.

The proposal was made by Julius Hochman, vice-president of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, in behalf of the IGLWU delegation. Urging that the AFL establish a separate department to "tell and sell the truth about unionism," Hochman declared that the NAM was spending more than $3,000,000 a year "to mislead and misinform the American public about labor."

Hochman's speech highlighted a series of convention declarations yesterday accusing labor foes of using press and radio to undermine unionism. A resolution adopted before Hochman spoke recommended aid for the labor press and assailed "the vast flood of anti-labor propaganda being loosed upon the American people."

Flood of Poison

"Through the news columns of the daily press, through syndicated articles of hostile columnists, and through newspaper ads, magazines, and books and even over the radio, the anti-labor poison is spreading," the statement warned.

The convention also approved a proposal telling each international union to put Army camps on the mailing lists for all union periodicals.

In his appeal for a new department devoted exclusively to "selling" unionism, Hochman reminded the delegates that labor took a bad beating after World War I, and faced an even more serious threat this time.

"Do you remember," he asked, "the sudden flood of explanations of the fall of France toward the end of 1940? Somehow, all the explanations led up to the conclusion that it was labor and labor legislation in France, especially the 40-hour week, that were responsible for the collapse and, of course, the lesson was drawn that America should 'wake up' before it was too late.

"This was an example of coldly calculated manipulation of public opinion on the part of big business interests. Many well-meaning people were taken in by the deluge of aricles, full-page newspaper and magazine advertisements, interviews, and radio talks, all harping on this one theme."

Hochman also cited the continuance of large-scale advertising by firms which now sell exclusively to the Government.

Business Advertises

"These advertisements," he said, "create the impression that the credit for the increased production and the development of improved war equipment is the work of management alone. The cumulative effect of it is that we—industrialists—will win this war.

"Labor's role, of course, is not mentioned."

AFL at present has a small publicity staff, headed by Philip Pearl, former New York newspaper man, but many Federation leaders have operated on the principle that no news is good news. However, this convention has revealed mounting concern among AFL leaders over anti-labor propaganda, so the executive council may take some action on the ILGWU plea.

PM, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1942

Green Picked For 19th Term

Tobin Assails Randolph for Bringing Up Jim Crow Issue At AFL Convention

By James A. Wechsler
Staff Correspondent

TORONTO, Oct. 15.—There will be no new faces at the table when the American Federation of Labor's (AFL) executive council goes into session today, following adjournment of the Federation's 62d convention.

Starting his 19th term as AFL president, William Green, the former coal miner whose union card was taken away by John L. Lewis, will preside. Green, secretary-treasurer George Meany and the 13 vice-presidents who comprise the council, were re-elected yesterday without competition.

William Green

While the balloting for officers went off on schedule yesterday, the final sessions were marked by two of the sharpest outbursts of the predominantly peaceful convention.

Tobin Blasts Randolph

Daniel Tobin, head of the powerful Teamsters' Union, let loose a loud and violent blast against A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and one of the two Negro delegates to the convention. Breaking the silence with which AFL's high command had received Randolph's attack on discrimination against Negroes in the Federation, Tobin said the address "helps to light the torch of dissension and destruction among a large section of the population." Tobin also protested Randolph's plea for immediate independence for India.

Daniel Tobin

Tacitly admitting than Randolph's specific case histories were true, Tobin said it was as unfair to exaggerate these instances as to build up a "strike wave" on the basis of scattered walkouts. Condemning Randolph for his declaration that "the Negro people won't long take it," Tobin said:

"Men of this type who make those utterances—educated men—are doing more in my opinion to destroy the future progress of the black man, which we are trying to bring about, than any section within a local constitution or international union by-law."

Green Squelches Randolph

When Tobin finished, Randolph asked for the floor. Green quickly interposed:

"Delegate Randolph, we cannot engage in a running discussion."

Randolph tried again.

Green said:

"You presented your address yesterday and Mr. Tobin asked as a matter of personal privilege that he be allowed to make a statement in return. We must now consider the incident closed."

Randolph tried again. Green ignored him and introduced Frank Morrison, secretary-emeritus of AFL, for a guest oration.

Randolph sat down.

Scrap on Russian Issue

Matthew Woll, AFL vice-president and brain-truster, clashed with Sidney Pudell of the New York Building Service Employes over the Federation's refusal to meet with Russian trade unionists. It was a brief but bellicose exchange. It ended with the convention overwhelmingly reaffirming AFL's—and Woll's—stand, but making clear that the Federation is not "deprecating the great sacrifices of the Russian people."

In opposing Pudell's demand for direct AFL dealings with the Soviet Trade Unions, Woll said cryptically that "there are some things better left unsaid at this time," but added:

"I think it is unfortunate that some people seek to dramatize the Russians to the exclusion of others. We hope ultimately to include the trade unions of all the United Nations."

A clarification of AFL's policy on job-freezing was adopted.

Other Policies Stated

John P. Frey, elaborating AFL's stand, said the Federation didn't mean to oppose all job freezing, "but desired to draw attention to the necessity of protecting the rights of workers."

The convention also called for a Pan American labor conference, pledged the buying of a lot of war bonds, and heard Green predict that the war would end next year "with the collapse of Germany."

With the council scheduled to meet for only a few hours today, there was speculation as to whether it would produce any new developments in the labor unity situation. Council members insisted last night that no overtures had been received from John L. Lewis for a "separate peace" with the Federation. It is assumed, however, that the Council members will spend part of their time planning strategy for the coming AFL-CIO peace talks and that Lewis' private labor movement will also get some attention.

Green, who is 69, said last week he might consider his life's work "realized" when AFL and CIO unite. He became AFL president in 1924 following the death of Sam Gompers, and has been re-elected annually ever since.

WPB Closes Firm Which Misused Metal

PM's Bureau

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—The War Production Board (WLB) cracked down on the U-Need-a-Pak Products Corp. of Brooklyn yesterday and put it out of business for the duration.

The WPB charged the corporation had diverted iron and steel to the manufacture of cigaret-vending machines in an amount sufficient to make "seven light tanks, or 64 .75-millimeter field guns."

The order also froze 204,000 pounds of sheet metal in the corporation's yard.

AMSTERDAM NEWS

October 17, 1942

A.F.L. URGED TO FIGHT BIAS

Randolph Leads Drive At Big Convention

TORONTO.—President A. Philip Randolph, of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, lost his fight in 30 seconds Tuesday night after making a brilliant 25-minute speech to AFL delegates and urging them to drop their Jim Crow tactics against Negroes. Evereybody in the convention, except Milton Webster, voted against Randolph.

(Special [illegible] Star-News)

TORONTO—[illegible] Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, was battling some of the highest officials in the American Federation Labor here this week in an attempt to induce the AFL to go on record against Jim Crowism in labor organizations.

Randolph and Milton P. Webster, vice president of the largest Negro-dominated union in the world are the only colored labor representatives here as delegates to the AFL's annual convention.

The fight was expected to be settled late Wednesday, but judging from Randolph and Webster's plans it may not be decided until the close of the convention on Saturday.

It all started over a resolution introduced by Randolph and Webster soon after their arrival.

The resolution as outlined by Randolph follows:

"Whereas, It is necessary that the complete manpower of the nation be mobilized for use in the armed forces and defense industries for the victory of the United Nations and since discrimination on account of race, color, religion, or national origin is a bar to this effort; therefore be it Resolved, That the sixty-second convention of the AFL set up a minorities committee composed of representatives of [illegible] various minority groups in [illegible] (such as Negroes, Jews, [illegible] and others) for the purpose [illegible] thoroughly exploring the [illegible] of discrimination [illegible] against minority groups or unions affiliated with AFL and various industries with a view of mapping out plans and making recommendations to the Executive Council to abolish these forms of discrimination as being against sound trade union principles and giving aid and comfort to Fascism in America."

Other sections of the proposal asked that the proper authority be given AFL President Green, and the Executive Council, so that the committee's work could be started immediately.

A. Philip Randolph Flays AFL For Lacking Courage To Face Problem Of Race Discrimination

TORONTO, Canada — Following the report by the Resolution Committee whose chairman is Matthew Woll, one of the vice-presidents of the American Federation of Labor, and the secretary, John P. Frey, president of the Metal Trades Department, setting forth the hope of the A.F. of L. for the elimination of discrimination on account of race, or color, A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, took the floor of the convention and scathingly flayed racial discrimination in the A.F. of L. unions.

He pointed out that discriminations by unions on account of color or race fell into four categories.

One, unions whose constitutions and rituals have color clauses and provisions against Negro workers becoming eligible for membership such as the Boiler-makers, Machinists, the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks and all but one of the standard railroad unions; two, unions that have color bars in their constitutions and rituals, but provide auxiliaries for Negroes in which Negroes are the victims of taxation without representation in the conventions of the international unions and cannot participate in the formulation of legislation for the government of the union. Negro workers in these auxiliary locals don't even have the right to negotiate agreements affecting themselves;

Three, unions that accept Negro workers but whose locals in certain sections of the country are granted the right to exclude workers on account of race, color or any other reason such as the Carpenters, Painters, Bricklayers, and practically most of the unions of the A.F. of L. have some local organizations that impose unfair labor practices upon Negro workers;

Four, unions that have no color clauses in their constitutions or rituals but whose customs and practices exclude Negroes from membership, such as the Electric Workers, Plumbers and Pipefitters.

Says AFL Lacks Courage

Mr. Randolph told the convention that the A.F. of L. had never shown that it possesses the moral courage realistically to face and

(Continued on page 12)

NEW YORK AGE

October 24, 1942

A. Philip Randolph Flays AFL For Not Attacking Problem

(Continued From Page One)

handle this question of racial discrimination and that it had dodged behind the smoke screen and taken refuge in the so-called theory of autonomy of the international union.

He severely condemned the action of Tom Ray, secretary of Local 72 of the Boilermakers, Shipbuilders, Iron Workers and Helpers Union in the Henry J. Kaiser shipyards in Portland, Ore., where 30 Negroes who were imported from New York were discriminated against. He told the convention that President William Green, Matthew Woll and John P. Frey knew that the report of the Resolution Committee was meaningless and would have no affect on the problem of racial discrimination is the unions affiliated with the A. F. of L.

The resolution presented by M. P. Webster, first international vice president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and A. Philip Randolph, international president, called for the establishment of a minorities committee to explore the problems of discrimination in the A.F. of L. and conduct a campaign of education among the members and officials of the A.F. of L.

Randolph Assailed

Dan Tobin, president of the Teamsters Union, sat in the convention during Randolph's bitter assault on the A.F. of L. unions that practice color bias against Negro workers and said nothing but on the following day he called for the right of special privilege to make a statement in which he attacked Mr. Randolph and charged him with fomenting dangerous feelings of hatred between the races. He said he [illegible] amazed at Mr. Randolph's sta[illegible] that upwards of twenty [illegible] Negroes would not conti[illegible] discrimination, se[illegible] jim-crow in Americ[illegible] of Tobin's attack, [illegible] to reply but Pr[illegible] William Green refused to gr[illegible] him the floor on the grounds that the time was far spent. This was considered by a large number of the delegates as a raw deal

ASK AFL TO HELP RESTORE FEPC POWER

Milton P. Webster Makes Plea Before Confab At Ontario

TORONTO, Can. — M. P. Webster, first international vice president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and member of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, in commenting October 16 on a resolution submitted to the convention by the brotherhood delegates calling for the restoration of FEPC to its original status of independence, described the origin of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice.

Webster pointed out that FEPC was rendering a signal service not only to the Negro workers but to the American trade union movement in breaking down barriers against the employment of Negro wage earners.

He indicated that the committee was handicapped, however, by virtue of its limited funds and small staff with which to police the Executive Order, and called upon the American Federation of Labor to give its full support to the committee with a view to helping secure adequate funds and a complete and sufficient personnel to conduct the important and vital work of the committee.

CHICAGO DEFENDER

October 24, 1942

AFRO-AMERICAN

October 24, 1942

afro-American — Oct 24, 1942

AFL Evasive as Randolph Hits Bias

TORONTO, Can., (ANP).—The American Federation of Labor's 62nd convention buried, as in previous years, the issue of race discrimination and jim-crow practices by most of its affiliated unions.

A proposal by A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, to form a committee to fight unfavorable racial attitudes in the federation, was voted down on Wednesday. Only dissenting "No" was shouted by Milton P. Webster, the other colored delegate from the porters' union.

Randolph Speaks Out

AFL leaders and the more important unions were assailed from the floor for 30 minutes by Randolph for dodging the proposal. He charged speeches of other delegates about democracy mere "baloney."

An attempt was made to avoid the issue by the convention and John P. Frey, secretary, read a statement adopted by the resolutions committee declaring the AFL firmly opposed to discrimination and stating that the convention proposed to do nothing about it.

While Frey spoke, Randolph walked slowly toward the platfrom. William Green, AF of L president who was re-elected for his nineteenth consecutive term, squirmed and the delegates became silent in expectancy of what they knew was to come. Upon recognition by Green, Randolph said:

Democracy Speeches "Baloney"

"We have heard many grand and splendid speeches at this convention, and if a man from Mars had come here he would have thought most of the speech makers believed in democracy. When he learned that many of the same men denied colored people the right to join their unions he would reach the conclusion that these speeches are baloney.

"The American Federation of Labor cannot say it is democratic unless it cleans its house and says that, regardless of race, color and creed, any worker can join any A F of L union—and that any union which does not have this spirit of democracy will be expelled from the federation."

Randolph cited four types of discrimination inside the AF of L: color clauses, unwritten laws, "undemocratic auxiliaries" and a new member be "recommended by present members."

Offenders Called by Name

Citing the urgency of mobilizing manpower in the war emergency, Randolph blasted the International Machinists' Association, the Boilermakers' Union, and others of being guilty of "color clauses." He castigated the Electrical Workers, Plumbers, and Pipefitters, and others like them for requiring the recommendation of present members.

Other brotherhoods attacked included the Carpenters' Union, which bars colored members; Randolph cited a recent instance where a local in Texas barred colored from working on a housing project for members of their own race because white workers threatened to strike if they were employed.

Flays J.C. Auxiliaries

Randolph also branded the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks "undemocratic" for establishment of a jim-crow auxiliary for colored members, and bitterly denounced Tom Ray, secretary of Local 72 of the Boilermakers, who is union czar at the Kaiser Shipbuilding Yards.

According to Randolph, Ray "boarded a train and read the riot act to colored workers" who had traveled from New York to Portland to work at Kaiser.

AF of L chiefs this year had no answers for Randolph as in former years. They listened to his militant speech in silence, and were content to let the resolution adopted earlier stand.

Defense Attempted

However, Daniel J. Tobin, president of the Teamsters' Brotherhood, Thursday replied to Randolph's charges of racial discrimination. He said the allegations were "brutally untrue insofar as they relate to 90 per cent of the organizations affiliated here."

The resolution passed Wednesday said in part:

"It is unfortunately true that, because of geographical situation and other reasons, there still remains a degree of discrimination, not only against the colored race, but against other groups because of their racial origin; but we have no hesitancy in comparing the record of the AF of L on the question of race discrimination with the activities of any other organization in the United States and Canada.

"We are doubtful whether any other method than the educational one can make the progress which is necessary, for experience has been that where compulsory methods are applied, prejudices are increased instead of diminished."

Things Seen, Heard And Done

N. Y. Age

AMONG PULLMAN EMPLOYEES

By J. T. REID

Pullman porters throughout the country are beginning to stop and wonder if they have done the right thing by affiliating themselves with outside labor groups. This question is now being discussed among the porters more than ever. One of the reasons for it is that at the last international meeting held in Toronto, Canada by the A.F. of L., Mr. Randolph was denied an opportunity to reply to Dan Tobih's accusations, charging him with fomenting dangerous feelings of hatred between the races.

Personally, I don't see how Mr. Randolph or any one else associat with him could have been disappointed in the officers of the A. F. of L., especially when you stop and consider that these men are elected by the masses of that organization, which are practically all white. Of course, many of us long ago realized that organized labor is here to stay, and it is incumbent upon all workers to belong to some organization. But my argument is: You should affiliate with an organization which is free from graft and political parasites.

Today the working man of this country has been put in the position of not knowing just where he stands until election is over. It makes no difference to your labor leaders, what your beliefs are or what you think is right. It is their political obligation that don't support them you cannot don't support them you cannot work. That's why I have always advocated a strong independent Negro union, one that would offer competition to all white unions.

We have Negroes who are competent and proficient to work at any trade in this or any other country. Why not organize them for that purpose? Let's be a competitor to the white union until he removes from his constitution las that discriminate against the Negro worker. History shows us that we have lost many jobs through our affiliation with white unions, or, in other words, since the Negro has allowed himself to become a member of the trade union he has not only lost what jobs he has had but he has actually lost an opportunity to get a job elsewhere on account of his white brothers refusing to work on the job with him.

Some of our people say that the CIO is different. According to the many reports on their activities they are no different from the A.F. of L. If anything: if they are successful with their views they will dominate our very United States Government.

Our old friend, P. A. Sample, is still confined in the Provident Hospital in Chicago. However, we are hopin[illegible] that he will be released from [illegible]re soon.

De[illegible] John: [illegible]ow that Scoopy is about [illegible] be in[illegible]ted into the Army I was [illegible] wo[illegible]ering if you will miss h[illegible] An[illegible] if you and your fr[illegible] J. [illegible] are gonig to throw [illegible] before he leaves on[illegible] his [illegible]. If so, please pass [illegible]und and I am [illegible] will all chip in. Mart[illegible] she will be glad to m[illegible] cake. C. H. Rains wants [illegible] his radio for the party. [illegible]orget dear John to contact the voters of your district in behalf of L. W. Werner who is the State Senatorial candidate from the 19th District.

NEW YORK AGE

October 31, 1942

[illegible]TERDAM NEWS

[illegible]ctober 31, 1942

Amsterdam - Oct. 31/42

Around and Beyond

By Frank Crosswaith

THE speech made by A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, before the recent convention of the American Federation of Labor at Toronto, Canada, is indicative of the revolutionary changes which are occurring in the thinking of Negroes.

Frank R. Crosswaith

Mr. Randolph was listened to with rapt attention and was applauded loudly by the delegates. This of course, was to be expected because Mr. Randolph is undoubtedly one of the most eloquent and effective speakers upon the American platform today. And too, as a scholar with a knowledge of the social sciences and a clear understanding of the labor movement and its ultimate objective, he stood out among the many delegates to that convention like a full-orbed moon on a starless night. However, when these same delegates were given an opportunity to vote upon the constructive proposals offered by Mr. Randolph regarding the Negro and the labor movement his proposals were voted down by a substantial majority.

If the leaders of the A. F. of L., and the delegates who are unwilling to discard their custom of treating the Negro worker unfairly, think that they have solved the problems which Randolph brought to their attention when they cast a negative vote, they are sadly mistaken; and sooner or later they will be compelled to recognize their error.

Would Benefit Whites Too

The revolutionary period through which we are passing is producing among the results a Negro worker who is determined to win every right—inside and outside of the labor movement—to which he is entitled both as an American citizen and as a worker, and the day is not far distant when victory will crown our efforts. The results of our victory will prove of great advantage not only to the Negro masses but also to the white workers. For as long as ignorance, race prejudice and discrimination can be used by the reactionary employing class of the nation and of the world as weapons with which to divide and weaken labor, white workers will never be able to achieve the maximum measure of social security and economic justice to which they are entitled.

Those individuals who are advocating the withdrawal of the Negro from the American Federation of Labor are suggesting a course of action which would be most harmful to the Negro worker and to Negroes as a whole. Whether they know it or not, they are recommending surrender, and surrender has long been discarded from the vocabulary of the New Negro. Contrary to the many loose thinkers and loud talkers, there are many individuals in both the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. who are opposed to the practice of treating the Negro with equality just as there are many narrow, prejudiced individuals in both branches of the American labor movement. There is no more logic in suggesting withdrawal of the Negro from the A. F. of L. than there is in the suggestion of those who once advocated the withdrawal of the Negro from America because of the denial to us of so many of our rights and privileges as American citizens. The Negro must steel himself to fight with courage, determination and intelligence until he enjoys every right enjoyed by other members of the human race.

A Chance for Negroes

The present gubernatorial campaign offers to the Negro an excellent opportunity to strike a blow in behalf of progress and freedom. The Republican party, the Democratic party and the American Labor party each has nominated a candidate for Governor. In all the speeches thus far made by these candidates, the candidate of the American Labor Party, Dean Alfange, is the only one who has spoken clearly, forcefully, courageously and with sincerity upon the vital problems that affect the Negro as a citizen and as a worker.

In the 21st A. D. the candidate of the American Labor party is a Negro girl, Mrs. Maida Springer. The presence of this Negro girl in the Assembly would be a credit to all of us. Maida Springer is courageous, intelligent and a fighter for her race and class. She is a member of the I.L.G.W.U.—the union that stands out in the American labor movement as the most progressive and in whose ranks the Negro shares equality of duties and opportunities with every other member. She is an executive board member of the powerful Dressmakers Union Local 22 where she enjoys the respect of her fellow unionists. A Negro, Ludlow W. Werner, in the State Senate from the 19th District would also add another proof to the fact that we are responding to the influence of the current revolutionary period.

Ability is necessary, but can't go very far with reliability.

The reason why, perhaps, there are so few conscientious men and women in the world today is because the unrateful have made the conscientious ones go too long without pay.

The one thing men don't seem to understand about the Christian religion is that, what you give, you take with you, and what you withhold, you have lost.

Officers of the Joint Council and the affiliated Locals as they attend first meeting as members of the Fifteen (15) Cooperating Group at the Morrison Hotel in Chicago. Left to right (sitting): Sherman Fonville, 351, Chicago; Maceo V. Littlejohn, 516, St. Paul; Solon C. Bell, Joint Council, Chicago; George E. Brown, 370, New York; Richard W. Smith, Joint Council, Chicago; Leyton Weston, 354, St. Louis; and Ernest Jones, 351, Chicago. Standing: J. M. McConnell, 495, Washington, D. C.; Frank Larche, 456 and 582, Oakland, Calif.; McGill Simms, 351, Chicago; John E. Hargrove, 465, Los Angeles; Thomas Edge, 351, Chicago; Warren Seltzer, 351, Chicago; R. C. Long, 465, Omaha; and James R. Powell, 351, Chicago.

HISTORY OF STRUGGLE

Prior to 1934 only two dining car unions were affiliated with our International, but at the time of the Convention of our International union this number had grown to five: Locals 351, 354, 465, 456 and 582. Contracts were held on only the Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and the New York Central (Lines West). These Local unions knew little or nothing of one another's plans or programs. There was great need for unity and national planning in order that Dining Car Organizations could combine their strength and resources to gain common objections. With this purpose in mind, the delegates of these Local Unions at the 1934 Convention introduced a resolution calling for affiliation of the International Union to the Railway Labor Department of the American Federation of Labor in order that we could join in national movements. The Convention unanimously adopted this resolution and deposited the initiation fee with the Secretary of that body.

The Railway Labor Department of the A. F. of L. rejected our application for the reason that we were not a representative organization of railroad labor—we had very few roads under contract and were financially weak. This defeat only served to spur the work and activities of certain [illegible] saw the need for unity and national planning—and these Local Unions—now grown to nine—reintroduced the same resolution in the 1936 Convention of the International Union. Again the resolution was unanimously adopted. In 1937, a Conference of all Dining Car Unions was called in Omaha, and from this Conference was born the Joint Council of Dining Car Employes. In May of 1938 the General Executive Board of the International Union recognized and made the Council a distinct entity within the International. Since its inception the Joint Council can report considerable progress—which reached its peak in 1941—when over 9,000 dining car workers voted to strike along with other railroad workers on the wage issues. The result is now known to all of us.

However, after the birth of the Council at Omaha, offices were opened in Chicago where the Council began to prepare and argue cases before the National Railroad Adjustment Board. This is one of the main functions of the Council and the many reinstatements, the thousands of dollars recovered to the members of our Local Unions is conclusive proof of its success.

It is now a little over four years since [illegible]

a distinct entity within the International Union—the nine Local Unions have now grown to fifteen—and members of our International Unions work on the lines of every railroad of the Nation. Contracts of employment have been negotiated with 47 railroad systems involving over 120 rairoad companies, covering some 100,000 miles of railroad lines. From the vast interior of the Dominion of Canada to Mexico City, from the Pacific Ocean east to the Atlantic—dining car workers are today united in one strong International Union—The Hotel and Restaurant Employes International Alliance—the Fifteenth of the Standard Cooperating Railroad Labor Unions.

This latest success is due to the work of the Joint Council and the cooperation of our General President. At a meeting of the Joint Council held in August of 1942 a committee was appointed to call upon the General President for the purpose of again attempting affiliation with the Standard Railway Labor Unions. The Committee comprised of Theodore Jackson, William Pollard, Richard W. Smith, Warren Seltzer and George E. Brown met President Florie at Buffalo, N. Y. The "ball was started rolling" and within ten days affiliation was a fact. The [illegible]

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1942.

The New York Times

RACE BIAS CHARGED TO 5 INSTITUTIONS

Hodson Says That Orphanages Have Refused to Admit Any Negro Children

TO LOSE 405 CITY WARDS

Mayor Is Informed of Action Under the Provisions of Race Discrimination Amendment

William Hodson, Commissioner of the Department of Welfare, named five charitable institutions yesterday that he said practiced racial discrimination in the admission of inmates.

In a letter sent to Mayor La Guardia two weeks ago and made public yesterday afternoon, Mr. Hodson said the five institutions refused to admit Negro children. Because of this practice, Mr. Hodson informed the Mayor, he had ordered the removal of 405 white children that these institutions were caring for and for whom the city paid varying weekly rates.

A report prepared by the Division of Public Welfare accompanied the letter and Mr. Hodson wrote:

"You will note from this report that the Catholic and Jewish agencies have all expressed their willingness to comply with the provisions of the Race Discrimination Amendment, and all but five of the Protestant agencies have agreed to do so.

"In the case of these five we are removing the children as rapidly as possible. They have a total of 405 children and it takes some time to get these children back to their own homes or under other suitable care. We are moving as rapidly as possible in this connection.

Five Institutions Named

"The names of the institutions that have refused to abide by the Race Discrimination Amendment follow:

"American Female Guardian Society and Home for the Friendless, (Woodycrest), 938 Woodycrest Avenue, the Bronx.

"Orphan Asylum Society of the City of Brooklyn, 1435 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn.

"Orphan Asylum Society of the City of New York (Graham School), Dobbs Ferry-on-Hudson, N. Y. [illegible] Field, Valhalla, N. Y.

"Society for the Relief of Half-Orphan and Destitute Children (Steuart House), 110 Manhattan Avenue, New York City.

"I am sorry to have to report to you that these charitable institutions, having a long record of splendid service to children, will not give up their present discriminatory practices."

Under the amendment adopted by the Board of Estimate April 27, which became effective Oct. 1, no charitable institution may receive money from the city if it practices racial discrimination in the admission of inmates. The Commissioner said that there are twenty-seven Protestant agencies including three shelters for unmarried mothers.

He added that none of the ten Jewish or twenty-four Catholic agencies that admit dependent or neglected children practice racial discrimination.

Mr. Hodson quoted spokesmen for the five institutions as having said it was not practical nor a wise policy to have Negro and

---

DINING CAR WORKER CHICAGO [illegible] 1942

To Probe Railroads

New York.—Milton P. Webster, international vice president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and a member of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, has been named head of a sub-committee of CoFEP set up to probe problems of Negro railroad workers.

The announcement said the subcommitee would probe the problems of "Negro railroad workers, including firemen, hostlers, brakemen, switchmen, shop crafts, and other railway vocations on the question of discriminations practiced against Negroes by displacing them with younger white workers and denying them promotional rights."

Webster assumed his new duties immediately and has already begun probes of charges made by railway workers. A corps of expert investigators are conducting inquiries and CoFEP will hold hearings. Officials of the railroad industry will be called to testify on discriminatory practices against workers on account of race, color or creed.

THE DENVER POST

OCTOBER 23, 1942

You'd Be Surprised!

(By George W. Stimpson.)

PULLMAN CARS

OWING to increased traveling and more liberal tips, many Pullman porters are now making as high as $500 a month.

A standard Pullman car weighs 165,000 pounds—82 tons.

* * *

Senator Walter F. George, Democrat of Georgia, is president of "The Society for the Prevention of Calling Sleeping Car Porters George."

* * *

The longest regular run of a Pullman car is between San Francisco and New Orleans, a distance of 2,492 miles.

The laundry operated by the Pullman company washes about 125 million pieces of linen a year—an average of half a million pieces for each work day.

* * *

In 1939 the Pullman company bought nearly 50,000 yards of carpet for its cars.

* * *

The average distance traveled by a Pullman car in a year is more than 100,000 miles.

Last February a Pullman car was named Wake Island as a tribute to the gallant defense of that island by the United States marines.

A Pullman car generates for its own use enough electricity to supply four average homes. Each Pullman is equipped with 100 electric light bulbs in addition to fans and air-conditioning apparatus. If all the electric light bulbs used yearly on Pullman cars were placed ten feet apart, they would light a path 298 miles long.

* * *

In 1819 a man named Benjamin Dearborn "made a fool of himself" by suggesting that railroad "carriages" be "furnished with accommodations for passengers to take their meals and their rest during passage, as in packets; that they be . . . so capacious as to accommodate twenty, thirty or more passengers, with their baggage . . . that . . . the carriages will move with a rapidity at least equal to a mile in three minutes."

* * *

In 1858 George Mortimer Pullman, a master carpenter, conceived the idea of sleeping cars from observing doubledeck bunks in log cabins in the west.

His first sleeping cars were merely two day coaches on the Chicago and Alton railroad equipped with sleeping facilities. Abraham Lincoln rode on one of these "Pullmans" during the first [illegible] ment.

The first sleeping cars built by Pullman were labeled Pullman's but sleeping cars."

* * *

The first [illegible] Pullman-built sleeping car was The Pioneer, operated from 1865 to late in the '90's. This car was used to take the Lincoln family from Chicago to Springfield in 1865, while the body of the assassinated president was transported in a baggage car.

Lincoln's eldest son, Robert, later became president of the Pullman [illegible]

1942, George Matthew Adams

[illegible] Morning, October 21, 1942

News Behind The News

By Paul Mallon

Mallon Says There Is A Negro Problem, But It's Not a Legal One

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20—The house passed the poll tax repeal and the colored political leaders have told their following that they have done something for them.

For the past 20 years of my Washington experience, and no doubt longer, a federal anti-lynching bill has been introduced by every Congress in the senate.

It never passes.

No one ever expects it to pass.

The Republicans used to propose it in the pre-New Deal days, whereupon the Southern Democrats would filibuster against it. Now a Northern Democrat customarily presents it and the Southern Democrats filibuster against it.

'The Negro Gets Nothing'

Afterwards, both sides return to their respective communities, gather in popular acclaim and vote for reelection.

But the Negro, in whose interest the biennial anti-lynching bill is supposed to be proposed, gets nothing.

However, his Negro leaders, who always foster the legislation, demonstrate that they have acted vigorously in his behalf, so everyone seems satisfied.

This situation on the anti-lynching bill is characteristic of the way political handling of the Negro problem has delayed his natural advancement for the past 40 years or more.

Not a Legal Problem

There is a Negro problem. It is not a legal problem, such as the anti-lynching bill assumes, or such as the current clamor for repeal of poll taxes assumes. The Negro is legally free.

The Constitution and the law give him fair treatment. His is certainly not a political problem, because politicians of all hues are fawning over his problem continuously, while doing nothing about it.

Legally and politically, a Negro is entitled to any job, to any position in life. He has not attained the position to which he is legally and politically entitled, because he has not satisfied the social and economic requirements.

As all politicians should know, you cannot make a man socially or economically equal by law, be he white, black or pink. That is a position which he can only reach himself by his personal attainments.

You cannot make a white person sit with a Negro or vice versa anywhere, unless both want to, and both will not want to until they have reached the same social and economic level.

In the natural course of events, if the Negro is allowed the advantages of education to improve himself, there will soon be a Negro on the Supreme Court of the United States and in all positions of prominence and power.

Must Earn Equality

But, you cannot legislate him into that position. Politicians cannot fawn or pamper him into it. Free housing and WPA will not put him there.

He can only earn it for himself.

The Negro problem then is to raise the average Negro civilization of the country to the white average, not by fiat or other artificial means, but by providing the Negro with the opportunities to advance himself into it. Amazing strides have been made.

No doubt he would be further along if the politicians had appreciated the lesson of the Reconstruction days, namely that any attempt to gain this goal by fiat or legal impositions merely delays his progress, casts him back to try to conquer again the bitterness of resistance.

Seeking Own People

tutions and that it was too difficult to solve the problem. He said the Mayor had tried to have these measurements reverse their positions but had been unsuccessful. He quoted the Mayor as having said yesterday that "I am very personally grieved and pained that we have to face a situation like this at this particular time in the world's history."

Scale Paid by City

Mr. Hodson explained that the city pays $6 weekly for the care of each child in dormitory-style institutions and $7 weekly for each child in institutions that house such child in a cottage. He said the city also paid $7.50 for boarding care where children are taken in private homes.

The Protestant institutions that admit Negro as well as whites take care of about 5,000 children, Mr. Hodson said. The ten Jewish institutions take care of 4,000 and the twenty-four Catholic institutions look after 9,000 children. Mr. Hodson pointed out that it has been the experience of the Welfare Department that "Negro children can be brought up with white children if the attitude of the management is sympathetic and there is an understanding of the needs of both groups."

"We are fighting this war," he said, "to prove there is no master race and that all races are entitled to equal opportunity."

Mr. Hodson expressed appreciation to the agencies that have agreed not to practice discrimination. He said that "they are showing the way in progressive institutional management in line with true democratic principles."

He was asked if the Welfare Department specified that white and Negro children must be cared for under one roof and replied that "the department does not direct how they be cared for; it simply wants to be sure there will be no discrimination."

Mr. Hodson disclosed that about 2,000 of a total of 3,000 Negro children on the city lists are Protestant.

[illegible] practically been dropped with the anti-lynching bill by the natural course of increasing Negro intelligence and corresponding white fairness expressed in courts of justice.

The Negro problem can be said to have been solved completely when a Negro no longer feels he must demand equality because he has attained it for himself.

If you were a white person in China or Africa, you would normally seek out your own kind.

Political Agitation

If left to his own resources, the Negro no doubt would do this now. But he is subject to constant political agitation, fostered in communist or revolutionary aspirations, that he should seek a position which he can only get by mutual acceptance.

Instead of repealing poll taxes, give the Negroes more schools and better teachers, so their children can advance themselves in the world, earn more money and pay their poll taxes, so they can qualify to vote by any educational restrictions.

Let them all just learn enough at school to know how much the politicians have kidded them and they will all be qualified to vote intelligently.

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH, recent visitor to Hampton Institute, examines sketches which Joseph Mack (extreme right) of High Point, NC has made for a mural depicting the struggle of Negro workers against discrimination in labor unions. Also in foto are Dr. Viktor Lowenfeld, art director, and President Malcolm S. MacLean of Hampton Institute.

Randolph Suggests Ban Of Closed Jimcro Shops

Commenting upon the movement recently projected by 14 non-operating railway unions to secure a closed shop, A. Philip Randolph, president, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, said that unless railway unions eliminate the color bar from their constitutions and rituals and admit Negro railway workers as full-fledged members, the closed shop ought to be denied these unions.

Until the color clause is taken out, the closed shop may be the means of eliminating Negroes from the railway industry as firemen, switchmen, brakemen and shopcraft workers, concluded Randolph.

PHERSON WRITES LETTER OF PRAISE TO WENDELL L. WILLKIE

tinued from page 1)

o ask if freedom is supposed be priceless for the white man for the western world, but of account to them in the east, the treatment accorded the Negro in America is a standard by which the tend to evaluate the sincerity of our nation. This is natural.

To our foes, the fierce exploitation of Negroes politically, socially, and economically in America provides the basis for some of the most damaging anti-American propaganda among our friends in the east. This we shouldn't ignore.

Hence, in enumerating the holes that we are punching in our resevoir of good will among our allies, it seems an incongruity that you should pass the opportunity to call to the attention of the millions of good and sincere people in America the half-ignorant, half patronizing way in which some Americans persist in keeping open the hole in our resevoir of good will among our allies created by the maltreatment of Negro Americans in America and in our armed forces abroad.

With painful disappointment, perhaps, but surely without malice, the Negro certainly must view your neglect as a failure—failure to China upon whom the safety of the American ramparts we watch partly depends, failure to India upon whom the existance of England so largely depends, failure to Russia who has been a shining beacon to the allied nations in their dark hour, and failure to the entire Orient who look to Americans in the west for the greatest of all lights, sincerity of purpose and morale as well as materials and men.

Last, though perhaps least, Mr. Willkie, failure to the Negro, too, who through the toil and tears, devotion and bloodshed of a quarter of a thousand years, has remained ever faithful, giving all for the up-building and perservation of this, our great nation even as he goes again gladly to war to fight for all that is dear to most of the world today.

Not many decades ago, a question involving the Negro in America was the basis of one most ghastly fratericidal orgies of all history, pitting one half of our nation against the other. We survived, though with an ugly wound.

Our attempts to assure the world a share in the principles of the Atlantic Charter must be a ridiculous spectacle to behold with our vicious system of double-standard citizenship glaring through our hypicrisy on the Negro question.

It is of little avail that we should play the ostrich so long as the rest of the world scrutinizes with awe the ungainliness of our queer position.

The Omaha World-Herald recently quoted Dr. Walter R.

INCREASE IN PROFIT SHOWN BY PULLMAN

$12,352,407 Cleared in Nine Months, Against $7,853,401 in Same Period in 1941

EQUAL TO $3.74 A SHARE

Net in 3d Quarter Declines to $2,975,485—Sleeping-Car Traffic Breaks Record

Pullman, Inc., reported yesterday for the nine months ended on Sept. 30 a consolidated net income of $12,352,407, after all charges and taxes, equal to $3.74 each on 3,302,897 capital shares. For the corresponding period of 1941 the company had a net income of $7,853,401, or $2.38 a share.

D. A. Crawford, president, stated that the company's income of $2,975,485, or 90 cents a share, in the third quarter was the lowest for any similar period this year and he attributed the poor results to the virtual suspension of production of cars for the railroads by the War Production Board.

The balance sheet as of Sept. 30 shows current assets of $128,561,440 and current liabilities $16,497,432, compared with $94,893,691 and $6,717,291, respectively, on Sept. 30, 1941. Cash and United States Government securities amounted to $51,215,959, against $33,417,652.

Mr. Crawford said that the volume of sleeping car traffic is surpassing all previous records, with troop movements and other government travel accounting for nearly one-half the business handled.

The report stated that an additional $7,500,000 had been set aside out of earnings in the nine months for a special reserve for contingencies. It also disclosed that the excess profits tax exemption had been exhausted and any earnings realized in the fourth quarter will be subject in their entirety to excess profits taxes at the rate of 90 per cent.

McPherson Writes Letter Of Praise To Wendell L. Willkie

Calls Attention To Omission

October 31, 1942

Mr. Wendell L. Willkie
109 East 42nd Street,
New York, New York.

My Dear Mr. Willkie:

I hope you will recall our several meetings. Perhaps you will. I am writing to express my appreciation for the greatness of your report to the nation on your recent global survey. Your address of the night of October 26 might go down as one of the greatest speeches of all time. But for one aspect, it perhaps should.

You realize, of course, that not only the entire nation was listening intently to your contribution, but the world you visited and described also was vitally interested.

I reiterate there probably has never been a stronger, more clear cut argument made against world imperialism and its associated "coloracy". But as you masterfully plead the cause the resident of Belen or Na- in Brazil, or one toting his den on his head in Nigeria, prime minister or a king in ypt, or a veiled woman in dad, a shah in Iran, a fol- r of Atturak in the streets kora, or a resolute factory in Russia and others, I t help but feel that simple manded in the develop- f your speech some con- pn of the half-caste citi- p accorded a loyal tenth own people and a willing nxious tenth of our fight- forces.

our friends of the Orient

(Continued on page 6)

STAR

NOVEMBER 8, 1942

Judd, a former medical missionery to China as stating that the United Nations could gain "a billion peasant allies" in the Orient by making them see through deeds, that they mean what they say that the Atlantic Charter applies to the whole world.

Let us pray God that those deeds will be forth-coming and that among them will be the determined effort to tear down and to cast out forever the color caste system of America without which deed, all others may leave our allies still cold and suspicious of the sincere conviction of the good people of our nation.

It is absolutelyy essential that we work for an entire world wherein, influenced by the principle of truth, hypocrisy and deceit are unknown among us, and the heart and the tongue pain in promoting each other's welfare, and rejoicing in each other's prosperity.

In this we of the multitude must depend upon the few men of the world of your courage and understanding for guidance.

Trusting I may remain always your friend, I am

Sincerely yours,
J. Westbrook McPherson
1712 North 30th Street,
Omaha, Nebraska

NEGROES FAVOR THE CIO

Courier Poll Shows Overwhelming Support for the CIO As Against the AFL

The American Negro, more labor conscious in the last decade than ever before in his history, expressed to The Pittsburgh Courier's Bureau of Public Sentiment this week a preference for the policies of the Congress of Industrial Organization, rather than those of the American Federation of Labor.

In response to the question, "Do you believe the AFL offers more to the Amercan Negro than the CIO?" a completely sampled cross-section of the colored population answered "No" 72.6% of the time; "Yes" 12.5% of the time and a rather large proportion of 14.9% could not make up their minds one way or the other.

"A RAW DEAL IN BOTH"

Such answers in the latter classification as: "Don't believe either offers much," "Much room for improvement in both," "The Negro has gotten some raw deals in both," definitely proves that the race is not unaware of the faults in organized labor.

Poll reactions in general, however, gave credit to the attempt made by the CIO in recognizing the industrial worker as a component part of the labor movement. Resentment is still held by a great majority against the AFL hierarchy and the admitted biased attitude which many in that group possess in regard to the Negro worker and his aspirations for better living conditions.

RANDOLPH CITED

Acts of discrimination as practiced by both organizations were brought to the front by the alert and sensitive Negro thinkers. The annual "Randolph humiliation" was a factor strongly involved in anti-AFL sentiment. This yearly insult to the Pullman porter president hurts that organization's chances for Negro sympathy, if indeed, say poll followers, they really want it.

On the other hand, the CIO has consistently welcomed the Negro into most of its locals and one finds him integrated actively into the affairs of that organization. Appreciation and approval for this trend was expressed more and more as the poll progressed.

WOMEN WERE DIFFERENT

Other factors favoring the CIO were cited. These included: (a) the admission of the United Transport Workers (Red Caps) into the group and Willard Townsend's inclusion on the international body; (b) Phil Murray's attempt to exclude unfair employment practices in industry; (c) recognition of menial employes as important cogs in the labor movement.

The low percentage of women (58.9%) who approved of the CIO, as compared with the poll norm, remains unexplained, except that the Negro woman has not entered into the industrial picture in great numbers as yet, at least in those occupations which are highly organized.

Negroes are labor-conscious. This fact is irrefutable.

Next week's question: DO YOU BELIEVE THE NAVY OFFERS THE AMERICAN NEGRO GREATER OPPORTUNITY TO SERVE HIS COUNTRY THAN THE ARMY?

'BIG 4' RAIL UNIONS TO SEEK WAGE RISE

Operating Workmen Will Meet in Chicago Dec. 7 to Map Demand for Increase

FIGURE ON 10 TO 15%

With Non-Operating Employes, More Than 900,000 Are Joined in Pay Quest

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19—Chiefs of the "Big Four" operating railroad unions and of the Switchmen's Union of North America will confer in Chicago Dec. 7 to canvass the situation prior to making demands for a wage increase on behalf of 350,000 rail employes.

The fifteen nonoperating railway unions demanded a wage increase of 20 cents an hour on Sept. 25 and a union shop for 900,000 employes on Class I railroads.

When the general chairmen meet in Chicago the wage demands are likely to call for an increase of between 10 and 15 per cent to cover the rise in living costs in the last two years.

David B. Robertson, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Railroad Firemen and Enginemen, declined to discuss the program of the Chicago conference other than to say that the revision which would be sought in the wage scale would seek to bring the unions into a balance with others that have had recent wage increases.

Rises Granted Last December

Last December the nonoperating employes were awarded a wage increase of 10 cents an hour while the operating employes won a wage increase of 9.5 cents an hour from an emergency fact-finding board.

The discussion at the forthcoming Chicago meeting will be concerned partly with the President's Executive order of Oct. 3 calling for wage stabilization and the War Labor Board's policy respecting the order.

The demands of the non-operating unions are now being discussed between the individual unions and the managements of the carriers. An effort may be made soon to have a national wage conference.

The demands of the non-operating groups included one for a minimum of 70 cents an hour as well as for the union shop. It was the first time that a demand for the union shop had been made in recent years by any of the rail unions.

In some quarters it is held that the Railway Labor Act barred a closed shop, while others maintained that this section had been inserted in the act merely to ban "yellow-dog" agreements and to prevent companies from forcing employes into company-dominated unions.

Negotiations the First Step

Under the law negotiations must first be conducted on the individual roads and then, if unsuccessful, efforts may be made to hold a national conference. If there is no agreement by the parties the National Mediation Board is empowered to step in and seek to adjust the dispute. If mediation fails the dispute goes to a fact-finding board appointed by the President, provided there is a threat to the interruption of commerce.

No strike threats, however, are possible during the war under an arrangement whereby the President appointed a fact-finding panel under Dr. W. M. Leiserson. Dr. Leiserson has authority to designate a panel for consideration of a railroad dispute from a group of nine men named by Mr. Roosevelt.

PM, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1942

Railroad Brotherhoods Asked To Join FDR 'Labor Cabinet'

By JAMES A. WECHSLER
PM's Bureau

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—President Roosevelt has invited a spokesman of the independent Railroad Brotherhoods, representing more than 1,000,000 workers, to join his "labor cabinet," previously restricted to leaders of AFL and CIO.

With AFL-CIO unity talks expected to begin next week, FDR's move is regarded as paving the way for inclusion of the powerful railroad unions in the peace conferences.

The railroad bloc, made up of unions unaffiliated with either AFL or CIO, probably will be represented for the first time at a "labor cabinet" meeting. One is scheduled at the White House today. It is understood that either David B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, or A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, will act as spokesman for the Brotherhoods.

Linked to Unity

Presence of the railway union representatives at this session is linked closely to the approaching unity conferences. Resumption of AFL-CIO conferences first was proposed by the President himself at one of his meetings with his labor committee. It is considered unlikely that FDR would now summon a railroad spokesman unless he envisaged broadening of the unity meetings to embrace railroad workers.

While the dominant railroad unions traditionally have played a lone hand in major labor developments, they recently have indicated a desire for closer relations with both U. S. and world labor groups. When the AFL negotiated privately with the British Trades Union Congress to establish an Anglo-American committee, the Railroad Brotherhoods joined the CIO in protesting the "deal" and demanded representation on such committee.

Working Agreements Seen

These events created a closer bond between CIO and the Brotherhoods; and inclusion of the railroad bloc in the unity talks may strengthen CIO President Philip Murray's hand in bargaining with the Federation. The exact status of the railroad groups in the unity talks may be worked out at today's White House session.

It is believed possible that the railroad group will not take a direct part in the peace meetings but that working agreements including the Brotherhoods will be fashioned. One labor spokesman envisaged the possibility of numerous labor committees, covering all major national problems, on which AFL, CIO and Railroad spokesmen would function jointly, pending full-fledged unification.

The "labor cabinet" to which FDR now has invited a railroad representative was created last January, shortly after John L. Lewis's "peace blitzkrieg" collapsed. As an alternative to Lewis's demand for immediate AFL and CIO talks—a demand made without the knowledge of CIO President Murray—President Roosevelt suggested formation of an AFL-CIO council to meet with him regularly, act on war problems, and point the way toward ultimate unity.

With the railroad unions now emerging as a factor in the talks, conflict between AFL and CIO mounted again today as the United Steel Workers Union, CIO, issued a bitter reply to an article published in this week's AFL News-Service. The News-Service, in an editorial signed by AFL Publicist Philip Pearl, had sharply attacked Murray, charged that he had raised "phony" objections to unity, and accused him of flirting with CIO's "left-wing conspirators."

The Steel Workers executive board, meeting here yesterday, assailed Pearl's "vicious attack" and called on AFL leaders to "repudiate or support the statements of this individual Pearl."

"It is unfortunate," the statement said, "that this nitwitted, wholly irresponsible, and very ignorant individual should be permitted to issue statements of this character at a time when bona fide representatives of labor are endeavoring to work out satisfactory arrangements for both AFL and CIO.

"It is needless for the Steel Workers Union to make any statement concerning P[illegible] Murray's political affiliations. It is suf[illegible] for the Board to say he is an outst[illegible] American, lending whole-hearted s[illegible] to his country and his commander-in[illegible]

MURRAY AGAIN INDICTS AFL DISCRIMINATION

C. I. O. President Urges Action For Racial Equality in Labor

By GEORGE F. McCRAY
(Defender Labor Editor)

BOSTON. — CIO President Philip Murray reiterated again this week that complete wiping out of racial prejudice in the labor movement would be one of the key conditions for labor unity with the American Federation of Labor.

Speaking to the rousing cheers of 500 delegates at the opening of the fifth annual CIO convention here, Murray declared:

"It is wise to remember that any kind of unity must needs comprehend the complete abolition of all forms of racial discrimination."

The statement virtually indicting AFL practices in many locals of exclusion and segregation of Negroes was the second such declaration by Murray since unity talks have been discussed. Just as United Auto Workers delegates in Chicago this summer applauded the blast on Negro baiters, so the vast CIO audience on Monday voiced approval to Murray's stalwart stand.

Many Negroes were present as delegates and joined in acclaiming Murray.

The entire question of discrimination will be given thorough discussion at this gathering. A number of important resolutions urging drastic action in the battle for full equality for all races will come out

See MURRAY, Page 2

At CIO Parley

L[illegible] OSBY

WAAC officer now in Boston to address the CIO women's auxiliaries at the fifth annual CIO convention.

THE
Chicago Defender
WORLD'S GREATEST WEEKLY
OFFICE OF PUBLICATION 3435 INDIANA AVE TELEPHONE CALUMET 5656
COPYRIGHT 1942 BY ROBERT S. ABBOTT PUBLISHING CO.

CHICAGO, ILL., SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1942

RANDOLPH SETS UP NEW LOCALS IN TORONTO

One Is Also Established In Montreal For R.R. Brotherhood

MONTREAL. — Following the policy of organization formulated at the St. Louis convention of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, A. Philip Randolph, international president, and Bennie Smith, second international vice president, organized and set up local divisions of the brotherhood on the Canadian Pacific railroad in Toronto and Montreal.

In Toronto, Pettgrave was elected president; Shirley Jackson, vice president and Lem Cromwell, secretary-treasurer. In Montreal, Joe Jones was elected president; S. R. Lewis, first vice president; Jimmie Greene, second vice president and Victor I. Coward, secretary-treasurer. Other local divisions will be established in Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver, according to Randolph who with Smith will go to Winnipeg later in the month.

Plans are under way to organize the porters of the Canadian National railways. Ladies' auxiliaries have been organized in Toronto and Montreal.

C.P.R. Porters Form Union

C.P.R. sleeping car porters were organized into a union Wednesday night at a meeting in Pilgrim Baptist church. A. Philip Randolph president of the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, presided. Also present was the second vice-president, Bennie Smith.

The Winnipeg local comprises 61 of the 65 porters regularly employed by the C.P.R.; it is the highest percentage so far in a Canadian union. Toronto and Montreal porters were organized by Mr. Randolph; Calgary and Vancouver porters are ready to be organized. The brotherhood is affiliated with the A. F. of L.

"We discussed also the civil rights of colored people," said Mr. Randolph today at the Royal Alexandra hotel. "From what we have seen so far, Canada, like the U.S.A., needs a civil rights law not only for Negroes, but for Jews and all minorities. Among the Negroes there is a growing consciousness of such a need. It's all part of what we are fighting for: the four freedoms of the Atlantic Charter."

Mayor Queen and Ald. Bloomberg attended the meeting.

Officers for the Winnipeg local are: President, Jack Wilson; first vice-president, Robert Jamieson; second, Joseph Hudson; secretary-treasurer, Arthur Blanchette.

Practically 100 percent of the porters in the U.S.A. are unionized. "In 1925 porters worked for $67.50 a month, minimum; today they have $113.50. Covering 11,000 miles a month they worked 300 hours; now they work 240," said Mr. Randolph.

THE AFRO-AMERICAN, NOVEMBER 28, 1942

Delegates Among Five Hundred at National CIO Convention in Boston

Mrs. Tillie Does of Cincinnati, Ohio; Mrs. Julius Fitch, Waterbury, Conn., Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers' Auxiliary; Mrs. Alice Neville of New York, Mrs. Eleanor Fowler, white, of Washington, and Mrs. Julia Katz, white, Washington. Seated is Mrs. Margaret Randall of New York.

Willard Townsend of Chicago (extreme left), a member of the CIO executive board, who was active during the five-day convention session, and W. Richard Carter (right) of Bay City, Mich., representative of Shipbuilders' Union, talk it over with CIO President Philip Murray (center). A newspaper reporter takes notes.

Leonard Simpson (left) of New York, representative of the United Sugar Workers' Union, and Moses Lee, St. Louis, of Mine and Smelters' Workers' Union, exchange greetings. They were among approximately seventeen colored delegates at the CIO session.

5,250 Red Caps in CIO's UTSE Body

Willard Townsend, 48, Genial President, Almost a Physician

By B. M. PHILLIPS

BOSTON — Willard S. Townsend, 48, genial, grayhaired president of the United Transport Service Employees, (Red Caps to you), came near being a physician.

He even completed a medical course in the Royal College of Science in Toronto, Canada, in 1923.

For a while, after graduation, he taught school in Texas and then served as research man in a medical laboratory in Chicago.

However, labor activities so intrigued him that in 1936 he organized colored Red Caps into the United Transport Service Employees, which now has 5,250 members. Mr. Townsend is a member of CIO President Philip Murray's executive committee.

Last week he was named a member of the CIO's important committee on discrimination.

Mr. Townsend is a native of Cincinnati and a graduate of Wilberforce. He is a member of the national Urban League board, the NAACP, Kappa Alpha Psi, and other civic groups in his hometown, Chicago. He is married to the former Miss Consuello Mann, and has an eight-year-old son.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, MONDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1942.

HITS JOB DISCRIMINATION

WMC War[illegible]ne, Trolley [illegible]tems

[illegible] THE NEW YORK TIMES.

[illegible]INGTON, [illegible] 22—Radio broadcasting compa[illegible] and stations, telephone and telegraph companies and this city's trolley and bus systems are "defense industries" and cannot legally discriminate against employment of persons because of their race, creed, color or national origin, the War Manpower Commission said today.

The commission said that this decision was made by the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, a branch of the WMC, as the result of complaints from Negroes, Jews and aliens that employment had been refused them in the communications and transportation industries solely because of their race, religion or foreign background.

The decision was taken under a Presidential order that no such discriminations should be applied in defense industries. Last January the WPB agency held that railroads constituted such an industry, and the current order is the first extension of this principle to industries not obviously engaged in defense or war work.

17, 1942. The New York Times

BUSIN

ILL RAID LABOR OF LUXURY LINES

arper Warns Fur Trade That Manpower Agency Will 'Bleed' Industry

COOPERATION IS EXPECTED

But Manufacturers Disagree With Classification in 'Luxury' Class

To obtain the labor supply required to keep war production going the War Manpower Commission "will deliberately raid the luxury industries first" and, in consequence, the fur industry faces a gradual suspension of its activities, Fowler V. Harper, deputy chairman of the commission, said here yesterday.

Speaking at the first national convention of the fur trade at the Hotel Pennsylvania, at which the National Federation of the Fur Industry was organized, Mr. Harper stunned delegates with the declaration that the industry "will bleed to death" as its labor supply is t[illegible] away.

[illegible] told reporters later that he [illegible]essed the fur convention as a "sounding board" for a warning to all luxury trades. He mentioned amusements and cosmetics specifically, but said the number could be expanded to include many other "nonessential" lines from which hundreds of thousands of men would be withdrawn in 1943.

Mr. Harper intimated the WMC is preparing a list of the nonessential industries, "which is being revised from week to week." He emphasized the government is relying on cooperation and does not wish to use compulsion or coercion. If the voluntary plan fails, "the government and the people will demand compulsory manpower legislation," he asserted.

Only Few in Luxury Class

While promising full cooperation with the government in its objectives, trade spokesmen disagreed with Mr. Harper's classification of furs as a "luxury" industry, asserting that luxury furs represented only a small fraction of the output and that fur garments were an important contribution to the health and morale of women war workers.

Walter H. Pringle, New York representative of the Harris Wool and Fur Company, St. Louis, was elected president of the National Federation. Delegates from thirty-two fur organizations, representing all branches of the industry, were present and will continue their sessions today. The objectives of the federation were given as follows:

To confer with the government—both Federal and local—through its national council, in all legislation affecting the fur industry; to advise and assist the government in the practical application of all regulations and to protect the interests of the fur industry.

Mr. Harper in his address said: "Fur coats for women are luxuries. Before this war is over American women will have to do without new fur coats. The reason is that there is not enough manpower available to continue the fur-coat industry as usual. It may very well be that there may not be enough manpower to continue it at all."

Declaring that not only will th[illegible] War Manpower Commission ra[illegible] the luxury industries but will a[illegible] help to make the raid s[illegible]

THE NATION

Job Discrimination Charged To Washington Bus Company

It Won't Hire Negroes Despite Labor Shortage, FEPC Says

By James A. Wechsler
PM's Bureau

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—President Roosevelt's Fair Employment Practice Committee, which has been exposing racial bias in the Nation's war plants, today will tackle a major case of discrimination in the City of Washington.

The committee is meeting to draft a formal complaint against the Capital Transit Co., operator of the buses and trolleys that carry thousands of war workers to their jobs each day. Since Washington isn't blessed with subways, Capital Transit's vehicles transport everybody except taxi-riders or car-owners.

But despite a labor shortage that threatens to cripple the company's operations, the Capital Transit Co. refuses to hire Negroes as bus drivers, trolley conductors or in any skilled or semi-skilled capacity, the FEPC complaint will declare.

For weeks the transit company has been advertising in newspapers here and plastering buses with frantic appeals for workers. The ads and the posters emphasize that no experience is needed. But Negroes—even experienced Negroes—need not apply, the FEPC finds. They won't be hired even if they have been driving all their lives.

Accident Risk Rises

There has been no visible change in the company's policy despite the inroads of the draft and the departure of veteran employes for jobs in war plants, the FEPC has learned. White men whose experience is confined to riding kiddie-cars are being groomed for jobs as drivers. The possibility of serious increase in the accident rate (it's already pretty perilous to drive through Washington streets) is foreseen unless Capital Transit agrees to hire all available operators—even if they're black.

The FEPC's impending crackdown on the transit company was foreshadowed last night, when the committee issued a formal opinion holding that trolley and bus systems are "defense industries" and therefore subject to the provisions of President Roosevelt's anti-discrimination executive order.

The o[illegible] also served notice that radio broadcasting firms and telephone and telegraph companies are under the jurisdiction of the FEPC.

"The opinion was sought," Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, FEPC chairman, said, "because of the complaints which we have received from Negroes, Jews and aliens that they have been refused employment in the communication and transportation industries solely because of their race, religion, or foreign background."

Public hearings on the Capital Transit Co.'s employment policies will be held shortly after issuance [illegible] the complaint. The company is a priva[illegible] the [illegible] operating under a franch[illegible] corporation, operating [illegible] from the city.

2 Negroes Sue For W[illegible] Jobs

Special Corres[illegible]

CLEVELAND, Nov. [illegible]—Discriminati[illegible] against Negro workers [illegible] center of [illegible] production has been ta[illegible] the coun[illegible]

In an unusual injunction suit, filed in Common Pleas Court, an order is sought compelling employers engaged in war work to offer employment to all qualified persons regardless of color.

Main target of the action is the Thompson Aircraft Products Co., affiliate of the Thompson Products Co., one of the [illegible]t war plants in the U. S. A., built e[illegible]y with Government money.

The Thompson plant, and the Warner & Swasey Co., are charged with refusing employment, because of their color, to two Negro women who had taken Government-financed training courses.

Prominent Negroes sponsoring the litigation include Clayborne George, member of the Cleveland Civil Service Commission; Chester Gillespie, former Republican member of the Ohio Legislature, and Harvey J. Johnson, Cleveland lawyer. The suits are financed by the Future Outlook League.

In one action against Thompson, Claretta Jean Johnson charged that she was refused employment although she completed 240 hours of training in lathe, milling, drill press, shaper, and bench work in Cleveland high schools.

Employment was refused, she stated, in spite of daily newspaper advertisements "urging women who are citizens to apply for employment," charging further that the firm "on occasions publicly has derided women for not applying at said plant for employment and thereby do their share to help win the war."

Head of Thompson Aircraft is Frederick Coolidge Crawford, former president of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, who, in June, 1939, praised Italian Fascism in a speech. His successor as C. of C. president was James F. Lincoln, head of the Lincoln Electric Co., who has been denounced for his discrimination against Negroes and his stubborn belief that we can do business with Hitler and Hirohito.

Boston Has Big Raid Drill

BOSTON, Nov. 23.—Boston staged its biggest air-raid drill last night. During a 15-minute alarm period, 30,000 members of the Air [illegible] Raid Protection Service went through a mock bombing drill to the complete satisfaction of defense officials.

[illegible] said that an overnight shutdown was not contemplated. No sweeping order will be issued and the industry will have time for gradual retrenchment. He suggested the use of over-age workers and the training of a skeleton crew to rebuild business when the war is over.

Paints Black Picture

"I am painting the picture as black as possible, so that you can feel that you have been forewarned and therefore forearmed," Mr. Harper said.

By next April, he stated, there must be approximately 18,000,000 engaged in war work, against 10,000,000 in that month this year. An increased work-week, he indicated, would not supply more than 1,000,000 men at the most "optimistic" estimate. Women constitute the largest reservoir of potential labor, he added, declaring " prediction that 50 per cent [illegible] a workers on the machine[illegible] of the duce guns, tanks an[illegible] that pro- will be women i[illegible] ammunition overshooting [illegible] not regarded as [illegible] the mark."

[illegible]s are a great production [illegible]nd "effective prosecution [illegible] war calls for full use of our [illegible] resources," he asserted.

[illegible]. Silberman, president of the [illegible]rican Fur Merchants Associ[illegible], who was elected first vice [illegible]sident of the federation, in [illegible]mmenting on Mr. Harper's [illegible]uxury" classification of the in[illegible]ustry, said:

"If it is true that the fur industry is a non-essential luxury industry, then it should bleed to death. We, as an industry, do not agree to that and our job is to put the proper information before the War Manpower Commission to prove we are not a luxury industry. Mr. Harper spoke of the need of women workers in war industry and forgets they consider a fur coat of some sort a necessity. It may be only a $50 coat, but its function is to keep health and morale to a point where the woman worker can be of real aid in war production."

Frederic Brenckman, Washington representative of the National Grange, hailed the formation of the

Continued on Page Thirty-six

Murray—

(Continued from Page 1)
of the resolutions committee, it is expected.

Although he is attending a CIO parley for the first time, Willard Townsend, president of the United Service Transport Service Employees, is taking the lead in this campaign. As the only Negro member of the executive board of either the AFL or CIO, Townsend is in a strategic position to take leadership. He is expected to play a big role in this convention.

An innovation at the CIO Women's Auxiliaries meeting in conjunction with the regular convention will be an addres on Thurday by Lieut. Mildred Osby, Negro WAAC officer of New York. Lieutenant Osby arrived here from Washington to speak to the CIO women and will be going to Fort Huachuca after the conclave to be on hand at the Arizona camp when the contingent of WAAC auxiliaries arrives on November 16.

THE OMAHA STAR, OMAHA, NEBRASKA, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1942

HOME ON FURLOUGH

Officer Steward 3rd Class M. T. Murrell, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Murrell, 2313 Seward Plaza, who has spent one year in the U.S. Navy and is now stationed in Cuba, returned home on a furlough Sunday.

Young Murrell has made rapid progress since entering the navy one year ago, accomplishing three ratings, and is now a candidate for a fourth, that of Officer Steward 2nd Class which he will be given upon his return to the base.

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

THE AFRO-AMERICAN, DECEMBER 5, 1942

By JAMES H. HOGANS

LESS SERVICE

NEW YORK

Following the present policy of eliminating al lnon-essential features in passenger train service, the New York Central and Pennsylvania Railroads will discontinue the services of maids, barbers and stenographers on their crack New York-Chicago trains, beginning next week, when the new wartime schedule goes into effect.

The discontinuance of these services, explained a Pullman official representative, is in conformity with the recent suggestion of the Office of Defense Transportation that all fancy-frill services be eliminated in railroad and Pullman transportation for the duration of the war.

Although the barbers and maids on these trains are Pullman employees, their usuage is left to the demands of the railroads, which in recent years have been growing less and less for services of that type.

While the elimination of these features of service will only affect a limited number of employees, practically all of them are veterans in the Pullman service.

Among the oldest maids are Mrs. Dora Halloway, an employee since 1901; Mrs. Mabel Fitts Taylor, since 1906; Mrs. Ella Lawson, 1910, of the New York District, and Mrs. Etta Banks, 1909, of the P. T. District.

* * *

PENNSY MAY HIRE WOMEN

A representative of the dining car department at Sunnyside Yards explained last week that, while the hiring of women as cooks and waitresses by the Pennsy system had been contemplated, no definite plans had been made as yet for such employment.

He added, however, that it was quite probable this would have to be done.

When asked through what source they would recruit such employees, in the event it became necessary, he said probably some reputable welfare agency like the Urban League.

NEW YORK LOSES

The New York District lost in both the membership and baby contests of the P.P.B.A., which were recently decided at Chicago. The former contest was won by Local Lodge No. 4 of the P. T. District, it having taken in the highest number of new members (186) during the past year.

The baby contest, held under the auspices of the P.P.B.A.'s national women's auxiliary, was won by a Chicago baby. Second, third and fourth winners were St. Louis, New York and Boston babies.

In the membership contest for locals having less than 75 members when they began, the Richmond District won the Grand Chairman's Trophy with a score of 159 new members. A total of 1,794 new members were taken in by the 53 lodges during the year.

HERE AND THERE

Porter Instructors John W. Ballard of New York, A. E. Sassers of Boston and R. W. Coan of Buffalo returned recently from Atlanta, Ga., where they had been for several months hiring new porters.

. . Things Seen, Heard And Done . .

AMONG PULLMAN EMPLOYEES

By J. T. REID

A statment on page twenty, made by William Green, president of the AF of L in PM, Wednesday, October 28, has caused quite a bit of comment. In that statement, Mr. Green said: "I myself originally organized the Pullman porters." This statement was made when he was asked by a PM representative about AFL anti-Negro discrmination. If we are to believe Mr. Green's statement, we now know that he has but little if any jurisdiction over the operation of the various AFL locals. Mr Green readily admits this when he made this statement: I demand they stop discriminating, but our unions have autonomy. I can't tell them what to do." It's like the President. Can he tell the Governor of a state what to do?

But all of this is not what we started out to talk about. What we really want to know right now is: Who did organize the Pullman porters? And what was their idea for organizing them? Of course, up to last Wednesday many of us, and I dare say all of the porters attendants and maids believed that A Philip Randolph was the organizer. Our reasons for believing that he was the organizer was the associates which he had working with him when the porters were organized. All of those men were hard workers.

Each of them had a grievance against the Pullman management or they at least thought they had. Each one of them believed that they had been discharged without a cause; this made them work that much harder for a victory over the Pullman management. They wanted to return and sit before those who had discharged them. Their program for success was outlined by their leader A. Philip Randolph. It was he who contacted the outside labor groups, churches, politicians and other Negro civic organizations for contributions, to carry on that program. He was also able to get space in many of the daily papers.

Can it be true that all of this work was carried on under William Green's supervision? or can it be that Mr. Green wants to share in the popularity of the man that is now receiving world - wide recognition for the achievement of organizing the Pullman porters?

Well, we cannot answer these questions, Mr. Randolph will have to answer them. It is now up to him to tell us if Mr. Green's statement in PM is true or not? and until he does, we will be compelled to take Mr. Green's word.

We are very glad to report that our friend, P. A. Sample has been released from the Provident Hospital and has returned to his desk in the Pullman Building. When I visited him last Monday I found him cheerful and looking fine considering his shake-up.

Dear John: I am glad to hear that your party went off so nice. I know that Scoopy will now enter the Army feeling that you and your friends are not so bad after all.

I was also glad to learn that you and your friends up in Harlem were coming all out for my good friend, L. W. Wallace for State Senator Tuesday, November 3rd.

PM, MONDAY, DECEMBER 14, 194

Jim Crow Union Likely on Coast

Special Correspondence

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 14.—A reliable source at the Henry J. Kaiser shipyards today said the Boilermakers Union, AFL, plans to organize Jim Crow locals for Negro workmen.

Heretofore Tom Ray, head of the union's powerful Local 72 has opposed giving union status to Negroes under any circumstances.

This is the second of two plans reported here over the weekend to end the situation created by Ray's refusal to admit Negroes to his local. The other was a reported invitation to a select group of 26 Negroes to join on payment of $30 initiation fee.

The Rev. James F. Clow, pastor of the Portland Colored Baptist Church said he had heard reports of the Negro auxiliary unions but said few would join.

"They want to belong to Local 72 or none," he said.

Charles Merritt, New York shipyard chipper working at Vancouver, said he and 25 other skilled Negro workmen had been told they could join the Boilermakers Union on payment of a $30 initiation fee.

The Kaiser official, who requested his name be not mentioned, said all discrimination against Negroes in the Kaiser yards has been ended as the result of recent Government pressure.

Formation of separate Jim Crow locals has been discussed for some time, he said, and discussion even has extended to an entire "district council" of Negro locals

Tom Ray, boss of Portland Boilermakers Local 72, is silent about Jim Crow union proposal.

Saturday, December 12, 1942

AMONG PULLMAN EMPLOYEES

By J. T. REID

It looks as if the Maids on the Broadway Limited and the Twentieth-Century are really going to be removed.

We cannot help thinking that although they are taking off the barbers and the secretaries, too, the maids are going to be missed because right now they are needed more than ever before. With travelling conditions as they are, and with more ladies being compelled to travel on the railroads than ever before, it would seem unreasonable to not have maids on these trains. You hear so many stories of why they are being removed! I asked one of the maids the other day, if anyone had told her why they were being taken off, and she said that all she knew was that the government had ordered them to be taken off with the secretaries and barbers.

All of this seems very strange to me as I remember that during the last war when the government took over the railroads, they didn't take off the maids. Personally, I am sorry for those maids who are being removed, because I feel that what they are doing to them today they may do that same thing to me tomorrow.

Talking with J. R. Reese, secretary-treasurer of the Pullman Porters and Maids Protective Association, 543 East 47th street, Chicago, I learned that negotiations with the CIO are still going on. Secretary Reese says that the organization has submitted proposals under which they would affiliate, and they are now waiting on Mr. Townsend's answer.

H. B. Shipley is coming along very nicely. According to reports, he is hoping to come out of the hospital very soon.

O. Carpenter is still hopeful that his condition is not as bad as many would think. He is also doing very nicely over at Sea View Hospital.

Comments are still coming in on the wonderful Thanksgiving dinner which Scoopy and John gave in honor of their noted guest on Thanksgiving Day. Among those attending were J. L. Hill, J. Shade, George Williams, M. Harrison and many others. The guest of honor was Mother from dear old Southland.

We understand that travelling instructor G. W. Kirk was in New York for a few days. We can hardly believe it, because we didn't see him over in Sunnyside Yards.

Speaking of Sunnyside Yards, you can always find what you want over there. Just go into the yards and look around.

Congratulations to chairman W. A. McCray and secretary C. P. Loving for their good work during the past year in behalf of Local No. 4, of the P. T. District. Through their untiring efforts of soliciting new members for Local No 4 of the P. P. B. A of A., they have received from Grand Chairman E. M. Graham, a trophy, the grand prize presented to the Local sending in the most members for the year.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1942.

Railroad Wins Point Against Train Union; Federal Court Upholds Curb on Employes

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CHICAGO, Dec. 16 — The right of property owners operating between States to seek protection in the Federal courts against union violence was upheld today in a majority opinion by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in the long-standing dispute between the Toledo, Peoria & Western Railroad and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

The case, an outgrowth of the strike controversy between the railroad and the union which extended over a period of more than a year, was marked by the conviction in March of three union employes on charges of contempt of court after they were accused of conspiracy to dynamite a bridge of the freight line, by assaults upon the railroad's employes and by acts of violence and damage against the railroad's trains.

In the opinion written by Judge Walter [illegible] and concurred in by Judge William Sparks, the acts of violence were reviewed and the judges upheld the injunction granted against the union by the Federal court for the Southern District of Illinois. Judge Sherman Minton dissented.

The injunction was against the Enterprise Lodge No. 27, of the Brotherhood, which appealed the lower court's decision of Jan. 19 on these five points:

1. That the court was without power to extend a temporary restraining order, issued on Jan. 3, pending hearing of a plea for a permanent injunction.
2. That the question was not a matter for Federal jurisdiction.
3. That there was not sufficient evidence that the property could not have been amply protected by public protectors.
4. That the railroad failed to make a reasonable effort to mediate or arbitrate the strike.
5. That there was not sufficient evidence to show that the union had participated in violence.

The affirming judges rejected all five points of the Brotherhood's appeal and declared further that in their opinion some of the Brotherhood's officials knew that violence against the railroad was planned.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1942 THE CHICAGO DEFENDER RELIABLE FOR 37 YEARS

RAIL AGENT FACES JAIL FOR JIM

JUDGE ISSUES WARRANT FOR PENN. RR. MAN

Out Writ Under Illinois Civil Rights Act; 4 Others Sue

A warrant for the arrest of the Pennsylvania Railroad's passenger agent in Chicago was secured this week by two prominent South side ministers, refused accommodations on the crack streamliner, the South Wind.

Revs. J. C. Austin of the Pilgrim Baptist church and William McDowell of the Mt. Vernon Baptist church swore out the arrest warrants which they will serve on E. M. Holt, general passenger agent for the Pennsylvania Railroad, within a few days.

Before Judge Mason Sullivan in Desplaines street court, the ministers, accompanied by their attorney, George C. Adams, charged Holt with wilful violation of the state civil rights act.

In spite of objecttions raised by John Connery, assistant state's attorney, the warrant was signed by Judge Sullivan.

Seats Changed

The action of the ministers is based on an experience on Wednesday, Dec. 9, when they went to board the Miami-bound train for Nashville, Tenn., where they were to attend a religious conference.

Both, according to their statements, had made reservations previously by phone and claimed them at the window when they purchased their tickets.

At the train gate, however, the man in charge of reservations informed them, they said, that the only seats available for them were on coach 1, half of which is for baggage.

The ministers said they were told that reasons for this action were that Negroes prefer riding together and that being seated in the Jim Crow car here would save them the inconvenience of having to be transferred to it after reaching the South.

Refuse To Ride

Both ministers refused to ride the train and turned in their tickets. Saturday, however, after deciding to take action against the railroad, Rev. Austin purchased another ticket on the same train and was again refused. The gateman this time informed him that he was acting on orders from Holt. Rev. Austin retained the ticket as evidence.

Holt, contacted Thursday by the Chicago Defender, denied having issued such orders, and claimed ignorance of any Jim Crow seating north of the Ohio river. The policy of the company he said is to segregate Negro passengers only in states where it is required by law.

He said that orders to stop the practice of forcing Negro passengers to ride in the sam car in Chicago at least would be issued by him immediately.

Meanwhile three other ministers, Revs. J. H. L. Horace, president of the Illinois State Baptist convention; I. A. Thomas of Evanston and Louis Rawls, pastor of Tabernacle Baptist church, Chicago, and Carl Hansberry, [illegible] Chicago [illegible] took step[illegible] securing a federal indictment of the railroad for failure to comply with the United States Supreme court decision in the case of Rep. Arthur W. Mitchell, requiring equal accommodations on all railroads.

All five of the clergymen and Hansberry charged that car No. 1 does not have individual reclining seats, as do other cars on the train, and because of the location of the baggage compartment, access to other facilities of the train is impossible. They also charged that only one lavatory for the use of both sexes is provided on the car.

THE AFRO-AMERICAN, DECEMBER 19, 1942

Among Railroad and Pullman Workers

By JAMES H. HOGANS

WHY UNITY IS NECESSARY (Part II)

NEW YORK

Speaking recently in Chicago on the necessity for unity in racial leadership, A. Philip Randolph, our foremost labor leader, said:

"Although the magnitude, gravity and complexion of the problems that confront the colored people today are tremendous, there is no unified or defined policy of strategy among colored leaders with which to grapple with these problems.

"In the main, the colored high command is working in tight organizational compartments, and very often at cross purposes with practically little or no co-ordination."

As labor head of the Pullman porters and most of the railroad train porters, and the man who did much toward influencing dining car employees to affiliate themselves with the A.F. of L. and the red caps to organize as a labor unit, his efforts to create unity among these groups have been significantly negligible. chored in the CIO setup."

But even organizational lines, as she stated himself, need not have obviated any sincere efforts to establish some sort of unity among those groups. In that connection, he said:

"While colored organizations may and should retain their organizational unity and major policies, there should be some periodic meeting of the top leaders for an objective and realistic discussion of policy and strategy in relation to broad national issues."

The necessity for unity of railroad workers was clearly furnished by the report of the transport merger post-war plan recently recommended to Congress by the National Resources' Planning Board. Among the recommendations it contained was this significant item:

"Nation-wide organization of transport employers to parallel those of employees and a greater flexibility in working agreements which would permit the railroads to effect needed economies."

That indicated one of the things which may be expected in the post-war readjustment, and why it will be necessary for weak railroad groups to pool their strength and resources if they hope to retain any semblance of the present wage and working status.

CROW CAR

PM, SUNDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1942

AFL Names Committee On Post-War Planning

Green Appoints Negro to Group, Indicating a Better Break for Minorities

By JAMES A. WECHSLER
PM's Bureau

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—AFL president William Green today named a nine-man post-war planning committee to "start planning now" for world reconstruction.

Warning that "we can't afford to wait until victory is won," Green ordered the committee to launch immediate investigation of post-war problems "to show that labor is measuring up to its responsibilities and is capable of exerting real leadership for a better world."

Green's action was in line with resolutions adopted at the last AFL convention which called for aggressive labor participation in the shaping of the peace. In his instructions to the committee, the AFL chief urged formulation of "a plan for labor representation in the peace conferences which will follow victory."

Matthew Woll, AFL vice president, is chairman of the Federation's post-war planning committee.

Matthew Woll, Federation vice-president, was designated chairman of the group. Included on the committee is Milton P. Webster, vice-president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and one of the two Negro delegates to the Federation's recent convention.

Milton P. Webster

An Encouraging Move

Significance of Webster's selection was underlined by the fact that he, with A. Philip Randolph, president of the porters union, has led the battle against Negro discrimination practiced by certain AFL unions. In naming Webster, Green gave at least indirect support to the fight waged by the Negro group and provided assurance that a better break for minorities would be a major phase of the committee's discussions.

Other members of the committee are:

David Dubinsky president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union.

George Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks.

Dr. John Childs of Columbia University, representing the Teachers Union.

Harvey Brown, president of the International Assn. of Machinists.

Rubin Soderstrom, president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor.

Agnes Nestor of the International Glove Workers Union.

Richard Gray, secretary of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers Union.

'Security for All'

Declaring that "freedom and opportunity for all nations" and "social and economic security for all peoples" were the keystone of Labor's war aims, Green said:

"Without adequate preparation and a specific program to meet that day of victory we may find—as in the last war—that the battle was in vain."

In addition to framing proposals for labor representation at the peace conferences, the Committee was empowered to make recommendations on these issues:

¶ Specific guarantees which Labor will seek to have incorporated in the peace treaty.

¶ Plans for economic reconstruction "to prevent a disastrous depression."

¶ Measures to expand "social, economic and political security for the peoples of all lands."

The National Planning Assn.; in a report reviewed in a recent PM series, described the enormous scope of the post-war task and warned that failure to start preparations now might nullify the gains of democratic victory. Creation of an AFL planning committee marks the most direct step taken so far by U.S. labor to make its voice heard in tumultuous post-war negotiations.

LABELING

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH

1 =

2 =

3 =

4 =

Scrapbook

LELAND STOWE SAYS:

'Give Women and Negroes Defense Jobs'

Only Way to Avoid Coming Labor Shortage, Survey Reveals

By LELAND STOWE

Copyright, 1941, New York Post and Chicago Daily News, Inc.

EXCLUSIVE

After nearly two weeks inspecting defense industries from the Atlantic seaboard to the Mississippi Valley, you get an extremely encouraging picture of America's gigantic defense production machine as it is about to shift into high gear.

Simultaneously you get a clearer understanding of those elements which are preventing or will prevent American industries from turning out their maximum quotas.

American war correspondents who have made this tour have been greatly impressed by the extraordinary progress made by all manner of American industrial enterprises in the last 12 months.

Four Major Obstacles

Nevertheless "ball-and-chain" elements inevitably exist, and chief among them are:

(1) The insatiable demand for machine tools and gauges, which alone provide the basis for ever-enlarging defense production.

(2) Labor disputes and strikes which slow down or paralyze whole sections of vital industrial processes.

(3) Near shortages or threatened shortages of raw materials such as magnesium, aluminum or structural steel.

(4) Shortage of trained manpower.

Gets Little Attention

Of these four elements, oddly enough, the one which attracts least attention today yet may well prove to be most detrimental in the long run is No. 4—the coming shortage of manpower.

If America's defense program is to be fulfilled in anything like the scale which wartime developments dictate—indeed, if it is to be achieved at all—it seems certain that a labor shortage must be avoided. To do that hundreds of thousands of new workers must be found. In the opinion of some best qualified observers they can only be found among two classes of America's population — among women and among the American Negroes.

These two groups represent the only untapped reservoirs for our industrial production, but most American industrialists are extremely reluctant to face the fact they will shortly be compelled to train women or Negroes, or both, to operate their machines.

The Way Out

In Cleveland, Tell Verna, general manager of the National Machine Tool Builders' Assn., said: "We can get machines of all kinds, but we can't improvise trained men to operate these new machines. Take the billions of dollars which Washington has appropriated for defense and turn them into man hours. You reach a simply impossible figure. But we've got to meet that figure. How can we meet it? The only possible way is to employ women and Negroes, employ them and train them to operate the machines which produce weapons and munitions."

Verna declares that most of the labor slack in the U. S. will be taken up by the end of this year or early in 1942. After that he predicts that the nation's factory doors will be opened to women with a bang. But even that radical innovation, in his opinion, won't be sufficient for the stupendous manufacturing task ahead of us in the next several years. Consequently he is confident that Negroes must be given an opportunity to operate machines as well as sweep floors.

40 P. C. for Women

Lawrence D. Bell, president of Buffalo's Bell Aircraft Corp., declared: "I think we'll be employing women on a large scale before very long in American industry. There is no reason why about 40 per cent of the work can't be done and done very satisfactorily by women."

In the Curtiss Wright plant in Buffalo I saw a Negro working on a machine for the first time in any defense factory we visited. It was his third day at work and he was one of five young colored men who had just completed a short course of training.

The Negro worker greeted me with a big smile. "I like it here," he said. "The fellows all treat you fine." He had a quick, intelligent face. He was a graduate of a Buffalo vocational training school.

There must be several hundreds of thousands of Negroes in the U. S. who are perfectly capable of training for this kind of labor with machines. If they were given this opportunity they would immediately have a personal interest and personal stake in America's huge defense program.

The Chicago Daily News January 16, 1941

Skilled Negro Jobless, Defense Plants Need Men

BY FRANK L. HAYES.

The German state can compel by proclamation the employment or nonemployment of Jews in industry, but when the National Defense Advisory Commission in this country declares, as it has done, that workers should not be discriminated against because of color, it is left to unions and employers to co-operate voluntarily as well as they can. "As well as they can" raises the question: Is there actually a substantial and unutilized supply of Negro labor prepared to do the specific types of work required?

The answer, based on study of job applications and the verdict of employers who have used Negro labor, is emphatically yes.

The Illinois State Employment Service has a staggering file of unemployed Negroes whose listed occupations are among those essential in defense industry. The Chicago Urban League reports that its own employment office is swamped by job seekers.

A personnel manager who has served 27 years with a Chicago firm which has 4,000 employees and three defense contracts involving $4,932,725 said: "There's not a Negro in the plant; I just had never given that any thought."

In some cases there is possibly lack of information as well as lack of thought. There is, to be sure, enough factual evidence in the backfiles of this newspaper about achievements of Negroes in fields which include the exact sciences to upset any notion of their inborn incapacity as a race for tasks that others can perform.

Negro Labor Supply Untapped.

But are there Negro molders, welders, mechanics? Let us look at the record of the employment service in Chicago. The figures below are an understatement, since a great many Negroes have registered at the employment offices since the tabulation was made last year.

	Total reg.	Negroes.
Sewing machine operators, single-needle	1,206	395
Buttonhole machine operators	21	7
Double-needle sewing-machine operators	132	26
Operators, punch press, hard pedal	1,967	257
Truck drivers	76	18
Stationary firemen	199	41
Sheet metal machine operators	52	6
Shearmen, iron and steel	31	9
Sand blasters, foundry	14	6
Chippers, foundry	68	29
Finishers, concrete	196	9
Shakeout men, foundry	28	20
Industrial yard workers	172	41
Saw rip operators, wood mill	55	7
Feeders, wood mill	3	3
Molders, machine, in foundry	87	33
Molders, squeeze machine (chiefly auto manufacturing)	52	18
Hand molders foundry	113	21
Mechanics, automobile	526	68
Grinders, machine shop and foundry	113	13
Service men, auto repair	41	13
Welders, acetylene	73	6
Painters, decorators	1,328	104
Journeyman painters (outside)	178	5
Plasterers	132	21
Wheelers, construction	181	28
Graders, construction	49	7
Carpenters, rough	193	9
Unskilled	7,758	1,408

This list by no means exhausts the classifications in which Negroes are registered, and those registered are only part of those seeking work. Incidentally, employment experts foresee a shortage of construction labor by spring.

WPA Jobs Prove Valuable.

Moreover, the number of sewing-machine operators available has been increased by the dropping of 2,200 from the WPA sewing project, which at its peak had 4,900; all but 16 per cent are Negroes. In fact, many of the remaining 2,700 would be glad to graduate from WPA.

Incomplete as the employment office list admittedly is, as a sample of the Negro labor supply, it shows classes in which 20, 25, 30, 40, 70 per cent and in one case 100 per cent are Negroes.

What is the quality and dependability of their work in tasks like these? Let employers, who have given them a thorough trial, answer.

The answers of representative concerns among those which employ Negroes and which handle defense orders will be examined in the next article.

(This is the second of three articles dealing with discrimination as a bottleneck in industrial mo-

Bulletin

CALL TO NEGRO AMERICA

"To March On Washington For Jobs And Equal Participation in National Defense"

July 1st

GREETINGS:

We call upon you to fight for jobs in National Defense.

We call upon you to struggle for the integration of Negroes in the armed forces, such as the Air Corps, Navy, Army and Marine of the Nation.

We call upon you to demonstrate for the abolition of Jim-Crowism in all Government departments and defense employment.

This is an hour of crisis. It is a crisis of democracy. It is a crisis of minority groups. It is a crisis of Negro Americans.

What is this crisis?

To American Negroes, it is the denial of jobs in Government defense projects. It is racial discrimination in Government departments. It is widespread Jim-Crowism in the armed forces of the Nation.

While billions of the taxpayers' money are being spent for war weapons, Negro workers are being turned away from the gates of factories, mines and mills—being flatly told, "NOTHING DOING." Some employers refuse to give Negroes jobs when they are without "union cards," and some unions refuse Negro workers union cards when they are "without jobs."

What shall we do?

What a dilemma!

What a runaround!

What a disgrace!

What a blow below the belt!

'Though dark, doubtful and discouraging, all is not lost, all is not hopeless. 'Though battered and bruised, we are not beaten, broken or bewildered.

Verily, the Negoes' deepest disappointments and direst defeats, their tragic trials and outrageous oppressions in these dreadful days of destruction and disaster to democracy and freedom, and the rights of minority peoples, and the dignity and independence of the human spirit, is the Negroes' greatest opportunity to rise to the highest heights of struggle for freedom and justice in Government, in industry, in labor unions, education, social service, religion and culture.

With faith and confidence of the Negro people in their own power for self-liberation, Negroes can break down the barriers of discrimination against employment in Nation Defense. Negroes can kill the deadly serpent of race hatred in the Army, Navy, Air and Marine Corps, and smash through and blast the Government, business and labor-union red tape to win the right to equal opportunity in vocational training and re-training in defense employment.

Most important and vital of all, Negroes, by the mobilization and coordination of their mass power, can cause PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT TO ISSUE AN EXECUTIVE ORDER ABOLISHING DISCRIMINATION IN ALL GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS, ARMY, NAVY, AIR CORPS AND NATIONAL DEFENSE JOBS.

Of course, the task is not easy. In very truth, it is big, tremendous and difficult.

It will cost money.

It will require sacrifice.

It will tax the Negroes' courage, determination and will to struggle. But we can, must and will triumph.

The Negroes' stake in national defense is big. It consists of jobs, thousands of jobs. It may represent millions, yes, hundreds of millions of dollars in wages. It consists of new industrial opportunities and hope. This is worth fighting for.

But to win our stakes, it will require an "all-out," bold and total effort and demonstration of colossal proportions.

Negroes can build a mammoth machine of mass action with a terrific and tremendous driving and striking power that can shatter and crush the evil fortress of race prejudice and hate, if they will only resolve to do so and never stop until victory comes.

Dear Fellow Negro Americans, be not dismayed in these terrible times. You possess power, great power. Our problem is to harness and hitch it up for action on the broadest, daring and most gigantic scale.

In this period of power politics, nothing counts but pressure, more pressure, and still more pressure, through the tactic and strategy of broad, organized, aggressive mass action behind the vital and important issues of the Negro. To this end, we propose that ten thousand Negroes MARCH ON WASHINGTON FOR JOBS IN NATIONAL DEFENSE AND EQUAL INTEGRATION IN THE FIGHTING FORCES OF THE UNITED STATES.

An "all-out" thundering march on Washington, ending in a monster and huge demonstration at Lincoln's Monument will shake up white America.

It will shake up official Washington.

It will give encouragement to our white friends to fight all the harder by our side, with us, for our righteous cause.

It will gain respect for the Negro people.

It will create a new sense of self respect among Negroes.

But what of national unity?

We believe in national unity which recognizes equal opportunity of black and white citizens to jobs in national defense and the armed forces, and in all other institutions and endeavors in America. We condemn all dictatorships, Fascist, Nazi and Communist. We are loyal, patriotic Americans, all.

But, if American democracy will not defend its defenders; if American democracy will not protect its protectors; if American democracy will not give jobs to its toilers because of race or color; if American democracy will not insure equality of opportunity, freedom and justice to its citizens, black and white, it is a hollow mockery and belies the principles for which it is supposed to stand.

To the hard, difficult and trying problem of securing equal participation in national defense, we summon all Negro Americans to march on Washington. We summon Negro Americans to form committees in various cities to recruit and register marchers and raise funds through the sale of buttons and other legitimate means for the expenses of marchers to Washington by buses, train, private automobiles, trucks and on foot.

We summon Negro Americans to stage marches on their City Halls and Councils in their respective cities and urge them to memorialize the President to issue an executive order to abolish discrimination in the Government and national defense.

However, we sternly counsel against violence and ill-considered and intemperate action and the abuse of power. Mass power, like physical power, when misdirected is more harmful than helpful.

We summon you to mass action that is orderly and lawful, but aggressive and militant, for justice, equality and freedom.

Crispus Attucks marched and died as a martyr for American independence. Nat Turner, Denmark Vesy Gabriel, Harriet Tubman and Frederick Douglas fought, bled and died for the emancipation of Negro slaves and the preservation of American democracy.

Abraham Lincoln, in times of the grave emergency of the Civil War, issued the Proclamation of Emancipation for the freedom of Negro slaves and the preservation of American democracy.

Today, we call upon President Roosevelt, a great humanitarian and idealist, to follow in the footsteps of his noble and illustrious predecessor and take the second decisive step in this world and national emergency and free American Negro citizens of the stigma, humiliation and insult of discrimination and Jim-Crowism in Government departments and national defense.

SATURDAY, MAY 17, 1941

New York Amsterdam Star-News
May 24, 1941

50,000 TO HIT AT U.S. DEFENSE DISCRIMINATION

Muffled Drums Will Lead Dissenters In Silent Demonstration

WASHINGTON—(ANP) — The spectacle of 50,000 Negroes silently marching through the streets of Washington, behind muffled drums, will become a reality says Eugene P. Davidson, speaking for the Washington branch of the committee being organized by A. Philip Randolph to stage such a protest against unfairness of the administration in not doing more to see that Negroes are given jobs in the national defense projects.

Two meetings, held in Washington recently, met with enthusiastic response and the leaders are planning an energetic drive to put over the program in the most effective manner.

It is planned to have the marchers parade through the main thoroughfares of the city to the famous Lincoln Memorial, where Marian Anderson sang at the feet of the great emancipator and call upon the President to speak to the group there assembled.

"We do not want any private meetings with committees," said Mr. Davidson. "We want the President to speak forthrightly on the problem and tell the world what this administration will and can do on behalf of the underprivileged minority groups in the city."

Thorough coverage of the country is going to be attempted and buttons will be placed on sale to cover the costs of the hegira to the nation's capital. Radios, newspapers, advertisements all will be used in a concerted drive to put over the program, says Davidson.

GROUP MAKING JULY 1 PLANS

Demonstration to Urge Mayor LaGuardia's Support Planned

Responding to an appeal made by A. Philip Randolph, International President of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, local citizens here have formed a greater New York Committee to aid in mobilizing 10,000 Negroes for a March on Washington July 1st as a protest against discrimination in National Defense, it was announced by Warren Brown, Executive Secretary of the Committee, 217 West 125th Street.

A. Philip Randolph

In addition to the New York Committee, groups have been organized in Washington, D. C.; Richmond, Va.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Trenton, N. J.; Jersey City and Newark, N. J.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Atlanta, Ga., and Chicago, Ill. Many other cities are in the process of developing a local committee, it was stated.

Part of the local committee's plan calls for a mass demonstration on City Hall to urge Mayor F. H. LaGuardia and the City Council to assist in the effort for banning discrimination in National defense. Such organizations as the church, fraternal orders, women's clubs, labor organizations, nonpartisan groups, civic clubs, youth groups, social service agencies and social clubs are being invited to participate.

Among the citizens who are actively supporting the movement are: Walter White, Executive Secretary, NAACP; Rev. William Lloyd Imes, St. James Presbyterian Church; Lester B. Granger, Assistant Executive Secretary National Urban League; Frank R. Crosswaith, Harlem Labor Center; Layle Lane, Vice-President, American Federation of Teachers; Richard Parrish, Pres., Federation of Colored College Students in New York; Henry K. Craft, Executive, West 135th St. Y.M.C.A.; J. Finley Wilson, Grand Exalted Ruler of Elks.

Throughout Greater New York, the Negro March-on-Washington button campaign will be launched next week by Mrs. Louise McDonald and a large committee of women.

On July 1st, delegations from various cities of the country will participate in a mammoth demonstration in Washington, D. C. A scheduled parade is expected to end at the Lincoln Memorial Monument.

10,000 Protest March Slated For July 1

Philadelphia Gears Self To Join Mass Move To Nation's Capital

(Continued from Page 1)

the participants and to protest against racial discrimination in local defense industries.

Fount head of the movement is A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. Randolph held a meeting with leading figures in the movement in Washington last week and outlined plans for joint action.

The steering committee which was formed to aid in the plans includes Walter White, executive secretary of the NAACP; the Rev. William Lloyd Imes, noted Presbyterian pastor; Lester B. Granger, of the National Urban League; Frank R. Crosswaith, organizer, International Ladies Garment Workers Union; Henry K. Craft, of the Harlem branch YMCA; Dr. Rayford Logan, Howard University professor; Layle Lane and Richard Parrish. Office of the movement is 217 W. 125th street, New York City.

Local Rallies Planned

Demonstrations will be held prior to the grand march in each of the cities which will send groups. Buttons which will sell for ten cents will be on sale to help defray expenses. When the marchers arrive in Washington they will parade through the streets and assemble at Lincoln's monument where an open air protest meeting will be staged.

Keynote of the committee's call for action is "To fight for Jobs in national defense," "integration of Negroes in the armed forces, such as the Air Corps, Navy, Army and Marines of the Nation," and "the abolition of jim-crowism in all government departments and defense employment."

The sponsors hope that such a solid demonstration of pulling together by Negroes will cause President Roosevelt to issue an executive order abolishing discrimination in the various branches where prejudice is rampant.

Randolph Speaks

In the statement issued by Randolph, he said:

"Negroes can build a mammoth machine of mass action with a terrific and tremendous driving and striking power that can shelter and crush the evil fortress of prejudice and hate, if they will only resolve to do so and never stop until victory comes.

"We believe in national unity which recognizes equal opportunity of black and white citizens to jobs in national defense and the armed forces and in all other institutions and endeavors in America. We condemn all dictatorships, Fascist, Nazi and Communist. We are loyal, patriotic Americans, all," he continued.

A remonstrance against violence and ill-considered action was contained in the release and the demonstrators both in their own cities and in Washington are urged to be orderly and lawful.

Plans For March On Capital

WASHINGTON, May— (ANP) —The spectacle of 50,000 Negroes silently marching through the streets of Washington, behind muffled drums, will become a reality says Eugene P. Davidson speaking for the Washington branch of the committee being organized by A. Philip Randolph to stage such a protest against unfairness of the administration in not doing more to see that Negroes are given jobs in the national defense projects.

Two meetings, held in Washington recently, met with enthusiastic response and the leaders are planning an energetic drive to put over the program in the most effective manner.

It is planned to have the marchers parade through the main thoroughfares of the city to the famous Lincoln Memorial, where Marian Anderson sang at the feet of the great emancipator and call upon the President to speak to the group there assembled.

"We do not want any private meetings with committees," said Mr. Davidson. "We want the President to speak out forthrightly on the problem and tell the world what this administration will and can do on behalf of the underprivileged minority groups in the city."

Thorough coverage of the country is going to be attempted and buttons will be placed on sale to cover the costs of the hegira to the nation's capital. Radios, newspapers, advertisements all will be used in a concerted drive to put over the program, says Mr. Davidson.

Plans For D. C. March Progress

WASHINGTON.---(ANP) —The spectacle of 50,000 Negroes silently marching through the streets of Washington, behind muffled drums, will become a reality says Eugene P. Davidson, speaking for the Washington branch of the committee being organized by A. Philip Randolph to stage such a protest against unfairness of the administration in not doing more to see that Negroes are given jobs in the national defense projects.

Two meetings, held in Washington recently, met with enthusiastic response and the leaders are planning an energetic drive to put over the program in the most effective manner.

It is planned to have the marchers parade through the main thoroughfares of the city to the famous Lincoln Memorial, where Marian Anderson sang at the feet of the great emancipator and call upon the President to speak to the group there assembled.

"We do not want any private meetings with committees," said Mr. Davidson. "We want the President to speak out forthrightly on the problem and tell the world what this administration will and can do on behalf of the underprivileged minority groups in the city."

Thorough coverage of the country is going to be attempted and buttons will be placed on sale to cover the costs of the hegira to the nation's capital. Radios, newspapers, advertisements all will be used in a concerted drive to put over the program, says Mr. Davidson.

Plans to March On Capitol Progresses

WASHINGTON, May 15.—(ANP) —The spectacle of 50,000 Negroes silently marching through the streets of Washington, behind muffled drums, will become a reality, says Eugene P. Davidson, speaking for the Washington branch of the committee being organized by A. Philip Randolph to stage such a protest agains tunfairness of the administration in not doing more to see that Negroes are given jobs in the national defense projects.

The President's Executive Order

Honestly, we were not very much in favor of the "March on Washington." We were not in favor of cancelling the Sunday session of the N. A. A. C. P. in order that delegates to the N. A. A. C. P. might take part in that postponed adventure in mass pressure.

In answer to a telegram from Walter White just before the session, requesting our view on this subject, we said substantially what we have said here. Never at any time did we doubt the sincerity and good intentions of A. Philip Randolph. This individual won his spurs with the Black Dispatch when he resigned the presidency of the National Negro Congress. We thought he did right then, and in this instance it was solely the question of technique and method.

But the proof of the pudding is in the eating. The declared intention of A. Philip Randolph to stage this parade has brought startling results. The President has issued an executive order outlawing Jim Crowism in defense production. Randolph and his colleagues asked for no more than Negro leadership all over America has been asking. The difference lith in the method by which Randolph went about making demands upon government.

As chairman of the resolutions committee of the N. A. A. C. P. during its Houston session, the executive order of the President was placed in our hands. We studied it carefully, searching for loopholes in that important document. We do not doubt the good intentions of the President, but we know that most of the loss in citizenship sustained by Negroes develops in administration. No law, after all, is much better than the individuals who administer it.

With this in mind we jumped on our typewriter and wrote the following lines which were incorporated in the N. A. A. C. P. resolutions:

"While we commend the spirit and good intentions expressed in the recent executive order issued by President Roosevelt, in connection with the right of Negro labor to be fully integrated into the national defense program, we wish to point out that there are certain statements in the language employed in the order which might constitute a loophole.

"For instance, if it is going to be a continued policy of the states to determine the qualifications of individuals meeting certain requirements, as has hitherto been the rule in WPA, NYA, and other governmental agencies, we fear that state minipulation, under this order, may still evade and make abortive the clear intention and desire of the President. Our suggestion is that drastic federal qualifications and rules should be adopted to make or effect a general qualification.

"We seriously object to that phase of the order which indicates that 'hereafter' government contracts shall be let to only such bidders as will sign agreements to provide employment, non-discrimination of individuals because of race, color or national origin. The President's order, in our judgment, should have decreed that all contractors holding existing contracts and those hereafter to be effected, shall be bound by the non-discriminatory decree of President Roosevelt.

"We suggest further than the committee of five to be attached to the Office of Production Management, as provided by the President's order, shall have in its personnel at least three Negroes.

We wrote that statement because we know that if "qualification" of Negroes is to be determined by state government, anything can happen, much of which will do violence to the President's intention. Anyone familiar with administration of the various relief agencies such as WPA, NYA and CCC, know what we are talking about. State influence, controlled by labor unions, prevents Negroes from getting defense training under NYA and other federal agencies. This phase of the order should be watched for violations of the presidential command.

Under the president's order the billions hitherto spent at Tulsa, Oklahoma City, Kansas City, and other sections of America by the government, in developing the aircraft industry are exempt. "Hereafter," says the order. If we interpret this language and its meaning, it will not be necessary for these contractors already holding sixteen billions in defense contracts in the United States to bother about Negro employment, but "hereafter" any other contractors who secure government work must recognize the black toiler.

In addition, the Presidential decree fixes no penalties for violation of his edict. Before Negroes can be absolutely certain that Jim Crowism is abolished in defense industry and training, it will be necessary for Congress to pass some sort of act fixing penalties for those who disregard and ignore the President's executive order.

Someone may argue that the President's order cannot be retroactive, but we believe enough precedent was established in the recent action taken in defesne industry, in settling the West Coast strike, to dispose of such argument. The general welfare clauses in the constitution give broad powers to the Congress, and this should extend to the law of contract.

We do not believe the President intended to leave any such loophole, but it nevertheless is there, and this is why we point it out. American Negroes need not get busy preparing to work in the defense plants. If Negroes are employed, such opportunity will come according to the whim and caprice of the contractor. The order leaves all of the government contracts let prior to the order high and dry.

In the last paragraph, dealing with the personnel of the "complaint" committee, to be attached to the Office of Production Management, we believe the President intends that a portion of this committee shall be Negro

Cabaret Party Given By Utilitarians Civic Club

The Utilitarians Civic Club tendered a cabaret party Thursday evening at Smalls' Paradise when Henry Pope, chairman of the Harlem Division of "March To Washington" fight explained that the march on the nation's capital had not been called off but deferred for the time being awaiting the President's action on other issues of the organization.

After watching the Smalls' revue, this organization put on their own show with Jimmy Mordecai as master of ceremonies and Willie Bryant introducing one number. Those appearing were Eddie Green, comedian, of stage, screen and radio: Andy Razaf and Eubie Blake, songwriters; Edna Logan, pianist, and Alice Crawford, soprano.

The club members are Blanche Lee, president; Katherleen Davis, vice president; Hazel Hunt, secretary; Odell Mitchell, treasurer; Isabell Griffin and Scotia Henry and Vernetta Smith on the educational committee and Beatrice Nance, Marie Cuthbert and Edith Ransom, honorary members.

—30—

SMALLS' PARADISE presents
Utilitarians Civic Club
In
"MARCH-ON-WASH.-NITE", BENEFIT
Thurs. Eve., June 26th
At Smalls' Paradise
135th Street and 7th Avenue
Location Fee — 75 Cents
Blanche Lee, Pres.; Hazel Hunt, Sec.

* * * *

MARCH ON WASHINGTON CABARET PARTY

The Utilitarian's Civic Club will present a "March to Washington" cabaret party at Smalls' Paradise on Thursday, June 26 with famous theatre names among the invited artists, starting with Willie Bryant and Eddie Green and etc.

The club members are Blanche Lee, president; Katherleen Davis, vice-president; Hazel Hunt, secretary; Odell Mitchell, treasurer; Isabell Griffin, chairman of education committee; Scotia Henry Vernetta Smith also working on the education committee. Beatrice Nance, Marie Cuthbert and Edith Ransom, honorary members.

* * * *

The New York Amsterdam Star-News
July 5, 1941

It Means What It Says!

Rogers Says:- AGITATION AGAINST HITLER HAS LITTLE EFFECT ON NEGROES

BY J. A. ROGERS

WAS "The March On Washington" just another of "those things?" And will the President's Executive Order be heeded? And if it is heeded will that part of it dealing with "race" and "color," which caused the order to be issued in the first place, be given special consideration? These are some of the questions Negroes all over the country are asking.

This much is certain, however: The failure to march has come as a wet blanket to millions of Negroes and their true friends among the white people. It will be most difficult to get Negroes interested in a similar mass movement another time. Those who would keep Negroes down appreciate this only too well.

Mr. Rogers

MAKING THREATS

It is always bad to make a threat and not carry it out. A token delegation of at least a thousand should have gone with banners announcing that if the President's Order is not heeded, the full hundred thousand will be on the way.

I FEEL also that the publicity the Negro would have received from the newspapers and the newsreels would far outweigh anything the President might say. White America and indifferent Negroes will not be convinced that the Negro masses are serious about their rights until they see militant action. Besides, jobs in defense industries are not the only things Negroes are seeking.

RECENT ROUND-UP

Still another question Negroes are asking is: "Why was threatened mass pressure necessary to bring an Order from the White House to give jobs to loyal Americans when all that the enemies of the nation need to get such jobs is a white skin?"

IN THE recent round-up several spies were discovered working in these plants and key positions from which Aframericans are barred. And if some spies were found you can set it down that there are hundreds, perhaps, thousands, who are still there.

HOW THEY WORKED!

Hitler sent over his spies by the tens of thousands to this country and made them take out citizenship papers. These got jobs as stewards, waiters, etc., on the transAtlantic liners and clippers where they could carry or send information to him. Readers of this column will recall that I told in 1937 how the ships of the United States Lines between here and Europe were filled with German and Italian employes and that American Negroes were barred as religiously from them as colored women from a D.A.R. convention.

THERE IS NO doubt that some of these naturalized Germans and Italians are as loyal as native-born white Americans, and perhaps even more so than some, but the fact remains that the Negro is still the most dependably certain group in this crisis.

WHEN WE WERE USED!

This fact was finally recognized in the last war, but the present administration seems to be totally ignorant of it. The only thing that finally stopped the blowing-up of munition plants then was the presence of Negro guards. When white detectives failed to find these murderers it was Negro detectives like Herbert S. Boulin of New York and Sheridan Brusseaux of Chicago, who, posing as laborers, trapped them. It was Negroes who guarded the White House, the water reservoirs, and several other places where no chances could be taken with a white person. Now on top of all this, and not to mention the great services the Negroes have rendered to this country as far back as you can go in its history, an Executive Order is necessary to make those in power think about giving them jobs.

No wonder that this agitation against Hitler leaves most Negroes cold. American democracy can never fight Hitler seriously: it would be fighting itself.

SATURDAY, JULY 12, 1941

THAT OPM COMMITTEE

The President's recent executive order authorized the establishment of a five-member committee on fair employment practice in the Office of Production Management.

We believe that the purpose of this committee is primarily to stop discrimination against workers because of so-called race, color, religion or nationality.

Since the only persons likely to be discriminated against in defense industry are Negroes, Jews, Catholics and Americans of foreign extraction, we believe that the committee should consist of two Negroes, one Jew, one Catholic and a citizen of foreign origin.

Negro members should predominate on the committee because most of the discrimination in defense industry has been against Negroes.

There should be a Jewish member because there has been considerable discrimination against Jews, and there bids fair to be more.

There should be a Catholic member because of recent disclosures of discrimination against Irish Catholics.

And because of the growing anti-alien hysteria egged on by various newspapers and selfish interests, there is danger of injustice to citizens who were, or whose parents were, of foreign birth.

The Pittsburgh Courier is interested in doing away with all discrimination of an unfair nature against all workers, whether white or colored, Jew or Gentile, Catholic or Protestant, because it recognizes that only when all discrimination of this sort is ended can Negroes be safe.

The President would be doing a fine thing if he made this committee truly symbolic of national unity in the manner we have suggested.

TAMPA MORNING TRIBUNE, FRIDAY, JULY 18, 1941

THREE NEGROES FILE SUIT FOR RIGHT TO VOTE

Challenge White Municipal Party Rules

Three Negroes filed suit in circuit court yesterday demanding the right to vote in the city primary elections, now restricted to white persons.

Circuit Judge Sandler directed the city election board to answer the suit next Tuesday.

The suit, filed by E. L. Bryan as attorney for Eugene Norman Lacy, Dan H. Malloy and Mathew Gregory, contended the exclusion of Negroes from the primary election violates the equal right of franchise guaranteed by state and federal constitutions.

Denied Right to Register

"Many of their number have applied for permission to register but have been denied the right to register, and denied the right of suffrage and franchise to vote in said elections . . . for the reason that they belong to the colored or Negro race," the suit alleged.

The city election law, patterned after the state law, sets up a "white municipal party" which nominates candidates for all city offices by a primary election. Theoretically, the nominees run in the general election two months later, but practically the primary winners are the same as elected. Negroes may vote in the general election but not in the primary.

Upheld by Supreme Court

Assistant City Attorney Marsicano said the city election system had been upheld by the state supreme court against a previous attack which raised the question of the Negroes' right to participate in the primaries.

Bryan said the fight may be taken to the United States supreme court, if it is unsuccessful in the state courts, on the theory that the city law violates the federal constitution.

The New York Amsterdam Star-News
July 19, 1941

Saturday, July 19, 1941

Give Us At Least Two

President Roosevelt's five-man commission to prevent discrimination in National Defense production ought to include at least two Negroes. We are surprised that there is any thought that fewer than two are to be named.

When it became known that the President would name a commission to see that the provisions of his executive order aimed at prohibiting job bias are carried out, it was our candid opinion that a majority of the members would be Negroes. We still feel that way.

While the order specifies that there shall be no discrimination on account of race, creed, color or national origin, yet everyone knows the action was necessary only because of the plight of the Negro. It is he who is being denied jobs on account of his race and color, and Mr. Roosevelt acted only after Negroes had threatened to march on Washington 100,000 strong in a dramatic protest against the injustices.

When the President issued the order three weeks ago, we hastened to applaud his stand. We applauded because we believed he was sincere in his efforts to check discrimination and to make the way clear for Negroes to be integrated into our National Defense program. We don't want to see his efforts sabotaged by inaction and lack of interest. Few white men will be as eager to delve deeply into the problem as most Negroes. So, Mr. President, in order that your pronouncement will get the greatest possible result, we urgently insist that you name at least two Negroes on that commission.

The New York Amsterdam Star-News
July 12, 1941

Young Man, What Now?

The Pittsburgh Courier July 12, 1941

Pursuit Of Democracy

ROOSEVELT'S PROCEDURE TO ENFORCE NON-JIM CROW ORDER WILL NOT WORK

BY MARJORIE MCKENZIE

A DISPASSIONATE second reading of the President's Executive Order to end discrimination in National Defense, reveals that it is to be implemented by some obsolete machinery. Paragraph Three of the order recites that a Committee On Fair Employment Practice is to be established in the Office of Production Management. This committee is to be appointed by the President and is to have five members who will serve without compensation except for necessary expenses. Its function is: (1) "to receive and investigate complaints of discrimination in violation of the order"; (2) "to take appropriate steps to redress grievances which it finds to be valid"; (3) "to recommend to the several departments and agencies of the Government and to the President all measures which may be deemed by it necessary and proper to effectuate the provisions of the order."

Miss McKenzie

WILL NOT WORK

There are three reasons why the procedure outlined will not work. The major fallacy is that the committee to be appointed will serve on a volunteer basis. It has been demonstrated effectively that non-paid advisory boards in technical and professional fields retard and complicate the job to be done. The committee or board member has other, paramount interests, including the one by which he earns his living, to which this added duty is supremely incidental.

THE PRESIDENT'S order does not empower the committee to employ any investigators. It is specifically provided that the committee will do its own traveling and reporting. Conceding that the President will make a painstaking choice of labor and personnel experts, one would be inclined to believe that such men are too engrossed in their own affairs to be making cross-country tours, gratis.

Secondly, it appears that the whole tone of the order is negative. The committee is going to sit back and "receive complaints." It is going to await further evidences of discrimination which it will "investigate." What about the myriad complaints already received of situations heretofore investigated by aroused and protesting citizens?

This committee needs to be given the authority to wade right in and set our national house in order without any further baffling and discouraging delay.

ORDER A SUBSTITUTE

In the third place, the order is a substitute for action rather than a prelude to action. And what we desperately need is affirmative, decisive action. The executive order has no teeth; it contains no punitive clauses for failure to comply. It does not describe what the appropriate steps of redress are. The remedy is by implication, in vague, indefintie language. After the abjectly tragic experience of the Negro worker in this emergency, a declaratory statement carrying no penalties will not suffice. It should not be a matter of guesswork and discretion what is to be done with the employer holding millions of dollars of government contracts who does not choose to fall into line. Will his contracts be rescinded? Will he be awarded future contracts? Who is to limit the number of Negroes to be employed or recommend the type of work they will be permitted to do?

IF THE COMMITTEE, which is to include two Negroes, really evolves a grasp of its function, it will soon work itself out of a job. In recommending "to the several departments and agencies of the Government and to the President, measures necessary to effectuate the provisions of the order," it should make as its primary recommendation that OPM does not need any Committee On Fair Employment Practice.

NEEDS TRAINED STAFF

This work seems properly to be the function of Dr. Robert Weaver, who is the Advisor on Negro Affairs to Messrs. Hillman and Knudsen. Undoubtedly, Dr. Weaver has received and investigated complaints. He has suggested to the co-directors of National Defense what action should be taken. Why doesn't the President give him authority to act? Dr. Weaver needs a staff of trained men and women to do the job assigned to a part-time, lay committee and the naked, unhampered power "to take appropriate steps to redress grievances."

AS FOR the advice the committee may submit in regard to the other departments and agencies of the Government, there are equally swift means of disposing with cumbersome detail. Discrimination in the War Department could be dealt a telling blow by removing Special Assistant William H. Hastie from his undeserved obscurity as Secretary Stimson's Negro Advisor and making him Assistant Secretary of War.

A NEGRO ADVISOR

The Navy Department and Secretary Knox (or should we say Fox?) have not required the services of a Negro Advisor, since there are no Negro sailors nor naval officers in the service of the United States. The Fair Practice Committee might convince Secretary Knox, as Mr. A. Philip Randolph was recently unable to do, that Negro and whtie men can endure to live together in the same ship or community or world.

THERE CAN be no permanent progress towards ending discrimination until Negroes are employed in all the administrative agencies and are given policy-making authority. Words of recommendation are soft blows. We must have the right to wield the hammer before we can write finis to the whole sorry predicament.

The Newspaper P. M. June 16, 1941

P.M.

FDR Demands Defense Industries Give Negroes Jobs

Knudsen and Hillman Told to Take 'Immediate Steps' To End Factories' Discrimination Against All Minorities . . . President Says We Must Refute Totalitarianism at Home

PM's Bureau

WASHINGTON, June 16.—President Roosevelt last night called on OPM officials to "take immediate steps to facilitate the full use of our productive man power" by ending discrimination against Negro workers and other minority groups in defense industries.

In a memorandum to William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, directors of the OPM, the President said he had received repeated complaints that "available and much-needed workers are being barred from defense production solely because of race, religion or national origin." He recognized that the situation was one of "grave national importance" and demanded effective and speedy steps to change it.

"No nation combating the threat of totalitarianism," FDR declared, "can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries Even more important is it for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad."

Action Demanded

The President did not prescribe precisely what steps the OPM should take to prevent discrimination. He placed the full weight of his high office behind an OPM memorandum to holders of defense contracts, dated April 11, urging industry to make "full utilization of available and competent Negro workers." But the President also indicated that he held that insufficient, and expected more positive action from the OPM.

The National Negro Congress recently picketed the OPM offices in Washington, demanding that defense contracts be denied to firms which refused to hire Negroes

The President's Memo

The text of FDR's memorandum follows:

"Complaints have repeatedly been brought to my attention that available and much-needed workers are being barred from defense production solely because of race, religion or national origin. It is said that at a time when labor stringencies are appearing in many areas, fully qualified workers are being turned from the gates of industry on specifications entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity. Also that discrimination against Negro workers has been nation-wide, and other minority racial, national and religious groups have felt its effects in many localities. This situation is a matter of grave national importance, and immediate steps must be taken to deal with it effectively.

"I note with satsfaction that the Office of Production Management has recognized the seriousness of this situation, and that on April 11, 1941, it addressed a letter on the subject to all holders of defense contracts. As Chief Executive of the nation I place the full support of my office behind your statement to the effect that all holders of defense contracts are urged to examine their employment and training policies at once to determine whether or not these policies make ample provision for the full utilization of available and competent Negro workers. Every available source of labor capable of producing defense materials must be tapped in the present emergency.

more important is it for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad.

"Our government cannot countenance continued discrimination against American citizens in defense production. Industry must take the initiative in opening the doors of employment to all loyal and qualified workers regardless of race, national origin, religion or color. American workers, both organized and unorganized, must be prepared to welcome the general and much-needed employment of fellow workers of all racial and nationality origins in defense industries.

"In the present emergency, it is imperative that we deal effectively and speedily with this problem. I shall expect the Office of Production Management to take immediate steps to facilitate the full utilization of our productive man power."

The New York Post June 15, 1941

OPM to Check Race Bias In Defense

F. D. R. Says Arms Firms Must Not Discriminate Against Negroes or Others

WASHINGTON, June 16 (AP). —President Roosevelt has ordered the OPM to see to it that defense industries fully utilize the nation's productive manpower without regard to race, religion or national origin.

In a memorandum addressed to Directors Knudsen and Hillman the President said many complaints had reached him that "fully qualified" Negroes and others were being turned away by industry on grounds "entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity."

The President said he had been told that discrimination against Negro workers has been nationwide and that other minority racial, national and religious groups have felt its effect.

Solution Imperative

With "labor stringencies" appearing in many areas, he asserted that in the present emergency it was "imperative that we deal effectively and speedily with this problem."

"No nation combating the increasing threat of totalitarianism can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries," he added. "Even more important is it for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad."

PRESIDENT ASSAILS RACIAL JOB BARRIER

Reports Wide Complaints of Ban on Negroes in Defense Work, Asks OPM to Act STRESSES NEED FOR LABOR

'Even More Important' Is Need to Refute Theories We Are Fighting Abroad, He Says

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 15—Stating that he had received complaints of nation-wide discrimination against Negroes in defense industries, President Roosevelt called upon the Office of Production Management today to take immediate steps to deal effectively with this "grave" situation.

In a memorandum to William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, co-directors, Mr. Roosevelt said that "no nation combating the increasing threat of totalitarianism can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries."

The text of the memorandum read as follows:

"Complaints have repeatedly been brought to my attention that available and much-needed workers are being barred from defense production solely because of race, religion or national origin. It is said that at a time when labor stringencies are appearing in many areas fully qualified workers are being turned from the gates of industry on specifications entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity. Also that discrimination against Negro workers has been nation-wide, and other minority racial, national and religious groups have felt its effect in many localities. This situation is a matter of grave national importance, and immediate steps must be taken to deal with its effectively

"I note with satisfaction that the Office of Production Management has recognized the seriousness of this situation, and that on April 11, 1941, it addressed a letter on the subject to all holders of defense contracts. As Chief Executive of the nation I place the full support of my office behind your statement to the effect that, 'all holders of defense contracts are urged to examine their employment and training policies at once to determine whether or not these policies make ample provision for the full utilization of available and competent Negro workers. Every available source of labor capable of producing defense materials must be tapped in the present emergency.'

"No nation combatting the increasing threat of totalitarianism can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries. Even more important is it for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad.

"Our government cannot countenance continued discrimination against American citizens in defense production. Industry must take the initiative in opening the doors of employment to all loyal and qualified workers regardless of race, national origin, religion or color. American workers, both organized and unorganized, must be prepared to welcome the general and much-needed employment of fellow-workers of all racial and nationality origins in defense industries.

"In the present emergency, it is imperative that we deal effectively and speedily with this problem. I shall expect the Office of Production Management to take immediate steps to facilitate the full utilization of our productive manpower."

The New York Times June 15, 1941

ROOSEVELT ORDERS THAT RACE BAR NONE FROM DEFENSE JOBS

Plants, Unions Told to Admit Qualified Among Negroes and Other Minorities

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS Washington Bureau.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—President Roosevelt further implemented his new "tough" labor policy on Sunday by serving notice on management and unions that they must eliminate employment discriminations against Negro and other minority group workers—a practice which has aroused vigorous complaints.

The move to open "the doors of employment to all loyal and qualified workers regardless of race, national origin, religion or color." was recognized not only as an effort to insure full use of the nation's productive capacity in the accelerating effort to speed and expand defense output, but as one intended to contribute to the development of a spirit of national unity in the emergency. It was made in the form of a memorandum to William S. Knudsen, director general, and Sidney Hillman, association director general of the Office of Production Management.

Asks for Quick Action

The memorandum emphasized that the barring of "available and much-needed workers" from defense production "solely because of race, religion or national origin," was "a matter of grave national importance."

As if answering the efforts to subversive groups that have been using racial and like discriminations in their efforts to disrupt production and foster class feeling and disunity, the President declared:

"No nation combatting the increasing threat of totalitarianism can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries."

The President did not indicate in his newest declaration of defense employment policy just how he expected the OPM directors general to carry it out, although he made it clear that he wanted quick action to solve the discrimination problem.

Hears of Discrimination

The text of President Roosevelt's memorandum follows:

"Complaints have repeatedly been brought to my attention that available and much-needed workers are being barred from defense production solely because of race, religion, or national origin. It is said that at a time when labor stringencies are appearing in many areas, fully-qualified workers are being turned from the gates of industry on specifications entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity. Also that discrimination against Negro workers has been nation-wide, and other minority racial, national and religious groups have felt its effects in many localities. This situation is a matter of grave national importance, and immediate steps must be taken to deal with it effectively.

Every Source Must Be Tapped

"I note with satisfaction that the Office of Production Management has recognized the seriousness of this situation, and that on April 11, 1941, it addressed a letter on the subject to all holders of defense contracts. As chief executive of the nation I place the full support of my office behind your statement to the effect that all holders of defense contracts are urged to ex-

The Buffalo Evening News June 16, 1941

INDUSTRY TOLD TO USE NEGROES

Roosevelt Orders OPM Action on Complaints.

Washington, June 16 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt has ordered the OPM to see that defense industries fully ultilize the nation's productive man power without regard to race, religion or national origin.

In a memorandum addressed to William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, directors of the OPM, the President said last night that many complaints had reached him of fully qualified Negroes and others being turned away from the gates of industry on grounds entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity.

"This situation," he declared, "is a matter of grave national importance, and immediate steps must be taken to deal with it effectively."

Mr. Roosevelt said he had been told that the discrimination against Negro workers has been nationwide and other minority racial, national and religious groups have felt its effect in many localities.

He Cites Labor Shortage.

With labor stringencies appearing in many areas, he asserted that in the present emergency it was imperative that we deal effectively and speedily with this problem, and that he expected the OPM to take immediate steps.

Placing his full support behind an OPM letter to holders of defense contracts on April 11 last, urging full utilization of available and competent Negro workers, the President said:

"No nation combating the increasing threat of totalitarianism can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries. Even more important is it for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad.

"Our Government cannot countenance continued discrimination against American citizens in defense production."

The New York Sun June 15, 1941

The Newspaper P. M. June 16, 1941

P.M.

FDR Demands Defense Industries Give Negroes Jobs

Knudsen and Hillman Told to Take 'Immediate Steps' To End Factories' Discrimination Against All Minorities . . . President Says We Must Refute Totalitarianism at Home

PM's Bureau

WASHINGTON, June 16.—President Roosevelt last night called on OPM officials to "take immediate steps to facilitate the full use of our productive man power" by ending discrimination against Negro workers and other minority groups in defense industries.

In a memorandum to William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, directors of the OPM, the President said he had received repeated complaints that "available and much-needed workers are being barred from defense production solely because of race, religion or national origin." He recognized that the situation was one of "grave national importance" and demanded effective and speedy steps to change it.

"No nation combating the threat of totalitarianism," FDR declared, "can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries Even more important is it for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad."

Action Demanded

The President did not prescribe precisely what steps the OPM should take to prevent discrimination. He placed the full weight of his high office behind an OPM memorandum to holders of defense contracts, dated April 11, urging industry to make "full utilization of available and competent Negro workers." But the President also indicated that he held that insufficient, and expected more positive action from the OPM.

The National Negro Congress recently picketed the OPM offices in Washington, demanding that defense contracts be denied to firms which refused to hire Negroes

The President's Memo

The text of FDR's memorandum follows:

"Complaints have repeatedly been brought to my attention that available and much-needed workers are being barred from defense production solely because of race, religion or national origin. It is said that at a time when labor stringencies are appearing in many areas, fully qualified workers are being turned from the gates of industry on specifications entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity. Also that discrimination against Negro workers has been nation-wide, and other minority racial, national and religious groups have felt its effects in many localities. This situation is a matter of grave national importance, and immediate steps must be taken to deal with it effectively.

"I note with satsfaction that the Office of Production Management has recognized the seriousness of this situation, and that on April 11, 1941, it addressed a letter on the subject to all holders of defense contracts. As Chief Executive of the nation I place the full support of my office behind your statement to the effect that all holders of defense contracts are urged to examine their employment and training policies at once to determine whether or not these policies make ample provision for the full utilization of available and competent Negro workers. Every available source of labor capable of producing defense materials must be tapped in the present emergency.

more important is it for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad.

"Our government cannot countenance continued discrimination against American citizens in defense production. Industry must take the initiative in opening the doors of employment to all loyal and qualified workers regardless of race, national origin, religion or color. American workers, both organized and unorganized, must be prepared to welcome the general and much-needed employment of fellow workers of all racial and nationality origins in defense industries.

"In the present emergency, it is imperative that we deal effectively and speedily with this problem. I shall expect the Office of Production Management to take immediate steps to facilitate the full utilization of our productive man power."

The New York Post June 15, 1941

OPM to Check Race Bias In Defense

F. D. R. Says Arms Firms Must Not Discriminate Against Negroes or Others

WASHINGTON, June 16 (AP). —President Roosevelt has ordered the OPM to see to it that defense industries fully utilize the nation's productive manpower without regard to race, religion or national origin.

In a memorandum addressed to Directors Knudsen and Hillman the President said many complaints had reached him that "fully qualified" Negroes and others were being turned away by industry on grounds "entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity."

The President said he had been told that discrimination against Negro workers has been nationwide and that other minority racial, national and religious groups have felt its effect.

Solution Imperative

With "labor stringencies" appearing in many areas, he asserted that in the present emergency it was "imperative that we deal effectively and speedily with this problem."

"No nation combating the increasing threat of totalitarianism can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries," he added. "Even more important is it for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad."

amine their en. oyment and tra.. ing policies at once to determine whether or not these policies make ample provision for the full utilization of available and competent Negro workers. Every available source of labor capable of producing defense materials must be tapped in the present emergency.

"No nation combatting the increasing threat of totalitarianism can afford arbitrarily to exclue large segments of its population from its defense industries.

Appeals to Workers

"Even more important is it for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad.

"Our Government cannot countenance continued discrimination against American citizens in defense production. Industry must take the initiative in opening the doors of employment to all loyal and qualified workers regardless of race, national origin, religion or color. American workers, both organized and unorganized, must be prepared to welcome the general and much-needed employment of fellow workers of all racial and nationality origins in defense industries.

"In the present emergency, it is imperative that we deal effectively and speedily with this problem. I shall expect the Office of Production Management to take immediate steps to facilitate the full utilization of our productive manpower."

The Pittsburgh Courier

THAT MARCH ON WASHINGTON

Nothing is going to be accomplished by the crackpot proposal of A. Philip Randolph and his associates to stage a march on Washington in protest against color discrimination in national defense.

Marches on Washington have always failed of their purpose because Congress has regarded them merely as nuisances organized by publicity hounds, job-hunters and addlepates, and consisting of the mob-minded and misguided. The attitude of the press has been the same.

Led by The Pittsburgh Courier, which has spent thousands of dollars during the past four years in enlightening public opinion about color discrimination in national defense, colored people have so flooded their Congressman, Senators and the President with protests that not a single official in Washington is unaware of the evil.

Can a parade tell them anything they do not already know?

Randolph's group is loudly claiming that they will have between 50,000 and 100,000 Negroes parading in Washington on July 1, 1941.

This will be a great boon to the railroad companies and to the oil and gas stations in Washington and vicinity, but it will certainly be a hardship on the marchers.

Everybody knows that 500 Negro visitors to Washington are sufficient to more than tax the eating and housing facilities available to colored people, while 1,000 visitors would swamp them, and 50,000 would cause a riot.

Visionaries who think up these crackpot schemes never completely visualize the difficulties and dangers, nor the discomforts and expense to others. We doubt if these people even have plans to handle 5,000 visiting Negroes, let alone 50,000.

The most effective way of influencing Congress and the Administration is by personal letters and telegrams from individuals, societies, church congregations, clubs and fraternities; by memorials and resolutions sent to both Houses, and by intelligent personal representations.

But in view of the usual temperature in Washington on July 1, we have a sneaking suspicion that there will be far less than the heralded 50,000 Negroes present on that date to pound the hot pavements and stand in the [illegible] listening [illegible] rounded phrases of Brother Randolph [illegible]

[illegible] parade through the main [illegible] the city to the [illegible] where Marian Anderson sang at the feet of the great emancipator, and to call upon the President to speak to the group there assembled.

"We do not want any private meetings with committees," said Davidson. "We want the President to speak out forthrightly on the problem and tell the world what this administration will, and can, do on behalf of the under-privileged minority groups in the city."

Thorough coverage of the country is going to be attempted and buttons will be placed on sale to cover the costs of the hegira to the nation's capital. Radios, newspapers, advertisements all will be used in a concerted drive to put over the program, says Davidson.

Say Plans for March on Nation's Capitol Progress

By The Associated Negro Press.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The spectacle of 50,000 Negroes silently marching through the streets of Washington, behind muffled drums, will become a reality, says Eugene P. Davidson, speaking for the Washington branch of the committee being organized by A. Philip Randolph to stage such a protest against unfairness of the administration in not doing more to see that Negroes are given jobs in the national defense projects.

Two meetings, held in Washington recently, met with enthusiastic response and the leaders are planning an energetic drive to put over the program in the most effective manner.

It is planned to have the march-

THE ST. LOUIS ARGUS

PUBLISHED WEEKLY

ST. LOUIS ARGUS PUBLISHING COMPANY

2312 MARKET ST. GARFIELD 0111 ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI

J. E. MITCHELL ..... Managing Editor
HERBERT T. MEADOWS ..... City Editor
RICHARD A. JACKSON ..... Associate Editor
WILLIAM MITCHELL ..... Business Manager
PASCAL TEMPLE ..... Assistant Manager

Entered as second class matter April 5, 1912, at the Post Office at Saint Louis, Missouri, under the Act of March 8, 1870.

REPUBLICANS BUSY

We are interested in a meeting of the members of the Republican National Committee which was held in Washington, D. C. recently. The purpose of the meeting, according to a statement of Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., national chairman, was to "gird our loins and prepare for the battle to win the majority of members in the House of Representatives in the election in '42." And to this end study committees were appointed from all the states to study, devise plans and report to the national chairman. Among the committees named were: Organization, Negro Activities, Rural Votes, Southern States, Women's Activities, Large City Problems and Publicity.

We, of course, were interested in the Committee on Negro activities. We noted that Barak T. Mattingly, Republican National Committeeman, Missouri, was made chairman of Negro Activities. On this committee we also noted Perry W. Howard and Mrs. Mary C. Booze, committeeman and committeewoman, respectively of Mississippi, both of whom are colored. They are to help Mr. Mattingly corral the Negro vote throughout the country.

Viewing the situation from a distance it looks to us as though the Republican party of this country has renewed its efforts not only to hold the Negro vote which was gained in the election last November, but also to win over others sufficient to make the election of the G.O.P. candidates certain in 1942.

For this effort we have no complaint. If the Republican party is waking up to the fact that it was through its own neglect that the Negroes left the G.O.P., we can attribute that to political good sense. On the other hand, if the Democrats, who have won at least fifty per cent of the Negro vote, will stand idly by and allow that vote to be taken from them through the constant campaign by the Republicans, that of course, will be attributable to the lack of political ingenuity on the part of the Democrats.

Therefore, we think we can say without successful contradiction that the Negroes, Republicans and Democrats, are watching the actions of the leaders in the two major political parties to see what they are going to do for the welfare of the Negroes in this country.

NEGROES MARCH ON WASHINGTON

A. Philip Randolph, president, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and director of the National Committee for the March On Washington, has issued a clarion call for the colored people, en masse, to set aside July 1st as the day to be in Washington, D. C. to march in a solid phalanx to the Abraham Lincoln Monument as a solemn protest against the injustices that are being constantly heaped upon us as a group in this country.

And while it is true that we have been slow to believe that such a demonstration will serve as a lever to pry loose the prejudices that have held us back, lo these many years, yet we approve of the effort because it is a new movement in our fight for the things we want and are entitled to.

In times like these we know of nothing which we, as a group, should leave undone which is legal and legitimate in our fight for full citizenship rights. A march on Washington by thousands of Negroes will, without doubt, dramatize our feelings; it will dramatize the seriousness of our purpose and dramatize our demand for our place in the scheme of things along with other American citizens.

We have stood by so long and looked upon the other fellow enjoying the things to which we were entitled (but denied), until we are becoming desperate. And as Mr.

SATURDAY, JUNE 21, 1941

Plans for March On Washington Near Completion

JOURNAL AND GUIDE

PRESIDENT ASKS INDUSTRY HIRE NEGRO WORKERS

Buffalo Courier Express

Roosevelt charges discrimination, urges fulfillment of democratic ideals

Washington, D. C., June 15 (AP)—Asserting that he had received complaints of nationwide discrimination against Negroes in defense industries, President Roosevelt called upon the Office of Production Management today to take immediate steps to deal "effectively" with this "grave" situation.

In a memorandum to William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, co-directors, Roosevelt said that "no nation combatting the increasing threat of totalitarianism can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries." It is "even more important," he added, "for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad."

Needed Workers Barred

"Complaints have repeatedly been brought to my attention," he declared, "that available and much-needed workers are being barred from defense production solely because of race, religion, or national origin. It is said that at a time when labor stringencies are appearing in many areas, fully qualified workers are being turned from the gates of industry on specifications entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity. Also that discrimination against Negro workers has been nationwide, and other minority racial, national and religious groups have felt its effect in many localities.

"Our government cannot countenance continued discrimination against American citizens in defense production. Industry must take the initiative in opening the doors of employment to all loyal and qualified workers regardless of race, national origin, religion or color. American workers, both organized and unorganized, must be prepared to welcome the general and much-needed employment of fellow workers of all racial and nationality origins in defense industries.

"In the present emergency it is imperative that we deal effectively and speedily with this problem. I shall expect the Office of Production Management to take immediate steps to facilitate the full utilization of our productive manpower."

The Buffalo Courier Express June 15, 1941

MRS. ROOSEVELT OPPOSES WASHINGTON MARCH

The Pittsburgh Courier SATURDAY, JUNE 21, 1941 PAGE FOUR

FIRST LADY SAYS GROUP WILL MAKE SERIOUS MISTAKE

NEW YORK, N.Y., June 19—In order to keep race citizens fully informed on all developments connected with the movement to mobilize 100,000 Negroes for the march on Washington, A. Philip Randolph, national director, has released a letter received from Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt opposing the march as "engendering dangers" to the progress already made toward better opportunities and less segregation.

In making public the letter, Mr. Randolph said, "I am submitting the letter received from Mrs. Roosevelt on June 10 which expresses an important point of view from not only an influential person in American affairs but a strong and definite friend of the Negro. There is no question that can rise in the minds of the Negroes about the fact that she is a real and genuine friend of the race."

The letter was followed by a conference with Mrs. Roosevelt and Mayor LaGuardia on Friday morning in City Hall with Walter White and A. P. Randolph, where the Mayor and the First Lady expressed the same views in opposition to the march. The race leaders took definite exception to the stand taken and insisted that the march would produce beneficial results.

The letter of Mrs. Roosevelt follows:

"My dear Mr. Randolph:

I have talked over your letter with the President and I feel very strongly that your group is making a very grave mistake at the present time to allow this march to take place. I am afraid it will set back the progress which is being made, in the Army at least, towards better opportunities and less segregation.

I feel that if any incident occurs as a result of this, it may engender so much bitterness that it will create in Congress even more solid opposition from certain groups than we have had in the past.

I know that crusades are valuable and necessary sometimes, but undertaken when the temper is as tense as it is at present, it seems to me unfortunate, and to run the risk which a meeting such as this carries with it, is unwise. You know that I am deeply concerned about the rights of Negro people, but I think one must face situations as they are and not as one wishes them to be. I think this is a very serious decision for you to take.

Very sincerely yours,

Eleanor Roosevelt"

DAILY PAPERS BACK NEGRO'S BATTLE TO GET DEFENSE JOBS

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 19—Daily newspapers in all sections of the country have given unanimous editorial support to the drive for the integration of Negro workers into the National Defense program, Dr. Robert C. Weaver, Chief of the Negro Employment and Training Branch, reported this week.

Dr. Weaver's report was based on a survey of newspaper comment on the subject within recent weeks. Many of the editorials listed followed Mr. Hillman's action on April 11 in urging defense contract holders to utilize available Negro skilled and unskilled labor.

"Since an enlightened public opinion is of great aid in attacking a problem of this nature," the report said, "this widespread support of the daily press should be of much assistance in expediting the integration of qualified Negro workers into defense production."

Typical comments from daily newspapers in various States follow:

VERMONT FREE PRESS: "While we in America stoutly declare the equality of all races under this government of ours and teach our children the principle of Christian brotherhood, yet there persists a strong current of race prejudice which is a very tender subject in many areas of the United States . . . Negroes have a real contribution to make to national defense and they should be given every encouragement along that line."

MASSACHUSETTS STANDARD TIMES: "Certainly a nation that is arming to defend its democracy against forces that assert the superiority of one particular race above all others, should not display a similar attitude by denying any group of its citizens the privilege of contributing to that defense. If the OPM can impress that view on employers and white workers, and overcome the prejudice that now exists, it will have accomplished a just and a worthwhile thing."

INDIANA COURIER: 'Our Negroes are 100 per cent Americans. But also their efficiency is probably much higher, when they are given opportunity to develop it, than has been realized . . . As these facts are accepted, there may be many more Negroes taken off the charity rolls and the WPA and given useful jobs helping industry and Uncle Sam."

NEW YORK POST: "It is up to America to end discrimination against Negro participation in our national effort. We can prove to the Negro that his faith in the United States is well placed."

KANSAS CITY, KAS.: "No controversial 'social' issue is involved here. It is strictly the economic issue of giving all of equal skill equal chance at employment opportunity, regardless of any other consideration."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: "A clear test of the quality of democracy in the United States will be its ability to use more fully the resource which exists in the services of an important minority."

PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER: "It is particularly necessary that Negro youths be afforded equal opportunities for training in defense work. . . . There are employers and labor leaders who should take a more enlightened view of this question, both for their country's sake and that of common justice."

WASHINGTON (D. C.) POST: "The fact that skilled Negro craftsmen are being denied employment in industries handicapped by labor shortages has been frequently mentioned in official reports of the United States Employment Service. From the standpoint of those concerned only with speeding up the defense program, such exclusion must seem indefensible."

GREAT FALLS (MONT.) TRIBUNE: "Our leaders are telling us that the need is at hand to mobilize all our man-power, not only for military defense, but also for industrial production so essential to defense. The leaders of the Negro Americans are asking what their place is in that effort."

MINNEAPOLIS (MINN.) TRIBUNE: "If we are going to bring the blessings of democracy, in our time and generation, to all the people of the globe, we might as well begin to do a little homework, if only to get our hand in."

OREGON JOURNAL: "The United States, which fought a bloody civil war in order that the Negro might be free, and which is now engaged upon its greatest of all rearmament drives, in order that racial discrimination and oppression of minorities shall be ended forever, should be the last country on earth to draw the line against its own Negro citizens. . . . They are ready and willing and able to serve. They have every right to serve. They should be permitted to serve."

March

AN EDITORIAL

A Magna Charta for Negroes?

President Roosevelt's admonition to industry to end discrimination against workers of different color, race or religion will, if translated into appropriate action, be recognized years hence as the economic Magna Charta of the Negro people in America.

No sore on the body of America is more corrupt and corrupting than this sore: that we have deprived a tenth of our people of the opportunity to gain a decent livelihood, simply because they are a different color. We have hated Hitler because he has brutally persecuted Jews. Hitler's propagandists have sneered back at us, saying that we do exactly the same thing to our Negroes that Germany does to her Jews. The sneers hurt: how should we explain the difference between a sign in Berlin, Juden Verboten, and a sign in Birmingham, White Only? How argue that it was shameful that no Jew could be a doctor in Munich, but perfectly all right that no Negro could be an aircraft worker in Los Angeles?

When the defense emergency came upon us, the problem became too acute any longer to be ignored. It was so painfully obvious that the Negro people were being asked to fight for democracy but given no democracy; taxed to build war machines, but give no chance to share in the prosperity incidental to the building of these machines. Especially was this true in the most dramatic of all defense industries, aircraft, where a strict policy of excluding Negroes from the assembly line was universally followed—though there was a shortage of aircraft workers, and numbers of trained Negroes were applying for jobs.

Now the President has acted. He has told the nation that it was a matter of grave national importance to end such discrimination—against not only Negroes, but any other minority groups barred from jobs. The President's memorandum to Mr. Knudsen and Mr. Hillman of OPM cannot be praised too highly.

But it must be translated into action. Many times in the past, a vigorous statement of national policy has come from the White House, only to be ignored by those individuals and corporations whose prejudices it did not suit. Mr. Roosevelt puts it squarely up to the OPM to get action. If the OPM directors proceed militantly to enforce the President's stated desires, the color bar in American industry can be broken down for all time. The Negro people will take their rightful place as economic equals; and with economic equality will come political equality. When the Negro people become a functioning part of economic and political democracy, the "Negro problem" will have disappeared.

If the directors of the OPM should now fail in their task, if defense industries should be permitted to continue to bar Negroes—or to obtain the appearance of virtue without its substance by hiring a few Negroes in menial jobs—then a tenth of America's population will be more than ever persuaded they have no stake in defending the American way of life.

The Negro people have heard promises before. No one can blame them if they can now be convinced by nothing but results. It would be a tragic blow to national unity and morale if President Roosevelt's wholly admirable action did not quickly bear fruit in terms of jobs for Negroes.—TOM O'CONNOR.

Reprinted from the June 17, 1941 issue of PM

Mrs. F.D.R. Confers With 'D.C. March' Leaders

THE CALL, FRIDAY, JUNE 20, 1941

KNOX AND STIMSON WANT TO CONFER WITH RANDOLPH BEFORE BIG JULY 1 DEMONSTRATION

WASHINGTON.—(ANP) — Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt again demonstrated her willingnes sto aid the cause of the Negro when she conferred Friday with A. Philip Randolph and Walter White who are planning a "March on Washington," July 1, to protest silently against the unfair treatment accorded Negroes under the present defense set-up.

It is understood that Mrs. Roosevelt discussed the consequences "good and bad" of the match, and also suggested how "the most effectiveness might be gotten out of the demonstration."

The whole of the Negro population of the country is aroused and the March on Washington takes on tremendous significance and momentum as the date set for the massing in the nation's capitol of thousands of Negroes draws nearer.

July 1 will see the calvacade parading through the steets of Washington carrying banners and signs protesting discrimination against Negroes in the national defense program.

The N.A.A.C.P. is wholeheartedly back of the movement, has contributed financially to it, and branches throughout the country have been urged to give it unqualified support and participation.

Last week, A. Phillip Randolph, director of the March, received telegrams from Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, requesting that he come to Washington fo ra conference. Mr. Randolph consented that other members of the committee also be present.

At the conference Stimson, Knox, Sidney Hillman, William S. Knudsen of the OPM and others are expected to be present to hear the committee's demands that there be immediate cessation of discriminatory practices by the Army, Navy, defense industries and the air corps.

The March committee headquarters at 2289 Seventh avenue, New York City, is receiving scores of letters from persons who wish to register to go to Washington on July 1.

There will be a huge mass meeting before the Lincoln Memorial at which time marchers will be addressed by Mr. Randolph and Walter White, N.A.A.C.P. secretary, who will express the impatience of the Negro people with continued segregation and discrimination.

Roosevelt Orders OPM To Halt Discrimination In Industry Immediately

SEE OFFICIAL ATTEMPT TO CURB MARCH

By Ernest E. Johnson

NEW YORK. — (ANP) — In a weekend crowded with developments indicative of the tremendous pressure being exerted by the highest administration officials to curb if not completely kill the March on Washington, A. Philip Randolph, directing the nationwide mobilization, announced his scheduled conference with both Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of Navy Knox in Washington at noon on Wednesday, and a later conference with the President himself definitely probable.

Conference Unannounced

Evidencing the proportions and significance that the drive has taken on and the anxiety of the White House to present this "very grave mistake" from being made was the unannounced conference Mrs. Roosevelt held with Mr. Randolph and Walter White, NAACP secretary, in the office of Mayor F. H. LaGuardia here Friday morning. Earlier in the week the First Lady had written Mr. Randolph in an effort to persuade him to retreat.

From an unimpeachable source it was learned that, at the request of President Roosevelt, a larger conference will probably be held with the chief executive at an unspecified time and date but subsequent to the Wednesday session. Aubrey Williams, national director of the NYA, who was in New York Friday was said to have relayed the President's message.

LaGuardia at Meet

Everything points to the suddenness of the arrangements for Mrs. Roosevelt to meet with Randolph and White, for up to Thursday night it was not known at city hall that she would be with the mayor the next morning when he was scheduled to inspect the six newly-designed uniforms to be worn by women defense workers. She met the Negro leaders at 10 o'clock and together with Mayor LaGuardia they were closeted for one hour. A reliable attache at the hall said the two representatives were not summoned until Mrs. Roosevelt's arrival.

In the face of these mounting objections, the sponsoring committee met hurriedly Saturday morning at the YMCA to discuss the latest developments, and issued the following statement:

"The committee met this week and renewed its confidence in the leadership in this drive and registered its determination to redouble its efforts

(Continued On Page Two)

Memorandum to Hillman and Knudsen Says America Must Unite To Fight Foreign Theories

WASHINGTON. — Declaring that the situation is a matter of "grave national importance and that immediate steps must be taken to deal with it effectively," President Roosevelt ordered the Office of Production Management to see that defense industries fully utilize the nation's productive man power without regard to race, religion or national origin Sunday.

Observers believe that the order was given as an attempt to knock the edge off of the coming March-On-Washington directed by A. Philip Randolph. It is known that the coming demonstration has both the cabinet and the White House worried. It is also known that Negro leaders have been begging the President for many months to take the stand he did Sunday.

In a memorandum addressed to William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, OPM directors, the Chief Executive said many complaints had reached him that "fully qualified" Negroes and others were being turned away from the gate of industry on grounds "entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity."

"This situation," he asserted, "must be dealt with effectively." The President said that he had been told that the "discrimination" effectively and speedily with this problem," declared the President as he stated that he expected the OPM to take "immediate steps to facilitate the full utilization of our productive man power."

Placing his full support behind an OPM letter to holders of defense contracts on April 11 last, urging full utilization of available and competent Negro workers, the President said: "No nation combatting the increasing threat of totalitarianism can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries. Even more important is it for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad.

"Our Government cannot countenance continued discrimination against American citizens in defense production."

TEXT OF STATEMENT

The text of President Roosevelt's statement follows:

"Complaints have repeatedly been brought to my attention that available and much-needed workers are being barred from defense production solely because of race, religion or national origin. It is said that at a time when labor stringencies are appearing in many areas, fully qualified workers are being turned from the gates of industry on specifications entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity; also that discrimination against Negro workers has been

RANDOLPH SAYS ORDER "INEFFECTIVE"

NEW YORK — (ANP) — Commenting Monday on President Roosevelt's memorandum to OPM on the hiring of Negroes in defense industries, A. Philip Randolph, director of the impending March on Washington, told the Associated Negro Press:

"The statement of the President is one which was expected over 10 months ago. It has no teeth in it and is not a proclamation or executive order which would give assurance of discontinuance of discrimination.

"Therefore, the mobilization effort for the March on Washington is being redoubled."

Defense Bias Must [redacted] Now—F.D.R.

ST. LOUIS [redacted]TS CALL[redacted]

A Better Newspaper

St. Louis, Missouri, Friday, June 20, 1941

5 CENTS

IN GREATER ST. LOUIS

RAY TUCKER'S LETTER FROM WASHINGTON

Our best military men do not share the economists' and diplomats' theories as to the reasons for Hitler's thrust into Russia. Experts who have made a thorough study of Der Fuehrer's campaign believe that it was born of supreme confidence rather than of desperation. They note also that victory would leave him poised for an Autumn attack on either Britain's home isles or her Empire in the Middle East.

Our General Staff's analyses show that Hitler never moves without careful calculation of the time, materiel and personnel required for his particular objective. In the present operation he had the advantage of information from German technicians employed by the Soviet to manage its factories, hydro-electric plants and mines. He probably has assembled more data on Russia's strength and weakness than on those of any other nation he has invaded. He chose exactly the right season for his blitz. The greenness of the crops makes it difficult for the Russians to destroy them before the German advance. The hard, flat terrain facilitates those lightning movements so essential to his panzer divisions.

Our observers expect the outcome to be evident within a few weeks. All depends upon the Russians' strategy. If they retreat in slow, orderly style, maintaining their armies while they wreck bridges and roads, they may cripple Hitler. In this manner they could prolong the conflict for several months to a time when blizzards and fierce cold would cut Nazi supply and communication lines. But if the Communists stand and fight in orthodox fashion, they may be annihilated as were the Poles, Belgians and French.

* * *

President Roosevelt's order forbidding discrimination against Negroes in defense factories was literally prodded out of him by threat of a "march on Washington" by members of that race. The prospect of such a demonstration at this time threw the Administration into panic. They manipulated every lever in sight to prevent the affair.

The director of the threatened march, A. Philip Randolph, wrote to the President several weeks ago, asking if he would address the group when it reached the Capital on July 1. There was no reply for two weeks. Then Mr. Randolph, who heads the Brotherhood of Pullman Porters, received a letter from Mrs. Roosevelt. She said she had discussed the matter with her husband, and that he was sternly opposed to the idea. Last week Negro leaders were invited to New York by Mayor LaGuardia in his capacity as Civilian Defense Director. He begged them to call off the demonstration, but they refused. President Roosevelt subsequently summoned the sponsors to the White House, and personally asked them to leave the matter to him. Again, they declined.

Mr. LaGuardia and Aubrey Williams, NYA director, attended this session. Mrs. Roosevelt, who was at Campobello off New Brunswick, tried by telephone to persuade them to listen to her and her husband's arguments. Still the Negro representatives, supported by the most prominent members of their race, refused to abandon the scheme.

* * *

The climax came dramatically at a White House conference early this week. The dramatis personae reveal the President's intense desire to avert a spectacle which inevitably would have political, social and economic repercussions. Besides Mayor LaGuardia, Mr. Williams and Social Security Co-ordinator Anna Rosenberg, F. D. R. called in OPM-ers Knudsen, Knox, Stimson and Hillman.

The President opened the discussion by reiterating his firm opposition to the proposed "march." He declared that problems affecting

The Afro-American July 19, 1941

Inside Story Behind F. D. R.'s Order on Defense Jobs

WASHINGTON

The "inside story" of what went on behind the scenes before President Roosevelt issued his executive order banning discrimination in defense plants holding government contracts with the resultant calling off of the projected job-march on Washington, is revealed by Ray Tucker, Washington correspondent and columnist, in a recent issue of his syndicated column, "The National Whirligig."

A. Philip Randolph, director of the march, and Walter White of the NAACP had corresponded with the President and with Mrs. Roosevelt and had conferred with Mayor La Guardia of New York in his capacity of civilian defense director, but had still refused to abandon the march plans. They were then summoned to the White House for a conference.

Climax Came Dramatically

What happened there is best told by Mr. Tucker, who writes:

"The climax came dramatically at this conference. The dramatis personae reveal the President's intense desire to avert a spectacle which inevitably would have political, social and economic repercussions.

"Besides Mayor La Guardia, Mr. Williams and Social Security Co-ordinator Anna Rosenberg, F. D. R. called in OPM-ers Knudsen, Knox, Stimson and Hillman.

"The President opened the discussion by reiterating his firm opposition to the proposed 'march.' He declared that problems affecting the colored race cannot be settled in that manner.

"He asked: 'What would happen if the Irish and Jewish people staged a march on Washington? It would be resented by the American people because such a march would be considered as an effort to coerce the Government and make it do certain things.'

Roosevelt Quits Room

"Mr. Randolph replied that the Irish and Jewish people have no grievances, while the colored Americans do, and added that all other forms of protest have proved ineffective. When Mr. Roosevelt refused to address the group on the ground that he does not speak to such assemblages, he was reminded that he once spoke before the American Youth Congress, which booed him when he denounced the Communists. F. D. R. soon left the room.

"The practical Mayor La Guardia then suggested issuance of a Presidential order against discrimination on defense jobs. Both Mr. Knudsen and Mr. Hillman opposed this because so many other factors are involved in the defense program. Both agreed, however, to use their 'influence' to insure the hiring of colored workers. Mr. Randolph and Mr. White replied that 'education' and "persuasion' have been tried and failed.

"Then it was that the President agreed to issue his mandate."

INDUSTRIALISTS ARE OBEYING EXECUTIVE ORDER, SAYS HILLMAN

Tells Newsmen He Sees No Need For Using Punitive Measures; OPM Getting Jobs for Negroes, Says

WASHINGTON, July 3—(ANP)—At Sidney Hillman's press conference Friday afternoon, the associate director of the OPM outlined for the 60 or more white newsmen attending, the purposes and conditions of the President's recent executive order, affecting the working conditions of Negroes in defense industries.

After Mr. Hillman had outlined the progress of the OPM in this direction, calling attention to the fact that the OPM had been successful in securing employment for Negroes in camp construction in some 20 camps; airplane plants; iron and steel industries; and ordnance plants he then went into a discussion of the executive order, which got very little space in the white papers when it was released here.

Mr. Hillman was asked regarding the punitive measures of the order and he replied that thus far, there had been no occasion to use such measures.

Again he was asked if any of the plants had refused to heed the first order of the President and Mr. Hillman stated that no plant they had been to in the past had been guilty of refusing the presidential order and had been highly cooperative in carrying out the principles of work involved.

THE MERIDIAN PROGRESS

Published every Saturday at Meridian, Mississippi, by the PROGRESS PUBLISHING COMPANY

JAMES A. BURNS ..... Editor
D. TALMADGE WEBSTER..... Business Manager
D. A. BUCKINGHAM, M. D. ..... Ass't. Business Manager
E. L. HENDERSON .... Advertising and Circulation Manager
WILLIARD M. BRACEY
MRS. MARGUERITE OLIVER ..... Society Editor

RATES: 1 yr. $2.50; 6 mos. $1.25; 3 mos. 65c; The Copy 5c
Payable In Advance

Social and news articles must reach The Progress Office before Wednesday noon of each week to insure prompt publication. No manuscript will be returned unless accompanied with a fully-prepaid self-addressed envelope. All contributions must be signed with the full name and address of the writer as an evidence of good faith, but names will be withheld when requested.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE ROYAL ORDER OF SONS AND DAUGHTERS OF HAM

Let Us Have An All-Negro Hospital in Meridian

NOTICE

Until further notice all correspondence for The Meridian Progress may be addressed to 2513—5th Street, 2nd Floor, Meridian, Mississippi.

Mr. Green Awakens

FOR MANY YEARS since, indeed from the organization of the American Federation of Labor under Samuel Gompers, it has been the policy of the labor unions affiliated with that body to bar Negroes from their membership and even to prevent Negroes from working on the same job.

When this fact was brought to the attention of Mr. Green, he would almost always answer inquiries concerning his attitude on the Negro question by saying that he was powerless to direct the course of action of any of the unions affiliated with the A. F. of L.

To give substance to what would not otherwise stand close investigation an Executive Council was established within the organization which functioned at all times and with such plenary powers that none of its decisions could be questioned or overthrown by the delegates at any annual session, and it necessarily followed that the position of any unions regarding the rejection of Negroes could not be questoned by the delegates, since this council was bound to sustain the action of any of its affiliates when controlled by the constitution of that particular union.

Then, to still the din of the clamor which arose against the peculiar anomaly of a committee being of higher authority than the body which created it, there were created such peculiar bodies as federal and auxiliary unions for Negroes which had nothing to do except pay their dues to the A. F. of L. and enjoy the speeches at the annual meetings.

What is now disturbing Mr. Green's equanimity more than the fair and just position of the C. I. O. toward the Negro membership in its affiliates is the fact that Mr. Green is one of the Committee on Fair Labor Practices whose aim is to secure the rights of Negroes to work in defense projects, a large number of which are controlled by unions whose affiliation is with the A. F. of L. and who, hitherto, in peace times, have been bitter in their treatment of Negro workmen and have refused to affiliate with them.

Mr. Green now addresses a questionnaire to all labor unions to discover what they have already declared in their constitution to be their attitude toward associating with Negro workers either in membership or affiliation, ostensibly to break down this barrier of discrimination.

But, since the attitude of those same unions has been declared by their constitution and the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. has refused to take any stand against the action of any union when supported by that constitution, it is a matter susceptible of many conjectures to say what Mr. Green will do when all these laws and rulings of the A. F. of L. are recited to restore his memory.

VIEWS ON MANY QUESTIONS

From The Amsterdam News Readers

Letters must be accompanied by name and address, although we will withhold both on request. Please limit letter to 250 words.

Keep the Fight Up

Dear Sir:—The protest mass meeting to release W. A. Domingo, who is now languishing in a concentration camp in Jamaica, British West Indies, was, I believe, an encouraging success. The good work should be kept up, regardless of the outcome of the campaign.

I am in deep sympathy with the movement to get self-rule for Jamaica and the other West Indian colonies, and I have a great deal of respect and admiration for Mr. Domingo. His arrest and detention are without justification, even in war time.

We may pardon the extravagances of speech, the expression of fear of persecution by the so-called leaders and even their deliberate falsehoods as the campaign in behalf of Mr. Domingo is waged, but it would be a good thing if the fight were to be conducted on a high, honest and statesmanlike plane.

In supporting the drive to free Mr. Domingo, I do so as a patriotic duty, as Mr. Domingo intended when he left the United States. His mission was of the highest moral purpose and he should be freed without further argument.

JAMAICAN PATRIOT

Harlem.

A Swell Job, Sir

Dear Sir:—The recent issues of their efforts in building Brown Bomber will be shown by the entire organization.

For your information, I am also pleased to state that they are scheduled to speak in some of the largest churches in Jersey during the Fall and Summer months, through the courtesy of the president of the usher board of several churches.

DONALD N. YEARWOOD.

New York City.

Harlem's "Secret Service"

Dear Sir:—The arrest of W. A. Domingo has brought into the open the oft discussed secret service of Harlem. I have been unable to find out whether there is really such an organization. This I do know that when I was preparing to go to Jamaica in 1938, I was confidentially referred to one of the alleged members for his necessary O. K. I did not seek it, but nevertheless I went home and returned safely without it.

There are, however, certain happenings which seem to prove that there are Negroes in Harlem who keep the British Consulate informed of the activities and associations of certain men. It has been often stated that a Black List (or is it Red List?) of dangerous radicals is kept at 25 Broadway.

One thing seems certain to me, namely, that in so far as Domingo's arrest was based on his political activities in Harlem, information in regard to those activities must have been passed on to the British authorities in Jamaica by the British Consulate here, who in turn was posted by a member or members of the Harlem Secret Service.

Knowing Domingo as I do, as a friend and as a political coworker for 21 years, I am sure that any information which could justify his arrest and detention was false and malicious.

I have, therefore, ventured by letter to suggest to the Consul-General that if there are in Harlem a group of men who supply secret information in regard to men with progressive ideas, who speak and act differently from the reactionary and conservative mass, that, in view of the tragic error in the case of Domingo, these men should be immediately and carefully investigated as to their own political activities, and as to their character, especially as to their fitness to give reliable information without prejudices and without malice.

If it is necessary that honest and decent citizens, who act and speak like men, must live and move and have their being in an environment infested with investigating busy-bodies, then at least let them be assured that the investigators are honest and reliable

EDITORIAL

TORPEDOING THE PRESIDENT'S ORDER

Rumors are rife in Washington that Sidney Hillman, OPM co-chief, is planning to sabotage the committee authorized by President Roosevelt in his recent order designed to end discrimination against Negroes in defense industries.

* * *

Hillman's reported plan is to load down the committee with subservient labor leaders, stooges of national insignificance, who will smother investigations and stall on remedial measures, thus perpetuating the OPM "do-nothing" policy on defense discrimination.

* * *

We warn the President and Mr. Hillman that unless a strong, courageous, active committe of nationally prominent and liberal persons in whom American Negroes have confidence is appointed, the high enthusiasm and morale engendered by the President's order will be destroyed.

* * *

The President's order will become a farce unless there is a committee with backbone and determination to enforce it.

* * *

American Negroes are in no mood to tolerate any more run-arounds.

* * *

We want a man of the calibre of Mayor LaGuardia of New York City as chairman of the committee; we want two or three nationally-known Negro members who will really function in running down and ending all cases of color discrimination in defense.

* * *

The traditional patriotism of the American Negro will be severely shaken if this committee turns out to be just another one of those things.

Cayton Doubts

NEW BIAS BOARD'S POWER TO ENFORCE FDR's ORDER—RAISES VITAL ISSUES

BY HORACE R. CAYTON

THERE has been a lot of loose talk lately about the possible effectiveness of the proposed Presidential board to enforce the integration of the Negro into the Defense Program. It is my opinion that a board whose power does not spring from a definite legislation and does not have the power to enforce penalties is pretty useless. At least that was the experience with the early labor boards during the NRA period.

But over and above that, I have a few questions to raise about the functioning of any board in this situation. The question of the use of Negroes on defense contracts has two aspects which must be taken into consideration. There is first the problem of enforcing the contractors on a particular job or the management of a particular industry to hire Negroes. The second problem is to make the unions accept Negroes as members in those industries which are organized. What usually happens is that either one or the other refuses or that they pass the buck back and forth until the poor Negro looking for a job gives up in despair.

Mr. Cayton

DOUBT ENFORCEMENT

What I would like to know is: are provisions made under this board to deal with both of these types of situations? Personally I think that the board is more or less a bunch of eye wash. It has no power and, further, I doubt that the administration would force recalcitrant employers to hire Negroes. The most certain way in which to force the employment of Negroes is to write it in the contract. But, my friends, that doesn't work, and I am going to give you an example.

RECENTLY while in St. Louis I had a long conversation with Arnold B. Walker, Industrial Secretary of the St. Louis Urban League. The St. Louis Housing Authority, under a grant from the United States Housing Authority, is building a large housing project for Negroes called the Carr Square Village. According to the contract, 3.2 per cent of the skilled mechanics were to be Negroes. Walker recruited a number of skilled mechanics and sent them to the contractor, J. E. Dunn Construction Company of Kansas City. A. J. Timms, superintendent of the construction, informed them and Mr. Walker that he needed the mechanics, especially the carpenters, and was willing to hire them, but as it was a union job he would have to get permission from the union. Walker then took up the matter with John L. Church, president of the Building and Construction Trades Council and local labor czar in the buildings trades. Church stated that all the men had to do was to register, even though both he and Walker knew that they had been turned down numerous times before.

GIVEN RUN-AROUND

In the meantime, Timms, who appeared to be quite friendly to Negro mechanics, wrote the following letter to Church:

"Our contract with the Housing Authority states that we are to employ 3.2 per cent Negro skilled mechanics on this project. At the present time we have no Negro mechanics in our employ. It is imperative that we live up to this part of our agreement. We can use this per cent of Negro labor at this time and would like to know if the Building Trades are in a position to furnish these men at this time."

Church did not answer Timm's letter, but stated over the phone that he did not have any union men available. Walker then organized a march of a number of Negro mechanics on the offices of the various unions to give concrete and visual evidence that many Negro mechanics were available and anxious to join the union. They were met with explanations. . the carpenters stated that their books were closed . . other excuses were given, but no Negroes were given cards or even work permits.

SOME members of the St. Louis Housing Authority stated that they were glad that the whole argument was between the contractor and the union, which, they felt, relieved them of the responsibility to see that the provisions of the contract were carried out. Work on the project continued and it is now nearly 20 per cent completed, and no skilled Negro mechanic is on the job.

RAISES PERTINENT ISSUES

Finally Walker and the League wired the United States Housing Authority on June 26 and received from them a perfunctory answer . . but no member of the Negro division of the Housing Authority has at this writing come to make any investigation of the matter in answer to this wire.

Well, here are the questions which I have to raise: If we cannot force the employment of Negroes in an instance where it is specified in the contract that they should be hired, how on earth can we expect a board without power to achieve this? When the entire attention of the Negro public opinion is on discrimintaions such as these, why does not the administration force their employment when they have a legal right to do so? If you can't get Negroes to work when it is written in the contract, there is no hope for this moral persuasion stuff.

As for my friend, Frank Horne of the United States Housing Authority, I would suggest that he catch a plane and get down to St. Louis and straighten that mess out right away.

What AFRO Readers Say

WANTS TO SHARE "VISION"

Dear AFRO: I have been viewing a new world since 1938, when a spiritual voice began revealing a complete freedom for the black race, as well as salvation from Hitler for the whites.

I hope soon to go South and write a book on this vision, if some one will think seriously enough about it to help me.

(Mrs.) BERTHA RUFF.
P.O. Box 826,
Logan, W.Va.

ON JOB MARCH SUPPORT

Dear AFRO: On behalf of the March-on-Washington Committee, permit me to express my deep appreciation and gratitude for the fine editorial and news space support your paper gave the movement for jobs and justice in national defense.

The executive order issued by the President has fully justified the nation-wide march-on-Washington movement.

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH,
Committee Chairman.
New York.

ASHAMED OF GOVERNMENT

Dear AFRO: The article in last's AFRO, "U.S. Army Personnel Lopsided" shows that approximately .0005 per cent of the U.S. reserve officers are colored. This is ridiculous, and I am ashamed of my government.

I hope that through the continued effort on the part of your paper to expose these inequalities a fairer distribution will be effected. S. M. HUFFMAN Columbus, Ohio.

WATCH THE 366TH

Dear AFRO: Colonel Hamilton, one of our highest ranking officers, made a speech in reply to the War Department's challenge, "Can the American Negro lead his own troops in modern combat warfare?"

This command is composed of colored men as varied as the American scene may vary. Rich man, poor man, beggar man, thief, lawyer, doctor, West Indian chief, are the backbone of the 366th Infantry. Approximately 98 per cent of the officer personnel are college graduates. Never before has such an educated group been assembled in any army unit nor any colored organization. The typist now working on this letter has been a candidate for both Annapolis and West Point.

We want the people to watch closely our progress for, as the 366th goes so goes the destiny of the colored soldier. We intend to meet that challenge. We intend to produce a combat unit that will be the equal, if not the better, of any organization throughout our land. Watch the 366th Infantry!

THOMAS KENDRICK, Jr.
Fort Devens, Mass.

F.D.R. A PARALOGIST

Dear AFRO: If A. Philip Randolph were right in organizing the march to Washington, he was certainly wrong for calling it off. Your editorial on Randolph was exceptionally good. Mr. Randolph doesn't know that the President is a paralogist and is a believer in paralogism; therefore, his statement that colored people should have jobs does not amount to very much and I am afraid that the President does not reason from what I would call syllogism. He is never logical. He is always emotional.

L. F. COLES
New York City.

How Long, Dixie?

By J. FARLEY RAGLAND

"For only white," I saw the sign,
All written there in bold design—
And colored folk, if they would dine,
Must seek the kitchen back behind.
Negroes here are told so clear,
To make their entrance from the rear,
It seems back doors were made for me,
Within this land so grand and free.

A drinking fountain once I saw
That filled me with disgusted awe,
For side by side, the silly sight,
One said colored, one said white.
Back doors, and segregation stuff,
Just when will Dixie have enough?
With Blatant tongue I make my plea,
For just how long will all this be?

Lawrenceville, Va.

The New York Amsterdam Star-News
July 19, 1941

Two At Least

Daily News

End Race Inequality on Jobs—F.D.R.

By DORIS FLEESON.

Washington, D. C., June 15.—With the stern reminder that the United States "must refute at home the theories we are fighting abroad," President Roosevelt today commanded both capital and labor to cease discrimination against any American worker "because of race, religion or national origin."

In a broad magna charta for the toiler—the colored, the Jews and those of German and Italian racial stock who complain they are now held suspect—the President declared:

"Our Government cannot countenance continued discrimination against American citizens in defense production.

Initiative Is Industries.

"Industry must take the initiative in opening the doors of employment to all loyal and qualified workers regardless of race, national origin, religion or color.

"American workers, both organized and unorganized, must be prepared to welcome the general and much needed employment of fellow-workers of all racial and nationality origins in defense industries."

As defense industry has expanded, complaints have poured into Washington in increasing volume that job preference was going to the so-called "white Christian Americans." Powerful, intrenched unions were also blamed for reportedly exclusive policies which set up a "ruling labor class" over the rank and file of workers.

The colored particularly have felt aggrieved and their wrongs have been exploited by the Communists. Recognizing the danger inherent in the situation, able leaders of their race and white associates have pleaded with the White House to take action.

Axis Takes Advantage.

Typical of their efforts was a booklet, "The Negro and Defense," widely circulated last week in the capital by the Council for Democracy. It backed up the colored charge of discrimination, insisted that "the job of defending America is a job for all Americans."

Some colored newspapers threatened a job march on Washington on July 1.

(Continued on page 16, col. 2)

F.D.R. Orders End of Race Discrimination

(Continued from page 2)

At the same time, Axis agents and their sympathizers have made the most of charges by those of German and Italian blood that they were being automatically excluded from jobs and their loyalty questioned, no matter how fine their records as American citizens.

Today, the President dealt strongly with the situation in an all-inclusive memorandum to the heads of defense production, William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman.

The President acknowledged bluntly that "discrimination against Negro workers has been nation-wide and other minority, racial and religious groups have felt its effects in many localities."

He recalled approvingly that April 11 last, OPM wrote all holders of defense contracts as follows:

"All holders of defense contracts are urged to examine their employment and training policies at once to determine whether or not these policies make ample provision for the full utilization of available and competent Negro workers. Every available source of labor capable of producing defense materials must be tapped in the present emergency."

"As Chief Executive I place the full support of my office behind your statement," said Roosevelt.

Situation Must Be Met.

Patriotism and defense both require that the situation be met, Roosevelt continued, saying:

"No nation combatting the increasing threat of totalitarianism can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries. Even more important is it for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad."

He then called on labor also to do its part with industry and concluded with the curt admonition:

"I shall expect the office of production management to take immediate steps to facilitate the full utilization of our productive manpower."

PRESIDENT MOVES TO LIFT JOB BARS

Discrimination Against Negroes Results in Order Covering Contracts for Defense

NEW UNIT SET UP IN OPM

Committee on Fair Employment Practice Is to Take Steps to Redress Valid Grievances

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, June 25—President Roosevelt took action today to prevent discrimination of defense jobs because of race, creed, color or national origin, asserting that "the democratic way of life within the nation can be defended successfully only with the help and support of all groups."

The President issued an Executive order instructing official agencies to play their part in eliminating discrimination against Negroes, and members of other minority groups, and establishing a Committee on Fair Employment Practice in the Office of Production Management to deal with violations.

The Executive gave these intructions:

"All departments and agencies of the government of the United States concerned with vocational and trining programs for defense production shall take special measures appropriate to assure that such programs are administered without discrimination.

"All contracting agencies of the Government of the United States shall include in all defense contracts hereafter negotiated by them a provision obligating the contractor not to discriminate against any workers.

"There is established in the Office of Production Management a Committee on Fair Employment Practice, which shall consist of a chairman and four other members to be appointed by the President."

The order was issued principally because the government's attention had been called to cases of discrimination against Negroes in some defense industries and labor unions.

"There is evidence available that needed workers have been barred from industries engaged in defense production solely because of considerations of race, creed, color or national origin to the detriment of workers' morale and of national unity, the President revealed. "It is the duty of employers and of labor organizations to provide for the full and equitable participation of all workers in the defense industries without discrimination."

The new unit of the OPM created to deal with the situation was instructed "to receive and investigate complaints of discrimination in violation of the provisions of this order" and to take "appropriate steps to redress grievances which it finds to be valid."

"The committee shall also recommend to the several departments and agencies of the government and to the President all measures which may be deemed necessary or proper to effectuate the provisions of this order," the President said.

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE, FRIDAY, JUNE 20, 1941

Pres. Roosevelt Declares Right of Negroes On Defense Projects

Government Cannot Approve Continual Discrimination

WASHINGTON, June 15—(AP) Asserting that he had received complaints of nation-wide discrimination agains Negroes in defense industries, President Roosevelt called upon the Office of Production Management today to take immediate steps to deal "effect tively" with this "grave" situation.

In a memorandum to William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, co-directors, Mr. Roosevelt said that "no nation combatting the increasing threat of totalitarianism can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries." It is "even more important," he added "for us to strengthen our unity and morals by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad."

COMPLAINTS INCREASE

"Complaints have repeatedly been brought to my attention," he declared, "that available and much-needed workers are being barred from defense production solely because of race, religion, or national origin. It is said that at a time when labor stringencies are appearing in many areas, fully qualified workers are being turned form the gates of industry on specifications entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity. Also that discrimination against Negro workers has been nation-wide, and other minority racial, national and religious groups have felt its effect in many localities."

"Our government cannot countenance continued discrimination against American citizens in defense production. Industry must take the initiative in opening the doors of employment to all loyal and qualified workers regardless of race, national origin, religion or color. American workers, both or-

(Continued on Page 8)

National Committee Is Organized

Sale of Buttons, Certificates To Finance Venture

NEW YORK — The national committee for the mobilization of 100,000 Negro Americans to march on Washington for jobs in national defense was set up in New York recently under the direction of A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

Members of this committee are Walter White, secretary of the NAACP; Lester B. Granger, assistant executive secretary of the National Urban League; Richard Parrish, president of the Association of Negro College Students of New York; Rev. William Lloyd Imes, pastor, St. James Presbyterian Church; Dr. Rayford Logan of Howard University; J. Finley Wilson, grand exalted ruler of the Improved Benevolent and Protective Order, Elks of the World; Noah A. Walters, Laundry Workers' Joint Board; E. E. Williams of the Blasters and Drillers Union; Frank R. Crosswaith of the National Negro Labor Committee; Layle Lane, vice president of the American Federation of Teachers; and the Rev. Adam C. Powell, Jr., pastor, Abyssinian Baptist Church.

LOCAL COMMITTEE FORMED

Local march-on-Washington committees have been established in Kansas City, Mo.; St. Paul, Minn.; St. Louis, Mo.; Chicago, Ill.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Newark, N. J.; Jersey City, N. J.; Asbury Park, N. J.; Westchester, N. Y.; New York City, Philadelphia, Pa.; Baltimore, Md.; Richmond, Va.; Atlanta, Ga.; Savannah, Ga.; Tampa and Jacksonville, Fla.

"We consider this march an effective method of getting the issue of Negro jobs in defense and the right for participation and integration on a basis of equality with other citizens into the armed forces of the nation, into the main stream of public opinion and before the American people," asserted Mr. Randolph.

Means for financing the march are the sale of buttons and certificates to persons who are willing to make a contribution to support the venture with a dollar or more.

Headquarters in New York have been established at 2289 Seventh Avenue under the supervision of Warren Brown, who recently received his Ph. D. degree from the graduate faculty of political and social sciences at the New School for Social Research.

RALLY AT LINCOLN MONUMENT

Following the march on Washington, a rally will be held at the monument of Abraham Lincoln. At this rally, President Roosevelt and other representatives of the government have been invited to speak, together with Negro leaders.

In Washington, a promotional office has been established under the management of Captain Eugene P. Davidson, who is assistant national director to Mr. Randolph.

One week before the march on Washington, plans have been developed for marches in various cities on the city halls for the purpose of urging the mayors and the city councils to memorialize President Roosevelt to abolish discriminations on account of race or color in government departments and national defense, observed Mr. Randolph.

In New York, he said, the march to the City Hall is to be staged June 27, and is to be combined with Negro Day. Mayor LaGuardia has already been advised of the demonstration.

NO EXPRESSION OF OPPOSITION

"This march on Washington by Negroes is no expression of opposition to the appeal of President Roosevelt for national unity and national defense, and the preservation of American democracy," declared Mr. Randolph. "Sensible, sane, and sober-minded Negroes are for national unity and national defense and for the maintenance of our democratic institutions and way of life.

"The purpose of this march is to impress upon white America that Negroes want to share, and are determined to fight to share, in national unity and national defense and in American democracy as other American citizens share in it.

"We want no part of Hitlerism, Nazism, Fascism, or Communism. We are Americans too, and we shall not rest content until America gives the Negro his full constitutional stature of American citizenship."

NEGRO, JOBLESS MARCH PERTURBS POLICE HEADS OF NATION'S CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, June (ANP).—Police officials here are greatly perturbed over the prospect of the arrival of 50,000 additional Negroes, whereas they have difficulty in coping with problems of handling 170,000 who reside in the district. Major Brown, police commissioner, has been approached on the matter of permits for a parade and when told it would be advisable to grant the permit so there would be some order and organization he is believed to have agreed to the suggestion granting a full police escort to the group.

That the official family of the President is taking an active interest in the affair is indicative of the fact that the whites do not [illegible] in [illegible]

[illegible]ch Disturbs D.C. Police

WASHINGTON. — (ANP) — Police officials here are greatly perturbed over the prospect of the arrival of 10,000 additional Negroes, whereas they have difficulty in coping with problems of handling 170,000 who reside in the district. Major Brown, police commissioner, has been approached on the matter of permits for a parade and when told it would be advisable to grant the permit so there would be some order and organization he is believed to have agreed to the suggestion granting a full police escort to the group. [illegible]

D. C. Police Officials Perturbed Over March

WASHINGTON, June 26—(ANP)—Police officials here are greatly perturbed over the prospect of the arrival of 50,000 additional Negroes, whereas they have difficulty in coping with problems of handling 170,000 who reside in the district. Major Brown, police commissioner, has been approached on the matter of permits for a parade and when told it would be advisable to grant the permit so there would be some order and organization, he is believed to have agreed to the suggestion, granting a full police escort to the group.

That the official family of the President is taking an active part in the affair is indicative of the fact that the whites do not want such a thing to happen in Washington at this critical time.

Chicago Daily News June 14, 1941

U. S. MUST CALL NEGRO WORKERS, STOWE ASSERTS

Lack of Manpower Will Compel Training for Defense Industries.

BY LELAND STOWE.

Special Dispatch from a Staff Correspondent.

New York, June 14.—After nearly two weeks inspecting a wide variety of defense industries from the Atlantic seaboard to the Mississippi Valley, you get an extremely encouraging picture of America's gigantic defense production machine as it is about to shift into high gear.

Simultaneously you get a clearer understanding of those elements that are preventing or will prevent American industries from turning out their maximum quotas of airplanes, tanks, guns and other military equipment while billions of dollars worth of appropriations pile up and up.

Four Vital Obstacles.

The returned American war correspondents who have made this tour have been greatly impressed by the extraordinary progress made by all manner of American industrial enterprises in the last 12 months. Nevertheless "ball-and-chain" elements inevitably exist. They knock costly holes in the efficiency and speed of mass production, and chief among such retarding elements are the following:

1. The insatiable demand for machine tools and gauges, which alone provide the basis for ever-enlarging defense production.
2. Labor disputes and strikes that slow down or paralyze whole sections of vital industrial processes.
3. Near shortages or threatened shortages of raw materials, such as magnesium, aluminum or structural steel.
4. Shortage of trained manpower.

Manpower Is Greatest Hazard.

Of these four elements, oddly enough, the one that attracts the least attention today, yet may well prove to be the most detrimental in the long run, is No. 4—the coming shortage of manpower throughout hundreds of key plants and factories from coast to coast.

The first big "tooling up" crisis has been weathered successfully by the machine-tool industry, even though it must encounter future cycles of strain and crisis. Firm and uncompromising governmental action seems at last to promise a sharp reduction of strike obstructionism. Most industrial leaders admit that shortages of certain raw materials are bound to occur, yet they count upon increased production of such metals as magnesium and aluminum, together with their careful allocation under the priority system, to ease such shortages.

American industrial leaders seem to be keenly awake to all these problems, but most of those with whom we have talked appear to be dodging the disagreeable outlook in regard to the coming and unavoidable shortage of manpower.

Reservoirs Being Drained.

This is probably due to the fact that defense industries, from the beginning of their mobilization, have been profiting by the vast reservoir of unemployed upon which they could draw [illegible] an opportunity to operate machines as well as sweep floors in our defense plants.

Leaders Shirk Question.

In Hartford, Indianapolis, Detroit, Cleveland and other cities we asked chief executives of some of our largest airplane, automotive and similar defense industries if they had plans for employing women to speed up the nation's war effort.

K. T. Keller, president of the Chrysler Corporation, replied for most of them when he declared, "We've got enough problems already. Don't load that one on us right now."

In Buffalo, Burdette Wright, vice-president of Curtiss-Wright, said, "It's an awfully debatable question as to when we shall need to put women on machines. Of course there are many operations which women could do, such as work on light and repetitive machines, inspection and the like. In England they are using a great many women and very successfully."

Sees Women as Success.

The only industrial leader who was outspoken about women's coming role in defense manufacturing was Lawrence D. Bell, president of Buffalo's Bell Aircraft Coropration. He declared:

"I think we'll be employing women on a large scale before very long in American industry. There is no reason why about 40 per cent of the work can't be done, and done very satisfactorily, by women."

All that we have seen during this defense survey under the auspices of the National Association of Manufacturers has fortified this reporter's conviction that American rearmament can only hit its ultimate [illegible]

Support Increases For March On Washington

WASHINGTON, June (ANP)—Plans for the March on Washington to protest discrimination against Negroes in industry go ahead with speed, according to Capt. Eugene P. Davidson, chairman of the local branch. With his committee meeting every Wednesday in the local Y, Capt Davidson sees nothing but success for the program adopted to register a protest against the unfair treatment accorded Negroes under the present administration. And the fact that the group is bringing this vividly before the very eyes of the President adds to the effectiveness of the demonstration.

According to Capt. Davidson, there will be no unseemly demonstration in the parade nor along the line of march, only the slow beating of muffled drums in cadence with the marchers, who will have every appearance of bemoaning their fate in the economic pattern of the great democracy.

From other cities there has been an enthusiastic response to the call for marchers and when on July 1 the solemn procession wends its way along Pennsylvania avenue, Washington's favorite parade grounds, to the Lincoln memorial, where the group will wait word from the White House.

A third emancipation is anticipated here, for it is hoped that the dramatic effort will move the President to action against the barriers which keep Negroes out of employment.

One hundred thousand Negroes from all parts of the country are expected to participate in the demonstration headed by A. Philip Randolph and the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. Supporting the organization in this effort will be a group of other well known groups which have sought to break down these barriers in other ways over a period of years.

Associated with Capt. Davidson here in Washington are a number of well known persons and organizations.

New York has also joined wholeheartedly in the movement and a wave of contagious enthusiasm has swept the eastern seaboad at least, calling on everyone to make the event a success. Buttons are being sold to finance the propisition.

THE NEGRO LABOR NEWS

419 1-2 Milam Street Phone Pre

C. W. RICE, Editor-Publisher

HOUSTON, TEXAS, JULY 26, 1941

An Editorial

ROOSEVELT'S LABOR COMMITTEE

President Roosevelt has named a Committee on Fair Labor Practice. The duty of the committee is to investigate complaints of discrimination against Negroes seeking employment in defense industries and to take whatever steps necessary to correct the practice.

Two Negroes were named on the six man board, a labor leader and a lawyer.

The President's set us is the first Executive Order in the interest of Negroes since the immortal Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation.

We doubt the committee will be able to remedy discrimination against Negroes in defense industries.

The basic cause of non-employment of Negroes in defense industries is due largely to the discriminatory policies and practices of labor unions which hold labor contracts with the industries. Some of the contracts run as long as for two and three years.

In order to get Negroes on these jobs, the unions themselves must meet in convention assembled and change their by-laws and constitutions so as to admit Negro memberships. The unions may not hold such meetings until probably the next two years.

When the color bar is broken down in the unions, there comes a question of union seniority which would give all white union members preference on the jobs before Negroes could be considered. That's union rule.

Regardless of what the President's committee decides, as long as defense industries operate on a closed shop basis, there is but little hope for the Negro worker, and they will be kept going in a vicious circle.

We don't believe William Green, A. F. of L. president and member of the committee, is going to upset the discriminatory practices and policies of his 30 or more affiliates of the International A.F.L. union, for the benefit of the Negro workers because the President has issued an Executive Order.

We doubt that Phillip Murray, C.I.O. president and another member of the committee, will disrupt the C.I.O.'s contracts and agreements with industries to hire Negroes. If he does, it will be more than has been done with the General Motors Corporation where the C.I.O. holds contract. Negroes employed with that company are still classed as janitors, porters and other unskilled workers.

We agree with the opinion of some that the Executive Order was a clever act on the part of New Deal politicos to avert the MARCH ON WASHINGTON which would have brought much embarrassment to the administration at a time when it could least afford it. It was obvious that the Communists and their sympathizers were ready to join the March to make a nasty mess at the capitol.

A. Phillips Randolph, who had been embarrassed with the "Reds" in the National Negro Congress, and Walter White, secretary of the NAACP, were just about as anxious to avert the March as the President. Randolph gave birth to the idea of the March as he did the Negro Congress.

It is our hope that the President's Committee or some group will be able to formulate a movement by which all free men will be able to follow their trade not only in defense industries but all industries, without regard to race, creed or union affiliation. Democracy will in no way reach perfection until all men have equal opportunity under the law, to Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness. We cannot have these without a chance to WORK.

It Is Up to Us

Several weeks ago, President Roosevelt issued an executive order prohibiting discrimination on defense jobs in a dramatic move to force manufacturers to provide employment for Negroes. At the time, Mr. Roosevelt announced that he would name a commission to see to it that the terms of the order are carried out. That commission has been named.

The Amsterdam Star-News urged the President to put at least two Negroes on the commission, after it was freely discussed that only one Negro was to be appointed. There are two Negroes on the commission.

We don't have any quarrel with Mr. Roosevelt over his selection. In fact we believe the men chosen are amply fitted for the work, and that if White House cooperation is what the President has led us to believe it will be, the next few weeks ought to witness a steady dwindling of names from the list of the unemployed Negroes.

In appointing Philip Murray and William Green, President of the C. I. O. and American Federation of Labor, respectively, President Roosevelt, we think, made a strategic move. Labor unions play an extremely important part in determining the personnel of industrial plants and they can accept or reject Negroes as they see fit. The history of their programs and policies undeniably substantiate this fact. Messers Green and Murray can bring pressure to bear on the various locals to force down the barriers.

David Sarnoff, President of powerful R. C. A. is in a key position as head of the vast Rockefeller interests to secure the cooperation of big business, while Mark Ethridge, Vice President and General Manager of the usually liberal Louisville-Courier Journal, ought to be able to garner support from the press, especially in the South.

Much of the success of the commission is going to rest on the shoulders of Milton P. Webster, International Vice President of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and Earl B. Dickerson, Alderman of the City of Chicago, the two Negro members. It will be largely up to them to see that information and incidents regarding discrimination that reach the commission are thoroughly investigated and that plants violating the letter and spirit of the order are exposed and punished.

But behind the entire six men on the commission stands an alert citizenry, backed by an aggressive press. Now that the President has set up the machinery and outlined the course of action, it is up to us . . . both public and press who are interested in seeing justice done. This newspaper, which has supported the "March to Washington" movement since its inception, will give the new commission all the support it possibly can, and at the same time, we intend to take a definite and vigorous stand against the commission if it attempts to soft-soap the issue and fails to translate the President's executive order into practical operation. We don't expect to be fooled this time. If Democracy is what they say it is, we intend to see it really at work.

THE BLACK WORKER

(OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE BROTHERHOOD OF SLEEPING CAR PORTERS)

(AFFILIATED WITH THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR)

"Know Ye the Truth and the Truth Shall Make You Free"

Vol. VII. No. 7 NEW YORK, JULY, 1941 440 Price 5c

M. P. WEBSTER APPOINTED TO FAIR EMPLOYMENT PRACTICE COMMITTEE

The Brotherhood was singly honored when President Roosevelt appointed Brother M. P. Webster, First International Vice-President on the Fair Employment Practice Committee to hear and investigate cases of discrimination on account of race, creed, color or national origin.

Brother Webster is eminently fitted for this place. In fact, he is undoubtedly the best qualified Negro in the country to serve on this Committee.

He brings this committee a long and fruitful experience as a trade unionist who has organized Pullman Porters, Train Porters, Dining Car employees, Chair Car Attendants, Locomotive Firemen and Hotel Waiters.

Brother Webster has had a most valuable experience as head grievance man of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, who is responsible for compiling and presenting submissions involving grievances and claims relating to Pullman Porters, Train Porters, Chair Car Attendants and Porters to the National Railroad Adjustment Board. He enjoys a reputation of having won more cases before this Board than any other person practicing before this body for a trade union.

M. P. WEBSTER

The Fair Employment Practice Committee will deal principally with labor problems. All of the members of the Committee come from significant institutions.

William Green is President of the A. F. of L.

Philip Murray is President of the C. I. O.

David Sarnoff is President of the Radio Corporation of America and a representative of the Rockefeller interests.

Mark Ethridge is Vice-President and Manager of the Louisville Courier Journal.

Mr. Earl B. Dickerson is an attorney and member of the Chicago Board of Aldermen.

The President showed splendid judgment in the selection of Brother Webster for this post. Without Brother Webster on this Board it would have been utterly impossible for Negroes to have had a point of view of Negro workers heard by a man of unusual ability, courage and honesty. Brother Webster has been tried and tested in the fires of a struggle to organize the Pullman Porters and the building of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. No other Negro in America except those in the Brotherhood has had such a rich, important and single experience and training; therefore, the Negroes of America are safe with respect to the work of this Committee in as much as Brother Webster will exercise great influence on its policy.

The first meeting of the Committee was held in Washington, D. C., on Wednesday, July 23rd.

—A. Philip Randolph.

could draw month after month. Already, however, this reservoir of jobless men is being drained low.

Plant expansions, to the tune of hundreds of millions of dollars in construction, still lie ahead, and when American industry has grown to that extent labor is bound to become increasingly scarce.

Within a year another 1,000,000 men undoubtedly will be called to the colors also, thereby greatly intensifying the shortage of civilian labor.

Thus the question will soon be posed in terms that can no longer be ignored—where will American industry get the manpower that will be absolutely essential, 10 or 12 months from now, for a productive task of simply colossal dimensions?

Must Find New Sources.

If America's defense program is to be fulfilled on anything like the scale that war-time developments dictate—indeed, if it is to be achieved at all—it seems certain that a labor shortage must be avoided. To do that hundreds of thousands of new workers must be found. In the opinion of some best-qualified observers they can be found only among two classes of America's population, among women and among the American Negroes.

These two groups represent the only untapped reservoirs for our industrial production, but most American industrialists are extremely reluctant to face the fact that they will shortly be compelled to train women or Negroes, or both, to operate their machines.

Man Power is Only Limit.

In Cleveland, Tell Verna, general manager of the National Machine Tool Builders' Association, is in a position to understand thoroughly the "tight spots" that threaten American defense production. After considering all of them, he says, "the only real limit on our defense program is the limit imposed by human beings. We can get machines of all kinds, but we can't improvise trained men to operate these new machines.

Take the billions of dollars which Washington has appropriated for defense and turn them into man hours. You reach a simply impossible figure. But we've got to meet that figure. How can we meet it? The only possible way is to employ women and Negroes, employ them and train them to operate the machines which produce weapons and munitions."

Mr. Verna declares that most of the labor slack will be taken up by the end of this year or early in 1942. After that he predicts that the nation's factory doors will be opened to women with a bang. But even that radical innovation, in his opinion, won't be sufficient for the stupendous manufacturing task ahead of us in the next several years. Consequently he is confident that Negroes must be given supreme stride if both women and Negroes are employed on a very large scale within another year or 18 months—yet most American industrialists seem blind to this inevitable development.

Negroes See Discrimination.

The case of the American Negro is particularly important, and is likely to provoke a great deal of trouble if it is neglected too long. For Negroes have been discriminated against in the wholesale reemployment that has been going on for the past year, and they are perfectly aware of that fact.

In recent weeks I have talked with Negroes in New York, Detroit, Cleveland and Chicago. In each of these centers testimony is identical. Negroes say that their people overwhelmingly are indifferent to the war crisis.

"Why should we go and fight when American whites never take any interest in us until a war comes along?" they ask. "Our boys don't want to go in the Army. Even the Army has a color line. There are plenty of defense jobs? Yes—for everybody but Negroes."

When you consider that America's Negro citizens amount to nearly one-tenth of the total population, it is clear that the Negroes' attitude toward the national crisis can become an exceedingly grave problem unless government leaders swiftly gain some comprehension of the situation.

Negro Pushed in Background.

In our national defense program the last place has thus far been relegated to the Negro, to the peril of the nation. The truth of this fact can be ascertained by any newspaper that undertakes to report on the American Negroes' frame of mind today.

It is also demonstrated when you look for Negro labor in our defense industries. With very rare exceptions the Negro has been barred from employment or training for employment on machines. The excuse is offered that plenty of white labor is available (that won't be true much longer), or that Negroes are not qualified to handle machines, or that white and Negro labor should not be mixed.

In any case and in general, Negroes are being kept on relief while white workers are rapidly being absorbed—and this threatens to create a war-time social problem of unpredictable possibilities.

In the Curtiss-Wright plant in Buffalo I saw a Negro working on a machine for the first time in any defense factory we have visited. It was his third day at work there and he was one of five young Negroes who had just completed a short course of training, although several others were undergoing instruction.

The Negro worker greeted me with a big smile. "I like it here," he said. "The fellows all treat you fine." He had a quick, intelligent face and was a graduate of a Buffalo vocational training school.

SATURDAY, JULY 26, 1941

THE OPM COMMITTEE APPOINTMENTS

In appointing members to the recently authorized committee to investigate discrimination against Negroes seeking work in national defense, President Roosevelt has made some excellent choices.

Since the President seemed to think a white man should head a committee primarily concerned with discrimination against Negroes, he could have made few better choices than Mark F. Ethridge of Louisville, Ky.

Negroes can feel no enthusiasm over the choice of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, who has on every occasion ducked and evaded the issue of color discrimination in the organization he heads, and thus can with poor grace pass upon discrimination practiced by employers.

However, the choice of Philip Murray, CIO head, and a labor leader of proved friendliness to Negro workers, will offset the appointment of the bumbling and timorous Green.

We commend the choice of Attorney Earl B. Dickerson of Chicago as one of the Negro members. He is a man of courage, integrity and repute who will add lustre and judicial balance to the committee, and can be depended upon to be watchful of Negro's interests.

Milton P. Webster, vice-president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, is not known nationally except in narrow circles, but he is a plain, outspoken man who can be depended upon, we believe, to speak up for Negroes.

Of David Sarnoff much that is commendable can be said but what we can expect from him on this committee is problematical. There is little or nothing in the employment record of the Radio Corporation of America, which he heads, to indicate any especial friendliness to Negroes.

It is ironical that those heading the agitation over a period of years for fairplay in national defense had nothing to say about these appointments and were in no instance asked to join this committee.

The Negro recommendations were made by Walter White and A. Philip Randolph, and it is believed that they also recommended Mark F. Ethridge of Louisville, Ky., as chairman.

Although this fight could not have been waged at all without the Negro press which, led by the Kansas City Call, the Black Dispatch and The Pittsburgh Courier, mobilized national opinion, it is significant that no Negro editor was asked to serve or suggested for membership, although a white editor was.

Also ignored were members of the Committee for Participation of Negroes in National Defense, which includes such nationally known figures as Dr. Rayford W. Logan and Dr. Emmett J. Scott of Washington, D.C.

As a result we have a committee, the majority handpicked by Messrs. White and Randolph which, while good, is not truly representative, what with no Negro from the East, South or Far West upon it.

Therein always lies the danger of two or three individuals being accepted by the Administration as spokesmen for 13,000,000 people without any mandate from these people.

What AFRO Readers Say

ON "WOODPILE" LETTER

Dear AFRO: The "woodpile" letter was a very unfortunate, tactless occurrence, and since the first criticism by the National Negro Congress has been entirely discontinued. We sincerely regret that this letter was ever used and we assure you that no similar occurrence will arise again.

There should be no place in these United States for race or class hatred or misunderstanding and our company will carefully avoid any action that would in any way contribute thereto.

GEORGE LLOYD BUNTING,
Vice President,
Noxzema Chemical Company,
Baltimore.

INDIANA DEFENSE

Dear AFRO: Our defense program in the Crispus Attucks High School is booming—still running day and night. We are building an addition to our new wing this summer. It will be a large foundry.

This was brought about through our defense set-up and the need for a foundry. It will be ready in September.

RUSSELL LANE
Principal,
Attucks High School
Indianapolis.

AID TO ALUMINUM DRIVE

Dear AFRO: The support your paper has given the aluminum-scrap-collection campaign is appreciated. All this tends to make the job much easier. Thank you.

W. R. McCLAYTON,
Baltimore.

NO COMMUNIST

Dear AFRO: Regarding report on Congressional hearings on the Marcantonio Anti-Discrimination Bill (H.R. 3994) appearing in the AFRO, no representative of the United Federal Workers of America appeared during the hearing.

U. S. Tate presented "A Statement on Racial Discrimination in the Federal Service" in his capacity as treasurer of the National Negro Congress and chairman of the committee on labor and industry of the D. C. branch of the NAACP.

Congressman Marcantonio is listed in the Congressional Directory as elected on the American Labor Party ticket. The reference to him as a Communist is incorrect.

(Miss) GERTRUDE B. STONE, chairman, press and publicity committee, D. C. Branch NAACP, Washington.

EMPLOYMENT DODGE

Dear AFRO: There is still no work for our group here. When you apply for a job they ask you why you were born.

PETER L. JACKSON,
New York City.

AWARD OF PRAISE

Dear AFRO: Truly heart-warming and soul-inspiring were the actions of the colored populace here, following the "soldier-beating" affair here on July 4. Wholly commendable were the indications of general interest, mutual co-operation, and unity of effort in this case.

J. FARLEY RAGLAND
Lawrenceville, Va.

WANTED MARCH TO GO ON

Dear AFRO: I feel that the cancellation of the projected march on Washington was a serious blunder on the part of officials directing the move.

The Presidential order was a step in the right direction and it was perfectly proper for leaders of the march to laud the President for his action, but I think they should have picked a better name for their so-called "Victory Meeting." That name was a misnomer.

LLEWELLYN E. LEWIS
Chicago.

REAL DETERMINATION

Dear AFRO: For the past six years, I have been striving to write editorials and short stories, but with little success. I have acquired a large stack of rejection slips, but I cannot be discouraged.

Regardless of how hard the task might be, I shall see it to the end, and some day I shall write something that will be a credit to my race and country.

MURIE DUNHAM
512 Perry Street
Elmira, N.Y.

ON SOCIETY NEWS

Dear AFRO: The Richmond AFRO should soft-pedal the society news. Only a few people are in the so-called society. After all, most of us are workers (hence middle class).

Why not print the paper for the masses? including a little society news that would interest the servant girl, the laborer, etc.

RANNY MAYO,
1319 W. Clay Street,
Richmond, Va.

NASHVILLE GLOBE
PROGRESSIVE ★ JOURNAL ★ INDEPENDENT ★ NEW ★ SOUTH ★
SIXTEEN PAGES
NASHVILLE, TENN., FRIDAY, JUNE 27, 1941

READY FOR MARCH ON CAPITAL!

Phillip Randolph Not Deterred By Mitchell Blast

Say 50,000 Workers And Professionals Will Put On Protest Parade In Washington July 1

WASHINGTON, June 25 (ANP)—"THE Most Dangerous Negro in America," who is according to Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell, A. Philip Randolph will attempt to refute Mr. Mitchell's statements in a mass meeting here this week which is also being sponsored to assist the Job March scheduled for July 1.

The title was accorded Mr. Randolph on the occasion of the Howard university commencement exercises.

The 50,000 Negroes expected here on the first of July are still coming, despite the recent manifesto of the President.

"The march of 50,000 Negroes from the Capitol down Constitution avenue, past the White House and the war department to the Lincoln memorial, will be a silent, dignified, determined challenge to the democracy for which we have fought through the centuries," said Eugene Davidson, assistant national director in chrage of arrangements, from local headquarters.

"All Negroes, laborers, domestics, mechanics, professionals—will join this march that America and the world may know and heed a solemn and determined fight for real democracy."

According to Mr. Davidson, arrangements for this gigantic display of unity are nearing completion with the announcement of the parade's composition. Each state will comprise a brigade of from three to five divisions of women, men girls and boys. They will be headed by World war veterans, high school cadets and Boy Scouts. Vast numbers of undisciplined citizens require experienced veterans to help keep the march orderly and dignified. A strong appeal has gone out from local headquarters to all units

The New York Labor News June, 1941

NAACP SHORTENS MEET FOR "MARCH ON WASHINGTON"

N. Y. Labor News,

NEW YORK CITY—The board of directors of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has just agreed to cut short the annual conference of the association at Houston, June 24 to 29 by one day.

The final Sunday meeting of the conference has been canceled in order to give delegates time to reach Washington, D. C. for the March for Jobs to take place there Tuesday, July 1. All conference business will be completed Saturday, June 28. This will leave delegates who wish to participate in the March on Washington free to get to the nation's capitol by July 1.

The action was taken also, to indicate the NAACP's full support of the demonstration in Washington and to make plain to heads of the government the untiy of colored people in this protest against the exclusion of the race from the national defense program.

Washington Mass Meeting Will Hear Jobs' March Head

RANDOLPH TO SPEAK AT MASS MEETING AS JOB MARCH DATE NEARS

WASHINGTON, June (ANP)—"The Most Dangerous Negro in America" who is, according to Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell, A. Philip Randolph, will attempt to refute Mr. Mitchell's statements in a mass meeting here his week, which is also being sponsored to assist the Job March scheduled for July 1.

The title was accorded Mr. Randolph on the occasion of the Howard university commencement exercises.

The 50,000 Negroes expected here on the first of July are still coming, despite the recent manifesto of the President.

"The march of 50,000 Negroes from the Capitol down Constitution avenue, past the White House and the war department to the Lincoln memorial will be a silent, dignified, determined challenge to the democracy for which we have fought through the centuries," said Eugene Davidson, assistant national director in charge of arrangements, from local headquarters.

"All Negroes—laborers, domestics, mechanics, professionals—will join this march that America and the world may know and heed a solemn and determined fight for real democracy."

Washington Mass Meeting Will Hear Jobs' March Head

| CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE |

As the date for the march draws near, interest is becoming feverish. Lichtman Theater corporation is allowing its distributors to hand out 100,000 pieces of literature to the citizens of Washington with the plea that they join the march. Dr. Robert M. Williams, president of the Methodist Ministers conference, composed of all Methodists in the city, has pledged 100 per cent cooperation of both ministers and congregations; Dr. Hampton Gaskins, president of the Baptist Ministerial alliance, announced the passing of a resolution at their weekly meeting in which all Baptist churches of Washington and vicinity have pledged their united support. Thurman Dodson, president of the local committee, when asked about the status of affairs after it was stated that Secretary of Navy Frank Knox had tried to intervene by appealing to A. Philip Randolph, said "Negroes will not be denied their rightful place in America. The march is on. Nobody can stop us now. We want jobs and justice, we'll get both or know the reason why."

'March On Washington' Takes Upward Spirit ---Endorsed By Churches

WASHINGTON, (ANP)—The 50,000 Negroes expected here on the first of July are still coming despite the recent manifesto of the President, according to the March-on-Washington main office.

"The march of 50,000 Negroes from the Capitol down Constitution avenue past the White House and the war department to the Lincoln memorial will be a silent dignified, determined challenge to the democracy for which we have fought through the centuries,' said Eugene Davidson, assistant national director in charge of arrangements.

FOR REAL DEMOCRACY

"All Negro laborers, domestics, me-

(Continued on Page 14, Col. 5)

HEADQUARTERS OF JOBLESS MARCH SET-UP

WASHINGTON, June (ANP).—Elaborate preparations are being made for the "Jobless March on Washington" with the local organization setting up its headquarters in a loft at 7th and S Streets, N. W., where meetings are being held regularly.

Interest in the march is increasing daily and there seems to be a great public response to the plan for 100,000 Negroes to march through the main streets of the capital and on to the Lincoln Memorial where the President is requested to address the marchers and tell them just what the Negro's position is in the United States.

'Most Dangerous Negro In America' To Blast Charges By Rep. Mitchell

WASHINGTON—(ANP) — "The Most Dangerous Negro in America" who is, according to Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell, A. Philip Randolph, will attempt to refute Mitchell's statements in a mass meeting here this week, which is also being sponsored to assist the Job March scheduled for July 1.

The title was accorded Randolph on the occasion of the Howard university commencement exercises at which the Illinois congressman was principal speaker.

The 50,000 Negroes expected here on the first of July are still coming, despite the recent manifesto of the President, Randolph declared this week.

"The march of 50,000 Negroes from the Capitol down Constitution avenue, past the White House and the war department to the Lincoln memorial will be a silent, dignified, determined challenge to the democracy for which we have fought through the centuries," said Eugene Davidson, assistant national director in charge of arrangements, from local headquarters.

"All Negroes laborers, domestics, mechanics, professionals—will join this march that America and the world may know and heed a solemn and determined fight for real democracy."

According to Davidson, arrangements for this gigantic display of unity are nearing completion with the announcement of the parade's composition. Each state will comprise a brigade of from three to five divisions of women, men, girls and boys. They will be headed by World war veterans, high school cadets and Boy Scouts.

Vast numbers of undisciplined citizens require experienced veterans to help keep the march orderly and dignified. A strong appeal has gone out from local headquarters to all units of cadets and veterans to report to Davidson for assignment.

As the date for the march draws near, interest is becoming feverish. Litchman theatre corporation is allowing its distributors to hand out 100,000 pieces of literature to the citizens in Washington with the plea that they join the march.

Dr. Robert M. Williams, president of the Methodist Ministers conference, composed of all Methodists in the city, has pledged cooperation of both ministers and congregations.

Dr. Hampton Gaskins, president of the Baptist Ministerial alliance, announced the passing of a resolution at their weekly meeting in which all Baptist churches of Washington and vicinity have pledged their united support.

Thurman Dodson, president of the local committee, when asked about the status of affairs after it was stated that Secretary of Navy Frank Knox had tried to intervene by appealing to A. Philip Randolph, said, "Negroes will not be denied their rightful place in America. The march is on. Nobody can stop us now. We want jobs and justice, we'll get both or know the reason why."

Davidson issued the following statement on Wednesday:

"Although the statement of President Roosevelt relative to his desire and will that something be done immediately in the matter of discrimination against Negroes in national defense industries, and in spite of the statesmanlike gesture in the interest of national unity, the Negro march on Washington will take place July 1, as planned."

Randolph, New York, chairman of the national committee for the March on Washington, was given an ovation in Chicago, Sunday at Metropolitan Community church, following an impressive address.

Randolph in his one hour address recounted point by pfoint the experiences suffered across the many months in an effort to get "equal and exact justice in employment in the national defense program."

Randolph declared: "We have had conferences and meetings with the President and heads of various government departments only to be given the run-around. In our White House meeting Wednesday with the President, members of his cabinet, including Secretaries Stimson and Knok, Knudsen, Hillman and others the officials were told: "Nothing can stop our march on Washington July 1. The people who will be there from all over America are not hoodlums and ruffians. They represent the finest citizens of the nation, sincere in their desire to have justice."

Randolph announced that a large group of Negroes from New York City are going to Gettysburg, Pa., where Lincoln made his immortal address, and will march silently from there to the Lincoln Memorial in Washington. Randolph declared that "Mass action at this time is far more impressive than petitions and conferences immediately forgotten."

Set Up "Jobless March On Washington" Headquarters; 100,000 Negroes Is Goal

Expects President Roosevelt to Address Marchers On Position of Negro in United States

Meetings Held Regularly

WASHINGTON.—(ANP)—Elaborate preparations are being made for the "Jobless March on Washington" with the local organization setting up its headquarters in a loft at 7th and S streets, N. W., where meetings are being held regularly.

Interest in the march is increasing daily and there seems to be a great public response to the plan for 100,000 Negroes to march through the main streets of the capital and on to the Lincoln memorial where he President is requested to address the marchers and tell them just what the Negro's position is in the United States.

Feeling that this is the most effective protest possible, the sponsors are selling buttons and tags and asking the public in general to take part in backing the movement and also to take part in the general demonstration which will focus the attention of the entire world on the plight of the Negro in the land of the free.

Spectacle of Negro March on Nation's Capital Nears Reality

WASHINGTON.—(ANP)—The spectacle of 50,000 Negroes silently marching through the streets of Washington, behind muffled drums, will become a reality says Eugene P. Davidson, speaking for the Washington branch of the committee being organized by A. Philip Randolph to stage such a protest against unfairness of the administration in not doing more to see that Negroes are given jobs in the national defense projects.

Two meetings, held in Washington recently, met with enthusiastic response and the leaders are planning an energetic drive to put over the program in the most effective manner.

It is planned to have the marchers parade through the main thoroughfares of the city to the famous Lincoln Memorial, where Marian Anderson sang at the feet of the great emancipator and call upon the President to speak to the group there assembled.

"We do not want any private meetings with committees", said Mr. Davidson. "We want the President to speak out forthrightly on the problem and tell the world what this administration will and can do on behalf of the underprivileged minority groups in the city."

Thorough coverage of the country is going to be attempted and buttons will be placed on sale to cover the costs of the hegira to the nation's capital. Radios, newspapers, advertisements all will be used in a concerted drive to put over the programs, says Mr. Davidson.

ARTHUR MITCHELL BRANDS RANDOLPH 'MOST DANGEROUS'

WASHINGTON, D. C. —(ANP)— "The Most Dangerous Negro in America" who is, according to Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell, A. Philip Randolph, will attempt to refute Mr. Mitchell's statement in a mass meeting here this week, which is also being sponsored to assist the Job March scheduled for July 1.

The title was accorded Mr. Randolph on the occasion of the Howard University commencement exercises.

The 50,000 Negroes expected here on the first of July are still coming, despite the recent manifesto of the president.

"The march of 50,000 Negroes from the Capitol down Constitution Avenue, past the White House and the war department to the Lincoln merorial will be a silent, dignified, determined challenge to the democracy for which we have fought through the centuries," said Eugene Davidson, assistant national director in charge of arrangements, from local headquarters.

"All Negroes, laborers, domestics, mechanics. professionals—will join this march that America and the world may know and heed a solemn and determined fight for real democracy."

According to Mr. Davidson, arrangements for this gigantic display of unity are nearing completion with the announcement of the parades' composition. Each state will comprise a brigade of from three to five divisions of women, men, girls and boys. They will be headed by World war veterans, high school cadets and Boy Scouts. Vast numbers of undisciplined citizens require experienced veterans to help keep the march orderly and dignified. A strong appeal has gone out from local headquarters to all units of cadets and veterans to report to Mr. Davidson for assignment.

As the date for the march draws near, interest is becoming feverish. Lichtman Theater corporation is allowing its distributors to hand out 100,000 pieces of literature to the citizens of Washington with the plea that they join the march. Dr. Robert M. Williams, president of the Methodist Ministers Conference, composed of all Methodists in the city, has pledged 100 percent cooperation of both ministers and congregations; Dr. Hampton Gaskins, president of the Baptist Ministerial Alliance, announced the passing of a resolution at their weekly meeting in which all Baptist churches of Washington and vicinity have pledged their united support. Thurman Dodson, president of the local committee, when asked about the status of affairs after it was stated that Secretary of Navy Frank Knox had tried to intervene by appealing to A. Philip Randolph, said "Negroes will not be denied their rightul place in America. The march is on. Nobody can stop us now. We want jobs and justice, we'll get both or know the reason why."

Davidson issued the following statement this week.

"Although the statement of President Roosevelt relative to his desire and will that something be done immediately in the matter of discrimination against Negroes in national defense industries, and in spite of the statesmanlike gesture in the interest of national unity, the Negro march on Washington will take place Julv 1, as planned.

"The statement of President Roosevelt indicates that the technique of making known in uncertain terms the dissatisfaction of loyal Americans with vicious race discrimination is a proper one. Without a doubt it was the advance publicity on the Negro march and the enthusiasm with which Negroes received it, that caused this statement of the chief executive. But he has not gone far enough. This is an all out fight for democracy, and private industries can well ask why the chief executive does not practise what he preaches.

"Why does he not with a stroke of the pen eradicate entirely discrimination, segregation and exclusion in the government which he heads? When this is done the March on Washington can be a celebration of a second emancipation.

"The slogans to be carried in the march have not yet been printed. By his executive orders he can indicate the nature of these slogans. A serious problem affecting national unity can be solved now by the executive."

LABOR SHORTAGE MAJOR PROBLEM IN DEFENSE WORK

6/14/44

Women and Negroes Must Be Hired to Fill Big Need, Stowe Says; Most Leaders of Industry Ignore Issue

By LELAND STOWE
Special to the BUFFALO EVENING NEWS.

NEW YORK, June 14.—After nearly two weeks inspecting a wide variety of defense industries from the Atlantic Seaboard to the Mississippi Valley you get an extremely encouraging picture of America's gigantic defense-production machine as it is about to shift into high gear. Simultaneously you get a clearer understanding of those elements which are preventing or will prevent American industries from turning out their maximum quotas of airplanes, tanks, guns and other military equipment while billions of dollars' worth of appropriations pile up and up.

The returned American war correspondents who have made this tour, sponsored by the National Association of Manufacturers, have been greatly impressed by the extraordinary progress made by all manner of American industrial enterprises in the last 12 months. Nevertheless "ball-and-chain" elements inevitably exist, chief among them being:

First Crisis Weathered

1—The insatiable demand for machine tools and gauges.

2—Labor disputes and strikes.

3—Near-shortages or threatened shortages of raw materials.

4—Shortage of trained man power.

Of these four, the one which attracts least attention today yet may well prove to be most detrimental is No. 4—the coming shortage of man power throughout hundreds of key factories.

The first big "tooling-up" crisis has been weathered successfully by the machine-tool industry, even though it must encounter future cycles of strain and crisis in the future. Firm governmental action seems at last to promise a sharp reduction of strike obstructionism.

Most industrial leaders admit that shortages of certain raw materials are bound to occur, yet they count upon increased production of such metals as magnesium and aluminum, together with their careful allocation under the priority system, to ease such shortages.

Leaders Dodge Outlook

American industrial leaders seem to be keenly awake to all these problems, but most with whom we talked appear to be dodging the disagreeable outlook in regard to the coming and unavoidable shortage of man power.

Hundreds of thousands of new workers must be found. In the opinion of some best-qualified observers they can be found only among two classes of America's population—women and American Negroes, the only untapped reservoirs for our industrial production. But most American industrialists are extremely reluctant to face the fact they will shortly be compelled to train women or Negroes, or both.

In Cleveland, General Manager Tell Verna of the National Tool Builders' Association said: "We can get machines of all kinds, but we can't "Take ... which Wash ... ed for defen ... man hours. ... impossible f ... to meet th ... ngt... ... e and turn them ... You reach a simply ... igure. But we've got ... at figure.

possible way is to employ women and Negroes, employ them and train them to operate the machines which produce weapons and munitions."

In Hartford, Indianapolis, Detroit, Cleveland and other cities we asked chief executives of some of our largest airplane, automotive and similar defense industries if they had plans for employing women to speed up the nation's war effort. K. T. Keller, president of Chrysler Corporation, replied for most of them when he declared, "We've got enough problems already. Don't load that one on us right now."

Bell Foresees R

(Continued fr

In Buffalo, Burdette Wright, vice president of Curtiss-Wright, said, "It's an awfully debatable question as to when we shall need to put women on machines. Of course there are many operations which women could do, such as work on light and repetitive machines, inspection and the like. In England they are using a great many women and very successfully."

The only industrial leader who was outspoken about women's coming role in defense manufacturing was Lawrence D. Bell, president of Buffalo's Bell Aircraft Corporation.

He declared: "I think we'll be employing women on a large scale before very long in American industry. There is no reason why about 40 per cent of the work can't be done and done very satisfactorily by women."

Negroes Discriminated Against

The case of the American Negro is likely to provoke a great deal of trouble if it is neglected too long. For Negroes have been discriminated against in the wholesale reemployment which has been going on for the past year, and they are perfectly aware of that fact.

With very rare exceptions the Negro has been barred from employment or training for employment on machines. The excuse is offered that plenty of white labor is available (that won't be true much longer), or that Negroes are not qualified to handle machines,

The Louisiana Weekly

ROOSEVELT'S RAPPING OF NAT'L DEFENSE BIAS SEEN AS MOVE TO HALT RANDOLPH'S MARCH ON WASHINGTON

Administration Seeks To Curb March On Capitol

(By Ernest E. Johnson for ANP)

New York, June 19.—In a weekend crowded with developments indicative of the tremendous pressure being exerted by the highest adminsitration officials to curb, if not completely kill, the March on Washington, A. Philip Randolph, directing the nationwide mobilization, announced his scheduled conference with both Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Knox in Washington at noon

FDR FINALLY SPEAKS AGAINST DISCRIMINATION

(By The Associated Negro Press)

Washington, June 19.—In what observers believe is an attempt to knock the edge off the coming March on Washington, directed by A. Philip Randolph, President Roosevelt called on the Office of Production Management Sunday night to take immediate steps to deal effectively with nation-wide discrimination against Negroes in defense industries.

It is known that the coming demonstration has both the cabinet and the White House worried. Both Stimson and Knox have wired Randolph in New York asking that he come here for a conference.

Observers also declare that Negro leaders have been begging the President for many months to take the stand he did Sunday, but the nation's chief executive ignored such pleas until it became obvious that the coming March on Washington was not to be sidetracked and would likely become very embarrassing, at least, to official Washington.

In his memorandum to William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, the co-directors of OPM, the President said that "no nation combatting the increasing threat of totalitarianism can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries." It is "even more important for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home

'DR TELLS OPM TO GET NEGROES HIRED IN ARMS PLANTS

THE TAMPA BULLETIN, Saturday, June 28, 1941.

PRESIDENT ACTS BEFORE MARCH ON JULY 1ST

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—In what observers believe is an attempt to knock the edge off the coming March on Washington directed by A. Philip Randolph, President Roosevelt called on the Office of Production Management Sunday night to take immediate steps to deal effectively with nation-wide discrimination against Negroes in defense industries.

It is known that the coming demonstration has both the cabinet and the White House worried. Both Stimson and Knox have wired Randolph in New York asking that he come here for a conference. Mrs. Roosevelt not only wrote a letter to Randolph against the march but made a special trip to New York where she talked with him and Walter White in a closed conference at Mayor La Guardia's office. Nevertheless Randolph has refused to call off the march.

Observers also declare that Negro leaders have been begging the President for many months to take the stand he did Sunday, but the nation's chief executive ignored such pleas until it became obvious that the coming March on Washington was not to be sidetracked and would likely become very embarrasing, at least, to official Washington.

In his memorandum to William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, the co-directors of OPM, the President said that "no nation combatting the increasing threat of totaliarianism can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries." It is "even more important for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad."

"Complaints have repeatedly been brought to my attention," he declared, 'that available and much needed workers are being barred from defense production solely because of race, re igion, or national origin. It is said that at time when labor stringencies are appearing in many areas, fully qualified workers are being turned from the gates of industry on specifications entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity. Also that discrimination against Negro workers has been nation-wide, and other minority racial, national, and religious groups have felt its effect in many localities.

"Our government cannot countenance continued discrimination against American citizens in defense production. Industry must take the initiative in opening the doors of employment to all loyal and qualified workers regardless of race, national origin, religion or color. American workers, both organized and unorganized, must be prepared to welcome the general and much needed employment of fellow workers of all racial and nationality origins in defense industries.

"In the present emergency it is imperative that we deal effectively and speedily with this problem. I shall expect the Office of Production Management to take immediate steps to facilitate the full utilization of our productive man power."

Eleanor Roosevelt Confers With March On Washington Leaders

WASHINGTON.—(ANP)—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt again demonstrated her willingness to aid the cause of the Negro when she conferred Friday with A. Philip Randolph and Walter White who are planning a "March on Washington," July 1, to protest silently against the unfair treatment accorded Negroes under the present defense set-up.

It is understood that Mrs. Roosevelt discussed the consequences "good and bad" of the match, and also suggested how "the most effectiveness might be gotten out of the demonstration." Randolph is said to have received two telegrams to date from Secretary of the Navy Knox, but the contents have not been disclosed.

First Lady Confers With March On Washington Leaders

WASHINGTON, June —(ANP) Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt again demonstrated her willingness to aid the cause of the Negro when she conferred Friday with A. Phillip Randolph and Walter White who are planning a "March on Washington," July 1, to protest silently against the unfair treatment accorded Negroes under the present defense set-up.

It is understood that Mrs. Roosevelt discussed the consequences "good and bad" of the match, and also suggested how "the most effectiveness might be gotten out of the demonstration." Randolph is said to have received two telegrams to date from Secretary of the Navy Knox, but the contents have not been disclosed.

MRS. ROOSEVELT TALKS 'MARCH'

WASHINGTON, June 20. (ANP) — Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt again demonstrated her willingness to aid the cause of the Negro when she conferred Friday with A. Philip Randolph and Walter White who are planning a "March on Washington," July 1, to protest silently against the unfair treatment accorded Negroes under the present defense set-up.

It is understood that Mrs. Roosevelt discussed the consequences, "good and bad" of the march, and also suggested how "the most effectiveness might be gotten out of the demonstration." Randolph is said to have received two telegrams to date from Secretary of Navy Knox, but the contents have not been disclosed.

NEGRO LEADERS IN CONFERENCE WITH DEFENSE HEADS

WASHINGTON, D. C. —(ANP)— An important conference at the White House Wednesday, attended by A. Philip Randolph and Walter White as a result of the proposed job march on Washington scheduled for July 1, heard these two men lay the claims of the Negro people before the president, Mayor LaGuardia and a group of ranking officials of the government.

Present beside those mentioned were Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of Navy Knox. Production Directors Knudsen and Hillman.

Mayor La Guardia acted as spokesman for the government chiefs and said that there "has been some discrimination in the employment of Negroes" on defense jobs and he said that the official group that discussed the situation Wednesday would be able to find a solution.

The mayor did not indicate what steps would be taken to instrument the president's order of last Sunday that more defense jobs be opened to the members of the colored race.

The mayor further praised the condition which saw the colored representatives sit at the table with government officials to discuss the problems which face the group in America.

Complete silence surrounds the meeting as far as any definite plans are concerned and calls at the White House fail to illuminate the situation beyond the briefest mention of the meeting. Mr. Randolph together with Frank Crosswaithe, noted orator and Socialist from New York, were seen together in Washington on Wednesday, but they had little to say concerning the meeting. It is reported that some sort of plan is being drafted whereby industry, especially the defense program, will begin to absorb more Negroes according to the president's mandate.

Leaders See Gov. Officials On Jobs; Silent On Results

WASHINGTON, June—(ANP) —An important conference at the White House Wednesday, attended by A. Philip Randolph and Walter White as a result of the proposed job march on Washington scheduled for July 1, heard these two men lay the claims of the Negro people before the President, Mayor LaGuardia and a group of ranking officials of the government.

Present beside those mentioned were Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of Navy Knox, Production Directors Knudson and Hillman.

Mayor LaGuardia acted as spokesman for the government chiefs and said that there "has been some discrimination in the employment of Negroes" on defense jobs and he said that the official group that discussed the situation Wednesday would be able to find a solution.

The mayor did not indicate what steps would be taken to instrument the President's order of last Sunday that more defense jobs be opened to the members of the colored race.

The mayor further praised the condition which saw the colored representatives sit at the table with government officials to discuss the problems which face the group in America.

Complete silence surrounds the meeting as far as any definite plans are concerned and calls at the White House fail to illuminate the situation beyond the briefest mention of the meeting. Mr. Randolph together with Frank Crosswaithe, noted orator and socialist from New York, were seen together in Washington on Wednesday, but they had little to say concerning the meeting. It is reported that some sort of plan is being drafted whereby industry, especially the defense program, will be gin to absorb more Negroes according to the President's mandate.

Jobless March Headquarters Set Up In Washington

WASHINGTON, June —(ANP) —Elaborate preparations are being made for the "Jobless March on Washington"' with the local organization setting up its headquarters in a loft at 7th and S streets, N. W., where meetings are being held regularly.

Interest in the march is increasing daily and there seems to be a great public response to the plan for 100,000 Negroes to march through the main streets of the capital and on to the Lincoln memorial where the President is requested to address the marchers and tell them just what the Negro's position is in the United States.

Feeling that this is the most effective protest possible, the sponsors are selling buttons and tags and asking the public in general to take part in backing the movement and also to take part in the general demonstration which will focus the attention of the entire world on the plight of the Negro in the land of the free.

Belated Gesture On Defense Jobs Is Voiced By FDR

FDR's Action Viewed As Sequel to "Jobless March on Capital," 100,000 Strong

WASHINGTON, June (ANP).— In what observer's believe is an attempt to knock the edge off the coming "March on Washington" directed by A. Philip Randolph, President Roosevelt called on the Office of Production Management Sunday night to take immediate steps to deal effectively with nation-wide discrimination against Negroes in defense industries.

It is known that the coming demonstration has both the cabinet and the White House worried. Both Stimson and Knox have wired Randolph in New York asking that he come here for a conference. Mrs. Roosevelt not only wrote a letter to Randolph against the march but made a special trip to New York where she talked with him and Walter White in a closed conference at Mayor LaGuardia's office. Nevertheless Randolph has refused to call off the march.

Observers also declare that Negro leaders have been bogging the President for many months to take the stand he did Sunday, but the nation's chief executive ignored such pleas until it became obvious that the coming "March on Washington" was not to be sidetracked and would likely become very embarrassing, at least, to official Washington.

THE BLACK DISPATCH, SATURDAY, JUNE 28, 1941

Randolph to Speak at Capitol Meet as March Date Nears

WASHINGTON.—(ANP)—"The Most Danferous Negro in America," who is, according to Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell, A. Philip Randolph, will attempt to refute Mr. Mitchell's statements in a mass meeting here this week, which is also being sponsored to assist the March scheduled for July 1.

The title was accorded Mr. Randolph on the occasion of the Howard university commencement exercises.

The 50,000 Negroes expected here on the first of July are still coming, despite the recent manifesto of the President.

"The march of 50,000 Negroes from the Capitol down Constitution avenue, past the White House and the war department to the Lincoln memorial will be silent, dignified, determined challenge to the democracy for which we have fought through the centuries," said Eugene Davidson, assistant national director in charge of arrangements, from local head quarters.

"All Negroes laborers, domestics, mechanics, professionals—will join this march that America and the world may know and heed a solemn and determined fight for real democracy."

According to Mr. Davidson, arrangements for this gigantic display of unity are nearing completion with the announcement of the parades' composition. Each state will comprise a bridage of from three to five divisions of women, men, girls and boys. They will be headed by World war veterans, high school cadets and Boy Scouts. Vast numbers of undisciplined citizens require experienced veterans to help keep the march orderly and dignified. A strong appeal has gone out from local headquarters to all units of cadets and veterans to report to Mr. Davidson for assignment.

As the date for the march draws near, interest is becoming feverish. Lichtman Theater corporation is allowing its distributors to hand out 100,000 pieces of literature to the citizens of Washington with the plea that they join the march. Dr. Robert M. Williams, president of the Methodist Ministers conference, composed of all Methodists in the city, has pledged 100% cooperation of both ministers and congregations; Dr. Hampton Gaskins, president of the Baptist Ministerial alliance, announced the passing of a resolution at their weekly meeting in which all Baptist of Washington and vicinity have pledged their united support. Thurman Dodson, president of the local committee, when asked about the status of affairs after it was stated that Secretary of Navy Frank Knox had tried to intervene by appealing to A. Philip Randolps, said "Negroes will not be denied their rightful place in America. The march is on. Nobody can stop us now. We want jobs

President's Memo Fails To Halt March On Washington

President Requests Industry To Use All Available Manpower

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The precedent-shattering Chief Executive of a nation whose every resource is bent toward the restoration of democracy to a war-torn world, threw the strength of his own endorsement behind the demands for that democracy of an underprivileged tenth of his own nation last week.

As prominent Negroes throughout the country were marshalling their forces for a history-making march on the nation's capital for the staging of a dramatic protest against jim crow, segregation and discrimination in defense industry, President Roosevelt spoke out in condemnation of such injustices.

Mr. Roosevelt's denunciation of a system which excludes Negroes from integration in defense work was contained in a memorandum to William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, Office Of Production Management heads, on Thursday and released to the press by White House Secretary Stephen Early on Sunday.

"Complaints have repeatedly been brought to my attention that available and much-needed workers are being barred from defense production solely because of race, religion, or national origin," the memorandum read. "It is said that at a time when labor stringencies are appearing in many areas, fully qualified workers are being turned from the gates of industry on specifications entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity. Also that discrimination against Negro workers has been nation-wide, and other minority racial, national and religious groups have felt its effects in many localities. This situation is a matter of grave national importance, and immediate steps must be taken to deal with it effectively."

Recalling a recent pronouncement by the OPM to all defense contract holders, Roosevelt declared "as Chief Executive of the nation, I place the full support of my office behind your statement to the effect that all holders of defense are urged to examine their employment and training policies at once to determine whether these policies make ample provision for the full utilization of available and competent Negro workers.

"No nation combatting the increasing threat of totalitarianism can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries." The Executive memorandum continued. "Even more important is it for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad."

The Government cannot countenance continued discrimination against American citizens in defense production, Roosevelt's edict

A. Philip Randolph Calls President's Statement Too Late

Statements from the lips of the President of the United States recommending that industry play fair with the Negroes of America are "commendable" according to the observation of A. Philip Randolph, militant national leader of the growing "March to Washington" forces.

Statements, however, are not enough and the Negroes of the nation will not receive their just due in defense production and industrial employment until that President issues Executive Orders—statements with teeth in them and punishment for disobedience.

That is the position taken by Randolph who announced to the country on Monday that in spite of the denunciation from the White House of discrimination in defense, the organized protest against injustice and the "March To Washington" must go forward.

Randolph's determination to see through the dramatic protest against barriers set up against Negroes, was emphasized with the revelation that the strongest pressure was at work to dissuade him and his committee from making the unique demonstration.

Exemplary of this pressure was a letter from the First Lady of the Land, who has often publicly endorsed the fighting head of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, in which Mrs. Roosevelt stated "I feel very strongly that your group is making a very grave mistake at the present time to allow this march to take place. I am afraid it will set back the progress which is being made, in the Army at least, toward better opportunities and less segregation."

Any "incident' which might occur as a result of the march "may engender so much bitterness that it will create in Congress even more solid opposition from certain groups that we have had in the past," Mrs. Roosevelt continued.

Confer At City Hall

The letter was followed by a conference with Mrs. Roosevelt and Mayor LaGuardia on Friday morning at City Hall with Walter White, executive secretary of the NAACP, present. Expressing their appreciation for the "fine spirit of both Mrs. Roosevelt and the Mayor toward the Negro people," Randolph and White stuck to their guns, reiterating that the "March to Washington" movement is an expression of the dissatisfaction of Negroes with the policy of discrimination in departments of the federal government and in national defense industries against Negroes. They held also that its effect upon America as a whole would be beneficial in that it would show the consciousness of the Negro citizen of his mass power.

Referring to the Roosevelt statement, Randolph said: "a release show the reason why."

Davidson issued the follo statement on Wednesday.

"Although the statement President Roosevelt relative to desire and will that something done immediately in the matt of discrimination against Negro in national defense industries, an in spite of the statesmanlike ges ture in the interest of nationa unity, the Negro on Washington will take place July 1 as planned.

"The statement of President Roosevelt indicates that the technique of making known in an uncertain terms the dissatisfaction of loyal Americans with vicious race discrimination is a proper one. Without a doubt it was the advance publicity on the Negro march and the enthusiasm with which Negroes received it, that caused this statement of the chief executive. But he has not gone far enough. This is an all out fight for democracy, and provate industries can well ask why the chief executive does not practice what he preaches."

"Why does he not with a stroke of the pen eradicate entirely discrimination, segregation and exclusion in the government which he heads? When this is done the March on Washington can be a celebration of a second emancipation."

"The slogans to be carried in the march have not yet been printed. By his executive orders he can indicate the nature of the slogans. A serious problem affecting national unity can be solved now by the chief executive."

---

said. He called upon industry to "take the initiative in opening the doors of employment to all loyal and qualified workers, regardless of race, national origin, religion or color."

"In the present emergency, it is imperative that we deal effectively and speedily with this problem. I shall expect the Office of Production Management to take immediate steps to facilitate the full utilization of our productive manpower."

8 POINT PROGRAM

MARCH-ON-WASHINGTON MOVEMENT

"Winning Democracy for the Negro Is Winning the War for Democracy"

The war in which our country is engaged not only involves a major share of its resources, but also everyone of its citizens both white and black. The Negro citizen, therefore, who is part of the warp and woof of these United States, is vitally concerned not only in a military victory of his country but also in the triumph of the expressed aims of the war.

Every statement of war aims by responsible leaders in all walks of life, the principles of the four freedoms, the eight point program of the Atlantic Charter and it is to be hoped, the prospectus of a much needed Pacific Charter, express the desire that the outcome of this vast and terrible conflict will be the triumph of democracy and its establishment on a wider and firmer basis. To insure such a result the preservation and extension of our democratic principles must be an essential part of winning the war.

For the masses of people abstract principles have vitality only in concrete expression. "Freedom from want is real only when it means a chance to work for sufficient food, clothing and shelter. Likewise for the Negro, and for all oppressed people everywhere, the fight for democracy has meaning only when it grants to them the full measure of every right as well as of every obligation for which democracy stands.

We Negroes do not enjoy these rights in the country to which we have given fully of our labor, our talents and of our blood. To insure that national unity so essential for victory it is imperative that the Negro be given an equal chance with every other American to enjoy the privileges of American citizenship.

The source of our disabilities lies in the caste system maintained by the Southern states, where segregation and discrimination in social, economic and political life spreads its vicious influence elsewhere. Only an all-attack by the national government on this caste system at its source will destroy its danger to national unity.

Therefore, 13,000,000 Negroes representing one-tenth of the population demand of our national government this 8 point program for winning democracy for the Negro and thereby winning the war for democracy.

1. We demand in the interest of national unity, the abrogation of every law which makes a distinction in treatment between citizens based on religion, creed, color, or national origin. This means an end to Jim Crow in education, in housing, in transportation and in every other social, economic and political privilege; and especially we demand, in the capital of the nation, an end to all segregation in public places and in public institutions.

2. We demand legislation to enforce the 5th and 14th amendments guaranteeing that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law so that the full weight of the national government may be used for the protection of life and thereby may end the disgrace of lynching.

3. We demand the enforcement of the 14th and 15th amendments and the enactment of the Pepper Poll Tax Bill so that all barriers in the exercise of the suffrage are eliminated.

4. We demand the abolition of segregation and discrimination in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Corps, and all other branches of national defense.

5. We demand an end to discrimination in jobs and job training. Further, we demand that the F. E. P. C. be made a permanent administration agency of the U. S. Government and that it be given power to enforce its decisions based on its findings.

6. We demand that federal funds be withheld from any agency which practices discrimination in the use of such funds.

7. We demand Negro and minority group representation on all administrative agencies so that these groups may have recognition of their democratic right to participate in formulating policies.

8. We demand representation for the Negro and minority racial groups on all missions, political and technical, which will be sent to the peace conference so that the interests of all people everywhere may be fully recognized and justly provided for in the post war settlement.

Nothing less than this program will afford Negroes their constitutional rights; nothing less will be an evidence of America's devotion to the democratic way of life.

PRESS RELEASE JANUARY 15, 1941

BROTHERHOOD OF SLEEPING CAR PORTERS
AN INTERNATIONAL UNION
AFFILIATED WITH THE AFofL

217 West 125th Street
Room 301
New York City

HOW TO BLAST THE BOTTLENECKS OF RACE PREJUDICE IN NATIONAL DEFENSE

By A. Philip Randolph

Negroes are not getting anywhere with National Defense. The whole National Defense Setup reeks and stinks with race prejudice, hatred, and discrimination.

It is obvious to anyone who is not deaf, dumb and blind that the south, with its attitude that the Negro is inferior, worthless, and just simply don't count, is in the saddle. It is a matter of common knowledge that the Army, Navy, and Air Corps are dominated and virtually controlled by southerners.

But the southerners are not alone responsible for the fact that Negroes are being brutally pushed around. The north, east and west are also to blame, because they wink, connive at and acquiesce in this practice of discriminating against Negroes.

But regardless of who is responsible for the raw deal Negroes are getting, the big bald fact is they are getting it.

Responsible committees of Negroes who seek to intercede in behalf of the Negro being accorded the simple right to work in industries and on jobs serving National Defense and to serve in the Army, Navy, and Air Corps are being given polite assurances that Negroes will be given a fair deal. But it all ends there. Nothing is actually done to stop discriminations.

It seems to be apparent that even when well-meaning, responsible, top government officials agree upon a fair and favorable policy, there are loopholes, and subordinate officers in the Army, Navy, and Air Corps, full of race hatred, who seek its contravention, nullification, and evasion.

This is why upstanding, independent, able and intelligent Negroes should be in responsible posts of every department of the government. They must be there to stimulate, suggest and initiate the formulation of certain policies favorable to the Negro, and they must be there to help police these policies in the interest of their fair and consistent execution.

Now, fortunately, Negroes have good, able, and sound people in Dr. Channing H. Tobias in the Draft Board, Judge William H. Hastie in the War Department, Dr. Robert Weaver in the National Defense Commission, Frances Williams in the Consumers' Section, and a few others.

But they are helpless without the collective, mass support of the Negro people. Aggressive, articulate, determined, mass support will strengthen their hands.

It is not enough for Negroes to want jobs in the factories, mills mines, and offices, they must diplomatically and undiplomatically, ceremoniously and unceremoniously, cry out in no uncertain terms their demand for work and their rightful places in every department of the Army, Navy, and Air Corps, based, of course, upon recognized qualifications.

Evidently, the regular, normal and respectable method of conferences and petitions, while proper and ought to be continued as conditions may warrant, certainly don't work. They don't do the job. However, they are a necessary preliminary, advance-guard work, for only a small committee can intelligently formulate a program. But the few people of ability who may develop a program may not possess the power to enforce it or secure its adoption.

Just a casual analysis and survey of the dynamics and mechanics of modern movements, legislation, administration and execution, show that only power can effect the enforcement and adoption of a given policy, however meritorious it may be. The virtue and rightness of a cause are not alone the condition and cause of its progress and acceptance. Power and pressure are at the foundation of the march of social justice and reform.

Now power and pressure do not reside in the few, the intellegentsia, they lie in and flow from the masses. Power does not even rest with the masses as such. Power is the active principle of only the organized masses, the masses united for a definite purpose.

Hence, Negro America must bring its power and pressure to bear upon the agencies and representatives of the Federal Government to exact their rights in National Defense employment and the armed forces of the country. No real, actual, bonafide, definite and positive pressure of the Negro masses has ever been brought to bear upon the executive and legislative branches of the city, state, and national governments.

Now, as to a practical program.....

I suggest that TEN THOUSAND (10,000) Negroes march on Washington, D. C., the capitol of the Nation, with the slogan: WE LOYAL NEGRO AMERICAN CITIZENS DEMAND THE RIGHT TO WORK AND FIGHT FOR OUR COUNTRY.

Negroes could join this march from various sections of the country from all trades, professions and callings, such as laborers, doctors, nurses, lawyers, teachers, preachers, mechanics, soldiers, women, and youth groups.

Our demand would be simple, single and central; namely jobs in National Defense and placement as soldiers and officers of all ranks we are qualified for, in the armed forces.

No propaganda could be whipped up and spread to the effect that Negroes seek to hamper defense. No charge could be made that Negroes are attempting to mar national unity. They want to do none of these things. On the contrary, we seek the right to play our part in advancing the cause of national defense and national unity. But certainly, there can be no true national unity where one tenth of the population are denied their basic rights as American citizens.

Committees of the marchers could be planned to meet and confer with various government officials about the needs, demands and rights of the Negro.

Such a pilgrimage of 10,000 Negroes would wake up and shock Official Washington as it has never been shocked before. Why? The answer is clear. Nobody expects ten thousand Negroes to get together and march anywhere for anything at any time. Negroes are supposed not to have sufficient iron in their blood for this type of struggle. In common parlance, they are supposed to be just scared and unorganizable. Is this true? I contend it is not.

What an impressive sight ten thousand Negroes would make marching down Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington, D. C. with banners preaching their cause for justice, freedom and equality.

One thing is certain and that is if Negroes are going to get anything out of this National Defense which will cost the nation 30 or 40 billions of dollars that we Negroes must help pay in taxes as property owners and workers and consumers, WE MUST FIGHT FOR IT AND FIGHT FOR IT WITH GLOVES OFF.

PRESS RELEASE MAY 29, 1941

BROTHERHOOD OF SLEEPING CAR PORTERS
AN INTERNATIONAL UNION
AFFILIATED WITH THE AFofL

217 West 125th Street
Room #301
New York City

NEGROES OUT TO SHAKE AMERICA FOR JOBS AND JUSTICE

IN NATIONAL DEFENSE

By A. Philip Randolph

In a democracy every citizen has a right to express his opinion about the policies of the government. He has a right, lawfully and orderly, to seek to change these policies when he deems them inadequate and unjust.

This is the purpose of the plan for 100,000 Negroes to march on Washington.

Negroes are rightfully dissatisfied with the Administration's policy or lack of policy on the Negro and defense. We are out to change it.

From an examination of various techniques, strategies, and methods of action that may be employed by minority groups to get their rights, it has become apparent, evident, and obvious to me that the Negroes' most effective weapon today is their mass power.

Mass power is the chief form of power Negroes possess if they mobilize it. It is a matter of common knowledge, however, that Negro mass power has never been really tested, measured and utilized to even its approximate maximum pressure possibilities. The Negro masses have always been discounted, underrated and undervalued. The stress and emphasis and importance have always been put upon the moneyed, educated, and talented Negro.

While we need to continue to develop and encourage Negroes of talent, money and education, the present crisis in the world--which is profoundly changing American national economy--demands that we go to the Negro masses where the power lies to save the race from degradation and ruin.

No other force under the sun can save the Negro today but his mass power, orderly and lawfully used to achieve his liberation from economic, social and political slavery.

When 100,000 Negroes march on Washington, it will wake up Negro as well as white America.

It will stun the government, shock business and astonish organized labor.

In the name of the National March-On-Washington Committee, I call upon Negroes everywhere, from coast to coast, to form March-On-Washington Committees immediately and stage marches on their city halls one week before the march on Washington, to urge the mayors and city councils to memorialize President Roosevelt to issue an executive order to abolish discriminations in all government departments and national defense.

I call upon the Negroes everywhere to gird for an epoch-making march and demonstration, July 1st, for jobs, justice and freedom in the Nation's Capitol.

On to Washington!

Let the Negro masses march!

Let the Negro masses speak!

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

BEFORE THE COMMITTEE OF FAIR EMPLOYMENT PRACTICE
OF
THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

DO NOT WRITE IN THIS SPACE

In the Matter of

and

Complainant

Case No. .....

Date .....

C H A R G E

Pursuant to Presidential Executive Order No. 8802 the undersigned hereby charges discrimination on account of (race) (creed) (national origin) by cross out words not applicable

Name of Firm, Agency, School, Union

Address

in

City

(_) Private Defense Industry
(_) Vocational or Training Program
(_) Government Agency
(_) Labor Organization

The following facts are submitted to substantiate this charge:

1. Race, Religion or National Origin of Complainant _____

2. Job, position or classification for which application was made _____

3. Qualifications for such job, position or classification:

A. Education _____

B. Experience and Work history _____

C. Civil Service List Date of Examination Rating

4. Date of application / certification (in person) (by letter) for position _____

5. Date of refusal to employ or admit _____

44

...ial position of persons refusing or transmitting refusal

_____ _____
Name Position

7. Reason given for such refusal _____

8. Statement of additional facts and/or circumstances indicating discrimination on account of race, religion or national origin:

_____

_____

_____

_____

_____

9. Names and addresses of any witnesses to facts and/or circumstances indicating discrimination:

Names	Assresses

The undersigned further charges that the said unfair employment practices are contrary to the public policy of the United States of America as stated in Executive Order No. 8802.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this day
of 1942
At .....
.....

_____
Notary Public

Name and address of Person Claiming Discrimination:

_____
Name

_____
Address

_____
City and State

To March On Washington For Jobs And Equal Participation In National Defense July 1st

Office: 2289 7th Avenue
New York, New York
Tel. Ed. 4-4341

B U L L E T I N

Vol. 1 No. 2. Negro-March-On-Washington-Committee June 9, 1941

BUTTON SALE CAMPAIGN

Over 30,000 buttons have been distributed in the New York Metropolitan area, but the Chinese sold ten million buttons in New York City for the cause of China. If this small group can do this, then surely we can dispose of more than 30,000 for this project. Each Saturday is Button Day where everyone may secure buttons at the price of 10¢ each, distributed by young ladies on street corners and public spots that reach Negro America in New York. These sales are made in an effort to defray expenses arising out of this Great Movement. Why not act now and do your part--Buy a Button and Sell a Button.

MEANS OF TRANSPORTATION TO WASHINGTON

AmericanBBus Company
165 West 46 Street
33 to 45 passengers----$4.00 per person

Greyhound Bus Company
242 West 34 Street
37 passengers ----$5.10 per person

Train
Pennsylvania R R &
B & O
15 to 300 persons ----$6.70 per person
300 & up ----$4.50 per person

The buses require 8 hours one way, two rest periods and one meal period.

Trains require approximately 4½ hours one way.

MASS DEMONSTRATIONS

March on your City Hall--June 27
March on Washington --July 1

CERTIFICATES

Certificates of Social Action are now available. Please see that every organization has its quota. They will sell to individuals for at least one dollar and as much as possible. Many organizations are contributing $25 and more.

GIGANTIC RALLY

for the

March-On-Washington

NATIONAL NEGRO DAY

Friday Evening

8 o'clock P. M.

June 27th, 1941

Dorrence Brooks Square, 138th St. and St. Nicholas Ave.

Hear latest reports and final plans on mobilization for March-On-Washington, July 1st, 1941.

"Not ALMS but OPPORTUNITY"

PUBLIC MEETING

BY

NEGRO COMMITTEE TO MARCH on WASHINGTON

FOR EQUAL PARTICIPATION IN NATIONAL DEFENSE

AT

EBENEZER BAPTIST CHURCH

3rd & 4th Sts., Englewood, N. J.

MONDAY EVE., JUNE 23, 1941

SPEAKER

Mrs. BESSYE BEARDEN

Social Worker and Journalist

"Strike a blow against denial of Jobs in Government Defense Projects; against Racial Discrimination in Government Departments; against wide-spread Jim-Crowism in the armed forces of the Nation."

SPONSORED BY THE

Englewood Urban League

PRESS RELEASE JUNE 7th, 1941

NEGROES GIRD FOR MARCH ON WASHINGTON FOR JOBS IN DEFENSE

The National Committee for the mobilization of 100,000 Negroes to march on Washington for jobs in national defense was set up in New York a few weeks ago under the direction of A. Philip Randolph, International President of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. Members of this committee are Walter White, Secretary of the NAACP; Lester B. Granger, Assistant Executive Secretary of the National Urban League; Richard Parrish, President of the Association of Negro College Students of New York; Reverend William Lloyd Imes, Pastor of the St. James Presbyterian Church; Dr. Rayford Logan of Howard University; Mr. J. Finley Wilson, Grand Exalted Ruler of the Independent Benevolent Order of Elks of the World; Noah A. Walters, Laundry Workers' Joint Board; E. E. Williams of the Blasters and Drillers Union; Frank R. Crosswaith of the Negro Labor Committee, Layle Lane, Vice-President of the American Federation of Teachers; and Reverend Adam C. Powell, Jr., Pastor of the Abyssinian Baptist Church.

A Call to Negro America to mobilize for the march on Washington for jobs and justice in national defense was issued several weeks ago. As a result of the Call, local March-On-Washington Committees have been established in Kansas City, Missouri; St. Paul, Minnesota; St. Louis, Missouri; Chicago, Ill., Buffalo, N. Y., Newark, N. J., Jersey City, N. J., Asbury Park, Westchester, New York City, Philadelphia, Pa., Baltimore, Md., Richmond, Va., Atlanta, Ga., Savannah, Ga., Tampa and Jacksonville, Florida.

Committees are still in the process of formation, and sentiment for the march is mounting everywhere, states Mr. Randolph.

The run-around that Negroes are receiving when they apply for jobs at industrial plants that have contracts for national defense-- running into hundreds of millions of dollars-- has created nation-wide unrest among the Negro people. To correct this condition, conference after conference has been held with President Roosevelt, Secretary of the Navy, Knox, and Secretary of War, Patterson, and Associate Director of the Office of Production Management, Sidney Hillman. And in every instance the Negro leaders have received very respectful hearings, but we are not getting any jobs, concluded Randolph.

Therefore, many of the Negroes throughout the country have come to the conclusion that the conference technique is not sufficient to meet this serious issue. Therefore, they have decided to develop an expression of Negro mass power. We consider this march as an effective method of getting the issue of Negro jobs in defense and the right for participation and integration on a basis of equality with other citizens into the armed forces of the Nation, into the main stream of public opinion and before the American people, asserted the Union leader, Randolph.

Means for financing the march are the sale of buttons for ten cents and certificates to persons who are willing to make a contribution to support the march with a dollar or more.

Headquarters for the march in New York have been established at 2289 Seventh Avenue under the supervision of Mr. Warren Brown, who recently received his Ph. D. from the Graduate Faculty of Political and Social Sciences at the New School for Social Research.

Fraternal organizations, churches, civic movements, women's federations, youth groups, trade unions, doctors and lawyers associations are all throwing in their lot in this all-out total demonstration on the part of Negroes for jobs in defense, stated Mr. Randolph.

Following the march on Washington, a great rally will be held at the Monument of Abraham Lincoln, because of its historical symbolism in connection with the issuance of the Proclamation of Emancipation by Abraham Lincoln. At this rally, President Roosevelt and other representatives of the government have been invited to speak, together with Negro leaders.

In Washington, a promotional office for the march has been established under the management of Captain Eugene P. Davidson, who is Assistant National Director to Mr. Randolph.

It is proposed that the march be silent with muffled drums and that the marchers carry banners proclaiming the right of the Negroes, as citizens of America, to jobs and justice.

One week before the march on Washington, plans have been developed for marches in various cities on the City Halls for the purpose of urging the Mayors and the City Councils to memorialize President Roosevelt to abolish discriminations on account of race or color in government departments and national defense, observed Mr. Randolph. In New York, he said, the march to the City Hall is to be staged June 27th, and is to be combined with Negro Day, which is an event for the purpose of developing greater economic security for the Harlem Community. Mayor LaGuardia has already been advised of the fact that this demonstration will take place.

This march on Washington by Negroes is no expression of opposition to the appeal of President Roosevelt for national unity and national defense, and the preservation of American democracy. Sensible, sane, and sober-minded Negroes are for national unity and national defense and for the maintenance of our democratic institutions and way of life. The purpose of this march is to impress upon white America that Negroes want to share, and are determined to fight to share, in national unity and national defense and in American democracy as other American citizens share in it, commented March Generalissimo, Randolph.

We want no part of Hitlerism, Nazism, Fascism, or Communism. We are Americans too, and we shall not rest content until America gives the Negro his full constitutional stature of American citizenship.

NEGRO MARCH-ON-WASHINGTON COMMITTEE

2289 Seventh Avenue

New York, N. Y.

Edgecombe 4-4341

NEGRO MARCH ON WASHINGTON COMMITTEE

2289 Seventh Avenue

New York, New York

Edgecombe 4-4341

Registration Blank

Number of representatives participating in "March-on-Washington"_____
(Tuesday, July 1, 1941)

Number of representatives participating in "March-on-City Hall"_____
(Tuesday, June 27, 1941)

Name of Church or Organization_____

Address_____

Officer in Charge_____

Note: Kindly submit a list of the persons participating--names and addresses--and enclose with this blank.

PLANS FOR PERMANENT ORGANIZATION
OF
MARCH ON WASHINGTON COMMITTEE

ARTICLE 1. The name of this organization shall be THE MARCH ON WASHINGTON COMMITTEE This organization shall be a national one with small local or branch organizations wherever the population and need of the Negro people warrant one. The seat of the national office shall always be in New York City.

ARTICLE 2. The purpose of this organization shall be cited in the preamble.

ARTICLE 3. The composition of this organization; by that who shall be eligible for membership. This organization shall be a Negro organization open to membership to every Negro upon payment of ten (10¢) cents dues. Fifty percent of the dues are to be retained by the local or branch organization and the other fifty percent to be turned over to the National office in New York.

ARTICLE 4. There shall be a National Organization, distinguished from the local or branch organizations. The National Organization shall consist of a National Chairman, National Secretary, National Treasurer and a National Executive Board of Directors. The National Executive Board shall be empowered to appoint a committee at large.

ARTICLE 5. Election and term of office....Officers shall be elected at each regular convention and they shall hold office for two years. There shall be a biennial convention and officers shall be sworn in during the sessions of the convention at which they are elected.

ARTICLE 6. Duties of officers....The duties of the Chairman--The National Chairman shall preside at all sessions of the National Organization. He shall perform his executive duties when convention is not in session. He shall exercise a general supervision of all affairs of the National Organization. The Chairman shall be chairman and ex-officio of the National Executive Board. He shall have authority to call special meetings. The National Chairman shall have the power to act and to decide on any emergency affecting the National Organization. The National Chairman shall have the power to appoint committees and Regional Directors ARTICLE 7. The duties of the Executive Secretary shall be to keep a true record of all proceedings of the National Organization. The Executive Secretary shall keep in regular contact with all of the local or branch organizations throughout the country. The Executive Secretary shall be custodian of all of the records and fixtures of the National Organization. The Executive Secretary shall submit a complete and regular report on all items of expenditure of funds and all vouchers submitted to the National Treasurer. The Executive Secretary shall receive all funds and collect all dues and shall deposit all such funds and dues with the Executive Treasurer. The Executive Secretary shall be bonded.

ARTICLE 8. The duties of the Executive Treasurer....The Executive Treasurer shall retain all funds and dues and upon proper authority shall pay all bills. All bills and funds must be paid by check. All checks must be signed and countersigned by the Executive Chairman and Executive Treasurer. The Executive Treasurer shall be bonded.

ARTICLE 9. The duties of the Executive Board of Directors. The National Executive Board of Directors shall consist of the National Chairman, National Secretary, National Treasurer. Additional members shall be chosen from Regional Directors and others not officers in a local or branch. The National Executive Board of Directors shall not be more than fifteen members nor less than nine members. This Executive Board shall act as an advisory council to the Executive Chairman when called upon or when a question of policy arises. The National Executive Board shall have the power upon its own motion to call the National Executive Chairman into consultation. The Board shall have access to books and accounts of the National Secretary and National Treasurer. The National Executive Board shall audit books and accounts of the Secretary and Treasurer once yearly, at least. The National Board with the National Chairman shall have the power and authority to administer the funds of the National Organization.

ARTICLE 10. There shall always be a quorum of ARTICLE 11. The National Executive Committee is to be chosen geographically. The country is to be divided up either by Congressional areas, states or other methods.

ARTICLE 12. There shall be a Regional head over each geographical segment. This regional head shall report from time to time the functioning of the various locals or branches in his regional area. He shall be responsible for the remittance of funds from the locals or branches to the National Organization.

ARTICLE 13. The locals or branches shall pattern their organization after the National Organization.

Immediate Release June 16th, 1941

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S STATEMENT ON RACIAL JOB BARRIERS

By A. Philip Randolph

The statement of the President on racial job barriers which appeared in the press, Monday, June 16th, is commendable, but it does not go to the root of the problem. Of course, if this statement had been issued several months ago, instead of at this time, it would have had the effect - no doubt - of doing much toward the elimination of discrimination against Negroes by various industrial concerns that possess defense contracts ranging into hundreds of millions of dollars.

While it is the strongest statement that he has yet made, it has no mandatory power and does not force business concerns holding defense contracts to employ Negro workers. Therefore, these factories may still resort to all sorts of evasions to get around giving the Negro a fair and square deal in employment. Some of them may put in a Negro here and there and consider that they have satisfied the President's request to eliminate racial barriers.

The Negro March-on-Washington Committee wishes to reiterate its proposal that the President issue an executive order, which has teeth in it and is part of his legislative-executive power, which will compel all concerns that have government contracts or that will receive government contracts to put Negroes to work, representing their population ratio at least. In fact, Negroes should be employed in the industries producing defense munitions in numbers exceeding their population ratio because they have been kept out of such jobs since the defense crisis began; and not only defense jobs but out of general industry, thereby compelling them to resort to relief.

For instance, although Negroes constitute but 5% of the population of New York, they are 23% of the relief population. This is due definitely to the fact that Negroes are barred from employment purely on racial and not qualification grounds.

I wish it definitely understood that this statement of the President will not stop the march of Negroes on Washington. Local committees in different parts of the country, which are the agencies for the mobilization of 100,000 Negroes to march on Washington for jobs and justice in National Defense, are redoubling their efforts - and from reports that have been received - the enthusiasm is mounting high.

In addition to jobs in National Defense, the Negro march on Washington movement wants the President also to issue an executive order to abolish discriminations in all federal departments of the government. Competent Negroes who pass civil service examinations are being denied the opportunity to serve, merely because the machinery for selecting the applicants is subject to manipulation, and Negroes are often the victims despite the fact that they sometimes make the highest ratings.

Plans are afoot to hold a big mass meeting in Washington this Friday for the purpose of discussing the statement of the President and intensifying the work of mobilizing the Negroes for the march.

A series of street rallies are planned in Harlem to also acquaint the Negro community with the fact that the movement to march on Washington is proceeding apace with greater intensity.

Meetings are planned throughout the country to acquaint Negroes with the significance of the President's statement, and to step up the activities for the march.

A. Philip Randolph, National Director

National Negro March-on-Washington Committee

N.Y. Office - 2289 Seventh Avenue
Edgecombe 4-4341

Celebrating "A Victory"

A. Philip Randolph in top picture addressing the 4,000 people who rallied at Salem M. E. Church, Tuesday night to celebate the march-on-Washington "victory." Below is Walter White conferring with David Sarnoff on the rostrum. The next is Mayor LaGuardia extolling the Negro race for its achievements, and next is a part of the audience listening intently to the speakers. (See story.)

To Name Executive Secretary of FEPC

By J. ROBERT SMITH

Strong indications that Lawrence W. Cramer, former Governor of the Virgin Islands, will be the person selected to serve as administrator to the Fair Employment Practice Committee recently appointed by President Roosevelt to halt discrimination against Negroes in defense industries holding contracts with the Unted States Government, were unearthed by the Star-News this week.

Representing the chairman of the committee, Mark F. Ethridge and also the committee as a whole, David Sarnoff, president and general manager of Radio Communications of America, told more than 4,000 Harlemites at a mass meeting called by A. Philip Randolph and the Negro March-on-Washington Committee to render a report of the campaign, declared that the administrator whose name he did not mention would be appointed within a few days.

Interviewed by the Star-News and informed that it was rumored that the former governor was the committee's first choice, Mr. Sarnoff said that there was a strong possibility that he was the man. Asked whether his salary was to be $9,000 a year as circulated, Mr. Sarnoff replied that the matter of compensation had not yet been decided by the group.

Mr. Cramer, who taught Government on the faculty of Columbia University was appointed lieutenant governor of the Virgin Islands under former Governor

(Continued on Page 11, Col. 7)

Administrator?

LAWRENCE W. CRAMER
May Get Important Post

JIM CROW

DESTROYS DEFENSE

Negro Americans Want Jobs and Peace

FIFTY THOUSAND young men like Fitzgerald Bramwell are ready to fill the huge shortage of skilled workers in America's aircraft industry. But they are BARRED because they are Negroes. One hundred and three thousand white men have already secured new jobs in aircraft. But with all the fine words about Democracy of President Roosevelt and Sidney Hillman, less than one hundred Negroes have secured these jobs.

The President's policies lead us rapidly down the road to war in the name of Democracy. But the President does nothing about Jim Crowism in national defense, nothing about it in the Navy, the Army and the Federal Government. Officials, politicians and employers hypocritically talk about Democracy but practice Jim Crowism. Negro Americans want jobs and peace. They do not want starvation and death.

The National Negro Congress is fighting a mighty battle against Jim Crowism in our nation. You can help. Write the President of the United States, write your Congressman and Senators today. There is a National Negro Congress Council in your town. For its address and more information on our fight for jobs write to:

THE NATIONAL NEGRO CONGRESS
717 FLORIDA AVENUE, N. W.
WASHINGTON, D. C.

We call your attention to the June 27th issue of Friday Magazine, on sale right now on all newsstands. This issue contains a dramatic story in pictures, the story of Fitzgerald Bramwell, young Negro engineer. His story is typical of tens of thousands. Be sure to read the story of this young man, his problems, his family and the cruel job discrimination against him. You and all your friends will be vitally interested in this story of a young Negro father's attempt to break down the Jim Crow barriers to a decent job. Buy Friday Magazine on your nearest newsstand now.

NEGRO PEOPLE WANT JOBS AND PEACE AT HOME

CITIZENS' ATTENTION!

NATIONAL NEGRO
MARCH-ON-WASHINGTON COMMITTEE
REPORTS TO NATION ON PRESIDENT
ROOSEVELT'S EXECUTIVE ORDER AGAINST DISCRIMINATION IN NATIONAL DEFENSE

AT

PUBLIC MASS MEETING

IN

SALEM M. E. CHURCH

7th AVENUE AND 129th STREET

New York City

ON

TUESDAY, AUGUST 5, 1941

7:30 P. M.

Speakers:

MAYOR FIORELLO H. LA GUARDIA
WALTER WHITE
DAVID SARNOFF
President and General Manager, RCA
BESSYE BEARDEN
LESTER GRANGER
DR. CHANNING H. TOBIAS
FRANK R. CROSSWAITH
A. PHILIP RANDOLPH, Chairman

Meeting under the auspices of the

NATIONAL NEGRO MARCH-ON-WASHINGTON COMMITTEE
217 WEST 125th STREET, NEW YORK CITY
Room 301

440

Cramer Named Secretary Of President's FEP Committee

Former Governor of Virgin Islands to Have Negro Deputy — 27 Companies Have Changed Negro Labor Policy.

(By Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, D.C., Aug. 14—The Committee on Fair Employment Practice Monday named Lawrence Cramer, former Governor of the Virgin Islands, as executive secretary, following an all-day session.

Present at the conference were Chairman Mark Etheridge, David Sarnoff, Porter Webster and Earl B. Dickerson. William Green was in Chicago while Phillip Murray continues ill.

The naming of Mr. Cramer to the position clears the way for the organization of an administrative staff, including the naming of a Negro deputy executive secretary.

Cramer, who before his elevation to the governorship in 1935, served for four years as deputy governor, resigned this year. A graduate of the University of Wisconsin and Columbia university, his liberalness and ability have been widely heralded. Permanent headquarters have been established in the Social Security Building, OPM Division.

It was also brought out at the conference that 27 large corporations, handling defense contracts have changed their policy towards employing skilled Negro labor. Eleven of these have to deal with the airplane industry.

(Continued on Page 4, Col. 2)

CRAMER NAMED

(Continued from Page 1)

Among other companies, who have expressed no change in their attitude towards Negro labor are the Consolidated Aircraft Co., Baldwin Locomotive Co., Vultee Corp., North American Aviation Co., and the Colt Company. It is believed that the policy of these companies will come in for close scrutiny.

Attorney Dickerson's motion that a series of regional conferences, embracing the Pacific Coast, the middle west, the Atlantic Coast and the deep South, be held, was passed.

At these conferences, members of the committee will hold public hearings at which time representatives of companies having government contracts will be asked to outline the policies of their companies with respect to Negro labor.

The War, Navy and Maritime departments have notified the commission that all contracts now carry a clause outlawing discrimination, in accordance with President Roosevelt's executive order.

It is planned that a meeting will shortly be held to discuss ways and means of enforcing the contracts.

The FEP also launched a fight against discrimination in all government agencies, and at the end of the meeting announced that reports proved definite progress had been made in extending defense training through the NYA and other agencies.

Speaking in this connection, Attorney Dickerson said:

"I wish to make it clear that the path is being cleared for Negroes to get training in skilled work connected with the national defense program, which is so vitally important in the fulfillment of our program.

"We are determined to create job opportunities, but we must have Negroes who are trained to take advantage of these opportunities," he concluded.

LaGuardia Says FDR's Order Is "Historical"

Crowded Church Tell of Progress Hears Speakers

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

NEW YORK — (ANP) — Three thousand persons crowded into Salem M. E church here to hear A. Philip Randolph, Mayor Fierella H LaGuardia, David Sarnoff and other personages identified with the circumstances surrounding the executive order issued by President Roosevelt barring discrimination in the national defense program. The occasion also marked the first public report from the Negro March on Washington committee since its national director, Mr. Randolph, told a nation-wide radio audience on July 1 that the projected march had been found "unnecessary at this time" and therefore postponed.

No attempt was made to evade the fact that considerable criticism had been levelled at the march committee for its decision to call off the demonstration. In fact, the meeting was intended to give full explanation of the factors involved which prompted this momentous decision. Mr. Randolph, in a clear and forthright manner, succeeded in doing just that.

LAGUARDIA PRAISED

However, the remarks of Mayor LaGuardia, described by all prevlous speakers as the "unrelenting champion in favor of the executive order," along with the committee, were no doubt the climax of the evening.

"I am glad to be called upon to join in the discussion," he opened, "of what is a real landmark in the progress of democracy. I believe the executive order signed by President Roosevelt will remain one of the important public documents in our history, and the man who signed it will take his place among the true champions of liberty and true democracy.

"It may not be a literary gem," he continued. "Its meter might be defective in its poetry, but I am in a position to tell you that the man who signed it believed in it, in every line of it, in every word of every sentence of it."

He minced no words in lauding members of the March on Washington committee for their sincerity in tackling a problem which had become "a public scandal against minority groups."

WANTS BOARD TO SUCCEED

Turning his attention to the members of the Fair Employment Practice committee, named under the order, the fiery little mayor said: "This board may be a success for a time. It will have the opportunity to demonstrate to the entire country what the Negroes of America have produced in the last generation. No group nor race has made as much progress in 70 years as the Negro. You have accomplished and you have produced men and women in the sciences, arts, industries, and professions and athletics that has taken other races generations to produce."

Considered a paramount importance was the admonition of the speaker, also civilian defense administrator, to guard against claims of discrimination by industry to cover up "incompetency, dishonesty and immorality." While this remark met with the wide approbation and had its proper relation to the subject under discussion, many were quick to see the mayor making an indirect defense of his order suspending a Negro city employe on a charge of alleged "moral

THE AFRO-AMERICAN, AUGUST 16, 1941

Leaders Report on Job March

NEW YORK. — Leaders of the National March-on-Washington Committee lauded the efforts of their supporters before an audience of 4,000 in Salem Methodist Church, Tuesday night of last week, as A. Philip Randolph, director, explained why the march was called off.

"Simply stated," Mr. Randolph said, "the march was postponed because its main objective — the issuance of an executive order banning discrimination in national defense — was secured in conference with the President."

Jobs Main Issue

Jobs in defense industries, he asserted, are more vital than openings in the various armed services of the country, although the committee's plans include eventual attacks on all phases of government-sponsored discrimination.

Outstanding among the speakers at the meeting was Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, who termed the executive order "one of the

On Job March Leaders Report

(Continued from Page 1)

important public documents in our history."

"A Public Scandal"

He was outspoken in his praise of the march movement leaders for their sincerity in tackling a problem which had become "a public scandal against minority groups."

Mr. Randolph reviewed the series of futile conference with the President and heads of the War and Navy Departments and the OPM which characterized earlier phases of the ultimately successful campaign.

Unity Lauded

He emphasized the spirit of unity among various co-operating organizations and the weekly press, but scored the white press for its almost universal hands-off policy.

Other speakers included:

David Sarnoff, white, president of the Radio Corporation of America and a member of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee; Walter White, NAACP executive secretary; Lester Granger, National Urban League official; Dr. Channing Tobias, National YMCA Council; Mrs. Bessye Bearden, National Council of Women, and Frank R. Crosswaith, Labor Commitee of Harlem.

Following the reading of the financial report, a collection of $116.83 was raised.

THE EAST TENNESSEE NEWS

KNOXVILLE, TENN., THURSDAY, AUGUST 14, 1941

RANDOLPH IN FIRST REPORT DEFENDS ACTION IN CALLING OFF D. C. MARCH

THE NEW YORK AMSTERDAM STAR-NEWS

Saturday, August 16, 1941

Urges Local Negroes to Continue Defense Job Figl

Randolph In Borough Talk

Tells of Conference With President; Crowd Attends

The first mass meeting of the March-On-Washington Committee sponsored by the Brooklyn Women's Voters Council, since the issue of the President's executive order, was held at Brooklyn's Public School 35, Lewis Avenue and Decatur Street, last Friday evening.

A crowd, eager to learn the precise meaning of the President's order, heard A. Phillip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and conceiver of the idea of the march, give an interpretation of just what the probable outcome of the order would be.

Mr. Randolph declared that pressure upon the governing forces by an enmassed group, firm in the belief that they deserve the same rights as others, was the only means of attaining the real independence of the race. He also informed the audience that when his committee met with the President to discuss the possibilities of eliminating discrimination in the defense industries, the President appointed a sub-committee composed of the directors of OPM, Secretaries Stimson and Hull, Walter White, Mayor LaGuardia and several others to make arrangements whereby the march on Washington could be cancelled.

According to the President, an executive order in this particular instance was a rare procedure. However, Mr. Randolph was staunch in the belief that now was the time to be firm in the demands of the people. He asked that the order also include no discrimination in the Federal departments. It was therefore, he said, a moral obligation that the march be postponed.

"Over 100,000 Negroes stand ready to carry out the original plans of the M. O. W. Committee if the executive order is not followed through as provided. The demonstration of capacity power of the Negro people illustrates that they will no longer remain lax in the democracy to which they, too, have contributed," Randolph concluded.

Other speakers on the program were Charles Berkley of the Brooklyn Coordinating Committee, Albert Schandzer, Dr. Irving and Mrs. Ethel Williams. The Women's Voters Council, under the leadership of Mrs. Margaret V. Brown, donated over $100 to the cause of the March On Washington Committee. They intend to keep the local committee active.

Randolph Tells of Defense Problems

Brooklynites attended a mass meeting sponsored by Brooklyn's March-on-Washington Commi at the Stephen Decatur Junior High School, Lewis Ave. & Decatur St., on Friday night. The ab photo of A. Phillip Randolph was snapped during the course of his dynamic talk. Others photograp are Dr. Irving, Charles Berkley and Mrs. Margaret V. Brown. (Story at left)

FOUR THOUSAND ATTEND MASS MEETING IN HARLEM

To celebrate and explain to the public the victory won by the contemplated "March On Washington," A. Phillip Randolph, head of the Pullman Porters' Union, Lester Granger, Walter White and other leaders of the movement called a mass meeting. More than 4000 attended in a Harlem church.

Upper left: Lester Granger on the left and Dr. Channing H. Tobias express need for unity in fighting discrimination in industries. Lower left: A. Phillip Randolph, master of ceremonies pledges his unceasing support to fight against discrimination.

In the next photo Bessye Bearden of the New York tax department spoke eloquently for the women's side and assured the continued support of the fairer sex in the fight.

A member of the committee that spoke with the President about the plight of Negroes in the present defense set-up was Frank Crosswaith, who told an ear-capturing story that brought cheers from the audience. Mayor Fiorella LaGuardia of New York City, sits fanning on the stage. He was speaker also.—Rowe photos.

PM, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 6, 1941 NEW YORK

Our Photogenic Mayor is shown in the pulpit of Salem M. E. Church, in Harlem, as he assured an audience of Negroes that FDR would permit no discrimination against them in national defense. The meeting was sponsored by the National Negro March-on-Washington Committee. PM Photo by Irving Haberman

Randolph Gives Report On Washington Parade

From Iowa — Des Moines

New York—(By Ernest E. Johnson for ANP)—Three thousand persons crowded into Salem M. E. church here Tuesday night to hear A. Philip Randolph, Mayor Fiorella H. LaGuardia, David Sarnoff and other personages identified with the circumstances surrounding the executive order issued by President Roosevelt barring discrimination in the national defense program. The occasion also marked the first public report from the Negro march on Washington comittee since its national director, Mr. Randolph told a nation-wide radio audience on July 1 that the projected march had been found "unecessary at this time" and therefore postponed.

No attempt was made to evade the fact that considerable criticism had been levelled at the march committee for its decision to call off the demonstration. In fact the meeting was intended to give full explanation of the factors involved which prompted this momentous decision. Mr. Randolph, in a clear and forthright manner, succeeded in doing just that.

Coming to the controversial point, he said: "Simply stated, the march was postponed because its main obtee will be retained and expanded, the national director in stirring and dramatic fashion so sypical of him, let it be known that "we want one million Negroes organized in these committees to make a power that must be reckoned with."

jective, namely the issuance of an executive order banning discrimination in national defense, was secured in conference with the President.

Next Step

"What about discrimination in the departments of the federal government? This was one of our objectives. While it was one of our objectives, it was not our main objective. We consider that it is more important to get jobs for Negroes in national defense so that they may get milk and bread for their babies than to get them in the army or navy or air corps although we shall continue to fight to abolish discriminations in all departments of the government and the armed forces of the nation. This will be the next step in the fight of the march committee movement.

"The National Negro March on Washington Committee would have been placed in an untenable absurd and ridiculous position had it rejected its chief objective when offered by the President on the grounds that we didn't get everything we wanted as a pretext for marching anyhow.

'I want to make it clear 'that the purpose of the march on Washington movement' was not to serve as an agency to create a continuing state of sullen unrest and blind resentment among Negroes against discrimination. Its purpose was and is to achieve a specific and definite thing, namely. elimination of barriers to jobs for Negroes."

Declaring that the march commit-

WDED CHURCH HEARS ANDOLPH REPORT ON WASHINGTON PARADE

Dayton

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—(By nest E. Johnson for ANP)—ree thousand persons crowded o Salem M. E. church here esday night to hear A. Philip ndolph, Mayor Fiorella H. Laardia, David Sarnoff and other rsonages identified with the cumstances surrounding the ecutive order issued by Presint Roosevelt barring discrimation in the national defense ogram. The occasion also arked the first public report from the Negro March to Washington committee since its national director, Mr. Randolph, told a nation-wide radio audience on July 1 that the projected march had been found "unnecessary at this time" and therefore postponed.

No attempt was made to evade the fact that considerable criticism had been levelled at the march committee for its decision to call off the demonstration. In fact the meeting was intended to give full evplanation of the factors involved which prompted this momentous decision. Mr. Randolph, in a clear and forthright manner, succeeded in doing just that.

However, the remarks of Mayor LaGuardia, described by all previous speakers as the "unrelenting champion in favor of tne executive order," along with the committee, were no doubt the climax of the evening.

"I am glad to be called upon to join in the discussion," he opened, "of what is a real landmark in the progress of democracy. I believe the executive order signed by President Roosevelt will remain one of the important public documents in our history, and the man who signed it will take his place among the true champions of liberty and true democracy.

"It may not be a literary gem," he continued. "Its meter might be defective in its poetry, but I am in a position to tell you that the man who signed it believed in it, in every line of it, in every word of every sentence of it."

He minced no words in lauding members of the March to Washington committee for their sincerity in tackling a problem which had become "a public scandal against minority groups."

Turning his attention to the members of the Fair Employment Practice committee, named under the order, the fiery little mayor said: "This board may be a success for a time—and it will be. But what is important is that I want it to be a success for all time. It will have the opportunity to demonstrate to the entire country what the Negroes of America have produced in the last generation. No group nor race has made as much progress in 70 years as the Negro. You have accomplished and you have produced men and women in the sciences, arts, industries, and professions and athletics that has taken other races generations to produce."

Considered of paramount importance was the admonition of the speaker, also civilian defense administrator, to guard against claims of discrimination by industry to cover up "incompetency

While this remark met with wide approbation and had its proper relation to the subject under discussion, many were quick to see the mayor making an indirect defense of his order suspending a Negro city employe on a charge of alleged "moral turpitude."

Mr. Randolph also reviewed the circumstances leading to the idea of the march pointing to the need for the development of "the technique of mass pressure," a thing new to the Negro. He scored the "dreadful conspiracy of silence" on the part of the white press with one exception, that of "P. M." There was praise for the efforts of Mayor LaGuardia and disdain for William S. Knudsen, co-director of Office of Production Management.

Coming to the controversial point, he said: "Simply stated, the march was postponed because its main objective, namely the issuance of an executive order banning discrimination in national defense, was secured in conference with the President.

"What about discrimination in the departments of the federal government? This was one of our objectives. While it was one of our objectives, it was not our main objective. We consider it is more important to get jobs for Negroes in national defense, so that they may get milk and bread for their babies than to get them in the army or navy or air corps, although we shall continue to fight to abolish discriminations in all departments of the government and the armed forces of the nation. This will be the next step in the fight of the march committee movement.

"The National Negro March on Washington committee would have been placed in an untenable, absurd and ridiculous position had it rejected its chief objective when offered by the President on the grounds that we didn't get everything we wanted as a pretext for marching anyhow.

3000 Hear Randolph Report On March; LaGuardia Makes Hit

Phila Tribune

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

NEW YORK (ANP)—Three thousand persons crowded into Salem M. Church, last Tuesday night to hear A. Philip Randolph, Mayor Fiorella H. LaGuardia, David Sarnoff and other persons identified with the circumstances surrounding the executive order issued by President Roosevelt barring discrimination in the National Defense program.

The occasion also marked the first public report from the Negro March on Washington Committee since its national director, Mr. Randolph, told a nation-wide radio audience on July 1 that the projected march had been found "unnecessary at this time" and therefore postponed.

No attempt was made to evade the fact that considerable criticism had been leveled at the march committee for its decision to call off the demonstration. In fact, the meeting was intended to give full explanation of the factors involved which prompted this momentous decision. Mr. Randolph, in a clear and forthright manner, succeeded in doing just that.

LaGuardia Scores

The remarks of Mayor LaGuardia, described by all previous speakers as the "unrelenting champion in favor of the executive order," were the climax of the evening.

"I am glad to be called upon to join in the discussion," he opened, "of what is a real landmark in the progress of democracy. I believe the executive order signed by President Roosevelt will remain one of the important public documents in our history.

"It may not be a literary gem," he continued. "Its meter might be defective in its poetry, but I am in a position to tell you that the man who signed it believed in it, in every line of it, in every word of every sentence of it."

Randolph Reports

Mr. Randolph also reviewed the circumstances leading to the idea of the march pointing to the need for the development of "the technique of mass pressure," a thing new to the Negro. He scored the "dreadful conspiracy of silence" on the part of the white press with one exception, that of "PM".

There was praise for the efforts of Mayor LaGuardia and disdain for William S. Knudsen, co-director of Office of Production Management. Coming to the controversial point, he said:

"Simply stated, the march was postponed because its main objective, namely, the issuance of an executive order banning discrimination in national defense, was secured in conference with the President.

"What about discrimination in the departments of the federal government? This was one of our objectives. While it was one of our objectives, it was not our main objective.

Jobs The Issue

"We consider that it is more important to get jobs for Negroes in National Defense than to get them in the Army or Navy or Air Corps, although we shall continue to fight to abolish discriminations in all departments of the government and the armed forces of the nation.

"The National Negro March on Washington Committee would have been placed in an untenable, absurd and ridiculous position had it rejected its chief objective when offered by the President on the grounds that we didn't get everything we wanted as a pretext for marching anyhow," he said.

Lester Granger of the National Urban League, Walter White of the NAACP, Dr. Channing H. Tobias of the Selective Service Administration and Frank P. Crosswaith of the Negro Labor Committee, all active members of the march committee, made short addresses.

In the place of Mark Ethridge, chairman of the Fair Employment Practice committee, was David Sarnoff, also a member and also president of the Radio Corporation of America, who spoke in behalf of the committee.

Watchtower

By Roy Wilkins

ONE of the easiest and most popular pastimes in our race is that of charging our leaders of various movements with "selling out." Let any man or set of men stick their heads above the common herd for a minute and try to do anything and, sooner or later (more often sooner) they are charged with selling out the interests of the group.

Roy Wilkins

Now, not all of them are honest and capable and doubtless many have actually and literally sold out. Others have been merely stupid and been led to slaughter. In the recent March-on-Washington proposal and its ending in the securing of an executive order from the President, there were the usual cries of "sell-out." For this reason it is revealing to read the comments of a daily newspaper syndicated columnist on the whole negotiation, giving his story of the actions of our leaders from the "white" point of view. I reproduce here Ray Tucker's column of June 28:

"Obdurate.—President Roosevelt's order forbidding discrimination against Negroes in defense factories was literally prized out of him by threat of a "march on Washington" by members of that race. The prospect of such a demonstration at this time threw the Administration into panic. They manipulated every lever in sight to prevent the affair.

"The director of the threatened march, A. Philip Randolph, wrote to the President several weeks ago, asking if he would address the group when it reached the capital on July 1. There was no reply for two weeks. Then Randolph, who heads the Brotherhood of Pullman Porters, received a letter from Mrs. Roosevelt. She said she had discussed the matter with her husband, and that he was sternly opposed to the idea. Last week Negro leaders were invited to New York by Mayor LaGuardia in his capacity as civilian defense director. He begged them to call off the demonstration, but they refused. President Roosevelt subsequently summoned the sponsors to the White House, and personally asked them to leave the matter to him. Again they declined.

"Mr. LaGuardia and Aubrey Williams, NYA director, attended this session. Mrs. Roosevelt, who was at Campobello off New Brunswick, tried by telephone to persuade them to listen to her and her husband's arguments. Still the Negro representatives, supported by the most prominent members of their race, refused to abandon the scheme.

"Mandate.—The climax came dramatically at a White House conference early this week. The dramatis personnae reveal the President's intense desire to avert a spectacle which inevitably would have political, social and economic repercussions. Besides Mayor LaGuardia, Mr. Williams and Social Security Coordinator Anna Rosenberg, F. D. R. called in OPMers Knudsen, Knox, Stimson and Hillman.

"The President opened the discussion by reiterating his firm opposition to the proposed 'march.' He declared that problems affecting the Negro race cannot be settled in that manner. He asked: 'What would happen if the Irish and Jewish people staged a march on Washington? It would be resented by the American people, because such a march would be considered as an effort to coerce the Government and make it do certain things.' Randolph replied that the Irish and Jewish people have no grievances, while the Negroes do, and added that all other forms of protest have proven ineffective. When Mr. Roosevelt refused to address the group on the ground that he does not speak to such assemblages, he was reminded that he once spoke before the American Youth Congress, which booed him when he denounced the Communists. F. D. R. soon left the room after turning over chairmanship of the meeting to Secretary Stimson.

"The practical Mayor LaGuardia then suggested issuance of a presidential order against discrimination on defense jobs. Both Mr. Knudsen and Mr. Hillman opposed this, because so many other factors are involved in the defense program. Both agreed, however, to use their 'influence' to insure the hiring of Negroes. Randolph and Walter White of the N. A. A. C. P. replied that 'education' and 'persuasion' have been tried and failed. Then it was that the President agreed to issue his mandate."

Note that this is not a boastful Negro leader (who has just sold out) declaring that the Administration was thrown "into a panic." This is the considered, published opinion of a white writer.

Note that with all the power of a most powerful administration brought to bear upon them, our men did not falter. The biggest names in the nation's capital did not awe them. The pressure from all the big "friends" of the Negro did not deter them. In the presence of, and listening to the condemnation of the Chief Executive himself, they stood their ground.

This is testing of a grinding and crushing sort. But they came through. Always it should be remembered, in every situation, that in this country with its overwhelming white majority, only the greatest skill in the use of the widest assortment of techniques, perfectly timed, can get results. That is why the cry of "sell out" should be used sparingly and only after obtaining all the facts and analyzing all the angles of the particular situation.

ADVERTISEMENT — ADVERTISEMENT

The Inquiring Reporter

THE QUESTION

"To guarantee the continuation of democracy, in the United States and the world, what do you think our country should do now?

THE ANSWERS

REX STOUT, author, lecturer, radio commentator, creator of the famous detective, "Nero Wolfe": "Declare war on Germany immediately and start fighting with all the weapons and men we have ready."

CLIFTON FADIMAN, book critic, New Yorker magazine, quiz-master "Information Please": "I don't see what else there is to do but fight at the drop of a hat. Seems to me the hat is about ready to be dropped. No sane American likes this prospect, but the alternatives are self-destruction or slavery."

SALLY RAND, dancer and actress. "We Americans know what the score is, and we know that the democratic team can win with our unhampered, all-out aid. Charlie Chaplin's double at Berchtesgaden can't frighten or stop us."

TALLULAH BANKHEAD, stage, screen and radio actress: "When there is an epidemic of a foul and fatal disease, the sane and humane thing to do is to innoculate against its spreading. The foulest and most fatal disesase that has ever blighted mankind is Hitlerism. To prevent this malignant growth from destroying the very roots and soul of democracy we should declare war now."

SERGEANT ALVIN C. YORK, World War hero No. 1 and chairman Tennessee Fight for Freedom Committee: "Some people say the ocean's too wide for the Germans to cross, but what would stop them if they whip England and Russia and make all those people work for them to make everything they need? We should do everything we can to win this war against the Nazis now."

EDMOND TAYLOR, former Chicago Tribune European correspondent, radio commentator, author of "Strategy of Terror": "This country should give the President an absolutely free hand to play the cards in any way he thinks best. He might make a mistake, but he is less likely to make a mistake than any other man in the country, and no policy of any kind can succeed unless it is backed up by the overwhelming majority of Americans who already support the Administration."

L. S. "LARRY" McPHAIL, President, Brooklyn Dodgers: "This country should present a solid and united front to the enemies of democracies. Individuals like Wheeler, Lindbergh and Nye are not patriotic Americans in this emergency."

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH, International President, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters (A. F. of L.): "I believe in complete and equal integration and active participation of all peoples of America without regard to race, creed, color or national origin in our democratic process as a basis for the mobilization of genuine national unity to reinforce, fortify and support the foreign and domestic policy of President Roosevelt in the interest of national defense."

VERY REV. C. J. CALLAN (O. P.), Catholic editor, educator, author, Hawthorne, N. Y.: "I favor the use of all our resources, industrial, financial and military and the exercise of all our strength on land, sea and in the air to conquer the worst menace that democracy and religion have ever encountered."

ROBERT I. RANDALL, 18, Park Ridge, N. J.: "To defend democracy we must fight for it ourselves—not leave that to others while we merely talk. For myself, I have applied for training as an aviator in Canada. I hope, eventually, to be an Eagle in the Royal Air Force. The youth of this country is ashamed of Lindbergh who, instead of flying for democracy, is talking for Hitler."

HAROLD VON SCHMIDT, Westport, Conn., illustrator, president New York Illustrators' Club: "I believe we can preserve democracy now only by fighting. We are not afraid of Hitler—we will not accept Nazism. We despise the degradation of all that is decent and spiritual in men. Let us declare war now while our aid will insure the defeat of Hitler with the least cost in blood and dollars."

WALLACE DEUEL, former correspondent, Chicago Daily News and N. Y. Post: "We should do everything possible, in whatever way is most effective, to bring about the defeat of Germany in the present war—a thing which is essential for the preservation of our own national institutions and independence."

THE NEW YORK AMSTERDAM STAR-NEWS

Saturday, August 9, 1941

Federal Workers Ask Executive Order on Government Employment Bias

Group Scores Discrimination

Two-Day Convention In Capital Ends In Resolutions

WASHINGTON—Demanding an executive order covering the employment of Negroes in Government jobs as well as in defense industries, the United Federal Workers of America adopted a resolution to this effect as part of their program in the recently held two-day convention which met in Washington.

Decrying the discriminatory practices against Negroes, the committee assigned to look into the governmental program reported in favor of such an order and further recommended the support of an anti-discrimination bill. Each of the locals of the order was called upon for full cooperation in putting over the program to end discrimination against Negroes in the Government agencies.

It was further recommended that a Federal unit be set up to implement the executive order requested and to see that its provisions were carried out.

A crack was also taken at the vicious civil service system which permits appointment officers to pass over Negroes. The group recommended that in such cases, when an appointment officer passes over the persons at the top of the list submitted to him and gives a position to one lower, he must submit in writing to the Civil Service Commission his reason for so doing.

F. D. Always Had Power to End Defense Bias

INSTITUTE, W.Va.—Amazement over the fact that President Roosevelt was so late discovering his power to attack discrimination in national defense industries was expressed by Dr. Rayford W. Logan of Howard University here last week.

Dr. Logan, who is chairman of the Committee on Participation in the National Defense Program, delivered the keynote address before the joint opening session of the American Teachers' Association and the Parent-Teacher Congress at West Virginia State College, Tuesday night.

Executive Order Tardy

He dealt at some length with the President's June 25 executive order. Recalling that it was issued "by virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and by the statutes," Dr. Logan said:

"Since the last amendment to the Constitution was promulgated many years ago, the President has had that power for many years, as far as the Constitution is concerned . . .

Source Vague

"The vagueness and the plurality of the term 'statutes' justifies our conclusion that, as far as they, too, are concerned, the President has long had the power. Why, then, did he suddenly find it on June 25?"

The reasons, he explained, were the contemplated job march on Washington, Hitler's march against Russia and "the accumulated, persistent demands of various organizations."

League, NAACP "Asleep"

Another phase of Dr. Logan's address was devoted to what he termed the "profound slumbers of the National Urban League and the NAACP," as one of the principal reasons for our failure to achieve more benefits from the government's defense expansion.

"It is an indisputable fact," he said, "that our two principal pressure groups, to which we are entitled to look for leadership, were sound asleep at the switch in the early days of the program, however laudable their efforts and their services may have been in other fields . . .

Hampton First to Act

"It remained for Hampton Institute to call, in November, 1940, the first national conference on the colored race's part in national defense."

Dr. Logan summed up the limited progress finally made in military and industrial consideration, crediting the latter primarily to the growing shortage of white skilled labor, and added:

Credits Hitler and Pals

"I wish that I could convince myself that it has been solely the efforts of our pressure groups that have led to this improved situation. But if we are realistic, we must admit that Mr. Hitler, with his stooge, Mussolini, and now the Emperor of Japan, has given us more jobs than all of us put together.

"It would be disastrous for some of our unemployed if the Russian counter-offensive were to drive the Germans too soon back in their foul country. It would be tragic for thousands if peace were declared tonight."

Should Hit Labor, Too

The speaker then attacked the Presiden[illegible] executive order for

The New York Age

THE PRESIDENT'S LATEST EXECUTIVE ORDER

THE PRESIDENT took another big step forward for national unity when he ordered all departments of the federal government to cease discrimination in the matter of employment on account of race, creed and color. The new order should go a long way toward putting an end to the justifiable feeling among Negroes that they are barred from certain jobs under the Federal Civil Service and denied promotions in other government departments because of their race.

If the order is applied fully, it should cover both the Army and Navy and should revolutionize the policy of these departments. If these departments should ignore this order, the matter should be again called to the President's attention so that the Secretaries of War and The Navy may be told "this means you, too."

In our opinion the biggest development of the war emergency has been the two orders by President Roosevelt to end discrimination in those private industries holding government contracts and to put an end to discrimination in the various departments of the federal government. This is a development for which Negroes have fought, hoped and dreamed for since Emancipation. Now that is is an accomplished fact, it's up to us, as a group to so deport ourselves in the new positions opening up to us that those who have been opposed to giving the Negro equal citizenship rights will not be able to say that we are incompetent or unable to get along with other racial groups. Negroes going into such jobs are pioneers for their race and can by their conduct either make a bright future for those who are to come after them, or make it quite difficult for them.

We should realize that social improvements cannot be brought about through legislation or by executive order alone. Unless such legislation is backed up by public opinion, it becomes like the late but not lamented Prohibition Law, just another law to be broken.

It's up to the Negro now to stop complaining about not having a chance and make the most of all opportunities opening up to us.

AFL Unions Blamed For Blocking And Halting Negro Defense Jobs

FEP Will Seek Remedy; Clean House Urged

Scoff at FDR's Executive Order To Industry

By ALVIN E. WHITE

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—Negro employment in defense industies is being blocked and halted by reactionary unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, which control the work vital in many defense plants, and no amount of "paper records" will offset the actual records of these unions concerning Negro labor.

The Fair Employment Practices committee recognizes this fact, it is believed, and will set about seeking some remedy if the unions themselves do not clean house.

The chief offender along this line is the American Federation of Labor, which with its numerous unions national in scope, refusing by one device or another admission of Negroes into the organization, scoff at the President's executive order to industry and literally thumb their noses at the FEP.

Although the AFL has from time to time gone on record in open convention as being "opposed" to the discrimination practiced against Negroes, nothing has been done to remedy a situation which is known to exist in the national unions.

FOUGHT BLACK MARK

As far back as 1934, it is reported A. Philip Randolph fought on the floor of the convention to have this black mark eradicated. The convention as a whole voted to "look into the matter" and authorized the president, William L. Green, to appoint a committee to see what could be done.

The chief sought out members of top-ranking unions, the mine workers, which was his own union, the barbers, the hodcarriers and two other groups and asked them to name a member to the committee of five to conduct the investigation.

John Brophy, now representing Phillip Murray of the CIO on the FEP, was one of those appointed and also named secretary to the group.

Hearings, public, were ordered held in Washington in the executive chambers of the AFL. These ran two days with a number of local persons appearing to testify before the group. Each told a story condemning the attitude of the A

...ry to Afro

P. ... And as each story was told, the picture was clearer and clearer that the AFL was even then on the spot.

UP TO GREEN

The committee then, at the end of the two days, sought to continue its work by having hearings in other key cities, New York, Chicago, St. Louis, and other spots throughout the country.

Instead of moving on to do this, the group decided to put the matter up to Mr. Green, who was fully cognizant of what was being shown in the hearings.

Green vetoed the suggestion declaring it would cost too much and recommended that the committee make its report to a special executive committee instead of the convention which had authorized the group.

During the hearings, the committee asked the witnesses for specific acts and suggested remedies. Each person felt that an educational program carried on by the AFL would do much to eradicate the feeling against Negroes.

All national unions in the AFL have autonomy, which in common words is the same thing as states' rights so often heard discussed in connection with legislation concerning Negroes.

And on this is based the right of the unions to bar Negroes. But when the convention met the year following the hearings, A. Philip Randolph again insisted that the recommendations of the special committee be adopted. A bitter battle ensued, but the recommendations were shelved.

Brophy, in discussing the policies of the CIO, pointed out the constitution of his organization blasts racial discrimination in the second article, first paragraph, which states:

"To bring about the effective organization of the working men and women of America, regardless of race, creed, color, or nationally, and to unite them for common action into labor unions for their mutual aid and protection."

"There are prejudices existing among individuals in the CIO but we do not let them run the organization nor prohibit the membership of Negroes," said Mr. Brophy.

The White House Finally Yields To Demand For An Order Forbidding Discrimination Against Negoes in Federal Employment

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON, D. C.—On July 24, last, this observer discussed in a press release widely published and circulated President Roosevelt's Executive Order, No. 8802, seeking to encourage full participation in the National Defense Program by all citizens of the United States.

As a gesture of good will, aimed at discrimination in industrial employment, it was well received and widely praised. This writer at the time, however, called attention to the fact that the order prescribed no penalties, and that it was being sabotaged by war department officials in placing contracts with industry by technical interpretations not in keeping with the spirit and apparent intentions of the presidential order.

Further, it was pointed out that the factor most largely contributing to the general unhappiness of the Negro group is the attitude of government itself in discriminating against the employment of capable colored men and women who have successfully passed Civil Service examinations, and the segregation and humiliation of the few who have successfully broken through the barriers of racial intolerance and injustice.

Government Greatest Offender

Still further, it was declared that the president had overlooked the fact that the sorest spot of all in this meanness is government itself, and that personnel officers of government departments continue with impunity to disregard the just claims of colored men and women who have qualified for positions under the government, and finally that:

"Genuine proof of sincerity that national unity is being sought can only be established by just treatment of all elements of our American democracy. That: A Supplemental Presidential Order wiping out the last vestiges of present undemocratic, un-American practices and discriminations should be immediatey forthcoming. And that, an ounce of such direct action will sweep away a ton of political gestures and clever maneuverings."

Immediately upon publication, it is reliably reported, the article was called to the attention of war department officials, other cabinet officers, and to the attention of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee of the Office of Production Management. Secretary Henry L. Stimson of the war department, it has been published, issued to department heads at once instructions that colored eligibles certified by the Civil Service Commission must be employed regardless of race and creed.

Fair Practices Committee Acts

Following up the matter, the Fair Employment Practice Committee reported to the president that discriminations against colored eligibles continue in the federal establishment.

The president, after receiving this report, has complied with the requests which have been made by the Negro Press, Negro Social Welfare and Agitator Organizations, and by thousands of white and colored individuals who have been writing the White House, and United States Senators and Representatives since the National Defense Program began to get underway, and has issued the Supplemental Order demanded.

Government Agencies Instructed Not To Discriminate

All government departments and independent agencies are instructed by the president not to discriminate in any respect, and that they are to make a thorough examination of their personnel policies and practices that they may be able to assure the chief executive that the doors of empoyment are open to all loyal and qualified workers "regardless of creed, race, or national origin."

This policy of non-discrimination in federal employment, if effectively enforced, should go far toward allaying the dangerously low morale of the Negro group which has had to prosecute an uphill fight has had to prosemum of decent treatment at the hands of (1) war department officials in connection with the Selective Service Act. (2) army camp and cantonment commanders. (3) in practically every contact they had with officials charged with the responsibility of effectively getting our defense machine in high gear. (4) with industry, and (5) with labor organizations.

A Worth-While Fight

The fight nevertheless has been worth-while. It has brought the democratic principle of fair-play into discussions from which formerly it was excluded. Best of all, it has, once again, proved that a cause which has right on its side, if intelligently, forcefully and courageously presented, will always win over narrow racial bias, hate, and even centuries-old, traditional meanness.

RACE WORKERS GIVEN RUN-AROUND

The Globe Trotter • By Cliff Mackay

The Fight Is Not Over

THE PRESIDENT'S memorable Executive Order calling for the removal of job discrimination in industries is now more than two months old, but in most instances the barriers erected by lily-white unions and prejudiced employers remain undisturbed.

Not a single one of the American Federation of Labor unions has removed from its Constitution the proviso limiting membership to "Gentile, white, Americans."

A smattering of jobs have been obtained in scattered industries, but for the most part the aircraft industry, which practiced the most pernicious color exclusion policy, has stubbornly refused to lower its "white only" signs.

GOVERNMENT WORST

Most adamant of all employers in refusing to give black workers an equal chance with other Americans is the government itself. A fairly definite pattern has been set by the government in the employment of Negro workers no matter how brilliant they may be, or how well qualified.

To those few who have luckily slipped through the tight color line drawn around many federal civil service jobs, promotions are simply not in order.

A good example is the Fourth Corps Area Quartermaster's Office located in Atlanta. For years the lovly position of messenger in this office has been labeled for Negro workers only. That was when the job paid $50 a month. Since the emergency the messenger poistions have been placed under civil service and the pay increased to $90 monthly. All the Negro messengers, but two, have disappeared and white men have taken their places.

REMAIN MESSENGERS

The two Negro messengers month in and month out remain just that—messengers. White youths start as messengers and after the passing of two or three months are certified as junior clerks at the higher pay of $1440 annually. Other white messengers quickly take their places, although there is a long list of Negroes who have qualified for these positions. This is but one isolated case of the many hundreds that could be cited.

President Roosevelt's order remains for the most part conspicuously ignored. From all appearances the chief result of its issuance has been to lull those who previously were conducting the militant campaign for jobs into a false sense of achievement.

This situation of course is not chargegable to the President. The Order, unquestionably was issued in good faith, even if the nation's white press did find it expedient to clamp down upon it one of the most rigorous censorships in world history.

LEADERS ARE BLAMED

The fact that it has not brought about the desired result should be attributed largely to our leaders who blandly accepted it as a panacea for the economic ills which have afflicted Negroes as a race long before the present national emergency.

Even President Roosevelt foresaw that the order itself would not serve to change the prejudiced beliefs of many American union leaders and industrialists now so busily engaged in turning out weapons to insure the perpetuation of the "free American way of life."

That is why he saw the necessity of setting up the Fair Employment Practices Committee. And this committee, which includes two members of our race, remains powerless unless these widespread cases of employment discrimination are reported. The committee itself cannot ferret out these color-blind employers.

MUST ROUSE OURSELVES

We must rouse ourselves from this false belief that the Executive Order will automatically open long-closed avenues of employment. The order must be seen in its true light. It is merely a tool to help us prize open these doors, not the means.

The fight for jobs must be started again with renewed fury, and continued without letup until the undemocratic practice of barring Americans from economic opportunity because of color is wiped out forever.

Every one of us must make ourselves a committee of one to report instances of job discrimination to the President's Fair Employment Practices committee. A constant flood of these reports should be started and continue unabated until the tragic plight of colored Americans in the midst of this national defense boom is recognized.

Wishful thinking and begging will not get results. That is not the American way of doing it. All of our achievements in the past have come through fighting. And to battle we must now rally if we are to get anything like our fair share of employment resulting from the present emergency.

Atlanta Daily World
The Nation's Only Colored Daily Newspaper
VOLUME 14, NUMBER 111
ATLANTA, GA., SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1941

RANDOLPH URGES CONTINUED FIGHT FOR JOBS IN U. S. DEFENSE PROGRAM

The Meridian Progress
VOLUME 1, NUMBER 8
MERIDIAN, MISS., SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1941

Advises U Mass Pres As Race

M. P. W Asks Re Discrimina

In a brilliant and dress, delivered before appreciative audience Convention, night national President of hood of Sleeping Car Negroes to continue their share of jobs in program.

Predicting a return days of the depression, ly following the curre outstanding leader a less Negroes through t ganized efforts make t American life more they will be fighting to relief rolls when the w

Appearing as one of speakers at a public m sponsored by the Atlant Political League, Mr. pointed the way to a que against Negroes termed, the "mass pres politics and power eco

"It will not matte "how just, or logica the Negro may be, able to develop the instrument, the age temperament, and t what he wants."

EXPLAINS D. C. MARCH PROPOSAL

The speaker gave count of his propos Washington," which unprecedented Ex to abolish discrimin phases of the defen brought about the dent Roosevelt of t ment Practice Comm

He rated how he resort to this new get results after a ference with the P high governmental o to get results.

The illuminating built around this fund ciple, which was stat out-set, "Every liberal revolution seeks to tra slave into a free wo was the aim of the Ci War did not complete tion, and since that t methods have been t this end."

M. P. Webster, Firs Vice-President of th also appearing on spoke at length of and development o union of Sleeping C

He explained that ference of all railroa was definitely decide present plight of the tive firemen was th "As a result," he sa zation of this gro No. 1 job of th a Provisional Committee was appointed to put this program over.'

VIGILANCE IS URGED

Mr. Webster, also a member of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee urged Negroes in their respective communities become vigilant and to report all forms of discriminations in the defense program to this committee.

John Wesley Dobbs, President of the League, who introduced the two speakers made a strong appeal to Negroes in Atlanta to continue to register and vote. He deplored the spirit of Hitlerism both in Europe and in Georgia and outlined a far-reaching program, which can be put over with 10,000 registered voters.

The mass meeting was arranged through the combined efforts of Mr. Dobbs, Rev. John Clarence Wright and William Y. Bell, Jr., Secretary of the Atlanta Urban League.

Amsterdam

'C Gets More Reports On efense Bias; Press 'Leak' Hit

Goodyear Emergency Corporation, Chrysler Corporation, Detroit Tank Ar- d Army, Navy and OPM district offices in Philadelphia were charged with ination in defense employment in a report from the N. A. A. C. P. to the Fair yment Practice Committee this week. Meanwhile, Chairman Mark Ethridge. xecutive Secretary Lawrence Cramer, met with representatives of various Ur- eagues and N. A. A. C. P. branches here in New York last week in preparation gional hearings here later this fall and from Washington, D. C., repercussions of prematurely announced" FEP appointment of Truman Gibson as assistant to er created a storm.

m Petersburg, Va., an- cement that 20 Negro car- s start work this week con- cting two regimental chap- s' headquarters buildings at p Lee there was said to mark first time Negroes had been d by Doyle and Russell-Wise struction Company there.

OPM Claims Credit

dit for the placing of the nters was claimed by OPM, eported that its repre- after receiving assur- m H. W. Roberts, project for the contractors, that ation was not practiced concern, requested the g of Negro workers.

it report on discriminating rns this week, the N. A. A. submitted an affidavit from Rev. J. O. Clark, president, sonville, Ind., N. A. A. C. P. ch, attesting that the Good- Company, makers of bags of owder, employed Negro wo- only as maids and janitresses, refused applicants in other egories, although hiring large mbers of white women in cilled capacities who, it was worn, were taken on inexperi- nced and trained at the plant

Rejected 3 Times

In Detroit, the N. A. A. C. P. reported, Miss Lela P. Leverette, holding junior and senior typist Civil Service rating, attested in an affidavit that although certified three times, twice to the Detroit Tank Arsenal and once to the Chrysler Corporation for work with the Navy Department, she had been rejected thus far, each time after she had submitted her picture upon request.

Miss Mabel Hewlett, of Philadelphia, with similar Civil Service rating and five years' typist experience in her local Department of Public Assistance, supplied the N. A. A. C. P. with affidavits to the effect that she had been interviewed and rejected by the finance department of the U. S. Army Philadelphia Naval Aircraft factory supply department and the Division of Priorities of the OPM office in the Quaker City, although several whites from her own office and whose qualifications and experience were below hers, were hired.

War Department Angry

In Washington, War Department officials were reported "disturbed" by the "leak" to the press resulting in publication last week of appointment of Truman K. Gibson, Chicago attorney and at present assistant to William Hastie, civilian aide to the Secretary of War, as assistant to FEPC Executive Secretary Cramer.

The appointment, about which nothing official has further been revealed but which is considered pretty certain, is said to have been severely criticized by War Department authorities on the grounds that the move was contemplated without submission first of a request for Gibson's release from his present duties.

Gibson himself had nothing to referring questioners to "the sources" and not his office. dson and G. James Industry; Miss Frieda Miller, State industrial commissioner; John Habberton, also of the Governor's Committee; Lester Granger, National Urban League; Charles Berkley, Brooklyn Urban League; Charles Collier, New York Urban League; Walter White, N. A. A. C. P., and Richard Walker, U. S. Employment Service.

At this meeting, it was learned, discussion centered around specific firms in the New York area which have refused to cooperate with the executive order against bias, but names of these firms were withheld.

The question of employment of Negroes by firms holding defense contracts and the manner in which the regional hearings scheduled for this Fall here will be held were also discussed, it was said, but no official statement was released.

Ethridge and Cramer left Thursday for Hartford, Conn., to prove the situation at the Colt Firearms plant, where officials have steadfastly refused to comply with the executive order. Cramer passed back through New York Friday, was scheduled for another conference with officials of the local Social Security office, which seeks to coordinate the job-seeking activities of local agencies, but did not attend the meeting because of "press of business in Washington," it was reported.

At the meeting of the committee Friday in Washington, it is believed that the matter of press relations and the names of several new appointees provided the major themes of discussion, but again indications that the fuss over the Gibson announcement was influencing the committee procedure was seen in the fact that not a scrap of official news could be obtained after the conference.—Bourne.

'We Needed a Good Lynching,' Texas Mobster Declares

Drag 25-Year-Old Wounded Victim Through Streets Behind Automobile

By REUBEN RITCHIE

(Editor's Note: Reuben Ritchie is not the name of the writer of this eye-witness story of Monday morning's lynching of a Negro in Texarkana, Texas. The writer, for obvious reasons, has passed as a white man for many years; he is prominent in business and social circles in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas, and is the son of a wealthy white cotton planter and a colored woman.)

TEXARKANA, Texas (Special).—"This town's been needin' a good lynchin' for a long time. We gotta keep these damned niggers from gettin' too uppity, an' besides, the dirty nigger was guilty." The speaker was a white man, ragged, unkempt and foul-smelling, as though he had been sleeping all night in a corral.

He had just left the scene of the lynching of Willie Vinson, 25-year-old colored youth, taken in a dying condition from Texarkana Hospital at 12:32 A. M. Monday and, eight minutes later, strung up to a cotton gin winch on Factory Street by a mob of over 50 whites, 20 of whom traveled in three automobiles.

I walked along with the man for a block or so, stifling the inclination to shoot him down in cold blood, like they had lynched the Negro boy. I was angry because, right in the midst of a war for democracy and at a time when the Federal Government is leaning over backward to give captured Axis spies and saboteurs the full protection of the law, cowardly lynchers, like skulking rats, could run rampant in open defiance of all the rules of decency and fairness and nothing done about it.

Crying Babies

He turned off into the shadows of a side street. Men and women, bile from the slum areas around the tracks, others well-to-do and high in the political and social life of this teeming city that is the focal point of four States, were hurrying past me to the 200 block on Factory Street, which is on the outskirts of the city, to view the body. Some wore trousers and coats pulled hastily over their pajamas; women carrying crying babies in their arms and scantily clad, slithered through the hot, sultry night on their way to the scene. I heard strange comment as they passed; comment not so strange, however, when it is realized that this town is, as the song says, "Deep in the Heart of Texas."

"The nigger tried to rape a white woman." . . . "Wish I had been there when they dragged the black b—— from out of the hospital." . . . "These niggers gotta learn that white folks won't stand 'em puttin' their black han's on white women." . . . "Yeah, nigger oughta be lynched for even thinkin' about a white woman."

"You shore they got th' right nigger?" . . . "What in hell is the difference? Nigger is a nigger an' the woman says he looked like the one that tried to grab her."

Dragged Vinson

At 12:32, three men entered the front door of the hospital, walked quickly past Margaret Mullin, the night supervisor, who said she was talking on the telephone when they came in, rushed to the basement steps nearby and a moment later came out dragging their moaning, half-dead victim with them. The Negro had been put in

(Continued on Page 21)

Members of the Fair Employment Practice committee of OPM were received by President Roosevelt in his study last Saturday. They gave the Chief Executive a first-hand report of their work and as to the effect of his recent order banning discrimination in industrial employment. Standing around the President, left to right: Mark Ethridge, Louisville, chairman; Earl B. Dickerson, Chicago, race member; John Brophy, Washington; Milton P. Webster, Chicago, race member; David Sarnoff, New York, and Lawrence Cramer, executive secretary.—A.P.

Atlanta Daily World
The Nation's Only Colored Daily Newspaper
VOLUME 14, NUMBER 107
ATLANTA, GEORGIA, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1941
PRICE FIVE CENTS

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION IS 'COLD' TO FDR'S ORDER

No Change Is Contemplated By Chairman

Says Any Other Action Would Be Presumptious

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(
The United States Civil Commission will "carry President's Order" but contem no specific changes in its poli promoting a program of ing Negroes in Civil Service jo Government departments trying whites in Civil Servi aminations only wherever ment heads have a choice.

This was the view
Harry
the Commission in answer
tions put to him by officials National Negro Congress.

"The Civil Service Comm does not intend to send o specific order to departm the basis of the President's order," Mitchell said, "bec believe this would be presu and also because I do not we can do more than has bee already."

Questioned about the
of the discretionary powers
Civil Service, whereby any the three highest ranking may be appointed, Mitch

"If there are three Neg ing the highest ratings, a which is very rare, we w
one of them, but if there whites and one Negro, le then I cannot say that w follow a rule of appointing in preference to a white pe

On the matter of se units for Negro workers, which the Civil Service
sion now advocates, Mitc
it was his personal belief is still the best policy b precludes friction between and whites in the depar
He added, however, that take the matter up with missioners as a body.

When he was pressed at answer to the whether the Civil Servi was interested in carry civil order, the said he we

NEGRO LABOR NEWS, SATURD

FAIR EMPLOYMENT PRACTICE BODY INVESTIGATES CALIFORNIA JIM CROW AGAINST NEGROES IN DEFENSE JOBS

Both Sides of Ledger Heard In Los Angeles As Government Seeks To Crack Open "Closed" Plants For Black Workers.

LOS ANGELES, Calif. —(ANP)— The wild and wooly West, which less than a year ago boasted of its economic vigilante-ism against Negroes in defense industries, was neither wild nor wooly this week as the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice opened its first public hearing on defense discrimination here on October 20.

Throwing the spotlight on this frontier section, the FEPC was scheduled to reveal through its hearings just what the government has accomplished in its drive against employment bias, and also what additional steps must be taken if unions and employers are to be forced to observe Executive Order No. 8802.

The government's achievements, attained through the cooperation of FEPC and OPM with the offices of Dr. Robert C. Weaver of the Negro employment and training branch and Dr. Will Alexander of the minority groups branch are appreciable in this section.

Aircraft Industries Employ Negroes

Typical of this progress has been the breaks in the military aircraft front which was widely publicized a year ago. As the committee hearings opened Monday, four of the six leading manufacturers of aircraft were employing Negro workers in their plants where only one employed Negro skilled workers six months before.

On the other hand, though, two of the large companies still had no Negro employes and the FEP was expected to crack down on their management of one and the closed ship union of the other for their barriers against colored workers.

The good side included:

1.—Lockheed-Vega Aircraft Company, which two months ago announced a sensational change in employment policies and began the immediate hiring of Negroes in all crafts in which they were skilled and trained. Fifteen Negro production workers went to work in this plant at once and more than 100 were called in for tests and interviews.

2.—North American Aviation, Inc., which called in its first five Negro production workers in Kansas City, Kansas, last week indirect repudiation of the March statement of J. H. Kindleberger, president, that Negroes would only be employed as janitors and custodians.

3.—Douglas Aircraft Corporation, the first of the West Coast companies to employ Negro skilled and semi-skilled workers, which has increased its number of Negro employes in this category in the last few weeks.

4.—Consolidated Aircraft Company, which is still negotiating with OPM for the employment of Negro skilled workers, but which has attempted to escape the scrutiny of FEP by hiring more than 135 Negro janitors and unskilled workers in the last few weeks.

Lilly-White Shops

The two plants which the OPM agencies failed to crack and which they are reported to have certified to the FEP are the Vultee Aircraft Co., whose president has not yet retracted his statement that "only members of the Caucasian race" will be employed in his plant, and the Boeing Aircraft Company in Seattle where Negro workers are still barred through a closed shop contract held by the International Association of Machinist. This same machinists' union is bitterly opposing the integration of Negro workers into the Vultee plant in Nashville.

Several factors are credited with the breaking of the solid anti-Negro front on the West Coast defense horizon.

Chief among these has been the close cooperation between the offices of Dr. Weaver and Dr. Alexander and the Committee on Fair Employment Practices. Soon after the committee picked Los Angeles as the scene of its first hearing, representatives of the Negro employment and training and the minority groups branches concentrated their efforts on the West Coast area and put the pressure on recalcitrant employers and union officials. The threat of certification to the FEP is credited with the quick results in some cases.

The breaks on the West Coast front have not been confined to the aviation field. Recently Negro shipfitters who had complained to OPM were hired for the first time in the Too and Moore shipyards and in diesel engine shops in this area.

Newspaperman In FEPC Job

Committee Makes 1st Call on President Regarding Bias

G. James Fleming, formerly managing editor of the Philadelphia Tribune, was appointed to the position of assistant to the excutive secretary of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee, it was announced this week.

G. J. Fleming

Recommendations for the positions were said to have been by the Virgin Islands Civic Association with headquarters in New York. Fleming, who was born in the Virgin Islands was educated at Hampton Institute and the University of Wisconsin where he obtained his Phi Betta Kappa Key. He also attended the University of Pennsylvania.

Fleming is a well-known newspaperman and has worked on many of the leading weeklies of the country. He is married and makes his home in Philadelphia.

WASHINGTON, Sept. (ANP). —The six-man OPM Fair Practice Committee made its first call on President Roosevelt Wednesday morning, accompanied by the executive secretary, Lawrence Cramer.

Absent were Philip Murray of the CIO and William Green of the AFL. John Brophy substituted for Murray. Their discussion with the President was brief, but they presented the recommendations of the Council of Personnel Administrators which moved to eliminate discrimination against colored persons in the hiring of Government workers.

Mark Ethridge, the chairman, said the committee had received only scattering complaints to date but these were being investigated. October 1 and 2 have been set as dates for the committee meeting in Los Angeles, where it will conduct an investigation on complaints of discrimination against minority groups. Similar hearings are scheduled for New York City and Chicago but no date has been set for these.

The committee revealed that it had received reports of discriminatory practices in several areas, including the west coast aviation industries. Open sessions will hear complaints from organizations and individuals and then hold conferences on the problems presented with the Government's training, labor supply and employment agencies in that area.

Colonel F. J. McSherry, director of OPM's defense training branch, told the committee that he is immediately placing 200 new Negro trainees in west coast schools in anticipation of future needs resulting from changes in employment policies on the part of some defense industries.

New York has been reported to the committee where four com- [illegible] said to be discriminat- were instructed to prepare these cases for action by the committee.

Negro Congress Doomed

CAYTON BELIEVES ORGANIZATION WILL PASS FROM THE SCENE

BY HORACE R. CAYTON

I PREDICT that within the next few months the Negro Congress, newest and most obstreperous of the national Negro organizations, will quietly pass from the scene. The reason for the Congress' possible fold will be the same old one of lack of support. The reason for the withdrawing of the support will be connected with the war, the CIO, John L. Lewis and the Communist party. Here is the story as I predict it will happen:

Mr. Cayton

The National Negro Congress started out with a bang. It was mostly a left-inspired organization, but it had liberal and progressive leaders, such as A. Philip Randolph and Lester Granger. Gradually, however, as the Congress never became an organization supported by a membership but remained pretty much a paper front, the financial control, which meant the policy forming, fell into two hands: the Communist party and John L. Lewis of the CIO. It was not that John L. Lewis told the Congress what to do, but rather that the Congress found it convenient to do the things Lewis would support. For the past few years most of the money put into the Congress came from Lewis; the rest was supplied by the extreme left. Everything was swell as long as Lewis and the Communists saw eye to eye, but with Lewis joining the America First crowd (who look as much like Fascists as anything on the American scene) and opposing aid to Russia, things have begun to take on another hue.

LEWIS WILL TURN

The Communists have always wanted a national figure like Lewis to go along with and it will be with great reluctance that they let the big fellow get away. If possible they will try to go along and follow his domestic policy and not raise too many questions about his foreign policy. But I am afraid the choice will not be up to them. It's my prediction that Lewis will turn on his former left friends and oppose them as bitterly as he has previously supported them. The payoff will come at the forthcoming CIO national convention. At that time the question of intervention and all out aid to England and the Soviet Union will be brought up on the floor. The leftists will vote with the conservative members of the CIO, leaving Lewis pretty much alone, perhaps even out on a limb.

BUT in winning aid for the Soviet Union the Communist will lose a strong friend and the National Negro Congress will lose a strong financial supporter. Lewis may even call upon the various unions within the CIO to withdraw any aid that they might have been giving the Congress. Whether he takes this latter step or not, most of them will withdraw their assistance in a stampede to disassociate themselves with the left after Lewis withdraws his support.

FURTHER LOSSES

For another reason, the Congress will suffer further losses in income and prestige. The entire Communist party of America is sort of in the way of the Soviet Embassy. At the present time most everyone, except the die-hard conservatives and the incipient Fascists, are in favor of giving all the aid possible to Russia. When the embassy is trying to iron out these delicate negotiations it is sort of embarrassing to have the "Daily Worker" connect up the aid to Russia program with a campaign to get Browder out of jail. Sooner or later the Comintern will step down on the boys and tell them to soft pedal it until Russia gets the aid that she wants and so sorely needs. The budget of the whole American party will perhaps be cut and the Negro Congress will stand in the way of losing a portion of its support from that direction.

MOST of the more astute race politicians have become aware of the impending shift and have pulled out. A. Philip Randolph quit last spring, when he fell out with John P. Davis, the factotum of the Congress. Lester Granger left even before, as did Henry Johnson of the Packing House Workers' Union. Others have fallen out along the way, and after the coming CIO convention, when the big fellow puts the heat on the left, the desertions will be wholesale.

GET ON PAYROLL

As one sincerely interested in employment for Negroes, I am sorry to see this source of money get out of the hands of the colored brethren. In view of this deep concern, I would like to pass on a little advice to the Negro America First committee—the little handful of die-hard Republican payrollers. Hurry up and organize a national organization of Negroes like the Congress, but with no Communist in it. Then when Lewis dismisses the National Negro Congress, go to him and ask for support. If you do this soon enough and have a good enough argument the big fellow may put you on his payroll—that is, if you can stand the company.

March On Washington Committee Schedules Meeting In Chicago

CHICAGO, Ill.—Plans are afoot to stage a huge public meeting by the March-on-Washington Committee here on Sunday, September 28, for the purpose of making a report to the nation in the midwest. The meeting will be under the auspices of the Chicago Division of the March-on-Washington movement whose local Director is Dr. Charles Wesley Burton.

Speakers on this occasion will include A. Philip Randolph, national director of the March-on-Washington Committee; Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Lester B. Granger, assistant executive secretary of the National Urban League; M. P. Webster, first international vice-president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and a member of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee; Earl B. Dickerson of Chicago's Aldermanic Board and also a member of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee. An invitation has been sent to Mark Ethridge, chairman of the Fair Employment Practice Committee, to address the meeting.

This meeting will be a part of the program to mobilize public sentiment behind the President's Executive Order and the Fair Employment Practice Committee to ban discriminations in National Defense on account of race, creed, color or national origin.

OPINION

BULLETS FOR INDIVIDUALS, ONLY GAS FOR MOBS

A mob of a few hundred men attacked the Roxboro, N.C., jail to lynch a prisoner and destroyed several thousand dollars worth of property.

The sheriff defended the jail with tear gas bombs. Had he been a city policeman chasing a single suspect he would likely have drawn a revolver and shot the fugitive.

Dixie jails are not armed with machine guns and cannon to repel lynchers, but every policeman can and does shoot individual persons suspected of a crime merely because they run.

There seem to be two morals to this. One is not to run from cops.

March on Washington

The other is that in numbers there is safety. That is the reason why the March on Washington was important.

One individual marching up and down Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the White House denouncing race prejudice is arrested as a crank and spirited away by police.

Ten thousand persons get respectful attention. The public feels there must be something radically wrong when a crowd is moved to demonstrate against injustice.

Because of the many requests received for quotations from, or the full text of the President's recent Executive Order, we have reproduced the text in full, below.

The Committee on Fair Employment Practice established under Section 3 of the Order, has now been named, and consists of the following persons: MARK F. ETHRIDGE, Chairman - PHILIP MURRAY - WILLIAM GREEN - MILTON P. WEBSTER - EARL B. DICKERSON - DAVID SARNOFF.

Department of Industrial Relations
NATIONAL URBAN LEAGUE
1133 Broadway
New York City
July 23, 1941

EXECUTIVE ORDER

"REAFFIRMING POLICY OF FULL PARTICIPATION IN THE DEFENSE PROGRAM BY ALL PERSONS, REGARDLESS OF RACE, CREED, COLOR, OR NATIONAL ORIGIN, AND DIRECTING CERTAIN ACTION IN FURTHERANCE OF SAID POLICY."

"WHEREAS it is the policy of the United States to encourage full participation in the national defense program by all citizens of the United States, regardless of race, creed, color, or national origin, in the firm belief that the democratic way of life within the Nation can be defended successfully only with the help and support of all groups within its borders; and

"WHEREAS there is evidence that available and needed workers have been barred from employment in industries engaged in defense production solely because of considerations of race, creed, color, or national origin, to the detriment of workers' morale and of national unity:

"NOW, THEREFORE, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and the statutes, and as a prerequisite to the successful conduct of our national defense production effort, I do hereby reaffirm the policy of the United States that there shall be no discrimination in the employment of workers in defense industries or government because of race, creed, color, or national origin, and I do hereby declare that it is the duty of employers and of labor organizations, in furtherance of said policy and of this order, to provide for the full and equitable participation of all workers in defense industries, without discrimination because of race, creed, color, or national origin;

"And it is hereby ordered as follows:

"1. All departments and agencies of the Government of the United States concerned with vocational training programs for defense production shall take special measures appropriate to assure that such programs are administered without discrimination because of race, creed, color, or national origin;

"2. All contracting agencies of the Government of the United States shall include in all defense contracts hereafter negotiated by them a provision obligating the contractor not to discriminate against any worker because of race, creed, color, or national origin;

"3. There is established in the Office of Production Management a Committee on Fair Employment Practice, which shall consist of a chairman and four other members to be appointed by the President. The chairman and members of the Committee shall serve as such without compensation but shall be entitled to actual and necessary transportation, subsistence and other expenses incidental to performance of their duties. The Committee shall receive and investigate complaints of discrimination in violation of the provisions of this order and shall take appropriate steps to redress grievances which it finds to be valid. The Committee shall also recommend to the several departments and agencies of the Government of the United States and to the President all measures which may be deemed by it necessary or proper to effectuate the provisions of this order.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

THE WHITE HOUSE,

June 25, 1941."

Here Dwells Security

JACKSON FUNERAL SYSTEM ASSOCIATION

4636 South Parkway, Chicago, Illinois

Housed in This Beautiful Building

The Pyramid Building and Loan Association

Twenty-two Years of Building and Loan service, offers to the Public the opportunity to build new homes, make repairs, save mortgages, and make salary loans. It also offers a STUDENT COLLEGE FUND.

The Pyramid Building and Loan Association Puts Power in Your Dollar.

JOIN OUR $100,000.00 DRIVE

THE JACKSON FUNERAL SYSTEM ASSOCIATION

in its nine years of existence has earned a reputation of leadership in the Burial Insurance Field.

It has removed the necessity for worry for Funeral Expense from the minds of the people of the Community to the amount of Millions of Dollars.

It has lessened the economic worry of the Community by a payroll of more than a Hundred Thousand Dollars Annually.

The opportunities it offers and the service it renders definitely establishes it as an integral part of the Community it serves.

S. R. CHEEVERS ENGINEERING AND CONSTRUCTION COMPANY

New Home Builders

REMODELING AND MODERNIZING SPECIALISTS

Mr. Cheevers has for more than eleven years served the Illinois State Highway Department as Engineer and more than 200 miles of concrete roads for which Illinois is famous were laid under his supervision. In 1934 he organized the S. R. Cheevers Engineering and Construction Company and has completed more than $350,000.00 in gross contracts in building, remodeling and modernizing homes and buildings.

Use our years of experience to help with your financial and remodeling problems.

CHARLES S. JACKSON COMPANY

FUNERAL DIRECTORS

The House of Quality

3800 Michigan Avenue Boulevard 8010

ROOSEVELT PHILLIPS SERVICE STATION

4600 S. Wabash Ave. Oakland 2784-9167

ROOSEVELT PHILLIPS

Tires — Batteries Accessories

Use Our Convenient 30 and 60 Day Budget Plan

No Finance Company, No Carrying Charge

Grease Jobs Are Guaranteed For 1,000 Miles

Walter Robinson Manager

WE WASH ANY CAR FOR 60c

Free Prompt Delivery All Phones Oakland 1288

Charlie & Ella Mae's

Tavern - Chicken Inn and Liquor Store

CROOK and JACKSON, Mgrs.

"Famous for Fried Chicken"

407-409 East 43rd Street Chicago, Illinois

Phone Drexel 6500 Home Drexel 9152

Edward M. Sneed

County Commissioner

COMMITTEEMAN

3rd Ward Regular Democratic Organization

☆

366 E. 47th Street, Room 10 Chicago, Ill.

BEST WISHES TO

MESSRS. RANDOLPH, WHITE and GRANGER

and

MEMBERS OF THE COMMITTEE ON FAIR EMPLOYMENT PRACTICE

☆

Metropolitan Funeral System Association

Fred Lewing, Secretary

ABERNATHY BROS. COAL CO., INC.

Specializing in

POCAHONTAS & ILLINOIS COAL

Agents for Link-Belt Stokers

4251 South Michigan Ave. Chicago, Illinois

Oakland 2100

Compliments of

W. T. BROWN, JR. FUNERAL HOME

Main Home—Southside

3830-2-4 Indiana Avenue

North Side Home
535 W. Division Street
Phone Michigan 9050

Phone Boulevard 6836
C. B. McMinn
Funeral Director

Heat with Oil

Oil Is Cleaner and Cheaper

Order Your Fuel from Us

BRANFORD & RAYFIELD

"The World's Finest Burners"

Distributed by

Gordon & Sons Heating Co.

6407-9 South Park

Day and Night Services
Day—Englewood 0247
Night—Boulevard 1590

Hot Stream and Super-flame Heaters

Compliments

of

BROTHERHOOD OF SLEEPING CAR PORTERS

TRAIN, CHAIR CAR, COACH PORTERS AND ATTENDANTS

AN INTERNATIONAL UNION

Affiliated with the A. F. of L.

☆

CHICAGO DIVISION HEADQUARTERS

4231 South Michigan Avenue

Compliments of

CHICAGO LADIES' AUXILIARY

to the

Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters

Affiliated with the A. F. of L.

★

HALENA WILSON, President

AGNES THORNTON, Secretary-Treasurer

Committee On Arrangements

Frances Taylor Moseley, Chairman Steering Committee

Program
Charles W. Burton, Chrm.
Music—Estelle McNeal
Ushers—David Wilburn
Youth—Sarah Merchant
Promotion—Freida Scott
Parade—Margaret Lightfoot

Ways and Means
J. J. Peters, Chrm.
Organizations—Benjamin Clayton
Secretary—Georgia Eason
Advertising—Anna Hart Gibbs
Advisory—Ulysses Keys

Publicity
Cornelius G. Polk, Chrm.
Speakers' Bureau—H. W. Hammond
Treasurer—Ernest Smith
Press—Frances Moseley
Sponsors—Annabelle Wilburn

Promotion Director, Souvenir Program
Edgar M. Lewis

Sponsoring Organizations

The National Association for Advancement of Colored People . . . The Appomatox Club's Ladies' Auxiliary . . . The Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters . . . The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters . . . Cosmopolitan Community Young People's Forum . . . Cincinnati Social Register Club . . . Curiosity Club . . . Evanston Division, March-on-Washington Committee . . . Evanston Youth Alliance . . . Flat Janitors' Union . . . Original Illinois Housewives' Association . . . Louise's Library of Smiles . . . Mid-West Bridge Association . . . Ladies' Auxiliary, NAACP . . . National Alliance of Postal Employees, Chicago Branch . . . Nathaniel Dett Quartette . . . Pan-Hellenic Council . . . Phyllis Wheatley Association . . . Alpha Theta Chapter, Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority . . . Thrift Consumers' Co-operative Club . . . Twelve Masters' Bridge Club . . . Third Ward Regular Republican Organization . . . Washington Park Mothers' Club . . . West Woodlawn Community League . . . Young Women's Christian Association . . . James Weldon Johnson Youth Council, NAACP . . . The Mid-South Side Youth Council, NAACP.

Patrons

Allen, Mr. Robert
Anderson, Mr. Marx
Baker, Mrs. Edna Mae
Bates, Mr. Harry D.
Baldwin, Mrs. Minnie
Baylor, Mrs. Ruth
Bell, Mrs. Annie
Brown, Rev. Ross D.
Brown, Mr. Theodore
Burr, Mr. James M.
Burton, Att'y Chas W.
Burton, Mr. H.
Butler, Dr. F. Eugene
Clayton, Att'y. Benjamin
Crutcher, Miss Louise
Dickens, Mr. Thomas
Draw, Miss Inez Draw
Eason, Mrs. Georgia
Eason, Mr. M. Henry
Eastman, Miss Wyllie D.
Edwards, Miss Lucille
Evans, Rev. Joseph M.
Gibbs, Mrs. Anna Hart
Gibson, Mr. Raymond A.
Greer, Mr. James A.
Groomes, Mr. C. E.
Hammond, Att'y. Henry W.
Hazard, Mr. Wm.
Hebert, Dr. Maurice R.
Hilliard, Mrs. Ethel
Hughes, Mr.
Johnson, Mr. Albert E.
Johnson, Mrs. Josie
Johnson, Mrs. Kathryn
Johnson, Mr. Samuel J.
Johnson, Theodore
Jones, Mr. Isaac
Keys, Att'y. Ulysses
Laird, Mr. Jason C.
Lewis, Mr. Edgar M.
Lightfoot, Mrs. Margaret
Manson, Mr. L. O.
Marbly, Rev. H. M.
Martin, Mr. J. A.
Martin, Mr. W. F.
Mason, Mrs. Alice
Matthews, Mrs. Jean
McDaniels, Mr. J. M.
McDonald, Dr. E. K.
McNeal, Mrs. Estelle
Mills, Rev. Hyman
Mills, Mrs. Irma
Merchant, Miss Sarah
Moseley, Mrs. Frances T.
Oglesby, Mr. F. E.
Osby, Mrs. Mildred
Page, Mrs. Blanche
Parker, Mr. Mentrell
Parrish, Mr. Richard
Peck, Dr. T. S.
Peters, Dr. Jay J.
Polk, Mr. Cornelius G.
Reed, Mrs. Willie Mae
Roberts, Mr. H. C.
Robinson, Mr. Raymond
Ryan, Mrs. Neva
Scott, Mrs. Freida
Scott, Rev. A. L.
Shands, Mr. Edward
Spencer, Mrs. O. L.
Smith, Mrs. Naola
Smith, Mrs. Mary R.
Smith, Mr. Ernest
Smith, Dr. T. M.
Smith, Mrs. Ruth Moore
Sneed, Mrs. Milbrey
Taylor, Mr. Marshall
Tennon, Mrs. Carrie H.
Thomas, Capt. Willie
Thomas, Miss Francene
Thompson, Miss Jewel
Thornton, Mrs. Agnes
Triplett, Mrs. Jeanette
Tucker, Mrs. Theresa
Turpeau, Rev. D. DeWitt
Vincent, Mr. Matravas
Waterford, Mr. E. D.
Webster, Mrs. Elizabeth
Webster, Mr. Milton P.
Webster, Mr. Milton P., Jr.
Weaver, Mrs. Bessie
Weaver, Kathryn
Wells, Mrs. Louise
Whitt, Mr. B. L.
Wilburn, Mrs. Annabelle
Wilburn, Mr. David
Wilcox, Mrs. Fannie
Williamson, Mr. M. R.
Wilson, Mrs. Helena
Wright, Mr. Russel
Yateman, Mr. Carl
Yateman, Miss Lola
Young, Mr. Samuel

Programme

Charles Wesley Burton, Chairman

"NEGRO NATIONAL ANTHEM" ..... Audience and Choir led by Maurice E. McGehee

Director of Choral Ensemble
"SHARPS and FLATS"
of the
CHICAGO URBAN LEAGUE

INVOCATION ..... REVEREND D. DEWITT TURPEAU, Pastor
INDIANA AVENUE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS ..... CHARLES WESLEY BURTON Director, The Chicago Division

SPEAKERS:

LESTER B. GRANGER ..... National Urban League
MILTON P. WEBSTER ..... Committee on Fair Employment Practice
EARL B. DICKERSON ..... Committee on Fair Employment Practice

SONG GROUP ..... "SHARPS AND FLATS"

A—"Pilgrim's Chorus" ..... Wagner
From the opera "TANNHAUSER"

B—"Go Down, Moses" ..... Cain-McGehee

"CREATIVE UNITY" ..... FRANCES TAYLOR MOSELEY
Chairman, Steering Committee

OFFERING

SPEAKERS:

WALTER WHITE ..... National Association for the Advancement of Colored People
A. PHILIP RANDOLPH ..... International President, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters

"GOD BLESS AMERICA" ..... Irving Berlin
Soloist—Willoughby Abner
Audience Join in Chorus

REMARKS AND BENEDICTION ..... REVEREND JOSEPH M. EVANS, Pastor METROPOLITAN COMMUNITY CHURCH

Compliments
of
THE TWELVE MASTERS BRIDGE CLUB
CORNELIUS G. POLK, President

Compliments
of
NATIONAL POSTAL ALLIANCE
Chicago Branch
Alliance Day October 26
ASHBY L. CARTER, President

Congratulations to
A. PHILIP RANDOLPH
For His Splendid Achievement in Behalf of the Race
MR. AND MRS. CLARENCE H. SCOTT

Compliments of the
CINCINNATI SOCIAL REGISTER CLUB
JAMES H. CLARK, President
Ogarita Starks, Vice-President George Warren, Cor. Sec'y.
Mattie Dorsey, Secretary Anna Hart Gibbs, Treasurer

South Park Pharmacy
H. S. and D. H. Crosthwait
Prescription Druggists
4801 South Parkway Drexel 3629

Compliments of Poro College
ANNIE M. MALONE, Founder and President
4415 South Parkway Atlantic 4800

Compliments of Vogue Hand Laundry
All Colored Hand Laundry
4249 Michigan Avenue Oakland 0592

Compliments of Hayes Barber Shop
209 Pershing Road

Compliments of
Cosmopolitan Community Church Young People's Forum
Mary G. Evans, D.D., Pastor Henry W. McGee, President

Georgie B. Coleman's Dress Shop
Exclusive Styles
4808 Prairie Avenue Oakland 2439

Compliments of Benjamin G. Clanton
Attorney at Law
3458 South State Street Victory 8270

Compliments of
The Nathaniel Dett Quartette
MR. ALPHONSO GOINS, Manager
6021 Indiana Avenue Wentworth 2667

Compliments
of
SMITH'S FUNERAL PARLOR
"Where Dignity and Refinement Prevail"
716 East 47th Street Oakland 2040-1055

Compliments
of
DR. ULYSSES GRANT DAILEY

"Put Yourself In Our Shoes"
KNIGHT-YOUNG SHOE STORE
416 East 47th Street
CHICAGO
Telephone KENwood 0459
America's Finest All Colored Shoe Store

BOUlevard 6900 Established 1914
McGAVOCK & SONS
Funeral Directors
4500 So. Michigan Ave. Chicago, Ill.

Telephone Drexel 2000 Mortgages - Insurance

Compliments of

W. H. RILEY - W. Y. BROWNE, INC.

Real Estate and Renting

103 East 47th Street
CHICAGO

TAYLOR'S TRADE SCHOOL

4354 South Parkway

Chicago, Illinois Phone Atlantic 5213

Phone Oakland 0087

OVERTON'S FLOWER SHOP

"Flowers For All Occasions"

B. Overton 4247 So. Michigan Ave.

Compliments of

KERSEY, McGOWAN & MORSELL

Funeral Parlor

3515 Indiana Avenue

Victory 1366 Chicago, Illinois

Compliments of

THE JONES BROTHERS'

Ben Franklin Store

436 East 47th Street Kenwood 0815

Phone Oakland 6600

BENJAMIN A. GRANT

Alderman 3rd Ward—City of Chicago

133 East 47th Street

SUPREME LIBERTY LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

- Employs over 750 people
- Operates 35 branch offices in 9 states
- Has over 250,000 persons insured for $63,000,000

You are safe with a Supreme Liberty Life Policy

Home Office: 3501 S. Parkway
Chicago, Illinois

Compliments
of

CHARLES W. BIBB, M.D.

417 East 47th Street — Kenwood 7010

For Sacred Entertainment Phone Wentworth 4565

Benefit Programs - Churches - Lodges - Clubs - Sound Pictures
Dramas - Musical Presentations

RUSS SACRED ARTS, INC.

Offices
1800 Madison Street, Gary, Ind.
6407 South Parkway, Chicago

CHARLES RUSS

THE THRIFT CONSUMERS CO-OPERATIVE CLUB

Invites You to Its WEEKLY DISCUSSION
in the COMMISSARY AND CLUB ROOM
at 4609 Langley Avenue

EACH WEDNESDAY EVENING AT 7:30 O'CLOCK

Telephone Englewood 3298

L & C LUNCH SHOP

Try Our Plate Lunch Special

OUR SANDWICHES ARE TOPS

Next to Home This Is the Best Place to Eat

6331 So. Parkway — Chicago, Ill.

Compliments of

Fannie Baxter, President

of

CHICAGO AND NORTHERN DISTRICT FEDERATION

Compliments of

Al and Theresa

Compliments of

Louis G. McCombs

Fine Quality Fur Coats, Scarfs and Chubbies
Exceptionally Reasonable

Edna Mae Baker
Englewood 9094

Compliments of

Walter S. Grant, M.D.

Office: Atlantic 4080 — Residence: Drexel 6266
4312 South Parkway

Compliments of

Dr. Olive M. Officer, Dentist

Atlantic 1118 — 4561 Michigan Avenue
By Appointment Only

Compliments of

A. D. Beasley, M.D.

Office: Atlantic 2779 — Residence: Kenwood 1587
417 East 47th Street

Compliments of

Duncan E. Pope
Attorney at Law

6221 Michigan Avenue — Wentworth 5193

Compliments
of

PORTER DAVIS, President

THE MID-WEST BRIDGE ASSOCIATION

Phone Englewood 2839

J. P. MORGAN'S TAVERN

Schlitz Beer Exclusively

GENUINE MEXICAN CHILI - MERCHANTS LUNCH DAILY

312 East 61st Street

Compliments
of

THE FLAT JANITORS' UNION, No. 1
A. F. of L.

Raymond A. Gibson, Organizer

4714 Michigan Avenue — Drexel 8404

WEST WOODLAWN CLUB ROOM
Located in the Woodlawn Commercial Building
6407 South Parkway

HAVE YOUR NEXT AFFAIR WITH US

Available for Club Meetings, Teas and PRIVATE PARTIES

For Information call
Margaret T. Lightfoot — Wentworth 4093 - Hyde Park 9855

Compliments
of
THE LADIES' AUXILIARY
Appomattox Club
3632 South Parkway

Satisfaction Guaranteed "Style Creations by NEAL"
SATISFACTORY TAILORING CO.
Suits, Sportcoats, Pants Made to Measure
646 East 47th Street—Drexel 6156
624 East 63rd Street—Midway 9083
Chicago's Largest Colored Tailors
S. L. NEAL, Prop. CHICAGO

Wentworth 4093 6407-9 South Parkway
BEAMS FLUORESCENT FIXTURE CO.
"A Package of Sunlight"
Neon Signs Cash or Credit Neon Clocks
We Paint Any Kind of Sign or Sho-Card
Prompt Service CHICAGO

DUDLEY S. MARTIN
Representative Third Senatorial District, State of Illinois
3458 State Street
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Compliments of
Dr. and Mrs. N. Alfred Diggs

Marguerita Ward's
New Factory of Fine Cosmetics
4703 South Parkway or 417 East 47th Street
Suite 361 Regal Bldg. Drexel 7212

Compliments of Neltye Diemer Beauty Shoppe
All Lines of Beauty Culture
365 East 51st Street For Appointment Kenwood 4138

Compliments of Adolph's Beauty Products Company
Manufacturing Cosmetics
6308 Rhodes Avenue Midway 5110

Dr. Robert E. Joyner
Foot Specialist - Surgeon Chiropodist
Oakand 1677
4703 South Parkway 417 E. 47th Street, 2nd Floor

Compliments of
Dr. Joseph E. King
4318 South Parkway Atlantic 0676

Compliments of Alpha Theta Chapter of
SIGMA GAMMA RHO SORORITY
Ethel Lee Price, Basileus

Compliments of
John W. Banks
Funeral Director
Midway 9648 555-557 East 63rd Street

The Phyllis Wheatly Association
Residence and Recreational Center for YOUNG WOMEN
Mrs. Elizabeth Lindsey Davis, Founder
Mrs. Robert R. Jackson, President
Mrs. Lena LeGrand Perry, Secretary

YOUR TEXACO DEALERS
BATSON AND MAXWELL
—AT—
THE COMMUNITY SERVICE STATION
44th Street and Wabash Avenue
Invite You to Try Our Friendly Service
Marfak Lubrication and Expert Washing

Compliments of
MR. AND MRS. DAVIS NAPIER
4310 Vincennes Avenue to
MR. A. PHILIP RANDOLPH

Phone CALumet 7123
BENJAMIN W. CLAYTON
Attorney and Counselor-at-Law
3456 Indiana Avenue
Suite 4
CHICAGO

Compliments of the

EVANSTON DIVISION

Negro March-On-Washington Committee

OFFICERS

PRESIDENT: Mrs. J. J. Spencer
SECRETARY: Mrs. Nettie Pyant
TREASURER: Mrs. Ralph Jackson

CHAIRMEN

EDUCATION FOR INDUSTRY: Mrs. Edna Morrison
DEFENSE INDUSTRIES: Thomas Jetton
MEMBERSHIP: Mrs. Taliaferro Small

Compliments of

MRS. J. J. SPENCER

MRS. TALIAFERRO SMALL

Compliments of

JONES SERVICE STATION

W. H. Jones, Proprietor

EVANSTON'S MAYOR OF BRONZEVILLE

Tire Repairs, Greasing, Washing, Batteries

"Service With a Smile"

1801 Church Street — Greenleaf 8758

Compliments of

Green's Beauty Salon

1812 Church Street — Evanston, Illinois

Greenleaf 8957

Compliments of

Neighborhood Pharmacist

GR-9630 — W. H. Morrison — UN-8880

1801 Lyons Street — 1900 Asbury Street

Compliments of

Presseley's Snackery

1827 Emerson Street — Evanston, Illinois

Compliments of

Ideal Beauty Salon

Mrs. R. A. Winfield, Scalp Specialist

1917 Foster Street — Evanston, Illinois

Res.: Greenleaf 5016 — Bus.: Greenleaf 7822

Compliments of

A Physician

Compliments of

Jackson Park Syndicate

Jetton & Black

Interior Decorators

Gr-3591 — Gr-0027

1013 Garnett Place

West Side Barbers and Cleaners

Wimberly & Lomax, Props.

1705½ Simpson Street — Evanston, Illinois

"We Appreciate Your Patronage"

Compliments of

Harry's Beauty Salon

1227 Foster Street — Evanston, Illinois

Greenleaf 9382

Simm's Restaurant

Evanston's Leading Restaurant

1938 Asbury Avenue — GR-9255

Open All Night

Compliments of

A. Rudolph Penn, M.D.

1925 Emerson Street — Evanston, Illinois

Watkins' Grocery & Market

Fresh Dressed Poultry and Fresh Fish

1829 Simpson Street, Evanston, Ill.

Bus.: GR-0523 — Res.: GR-0523

Compliments of

Dr. C. M. Tarkington, Dentist

1901 Dodge Avenue — Evanston, Illinois

Greenleaf 0204

Compliments of

Dr. Isabella M. Garnett

2306 Foster Street — Evanston, Ill.

"You Can Serve Your Community Better by Knowing What's Going On!"

1003 Emerson Street
Evanston, Illinois
GREenleaf 4909

The Evanston
NEWSETTE
"THE VOICE OF THE COMMUNITY"
Melvin Scribner Smith, Editor and Publisher

Subscription Rates:
One year: $1.25
Six months: 70c

Compliments of
North Shore Beauty Shop
Mrs. Myrtle Pringle, Mgr.
AND
North Shore Dress & Gift Shop
Mrs. Ruth A. Macklin, Mgr.
GREenleaf 4304 GREenleaf 6116
1869 E. Railroad Ave., Evanston, Ill.
"COME IN FOR A FREE DEMONSTRATION OF "KNIT ALL"

Compliments of
NORTH SHORE COMMUNITY HOUSE
1125 Garnett Place
Owned and operated by
IROQUOIS LEAGUE INC.
DR. ISABELLA M. GARNETT, President
MRS. M. L. BURT, Matron

Smith Employment Agency
Maids, Chauffeurs, Couples, Day Workers
MRS. C. C. SMITH, Mgr.
1003 Emerson St., Evanston, Ill. GREenleaf 4909

Compliments of Miss Aline Terrell
Mr. Ralph Terrell
2048 Green Bay Rd. Evanston, Illinois

Compliments of Capt. and Mrs. Claude M. Richardson
Fort Custer, Mich. 1735 Hartrey Ave., Evanston

Sherelle Beauty Salon
"Where expert service prevails"
MRS. W. S. THOMPSON
1117 Emerson St., Evanston, Ill. Greenleaf 9335

Compliments of
Mr. and Mrs. Winfield A. Garnett, Sr.
Mr. and Mrs. Winfield A. Garnett, Jr.

Compliments of
Mrs. Lawrence Edwards
Mrs. Maud Green

Real Estate Broker
J. KING
ICE - COAL - WOOD
University 6210 Evanston, Illinois

Compliments of
"NIFTY MODERNETTES"

EVANSTON PATRONS

Dr. and Mrs. S. E. McDonald
Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jetton
Mrs. Josephine Powell
Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Johnson
Mrs. William H. Morrison
Mr. and Mrs. William C. Pyant
Mrs. Isaac George
Mrs. Taliofeno Small
Mrs. S. L. Burt

"Compliments to the statesmen for the wonderful work they are doing."

—Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Tiller and Family

Compliments of

FOSTER & YOUNG

Florists

739 East 47th Street — Drexel 8467

To Mr. A. Philip Randolph

"Congratulations and Best Wishes for continued success in the future."

BETA CHAPTER

Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority

Chicago Shoe Hospital

Shoe Tailor and Barber Shop

J. P. Hatchet, Prop.

704 East 47th Street — Drexel 1728

Our Compliments, Gentlemen!

Multiple Youth Council, N.A.A.C.P.

Sarah Merchant, Executive Chairman

Mrs. Frances Taylor Moseley, Adviser

Mid-South Side Council

Lorenzo Stalling, President

Meets each Friday, Club "93," 315 East 60th Street

Miss Alfreda Brock, Adviser

James Weldon Johnson Council

Joe Guinn, President

Meets 2nd and 4th Monday—Urban League Com.

Mrs. Anna Tate, Adviser

A FUR AND FASHION PAGEANTRY

Under the Auspices of

Unit Usher League, Chicago Zone

at the

First Church of Deliverance

4315 Wabash Avenue

Monday, October 6, 1941—8 P.M.

R. Allen, Program Chairman — C. H. Jones, President

Harry D. Bates

Insurance Broker

Englewood 8325

F. D. Waterford Co.

"We Render Every Service in the Realty Line"

E. M. Lewis, Mgr.

6407-09 South Park Avenue — Wentworth 4093

LAW OFFICES

BROWN, BROWN, BROWN, CYRUS & GREENE

417 East 47th Street

Ernest A. Greene — Bindley C. Cyrus
William H. Brown — Oscar C. Brown
Marcus A. Mahone — Sidney A. Jones
Sydney P. Brown — Jesse B. Mann

Laura's Beauty Shop

Complete Facilities for Every Requirement

EXPERT OPERATORS

6650 St. Lawrence Avenue — Chicago, Ill.

Magnetic Cleaners and Dyers

Tailoring and Repairing

E. Tyler, Manager — 4706 Evans Avenue

Dr. J. C. Tymony

Dentist

Suite 344-346 South Center Bldg.

Phone: Drexel 7867 — 417 East 47th Street

Chicago, Ill.

South America Window Shade Company

Window Shades, Laces, Venetian Blinds, Etc.

J. C. BUTLER, Prop.

623 East 47th Street — KENwood 4082

Compliments of the

Curiosity Club

Thelma Range, President — Marguerite Brodis, Sponsor

Compliments of

C. L. Hayes, Florist

3949 So. Parkway — 404 East 45th Street
Drexel 2030 — Drexel 2130

LINCOLN L. TONDEE

ALL KINDS OF INSURANCE

417 East 47th Street — Suite 318-20

Phone Drexel 8585

Compliments and Best Wishes of

THE FEDERAL ATHLETIC & CIVIC ASSOCIATION

(Composed of Post Office Employees)

JAMES M. MARR, Jr., Pres.

HONESTY

—INTEGRITY

—ABILITY

ARE THE FOUNDATION STONES UPON WHICH IS BUILT ONE OF THE GIANT INSTITUTIONS OF THE RACE

- The -

METROPOLITAN FUNERAL SYSTEM ASS'N

BUILT OF NECESSITY BY MEN OF VISION WHO HAVE GREAT PRIDE IN ITS ACHIEVEMENT

OPERATING UNDER THE RIGID LAWS OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS

Over a hundred thousand of your neighbors have found it their

Fortress of Strength in the Shadows of Life

PROTECT YOUR LOVED ONES TODAY AGAINST THE HYSTERIA
"WHEN DEATH STRIKES"—HOW? BY VISITING OUR OFFICE:

45th Street and South Parkway or Calling ATLantic 3030

And a Representative Will Gladly Wait on You and Explain Our Protective Program

CHICAGO DEFENDER

October 11, 1941

LEADERS MAKE REPORT TO NATION AT MASS MEETING

Before a capacity crowd Sunday afternoon at the Metropolitan Community church, the National Negro March on Washington committee made a "report to the nation," bringing to the city leaders from a number of organizations which participated in the plans of the group. Seated on the platform, reading from left to right are, Mrs. Daisy Lampkin, field secretary of the N.A.A.C.P.; Walter White, secretary of the N.A.A.C.P.; Mrs. Frances Taylor Moseley, chairman of steering committee; Atty. Charles Wesley Burton, director of the Chicago division of the Negro March on WaWshington committee; A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and Milton P. Webster, member of the President's Fair Emlpoyment Practice committee.—Gushiniere photo.

PITTSBURGH COURIER

October 11, 1941

FEPC NEEDS POWER

DICKERSON AGREES TO NEED OF LEGISLATIVE POWER TO MAKE WORK EFFECTIVE

BY HORACE R. CAYTON

LAST Sunday, the National Negro March-On-Washington Committee made a "Report to the Nation" on the activities of the Fair Employment Practice Committee. I was pleased, but a little disappointed in the meeting. As I stated last week, I am all in favor of the committee and feel that its creation was an important and momentous event for the Negro. I don't agree with Milton Webster, however, that it is the greatest thing since the Emancipation Proclamation. I didn't agree with A. Philip Randolph when he spoke in Houston and elaborated on the multitude of jobs and new opportunities that this committee would bring and was glad that he was much more modest about the possibilities of the committee at the meeting last Sunday. As a matter of fact, the two members of the committee who spoke, Webster and Dickerson, were very realistic about the committee and its possibilities. The only measurable gains which Webster claimed were that the association of personnel agents in government service had cooperated with the committee in getting the President to sign a letter condemning racial discrimination in Federal service and the obtaining permission from the Civil Service Commission to examine its lists and appointment procedures. There was no doubt that, as Webster stated, the committee's appointment had brought the whole problem of racial discrimination in the defense agencies to the public eye and had thereby caused the hiring of numbers of Negro workers.

Mr. Cayton

FEP NEEDS LEGAL POWER

But these gains, real and important as they are, are peanuts to what we need. Webster stated that there were plenty of firms that would say they were not going to hire Negroes regardless. It 's my opinion, Dickerson made the best and most realistic analysis of the situation. Although stating that he thought there was much that the committee could do, he felt that until the committee had teeth, that is, power to enforce its findings through legislative action, it could not get at the fundamental problem.

THIS has been my point all along and I am glad that a member of the committee sees eye to eye with me on it. Dickerson is to be commended by courageously stating that we should realize that the committee has limitations but that we should, nevertheless, exploit all of its possibilities and should build up sentiment for a more powerful group. Many Negro leaders would have continued to give the Negro public a song and dance about how the committee would solve everything simply to enhance their own prestige.

Some of the speakers, especially Lester Granger and Charles Burton (the chairman of the meeting) I thought, injected a little "we knew we were right in the first place" spirit. I thought that they might have patterned after Randolph in his modesty. Lots of people disagreed with various aspects of the program. I criticized the manner in which it was called off, but that doesn't mean anything is to be gained by saying I told you so now.

PRAISES RANDOLPH AND DICKERSON

I think on the positive side that we have now developed a group of militant leaders with a definite program and head and shoulders above them stand Dickerson and Randolph. Dickerson in the political field can give the type of leadership that the subservant wheelhorse Republicans could never produce. Conversant as he is with the fundamental social and economic problems facing the Negro he can work hand in hand with Randolph in the trade union field. Randolph has insight, courage and long experience. Rather than sinking into oblivion after his break with the Negro Congress he has taken a more important role as a leader than ever.

THERE is just one thing that bothers me about Randolph as a mass leader. The Brotherhood of Pullman Porters has become the aristocrats of organized Negro labor. They are a good organization but since their struggle many thousands of Negroes have become identified both with the CIO and the A. F. of L. who need leadership. What is really needed is a great mass movement. I am not sure that the officers and functionaries of the Brotherhood will be able and willing to forget their favored position; their occasional antagonism to the CIO; the fact that they were the first important group to be organized; and wielded into one fighting mass, the bulk of Black America.

Trained for Defense, All He Gets Is---"No"

Although defense industries are looking everywhere for trained men, Fred Mance, 20-year-old Negro who has the training, can't find a job.

Fred Mance . . . finds no job

Not only has he a diploma in machine shop from East Tech, but he also two weeks ago, completed a special 14-weeks national defense training course at West Tech.

Today, after re-checking 21 defense plants here, he reports three "took his application," the rest said there was no chance at all for a job.

Young Mance's jobhunt began in June 1939 when he was graduated from East Tech, the only colored boy majoring in machine shop. No one would take him, he had to make some money, so he took a job as an orange grinder for a fruit juice company.

Winter ended that job and he sold candy at a theater. After that he got work as a bus boy and porter at a downtown restaurant. Then came all this talk about "getting yourself trained for defense."

Fred did, working half time and going to school the other half. His grades averaged 85 and he received another diploma. But he hasn't any job.

When he goes out looking for work, he carries a little handbag full of the neat tools he made himself. At home, 3925 Cedar avenue, he has his "pride and joy," a 60-pound vise he made, but it's too heavy to lug around.

If he doesn't get a defense job pretty soon, he'll go back to the restaurant as bus boy. His money's almost gone and the boss said he'd be glad to have him back. He won't need his new training for that.

comment, and Mr. Sweeney in Washington said he had not determined upon a successor to Mr. Hurley.

Despite antagonism to Judge Lausche's candidacy from the "old guarders," several more Democratic groups in the city joined the judge's supporters today. These included the 17th Ward Democratic Club, the Ninth Ward Democratic Precinct Committeemen's Club and the 16th Ward Democratic Women's Organization.

* * *

William (Cyclone) Yelsky, a boxing instructor for the Y. M. C. A.,

THE NEW YORK AMSTERDAM STAR-NEWS
Saturday, October 11, 1941

Letter from Complainant Sufficient for Fair Practice Committee Probe

Chicago Defender 10/4/41

2 Named To FEP Body As Investigators

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Mark F. Ethridge, chairman of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, on Friday announced the appointment of two field representatives who will investigate complaints of discriminatory employment practices in defense industries.

G. J. Fleming

The appointees are Eugene Davidson, business agent of the CIO Building Service and Maintenance Workers of Washington, D. C., and also administrator of the New Negro Alliance, and G. James Fleming, managing editor of the Philadelphia Tribune.

Davidson, a native of Washington, D. C., was graduated from Harvard university in 1917 and received an LLB degree from the Howard university law school in 1925. He is a World war veteran, having served as Captain of the 367th Infantry, and a member of the Committee of Management of 12th Street Branch of the Washington YMCA.

Fleming, a native of the Virgin Islands, was graduated from the Hampton Institute and the University of Wisconsin where he became a member of Phi Beta Kappa. He served as managing editor of the Philadelphia Tribune, one of the nation's leading Negro newspapers, up to August 1941.

Both men will have headquarters in the President's Committee On Fair Employment practice, offices in Washington, but will be sent out to investigate complaints of discrimination against minority groups in defense employment.

Complete Data Is Requested

No Lawyer Needed To Help Draw Up Complaint

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A letter from any job-seeker who has been denied a job in a defense industry because of his race, creed, color or national origin, is enough to initiate an investigation by the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, it was explained this week by Lawrence W. Cramer, executive secretary, in answer to numerous inquiries which have come to the committee.

Any person who has reason to believe that his race, creed, color or national origin has prevented his obtaining a position or promotion in the Federal Civil Service may also submit his complaint in the same way.

It is not necessary for an aggrieved worker to have a lawyer draw up any formal papers, it is explained.

The fact-giving letter, according to Cramer, should tell the following:

1. The name of the firm, agency, school or union against which the complaint is made, and its location (street, city, and State):
2. Whether the discrimination alleged is because of (a) race, (b) creed, (c) color, or (d) national origin;
3. The race, religion, or national origin of the person making the complaint:
4. The type of job, position or classification for which application is made;
5. The qualification of the complainant for the job he seeks (including his education and work history, and his Civil Service status, if he has passed a Civil Service examination):
6. Date when complainant applied for the job which he was denied;
7. Date when he was refused employment or admittance to a training course;
8. Name of person refusing position (if available);
9. Reason given for refusal;
10. Statement of additional facts and circumstances indicating discrimination was on account of race, religion or national origin;
11. Names and addresses of any witnesses to facts and circumstances indicating discrimination;
12. Name and address of person alleging discrimination.

CHICAGO, ILL., SATURDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1941

RANDOLPH AND OTHERS MAKE THEIR REPORT

3,000 Hear How Leaders Are Working To Get Race Recognition

"The Negro must demand his citizenship rights through mass pressure like all other groups in this American commonwealth and not look for the sympathetic attitude of whites to solve his problems," declared A. Phillip Randolph in an address Sunday before 3,000 people at the Metropolitan Community church, Forty-first street and South Parkway.

Mr. Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and organizer of the "March-On-Washington Committee" was the principal speaker on a program arranged by Chicagoans under the title of a "Report To The Nation."

Citing further that the race does not progress merely by wishing and hoping for justice from governmental sources, but that it must swing into dramatic action to make its cause felt, Mr. Randolph stated "that we must recognize the mechanics and technique of the mass pressure movement in order to bring about desired results of progress."

March Called Off

"The March - On - Washington," started some months ago by Mr. Randolph, war intrumental in causing President Roosevelt to issue his Executive Order on June 25 last to captains of American industry, in which he ordered them to drop the color line along avenues of employment. Following this edict, Mr. Randolph explained, the "March on Washington" was temporarily postponed. But he added, "We still want to keep our army intact; when a million Negroes speak in unison, they speak with power." The threat secured the main objective of the march, and further resulted in the President appointing a committee of six prominent citizens throughout the country to probe into discriminatory practices against colored people among those industries having huge national defense contracts. It is known as the Fair Employment Committee. Two Chicagoans, Ald. Earl B. Dickerson and Milton P. Webster, are members of that group.

Both, Ald. Dickerson and Mr. Webster, spoke at the Sunday meeting and reported what progress the committee was making and what problems it was encountering in its work.

Outtalks President

Walter White, executive secretary of the N.A.A.C.P., was guest speaker, and outlined the manner in which the "march drive" was organized, and told of the conference between Mr. Randolph, himself, and the president, along with members of the war and navy departments, and Mr. Knudsen, head of the powerful Office of Production Management.

"It is always ethical," Mr. White stated, "to let the president do all the talking in such a conference, but in this instance, Mr. Randolph thought differently; as the President raised his voice, Mr. Randolph raised his, and finally Mr. Roosevelt saw he could not outtalk Mr. Randolph and thereafter the conference preceded with Mr. Randolph in full charge and the others at the conference table listening to the plea for justice from a Negro leader."

Earlier in his speech Sunday, Mr. Randolph had referred to the President as a man "gifted with charm," but he added that "charm" does not settle such perplexing problems as now faces the Negro people.

The Chicago steering committee in charge of Sundays program was headed by Mrs. Frances Taylor Moseley, and Atty. Charles W. Burton, director of the Chicago division, Negro March-On-Washington committee, served as master of ceremonies. Lester Granger of the National Urban League also spoke.

Mrs. Daisy Lampkin of Pittsburgh, field secretary of the N.A.A.C.P., made a plea to the audience in behalf of the membership drive now under way for that organization in Chicago. She is here to supervise it. The audience went on record as unanimously endorsing a resolution presented by Attorney Burton which petitioned President Roosevelt to utilize his official influence in seeing that the Negro worker and soldier received justice under the national defense program. The Urban League choral group, the "Sharps and Flats" under the direction of Maurice F. McGehee rendered several selections.

Saturday, October 11, 1941
THE NEW YORK AGE

March On Washington Committee Expanding Their Membership

CHICAGO, Ill.—Recognized the need for mass pressure to grapple with the perplexing problems of labor and discriminations that beset the Negro people at this time and which will plague them in the post-war period an organized, nationwide campaign is under way to increase the mass power of the March on Washington Committee by enlarging their memberships everywhere.

A remarkable step forward was made in Chicago following "The Report to the Nation" meeting on September 28, in the Metropolitan Community Church, at which the speakers were A. Philip Randolph, national director of the March on Washington Committee; Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and member of the Committee; Lester B. Granger, executive asst. sec'y of National Urban League and member of the committee; Milton P. Webster, first international vice president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and member of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee, Earl Dickerson, Alderman of Chicago and member of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee together with Mrs. Frances Taylor Moseley, chairman of the Committee on Arrangements and Dr. Charles Wesley Burton, director of the Chicago Division of the March on Washington Committee that sponsored the public meeting, at which over three thousand Negroes attended.

—30—

THE CHICAGO DEFENDER
RELIABLE FOR 36 YEARS
PAGE THREE

LOUISVILLE EDITOR IN PLEA AGAINST LABOR BIAS

MARK ETHRIDGE FLAYS UNIONS' DISCRIMINATION

An Unrelieved Tragedy' He Calls Restrictions On Minority Groups

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Race discrimination on the part of a union is an "unrelieved tragedy," Mark Ethridge, Louisville newspaper editor and chairman of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice told the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, as he made a plea that labor "abolish all the devices of constitution and ritual" which now bar Negroes and other minority groups from the opportunity to work.

Ethridge spoke as chairman of the Fair Employment Practice committee which was named by President Roosevelt some months ago to "receive and investigate complaints of discrimination" against potential defense workers because of their race, creed, color or national origin.

"Our committee has the means to bring recalcitrant manufacturers into line and undoubtedly means will be found to bring recalcitrant unions into line," he warned.

"But we do not want to do that," he added. "We want your full support and your full acceptance of the national policy."

After recalling the many efforts made to integrate minority groups into the defense program, climaxed by an executive order by the President on June 25, Ethridge continued:

"Unfortunately, there are still many unions, and many locals of unions, not all of them engaged directly in the defense effort, which bar their fellowmen because of color. I would not be frank at all with you if I did not say that most of them are yours."

Citing examples, Ethridge, who as general manager of the Louisville Courier-Journal, deals with 12 unions pointed out:

"We have a notorious case in which an employer subscribed in effect to Hitler's theory that Negroes are best fitted for slavery, or at the very best, for domestic work. but offsetting that, we have a notorious case in which a union, by hypocrisy and trickery, deprived Negroes who were already working of their right to employment."

On the eve of the first hearing of the Committee on Fair Employment Practice, which opened Monday, Oct. 20, in the Embassy auditorium, Los Angeles, Ethridge told the unionists that discrimination against workers because of their race, creed, color or national origin is "a game that this country cannot afford to play in the light of all it has stood for and challenged; it is certainly a game that the union of the United States cannot afford to play unless they want to invite the destruction which has come to their fellow-unionists in Germany and Italy."

Ethridge will preside over the Los Angeles hearing which will be attended by the entire membership of the Fair Practice committee, with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, represented by proxy.

Chicago Daily Tribune
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

FOUNDED JUNE 10, 1847

ENTERED AS SECOND CLASS MATTER MA. 14, 1903, AT THE POSTOFFICE AT CHICAGO, ILL., UNDER ACT OF MARCH 3, 1879.

All unsolicited articles, manuscripts, letters and pictures sent to The Tribune are sent at the owner's risk, and The Tribune company expressly repudiates any liability or responsibility for their safe custody or return.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1941.

THE TRIBUNE'S PLATFORM

Save Our Republic

FEPC Opens Probe in L. A.

West Coast Aircraft Firms' Policies To Be Eyed

LOS ANGELES Special to Star-News).—Here in the bustling Pacific Coast city, center of most of the nation's big airplane plants, President Roosevelt's Fair Employment Practice Committee began hearings this week on discrimination in defense industries, with the view of integrating all races, creeds and colors into a national emergency effort.

(Continued on Page 8)

FEPC Opens Probe in L. A.

(Continued from Page 1)

Alderman Earl B. Dickerson, of Chicago, one of the two Negro members of the six-man committee started the ball rolling on Monday when he announced that the policy of six large companies in this area will be investigated, and immediately plunged into the work of organizing the machinery to accomplish the job.

The investigations here are the first to be held since the creation of the committee early in July following President Roosevelt's memorable executive order of June 25, 1941 prohibiting discrimination in defense jobs on account of race, creed, color or national origin.

Best known of the concerns definitely identified with an anti-Negro employment policy is the Vultee Aircraft Corporation which, in reply to queries from the N. A. A. C. P. and several other agencies, recently repeated its unwillingness to hire Negroes in any capacity at its plant, revealing that not one of its employees is a Negro.

The Boeing Aircraft Company in Seattle is another of the big plants that has adhered to its jim crow policy of not hiring Negroes. This is accomplished through a closed contract held by the International Association of Machinists of America, an A. F. of L. affiliate. A section of the I. A. M. ritual reads:

"I further promise that I will never propose for membership in this association any other than a competent, white candidate."

Other companies out here whose employment policies are to be studied are Lockheed-Vega, which two months ago announced a change in its employment policy and began immediately hiring Negroes in many crafts; Douglas Aircraft Corporation, the first of the West Coast companies to employ Negro skilled workers; Consolidated Aircraft Company, which is still negotiating with OPM tactics will break down, but this is no excuse for the timidity which has seemed to prevail too often in attempting them. The only way the army can learn is by trial and error. Generals who try and fail should not be penalized for their failure in favor of leaders who seek to protect their records by trying little that is new.

THE MOTE AND THE BEAM.

A number of readers have called our attention to an incident which occurred a week or so ago at a town hall meeting in New York. Their accounts vary somewhat but it appears that somebody in the audience asked a question about extending the four freedoms to the Negroes in this country. The moderator ruled that the point was not pertinent to the subject under discussion but the questioner persisted and it was only with some difficulty that he was silenced.

We do not know whether the moderator was correct in his ruling but certainly the point which was raised goes to the heart of the larger debate in this country on its foreign policy. Here we are, summoned by our administration to make stupendous sacrifices to establish Mr. Roosevelt's four freedoms everywhere in the world; and here we are, in a country in which a very substantial proportion of the Negroes are not enjoying freedom from want and fear, freedom from racial discrimination, or freedom of educational and economic opportunity. It is a singular fact that precisely in those sections of the country where Mr. Roosevelt and his foreign policy are most strongly supported the four freedoms are most conspicuously denied.

The hypocrisy of these crusaders for freedom in other lands but not in America is beneath contempt. They would bankrupt the United States and condemn a million of its young men to death to establish, so they say, freedom from fear in China [but not in Alabama]; freedom from want in Czecho-Slovakia [but not in Georgia]; freedom of opportunity in Italy [but not in Mississippi]. Mr. Roosevelt's heart bleeds for oppressed Europeans and Asiatics but he put a Ku Kluxer on the United States Supreme court, and he has never raised a finger on behalf of anti-lynching legislation which, if enacted, might do a belated something to establish freedom from fear in many sections of our own land.

It might be added in this connection that there is nothing in the record to indicate that Mr. Roosevelt's state department, for all its self-proclaimed preoccupation with freedom the world over, has ever intervened on behalf of the black people under British rule in Africa. There are many millions of them who are victims of the most galling of discriminations and the most savage of oppressions. They are subject to curfew laws. Their land has been taken from them. Their labor is forced. They are the victims of abuses which fully parallel the worst to be found in Hitler's Europe.

When a million of our young men have died to bring freedom to Chinese who never had it and to Germans and Italians who may not want it, the survivors can then continue the crusade in Russia and some of the British dominions and colonies. It looks like a long war. At the end of it we may perhaps be permitted to turn our attention to the denials of freedom in our own land. Some of us prefer not to wait that long to agitate for elementary justice and decency at home.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat

ST. LOUIS, WEDNESDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 26, 1941

Dorothy Maynor—She Champions the Music and the Cause of Her People

By VIRGINIA TRACY.

Some day the Negro spirituals known only today to natives of remote regions in the deep South, that have been handed down by mouth from generation to generation, will be recorded and preserved. Some day these charming bits of racial songs will take their place as a valuable component of American music. It may take five, possibly 10 years, to ferret them out, note down their melody, text and rhythm, but when the task is accomplished, Dorothy Maynor, the widely acclaimed Negro soprano who will be heard tonight in the Opera House of the Municipal Auditorium, will have realized a dream she's set her heart on making come true.

Not so much because she wants simply to collect them to sing to the audiences who are thrilled by the deep velvet tones of her rich, lovely voice, but because she herself is vitally interested in the music of her race. She has great respect and love for it. She is curious about its origin and eager to learn more of its background. In short, she wants to find out all there is to know about it and to preserve in some tangible form the wealth of wonderful spirituals that have never been put down in black and white.

Miss Maynor hopes to begin her work next summer and to carry it on in whatever spare time she has during the coming years.

She is already laying plans—for this is no simple task. Contacts must be made, geographical routes outlined, she must get good leads to isolated spots where she can find the best sources of the material she seeks at a time when religious festivals are at their height and the spirituals may be heard in their own native environment.

DOROTHY MAYNOR.

ISOLATED ISLAND

One of the places she plans to visit is the little island of the Gullah people off the coast of South Carolina, where the progeny of pre-civil-war-day slaves still live, untouched by the outside world, speaking a language all their own, the Gullah tongue. She has laid the ground work for this visit, and a teacher in one of the island schools, familiar with the dialect and the author of a play in the Gullah language, will assist her.

The daughter of a Virginia minister who began her singing career in the choir of her father's church in Norfolk, Miss Maynor is particularly anxious to retain the spirituals in their original form and to see that their fundamental quality is preserved in their arrangement.

"So many arrangements of spirituals that are rather generally known," she said, "are not quite characteristic of Negro music. Basically, our music is polyphonic. Unlike most folk music, it is dominantly spiritual because of the need of the people from whom it sprang. Often it has been badly treated because it has been thought of as secular. A few of the songs are secular for dancing and lighter moments—but the great majority of them are a part of religious worship and might almost be called hymns.

"Take 'Swing Low, Sweet Chariot,'" she went on, "it's really a song of death and a very beautiful one. Yet how few people seem to realize it. Even here in America, where we are so close to it, we are lacking in appreciation and knowledge of this beautiful folk music."

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

So interested is the Library of Congress in Miss Maynor's research plans that it has offered to lend her recording apparatus to carry on her work, for the custodians of this storehouse of culture wish to preserve in their own archives every available record of the artistic resources in this country.

As she talked of her plans, Miss Maynor's deep brown eyes were shining and her dimples twinkled, for she has the happy smile characteristic of the singing race to which she belongs.

"Some day," she said, "when the waters are safe again, I hope to go to Africa to trace still further the music of my people."

She has learned much of the beauty inherent in the songs of her race from the African students she has met in colleges in this country, many of whom attended her own Alma Mater, Hampton Institute, where she was a member of the choir and toured Europe with its famed chorus.

"Much of the rhythm of the Negro spirituals," she said, "must have come from Africa but the experiences of my people here have contributed toward giving the songs a new character and have thus made them a true form of native American music.

SOURCE OF STRENGTH

"Spiritual music," continued the young singer, whose vocal range and verstility have won praise from hundreds of music critics, "means a great deal to the Negro. It is his medium of expression and it is a source of strength and encouragement in the midst of pathos and oppression closely associated with his whole life."

But accomplished though she is in musical lore, Miss Maynor has other interests. Costume designing and home economcis are two. She fashions her own clothes, even tailors her coats and suits and makes the most beautiful little dresses for her two young nieces in New York.

And she's a marvelous cook. Fancy pastries, angel food cakes, brownies and such things are her specialties.

That's still not all! Her tiny feet—3 B's to be exact—are a refutation of the rather general notion that the current popularity of athletics for females is largely responsible for the great number of 8's and 9's shoe dealers are selling these days to their feminine trade. The owner of the smallest dogs we've seen in years played varsity tennis in college, captained the basketball and hockey teams, bowls and swims.

IT TO SAVE DE

Remember Pearl Harbor! Remember it? So we shall until the Banner of the Free is high and victorious above the triple sign of the Dark Ages!

In the Revolution the cry rang out, "REMEMBER BOSTON COMMONS." On that cry we moved through Saratoga and Valley Forge, on to Yorktown.

On it the Free World was born.

In the cry, "REMEMBER THE ALAMO," there breathes the story of Houston and Texas!

"REMEMBER FORT PILLOW!" Thus answered the UNION when merciless, brutal Forrest massacred the soldiers of Lincoln and Freedom under a flag of truce.

In 1898, "REMEMBER THE MAINE" filled the air of an outraged nation. McKinley made his call on heart and conscience of his people; soon Spain, beaten, helpless, crept home, chastised by the indignant sword of justice!

And Cuba emerged, free, independent, latest flower of our civilization. Then up stood the Filipinos, a new nation created out of centuries of misery.

REMEMBER PEARL HARBOR!

Neither the deed nor the DATE can be forgotten; not even after the ruthless, murderous ingrate, and his unconscionable allies, shall have bitten the dust of DEFEAT.

Japan, for whom this nation — the brightest Jewel of all time — turned on the light of Civilization; Germany, in whose story there can be found no peace since history began to write; sad, inglorious Italy, whose heritage has fallen to the grasp of a madman — these furious three, who have poisoned every pleasant Stream, withered every Branch of the Tree of Liberty, will yet know that Vengeance is appointed and no Infidel can escape!

Freedom is more than empty word;
It leaps from God's faithful sword;
In man's breast He planted the seed,
And for its growth supplies every need.

AND COUNTRYMEN —

REMEMBER, ALSO, SIKESTON, a capital in the last, foul stronghold of barbarism in the U.S.A.

OPPRESSION, TYRANNY, SLAVERY OF STATE, BIGOTRY — these things we war against, war to death, on the SEVEN SEAS.

Color, Race, Creed now fall away. "THE BATTLE HYMN OF THE REPUBLIC" is once again our ANTHEM. We are now UNITED, ONE IN SPIRIT, INVINCIBLE as we move towards ARMAGEDDON, where there can be no defeat.

BUT HERE IS SIKESTON, the poison flower of a free United States; the chartered Missouri Infamy, that dogs the steps of millions of loyal Americans; millions who were born into Freedom in the shock of battle.

Sikeston represents the SAVAGERY and BARBARISM, of the New World. It is the ORGANIZED CRIME of American Civilization. It, too, must go; with it must also go its princes, whether their slimy speech is heard in Senate halls or they wield a sceptre of authority in a state.

IN FAR DISTANT PLACES we war against the triple monsters. Wherever the FLAG flies we turn our faces; wherever duty calls, we answer with eager feet.

BUT, COUNTRYMEN, WE CANNOT BEAT TOKYO WITH SIKESTON.

"Get down your map," said our great President. We did; one of the Atlantic and the Pacific, the other of the MISSISSIPPI, hurrying past the cruel, barbarous shores of Missouri.

Remember PEARL HARBOR! REMEMBER SIKESTON! Japan and Sikeston, BOTH MUST FALL!

Both challenge the world of freedom — DEMOCRACY SAID IT WAS ON ITS WAY TO DARK PLACES RISING AGAINST US.

But look! It has a rope around its neck in Sikeston, and, tied to an automobile, is being dragged through the streets of the city!

Japan LYNCHED PEARL HARBOR; SIKESTON LYNCHED DEMOCRACY. But up, boys; up to the fray; up AGAINST EVERY FOE!

REMEMBER PEARL HARBOR!

CHICAGO DEFENDER

NOVEMBER 11, 1941

Ask FEPC To Halt Discrimination In Federal Building Cafeterias

Chicago Def 11/22

WASHINGTON—(ANP) — One of the oldest problems in Washington has been thrown into the lap of FEPC in an attempt to solve the segregation which exists in many cafeterias in government buildings.

Growing out of the case of Melva Steuart, an employe of the bureau of engraving and printing, formerly a census bureau employee, FEPC has been asked to determine whether it has jurisdiction over the cafeterias which are operated by "welfare associations," under the supervision of the department in which the cafeteria is located.

It is said that the head of the department is responsible for all conditions which exist in these cafeterias and it is further pointed out that Secretary of Labor Perkins and Secretary of Interior Ickes quickly stamped out segregation in their departmental cafeterias where it once flourished.

In this case, the young woman was eating at a table in the cafeteria when Manager Louck approached her after she had taken a seat with another woman and said, "Sorry, I did not see you ladies when you came to this table; you can't sit here."

The girl then told Louck she had been sitting there for more than a month and that she was perfectly comfortable. The manager then said he was making a change and that from now on seating arrangements would be similar to those in effect on the day shift.

Miss Steuart made no reply whereupon the manager unceremoniously and without further words, grabbed her tray, upon which were her pocketbook, a piece of pie and a cup of coffee and moved them from the table, spilling coffee all over the pie.

He then called a guard and asked that she be arrested and removed from the cafeteria. The guard refused but told the manager to call a "section chief" and get her name and number. This the manager did.

Later, the young woman returned to the cafeteria to eat and took the same table. The manager came over to her table and told her that he had not reported her before but that he would report her this time for violating a rule "of the association."

His excuse was that it had been deemed necessary to allow more room for the white employes and so another steam table in the corner had been opened for Negroes and that failure to observe the ruling would result in dismissal of some Negroes.

The case was taken to the Washington Urban League and to other agencies, which acted when the young woman swore to an affidavit charging the management with discrimination and mistreatment of Negroes.

FEPC is going into the matter thoroughly and hopes to be able to straighten out the whole thing to the satisfaction of all concerned.

NEW YORK AMSTERDAM NEWS

DECEMBER 27, 1941

Randolph Opens Jersey 'Y' Drive

A. Phillip Randolph, third from left, is shown being greeted by William R. Jackson, recently installed secretary of the Court Street Y. M. C. A., Newark, N. J., last Sunday afternoon at the opening of the fall campaign membership drive where Mr. Randolph was the principal speaker, the subject: Negro and the War. Reading from left to right: Dr. J. Otto Hill, chairman of house committee; Mr. Walker, Mr. Randolph, and Atty. Roger M. Yancey who was toastmaster.

LAND OF THE NOBLE FREE

By LAYLE LANE

(Continued from last week)

Miss Lane remarked: "I realize relations between Negro and white in the United States cannot be solved just by one Board of Education over night. We would like the Board of Education to feel that this is a problem education will have to play a part in because, after all what is education, if it is not for some way to deal more wisely and more efficiently with problems of the world."

Mr. Voorhees asked: "Are not colored people admitted in the vocational schools the same as the whites?"

Mrs. Corrothers replied: "Yes, but the counsellor will say aviation is closed to you. You take baking or the like. In the first place, that is not the purpose of the counsellor. If we followed such policy, I suppose I would be picking cotton some place in the South or, perhaps, I would be a cook. Mr. John here is an assistant corporation counsel. If he had been advised in school, he perhaps, would be down South some place picking cotton. A counsellor cannot tell me or my group what our hopes are for the future. I think that is very bad policy. And then, in your Board, they ask for skill in trades. Unless a person is employed in a trade he cannot get into an evening trade school." Mrs. Connelly replied: "That is a Federal regulation for evening trade and extension classes."

Mr. Brennan asked: "Your complaint is that counsellors in junior high schools say to the boys, you cannot go here or you should go there. Your thought is, he should confine himself to telling the boy what his advantages are in this trade and what his disadvantages are in another trade and let his make his own decision."

To this Mrs. Corrothers replied: "That is right."

Mr. John remarked: "I do not think the opinion that the white man will not work with the Negro is particularly true. I have never had any difficulty."

Miss Lane remarked: "We would like to have adopted a policy that vocational education would be open to all who have aptitude and interest to do the work.

Mrs. Donnelly next stated: "While the Advisory Board proper is appointed by the Board of Education, under the Advisory Board as I explained to Miss Lane, we have thirty-two trade commissions. The Commission members are appointed by this Board. Before your committee came to see us, Rev. Johnson, whom you recommend to us, was serving on a Commission for the Yorkville School. There are also two Negro representatives on a Committee connected with the Chelsea Vocational High School. In order that the Negroes would be further represented, I asked Miss Lane to send me the names of people whose services might be of value on our various commissions. Mrs. Donnelly read the names of those who had been asked to serve on various commissions of the Advisory Board and indicated those who replied to the invitation and those who did not. She said that she would send the names of the various Advisory Board Commissions and their general functions, and also a list of the names of the Negro people who had accepted membership on a commission of the Advisory Board to Miss Lane.

Miss Lane asked: "Is there any possibility of having a Negro trade advisor?"

To this Mrs. Donnelly replied: "Our trade advisors were recommended by employers and unions. That is according to Federal law and, may I say, for your information, that instead of adding any trade advisors, we may be compelled to recommend the layoff of some of them.

Miss Lane said there was a machine shop in one of the Harlem schools but the Board of Education adopted a policy that it would not train junior high school students in specializing shop work, therefore, that shop was closed. Inasmuch as there are limited opportunities for training in Harlem, Miss Lane asked if this equipment could be left in Harlem for the use of adults, instead of being moved to Brooklyn.

Mrs. Donnelly suggested that it be recommended to send this material to the New York Vocational High School for Boys.

In Executive Session

With relation to points 1 and 2 it was voted that a resolution would be forwarded to the Board of Education, showing very clearly in its wording, that the Advisory Board does not believe in the breaking up of the United States on the basis of race, color or creed but that it does support the general theory on which vocational education is founded, namely, to equip boys and girls to earn a livelihood in the occupation to which they feel themselves most adaptable and at the same time educate them in the cultural subjects so that their education will be on a par with that obtained in an academic high school.

With relation to Point 3, it was the opinion that this was a matter for the Board of Examiners and the State Department of Education.

It was the opinion that point 4 also, was not within the province of the Advisory Board.

November 6, 1941.

Mrs. Betty Hawley Donnelly,
Advisory Board of Education
11 Livingston Street
Brooklyn, N. Y.

Dear Mrs. Donnelly:

Thank you for your letter of October 24 with its enclosures, namely, the list of trade commissions, the work of the Advisory Board and the minutes of our interview on October 14.

If we had known that the list of persons suggested for an open meeting would have been asked to serve as commission members, recommendations of persons directly associated with trades would have been made. In a few days we will send you a list of persons who can be counted on to serve.

We are glad to have a copy of the minutes to make the essential corrections. These are as follows:

1. Appearances: Mrs. Corrothers is from the Harlem Labor Center.

Mr. John from the New York Branch of the N.A.A.C.P.

Only one other person besides the members of the Advisory Board and ourselves was present during the discussion.

2. Discussion: On page one, last paragraph, is the statement "However she Miss Lane) said that Labor's point that public vocational education cannot be unlimited because that would put a large labor supply on the market and tend to lower standards must be realized."

This statement is not only at variance with our first request, but contrary to what Miss Lane said. The correct statement is: she (Miss Lane) realized labor wanted to protect its standards by restricting the supply of trained workers; but that as long as there was a large number of unemployed, labor's standards were threatened. Trained workers were a better safeguard for standards than untrained.

B.P.2, 2nd Par. is this statement ....Miss Lane mentioned that because of limitations upon training, there are just two or three Negro teachers. The statement should be ....Miss Lane stated that because of limitations upon getting trade experience because of barriers against Negro membership by many unions in the skilled trades which in turn prevent their getting work in many shops, qualified Negro teachers were unable to secure recognition of work done on their own.

C.P. 2, last paragraph, statement of Mrs. Corrothers, The sentence "And then in your Board they ask for skill in trades, should have added to it this clause....before a student can be admitted into a training class.

D. Finally....the word Negro is similar to such words as American, Irish, Italian, etc. and is written similarly with a capital N.

Appropos of the decision made in Executive Session, our committee is desirous of securing a copy of the resolution sent to the Board of Education. From the minutes it is not clear whether the resolution indicated any change of policy on the part of the Advisory Board.

That is our main interest ,not our own racial group, but also be- only because of our concern for cause of our desire that education, during this period of emphasis upon increasing democracy, make a real contribution toward that goal.

NEW YORK AGE

DECEMBER 20, 1941

CHICAGO DEFENDER

DECEMBER 13, 1941

GOVERNMENT SENDS POSTER ON JOB ORDER TO U. S. PLANTS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 18—Into 12,000 defense plants throughout the country this week went posters calling attention to the Government's non-discrimination policy in defense employment. Dr. Robert C. Weaver, (left), Chief of the Negro Employment and Training Branch of OPM, and Lawrence W. Cramer, Executive Secretary of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, are sown examining the poster which quotes the following section from President Roosevelt's Executive Order No. 8802:

"...I do hereby reaffirm the policy of the United States that there shall be no discrimination in the employment of workers in defense industries or government because of race, creed, color or national origin, and I do hereby declare that it is the duty of employers and of labor organizations, in furtherance of said policy and of this order, to provide for the full and equitable participation of all workers in defense industries, without discrimination because of race, creed, color or national origin. ."

AIRCRAFT CO. COMMENDED BY FEP COMMITTEE

LOCKHEED IS REPORTED AS COOPERATIVE

Corporation Program Is Called Sympathetic And Intelligent

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Mark Ethridge, chairman of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, Thursday commended Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, Burbank, Calif., for its "sympathetic and intelligent program of eliminating discrimination" based on race, creed, color or national origin.

In a letter to President Robert E. Gross of Lockheed, Ethridge noted that this company has carried out suggestions made by the committee in its recent Los Angeles hearings to establish a system of reviewing cases of all rejected job applicants who had complained to the committee that they were victims of discrimination because of race or national origin.

"The information given concerning these cases satisfies the committee that you have taken appropriate steps to eliminate any ground for complaint that discrimination based on race or national origin was involved," Ethridge's letter said.

The letter expressed agreement with the observation made by Lockheed officials that the most effective way to eliminate such discriminations "is to insist that employers themselves establish fair and reasonable standards of selection based on aptitudes and abilities."

The Lockheed company has reported to the committee that it is hiring Negroes with considerable success and that other workers are showing a cooperative attitude toward them. In the past three months the Lockheed company has trained and employed 125 Negroes.

THE
Chicago Defender
WORLD'S GREATEST WEEKLY

COPYRIGHT 1942, BY ROBERT S. ABBOTT PUBLISHING CO.
OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, 3435 INDIANA AVE., TELEPHONE CALUMET 5656

THIS PAPER CONSISTS OF TWO PARTS — PART ONE

CHICAGO, ILL., SATURDAY, APRIL 18, 1942

NEW NAVY POLICY

Assail NAACP And NNC For Approving Jim Crow

By ENOC P. WATERS,

Only one of the na important leaders—A. P. Randolph—was left this to carry on the people's for the full integratio

A. P. Randolph

Negroes in nation's forces as ter White National ciation fo Advancem Colored and Max gan and Jo Davis o National Congress to acceptan "an undi plan" fo mittance groes to the navy. The new announced Tuesday, April Secretary of the Navy Frank admits Negroes into the Guard, Marine Corps and Nav emergency service only in than messmen categories, but the stipulation that they be gated from the time of their ment until their discharge diately after the war.

Regarded by one prominent eagoan as "a half-handed ge intended to quiet the clam militant Negroes and liberal for the full integration of Negroes into the navy," the new policy was bitterly assailed locally.

But attacks on the jim crow policy were matched with criticism of White, Yergan and Davis.

The plan was announced in a statement released by Secretary Knox and failed to mention that Negro volunteers for the three branches of the naval services would be segregated and would serve only for the duration of the war after which they will be discharged. Only as messmen can Negroes serve regular enlistments in the Navy under the new policy.

The statement follows:

"Negro volunteers will be accepted for enlistment for general service in the reserve components of the U. S. Navy, the U. S. Marine Corps, and the U. S. Coast Guard.

"All ratings in those three branches of the Naval Service will be opened to them, and recruiting is to be begun as soon as a suitable training station is established. A public announcement will be made when actual recruiting gets under way.

"In making the announcement officials stated that the same physical and mental entrance standards required of all Navy personnel is to be required of Negroes.

"It was added that Negro sailors

AN EDITORIAL

REE MEN—Walter White of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Max Yergan and P. Davis of the National Negro Congress last week broke with you and us who looked to them as among our rs in an historic struggle for the full realization of democ- in this country when they placed their approval on the

YERGAN DAVIS WHITE

Navy policy which admits Negroes into the service "for so far reaching that we planation of their sudden them support and urged

"progress toward a more enlightened point of view when they urged by telegram hundreds of persons thr country to commend President Roosevelt and Knox for opening up the Navy to Negroes, they thousands of Negroes and closed the doors for ce upon full integration.

They have not only deper the ideals of their organizations which have enlisted of persons to their support, but they have misled and Knox into believing that jim-crow measures such satisfy the Negro's demands. They have misled them to such jim-crow measures will remove the Negro's apa the war effort and bolster his morale.

They have destroyed their ce and the influence of organizations they represent in bringing about the complete integration of the the armed forces, other branches of the government in private industry.

They have themselves me position they have criticized others for taking seriously weakened the Race's struggle to help dev mocracy strong enough to withstand the assaults o

In so far as our national have refused to follow false leadership; in so fa avoided compromise; in so far as they have our people and have held firm to the principle must have equal rights and privileges with all A —they have had the respect and admiration of many white citizens.

Now more than ever o nizations should and must play a vitally impo ng the crisis of the democracies. The responsi g democracy a reality at home as well as abroad, after the war, rests

See E

24 PAGES 10¢ AND WORTH IT

Vol. XXXVII, No. 52

FEP TELLS 10 FIRMS TO END DISCRIMINATION

Demands List of Worker Each Month As Proof Of Compliance

WASHINGTON D. C.—Ten concerns having millions of dollars in war contracts were told to cease discriminating against available workers because of their race or religion, in "Findings and Directions" which they received this week from the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice.

The concerns are in the Chicago and Milwaukee areas, and the findings and directions are based on two days of public hearings held January 19-20 in Chicago.

Since January the committee, of which Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of Hampton institute, is chairman, had studied the record before taking the action announced today.

The companies involved in the Chicago area are: the Stewart-Warner corporation, the Buick Aviation plant at Melrose, Ill., a unit of General Motors corporation; the Bearse Manufacturing company, Simpson Manufacturing company and the Studebaker branch factory.

Those in the Milwaukee area are: the Nordberg Manufacturing company, A. O. Smith corpo ation, Heil company, Allis-Chalmers corporation and the Harnischfeger corporation.

PITTSBURGH COURIER

DECEMBER 13, 1941

FEP Seeks Negro Training School Near Southern Shipbuilding Yards

Alabama Officials Show Considerable Opposition to Plan But FEP Insists on Policy Being Carried Out—Some Yards Refuse to Hire Negroes.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 11—(ANP)—The Fair Employment Practice committee's attention is occupied with the development of high-grade vocational training schools for Negroes in the vicinity of shipbuilding yards along the Atlantic and Gulf seaboards, it was announced last Tuesday. Considerable progress toward the desired objective has been made in some yards, particularly in the Carolinas, but in Alabama, officials report strong resistance both from State vocational leaders and labor unions.

Negro workmen have been employed in great numbers at Hog Island shipbuilding yards ever since the last World war,, and particular pride is taken in their accomplishments in ship construction.

At Mobile, one shipbuilding company holding a contract with the AFL Metal Trades council employs no Negro workmen, while another company holding a CIO contract has about 20 per cent Negroes employed in unskilled and semi-skilled jobs. Equal treatment is given Negro workers at Pascagoula, Miss., and Charleston, S. C., according to the FEPC. Training schools will soon be established at Wilmington and Charleston.

Officials are distressed over resistance shown by Alabama officials to the organization of a vocational school for Negroes, since defense contracts now specify that there shall be no discrimination against any person because of "race, creed, color or national origin." However, the committee has let it be known that it expects Alabama's State Board of Vocational Education to work out a satisfactory solution to the problem.

FEPC Opens Chi Office; Hearings Set for January

To Probe Bias in Defense Plants in Three States

CHICAGO. — (ANP) — The President's Fair Employment Practices' Committee this week opened a branch office here to begin preparations for a public hearing next month on the employment practices of defense industries and government agencies in Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin.

The local offices are located in Room 1428, Civic Opera Building, 20 N. Wacker Drive. The hearing is scheduled for January 18 and 19.

The preliminary studies and the hearing will be part of the government's program to eliminate discrimination against qualified and needed workers because of their "race, creed, color, or national origin."

G. James Fleming, field representatiev of the FEPC, arrived in Chicago from Washington a few days ago to initiate the preparations.

Firms Involved

Among the local firms which will be asked to testify on their discriminatory employment practices will be the Chicago Screw Company, Stewart - Warner, Zenith Radio, Majective Radio, Mille Novelty, Chicago Flexible Shaft Company.

E. C. Wilson, presiedn

E. C. Wilson, president of General Motors, will be asked to testify personally on racial prejudice in hiring at the new Buick aviation engine plant in Melroce Park and the GM Diesel plant at Lyons, Ill.

Aiding Fleming in preparing facts for the hearing are Sam B. Danley of the U.S. Employment Service and Austin Scott of the OPM labor supply division.

AFRO-AMERICAN

DECEMBER 20, 1941

FEPC HEADS CONFER WITH EDITORS

Lawrence W. Cramer, executive secretary of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee (left), and George M. Johnson, assistant executive, as they conferred with editors of Negro newspapers in Washington last Tuesday. Mr. Cramer outlined the duties and powers of his committee and described progress so far made in opening job opportunities for Negroes. He confessed that the committee had been confronted with some problems which it has not yet been able to solve. —Harris Photo.

WAR DEPT. CONTRACTS CARRY NON-BIAS CLAUSE

SETS ITS FIRST HEARINGS FOR JANUARY, 1942

Prepares To Sift Defense Employment Problems In Three States

The President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice this week opened a branch office in Chicago to begin preparations for a public hearing next month on the employment practices of defense industries and government agencies in Chicago and the tri-state area of Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin.

The local offices are located in Room 1428, Civic Opera building, 20 North Wacker drive. The preliminary studies and the hearing will be part of the government's program to eliminate discrimination against qualified and needed workers because of their "race, creed, color, or national origin," in keeping with an executive order issued by President Roosevelt on June 25.

The public hearing is scheduled for January 18 and 19.

The preparations for the hearing are being made by G. James Fleming, field representative of the committee, of the Negro employment and training branch of OPM, and the minorities groups branch, OPM. Several organizations which have long been interested in integrating minority groups into the total defense program will assist.

The committee states that, in holding hearings, it is governed by the executive order which authorizes it to do the following:

1. To "receive and investigate complaints of discrimination because of race, creed, color or national origin" in violation of the executive order.

2. To take "appropriate steps to redress grievances which it finds to be valid."

3. To "recommend to the several departments and agencies of the government of the United States and to the President all measures which may be deemed necessary or proper . . . . ".

Among the local firms which will be asked to testify on their discriminatory employment practices will be the Chicago Screw company, Stewart-Warner, Zenith Radio, Majestic Radio, Mille Novelty, Chicago Flexible Shaft company.

C. E. Wilson, president of General Motors, will be asked to testify personally on racial prejudice in hiring at the new Buick aviation engine plant in Melrose Park and the GM Diesel plant at Lyons, Ill.

Aiding Fleming in preparing facts for the hearing are Sam B. Danley of the U. S. Employment service and Austin Scott of the OPM labor supply division.

GOVERNMENT HAS RIGHT TO CANCEL FOR RACIAL BIAS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 13—The War Department is now inserting in defense supply contracts a provision under which such contracts may be cancelled whenever the contractor is failing to comply with the executive order of the President banning discrimination in the employment of workers in defense plants on account of race, color or creed.

The provision specifies that if, in the opinion of the contracting officer upon the approval of the Secretary of War, the best interests of the Government so require, the contract may be terminated by the Government, even though the contractor be not in default, by a notice in writing relative thereto from the contracting officer to the contractor.

BIG CONTRACTS CARRY PROVISO

Contracts recently awarded carrying this provision include the following:

Contract with the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, Paterson, N. J., for miscellaneous parts for Wright Aeronautical Type Engines, in the sum of $19,268,820.36.

Contract with the Yellow Truck & Coach Manufacturing Company (General Motors Truck & Coach Division), Pontiac, Michigan, for the delivery of trucks at the Holabird Quartermaster Depot, Baltimore, Md., in the sum of $4,426,020.

Contract with the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc., Akron, O., for life rafts, in the amount of $1,491,840, to be delivered to the Army Air Corps at Wright Field, Dayton, O.

Contract with the Weston Electrical Instrument Corporation, Newark, N. J., for bulbs, indicators, tachometers and data, for the Army Air Corps, in the amount of $1,554,435.12.

Contract with Northrop Aircraft, Inc., Hawthorne, Calif., for airplanes, spare parts and data, at an estimated cost of $17,369,634.15, plus a fixed fee of $1,042,178.05.

Contract with the Republic Aviation Corporation, Farmingdale, L. I., New York, for maintenance parts for Republic type airplanes, in the amount of $3,130,349.91.

Contract with Willys-Overland Motors, Inc., Toledo, O., for trucks to be delivered to the Holabird Quartermaster Depot, Baltimore, in the amount of $12,040,000.

Show Him The Way!

FEPC SWAMPED WITH LETTERS OF COMPLAINT

Most Of Petitions Found To Come From Others Besides Negroes

WASHINGTON—(ANP) — The President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices is literally swamped with letters of complaint following recent instruction to the public through the press as to how these complaints should be filed. But, for the most part, they contain matter which the FEPC cannot handle, some are incomplete, some are entirely out of question.

And strange to say the complaints are coming from whites as well as Negroes. Foreign born aliens, native whites, Indians, Negroes, and a group of whites who feel that they are being discriminated against comprise the group sending in the letters.

Complaints on old age pension, complaints from cripples, disabled veterans and needy folk have poured into the office of the FEPC to such an extent that the place is literally swamped.

Five persons have been devoting time to merely sorting the letters taking from the great mass those that are under the jurisdiction of the FEPC.

Those which do not come under the FEPC are immediately forwarded to the proper places where they should receive attention.

However, as one of the workers in the FEPC points out, there is too little attention paid to important details by complainants. They do not give dates, names, time and such information as will enable the FEPC to ferret out the real discriminatory cases.

It is important to give names of the persons seen at plants where alleged discrimination is practiced, says the FEPC, and the failure to do this takes away some of the power of the complaint.

Chicago folk seem to think that it is necessary now to hold a public hearing in that city to wipe out many discriminatory practices against Negroes. But their individual complaints are too vague to carry the weight that they should.

The FEPC hopes to clarify the situation as soon as possible since it is working in cramped quarters and with a limited staff. Additions will be made, it is said, when the FEPC moves into its new quarters in one of the newly erected temporary buildings around December 15.

OFFICIAL BUSINESS ☆ Defense Savings Staff - Treasury Department ☆ WASHINGTON, D.C.

Our America

"THAT THESE MAY FACE A FUTURE UNAFRAID"

Certificate of [redacted] Social Action

With faith, determination and confidence of the Negro people in their own power for self liberation, and in recognition of their tragic trials and oppressions in these days of disaster to democracy, the rights of minority peoples and the dignity and independence of the human spirit is hereby acknowledged as being devoted to the highest order of struggle for freedom and justice in the army, navy and air corps, in government, industry, labor unions, education, social service, religion and culture.

_____

Negro March on Washington Committee

Signed A. Philip Randolph ..... National Director

447

The Pittsburgh Courier SATURDAY, JANUARY 17, 1942

RCA POLICY TO HIRE EX-WORKERS; NO DISCRIMINATION, SAYS PRESIDENT

NEW YORK, Jan. 15—(ANP)—G. K. Throckmorton, president of the Radio Corporation of America, wired Lawrence Cremer, executive secretary of the Fair Employment Practice committee, appointed by President Roosevelt, Wednesday, explaining the employment policy of RCA Manufacturing company. An inquiry had been received by the FEPC from the Associated Negro Press which called attention to the fact that the RCA company had two great plants, one located at Indianapolis and employing 2,500 people, without a single Negro worker, and another at Camden, N. J., in which there were few if any Negroes employed. The ANP inquiry also pointed out that David Sarnoff, chairman of the board of RCA, was a member of the President's Fair Employment Practice committee and asked what Mr. Sarnoff's opinion and attitude in the matter were.

President Throckmorton made the reply for RCA. His wire read: "Answering your wire of December 23rd regarding Mr. Barnett's inquiry I would inform you that our company policy is to employ the best qualified workers from among the resident citizens of the community in which our plants operate without discrimination on account of race, creed, color or national origin but giving preference where possible to presently unemployed former employes. This policy established both by choice as well as by contract with employe labor organizations. Past and present increasing transition from normal commercial to defense operations has prevented continuous employment of all employees. Both Company policy and national interest dictates we reinstate such trained and experienced workers as rapidly as conditions will per- Believe our policies as stated eeping with the policy of e and in the best inter- ional welfare."

SHOULD DEMAND RED CROSS A

LEADER ADVISES MILITANT PROTEST

By A. PHILLIP RANDOLPH

NEW YORK, Jan. 22—The refusal of the Red Cross to accept the blood of Negroes is an insult to the race. Since it is certain to shake the morale of the Negro people, it borders upon treason to the cause of national unity.

The expression of race discrimination on the part of the Red Cross is a serious blow to its world-wide prestige and profession as an agency of mercy and humanity.

Refusal of the blood of a citizen by the Red Cross or any governmental agency on account of race, color, creed or nationality is subtle advocacy of one of the most vicious and dangerous doctrines which has ever plagued the human race, namely, racial superiority, the cult and curse of Hitler and Hitlerism, Japanese and Italian fascism.

SHOULD BE CHALLENGED

Failure to challenge this discriminatory policy of the Red Cross, which is of evil and sinister import, is to give aid, comfort and encouragement to the practice and tendency of various agencies . . private and governmental—to offer insult and offense to Negro citizens.

Failure of the Negroes to demand the rescinding of this Nazi policy of the Red Cross tends to give some basis of belief by Negroes in the supersition of racial inferiority.

If the Negro can be called upon to shed his blood on the battle field, he should be called upon to contribute his blood in the clinic and hospital for the victory of American arms and morale over her enemies.

SEND PROTESTS TO ROOSEVELT

America cannot win the battle for the cause of democracy in Europe and Asia and strike at the heart and spirit of democracy at home, such as obtains in the intolerant attitude of the Red Cross on the use of the blood of the Negro people in the blood bank.

Morever, there are reasons to give basis to the belief that this action of the Red Cross is a reflection of the position of the War Department. Negroes all over the country should send letters and telegrams to President Roosevelt and Secreetary of War Stimson, vigorously protesting against this reprehensible species of racial bigotry—which is a blessing in disguise to Hitler's "Mein Kamf" and his fantastic and disastrous racial theories—calling upon the President and Secretary of War, Stimson to strike down this serpent of national disunity.

ROOSEVELT BLASTS AT DISCRIMINATION IN DEFENSE PROGRAM

(Exclusive to The Pittsburgh Courier)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—President Roosevelt again blasted at racial discrimination in the National Defense program in a letter made public here this week by Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union.

As exclusively reported in The Pittsburgh Courier, Curran charged on January 2 that the United States Lines had refused to hire 25 veteran Negro seamen, members of the union and all American citizens, aboard the Kungsholm, which our government had just taken over from the Swedish American Line. At the time no reason was given by the line for turning down the Negro seamen, which is required by its union contract.

Curran protested to the Maritime Commission and wired President Roosevelt. U. S. Lines President John M. Franklin was also the subject of protest. The letter was the President's reply.

Wrote President Roosevelt to Curran, who is also National Vice-President of the CIO:

"I am informed that the discrimination against colored seamen, referred to in your telegram of January 2nd, was eliminated by the action of the United States Maritime Commission on the day it occurred.

"It is the policy of the government of the United States to encourage full participation in the National Defense program by all citizens, regardless of race, creed, color, or national origin, in the firm belief that the democratic way of life within the nation can be defended only with the help and support of all groups within its borders.

"The policy was stated in my Executive Order signed on June 25, 1941. The Order instructed all parties making contracts with the government of the United States to include in all defense contracts thereafter, a provision obligating a contractor not to discriminate against any worker because of race, creed, color or national origin. (This Executive Order was published in full in The Pittsburgh Courier)

"Questions of race, creed and color have no place in determining who are to man our ships. The sole qualifications for a worker in the maritime industry, as well as in any other industry, should be his loyalty and his professional or technical ability and training."

Sincerely yours,
(Signed)
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

N. Y. AMSTERDAM STAR NEWS
January 24, 1942

Dr. Lawrence M. Ervin Heads 'March' Group

Dr. Lawrence M. Ervin was elected president of the March On Washington Movement at a meeting held at the Y. M. C. A., Wednesday.

Others named to office were Victor R. Cools, Frank R. Crosswaith, E. D. Williams, Perry Ferguson, vice presidents; Richard J. Thomas, secretary; Miss Layle Lane, B. F. McLaurin, Dr. George E. Cannon, Quenton R. Hand, Mrs. Louise McDonald, Aldrich Turner, Mrs. Blanche Lee, Dr. Channing H. Tobias, Mrs. Paerl Morton, Mrs. Francis Townsend and Richard Parrish, members of the executive committee; Perry Ferguson, chairman of the membership committee, and Mrs. Cora Jones, co-chairman. Eugene Davidson, field representative of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee addressed the group.

FEPC Hearings to Open in N.Y. Feb. 16

NEW YORK—Continuing its fight against discriminatory employment policies of defense industries, the Fair Employment Practices' Committee has announced that it will hold hearings on such charges here February 16 and 17 at the Bar Association Building, 42 W. Forty-fourth Street.

Organizations, unions, and individual workers are asked to send reports of all cases of racial or religious discrimination in defense employment in this area to the committee's office in the Chanin Building, 122 E. Forty-second Street.

Government Agencies Included

Eugene Davidson, FEPC field representative, said last week that the committee would also act against government agencies if instances of discrimination because of race, creed, or national origin were called to its attention.

These cases, however, will be considered by the committee in executive session, Mr. Davidson added, because it is felt that such cases can be settled inside the government service without recourse to public pressure.

In the case of government departments, the field representative pointed out further that the President's order setting up the FEPC gave it no jurisdiction over the employment policies of the army and navy, except insofar as their civilian employees are concerned.

To Use Suasion First

Mr. Davidson stated that the committee would attempt to settle all cases brought to its attention by education or moral suasion, but as a last resort would recommend cancellation of contracts or the withholding of payments to companies which persist in their refusal to hire members of minority groups.

The committee feels, he said, that "a man who is holding up construction of a bomber or a tank because he refuses to hire a colored man or a Jew is just as much a saboteur as a man who throws a monkey wrench into the machinery."

Before becoming affiliated with the FEPC, Mr. Davidson was connected with the New Negro Alliance in Washington, which successfully fought discriminatory employment practices in District chain stores, and was at one time secretary of the Howard University Alumni Association.

FEPC Cites Machinists' Unions For Bias; Chicago Hearing On

CHICAGO—The President's Fair Employment Practice Committee, meeting here Sunday, voted cite two locals of the International Association of Machnisists to the White House, charging discriminati in membership restrictions. On Monday, the FEPC opened its scheduled two-day session of public hea ings on conditions here, with 11 industrial concerns ordered to appear to answer charges of discriminati against workers in defense ind tries.

The locals cited are 68 and 7 accused respectively by Char Sullivan, San Mateo, Cal., and L. Bellums, Oakland, Cal., dur the recent West Coast FEPC he ings. Action by the President the citations to crack down on two locals, if taken, is expected be followed by similar citations [redacted] being delayed because of the fusal of contractors such as American and Continental C Companies, Buick Motor C Company, Meihle Press Compa and others to employ colored fense workers.

Labor market experts here clare that in certain occupati the shortage of workers could readily overcome if employ would use the available supply colored labor, especially as se ing machine operators, mold plumbers, steamfitters, typi waitresses.

FEPC members present for hearing included Mark F. Eth idge, chairman; David Sarn Alderman Earl S. Dickerson, Chicago; Milton P. Webster, Fr Fenton of the AFL, and J Brophy of the CIO.

Mayor Kelly of Chicago, ope the hearings Monday morn with an appeal for fair dealin all workers after which labor s plys and employment pract were outlined by representat of public and private agencies volved in training and placing fense workers.

Monday afternoon concerns f Chicago and Milwaukee v called to present their reasons discriminating against qual workers because of race. An the companies appearing v Buick Motor Car, Stewart-Wa Radio, Majestic Radio and Te sion, Studebaker, T. H. Be Company, Simpson Construc all of Chicago, and A. O. S Company, Aliss-Chalmers, J P. Heil Company, Nordberg M ufacturing and the Harnischf Corporation, all of Milwaukee holders of defense contracts.

AMSTERDAM NEW YORK STAR-NEWS Saturday, January 24, 1942

Hearings in New York, Invites All Complainants

Cramer Tells Form Desired

No Lawyer Needed To Place Case Before Body

Lawrence W. Cramer, executive secretary of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee, which opens its sessions here the 16 and 17 of next month, issued information this week to job-seekers who are denied employment on account of their race, creed, color and national origin.

The circular which is captioned, "How to Submit Complaints," said:

No Lawyer Necessary

"It is not necessary for an aggrieved worker to have a lawyer draw up any formal papers, but it is necessary that the complaint furnish adequate information to permit the committee to act, and as the investigation proceeds it may be necessary to have the complainant submit a notarized copy of his charges. But to get an investigation started by the committee, only a clear, fact-giving letter is required.

"That fact-giving letter, according to Mr. Cramer, should tell the following:

"The name of the firm, agency, school or union against which the complaint is made, and its location (street and city and State); whether the discrimination alleged is because of (a) race, (b) creed, (c) color, or (d) national origin.

"The race, religion, or national origin of the person making the complaint; the type of job, position or classification for which application is made; the qualifications of the complainant for the job he seeks (including his education and work history, and his civil service status, if he has passed a civil service examination).

"Date when complainant applied for the job which he was denied; date when he was refused employment or admittance to a training course; name of person refusing position (if available); reason given for refusal; statement of additional facts and circumstances indicating discrimination was on account of race, religion or national origin.

"Names and addresses of any witnesses to facts and circumstances indicating discrimination; name and address of person alleging discrimination."

The complaint should be mailed to the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, Social Security Building, Washington, D. C.

AMSTERDAM NEW YORK STAR-NEWS Saturday, January 24, 1942

Hearings in New York, Invites All Complainants

Cramer Tells Form Desired

No Lawyer Needed To Place Case Before Body

Lawrence W. Cramer, executive secretary of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee, which opens its sessions here the 16 and 17 of next month, issued information this week to job-seekers who are denied employment on account of their race, creed, color and national origin.

The circular which is captioned, "How to Submit Complaints," said:

No Lawyer Necessary

"It is not necessary for an aggrieved worker to have a lawyer draw up any formal papers, but it is necessary that the complaint furnish adequate information to permit the committee to act, and as the investigation proceeds it may be necessary to have the complainant submit a notarized copy of his charges. But to get an investigation started by the committee, only a clear, fact-giving letter is required.

"That fact-giving letter, according to Mr. Cramer, should tell the following:

"The name of the firm, agency, school or union against which the complaint is made, and its location (street and city and State); whether the discrimination alleged is because of (a) race, (b) creed, (c) color, or (d) national origin.

"The race, religion, or national origin of the person making the complaint; the type of job, position or classification for which application is made; the qualifications of the complainant for the job he seeks (including his education and work history, and his civil service status, if he has passed a civil service examination).

"Date when complainant applied for the job which he was denied; date when he was refused employment or admittance to a training course; name of person refusing position (if available); reason given for refusal; statement of additional facts and circumstances indicating discrimination was on account of race, religion or national origin.

"Names and addresses of any witnesses to facts and circumstances indicating discrimination; name and address of person alleging discrimination."

The complaint should be mailed to the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, Social Security Building, Washington, D. C.

January 24, 1942 AMSTERDAM NEW YORK STAR-NEWS

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

January 14, 1942

Mr. Joseph Curran, President
National Maritime Union
346 West 17th Street
New York, N. Y.

My dear Mr. Curran:

I am informed that the discrimination against colored seamen, referred to in your telegram of January 2nd, was eliminated by the action of the United States Maritime Commission on the day it occurred.

It is the policy of the Government of the United States to encourage full participation in the National Defense program by all citizens, regardless of race, creed, color, or national origin, in the firm belief that the democratic way of life within the nation can be defended successfully only with the help and support of all groups within its borders.

The policy was stated in my Executive Order signed on June 25, 1941. The order instructed all parties making contracts with the Government of the United States to include in all defense contracts thereafter a provision obligating the contractor not to discriminate against any worker because of race, creed, color or national origin.

Questions of race, creed and color have no place in determining who are to man our ships. The sole qualifications for a worker in the maritime industry, as well as in any other industry, should be his loyalty and his professional or technical ability and training.

Sincerely yours,

Franklin D. Roosevelt

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT REPEATED last week that there is no color bar to war jobs in a letter to Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union. The letter was the result of a telegram sent the Chief Executive by Curran protesting against the refusal of the U. S. Lines to accept colored seamen.

INNOCENT, SAVED FROM CHAIR BY CONFES

WITNESSES AND SCENE AT FEPC DEFENSE JOB QUIZ

Some of the key witnesses to appear before the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices and general view of the city council chambers in the city hall where the hearings were held Monday and Tuesday, January 19 and 20. Above, left to right are W. L. Mathis, personnel director of the Stewart-Warner company; Albert B. George, Jr., who was rejected by the Buick Aviation Engine company when he applied for skilled work; Eugene J. Brock, acting chairman of the Local Supply committee; Lester Mayer, assistant state director of the United States Employment Service in Illinois, and Maxwell Gleaves. Below is a general view of the council chamber during the Monday session. At the time the picture was made, Milton P. Webster, sixth member of the committee, was not present. Because of illness he was able to attend only one of the sessions.—Clynell photos.

BY CONFESSION

QUIZ

nday session. At
P. Webster, sixth sent. Because of of the sessions.—

NEW YORK AGE
January 24, 1942

Negroes Should Demand Red Cross Accept Their Blood, Says Randolph

By A. PHILIP RANDOLPH

The refusal of the Red Cross to accept the blood of Negroes is an insult to the race. Since it is certain to shake the morale of the Negro people, it borders upon treason to the cause of national unity.

This expression of race discrimination on the part of the Red Cross is a serious blow to its world-wide prestige and profession as an agency of mercy and humanity.

Refusal of the blood of a citizen by the Red Cross or any governmental agency on account of race, color, creed or nationality is subtle advocacy of one of the most vicious and dangerous doctrines which has ever plagued the human race, namely, racial superiority, the cult and curse of Hitler and Hitlerism, Japanese and Italian fascism.

Failure to challenge this discriminatory policy of the Red Cross, which is of evil and sinister import, is to give aid, comfort and encouragement to the practice and tendency of various agenices—private and governmental—to offer insult and offense to Negro citizens.

Failure of the Negroes to demand the rescinding of this Nazi policy of the Red Cross tends to give some basis of belief by Negroes in the superstition of racial inferiority.

If the Negro can be called upon to shed his blood on the battle field, he should be called upon to contribute his blood in the clinic and hospital for the victory of American arms and morale over her enemies.

America cannot win the battle for the cause of democracy in Europe and Asia and [illegible] the heart and spirit of [illegible] at home, such as obtains [illegible] intolerant attitude of the [illegible] on the use of the blood of the Negro people in the blood bank.

Moreover, there are reasons to give basis to the belief that this action of the Red Cross is a reflection of the position of the War Department. In fact, Dr. McClendon, President of the Detroit Branch of the NAACP said in a public forum meeting of the Detroit YMCA that the representatives of the Red Cross in Detroit said that the Red Cross was not responsible for the policy.

Therefore, Negroes all over the country should send letters and telegrams to President Roosevelt and Secretary of War Stimson, vigorously protesting against this reprehensible species of racial bigotry—which is a blessing in disguise to Hitler's Mein Kampf, and his fantastic and disastrous racial theories—calling upon the President and Secretry of War Stimson to strike down this serpent of national disunity.

FEPC Needs Power to Punish Biased Employers

Defense Firms Which Refuse to Employ Colored and Jewish Workers Can Only Be Cited to Appear in Washington.

By B. M. PHILLIPS

CHICAGO — The effectiveness of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee (FEPC), which is charged with investigating complaints of discrimination in defense industries as set forth in Executive Order 8802 outlawing such practices, can best be measured by the number of plants it is able to whip into line.

If the Chicago hearings may be taken as an example of the type of work the committee is doing in getting plants to employ colored and Jewish workers, its work is bearing fruit.

Congress Can Give More Power

The fact remains, however, that the committee's usefulness could be greatly enhanced if it had more power.

As it is, the FEPC can only investigate charges of discrimination in a given area and, if necessary, hold hearings at which complainants are given a hearing and the employer is questioned as to his policy and practices.

Committee Can Threaten

If during the testimony, there is evidence, or the employer admits, that there is discrimination, the company may promise to conform with the President's order. Further investigation then follows and if there are no more complaints, the committee has done its job.

In those cases where the employer only promises and discriminatory practices continue, the committee cannot take away government defense contracts or fine the guilty parties. Its only remedy is to recommend to the President that he cite the responsible parties to Washington.

Legislation Needed

This is not sufficient and there is need of legislation providing punishment either by fine, jail term or loss of contracts. (An employer who refuses to take available persons is holding up production and thwarting the defense effort.)

The simple procedure to be followed by residents of defense areas who find themselves discriminated against because of their race, creed, color or national origin is outlined in a circular titled "How to Submit Complaints."

Where to Send Complaints

Workers who have met discrimination on any of these scores are urged to write to the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee, Social Security Board Building, Washington, D.C., giving the following information:

The name of the firm, agency, school or union against which the complaint is made, its location (street and city and State); whether the discrimination alleged was because of race, creed, color or national origin.

What Letter Should State

Also the letter should state, the race, religion or national origin of the person making the complaint; the type of job, position, or classification for which application was made; the qualification of the applicant for the job he seeks (including education and work history, and civil service status, if any).

The date when applicant filed application for job which he was denied; date when he was refused employment or admission to a training course; name of person refusing position (if possible); reason given for refusal; statement of additional facts and circumstances indicating discrimination was on account of race, religion or national origin.

Names and addresses of any witnesses to facts and circumstances indicating discrimination and the name and address of the person making the complaint.

The committee's next hearings will be in New York, February 16 and 17.

Firms Balk at Jews and Poles Too

FEPC Learns Race Discrimination Spreads to Catholic and Foreign-Born.

(Excerpts from testimony of witnesses and officials at Chicago FEPC hearings last week.)

Mayor Kelly

MAYOR EDWARD KELLY of Chicago:

"It is pretty hard, for some reason or another, to get the thought across to the general public that we have problems which must be met.

"We have some fifteen million American citizens, who, because of their color, I know have been discriminated against; not because of their ability, not because of their hearts, but just because of an imaginary line of division.

"We are in war, and we want to win, not for one part of the people, but for all of the people. I come here today to express my thanks for these gentlemen (members of FEPC) who are giving up their time and energy for the purpose of trying to solve this question.

"I have no specific suggestions to make, except that I do find with this discrimination, the government is footing a big bill."

* * *

Mark Ethridge

MARK F. ETHRIDGE, white, Louisville, Ky., publisher and chairman of the committee, in his opening remarks reviewed the President's Executive Order 8802 which set up the FEPC and stated:

"We are engaged in an effort in which every hand that can run a machine must be used; an effort in which every skilled and loyal workman must have an opportunity to participate in this war.

"To draw lines of employment on any basis except that of fitness is to deny ourselves the full use of our man power, but even more serious than that is the fact that it impairs national morale.

"This is an all-out war and anything that does not fall into line with that idea is close to treason."

* * *

State Senator Wallace

SENATOR WILLIAM A. WALLACE: "The findings of the Illinois State Commission on the Condition of the Urban Colored People are that jim-crow barriers restrict colored people in their earnings and force them to maintain themselves below the average of the white population and far below a minimum standard of decency."

* * *

Jewish Employment Secretary

H. I. Barron, white, executive secretary of the Bureau of Jewish Employment Problems: "Any discrimination against the colored minority group soon spreads to Catholics, Jews, Poles and other foreign born in direct violation of the tenets of the country."

* * *

Eugene J. Brock, OPM, Says Jews and Poles Suffer

EUGENE J. BROCK, white, regional labor supply officer of the Social Security Board and chairman of the labor-supply committee of Region VII of the OPM, which covers Illinois, I...

Hampton Prexy Mentioned for FEPC Chair

CHICAGO—Reports were rife here last week that Mark F. Ethridge, white, Louisville, Ky., publisher and chairman of the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee which concluded hearings here Tuesday is considering submitting his resignation.

Ethridge's duties as publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal are said to be the reason for the reported action. If he does step down, reports say, President Malcolm S. MacLean of Hampton Institute, former University of Minnesota professor, will be offered the chairmanship.

Lawrence Cramer, white, former governor to the Philippines, who is serving as executive secretary, is also said to have considered resigning to take a teaching post at Harvard, but reliable sources now say he has decided to remain.

Building, Washington, D.C., giving the following information:

The name of the firm, agency, school or union against which the complaint is made, its location (street and city and State); whether the discrimination alleged was because of race, creed, color or national origin.

What Letter Should State

Also the letter should state, the race, religion or national origin of the person making the complaint; the type of job, position, or classification for which application was made; the qualification of the applicant for the job he seeks (including education and work history, and civil service status, if any).

The date when applicant filed application for job which he was denied; date when he was refused employment or admission to a training course; name of person refusing position (if possible); reason given for refusal; statement of additional facts and circumstances indicating discrimination was on account of race, religion or national origin.

Names and addresses of any witnesses to facts and circumstances indicating discrimination and the name and address of the person making the complaint.

The committee's next hearings will be in New York, February 16 and 17.

anything that does not fall into line with that idea is close to treason."

* * *

State Senator Wallace

SENATOR WILLIAM A. WALLACE: "The findings of the Illinois State Commission on the Condition of the Urban Colored People are that jim-crow barriers restrict colored people in their earnings and force them to maintain themselves below the average of the white population and far below a minimum standard of decency."

* * *

Jewish Employment Secretary

H. I. Barron, white, executive secretary of the Bureau of Jewish Employment Problems: "Any discrimination against the colored minority group soon spreads to Catholics, Jews, Poles and other foreign born in direct violation of the tenets of the country."

* * *

Eugene J. Brock, OPM, Says Jews and Poles Suffer

EUGENE J. BROCK, white, regional labor supply officer of the Social Security Board and chairman of the labor-supply committee of Region VII of the OPM, which covers Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin:

"We can't defend principles of democracy abroad and violate them at home. I hope you will recommend to President Roosevelt that instead of putting aside millions of dollars to build up morale abroad, that amount be set aside to build up morale by fighting discrimination here at home. (Applause from the audience of 500 crowding the council chambers.)

"Employers won't take colored people, Jews and Poles. The Japs are not going to stop to ask if a plane is manufactured by Jews and colored people." (Applause.)

* * *

Only 8 Per Cent of Colored Get Jobs

MISS MARY STUART ANDERSON, white, State director of the NYA: "While 879 or 27 per cent of the total number received training in defense jobs under the NYA are colored, only 8 per cent have been placed in jobs."

* * *

State Placed 4,816 White, 259 Colored

A MR. MALE, representing the Illinois State Employment Service:

"From October, 1940, to November, 1941, my service found jobs for 7,808 persons, 4,816 of whom were white, 259 colored, and the remaining 2,733 had no color indicated.

"During the same period, 11,824 persons have been referred for training in schools and 96.5 per cent of those accepted were [redacted] workers. I inform him that his act in specifying race is unlawful. If he persists, I give him what he asks for.

"I have received Federal orders and none of them states that the State Employment Service is to refuse to accept orders from industries which request certain races of workers."

February 1942

DR. MacLEAN ASSUMES FEPC CHAIRMANSHIP

NEW YORK CITY, Feb. 19 —"This nation cannot win the war unless it utilizes to the fullest extent the skills of the millions of men who comprise its vast minorities," asserted Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of Hampton Institute and newly-appointed chairman of the Fair Employment Practices Committee, which conducted hearings here this week on charges of discriminatory employment practices among defense industries. Twenty leading firms have been charged with hiring bias. Dr. MacLean was named by President Roosevelt to succeed Mark F. Ethridge, editor of Louisville Journal, who will remain with the FEPC as a member. The New York hearings were the first under the new leadership.

Dr. MacLean, who was Director of the General College at the University of Minnesota before becoming president of Hampton in 1940, is outspoken and aggressive. Because of his enviable record and success through the introduction of education innovations at Hampton, he was highly recommended to the President as the man to lend added vigor to the valuable work of the FEPC.

EIGHT CONCERNS MAKE F

FEP GETS RESULTS IN CHICAGO HEARINGS

CHICAGO, Jan. 29. (ANP)—Eight of the nine industrial concerns invited to attend the two-day hearing of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice meeting in the city council chambers here last Monday and Tuesday sent representatives, who pledged their companies' support in rooting out job discrimination against workers because of race, color, creed or national origin. Possibly the most notable action developing from the hearing was the disclosure made by H. A. Gates, president of the Majestic Radio and Television Corporation, that two executive of the company had been dismissed when it was learned that they discriminated against job hunters on the grounds of color.

ALLIS-CHALMERS IGNORES HEARING

When asked whether all applications for employment hereafter would be judged on the same basis without reference to race or color, Gates answered: "As long as I'm there in my present capacity, I'll guarantee that this will be done."

Allis-Chalmers Company of Milwaukee was the only company that did not have a representative to defend itself or answer the charges brought through the FEPC by discriminated workers.

Varying charges of refusal to hire Negroes or Jews were made against each of the concerns who responded at the hearing. Of the eight concerns represented, the Studebaker was the only one given a clean slate.

Complaints that the Studebaker aviation plant had refused to hire Negroes for anything but janitor work were vigorously denied by Walter S. Gundeck, Studebaker's director of industrial relations. According to Gundeck, the company had always had Negroes doing skilled work, and its application blanks incorporate questions of race, color and religion, as requested by the FBI. This refuted a charge made that one of the company's clerks had told an applicant, "We don't hire Italians or Jews."

FEP Committee Member David Sarnoff, president of RCA, remarked that, "In fairness to Studebaker, I regard this as the weakest case we've had. I'm not in the least impressed by the evidence presented here."

The Bearse Manufacturing Company, makers of tents and other canvas products and holders of defense contracts, was brought to the carpet to explain an advertisement appearing in a Chicago newspaper on January 16. The ad, which read, "Operators—five, experienced on power sewing machines, Gentile," appeared a day after the FEPC had informed the company that it was suspected of discriminatory hiring.

The company's personnel manager, J. H. Erickson, stated, "It's not discrimination as to race, color or religion. We wanted to get people who would stay with us, who would get more efficient."

Asked by Alderman Earl B. Dickerson, member of the committee, whether religion meant any difference in an employe's adaptability to work, Erickson said "No, but you have to try the Jews."

Chairman Ethridge told the Bearse representative, "The real test is the long run. It's what your practice is. Here is prima facie evidence of discrimination—your advertisement, and the fact no Jews or Negroes are in your employ. We'll take the case to Washington for study."

Representatives from Milwaukee concerns, the Nordberg Manufacturing Company, Heil Company, A. O. Smith Corporation and Harnischfeger Corporation, admitted some instances of discrimination, but announced that the policy of their respective companies had been revised "to admit all capable workmen, regardless of race, color, creed and national origin."

The Buick Motor Company declared that the company had employed Negroes and Jews and had a policy of non-discrimination. This was given out in reply to charges that eight out of nine Jews and a Negro who were at the top of their ranking class had not been given positions at the aircraft plant in Melrose Park. When asked about the Negro's qualifications, John I. Yellott, director of defense training and also mechanical engineering instructor at Illinois Institute of Technology, said he now employs the Negro as an instructor.

THE AFRO-AMERICAN, FEBRUARY 7, 1942

FEPC Mum on Closed Hearings

WASHINGTON.

George Johnson, FEPC assistant executive secretary, told the AFRO on Tuesday that he was unable to state whether or not the committee's practice of questioning governmental offices such as the post office in private sessions relative to discrimination in violation of the President's order would become a part of the committee's policy.

He said that in Los Angeles, the commitee in executive session, interviewed representatives of government agencies. However, two weeks ago when hearings were held in Chicago, the private hearings were cancelled.

Mr. Johns explained that the reason for this is that the matters would eventually have to be handled in Washington and could not be settled in a private session.

Other Criticism

Questioned as to why the committee should hold public hearings to question employers of defense firms relative to their policies and yet allow government agencies which discriminate to have private hearings, Mr. Johnson said that there has already been some criticism of this by a Chicago daily.

The committee's third hearing is to be held in New York.

EDGE TO END JOB BIAS

N. Y. AMSTERDAM STAR NEWS February 1942

Mob Lynches Phila. Soldier In Flagstaff

Refusal of Restaurant To Serve Negroes Starts Fatal Row; Sheriff Free

(Special to Star-News)

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. — Despite objections from some of the little city's leading white citizens, a mob of approximately 400 surrounded a group of colored soldiers in a restaurant here last Saturday and shot one of them to death before "cooler heads" could intervene.

The mob-victim was 25-year-old Pvt. Jesse Smith, formerly of Philadelphia.

A few hours afterward, a co[redacted] was identified as Merril [redacted] It was the first time, officials said, that a colored man has been lynched in Arizona. Since 1882, twenty-nine persons (all white) have been lynched. It was also pointed out that only a few colored citizens live here. The total population amounts to 5,000.

Arrive on Leave

Pvt. Smith and eleven of his pals from a nearby Army camp arrived in Flagstaff last Friday night on a 24-hour leave, police said, and during that time got into an argument with a restaurant owner who allegedly told them "Uniform or no uniform we're not going to serve any n——rs in here."

After telling the restaurateur they intended to break up Jim Crowism throughout the country before leaving for battlefields abroad, the soldiers returned to their camp.

Meanwhile, Sheriff Perry Francis called a group of whites together, appointed many of them as special deputies and warned hundreds of others (via grapevine rumors) that "we've got to work together and stop these n——rs from trying to drink and eat in our restaurants."

One colored soldier, still on leave in Flagstaff, heard about it. He left town immediately, returned to his camp and informed other soldiers that the cops were organizing a mob for the purpose of "rushing the camp and running those n——rs back to New York."

Warned on Lynching

These incidents and reports were told to the Star-News by soldiers and a few neutral whites who warned the sheriff against "anything like a lynching," they said.

After the disturbance and other complaints, particularly the refusal of eating places to serve colored soldiers, had been discussed at camp the soldiers armed themselves with machine guns and revolvers and came back to Flagstaff.

On their arrival, they met a group of whites who booed them and told them to "read and run." Immediately, then, police said, the soldiers pulled their guns and started shooting in the air.

Rumors that the soldiers were "shooting up the town" spread like wild fire. The soldiers marched through the business district and on to the Grand Canyon Cafe, where they went inside.

Ordered to Give Up Guns

Half an hour later, the mob of whites surrounded the establishment and ordered the soldiers to give up their guns and surrender. One of them obeyed the order.

But Private Smith walked to the entrance of the place armed with

PITTSBURGH COURIER February 21, 1942

U. S. Dilemna

RACE PROBLEM PUTS INTER-AMERICAN PROGRAM IN UNTENABLE POSITION

BY HORACE R. CAYTON

THE problem of Negro morale is serious in spite of anything you read or hear to the contrary. The tragic thing is that there is an absolute unwillingness of the Administration or any influential group in the country to bring the problem out into the open for discussion—if this were done at least a temporary adjustment could be worked out. The problem is simple: Negroes, because of their history in this country and in light of their more recent experiences during the depression, and the fact that they were not included to a greater extent in the war effort, are resentful. This is a normal reaction to the conditions which they have had to face. Some [redacted] for immediate [redacted] the situation [redacted] for giving the Negro a [redacted] for more participation in our democratic structure, could be worked out if we could get this simple fact before the public and over to the Administration.

Mr. Cayton

SUBJECT TABOOED AMONG INTELLECTUALS

But the fiction that Negroes share alike in this democracy and the fear of arousing the animosity of white groups has prevented even a discussion of the problem. For example, the University of [redacted] recently discussed [redacted] question, but [redacted] to discuss Negro m[redacted] that it was "dynamite." [redacted] is the attitude of perhaps [redacted] group of intellectuals in the country today and shows the extent to which the subject is tabooed.

I HAVE always felt that a democracy was as strong as its weakest link, and that before we will be entirely successful in spreading democracy abroad we would have to come to some terms with our internal problems. That's why The Courier's slogan of the double V . . . the struggle for democracy at home and democracy abroad . . . has appealed so strongly to me.

WHITES SUFFER FROM POLL TAX

As long as the Negro is kept in a subjected position, is stripped of civil rights and civil liberties, this very fact is one which sets a precedent to be used in taking away the rights and liberties of other groups. Millions of poor whites in the South are disenfranchised by the poll tax designed to keep Negroes from voting.

BUT, in addition to the internal danger, there is an external danger. Let us examine for a minute the hemispheric solidarity program. To keep from offending the real (or supposed) sensibilities of Latin Americans, the State Department [redacted] used to make public any [redacted] to the fact that of the [redacted] people in 20 countries [redacted] America, there are only [redacted] pure whites. The rest [redacted] the population is made up of [redacted]6,000,000 pure Negroes, 17,000,000 Indians and 63,000,000 mestizos of mixed bloods.

U. S. IGNORES LATIN NEGROES

The United States is not in a position to furnish to these non-white people an example of the virtues of democracy when she fails to take steps toward removing the color barriers, the poll tax and lynchings. There is already enough feeling in these countries against the United States, and it will do the program no good to continue to hold up to the non-white population the American brand of race prejudice.

TO a lerge extent, the United States finds itself in the same dilemma in handling this question as she finds herself in handling the domestic race question. The only program which has been followed in both instances is to try to pretend that it does not exist. In the long run, this is not going to work in either case.

Sooner or later, the implications of race, both in our internal affairs and in South America and Asia, will have to be faced. Democracy will and must win, but it must be a democracy which will incl[redacted] Chinese, black South [redacted] brown North Amer[redacted] white men. Fail[redacted] will perpetuate a s[redacted] future time wi[redacted] desperate and tra[redacted] between races on a world-wide basis.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1942 The Pittsburgh Courier

1200 NEGROES PROTEST WAR DISCRIMINATION

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—At a public mass meeting in the Mt. Olivet Baptist church last Sunday, 1,200 Negro citizens joined in protest against discriminations in the Navy, Army, Air Corps and Marine and condemned attacks on U.S. uniformed soldiers of color at Alexandria, La., and Fort Bragg, and the barbaric lynching at Sikeston, Mo.

The meeting was presided over by Dr. Lawrence M. Ervin, chairman of the New York division of the March-on-Washington movement. Invocation was given by the Rev. O. Clay Maxwell, pastor of the church. Dr. Ervin opened the meeting by stating that Negroes were exercising their right of protest in a democracy against evils and injustices they suffer. He eloquently described the role of Frederick Douglass in the abolition movement as well as the pioneers who fought for the freedom of the slaves and the constitutional rights of Negro citizens.

RANDOLPH DESCRIBES PROTEST MOVEMENT

Frank R. Crosswaith, chairman of the Negro Labor Committee of Harlem, stated that Negroes had won a significant victory in the issuance of the Executive Order and establishment of the Fair Employment Practice Committee by President Roosevelt, through the March-on-Washington movement. He asserted that the most significant thing about the movement was that it was a fine expression of unity of Negroes under black leadership. He urged Negroes to seek allies whose interests were similar to their own in their fight for freedom.

A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and national director of the March-on-Washington movement, described the background of the March-on-Washington movement and the nationwide wave of resentment and bitterness among Negroes because of discriminations in defense industries that gave rise to it.

Mr. Randolph indicated that the ington movement is to enlist a program of the March-on-Wash-million Negroes for mass action to defend and protect Negroes' rights, today and in the post-war period. He said that the Negroes' fight now against all forms of discrimination was definitely compatible with the fight of the United States to have the democratic system.

through the business district and on to the Grand Canyon Cafe, where they went inside.

Ordered to Give Up Guns

Half an hour later, the mob of whites surrounded the establishment and ordered the soldiers to give up their guns and surrender. One of them obeyed the order.

But Private Smith walked to the entrance of the place armed with a machine gun, authorities said, and pointed it at the mob. Before he could fire, however, several shots rang out and he fell dead.

Six others formed a circle, pointing guns in every direction, and walked through the line formed by the mob. And while five others were surrendering they escaped and got back to camp.

Major H. C. Nichols, their commanding officer, announced that all of them were A. W. O. L., armed and had been drinking. The five under arrest were not allowed to give their version of the lynching, pending an investigation by Army authorities.

The Pittsburgh Courier

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1942

URGES NEGRO WAR GROUP TO CONFER WITH FDR

RANDOLPH SUGGESTS CITIZEN ADVISORS ON RACE PROBLEMS

CHICAGO, Feb. 5.—"The Fort Bragg military killing; the racial military riot in Alexandria, Louisiana in which Negro soldiers were shot by white military and civilian police; the outrageous and widespread discriminations against Negro workers in government departments and defense industries; and the horrible lynching of a Negro, Cleo Wright, at Sikeston, Missouri, create a state of inter- and intra-racial tempers that is definitely unhealthy and threatening from both the point of view of the Negro people and the Government," says President Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and national director of the March on Washington Movement.

RACIAL OUTBURST MAY INCREASE

"Action in behalf of the Negro should not only be curative, but also prophylactic. Because of the confused and chaotic manner in which questions relating to Negroes are approached by the Government, there is ample reason to believe that riots, lynchings and discriminations affecting Negroes in military and civilian life will increase during the war," states Randolph.

"If the Negro people and the Government do not move to plan the adoption of policies and machinery that can effectively grapple with these wild outbursts of racial hatred and stubborn forms of discriminations, the forces of racial prejudice will soon get entirely out of hand," observed Randolph in further observed Randolph, headquarters of the Midwestern Brotherhood.

WILL CONFER ON ALL QUESTIONS

To the end of meeting this dangerous situation, President Roosevelt suggests that President Roosevelt meet with a small representative Negro committee, which is concerned with Citizens' Committee, which is concerned with advise and consult with him personally at various times on matters concerning the integration and equal participation of Negroes in war industries, the armed forces, including the Navy, Air Corps, Marine, Army and the various branches of the Government, and departments of the agencies and executive branches of the Government, and on matters of legislation and executive orders that may make for the Negro's national defense. Rights so as to give them something to feel that they have something to fight for in the present war.

"Such a committee would follow in pattern and purpose the labor committee of the A. F. of L. and C.I.O. the President recently established to confer with him on problems affecting labor," concluded Randolph.

UNION HEADS CLASH ON JOB POLICY

America, UNITE OR WE LOSE WAR!

AMSTERDAM
NEW YORK STAR-NEWS
February 21, 1942

FEPC's Labor Chiefs Clash Over Policies

AFL Representative Objects to CIO Man's Report

By J. ROBERT SMITH

A clash between the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. representatives on the Fair Employment Practice Committee took place at the Tuesday morning's hearings on discrimination and was occasioned by a remark made by Mayor LaGuardia the previous day when he said "that some unions which as a matter of policy discriminate."

Taking the matter up, John Brophy, of the C. I. O. who represented Philip Murray, said that he wanted to make public the policy

(Continued on Page 2)

FEPC's Labor Chiefs Clash Over Policies

A. F. of L. Representative Objects to Report Of C. I. O.'s Man of the C. I. O., went on record before the group as declaring that it was the object of his organization:

(Continued from Page 1)

"To bring about the effective organization of working men and women in America, regardless of race, creed, color or nationality, and to unite them for common action into labor unions for their mutual aid and protection, and that the C. I. O. union neither in constitution nor in practice discriminates."

Frank Fenton, of the A. F. of L. representing William Green, interrupted Brophy by stating, "What does this have to do with the case before us?"

Replying, Brophy said, "I want to make it clear that the Mayor was not specific in his allegations. However, the allegations do not apply to C. I. O. unions.

Rebutting, Fenton said, "That is a personal matter to be directed to the Mayor either in the newspaper or in reply or in any way, but has no place before this Committee here today."

Acting as a referee in the clash, Mark Ethridge, another member of the committee said, "From past experience of the committee, whenever a union comes up on charges of discrimination, both the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. members of the committee would vote for citations of that union."

Will Lift Charter

Later in the hearings, V. P. Hamilton, vice president and general manager of the [illegible] Company of Belleville, [illegible] appeared as a witness [illegible] cern in a case of [illegible] averred that his [illegible] agreement with [illegible] union not to [illegible] the [illegible] F. of L. [illegible] upon colored people. [illegible] interrupted the chairman of the committee and told the committee that he would lift its policy and advised Hamilton of the union if that is to hire colored people and he will see that the company is protected.

Expose Eleven Firms At FEPC Hearings

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

The President's Fair Employment Practice Committee, with all seven members present, opened up for two days of business Monday and heard 11 firms holding defense contracts in New York and New Jersey cited on charges of racial discrimination. The sessions were conducted in the Bar Association Building, 42 West 44th Street, and were witnessed by 200 persons.

With introductory remarks by Mayor La Guardia and Lt. Governor Charles Poletti, the hearings got under way with the new chairman, Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of Hampton Institute, presiding for the first time. Eugene Davidson, field representative for the committee, handled what amounted to the prosecution.

The representatives of various church and governmental groups, however, stated attitudes before the cases were presented. The first of them, Father John S. Boland, chairman of the State Labor Relations Board, speaking for Catholicism, declared that "the question being settled by combat today is the inherent dignity of men." Dr. Robert W. Searle of the Greater New York Federation of Churches read the resolutions of both the Federation and that of the Federal Council of Churches in which both denounced the present biased attitude of holders of defense contracts.

State Group Scored

Representing New York State, Poletti scored the inaction of the Governor's Committee Against Discrimination in Defense Industries, accusing it of spending "too much time talking;" told of the legislation that the state has passed to curb the evil, and offered a series of recommendations, the application of which might effectively implement all these efforts.

Among his suggestions was one that private employment agencies should in some way be stopped from aiding would-be violators of the executive order who choose these agencies in preference to the government regulated state employment services. He also thought district attorneys should prosecute violators of the order, under state laws.

Mayor La Ghardia, for the city, viewed the problem as a national one that the heart and not the head would have to solve. He struck at labor unions which discriminate against minorities in their membership requirements, and then put in a plea for the foreign born and aliens.

Osmond K. Frankel, president of the National Lawyers Guild, spoke for the legal profession; Rabbi J. X. Cohen for the Jew; Henry W. Pope of Welfare Council for the Negro, and Edward Corsi for the foreign born.

Firms Accused

Following the recess the committee heard three companies cited for violation of the executive order. They were Curtis Wright Aeronautical Company, the Becton and Dickinson Company of Rutherford, N. J., makers of medical and surgical supplies, and the Fairchild Aviation Company of Jamaica. All entered a general denial of discrimination.

The Becton - Dickinson firm, firm, which hires 1003 persons, has no Negroes, about 12 Jews and about 25 aliens, according to I. C. Newbury, its controller. The aged and feeble president, Col. F. S. Dickinson, a founder of the company in 1897, when asked if he was prejudiced in his employment policy, said it was to the contrary. Why, he employed Negroes in his household; in fact, he has a private pension list of his "retired" household help. The old man was prevented by his counsel from permitting his colored maid from testifying.

The Fairchild company had to explain why it hired neither Negroes nor Jews. Robert Brown, youthful personnel director for the company, got into considerable difficulty when the committee sought to draw from him an explanation of "this illusive thing you call character," as Dr. MacLean mimicked.

Testifying on the Jewish question at Fairchild, Isadore Goldstein told how he had warned another Jewish applicant to mark "Catholic" on his aplication where it called for religion since the applicant's name was not indicative of his race. P. S.: He got the job.

Tuesday morning brought a continuation of the situations. Those hauled onto the carpet were Sperry Gyroscope Corp., Ford Instrument Company, a Sperry subsidiary; Babcock and Wilcox, boilermakers of Bayonne, N. J.; Carl L. Norden and Company, Titeflex Metal Hose Company, Newark; Continental Can Company, Passaic; Isolantite, Inc., Belleville, N. J., and Julius Kayser.

Although the charge involved discrimination against Jews, the Titeflex company succeeded in making out a fairly good case in its policy toward Negroes. The company says it employs between 50 and 65 Negroes in various departments.

V. P. Hamilton, general manager for Isolantite, sought to place responsibility on the Chemical and Oil Workers Union, local 22026 (AFL) with which the firm has a closed shop agreement, charging its members refused to work with Negroes. No sooner had he uttered the words than Mr. Fenton, AFL member of the committee, jumped on him and said: "You tell this committee here and now that you'll take Negroes in your plant and I'll personally lift the charter of that union if it refuses to cooperate." Hamilton made categorical reply that he would.

Audience Applauds

So significant was this statement that it brought the first and only outburst of satisfaction from the audience. Questioned later on this point, Mr. Fenton explained that as director of organization for the AFL, he has the authority to revoke the charter of any federal union which demonstrates an attitude inconsistent with the announced policy of non-discrimination of the organization. His authority does not, however, extend to international unions, autonomous bodies in themselves, therefore the International Machinists Union is out of his reach.

Substantial contributions were made in the way of testimony by the labor division of the Works Production Board through Edward Lawson, field representative; Guichard Parrish, director of Negro Affairs, local National Youth Administration; the American Jewish Congress, and various affiliated unions of the Congress for Industrial Organization.

The committee went into executive and secret session Wednesday morning to consider the evidence and testimony offered. Just what decisions they will reach, if any, will remain a dark secret for the next few weeks.

Poletti Says Lehman's Group 'Wastes Time Talking,' But . . .

Lieut.-Governor Charles Poletti called a spade a spade when he criticised the Governor's Committee Against Discrimination in Defense Industries for spending "too much time" talking and not enough in acting. He spoke in behalf of the State before the opening of the FEPC hearings Monday morning.

But in spite of this forthrightness in his direct remarks, the Lieut.-Governor hedged when Earl B. Dickerson, member of the hearing committee, tried to pin him down as to why there are no Negroes on the State Defense Council. It was Mr. Poletti's view that no group should seek representation simply because of their race or religion.

He was very specific in the recommendations he made to the curbs on discrimination more effective. With regard to legislation he proposed:

- That the Governor's Committee be empowered to supoena persons and firms accused of violations of such state statutes.
- That private employment agencies, "the big loopholes," be compelled to disclose their books to proper authorities so that any aid to firms discriminating might be ferretted out.
- That these agencies be held guilty of a misdemeanor for aiding or abetting in discrimination where employers make such specifications.
- That the printing of want ads setting forth discriminatory specifications be prohibited.

With regard to enforcement, Mr. Poletti felt the district attorneys might do more by prosecuting violators of state anti-discrimination legislation, and that interested groups in the general question ought dig up these cases for prosecution.

Mr. Poletti opined that the federal government could make a valuable contribution by wiping out bias in its departments, agencies and particularly the armed forces.

N. Y. AGE
February 21, 1942

PRES. ROOSEVELT'S F.E.P.C. HOLDS HEARINGS HERE

Presides At Hearings Here

Dr. MALCOLM S. MacLEAN

ment is going to go on showing race prejudice in many of its bureaus."

Hear Specific Charges

Citing his own administration where Negroes are given jobs on their merit and not because of the color of their skin, he declared: "You've got to have an executive with guts."

Specific evidence of reported discrimination was heard by the committee against the Wright Aeronautical Corporation of Paterson, N. J., and the Fairchild Aviation Corporation of Jamaica.

Witnesses said that of about 17,900 Wright employees, only 121 are Negroes employed in janitorial or maintenance work. Irving Abramson, head of the New Jersey Council CIO, said the Paterson Vocational School, supported by federal funds but controlled by Wright officials, had refused to enroll Negroes until last November.

Col. Farleigh Dickinson, head of Becton & Dickinson, denied any anti-Negro prejudice although he admitted that he came from North Carolina. He offered as evidence of his feeling the fact that he has Negroes as house servants.

The Fairchild Corporation answered the charges of discrimination levelled against it by saying that five Negroes had been hired since last August, three in skilled jobs.

Beside Dr. MacLean, chairman, other members of the committee hearing the charges were David Sarnboff, head of the Radio Corporation of America Mark Ethridge, general manager of the Louisville-Courier Journal; Alderman Earl B. Dickerson, of Chicago; Milton P. Webster, international vice-president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; Frank Fenton, representing William Green, president of the A. F. of L., and John Brophy, representing Philip Murray, president of the CIO.

Discriminatory Practices Of Private Industry Under Spotlight

Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of Hampton Institute, and newly-appointed chairman of President Roosevelt's Fair Employment Practices Committee, presided for the first time over the committee when it opened special hearings held in the Bar Association Building, 42 West 44th street, of complaints of discrimination in employment of Negroes and other minority groups

The hearings, begun Monday morning were still in progress when The New York Age went to press on Tuesday, with Eugene Davidson, field representative of the committee presenting evidence which had been assembled at the regional office of the committee, 122 East 42nd street.

Among prominent officials and persons who testified before the committee on Monday were Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, Lieutenant-Governor Charles H. Poletti, the Rev. John Boland, chairman of the New York State Labor Relations Board; Henry W. Pope, Welfare Council; Dr. Robert W. Earle, Greater New York Federation of Churches; Rabbi J. X. Cohen, American Jewish Congress; G. P. Bronisch, Loyal Americans of German Descent, and Julius L. Goldstein, Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League.

Lieut. Governor Poletti told the committee that "the picture is very dark in New York State. I think we have loads of discrimination .. .. It's going to be a tough job to eliminate it."

Reviewing state laws relating to discrimination, he said he thought the authorities should abandon all attempts to appease the situation and urged that the Commission of Labor be granted authority to hold hearings and issue subpoenas to compel private agencies to disclose their records.

"I often say politically imprudent things," Mayor LaGuardia said. "I'm not afraid. I'll say this now: Many of your labor unions won't take a black man in. What are you going to do about a situation like that?"

He continued talking on the subject of discrimination in employment but said it was not essentially the problem of local communities.

"It's a national problem," the Mayor declared. "We can't do the job locally if the national govern-

(Continued on page seven)

N. Y. AGE February 28, 1942

Randolph Urges Protest Mass Meeting At Madison Square Garden on Discrimination

At a large and enthusiastic meeting of the New York Division of the March-on-Washington Movement, A. Philip Randolph, National Director of the March-on-Washington Movement and International President of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, Thursday, February 18, described the terrorism, discriminations, segregations and humiliations to which Negro citizens and soldiers are being subjected throughout the nation in graphic and stirring terms and stated that today the tides of democracy for the Negro are running extremely low.

Despite this fact, said he, this is the hour of the Negrgoes' greatest opportunity to win his democratic rights in America.

He pointed out that to this end the Negroes of Harlem—church, sorority, fraternity, civic and social organizations, political, women's, and youth groups, labor unions and business associations—should join in an all-out public mass meeting in Madison Square Garden to protest these outrageous and Hitleristic conditions. It is his suggestion that this monster protest mass meeting be staged sometime in the month of May and that it be the biggest outpouring of Negroes New York or America has ever seen to express their unqualified and sharp condemnation of the policies and practices of the Government and private industries as well as organized labor in unpatriotically denying Negroes the right to which they are entitled as American citizens.

Mr. Randolph insisted that it is the Negroes' responsibility and obligation to crack this notorious and nefarious system of American race prejudice in the interest of the ideals and principles of democracy, and to prevent the continued growth and spread of Hitlerism in America.

Dr. Ervin, chairman of the New York Division of the March-on-Washington movement, following the address of Randolph appointed a committee headed by Mrs. Bessye Bearden as chairman, with Perry Ferguson as vice-chairman of an Arrangements Committee, to work up this monster public protest meeting for Madison Square Garden in May.

"A Call will soon be sent to all of the various Negro organizations in the Harlem Community and Brooklyn, as well as nearby centers, to form a Greater New York City Committee to carry forward this protest crusade for the right of the Negro to equal intergration and participation in defense industries and the armed forces of the country, and to strike a blow against the insult of the Red Cross which rejected Negro blood, the riots against Negro soldiers in Alexandria, La., and the killing at Fort Bragg, North Carolina," Mr. Randolph said.

N. Y. AMSTERDAM STAR NEWS
February 21, 1942

LABOR'S FRONT

By J. Robert Smith

The new year is not quite two months old and already two employment records are broken. The Fifth Avenue Coach Company and New York City Omnibus Corporation has employed ten colored bus drivers and the New York Telephone Company is now training six Harlemites who are expected to be inducted into the Harlem branch office around the middle of next month as clerks.

J. Robert Smith

The telephone company has colored porters, garagemen and clerks. The employment of colored operators would place the company in a rather exemplary position in relation to other concerns that do business in a large colored section and refuse to hire colored help. For instance the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, on 125th Street, does thousands of dollars worth of business with Harlemites but does not consider them worthy for employment.

It is confidently felt that the calibre of youngsters that the telephone company has in training will be of credit to their employers and the public.

Now that we have our own bus drivers the responsibility rests on their shoulders to prove to the public that the fight was not in vain and that they are capable of gloriously filling the positions entrusted in their care.

The first many weeks behind the wheels will be trying times for them. They must expect to be scoffed at and criticized by many intolerant members of the community especially in certain areas of the city. That will be their greatest test. That will be the time for them to be cool and calm. The pressure will be great, but it will not be for long.

There was a time when we had no representatives on our subways, in the police and fire departments and in various city jobs. Today we have many, because the pioneers in those fields gave good account of themselves. Our bus drivers must do likewise. They are not only on the spot themselves, but with them is every colored resident in Harlem.

The public also has a responsibility to shoulder. As passengers on the buses, especially those driven by colored drivers, it is our bounden duty to offer them all of the courtesies and respect possible. They are young in the job and we must have patience with them. Like all other drivers, they will make blunders, but every blunder made will be another potent cog added to their wheels of experience.

Taking everything normally, months hence, we shall look back and wonder why our buses were not years before manned with Harlemites, for by that time our drivers shall have comfortably and ably fitted themselves into the scheme of things.

This column wishes them the very best of luck as pioneers in their new field.

How to Get Jobs

New York State's 81 United States Employment Service offices are opening a half hour earlier and closing a half hour later daily in a move to make their labor exchange facilities more fully available to employers and job seekers. The new operating hours are 8:30 A. M. to 5:30 P. M. on weekdays, and 8:30 A. M. to 12:30 P. M. on Saturdays.

The 44-hour schedule has been in effect since the first of last week in the USES offices throughout the nation. Formerly the offices operated on the usual Federal work week of 39 hours.

The early opening and late closing will make it possible for the offices to handle more easily the constantly increasing number of war production jobs the USES is called on to fill and the flood of applications for employment from workers laid off by non-essential industry. The change in hours will also simplify the registration for employment in advance of layoff by workers whose jobs are threatened by material shortages.

Unemployed persons desiring work in special metal trades for defense jobs may apply at the 87 Madison Avenue offices of the USES, which was formerly known as the New York State Department of Placement and Unemployment Insurance before Federalization of the DPUI under the Social Security Board. Industrial workers in various metal, glass, food and related trades may also register at the Madison Avenue offices.

For commercial positions workers may call at 10 E. 40th St.; hotel and service, 40 E. 59th St.; household, 137 E. 57th St.; building and construction, 44 E. 23d St., and needle trades, 225 W. 34th St.

RANDOLPH SUGGESTS WAR BIAS

PROTEST MEETINGS

MONSTER MASS GATHERINGS ARE PROPOSED

Spingarn Medalist Says Now Is Negro's Time To Defend Rights

NEW YORK CITY — Because of the widespread and continued discriminations against Negroes in the army, navy, and all departments of the armed forces; the insult of the Red Cross in rejecting the blood of Negro people; together with attacks upon Negro soldiers in Alexandria, La., Fort Bragg, and other places in the country, A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, suggests that a series of public mass meetings to protest these flagrant, outrageous and indefensible discriminations against Negroes be staged from coast to coast by the various Negro organizations—civic, educational, women's youth, political, religious, fraternal and otherwise—in the various cities.

Randolph stated in the international headquarters of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters in New York City that some unified, concerted and nation-wide protest of the Negro masses is essential and imperative at this time to shake official America—governmental, industrial, and labor—into the consciousness and realization of the fact that Negroes as American citizens have a right to play a role upon a basis of equality in defense industries as workers and the armed forces as soldiers, sailors, and airmen and in the government as office and professoinal employees, as well as on the policy-making boards of the nation.

The month of May is suggested by Randolph as the time to stage these monster mass meetings with Negro and white leaders—who are dedicated to uncompromising integration and equal participation of Negroes in the defense industries and the armed forces of the country—as speakers.

Randolph points out that now is the time for Negroes to speak up and speak out in defense of their rights and interests, and if they don't do so they are doomed to relegation to the status of virtual vassals and peons in the country.

PITTSBURGH COURIER
MARCH 26, 1942

Rogers Says:-

NAVY'S TREATMENT OF NEGROES CONSTITUTES ONE OF BLACKEST CHAPTERS IN HUMAN INGRATITUDE

BY J. A. ROGERS

EX-NAVYMAN'S letter in last week's Courier comes at an opportune moment. It happens that I was just writing on why jim-crow started in the American Navy. I was fortunate enough last week to meet a former first class petty officer, colored, who gave me the inside story, but asked me not to use his name as he is on a pension. Ex-Navyman's letter thus comes as excellent confirmation of what I'm about to say.

But first, a few facts about the American Navy itself. As you know, it came into existence in 1775. And starting it up was no joke. A sailor's life was then the toughest in the world and a common sailor was regarded as the scum of the earth and treated as such. England, to get men in her navy, generally impressed them. You'd call that kidnaping today. To get an idea of what I mean, read John Masefield's "Sea Life in Nelson's Time," or Forrester's "Captain Horatio Hornblower." There being no impressment in the American Navy, men were extremely difficult to get, therefore any able-bodied man regardless of color, was eagerly accepted. Negroes from the West Indies and the Atlantic coasts, some of whom were excellent seamen, were welcomed as the flowers in spring.

Mr. Rogers

NEGROES SERVED NAVAL HEROES

When America declared her independence, her young navy at once began to distinguish itself. Speaking as one whose favorite reading for many years was sea stories and great sea battles, it is my opinion that the early American Navy has a greater record of victory against great odds than any other before or since. The adventures of John Paul Jones, Chauncey, Hull, and the two Perrys, cannot help but stir the blood of all who love read-blooded action. But without their men, a fairly large percentage of whom were Negroes, these heroes, it is safe to say, would never have been heard of.

UNDER such tough conditions as the early American Navy struggled against there was no place for jim crow, which is a hot-house, parasitic plant, and can no more thrive in times of great danger than any other Southern plant can against wintry winds. In the early days of the Navy the one who knew more about seamanship than his fellow, was promoted over him regardless of color. The officers, of course, came from the aristocracy but even in the British navy where they held most, there was at least one Negro captain, named Perkin.

OLD NAVY KNEW NO PREJUDICES

Dr. Usher Parsons, a surgeon who served on several ships in the War of 1812, tells of the democracy that then prevailed in the American Navy. He says, "The white and colored seamen messed together. About one in six or eight was colored. . . There seemed to be an entire absence of prejudice against the blacks as messmates among the crew." (Livermore, G. Historical Researches on Negroes, pp. 203-06. 1865.)

IN 1812 when Commodore Chauncey with much difficulty had scraped up recruits of both "races" for Perry, then operating on the Great Lakes, and Perry complained about their appearance and their color, Chauncey wrote him sharply, "I have yet to learn that the color of the skin or the cut or timmings of the coat, can affect a man's qualifications or usefulness. I have nearly fifty blacks on board this ship and they are among my best men." Later Perry took it all back. Undermanned as his ships were, he could not have won the Battle of Lake Erie without these Negroes and shabby-looking whites.

SLAVE BECOMES NAVY CAPTAIN

During the Civil War, the Negroes kept up their splendid record. One of them, Robert Smalls, made as big a stir as Captain Colin Kelly does now. Smalls ran a Confederate gunboat with valuable naval secrets and documents, into the Union lines, where he was welcomed as a Godsend. He was made chief pilot of the U.S. naval forces attacking Charleston. White officers from the highest to the lowest gladly followed the directions of this man who but a week before had been a slave. Smalls, you see, had helped lay the mines in Charleston harbor and knew where they were. "This daring exploit," says the Dictionary of National Biography, "gained him national fame." Still later Smalls was made a captain.

ANOTHER exploit in 1862 also brought the Negroes much acclaim. When the Confederate ironclad, Merrimac, was playing havoc with Northern shipping, a plan was made to ram the Merrimac with four passenger ships steaming down on her at once—a very dangerous undertaking. All white men were selected for the job, but those on one of the ships, learning what they were being taken to do, deserted in a body. Negroes were hurriedly sought to take their places but the story getting to the Negroes, some of them balked at going, too. But when told that they were being asked to do what the white men were too scared to do, everyone instantly accepted.

MANY HAVE WON MEDAL OF HONOR

In the Spanish-American war, the Negroes also fought valiantly. Four, and probably five, Negro sailors have won the Congressional Medal of Honor.

To come now to the story of the colored first petty officer of how jim crow began in the American Navy.

HE says that he enlisted in 1903. At that time, men regardless of color, were taken as apprentices and trained for one year, after which they became seamen. Promotion was strictly on merit. He, himself was made first class petty officer before he was twenty. At least a third of the petty officers in the Asiatic fleet were colored, he says. There were colored quartermasters and at least one chief signalman, who now lives in Harlem. Incidentally, he says, he served under Admiral King, now head of the Navy, who was then a lieutenant, and of whom he speaks in high praise. Admiral King, he says, treated his men fairly without regard to color, and so far as the white men were concerned, they were comradely. All the men stood up for each other when they went ashore.

ORDERED COLORED OFFICERS BEACHED

However, about 1909, like a cloudburst from a clear sky came an order from the then Secretary of the Navy, George von Lengerke Meyer, to "beach" the Negro petty officers. Reason: Southern white officers and seamen were coming into the Navy. The advertisement from the Navy's trip around the world was bringing them in. Before that, sailors had come principally from the North Atlantic states.

TAFT was then President, and you'll recall that Taft's first declaration on taking office was that he would never appoint Negroes where it would offend the white South. His predecessor, Roosevelt, had nearly ruined the Republican party in the South by his defiant attitude in giving Negroes jobs.

A BLACK MARK ON U. S. HISTORY

All of the Negro petty officers were not taken off at once. But those who remained were kept on board without any work to do, living the life of Reilly. One such, was the chief machinist's mate on the North Dakota. Later, with the introduction of oil burners, and the much easier work, Negro firemen, water tenders, and chief water tenders were finally ousted, too, and only Negro messmen were accepted. Space will not permit my telling how these Negro messmen were discriminated against in favor of Filipinos and Japanese. But this can be said: Considering the Negro's role in helping make the Navy what it is, his treatment constitutes one of the blackest chapters in the entire history of human ingratitude.

NOW the point I want to make is this: The present administration did not create the existing situation in the Navy. It was an inheritance from a most reactionary band of political parvenus that was trying to chisel in on the Southern vote. The present administration has done more than any other in American history towards furthering the social betterment of the nation, what added lustre it would be, therefore, if it would restore that democratic tradition, that recognition of merit which played so large a part in making the Navy what it is.

PEARL BUCK DENOUNCES 'AMERICAN BRAND' OF DEMO

Noted Woman Novelist and Writer Declares Intermarriage "The Fearful Spectre" and the "Wearisome Defense" of the Age of Race Prejudice.

NEW YORK TIMES "LETTER TO EDITOR" DARES TELL TRUTH

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK TIMES:

Your editorial of Nov. 12, "The Other Side of Harlem," denies the basic cause for the situation in our country of which the new manifestation of crime in Harlem is only a symptom slight enough for what it signifies. Nor are the constructive measures proposed sufficient. It would be impossible for any accumulation of social welfare work to solve the situation which produces crime in Harlem. We all know that merely to make arrests and impose jail sentences can be nothing but an emergency measure and one which promises no fundamental improvement for the future. But equally palliative are the efforts of welfare workers on the basis upon which they are now organized.

The reason why colored Americans are compelled to live in ghettos, where they are helpless against high rents and miserable housing, is the segregation to which race prejudice compels them. Race prejudice compels colored people to take what work they can get because there are so many jobs Negroes cannot get. Race prejudice makes and keeps Negroes' wages low because some labor unions will not admit colored labor on the same basis as white labor. Race prejudice and race prejudice alone is the root of the plight of people in greater and lesser Harlems all over our country.

HOPE BECOMING DESPAIR

As a result of the effects of race prejudice a very serious conviction is gradually becoming settled in the minds of colored Americans all over our country. They are coming to see what they have been taught and have believed is not true—namely, that if colored people can be patient and good and show themselves obedient and humble they will inevitably prove themselves worthy citizens and will therefore receive the rewards of full citizenship. They are beginning to believe, and this in very large numbers, that individual or even collective worth as human beings gains them nothing so long as they are Negroes. The hopefulness natural to their race is now changing to despair. Colored leaders are saying today that no amount of achievement will gain anything for the colored people as a whole, and that, moreover, they no longer believe the people of the United States will fight for democracy. Americans may fight to live and do as they like, they say, but not for democracy.

This conviction of some colored leaders and many more colored people is rapidly permeating the whole twelve millions. When hope is taken away from a people moral degeneration follows swiftly after. Young colored men and women today are giving up hope of justice or security in their own country. When this hopelessness reaches down to certain strata in any society, outbreaks of crime are inevitable. We must expect it in many places besides Harlem. It has already occurred in other cities.

The swiftness with which this long-gathering despair has come to a present head is due, perhaps, more than to any other immediate cause, to the refusal of the majority of defense industries to employ colored labor on anything like an equal basis with white labor. To the colored American this is final proof of the hopelessness of his plight, that even in the defense of his country he is not allowed his share of work.

SEGREGATION CURBS PATRIOTISM

And yet it may be a mistake to say that this denial of the chance at jobs is more to blame than the resolute segregation in the Army or the practical limitation in the Navy. The colored American, thanks to an education in democracy, now really wants to see his country a democracy. When he defends the United States of America he does not want to do so segregated and limited. This contradicts his idea of a democracy. He has grown up a good deal since the World War. He is willing to fight and die again, but not for something he does not possess anyway.

The white American is conscious of this feeling now seething and mounting in the hearts of his colored countrymen. But the white American sedulously avoids acknowledging or indeed even facing it. With the same curious blindness which none of us could understand in France, we white Americans avoid the reality in our own country. We do not want to discover the real truth about the colored American, which is that our prejudice denies him democracy. We refuse to face it because we do not want to change the status of the colored person. We wish to keep him the servant of the white man.

HYPOCRISY SEEN

I am, I think, realistic and objective on this matter of race, having lived most of my life among colored peoples. My own ancestry is entirely Southern, and I am very familiar with the problems of white and colored in the South. I do not, however, believe their solution is to be found in what the average white Southerner says, in the familiar patter, that the Negro is a childish creature, delightful enough in his place, who only wants to be taken care of and fed and sheltered and treated kindly. That the Negro in the South often glibly falls in with such assertions means nothing for that Negro is afraid of his white master and says what the white man wants him to say. The same Negro quickly expresses himself in totally different terms as soon as he changes his [illegible] and is relieved of his fear.

But be that as it may, the real point is that our democracy does not allow for the present division between a white ruler race and a subject colored race, and we ought to make up our minds as to what we want and then move to accomplish it. If the United States is to include subject and ruler peoples, then let us be honest about it and change the Constitution and make it plain that Negroes cannot share the privileges of the white people. True, we would then be totalitarian rather than democratic; but if that is what we want, let us say so and let us tell the Negro so. Then the white Americans will be relieved of the necessity of hyprocrisy and the colored people will know where they are. They may even settle down into a docile subject race, so long as we are able to keep the weapons of rebellion from them—and these include education.

As an American I should deplore any such thing, and yet the world needs this sort of clarification. Democracy now suffers from vagueness b[illegible] of relation between principle and acti[illegible] evils that Hitlerism has, at least it ha[illegible] it makes no pretense of loving its [illegible] wanting all people to be free and e[illegible] knows where nazism stands and wha[illegible] Cruel as it is, and dangerous as it is t[illegible] less cruel, and it may be even less dan[illegible] than the sort of democracy which is n[illegible] strong enough to practice what it pre[illegible] hope utterly is kinder than to allow it [illegible] to let it be fulfilled.

PATIENCE WANING

The importance of facing the situ[illegible]tion between white and colored people in our own country [illegible] twofold—it is upon this rock that our own ship of democra[illegible] may go down first, and upon this rock, too, that all people[illegible] may divide into the ultimate enmity. Everywhere in th[illegible] world the colored peoples are asking each other if they [illegible]ust forever endure the arrogant ruling white race. They [illegible]eel they have been very long patient, but they cannot be [illegible]atient forever, and they will not. In India such men as [illegible]ehru, now again in jail at the hands of white men fighti[illegible] for democracy in Europe; in our own country colored A[illegible]ericans, as intelligent and well educated as Nehru, barre[illegible] by their color alone from an equal chance with white Am[illegible]icans to earn their living or to defend democracy—there i[illegible] a deep, subtle, dangerous relationship between them. W[illegible]are foolish if we do not realize it.

For in many educated colored A[illegible]ericans hopelessness results not in simple crime bu[illegible] in a rejection of patriotism. There are those, and so[illegible] of them leaders, who favor Japan in the present cri[illegible] seeing in Japan the future leader of all colored pe[illegible]les in the world. There are those who prefer Hitler to [illegible]ritish imperialism, feeling that if English rule over c[illegible]ed races can be destroyed, then Hitler can be deal[illegible]ith afterward as the less established evil. At home a[illegible] abroad the white race has the choice to make—wheth[illegible] it will follow the totalitarian principle of ruler and su[illegible]ct races, even to the inevitable end of rebellion and [illegible]e worst of wars, or whether peoples of all colors wil[illegible]cide to work out ways of living in mutual harmony [illegible] freedom.

CRISIS NEAR AT HAND

Such is the situation between [illegible] and white peoples at this moment. It is idle to say t[illegible] crisis is two steps off and let us attend first to defe[illegible] the present war. Crisis between white and colored i[illegible] steps off—it is close, inextricably mingled with t[illegible] because the war against nazism carries race equali[illegible]ality as one of its main issues. It does no good [illegible]elves keep the issue hushed and hidden and ape[illegible]hinking of the

What Pearl Buck Says Is Important--Here's Why!

The Pittsburgh Courier is pleased to republish in full the letter which appears on this page, written by Pearl S. Buck to the New York Times and first published in that newspaper November 22, 1941. We believe that the voice of Miss Buck is the voice America needs at this time. We further believe that here is one of the most pronounced and intelligent appeals yet made for national unity in this emergency.

Miss Buck was born in Hillsboro, West Virginia. Many years of her life, though she is still in middle age, were spent as a teacher in different universities in China. She is the mother of two children and has adopted four others. For nearly 15 years, she has been recognized as one of America's foremost writers. Her most talked about book is "The Good Earth," published in 1931. For it she was awarded the Pulitzer prize in 1932. She also won the Dean Howell Medal in 1935 and the Nobel Literature Award in 1938. Others of her well-known works are "East-West Wind," "The Young Revolution," "Sons," "The First Wife and Other Stories," "All Men Are Brothers," "The Mother," "A House Divided," "House of Earth," "The Exile," "Fighting Angel," "This Proud Heart," "The Patriot," and "Other Gods."

She was educated at Randolph-Macon College for Women at Lynchburg, Va., and Cornell university. Yale university conferred an honorary master of arts degree on her in 1933 and the University of West Virginia, the honorary degree of doctor of letters in 1939. Her home is at Perkasie, Pa.

PEARL BUCK

Says White America Doesn't [illegible] About Negroes—Only Inte[illegible] the Servant—Sees Harlem

WARNS OF GROW[illegible] AGAINST RACE

mass of the white people. The [illegible] white people are willing to know[illegible] in the world, and with that inexora[illegible] are keeping step.

What then should we do if [illegible] in the democratic way of life? W[illegible] at once, and our President shou[illegible] to do away with the effects of [illegible]ored Americans. Race prejudi[illegible] of people unfortunately by surg[illegible] it is an evil and foreign growth. [illegible] it until they catch it from older [illegible] proof of this, the most recent b[illegible] old son of an American friend [illegible] China.

This white child goes to publ[illegible] town. When a class picnic was to [illegible] the place chosen excluded colored [illegible] dignation the boy found that his te[illegible]ing the place, accepted the exclusi[illegible]ful ways" to see that no colored ch[illegible] The white boy was shocked to the s[illegible] own land to which he had long lo[illegible] while he was growing up in China. [illegible] too, because his own best friend ha[illegible] boy. "I won't go if Henry can't go[illegible]

ADOLESCENTS LITTLE PREJUD[illegible]

Nor do adolescents have ra[illegible] like the degree that older peo[illegible] Texas there were a championsh[illegible] and a championship colored team [illegible] same city. Of course their mana[illegible] not schedule them to play each [illegible] team went out one morning by s[illegible] played the colored team. They s[illegible] they returned: "We just wanted [illegible] better." As it happened, it was [illegible] there is symbolism enough in th[illegible]nificance of the incident, and of [illegible] is that the boys, colored and w[illegible] against each other.

Intelligent white people seldom [illegible]dice so severely as ignorant ones, [illegible] would, if they dared, acknowledge t[illegible] ever. But too few dare. For whe[illegible] prejudice is found it is bitter and [illegible] with death.

But if nothing can remove ra[illegible] in whom it is ingrained, they sh[illegible] violate our nation's democracy. [illegible]ment can and should see to it th[illegible] have equal economic opportunity [illegible] in this democracy shall not suffer [illegible] color. It can and should insist th[illegible] share responsibility with white c[illegible] of the nation, and thus remove t[illegible] half-tolerant, wholly patronizing [illegible] for the colored and thereby build[illegible] belief in himself. Democratic g[illegible]apace of science and realize that [illegible]yond prejudice for the belief that [illegible] superior to another. Continued in[illegible] one inferior, temporarily, regardl[illegible]

I read with complete approval o[illegible] conditions under which colored peo[illegible] But until race prejudice is conquered [illegible] the bitter fact remains that the col[illegible] will not get a better job for being be[illegible] housed or for having in his childh[illegible] He will not be given an equal chance [illegible] can of his class and ability. Race [illegible] democracy to him.

Are we Americans to go on acc[illegible] of race prejudice? I know the of[illegible] defense. Intermarriage is the fe[illegible] everything. On that there is but [illegible] to deny to 12,000,000 Americans [illegible]leges of our country, and are we [illegible]mocracy itself, by maintaining a [illegible]ject relationship between white a[illegible] some day a few white and colored in[illegible] to marry each other?

Is democracy right or is it wron[illegible] let us dare to make it true.

Perkasie, Pa., Nov. 14, 1941.

AND' OF DEMOCRACY

:K

ecause of the lack
on. With all the s one virtue, that 'ellowman and of qual. Everybody
t to expect of it.
o civilization, it is gerous in the end, ıot real enough or ıches. To destroy without intending ıtion between white twofold—it is upon may go down first,

may divide into the world the colored nust forever endure feel they have been ıatient forever, and
'ehru, now again in for democracy in nericans, as intelli-
by their color alone
icans to earn their a deep, subtle, dan-are foolish if we do ıericans hopeless-in a rejection of

of them leaders,
, seeing in Japan
les in the world.
itish imperialism,
red races can be ith afterward as abroad the white
it will follow the
ect races, even to e worst of wars,
ecide to work out freedom.

and white peoples crisis is two steps
the present war.
vo steps off—it is because the war
quality as one of ırselves keep the thinking of the

Says White America Doesn't Want to Know the Truth About Negroes—Only Interested in Keeping Him the Servant—Sees Harlem Unrest As a Symbol.

WARNS OF GROWING REVOLT AGAINST RACE PREJUDICE

mass of the white people. The crisis approaches, whether white people are willing to know it or not. It approaches in the world, and with that inexorable march our own people are keeping step.

What then should we do if we are honest believers in the democratic way of life? We must move swiftly and at once, and our President should not fear so to move, to do away with the effects of race prejudice upon colored Americans. Race prejudice cannot be taken out of people unfortunately by surgical operation, although it is an evil and foreign growth. Children do not have it until they catch it from older people. I have frequent proof of this, the most recent being through a 12-year-old son of an American friend newly returned from China.

This white child goes to public school in a New Jersey town. When a class picnic was to be held it was found that the place chosen excluded colored people. To his deep indignation the boy found that his teachers, instead of changing the place, accepted the exclusion and managed by "tactful ways" to see that no colored children came to the picnic. The white boy was shocked to the soul at this injustice in his own land to which he had long looked with love and pride while he was growing up in China. His hurt was personal, too, because his own best friend happened to be a fine colored boy. "I won't go if Henry can't go," was his right decision.

ADOLESCENTS LITTLE PREJUDICED

Nor do adolescents have race prejudice in anything like the degree that older people have. Recently in Texas there were a championship white football team and a championship colored team at high schools in the same city. Of course their managers and coaches would not schedule them to play each other. But the white team went out one morning by secret arrangement and played the colored team. They said to their coach when they returned: "We just wanted to see which of us was better." As it happened, it was a tie game, and though there is symbolism enough in that ideal ending, the significance of the incident, and of plenty of others like it, is that the boys, colored and white, had no prejudice against each other.

Intelligent white people seldom suffer from race prejudice so severely as ignorant ones, and there are many who would, if they dared, acknowledge that they have none whatever. But too few dare. For whenever the disease of race prejudice is found it is bitter and incurable and dies only with death.

But if nothing can remove race prejudice from those in whom it is ingrained, they should not be allowed to violate our nation's democracy. At least our government can and should see to it that all Americans shall have equal economic opportunity and that colored people in this democracy shall not suffer insult because of their color. It can and should insist that colored citizens shall share responsibility with white citizens for the welfare of the nation, and thus remove the chief reason for the half-tolerant, wholly patronizing contempt of the white for the colored and thereby build in the colored citizen belief in himself. Democratic government must keep apace of science and realize that there is no basis beyond prejudice for the belief that one race is intrinsically superior to another. Continued injustice may make any one inferior, temporarily, regardless of his color.

I read with complete approval of every plan to better the conditions under which colored people must live and work. But until race prejudice is conquered and its effects removed, the bitter fact remains that the colored American knows he will not get a better job for being better educated and better housed or for having in his childhood more playgrounds. He will not be given an equal chance with the white American of his class and ability. Race prejudice will still deny democracy to him.

Are we Americans to go on accepting the stupidities of race prejudice? I know the oft-repeated wearisome defense. Intermarriage is the fearful specter behind everything. On that there is but one answer. Are we to deny to 12,000,000 Americans the rights and privileges of our country, and are we to risk our very democracy itself, by maintaining a determined ruler-subject relationship between white and colored, because some day a few white and colored individuals may choose to marry each other?

Is democracy right or is it wrong? If it is right, then let us dare to make it true.

PEARL S. BUCK.

Perkasie, Pa., Nov. 14, 1941.

Saturday, March 21, 1942

CEM TRADE

THE WORLD FRONTS

By A. M. WENDELL MALLIET

Pro-Japanese sentiment among colored people is said to be growing in the United States. There may be a good deal of truth in this belief. Some people have a genius for believing all the favorable stories they hear about distant peoples but ignore the virtues of their neighbors.

Mr. Malliet

People who lack adequate information and whose minds are confused, seem to believe that there is or ought to be a confraternity of the various races, based on skin color or on a division of the colored races on one side and the white race on the other side—opposing each other with a view to wresting power or maintaining the power already possessed.

It is misleading to say that the Japanese, although a colored race, are believers in racial equality with the African races in the same way that they desire it with Europeans, Americans and Australians.

Colored People Inspired

The progress of the Japanese people and the development of the nation as a world power have given much encouragement and inspiration to other colored races. Japan's victory over the Russians in 1905, and the constructive and creative genius of the nation, expressed in military, naval and aerial power, government and diplomacy, the arts and sciences, education, industry, commerce, finance and human discipline, have exploded the pseudo-scientific theories of white race superiority. All these achievements have impressed the other colored races. Some of their leaders have desired that Japan should take over the leadership of the colored world and usher in the millenium under the flag of the Rising Sun.

But with all these magnificent achievements, the Japanese have never attempted to do anything that was not closely associated with national power politics and imperialistic economic exploitation. Their brutal record in Korea, Shantung and Manchuria, where there is much racial similarity between the conquerors and the conquered, has never been matched in the long and ghastly history of human oppression.

Furthermore, we have never heard that a single responsible Japanese statesman or leader declared for racial solidarity with the African peoples. Viscount Kikujiro Ishii, certainly one of the most intelligent and active of Japanese statesmen, discussed "equality" not so much from a racial point of view as from the viewpoint of a nationalist.

Raps U. S. Policy

The Viscount states his case in the following manner: "Only the statutory exclusion of our emigrants by the American Congress stands in the way of our coveted goal of equality. With the American policy of restricting or excluding immigration we have no quarrel so long as that policy applies to all countries without legal discrimination."

Ishii's attitude is largely based on Japan's rise as a "civilized world power." He says: "In Japan's opinion the common dictates of international justice, international courtesy, and international good will require that no nation shall single out for discrimination any other nation which has by common consent been recognized as one of the civilized powers of the world."

Ishii claims the right for his country in fighting against discrimination not because the Japanese are human beings, but because "by common consent" they have "been recognized as one of the civilized powers of the world." This is the same distinction used by the European imperialist exploiters of so-called backward peoples or "natives." That distinction is already in the minds of the Japanese leaders, who look on those who are behind them in the race of modern progress as not among the civilized powers of the world.

(Part 2: Japan and the African Race, Next Week)

---

to the outer air but merely open on to rooms which in turn have no opening except into a room which does open into the outer air. In other words a series of three rooms, interconnected, when only the first opens into the outer air, the third room is an illegal interior room. The second room is legal.

Vertical ladder fire escapes are unlawful and should be replaced by new slanting stair fire escapes.

Walls of stair halls and the underside of stairs must be fire-retarded. Stair railings should be metal.

If there is not enough light to read in the public hall, the owner is required to install an electric light at every floor and keep it burning continuously. As an alternative he may put wire glass panels in the apartment doors.

Air shafts must be whitewashed or painted a light color. Interior walls and ceilings are to be kept in a sanitary condition by cleaning or by painting and kalsomining if necessary. The building must be kept free of vermin and garbage.

The owner must keep the door bells at the ground floor entrance and at the entrance to each apartment in good working order. This is important, for in case of fire, the bells in the ground floor vestibule may be used as alarms.

If there are no radiators in your apartment and you are compelled to burn coal or wood, the landlord must provide an open fireplace or a place for a stove with means of connection to a flue. If there are radiators and a boiler in the building, the temperature of 68 degrees must be maintained between the hours of 6 A. M. and 10 P. M. when the outside temperature falls below 55 degrees.

"JERUSALEM-DUBLIN AXIS" FORMED IN NEW JERSEY

(From the Butcher-Worker, New York City)

T. James Tumulty, the 29-year-old Irishman who single-handed fights Mayor Hague and acts as chairman of the Hudson County Fight for Freedom Committee, has taken up the cudgels against something he considers the greatest menace to American freedom — the use of anti-Semetism as a political weapon.

Tumulty believes the best way to overcome such evils is by setting a good example of himself.

So he and his friend, Abraham Sepunik, a young Jewish attorney, have decided to become law partners. The firm is known as Tumulty and Sepunk. But to make clear his purpose, underneath the names on the office door, appears the note: "Headquarters of the Jerusalem-Dublin Axis."

Reds Inspire Stadium 'Rally For Peace,' Socialists Warn

The national labor committee of the Socialist party, 549 Randolph street, today issued a warning to "labor, liberal, and peace groups" that the "emergency peace mobilization" to be held in the Chicago Stadium Saturday, Sunday and Monday is "Communist-inspired and controlled from end to end and the direct creation of the Communist International's American agents, the Communist party."

The Socialists' manifesto placed them on record along with officers of 28 C. I. O. locals in New York, two veterans' spokesmen here, and others, as pronouncing the "emergency peace mobilization" a "Kremlin propaganda device" and by no means a bona fide peace movement.

The statement of the Socialist national labor committee, which was made public by the secretary of the committee, Arthur G. McDowell, recalled that the first general announcement of plans for a "peace mobilization" at the Stadium on the dates designated was made at the convention of the American Youth Congress at Williams Bay, Wis., in July.

Nelson Named Illegally.

The attention of the Socialist committee was drawn to the planned "peace mobilization," McDowell said, when it was learned that George Nelson, officer of the Wisconsin Farmers and Equity Union and 1936 Socialist candidate for vice-president, had been named in literature about the rally as one of its "sponsors completely without proper authorization."

"The committee discovered the first move for the 'mobilization' to have been a resolution passed at the recent meeting of the American Youth Congress," said McDowell.

"It discovered that in every major center from New York to San Francisco the well-established Communist party figures were in possession of the 'mobilization' machinery, that the New York 'Daily Worker' was the chief organ giving publicity to the work, that all the front organizations recently established as under Communist control were being mobilized, and that in effect the old American League for Peace and Democracy was being resurrected with the same people, but around a diametrically opposed policy.

"Its place is being taken by a variety of 'People's Federations for Peace' etc., which will be coalesced into a new communist-dominated peace movement through the 'emergency peace mobilization'."

Labor Leaders in Protest.

Members of the Socialist party labor committee issuing the warning include A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; Fred Wolter, president of the C.I.O. Electrical and Radio Workers of Milwaukee; Andrew J Biemiller, organizer for the Wisconsin Federation of Labor; Nicholas A. Zonarich, president of the Aluminum Workers of America; James D. Graham, president of the Montana Federation of Labor, and J. R. Butler, president of the Southern Tenent Farmers Union.

McDowell added that no objection was offered by this committee to participation in joint political agitation with Communists for those who know what they are doing. He explained that the warning was issued "in the belief that many were being deceived and their confidence being abused" about the true character and inspiration of the "mobilization."

Murray Kudish, speaking for officers of 28 New York C. I. O. locals, described the "mobilization" as part of "a program which would benefit the totalitarian nations, and is in our opinion diametrically opposed to the best interests of our country and of democracy and labor throughout the world."

Recent columns of The New Masses, Communist periodical, have contained enthusiastic references to the approaching "peace" rally in Chicago.

wie Today With Field of 12 in Feature

PRIVATE JOE LOUIS REPORTING

The heavyweight champion giving Major Gen. Irving J. Phillipson a check for $64,980.02, the receipts from his battle with Abe Simon, the money going to the Army Emergency Relief. In the center is Mike Jacobs. Louis donated his entire purse of $36,146.

Associated Press

ARMY RELIEF GETS CHECK FOR $64,980

Louis, Jacobs Present Title Fight Proceeds to Major General Phillipson

Major Gen. Irving J. Phillipson, commander of the Second Corps Area, accepted from Joe Louis and Mike Jacobs a check for $64,980.02 on behalf of the Army Emergency Relief yesterday at 90 Church Street. The amount was the sum realized from the recent Louis-Abe Simon heavyweight title bout at Madison Square Garden.

Louis's donation was $36,146, his entire purse, while Promoter Jacobs and Madison Square Garden contributed $25,131.85. Simon gave $3,012.17, ring officials $425 and preliminary boxers on the card $140. Additional contributions amounted to $125.

Major Gen. Phillipson said: "Army Emergency Relief is highly pleased with the generous gifts from Mike Jacobs and Joe Louis. This was a very successful jumping off for Army Emergency Relief and we hope to have a number of other events of a similar nature." He also praised Louis's patriotism and declared the champion is setting a fine example for other Americans.

Private Louis's pass will expire Sunday night, when the heavyweight king will report back to Camp Upton. Jacobs is set to leave for a short vacation today, Miami Beach as his destination.

TUCKER SEES NEED FOR SELF-SACRIFICE

Protestant Episcopal Bishop Points in Easter Message to Example of Christ

IT IS APPLIED TO WAR

Principle Held Necessary in Days Ahead—Result Will Be 'Victory'

Pointing to the self-sacrifice by Christ that led to a "victorious Resurrection," the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, Presiding Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in his annual Easter message issued yesterday, called for the principle of complete self-sacrifice in the war days ahead. The message follows:

"As we approach the anniversary of the death and Resurrection of Christ during these war days, it is well for us to consider the application of the principle they teach to our own lives. It is a principle that lies behind all progress even in a material warring world.

"As we look out into nature we see that growth takes place by a dying of the old to make way for the new. Success in our earthly work is attained only by a sacrifice of the present for the sake of the future. The farmer sacrifices his seed in order that he may reap more seed. The student sacrifices his time and physical pleasures in order that he may obtain a wider mental life. The soldier sacrifices even his life in order that the principles his nation is defending may survive.

Future Prize the Aim

"All progress, all success is conditioned upon the giving up of the lower present possession for the sake of the higher future prize. Christ showed that this principle which is so familiar in our earthly life holds good also in our spiritual life. The two foundation pillars of character are holiness and love. The first comes only through the sacrifice of our lower physical impulses and interests for the sake of the demands of our conscience. The second requires the sacrifice of ourselves, our own individual interests for the sake of others.

"We are often disappointed that the church does not make more rapid progress. Let us remember, however, that the life of the church is based upon the life of its members. It reflects their spiritual condition.

"We must each one of us therefore, by sacrifice, by struggle, by prayer, by the courage to trust ourselves to the invisible God rather than to the visible world, grow in character and in spiritual strength. Then indeed the church which binds our tiny individual contributions into a mighty whole will be able to accomplish a great work for God and for the establishment of His kingdom of righteousness among men.

Real Victory Is Seen

"Finally, the resurrection of Christ shows us that our sacrifice will lead to real victory. We are sometimes discouraged by the thought that, after all, our sacrifice and effort can accomplish little. It was thus that the disciples thought at first of the death of Christ. It showed indeed His noble character, but it seemed to leave the substantial victory in the hands of His enemies. The trouble was that they had not discerned the divine power that lay stored up within the human nature of Christ, nor understood that His death was the means by which that power would be set free to accomplish God's purposes.

"The resurrection revealed this to them. So it is with us. If our sacrifice were only a process of setting our human strength to work for high purposes, then it would indeed accomplish little. But the same power of God that was revealed in the risen Christ dwells in the hearts of all who have accepted Christ. Each act of sacrifice, each denial of our lower and selfish instincts, opens the way for the spirit of God within us to raise us up to a nobler level of character and higher degree of spiritual life.

"If therefore we approach this Easter as our Lord did, by the path of sacrifice, we too will experience the glory of the resurrection and the satisfaction that comes from knowing that we are of use to God in the fulfillment of that divine purpose for which Christ died and rose again."

Navy Employing More Negroes

The President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice reports that the Navy Dept. has more than doubled the number of its Negro civilian employes since October.

¶ In four months Negro personnel has risen from 511 to 1051.

¶ Negroes who have passed Civil Service examinations have been placed in 18 of 21 bureaus and departments.

¶ Last October Negroes constituted 4.7 per cent of the total civilian personnel; now they represent 7.1 per cent.

¶ The proportion of Negro workers has been increased 125 per cent in a four-months period in which the number of white employes has risen 35.6 per cent.

Jim Crow still rules the waves, however. Negroes can enter the military branches of Navy only as messmen.

AMERICA'S BATTLE PAGE

In response to many requests, The News has resumed publication of America's Battle Page, presenting opposite views on the role this nation should take in World War II. The page was temporarily discontinued May 17 when the space was required for maps illustrating important events abroad. Owing to the need for such maps from time to time, the Battle Page hereafter will not appear on a set schedule. The News expects, however, to print it two or three times a week. The page is divided equally between the two organizations whose names appear below. They are free to say what they please without interference or editing by The News. On the other hand, they accept full responsibility for the presentation of their views.

(Provided by the America First Committee, New York Chapter, Inc., 515 Madison Ave., 3 East 47th St. and 111 B'way, New York City.)

IT IS HAPPENING HERE NOW!

Frightening the poor of America is still going on. The War-Making Committee is still picturing hapless Americans with Hitler's soldiers standing behind them here in America. This is the shameful invention that has been used to scare Americans into sending their young manhood to the bloody battlefields of Europe. Hansen Baldwin, famous military expert of the New York Times (war-making newspaper) says: "I do not know a single responsible military or naval officer or government official who believes this nation is threatened by direct invasion even if Germany wins." Of course there are "irresponsible" government officials who peddle that fraud to scare people.

But there are some things that resemble Hitler which ARE HAPPENING RIGHT NOW IN AMERICA.

"Sorry, Mister. The Government's Taking Over Now"

In Washington today there is a bill before congress. It has been presented by the WAR DEPARTMENT, with the approval of the PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES. It gives the President the right to send his officers or troops into any factory, shop, property in America, take it over, without limit in time and for any price he fixes, and run it under government officers.

This is not something that may happen after the war if we lose. This is something that is happening now. In Washington they call this bill the BRASS-KNUCKLE BILL.

This is the way a war to bring democracy to Europe goes along in America. Our first step is to destroy democracy here.

Creamless days, gasless Sundays, soaring prices, confiscatory taxes, crushing national debts—and now OWNERLESS FACTORIES AND SHOPS.

WHAT WILL BE THE NEXT STEP TO IMITATE HITLER HERE?

It is urgent that you write or wire the President today. Get others to write or wire. Urge him to work for peace now. Only by peace can we retain our democracy.

(Provided by the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, 8 W. 40th St., New York City)

They Trusted Hitler

Hitler now says we should trust him. He says he can't imagine why we think he wants to attack us. He sobs that he hasn't enough transport to attack us anyway. The wolf is talking softly now. He thinks he has found another Little Red Ridinghood.

He said he had no designs on Austria. He annexed it.

He said that if he got the Sudetenland there would "be no further territorial problems in Europe." Then he marched into Prague.

Poland trusted his non-aggression treaty. He took Poland.

Scandinavia trusted his peaceful promises. He took Denmark and Norway.

Holland and Belgium trusted his word. They were blitzed.

You have seen this picture of what happened to a trustful isolationist country in THE DAILY NEWS before: A Belgian mother flees with her children from their devastated home.

We do not need to call the roll of the other Red Ridinghoods. We know that when the wolf's words drip honey, that is the time to watch out. That is the time he thinks he is getting ready for the kill.

Already Hitler is waging war on the Americas. A year ago we had to rush two cruisers because of a self-confessed Nazi plan to seize Uruguay for the Reich.

Military Fifth Columns are in Brazil, Bolivia, Chile and Columbia, champing at the bit because Britain still holds out.

A couple of months ago THE DAILY NEWS exposed the blueprint of an Axis drive in which "Germany is to send warplanes via Dakar, Africa, to assist revolutionary movements in Argentina."

A negotiated peace now would only let Hitler consolidate his gains for his final assault on us. We would be dupes to trust his soft words. No, Grandmother, we see your sharp teeth.

THE AFRO-AMERICAN, MARCH 28, 1942

Randolph Wants 25,000 at D.C. Protest Meeting

NEW YORK.—Pl[illegible] underway to stage a [illegible] public mass meeting [illegible]hington protesting discrim[illegible] against colored in the army, navy, USO, Red Cross and defense industries, according to A. Philip Randolph, national director of the March on Washington Movement.

Mr. Randolph says that the Washington meeting, at which it is hoped 25,000 persons will be mobilized, is in line with the plan to stage giant protest meetings in key cities throughout the country in an all-out effort to win democratic rights for colored now during the war.

All Bias Resented

The Washington meeting is most vital and important, he avers, because it is the nation's capital and it is desired that official Washington know the deep and profound resentment of colored Americans to every form of discrimination practiced upon them by the Federal government and private industry.

THE PEOPLE'S VOICE APRIL 4, 1942

March on Capital Plans Proceeding

Representatives of 42 various organizations put their heads together Sunday afternoon at the YMCA in the first community-wide meeting held in connection with the formation of plans for the gigantic Madison Square protest meeting that is being pushed vigorously by the local March on Washington Movement for the first week in June.

Citing the change of attack that A. Philip Randolph, father of the March on Washington idea, has adopted in abandoning the conference table for the direct approach to the masses, Dr. Lawrence Ervin, local chairman and presiding officer for the meeting, called up speaker after speaker who voiced resentment over the continuance of discrimination, denial of civil liberties and human rights.

Chief among the speakers were Rev. Dr. William Lloyd Imes of St. James Presbyterian Church; Walter Reifer, Corona business man; Joseph E. Ford, secretary of the Coordinating Committee for Employment; Mrs. Bessye Bearden, Housewives League; Rev. S. T. Eldridge, Berean Baptist Church; and Mrs. Rachel Corrothers, Friends of Negro Labor.

PM, THURSDAY, APRIL 9, 1942

Edited by HERBERT AGAR (President of Freedom House)

What Are We Fighting For?

What Should Be, and What Can Be, Done About the Negro?

In flat contradiction of the terms of the Constitution of the U. S. A., the white people of this country practice numerous forms of discrimination against the Negro while at the same time they talk of "freedom" for the world. Today's contributor to this column is A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. Tomorrow, Herbert Agar will sum up the discussion, which was started by Wendell L. Willkie on Monday.

The first condition to being worthy of help from others is for an individual, race or nation to do something for itself. In the past, Negroes have not given much thought and time to helping themselves; their big and generous hearts have invariably gone out to extend a helping hand to others—especially the American white man. This has been true from the day when Crispus Attucks, a Negro, was the first to fall and give his life for his country at the Boston Massacre in 1770, to the heroism of Dorie Miller, the humble messman who, although denied the right to serve as gunner in the Navy, manned a machine gun on his ship on Dec. 7, 1941, in Pearl Harbor, and fired upon the enemy until his ammunition was gone.

A. Philip Randolph

During the Civil War, in the South—at the very time Union forces were fighting for the freedom of Negro people—Negro slaves ministered to the needs of the wives, sisters, daughters and sons of their masters, who were then at the front fighting to keep their slaves in slavery. But today Negroes are severely disillusioned, bitter and resentful of the fact that they have given all and received practically nothing in return.

Ruthless oppression, fierce exploitation, humiliating discrimination and segregation in every conceivable social relation, have seared so deeply into the soul of the Negro that he now sees that the initiative and responsibility for the basic solution of the race problem must be taken by himself. This is the philosophy of the Negro in the trade union movement. It is back of the movement, "Don't buy where you cannot work." It was the heart of the mass picketing for jobs on the busses of New York City. It is the stimulant in the fight by the National Association for Advancement of Colored People for equal pay for Negro teachers in the South. It is back of the "March on Washington" movement which fought for Executive Order 8802, under which the Fair Employment Practice Committee was formed.

Negroes are the first fired and the last hired; they are given the run-around and denied jobs by industry because they don't have union cards at the same time they are denied cards by some unions because they have no jobs. They have little or no say about making the policies that direct and govern our country, although they comprise a tenth of the population. But Negroes are now demanding a place on every policy-making body of the Federal, state and municipal Governments, and equal opportunity to work on a basis of their skills with everybody else.

One method of achieving this objective is the mobilization of the mass power of the Negro people to employ it in the interest of securing jobs in industry and government and to break down discrimination and segregation wherever they exist, so that democracy in the U. S. A. may become a fact and not remain a fiction to American citizens of color. Negroes are becoming increasingly conscious of the fact that while they must remember Pearl Harbor, they must also remember the barbarous lynching at Sikeston, Mo., and the depredations upon Negro soldiers and the discriminations against Negro workers who have the skill and the will to work and fight for our country.

The slogan of the "March on Washington" movement, which is backed by the Negro preacher, teacher, social service worker, trade unionist, doctor, lawyer and the man in the street, is, "Winning democracy for the Negro is winning the war for democracy!"

Negroes feel that they have fully earned their rights, and they are not in any mood to beg for them. They have paid for them with blood and tears and a quarter of a thousand years of unrequited toil.

Verily, Negroes reject the doctrine of race superiority whether it is expressed by Hitler of Germany or Gov. Talmadge of Georgia and are passing through a new baptism of faith in their inner power to achieve their own liberation.—A. PHILIP RANDOLPH.

PITTSBURGH COURIER
April 18, 1942

FEPC Orders Chicago Firms To Stop Job Discrimination

WASHINGTON, April 16—Ten companies holding millions of dollars in war contracts were ordered by the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice Monday to stop discriminating against workers because of race or religion.

In its first "crack-down" on discriminating companies under Executive Order No. 8802, issued by President Roosevelt last June, the Committee directed that they inform all employment agencies with which they deal that applicants will be hired irrespective of race, religion, or national origin.

DOLLAR MAN FIRM CITED

The findings are based on public hearings held by the Committee in Chicago, January 19th and 20th. Prominent among the guilty discriminating concerns was the Stewart-Warner Corporation, headed by J. S. Knowlson, leading Dollar-A-Year man here, who is in charge of the Bureau of Industry Operations under Donald M. Nelson, War Production Board Chief. Knowlson's job is to convert Civilian Industry to war output. The corporation confessed and promised to hire Negroes in the future.

(Continued on Page 1, Col. 6)

FEPC ORDERS CHICAGO FIRMS

(Continued from Page 1)

Another concern making fat profits on war contracts while denying Negro tax payers the right to help their country's war production was the Heil Corporation, owned by Governor Heil of Wisconsin.

PRAISES MAJESTIC

Companies involved in the Chicago area are the Stewart-Warner Corporation, Buick Aviation plant at Melrose, Ill., Bearse Manufacturing Co., Simpson Manufacturing Co., and the Studebaker Factory branch.

In the Milwaukee area are the Nordberg Manufacturing Co., A. O. Smith Corporation, Heil Company, Allis-Chalmers Corp., and the Harnischfeger Corporation.

The Committee's report praised H. A. Gates, president, Majestic Television and Radio Corporation, because he promptly discharged his personnel manager and superintendent on learning that Negroes were being arbitrarily barred from jobs on the production lines.

Committee officials declared today that failure of the companies to comply with its order will result in claims of contract violation and fines, or, in severe cases not involving vital war materials, suspension of the contract.

"The findings and directions will give the committee a continuing jurisdiction over the employment practices of these industries, which hold contracts for war implements

THE PEOPLE'S VOICE APRIL 18, 1942

Ten Defense Firms Must Cease Discriminating on Race, Creed

Ten concerns having millions of dollars in war contracts were told to cease discriminating against available workers because of their race or religion, in "Findings and Directions" which they received last week from the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice.

The concerns are in the Chicago and Milwaukee areas, and the findings and directions are based on two days of public hearings, held January 19-20 in Chicago. Since January the committee, of which Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of Hampton Institute, is chairman, had studied the record before taking the action announced today.

The companies involved in the Chicago area are: the Stewart-Warner Corporation, the Buick Aviation plant at Melrose, Ill., a unit of General Motors Corporation; the Bearse Manufacturing Company, Simpson Manufacturing Company and the Studebaker branch factory. Those in the Milwaukee area are: the Nordberg Manufacturing Company, A. O. Smith Corporation, Heil Company, Allis-Chalmers Corporation and the Harnischfeger Corporation.

One company, Majestic Radio Corporation of Chicago, was commended for its prompt action in correcting discriminatory practice in its hiring. According to testimony by H. A. Gates, Majestic president, he discharged two of his supervisory employes after he had checked and found the charges of discrimination made by the committee to be valid. Mr. Gates took this action even before he appeared on the witness stand at the Chicago hearings.

The complaints filed against the several companies included allegations that they had refused to employ either Negroes or Jews, or both; that they had given restrictive orders to either public or private employment agencies, asking for only white or only Gentile workers; that they had advertised in newspapers for help and specified "Gentile" or "Protestant" or "white," or that they had refused to give workers of certain races and creeds opportunity for promotion in keeping with their qualifications.

The companies for the most part denied that they were discriminating, but in each case the committee found that the evidence supported the charges of discrimination.

FEPC Announces New Appointment

Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, chairman of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, has announced the appointment of Harry L. Barron of Chicago as administrative assistant to the committee, of which Lawrence W. Cramer is executive secretary.

For the past two years Barron has been executive director of the bureau on Jewish employment probems, Chicago, a pioneer agency in applying objective technique in the field of employment discrimination.

AMSTERDAM
New York ★ Star-News

Saturday, April 18, 1942

Star-News Platform

FOR NEW YORK CITY:

- Colored Member Board of Estimate.
- Colored Member Board of Education.
- Colored Teachers on Faculties of City Colleges.
- Construction of Enclosed Market and Harlem River Drive.
- Congressman, State Senator and Supreme Court Judges.
- Habilitation of Harlem's Boarded-up Houses and Buildings.
- Ordinance Forcing Sale of Ice Cream by Weight.

FOR NEW YORK STATE:

- Non-discrimination in Job Placements by Agencies.
- Law Forbidding Discrimination in Renting or Buying Property.
- No Discrimination in State and Quasi Public Reformatories.

FOR THE NATION:

- Compliance with Provisions of FEPC by Capital and Labor.
- Full Assistant Secretaries in Cabinet Departments.

Knox and Navy Jim Crow

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox now symbolizes segregation to thirteen million loyal Americans. He climaxes his Navy career of incompetence with the crowning insult of officially proclaiming the color line as a permanent barrier against their equal place in the sea service of the Nation. Too many of the responsible powers at Washington fail to read aright the signs and portents of the times.

India at her own peril rejects the compromise plan of Great Britain because Britain does not recognize in war and peace the equality of India in the Empire's family of Nations. Ireland, that is Eire, at her own peril, rejects the protection of Great Britain because Britain will not recognize her equality.

The United States Navy cannot with safety to America now deny equal opportunity to colored America. Colored sailors as gunners served with distinction in the wars of 1812 and 1861. Why not now?

Prime Minister Chamberlain sold Czecho-Slovakia down the river in seeking to appease Hitler. Chamberlain was forced to resign. Knox at this crucial time sells a great group of valiant Americans down the river of appeasement to colorphobia. Knox too must go!

Let Us Mobilize for Freedom!

The Amsterdam Star-News joins with Phillip Randolph in the continuing Fight for Freedom. Like the strenuous leader of the March on Washington Movement, we long ago volunteered to fight for the duration of Racial Injustice in this country.

American leadership does not know that the masses of Colored fold are sore at heart against their continuing persecution and proscription. The Government at Washington must be made to know this thing. To that end, Randolph, who is not only the Leader of the Pullman Porter Brotherhood, but a spokesman for the tens of thousands of fearless Colored American, issues a clarion call to the country. Mammoth mass meetings are planned for New York, Chicago and Washington in preparation for the laying of the race's grievances in the lap of the President.

This program costs money. But it is vital to the present welfare and future progress of the entire race. Every red-blooded black man and woman in the nation is urged to immediately contribute his mite to the grand cause. The Amsterdam Star-News will receive contributions to the fund and turn them over to the organization's treasurer. On to Washington! Those who would be free must themselves first strike the blow. Let us Mobilize for Freedom!

THE DAILY TEXAN
April 21, 1942

Elgin Williams

The Freethinker

As [illegible] out in an editorial yesterday we are [illegible] our national defense effort when we deny the Negro and other members of minority groups the right to help us purge fascism from the earth. With [illegible] persons however, this editorial ran smack into [illegible] because of entrenched moral convictions, such as "Don't you care a thing in the world about standards?"

This column will try to list some fallacies and fears and false assumptions usually held by militant Southerners in regard to the Negro. Belief in such fallacies is at the bottom of most attacks on measures aiming at liberty and equality for the Negro, not to mention being responsible for lynchings, signs in West Texas towns which say, "Nigger—Don't Let the Sun Set on You Here," and other outpourings of race hatred.

One thing some Bible readers believe is that Negroes were divinely ordained to be the servants of white people—that God cursed one of Noah's sons, turned him black, and condemned him to perpetual servitude.

Another is that the Negro is a political menace who may some day take over the government. This fear is based on two things: the memory of reconstruction (exaggerated, of course, since only one of the state legislatures had a Negro majority); and the belief that Negroes are increasing faster than white people (they aren't).

Probably even some of the more tolerant campus people got mad when it was hinted yesterday that intelligent Negroes should be allowed to enter the University. This indignation arises from three ideas: Negroes cannot take much education ("Don't you know you can teach a nigger just so much and that's all?" a lady once asked me); they do not need much education (even though a sunken race needs doctors and scientists and educators more than any other); and it would not be safe to give them much education.

Basic, of course, is the belief that Negroes are inherently—that is, permanently and hopelessly—inferior to white people, and most whites subscribe to this. However, science says that there is no correlation between biological structure and social behaviorism—that there are just no such things as "inferior" and "superior" races.

That the Negro is a potential economic threat as a competitor of the white man and hence must be kept down is also widely believed. But if you keep a man down somebody must stay down with him, as it looks like the white sharecroppers and tenant farmers of East Texas would learn.

Various people also believe that Negroes are more criminal than white people, or that Negroes wish to invade the social life of the whites, or that Negroes will rub off on you.

None of these notions is very scientific, to say the least.

There's one other thing that needs to be guarded against in this connection, and in many another connection: the fallacy of lumping together all the individuals of a particular race or group and then thinking of them and treating them all alike, instead of judging them as individuals.

This is very dangerous, but it can be dodged by a simple rule: just remember this—Negro A is not Negro B, Negro B is not Negro C, Negro C is not Negro D, and so on. Similarly Jew 1 is not Jew 2, etc., and Fraternity Man X is not Fraternity Man Y, etc.

Sabotaging Ourselves?

No Time For Racial Discrimination

NEVER IN the history of this country has there been so inopportune a time for racial discrimination as now.

A democracy fighting for its life should fling every ounce of its manpower into the struggle, with the work of each to be decided only by ability. Yet America today is denying groups of Americans the right to fight for their country because of the color of their skin.

A Negro can't join the Marines at all. In the Navy he's allowed to serve only as a messboy. Until recently he was not allowed in the Air Corps, and even now only a few Negro pilots are turned out every year. And if he is drafted into the regular army there is small chance for him to become an officer.

It looks like the hardest thing you have to fight for in this country is the right to fight for your country.

The situation in the armed forces presents only part of the picture. In the national defense industries — even though we're trying to turn out every gun and tank and plane we can to save us—many plants refuse to employ Negro and Italian and Mexican citizens. A Negro may be highly skilled and yet refused employment because of a Jim Crow rule.

There is little opportunity for him to become skilled, however. The University's own engineering, science, and management defense short courses—operated here by the United States Office of Education to produce badly-needed defense workers and technicians—are not open to Negroes. The University itself, where engineers and physicists and executives may be turned out, is Jim Crow.

Similar situations exist over much of the rest of the country.

There are twelve million Negroes in the United States. If we deny to these citizens the right to participate in the war effort it means simply this: we are reducing our country's fighters of fascism by [illegible] cent.

This is the same as adding great [illegible] to Hitler's legions.—E. W.

Negroes Winning Right To Be Killed--Mrs. FDR

By ELGIN WILLIAMS
Special to the Texan

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 21.—This is Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt talking, as about seven of us sprawl on chairs and around the floor of her bedroom in the Noel Hotel.

"They asked me, rather shocked, 'Would you actually sit at a table with a Negro?' Why, that's the silliest question one could be asked!

"Of course I would!" Her high-pitched, intimate voice rang with sincerity. "Could I treat Paul Robeson or Walter White, for instance, as anything but equals?"

The gracious lady chatted with us pleasantly. From the floor Myra Fuller came up with a question: what about the other races, the "white man's burden," and so on?

She laughed. "After this war can we possibly keep the Chinese out of this country? Why, no—they're our Allies. To think we'd let French and German and Norwegian people immigrate here, and not the Chinese—it's ridiculous."

Mrs. Roosevelt talked about discrimination in the armed forces that is hurting the war effort. "It's hard to win the right to be killed in this country," she said, "but the Negro people are winning it." She told how they recently won the right to serve in the United States Navy.

"The Navy people, some of them, are so dumb, so terrible," she said vigorously. "The President sent them a note asking them to work out some way to avoid discrimination. So they wrote him back saying they would if they though it 'politically advisable' to do so.

"Well, he hit the roof. And [illegible] them it was certainly [illegible] question of politics, but of the rights of citizens."

She told how she and the President have fought Southern Jim Crowism for years. One time in Georgia she was on a train and a drunk white man walked into the Jim Crow car and shot a Negro.

"The next time we were in Georgia we asked the sheriff what happened to the man. 'There he is,' he pointed. 'You don't go to jail here for killing a nigger.' It's unbelievable."

MRS. ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

John Henry Faulk lounged against the door, asked seriously, "Does it look like there's any hope for us to keep on fighting for these things?"

The First Lady pounded her knee. "Never give up!" she said. "That's what we're [illegible] for—the right to ask for these things. Progress will be slow, but progress we will.

"There have been tremendous changes in the last ten years. Just one good sign is the fact that in the last war there were no young people thinking like you at this time—nobody noticed injustices."

"We must look at all things we do to see if they mean a gain in democracy for the majority of our country. Then we will work with a sense that we will never let down our beliefs.

"There will come times when it will be a little easier just to shut our eyes to injustice. But if we do that, democracy in this country can't be a reality. That's what makes a democracy so hard to live in."

Two panels on youth conducted by President Homer P. Rainey of the University were well-attended and Mrs. Roosevelt was the [illegible] speaker. At lunch Dr. Rainey met with all college students at the conference. He returned to Austin Monday afternoon.

If Mrs. Roosevelt was the sweetheart of the conference, gangling, grinning Paul Robeson was the hero. He took Nashville the minute he stepped on the stage

The great baritone, besides selections from Moussorgsky and "Water Boy," sang the inspiring "Ballad for Americans" with the Fisk University choir. It was good.

In a short speech he told the conference what the people of America thought about the war. "We're going to win!" he said. "But I've seen in my travels those who value winning other wars—against labor and against the people—more than they value smashing the Axis." He called for the end [illegible]

The New York Age

No. 47. NEW YORK, N. Y., SATURDAY, APRIL 18, 1942

Randolph Calls Navy Secretary's Statement Insult To Negroes; Sees Jim Crow Extending

Announcement by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox last week that Negro volunteers would be enlisted in the reserves of the Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard, was severely criticized by A. Philip Randolph international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. Mr. Randolph not only criticized the Navy Secretary's statement but called it an "insult to the race."

In his criticism of the statement, Mr. Randolph declared: "It was announced by Secretary Knox of the Navy that Negro volunteers would be enlisted in the reserves of the Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard, but he made it clear in his official announcement that the color line still exists in the Navy and that Negroes will not be enlisted on equal basis with whites and that even enlistment will not begin until a separate school of training can be established. Mr. Knox makes it also clear that there will be no provision made for commissioning Negroes as naval officers for higher rank than petty officers, as yet.

"While this is a change in the policy of the Navy toward Negroes, it is not a desirable change. It accepts and extends and consolidates the policy of Jim-Crowism in the Navy as well as proclaims as an accepted, recognized Government ideology that the Negro is inferior to the white race.

Racial Superiority

"This doctrine of racial superiority propounded by Secretary Knox in relation to the Negro in the Navy is one of the major causes of our present world debacle. Primarily, this war arises out of the exploitation of the labor and land and natural resources of the peoples of color in Africa, China, India and the islands of the sea by the white power nations who have set themselves up as the chosen guardians of the world who are privileged to sit upon the necks of non-white people and rob them of their wealth and insult their souls, to boot.

The United Nations will not win this war until they recognize and appreciate the importance, value and equality of the colored races in our international arrangement and world economy.

"The Negro is one of the minority groups of America and must naturally recognize that their hope lies in the maintenance and perpetuation of the democratic system—though limited as it is in the so-called democratic nations—and therefore must be concerned about the victory of the arms of America and her Allies, Great Britain, China and Russia, but white America must understand that the Nero is now determined to insist upon his place in America, the world and in this war effort, namely the Navy, Army Air Corps and U. S. Marines are equal and that they resent the stigma of inferiority and the status of vassals which Secretary Knox has affixed to them."

March on Washington Committee Meeting At Garden, June 16th

The planning committee of the March on Washington Movement met at the Harlem Y. M. C. A. Saturday, to announce that the officers had signed contracts for the monster mass meeting to be staged at Madison Square Garden on Tuesday, June 16th.

A. Philip Randolph, national director of the March on Washington Movement, did not preside but he had just returned from Washington where he had been in conference with Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, about securing Lincoln's Memorial for a similar mass demonstration for Negro rights. To date, he said, he has had no reply from Mr. Ickes. He also told the sponsors of plans to secure the Chicago Coliseum or the Chicago Stadium for a midwestern mass meeting.

Attorney Eardlie Johns, chairman of the finance committee, announced that the lease for headquarters at the Theresa Hotel would be ready in a day or two and that soon thereafter a permanent staff would be appointed to distribute tickets and collect funds.

Names of the speakers will be announced when the steering committee, composed of Lawrence Ervin, Aldridge Turner, Eardlie Johns, Bessye Bearden and Richard Thomas meets.

APRIL 25, 1942 THE PEOPLE'S VOICE

DIAL TIME

By JOE BOSTIC

Sunday, as you probably know, saw the closing program in the "Freedom's People" take to the air for an hour long show of bangup, big name, inspirational and instructive entertainment. To review the names of those appearing on this valedictory show, is to give you a cross section of Negro achievement in this hectic period in our national life. But for the record there was Dr. Ambrose Caliver, who conceived the series of broadcasts; Rev. W. H. Jernagin, noted cleric; J. Rosamond Johnson; Todd Duncan and Anne Brown of "Porgy and Bess"; Maurice Ellis; Dick Campbell; and the DePaur Chorus.

Highlight of the show was the reassuring message from President Roosevelt in which he took a cautious but healthy swing at race bias.

Being a finishing program, the listeners were given a quick review of the programs which had gone before. Needless to say, all of the shows in the entire series struck a high peak of excellence.

Since many of you readers heard the program there isn't much I can add to what you already know. However, I feel that the bigger story lies in the tragedy of the discontinuance of a program that could obviously do much in bringing a clearer understanding to many uninformed people of the problems of the great Negro minority. Then too, here was a program that took the bandanas off the heads of the Negroes performing and, God knows, we need not fewer, but more such broadcasts to offset the untold harm of the likes of the Amos 'N' Andy program and the circus antics of some of the hallelujah programs from pseudo churches. Dr. Caliver tells me that the funds to operate the show came in part from the Rosenwald fund, with the actors being paid sustaining fees by NBC. We need the program on the air. Something must be done to get it back!

Mr. Caliver I hearby humbly submit TWO possible plans for resubsidation: (1) Have Mr. Randolph and his March-On-Washington committee finance the show for thirteen weeks and tie it in with their current campaign to fight discrimination. Here is a perfect vehicle with which to dramatize the situation and the tie-in is obvious. (2) Try popular subscription with EVERY Negro man, woman, and child as well as sympathizers of other racial groups, contributing anything from a penny upward. This could be tied in with a sale of buttons glorifying AMERICA'S FIRST NAVAL HERO OF THIS WAR—DORIE MILLER—after the fashion that other groups are glorifying their General MacArthur, etc. Thus would be accomplished the dual job of arousing race consciousness and pride in our hero plus returning a generous sum which should more than pay the moderate costs of producing and staging the show. Just an idea, Dr. Caliver. It's yours to accept for what it's worth—if anything.

The Pittsburgh Courier

SATURDAY, MAY 30, 1942

Best [illegible] of Randolph's March on Washington movement appears in the magazine "Fourth International" (20 cents), published at 116 University Place, New York. The caustic comments of the author, Albert Parker, and his sound logic should provoke considerable thought in colored America about the eminent labor leader and Spingarn Medallist.

AMSTERDAM NEW YORK STAR-NEWS

Saturday, May 23, 1942

Cocktail Party For March on Washington

The March On Washington Movement Cocktail Party has been planned for Sunday evening from seven until—at the Club Danceland, 322 West 125th Street. Stars of stage and radio plus the revues from the Elks' Rendezvous and Small's will lend their talents for this worthwhile and worthy affair. Mrs. Margaret McLaurin is chairman of the committee, and among those who are helping to make the party a great success are Mrs. A. Phillip Randolph, Mrs. W. C. Irving, Mrs. Harold A. Stevens, Mrs. Rachel Carruthers and Attorney Eardlin John.

THE PEOPLE'S VOICE

MAY 30, 1942

Madison Square Garden Rally Continues to Get Contributions

The slogan "Winning democracy for the Negro is winning the war for democracy" has become the battle cry as individuals and organizations rally to the March on Washington movement and the Madison Square Garden mass meeting, sponsored by the organization for June 16. Evidence of the sincerity of the enthusiasm is shown by contributions of many individuals as well as organizations. Following is a list of those organization which have contributed $25 or more:

Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters
NAACP (National)
Central Manhattan Medical Society
NAACP (New York branch)
Women's Finance Committee of NAACP
Friends of Negro Labor Committee
Negro Labor Committee
American Virgin Islands Civic Association
Modern Trade
National Negro League
Hotel Bellmen's Beneficial Association
United Sons of Georgia Inc.
United Negro League of Queens
St. Vincent Benevolent Association Inc.
Garage Washers & Polishers Local No. 272
Relief Association of the Baptist Church

Individuals contributing $5 or more:

Knit Goods Workers Union
Mrs. Nellie Calloway
REP Club, Inc.
J. Carl Canty
Larry Foster
Judge Jane M. Bolin
Kingsley Mbadiwe
William Morris
O. W. Bynum
Z. Johnson
T. R. Crawford
A. Elzy
E. Steadman
J. T. Vidal
Atty. Conrad Johnson
Henry Lee Moon
Norman W. Robinson
Friends of Harlem Transit Committee
F. C. McMillan
W. F. Buford
James T. Johnson
E. O. Brown
C. Wheeler
John T. Johnson
P. Ward
J. J. Turner
Friend of Government
Henry C. Jones

AMSTERDAM
New York Star-News
STAR NEWS

VOL. XXXIII, No. 11 SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1942 IN TWO SECTIONS SECTION ONE 10

THE PRESIDENT'S COMMITTEE. Members of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee listening to Lieut. Governor Charles Poletti explaining New York State's position in the present fight to eliminate racial discrimination in industry. Listening to him at the Bar Assocation Building, 42 West. 44th St. are (left to right) Frank Fenton, Mark Ethridge, Milton P. Webster, Dr. Malcolm McLean, David Sarnoff, John Brophy and Earle B. Dickerson.

OTHER STORIES AND PICTURES ON PAGE

F. D. R. Must Command Country To End Discrimination Policy

(Special to Star-News)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 18. —President Roosevelt in his proclamation to the American people on Monday night, as an emergency war measure, must command the nation to end its Jimcrowism. This is the country-wide pressure being brought to bear upon the Chief Executive in this hour of the nation's direst peril. Only in this way, his ablest advisers, after a complete survey of public sentiment, North, East, South and West, advise him, can he stay the rising tide of resentment against increasing color prejudice.

Very definitely, his unselfish counsellors tell him that there is general apathy among the millions of colored Americans toward the war against the Japanese. Only an absolute command bidding industry, labor and the general populace to pocket its prejudice for the duration and with orders implementing that command into immediate action will suffice in this crisis, they urge him.

Must Forbid Southern Pattern

Among the many forces pressing the President for heroic action are the dynamic appeals made by Pearl S. Buck through all the leading dailies of the nation, including the New York Times and the New York Herald, pleading with him to see the blinding light and act. The Fair Employment Practice Commission has sent him confidential memoranda telling him of the appalling conditions of offensive discrimination in the national defense as well as private industry. Many of the governors and mayors of the country have sent word to him that they are up against a stone wall of helplessness in the situation because of Jimcrow practices by Federal agents in their States and cities. The churchmen of all creeds and sections are similarly imploring him. All are saying that the Southern segregation pattern in the army, navy, air corps, in housing and in air raid defense must be altered to the all-American pattern forthwith or he must hold himself accountable for the consequences.

President Roosevelt Must Order End of Jim Crowism

(Continued from Page 1)

Army Board, Brigadier General

Inside information has it that the President will shortly appoint a colored member of the Army Board and another a brigadier general. These will simply be futile and petty appeasement gestures, his advisers tell him. He must now go all-out to convince the colored people they are equal Americans and not simply "Negroes" in America or the situation will rapidly and tragically grow worse. In order to prevent the situation from getting out of bounds, real Americans are urging Roosevelt to speak out loud and bold on Monday night.

INCLUDING THE ONLY DAILY PICTURE

PM Daily
E CENTS

Copyright, 1942, by Marshall Field
VOL. II – No. 233
Friday, May 8, 1942
Warmer.
COMPLETE EDITION

We Sink More Of Japs' BIG Warships!

Our Score Now 17 In War's Greatest Sea Battle

Page 15

CROW FIGHTS FOR NAZI 5th COLUMN

Pages 2 to 6

PM TELLS YOU MORE NEWS IN LESS

You Have More to Lose Than He

An

I would like to put the question of discrimination against Negroes in America in its simplest terms:

Look into your hearts, you people who will not give a fellow American a job because his skin is darker than yours, you people who will not sit down to eat with him, you who refuse to ride by his side in a train: Do you hate an American Negro more than you hate Hitler and everything he stands for?

You are afraid perhaps that if the Negro has proper schooling, is well trained, he will get your job? If so, you are a very foolish white man, for in many sections of the U. S. A. the reason your wages are no higher is that the Negro has been intimidated into taking less. But even if you really think this isn't so, ask yourself: are you more afraid of the Negro than you are of the Reichswehr?

Because that, Mr. and Mrs. White American, is what it is all going to boil down to before this war is over. If enough of you hate and fear the good American Negro more than you hate and fear Adolf Hitler, your children are going to grow up under gauleiters. For, if it were left to you, you would lose this war because you would rather lose it than work and fight with the Negro whose good right arm, whose quick willingness to learn, whose eagerness to serve his country you need now.

I would even put it this way: you need the Negro more than he needs you—for you have more freedom than he to lose.

Ask anyone who has been to Europe during this war if he thinks any nation can stand up against Hitler with 10 per cent of its man

I am not, obviously, writing this editorial to people who a am writing to people who are not moved by the monstrous inn complacent at home about the very practices we fight to destro ones who have learned nothing from the last 10 years in Eu demonstrated what kind of a country racial theorism eventu country of concentration camps and forced labor, a country wit self-respect, without kindness, without religion or grace. And I am simply insensitive ones who are of good heart, but never have th things.

And what I am saying, to repeat, is very simple: this counti enough to go on persecuting—discriminating against—10 per cen tion and win the war, too. We will either live by our democrati men are created free and equal—or we will die as one nation Europe has died for want of clarity about what's worth fighting

I believe we will live because I believe when the showdown find, as the British found after Dunkirk, what our principles a mean to us. But every day we drowse through, unaware that our future by not giving 13,000,000 Negroes what they are ent laws of this land, every day we lose means one day longer that t on, means so many more Americans will be killed before it is ov

—RA

By Albert Deutsch:

Negro Tenth of Nation Should Get Equal Chance To Do Its Bit in All-Out Drive Against Fa

At no time in American history has the Negro enjoyed so much liberty as he does today. At no time has the Negro been so conscious and so resentful of the injustices and indignities still imposed upon him. Unless Americans understand this paradox and act upon it quickly the all-out war drive may be gravely handicapped.

The main grievances of the 13,000,000 dark-skinned Americans have centered around these events and conditions:

¶ Jim Crow set-up in the U. S. Army, and numerous camp-area clashes involving the rights of Negroes in uniform.

¶ Restriction of Negroes to messmen in the Navy, and complete exclusion from the Marine Corps, until Secretary Knox's recent order opening up combat branches of both services to colored men.

¶ Anti-Negro discrimination in industry, especially in war plants.

¶ Refusal at first by the Red Cross to accept blood donations from Negroes, then acceptance of such blood on a Jim-Crow basis in the face of scientific evidence that there s absolutely no difference in the blood of whites and Negroes.

¶ The Sikeston, Missouri, lynching of a Negro youth last January under particularly brutal circumstances, and the failure of local authorities to bring the lynchers to book.

¶ The Sojourner Truth housing riot at Detroit, in which a Fascist-inspired mob prevented Negro war workers from occupying the houses intended for them.

The Credit Side

Impressive gains have recently been recorded on all these fronts:

¶ Discriminatory Army practices against the Negro have been relaxed. An encouraging sign of progress was the prompt action which followed the fatal race riot at Fort Dix. Negro MP's were integrated into the general MP system at the post, replacing southern whites. Restaurants and other public places around the camp found guilty of anti-Negro discrimination were declared off bounds for all Dix troops, black or white.

¶ Despite its irritating tone of condescension and its narrow Jim-Crow scope, Secretary Knox's recent statement opening up combat branches of naval services to Negroes marks a distinct step in the right direction. Knox's order also brought to an end the complete exclusion of Negroes from the Marine Corps.

¶ The President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice has done much to reduce race discrimination in war plants, as instanced by the recent crackdown on discriminating factories in the Chicago and Milwaukee areas.

¶ U. S. Attorney General Biddle has ordered a Federal grand jury to investigate the Sikeston lynching, with an eminent lawver serving as a special prosecutor.

¶ Another Federal grand jury has indicted three men—two leaders of the pro-Nazi National Workers' League and an executive of a real-estate organization—for seditious conspiracy in organizing mob violence against the Negroes seeking to enter the Sojourner Truth houses. Last week the first contingent of Negro tenants was moved in under police and state-trooper protection.

Many prominent citizens, from the President down, have repeatedly denounced race discrimination as a serious drag on the war effort. Especially significant has been the vigorous defense of Negro rights voiced by leading Southerners. The U. S. Supreme Court in several recent decisions has broken down long-standing discriminatory practices. Important sections of the conservative press which formerly were indifferent or hostile to the fight for Negro rights have recently made eloquent appeals for racial justice

New York and other states have enacted several important bills outlawing various forms of widely practiced economic and social discrimination based on race prejudice.

Discrimination against Negroes in labor unions has been dwindling rapidly under the pressure of the war emergency. Some old-line unions still bar Negroes from membership, but there's been a widening breach in the anti-Negro front in labor. The new CIO groups have been especially eager to cement Negro-white solidarity among workers. The United Auto Workers of Detroit the other day started disciplinary action against a white member charged with participating in the Sojourner Truth housing riot.

More and Faster.

Well and good. But a great deal remains to be done. And it must be done fast. The time calls, not for isolated, timid acts against discrimination, but for sweeping, decisive steps against an evil that gravely hampers the all-out prosecution of the war.

Men, machines and morale are the three main keys to victory. Here's how race discrimination weakens all three:

Men and Machines: Race discrimination is preventing a real all-out war effort on the part of the American people. This war is no pushover. We won't beat the Axis with one hand tied behind our back. We've got to go in slugging with everything we have. We can't win with half measures, or nine-tenths measures. We need all ten-tenths.

The forms that anti-Negro bias take in the armed forces and in industry are keeping 13,000,000 dark-skinned tenth of the Nation, in the drive toward v forces a strict 10 per cent recruits, turning away fighting men eager to the Negroes taken in. Th policy is even narrower t modern warfare, which p unity of effort and gener Jim Crow serves as a fift Hitler.

Widely Prev

Despite the President prohibiting race discrimin plants working on war widely prevalent. Negro and unskilled, are still ba factory gates. Besides open there are many subtle forms of medical examinations to fi ailments in Negro applicants ment," wherein one or two co taken in to avoid complaints Negro employment to the lowest-paid jobs. Bullets and out by skilled black hands as effectively as those form hands. In any case, idle ma more to be tolerated than id

Morale: Let's face this large sections of the Neg yet sold on this war. They treatment accorded them democratic war. If this is freedom, they want that brace them, too. If it is to b a war, it should not exclude th to popular belief, the morale among Negroes is not due to past grievances but to the that greet their they've got for t

The Negro press is nearl 100 per cent support of the the war. But it cannot avoi evidences of anti-Negro bi and military fronts. In e ment against this bias, N

NEWS DEPARTMENTS

	Page
Picture Magazine	7-11
National News	12-14
News From Abroad	15-19
New York News	19-20
Dr. Seuss	21
Food	22
Sgt. Jimmy Cannon Says	23
Entertainment Guide	23
Theater and Music	23-24
Barnaby	24
Movies	24-25
Radio	26-27
Shopping News	28-29
Sports	30-31
Patoruzu	31
[illegible]dan	32

Entered as Second Class Matter Post Office N. Y. N. Y.

CONTINUED

Negroes Deserve Equal Chance

are not breeding dissension, as is often charged, but are merely reflecting the feelings of their Negro readers.

Let me quote from a letter I recently received from a Harvard correspondent (white), the son of a well-known New England physician:

"I was coming from New Haven to Boston by train recently and sat next to a young Negro private. At dinner we got to talking about the war and it developed that he did not feel that the sacrifices he had had to make when he was drafted were being very well repaid. He had been called some eight months ago from his work as a tailor and sent to a southern camp where he eventually acquired the rank of sergeant. However, he said he had since lost interest in his army work, and that he was en route to a different unit in a different service to start over.

Southern Jim Crow

"It developed that he had been told by a trolley conductor in a southern city to go to the Jim Crow portion of the car. This he had refused to do, and when he was ordered to do so a second time, he asked that his fare be returned. This also was refused. He carried the matter to his company commander who, rather than offering him solace, removed his stripes. His initiative had been further sapped when it transpired that none of the members of his unit were recommended for officer's training school, though each unit is supposed to get an equal number of nominations.

"His reaction to this was not savage or even very bitter, but was deep-rooted and sincere and the result of much thought. He felt he had no cause to exert himself for an organization that treated him as our army had, despite the fact that he had a genuine abhorrence for everything Fascism stood for. He and I both hope that he will find a new start here in New England, but in the meantime his comrades in the south continue under the same burdens."

I cite this incident because it is typical of countless tales circulated among Negro Americans through their press, letters, and word of mouth. It is not the open discussion of such abuses but their open practice that breeds bitterness, disunity and cynicism; that makes many Negroes wonder if this is not, after all, a "white man's war."

The morale factor in race discrimination transcends national boundaries and reaches around the globe. Let's not forget that the overwhelming majority of our anti-Axis allies belong to the colored races. We can't hope to win the war without them. The tragic failure to recognize this fact, resulting in the immobilization of millions of potential fighters for our cause, was a factor in the loss of strategic Malaya and Java. It is a factor in the critical plight of Burma. It may yet lose India.

Jim Crow Pro-Hitler

Axis propagandists have taken full advantage of anti-Negro outbreaks in this country to spread disunity among the United Nations. Berlin and Tokyo radio broadcasts have blared to the colored peoples of the world the stories of Sikeston and Sojourner Truth to back up their lie that this is a war of race against race.

If there were no other proof that race prejudice hurts our chances of winning the war, the fact that Hitler seeks to perpetuate and spread it should be sufficient. The one, all-consuming need of the day is to win the war. Everything else is secondary. If to freeze the status quo for the duration would help win it, I'd be for it. But prejudice-as-usual injures the war effort just as business-as-usual hurts it. Race prejudice is Hitler's weapon; it is our danger. This war, like none before it, requires swift movement, heroic imagination, clean breaks with retarding traditions. That applies to race hatred—an unwholesome luxury in peace, a heavy weight tied to the victory chariot in war.

The Negro neither wants nor needs any special favors. He wants no paternal kindness or uplift. He wants simply the equal opportunity that is the rightful heritage of every American. He wants a chance to lead a self-respecting, respected life, and a chance to fight on the same basis as other citizens when our democracy is threatened by a foreign foe. He wants no more; he deserves no less.

It isn't necessary to idealize the Negro tenth of our nation. Suffice it that they are human beings who live and love and die like the rest of us, weak and frail in some things, strong and noble in others. Having felt the deprivation of full liberty, they perhaps have a keener appreciation of it than some of us who have grown flabby and smug in the delusion that it's ours for keeps, that it can be forever preserved without fighting for it.

Rarely has history provided such a happy confluence of a great ideal—the extension of democratic rights—and a great practical necessity — the winning of the world's greatest war. How foolhardy are those who would rather chance losing their own liberty than see other members of the human family gain theirs! The Nazis tell us this is a race war, a war between white and colored people, between Jews and Gentiles, between Aryans and non-Aryans — even while their unholy Axis alliance proves the lie. We must not be diverted from the fundamental issue of this war for survival. That issue is freedom or slavery, democracy or fascism, we or they. And we are the liberty-loving peoples of the world, the Americans and the British and the anti-Axis Europeans and the Chinese and the Russians and the Africans—white, black and yellow—the United Nations fighting round the globe under the common flag of freedom.

MORE

Joseph A. Manchester is rarin' to fight Hitler and Hirohito. There are millions more of dark-skinned Americans who want to join up in an all-out war of democracy against Fascism. But Army and Navy restrictions, discrimination on the war-industry front, rebuffs in some civilian-defense volunteer groups—all these help cut off an immense source of man power. They strike at Negro morale, make him feel he's not wanted in this war. Photo by John DeBiase, PM

Huge Man-Power Reservoir Hardly Tapped in New York . . .

Before he enlisted in Gainesville, Fla., two years ago, I. W. Clemones, messman 1st class, had held a variety of jobs. Now, 23, he's enthusiastic about Navy. Photos by Steven Derry, PM

Corp. Walter Perkins, 23, was wearing the uniform of a postman when the U. S. A. called on him to don a soldier's instead. His home town is Washington, D. C.

James B. Thomas, 42, married, of 8 W. 140th St., is a skilled electric and acetylene welder, but his color keeps him from getting a job. Photos by Gene Badger, PM

Ted Golding, 38, of 282 W. 119th St., has a temporary job now, but in a year and a half out of work he was often turned down because of his color.

Jim Crowism Rules in Factories Despite Need for Skilled Men

By Jim Desmond

Passage of the Schwartzwald and Washburn Bills is expected to contribute heavily toward crushing Jim Crowism in New York's war industries.

Effective enforcement of these measures, which give the State broad powers to enforce laws banning discrimination and make it a misdemeanor for a defense corporation to discriminate against workers because of national origin, race, color or creed, can do much toward smoking out un-American employers and boosting production.

Jim Crowism has been the rule in the majority of New York's war factories.

Federal and State officials reported today that thousands of skilled Negro workers are being barred from contributing to the war effort because industry draws the color line.

And both Federal and State officials put the blame squarely on prejudiced employers.

Most of the discrimination, the officials said, stems from outright race prejudice, but in occasional cases employers labor under honest misapprehensions. But both groups use the same reasons to explain the color line:

¶ That their white employes would resent Negro workers.

¶ That the percentage of skilled Negro workers is so small that it is difficult to find them when a job is to be done.

Both excuses are untrue, according to Edward H. Lawson, field-employment assistant in the New York office of the War Production Board (WPB).

Lawson said that investigation of more than 60 cases of de facto discrimination, in which employers insisted white workers would object to Negroes, proved that in every instance the statement was false.

And, Lawson added, since Negro workers have been put into those 60 plants not one case of race friction has been reported.

The complete lack of racial friction between whites and Negroes working side by side was also noted by Robert Washburn, executive secretary of the Committee on Discrimination in Employment of the State Defense Council.

He said that even in the isolated cases where white employes really did object at first to the introduction of Negro workers, the racial prejudice broke down after they had worked together for a while.

Labor unions have played an important part in breaking down race barriers, Lawson said. He cited the strong stand taken by the CIO to guarantee Negroes equal employment opportunities and said the AFL, although less forthright, is also tackling the problem vigorously.

Meanwhile, the Negro Labor Victory Committee has been organized in New York to formulate "plans for the full training and use of the Negro people in our war industries." The Committee has the backing of War Man-Power Commissioner Paul V. McNutt.

U. S. Employment Service Finds Negroes Excluded From War Jobs

Despite a sharp rise in Negro placements by the New York branch of the U. S. Employment Service, few Negroes are getting war jobs, according to a survey published in the current USES Review.

"There is little evidence that their skills are being utilized extensively in war-production industries," the survey revealed.

On the contrary, the Review article said, there is little change in the occupational patterns of the Negro worker.

The study showed that Negro placements in New York advanced to a total of 95,636 last year, an increase of 132 per cent over 1940 and 287 per cent over 1939. But the rise, far greater in proportion than among white workers, did not reflect a basic employment-pattern change because:

¶ 60 per cent of the jobs were in service occupations.

¶ A large number of the jobs were temporary domestic service positions or in seasional occupations.

¶ In 20 selected war industries, the number of white workers in the last quarter of 1941 was double that in the comparable period of 1940, but Negro placements had increased only 18 per cent.

The Review cautioned, furthermore, against accepting the percentage gain as a clear advance for Negroes in employment. Part of the gain resulted from the creation of the Dress Industry Placement unit, which got jobs for Negroes who previously had applied through their unions. And the shift of white workers to jobs outside the city in war industries accounted for the failure of the white placements to keep proportional pace with those for Negroes.

It further was pointed out that a large number of the jobs going to Negroes were day-to-day domestic jobs, each counting, however, as a separate placement.

The study also showed that only 11 per cent of Negroes were placed in industrial jobs and of these all but 3 per cent were placed in apparel trades.

"Three occupational groups showed an unfavorable relationship between the proportion of registrants and the proportion of placements," the survey added.

"Unskilled Negro laborers, while they represented over 11 per cent of the total number of laborers in the active file, received only 5 per cent of the jobs for this group. Similarly, Negroes registered in the professional and managerial occupations and clerical and sales occupations did not receive jobs commensurate with their representation in the active file."

Call to Action

Frederick Douglass, an ex-slave who became the most famous of Negro abolitionists, issued a stirring call to men of his own race in March, 1863, a few months after Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation. His call, entitled Men of Color, to Arms! had some pregnant passages that are as applicable today as they were in the Civil War:

"Action! Action! not criticism, is the plain duty of this hour. Words are powerful only as they stimulate to blows. Liberty won by white men would lose half its lustre. Who would be free themselves must strike the blow. Better even to die free than to live slaves. This is the sentiment of every brave colored man among us. There are weak and cowardly men in all nations. We have them among us. They will tell you that this is the 'white man's war,' that you will be 'no better off after than before the war' . . . Believe them not . . . I urge you to fly to arms, and smite with death that power that would bury the government and your liberty in the same hopeless grave."

Army Needs Nurses, But Rejects Negroes

In spite of recent gains made by Negroes in their quest for racial equality in the armed services of the U. S. A., these sore spots remain:

¶ No Negro can win a Navy commission.

¶ The Army segregates regiments by color and restricts Negro officers to command Negro troops, which command they usually share with white officers.

¶ Negro doctors, regardless of their skill, are segregated and restricted to Negro regiments.

¶ Despite the urgent need for thousands of nurses, the Army has turned away hundreds of available Negro graduate nurses. It has taken in fewer than 60 qualified Negro applicants and assigned them to only two Negro camps, both situated in the South. A few dozen serve the all-Negro division at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

¶ The Army stubbornly resists formation of a mixed Negro and white regiment, although advocates have suggested that it be composed entirely of those who volunteered for it.

These and similar regulations incense Negro soldiers, of course, but they point out that in every case the strictures come from the top. Among the troops—the privates and noncoms—the color line is largely disregarded in most Northern camps and they fraternize freely. (Such fraternizing, of course, is out in the Deep South, where Negroes are repressed as a matter of economic policy by the big land owners anxious to maintain a docile, low-paid labor reserve.)

The good fellowship that prevails among white and Negro troops in most camps also affects the surrounding communities, sometimes by Army order. A case in point is Dix, where authorities, informed by GI that certain restaurants were barring or insulting Negro soldiers, announced that any place guilty of such practices would be ruled off limits for all troops. Hit in their pocketbooks, the civilian bigots swiftly removed the offending signs.

. . . But Negroes Go All-Out at Hampton Institute

The myth that Negroes lack aptitude for mechanics is being dispelled daily at Hampton Institute. At machines such as these, hundreds of youths are learning at the Negro college to equip themselves for their contribution to the war effort.

The story of Hampton Institute today is the story of an all-out effort by which Virginia's Negro college is producing workers and even the very materials of war on its own campus.

The significant part of the story is that in the heart of Tidewater, Va., Negroes and whites—students and teachers alike—are working side by side with one thought in mind—victory.

Hampton's activities include:

¶ Three-month "quickie" courses conducted in co-operation with the National Youth Administration to train apprentices as assistants in the Hampton Roads shipyards.

¶ Evening courses for Negro and white civilians and soldiers in radio, architectural and engineering drawing, material testing, survey and topography.

¶ Training of medical laboratory technicians for the U. S. Public Health Service at Craney Island, which serves the Norfolk naval base.

¶ The manufacture, in campus trade shops, of parts for mosquito torpedo boats and of mine caps for the Norfolk and Yorktown naval bases. Several other materials are turned out but their nature is an official secret.

To accomplish all this, Hampton has assigned all its faculty to war jobs of one sort or another, and assigned many to work exclusively on war training.

It also has:

¶ Hired many new instructors.

¶ Shortened its advanced courses from four years to three and sometimes two and a half years.

¶ Virtually eliminated vacations.

This accomplishment did not come overnight. The day after Pearl Harbor, the facilities of the Institute were placed at the command of the old Office of Production Management. By the time the War Production Board came along to take up the offer, Hampton's program was in full swing.

Mid-year examinations were canceled in favor of Civilian Defense Week, at which special air-raid training was given. The term schedule was altered to end the Spring term on Apr. 20. Right now, a special nine-week inter-session is in progress. It will be followed by a Summer course of similar length.

Meanwhile Hampton has piled up this impressive record:

¶ 425 soldiers from Army camps all over the country have received intensive training as automotive mechanics.

¶ 2000 skilled workers have taken refresher or advanced courses to increase their skills for shipyard work.

¶ 100 youths have taken special training designated by the NYA as helpful to the war effort.

But all is not rosy. Although discrimination is unknown on the campus, Negro students are aware they will run into it once they leave Hampton.

The Report on the War Responsibilities of Hampton Institute notes these sore points:

¶ Negro fliers trained under the Hampton civilian pilot program have small chance of getting into the Army as aviators, because there is only one Negro Air Corps Cadet School.

¶ The Army still favors white men in radio and other skilled jobs, relegating trained Negroes, in many cases, to service jobs.—J. D.

Negro Blood Jim Crowed

Pearl Harbor, where prompt blood transfusions saved hundreds of wounded soldiers, sailors and civilians, showed conclusively the great value of storing up blood plasma banks in war. Blood saves the lives of men fighting for us. It would be unpatriotic and inhumane to set up dikes of prejudice or counter-prejudice against the free, constant flow of life-saving blood from the veins of civilians to those of wounded Americans.

The American Red Cross has been entrusted with the task of procuring from civilians blood to be processed into plasma for our armed forces. No disagreement with Red Cross policy should be permitted to reduce in any way the donorship of that precious blood.

Having said all this, the right to criticize the Red Cross's policy in segregating the blood of Negroes and whites still remains. That policy has no scientific basis. It is needlessly humiliating to one-tenth of the Nation's citizenry. It appeases, unnecessarily, a narrow un-American prejudice.

The Red Cross's Jim Crow policy is unscientific. Contrary to widespread belief, there is absolutely no difference in the composition of the blood of Negroes and whites. The difference in skin color is due entirely to varying amounts of coloring matter in glands underlying the skin.

The Jim Crow blood policy humiliates the Negro because it picks him out for special discrimination. The official Red Cross statement of policy on blood donors says:

"In deference to the wishes of those for whom the plasma is being provided, the blood will be processed separately so that those receiving transfusions may be given plasma from blood of their own race."

Yet it is a fact that the Red Cross mixes—with complete justification—the blood of Japanese and Chinese and Indonesians and American Indians with the blood of whites. It segregates only the blood of Negro donors. And Negroes know that only prejudice is behind this separation.

The American Red Cross Chairman, Norman C. Davis, has tried to excuse the Jim Crow policy on the ground that most white soldiers "seriously object to transfusions of Negro blood." But there is no evidence that the Red Cross or any other agency ever took a poll among white troops on this matter. Nor would such a poll be necessary. Dr. Ephraim Kahn, president of the New York Chapter of the Assn. of Internes and Medical Students, neatly answered this point in a letter to Davis:

"Any soldier in surgical shock requiring a transfusion of human blood will not question the source of this blood. Blood for transfusions is a medicine, and providing it meets the necessary chemical and biological requirements, its source is a matter of no significance. It is only by 'forcing the issue' and rejecting Negro donors or segregating their blood that any discussion at all has arisen."

When smallpox vaccine was discovered there was at first, wide public prejudice against being scratched with matter from sick cows. Many people also reacted violently against having "horse blood" injected into them when diphtheria anti-toxin was first made available. These prejudices, based on ignorance, were quickly overcome by scientific education.

The same could be done with the unfounded, morale-weakening prejudice against mixing blood in plasma banks. The Red Cross, assisted by other humane and scientific agencies, could do the job with little effort. Many hospitals in New York mix Negro and white blood in transfusion banks without getting any complaints. Medical personnel in Red Cross blood donor centers have expressed deep regret at having to participate in the unscientific hocus-pocus of segregating blood.

A few weeks ago it was announced that medical scientists in Boston were developing a method of processing animal blood for human transfusions. If the experiment succeeds, would the Red Cross continue to segregate the blood of Negroes while accepting animal blood?

The Red Cross's appeasement of prejudice in the face of scientific knowledge has aroused deep resentment among our colored population. It was ill-advised in adopting its Jim Crow policy. That policy can be changed, as the original policy not to accept any blood at all from Negro donors was changed. It should be changed in the interests of democracy, science and national morale.

Local CIO and AFL leaders prepare to give blood under auspices of Negro Labor Victory Committee. Included in group are: Eugene Worthem, Arthur Garvin, Dorothy Funn, Mike Obermeier, Helen Simon, Ewart Guinier, Mae Mattis, Clifford T. McAvoy, Charles A. Collins, Charles Laurence and Albert E. Smith.

Photos by Ray Platnick, PM

and John Goodman join in donating blood to Red Cross. Guinier

Youth Won't Fight in Jim Crow Arm

Jimmy Davis, an earnest, bright-eyed Negro of 27, has given the Selective Service authorities one of the toughest cases they've been called upon to handle.

Jimmy has a 1A draft classification. He is an intense anti-fascist, and is eager to shoulder a gun against Hitler's hordes. But he has unqualifiedly declared his refusal "to serve in an army where members of my race are segregated into separate units solely because of their color." He has asked permission to cross the border and enlist in the Canadian army, where Jim Crow is regarded as an undesirable alien.

Jimmy Davis

Young Davis's appeal has been rejected by Selective Service officials, ranging from his local board right up to the national director, Major General Lewis B. Hershey. In each successive stage of his appeal, officials have expressed a general respect for his feeling, but have told him tactfully and firmly that they cannot sustain his claim that Jim Crow in the armed forces constitutes the kind of injustice that exempts him from service.

To which soft-spoken Jimmy Davis replies:

"Why should Negroes, and Negroes alone, be forced to accept the humiliation of a separate and distinct draft quota? You don't see Irish, Germans, Chinese, Jews or Italians forced into separate Jim Crow units. Aren't we Americans, too? Why doesn't the War Department take the final, logical step and provide separate, segregated battlefields for Negroes to fight and die on? I feel it is my constitutional right to serve my country without being discriminated against because of my race."

And there the matter rests for the moment. Davis has told selective service officials he is prepared to take any conse- may result from his stand.

The Negro in Democracy

Prominent Negro and white citizens participate in a two-day conference on The Negro in a Fighting Democracy that begins today at Lincoln University, Chester County, Pa. The conference, called by a committee headed by Walter L. Wright, Lincoln president, is discussing Negro morale, civil rights, health, welfare and employment opportunities.

Man," have recently been published an recorded. He is a native of Georgia, cam north with his parents when he was 6 graduated from high school at Engle wood, N. J. He took up the piano, special ized in classic music, and attended Juilliar Institute in New York for three years, pay ing his way by tutoring. He is serious about his music, and works hard at it in his evening hours.

Young Davis has no yen for martyrdom He doesn't rant about general injustice; h doesn't hate whites. He just can't see ho Jim Crow can be tolerated in a democrat army.

"I'd love to fight Hitlerism and its rac superiority myth," says Jimmy, "but I ca for the life of me see how I can honesti fight against Hitlerism in an army that itsel practices racial discrimination. Why can' they let me enlist in Canada, where I could fight on an equal basis with other soldiers of democracy?

"Better still, why can't we have mixed units here? They have worked well in Canada and, with the possible exception of the South, they could work well here. If and when such units are authorized I should love to be among the first to volunteer."

Jimmy Davis has asked me for counsel. My advice to him is: Accept the draft board's decision. The big job for all of us overshadowing everything else in the world is to help lick Hitler. We've still got plent of holes in our democracy. We can kee right on trying to plug them up now a we'll continue to do so after the war But that war must be won at

THE FAIR EMPLOYMENT COMMITTEE

It would be most unfortunate if in the proposed reorganization of governmental agencies, the President's Fair Employment Committee should be junked along with the Office of Production Management. Though the argument for the abolition of OPM may have considerable merit when examined in the light of the urgent need for centralization of power, and for stringent economy of both time and energy, quite different a reasoning and motive will have to be advanced with respect to the FEC.

Created by an executive order early last summer, the FEC has conducted searching inquiries into the employment practices of a number of industrial defense plants whose discriminatory policy had brought them into sharp conflict with the meaning and intent of the President's executive order. Though bereft of legal authority necessary to enforce its own decision, the committee however has succeeded admirably in focussing the attention of a critical public on the industries that were deliberately retarding the national effort toward full utilization of available manpower. It has caused some recalcitrant industrialists to revise their policy regarding Negro labor. It has exacted reassuring promises from hard boiled employers whose personal pride and aversion to public criticism impelled them to deny that they had resorted to discriminatory tactics to keep Negro labor out of their employment. Both the California and the Illinois hearings held under the auspices of the committee have already had salutary effects on those employers called before it to testify as to their employment practices.

For the short time it has been in existence, and considering the hampering limitations of its power, the President's committee has done a good job. Even though it may not have succeeded in bringing to brook all the industries which have failed so far to observe scrupulously the order of the Chief Executive, it has given hope to millions of Negro workers whose morale would have been irreparably shattered were it not for their faith in the eventual realization of the committee's main objective. Thus if the FEC with the present high-minded personnel is allowed to live, and if its powers are broadened beyond the scope of mere investigation, it will not only crack the walls of discrimination in the basic industries, it will by the same token administer a much needed hypodermic to a maladive American democracy. In view of these facts, we believe it would be wise statesmanship to retain the FEC as a permanent agency.

N. Y. AMSTERDAM STAR-NEWS
May 1942

A PHILIP RANDOLPH – OUR NEW LEADER

The lack of dynamic, practical and uncompromising leadership pressing forever onward the legitimate demands of the masses, has been the greatest handicap to the solution of the Negro problem. Although every major national crisis in the past has brought forth some kind of a Negro leadership, that leadership, however, has been of the wrong kind—the kind that could either be bribed into compromise or silenced by threats.

For awhile it appeared that the burden of promoting the just cause of the Negro would have to be borne by enlightened, sympathetic whites of the moral and intellectual stature of Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Buck and Mr. Willkie. The Negroes who, though devoid of the requisite qualifications, would have catapulted themselves into leadership were dissuaded from such step by the very militancy of the new generation of Negroes who brook no compromise. They were forced to recoil into their shells.

Times and circumstances create great men; men who have courage, determination and a self-sacrificial spirit to carry on their work at the risk of forfeiting their own personal freedom. For the first time in our history, the Negro has found a clear-visioned, practical yet fearless leader: A. Philip Randolph.

It was he who initiated the "March On Washington" that resulted in the issuance of the President's Executive Order forbidding racial discrimination in the defense industries, and creating the Fair Employment Practice committee. It is he who is organizing the masses on a scale unparalleled since the collapse of the Garvey movement. It is he who has come forward with a program and the means to achieve it. He says:

"The main and basic responsibility for effecting the solution of the Negro problem rests upon Negroes themselves. We believe that Negroes should supply the money and pay the price, make the sacrifices and endure the suffering to break down the barriers to a realization of full citizenship rights in America. The March On Washington movement believes in racial equality, and we propose to fight for it with all our might. It rejects the doctrine of racial supremacy of Adolf Hitler in Germany and Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia.

"We believe in the technique and method of mass action as an expression of Negro power to batter down all forms of racial segregations and discriminations. We are opposed to any movement or propaganda against white people and any movement or propaganda of anti-Semitism, anti-Catholicism, or anti-foreignism or anti-labor. The basic principle of the March On Washington movement is democratic. It believes wholeheartedly in the cause of the United Nations and seeks to aid in achieving victory of the armed forces of the United Nations over the Axis powers."

This is the type of leadership that all of us should endorse, and must endorse if we hope to achieve our goal in this world and take our rightful place in this democracy.

CHICAGO DEFENDER
February 21, 1942

"A Word About These, Mr. President"

FEP LAUNCHES INVESTIGATION IN NEW YORK

Weigh Revoking Charter Of Federal Union That Drew Color-Line

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

NEW YORK.—(ANP)—Although 11 cases involving alleged discriminations in violation of the President's executive order were heard by the Fair Employment Practice committee in its two days of hearings here last week, about the most significant thing to come out of the sessions was the promise of Frank Fenton, sitting in place of William Green as the American Federation of Labor member, to revoke the charter of a federal union which the employer charged had threatened to quit his plant should he hire Negroes.

Fenton, director of organizations for the AFL, startled about 200 listeners when in the last 15 minutes of hearing on Tuesday he leaned forward and pointed a finger at the witness, Kenneth B. Hamilton, general manager for Isolantite, Inc., of Belleville, N. J., and declared:

"You hire some Negro girls and I'll lift the charter of the union if they walk out."

The listeners were temporarily stunned by the sharpness of his threat but as soon as the full import of Fenton's remarks had sunk in and after he had repeated it with undiminished directness to the witness, there followed an enthusiastic burst of applause.

The organization involved is the Chemical and Oil Workers union, Local 22022, which is chartered directly by the federation and differs from the authonomous groups represented by the internationals which grant charters to their own locals.

Fenton explained to this reporter after the hearing that he has had his authority for sometime now and he intends to use it where such federal unions are found to be pursuing policy inconsistent with that already ennunciated by the AFL in convention.

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia and Lt. Gov. Charles Poletti were on hand when the sessions opened last Monday, as were the representatives from several religious groups and social agencies.

The mayor appeared quite sincere when he said the solution to the problem would have to come "from here and not from here" indicating first his heart then his head. He considered it a national problem that required treatment on such a scale.

It may have been his blast against unions which discriminate against Negroes in their membership requirements that on the following day provoked Fenton. At any rate, both gestures were welcomed.

In his remarks Poletti rapped the Governor's Committee on Discrimination in Defense Industries for what he considered the expenditure "of a lot of time talking" and "not enough action." His recommendations called for additional legislation on the state books, and enforcement of these laws by the various district attorneys.

Poletti was put on the defensive when Earl B. Dickerson, member of the committee, sought an explanation for the absence of Negroes on the state defense council. The official thought it improper that persons should be selected for posts simply because of their color or religion or other form of grouping other than as citizens.

It was the full committee that heard Eugene Davidson, field representative, present the 11 firms charged with bias in their employment policies and practices.

Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of Hamtpon institute, whose appointment to the committee and its chairmanship raised its number to seven, presided for the first time. He was called upon but three or four times to rule on controversial phases of procedure and evidence.

The cases presented had been collected from both New York and New Jersey and took in discriminations against Negroes, Jews and aliens. The tendency of several companies to use the newspaper columns for "blind" ads as a means of recruiting "white Christians" came in for direct criticism.

In the case against Fairchild Aviation corporation, where the discrimination was against a Jew, Isadore Goldstein testified that in a vocational class containing eight Jews that had been referred to the company for interviews, only one of the Jews was employed.

Asked how this happened when the firm was being charged with bias, Goldstein replied: "I told him when I came out that if he wanted a job he'd better mark on his application blank 'Catholic,' since he had a non-Jewish name. He did and got the job."

Col. F. S. Dickinson, the aged president of Becton and Dickinson, makers of medical and surgical supplies, when questioned about his racial policy declared "to the contrary—why, I employ Negroes in my household. In fact, I now take care of some of them who have since retired from my household." To support his "unbiased attitude" he wanted to call his Negro maid to testify but a wise counsel nixed this out.

Edward Lawson, field representative for the labor division of WPB, and Guichard Parrish, local director of Negro affairs, NYA, contributed valuable testimony as did the American Jewish congress and the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi league.

WAKE UP, NEGRO AMERICA!!

"Winning Democracy for the Negro Is Winning the War for Democracy"

Stand Upon Your Feet and Mobilize! Organize! and Fight in an All-Out and All-Negro Demonstration of Power, Courage, Will, Pride of Race and Patriotism for EQUAL RIGHTS--EQUAL OPPORTUNITY--RACIAL EQUALITY IN OUR COUNTRY

We Demand the Right to FIGHT, SERVE and WORK

In All Branches and Departments

Of the Army – Navy – Air Corps – U. S. Marines – Government – Defense Industry – as: Officers In All Ranks – Technicians In All Ranks – Skilled – Semi-Skilled and Unskilled Workers in All Ranks

We Demand Equal Opportunity for Training to Become Officers and Skilled Workers. We Demand Representation on all Policy-Making Committees, Boards and Commissions of the Government

Negroes Demand the Right to Make the Supreme Sacrifice for Democracy in the War Against Hitler — Hirohito — and Mussolini, but as Equals In Arms, Defense Industries and All Departments of the Government.

JOIN IN THE GREATEST, BIGGEST AND MOST STUPENDOUS AND TREMENDOUS GATHERING OF NEGRO PEOPLE FOR JUSTICE — DEMOCRACY — FREEDOM AND MANHOOD RIGHTS IN THE HISTORY OF THE WORLD.

50,000 NEGROES MARCH

Storm the Coliseum

Friday Evening, June 26

TO CONDEMN AND DENOUNCE

1. Mobbing, Shooting, and Killing of Our Negro Boys In Uncle Sam's Uniform.
2. Jim-Crow Policy of the Navy — Army — Air Corps —U. S. Marine.
3. Insult of the Red Cross in Segregating Negro Blood.
4. Lynching at Sikeston, Missouri.
5. Denying Negro Soldiers the Right to Eat in Dining Cars with White Soldiers while Traveling to and from Training Camps in the South.

BACK AND SUPPORT THE FAIR EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES COMMITTEE WITH UNIFIED, INFORMED AND MILITANT PUBLIC OPINION

IT'S NOW OR NEVER

Fight for the Right to Live, Work and Be Free

Sponsored by the CITY-WIDE COMMITTEE--Initiated by the MARCH ON WASHINGTON COMMITTEE

Headquarters: Y.W.C.A., 4559 So. Parkway Phone Atl. 1434

FORT WORTH MIND
FORT WORTH'S LEADING NEGRO NEWSPAPER
FORT WORTH, TEXAS, SATURDAY, MAY 16, 1942
VOLUME 11—NUMBER 39
PRICE:

RANDOLPH CAPTIVATES LARGE AUD

"Negro Faces Most Crucial Stage" Says Prominent Speaker

Fort Worth Local IBSFC Presents Stirring Program

FORT WORTH, TEX.—"The Negro today is facing the most crucial stage of his life; what happens to him from now until the end of the war will determine his fate for the next thousand years." Thus spoke 53 year old A. Phillip Randolph as he held his audience spell bound in Saint James Baptist Church last week. "Discrimination is getting worse," the veteran labor leader declared. "and the Negro must mobilize his might now! Now is the time for us to pressand w e'll get somewhere! Unless we win before the end of this war we will never win!" ....

...."It has been found," Randolph propounded, "that Negroes do not ask for things because of fear of not getting them; he is afraid that the white man will think that he is no longer afraid, and the white man is afraid that the black man wont go on being afraid. But, unless the Negro realizes that the tides of democracy ar running low, and that now is our opportunity to raise our standards, unless we stand up and let white men know that we resent his insults, we will be forever enslaved in jim-crowism an injustice." .....

....In a rich baritone that bespoke the culture and refinement of a man who has achieved the hard way, the brilliant president of the IBSCP., continued his eloquent discourse with the admonishment to black America. "Negroes must fight to destroy totalitarism because in Germany and Fascist Italy the Bible and Christ ore ostracised. The Axis powers are opposed to democracy and Negroes must have freedom! Freedom to fight for their rights." ....

As late arrivals continued to pack the huge church auditorium to capacity, Randolph streched his athletically built frame to its full stature, rocked solemly toward his listeners, and as his attractive hands rose majestically in support of his convictions, he rolled the very exotic timbers of his captavating personality across the entire group and reached into the depths of their awe-inspired souls as he pointed out that the "Negro must supply the money for his own deliverance." And while a fervent silence of subline attention extolled itself in the mystified audience he masterfully painted a soul stirring picture of the story behind the "March on Washington" drive. He related that artists had painted posards, girls had folded and typed literature, clad in evening attire, sold buttons on New York streets, all without pay and then ended by thundering that "If the masses are to benefit from the movement, then the masses must sustain it; it is better to get a nickle from a Negro than to get thousands of dollars from white liberals because when the Negro donates, the movement has him and his dime too, on the other hand if the white liberal gives ment and [illegible]

After [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] LeGuardia [illegible] Walter White into [illegible] now subsequently the President called a conference of Negro leaders of the "March On Washington" movement and his general staff, Randolph related the invigorating story of how the committee worked

(See [illegible] Page 6)

FORT WORTH MIND
May 16, 1942

HISTORIC PROGRAM ADDRESS

As the staff photographer caught swarthy A. Phillip Randolph as he began his eloquent address in historic St. James Baptist church last Thursday night. Speaking before approximately 500 rapt spectators the esteemed labor leader exhibited a mastery of oratory that is seldom if ever excelled.

During his tenure of the Convention of the Southwest the internationally known Spingarn Medalist was house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Romeo Grace, 1013 E. Maddox Ave. He was accompanied by [illegible] P Webster, national first vice-president of the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. He too delivered a discourse that was well worth listening to.

AMSTERDAM NEW YORK STAR-NEWS

Saturday, May 23, 1942

March-on-Washington Group Reveals Names of Sponsors

Response to the call for funds to help defray the cost of the mass meeting June 16 at Madison Square Garden, sponsored by the March On Washington Movement, has been reasonably satisfactory up to date, it was announced this week.

The finance committee revealed that the following persons and organizations have contributed $5 or more to the cause.

The sponsors:

A. Philip Randolph, Mrs. A. Philip Randolph, Dr. Lawrence M. Ervin, Mrs. S. B. Ervin, Mrs. Bessye Bearden, Howard Bearden, Perry Ferguson, Mrs. Elizabeth Ferguson, Aldrich Turner, B. F. McLaurin, Ashley L. Totten, Rev. William Lloyd Imes, Miss Layle Lane, T. T. Patterson, Miss Rachael Corrothers, Eardlie John, Mrs. Eardlie John, Dr. Channing Tobias, Dr. George Cannon, Dr. P. M. H. Savory, Dr. C. B. Powell, Dr. Schuyler Eldridge, Mrs. Mattie Eldridge, Miss Sara Mays, Dr. Peter Marshall Murray, Dr. Godfrey Nurse, Dr. George D. Thorne, Dr. W. Whiteman, Dr. W. A. Freeman, Dr. J. T. Granady, Dr. J. L. Wilson, Dr. J. Lord, Dr. Arthur Brady, Dr. Myra Logan, Dr. L. Brown, Dr. J. S. Peters, Dr. E. Holder, Dr. A. G. Daly, Dr. H. Edgehill, Dr. C. L. Allen, Dr. Arthur Logan, Dr. J. J. Jones, Dr. Henry Delaney, Dr. John Randolph, Dr. Newton E. Douglas, Dr. Lile Carter, Dr. Walter Delph.

Miss Novella McCrorey, Mrs. Sara W. Dunston, Mrs. Dorothy Vaughn, Miss Dorothy Reese, Miss Ruth Ellington, Atty. Harold A. Stevens, Atty. Thomas B. Dyett, Atty. Cornelius McDougal, Richard Thomas, Hugh McDonald, Miss Iona Morris, Richard Parrish, Hunter Johnston, Mrs. Louise McDonald, Mrs. John Hope, Mrs. Frances Townsend, Atty. Sara Pelham Speaks, Dr. Warren Brown, Rev. W. B. Scott, Lorenzo Sims, Dr. John Davis, Dr. Kenneth Williams, Liberal Arts Guild, Wilberforce Club, Tuskegee Club, Howard University Club, Mrs. Rachael Clayton, Dr. Thomas Amos, Mrs. Mary Sledge, Inspiration Club, Dr. Samuel McKinney, The Gothamettes, Miss Eugenia Pemberton, Dr. Alma Haskins, Miss Ada V. Dillon, Dr. Leon Bryan, Dr. C. S. Patterson, Dr. F. D. Speaks, Mrs. T. T. Patterson, Mrs. Carrie Thomas, Dunbar Billiard Academy, Mrs. Blossom Holland, Miss Helen Cooper, S. A. Browne.

Guichard Parris, Mrs. Thelma Haylock, Rev. John H. Johnson, Assemblyman Hulan E. Jack, Councilman Adam C. Powell, Judge Charles E. Toney, Dr. A. M. Rivera, Dr. Jesse Miller, Friend of the Movement, Mrs. Margaret McLaurin, T. A. Miller, Curtis Jackson, Dr. Aubrey Maynard Commissioner, S. J. Battles, Lester B. Grainger, The Ohio Club, W. D. Smith, Miss Angelina Grimke, Miss Floris Pinkney, Rev. W. M. Morris, Cornwall E. John, Grace Congregational Church, Les Amies Bridge Club of New York, Dorrence Brooks Auxiliary Post No. 528, Interdenominational Ministers' Meeting, Dr. Joel Bolden, William Alexander, Walter Reifer, Will J. Hale, Jr., Mrs. Helena Hale, Mrs. W. H. Bowe, W. C. Mills, Ralph Baker, Dawn Social Club, St. John's Baptist Church, Dr. T. S. Harten, Augustine A. Austin, Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, Mrs. Ashley Totten.

[illegible] 1942 THE PEOPLE'S VOICE 5

Citizens Shower Cash to Aid March on Washington Group

With its Madison Square Ga[illegible] June 16 less than a month away, the March on Wa[illegible] was officially announced by the [illegible] to gain support, it Hotel Theresa this week. Designed to bring pressure on the national government to stamp out discrimination in industry and national defense, and directed by A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, the movement has enlisted the financial and moral support of a voluntary army of groups and individuals. The Garden rally will be held simultaneously with rallies by units in [illegible] most of the key cities of the country. The local unit has reported contributions of $5 or more from the following:

A. Philip Randolph
Mrs. A. P. Randolph
Dr. L. M. Ervin
Mrs. S. B. Ervin
Mrs. Bessye Bearden
Howard Bearden
Perry Ferguson
Mrs. Eliz. Ferguson
Aldrich Turner
E. F. McLaurin
Ashley L. Totten
Rev. Wm. Lloyd Imes
Layle Lane
T. T. Patterson
Rachael Corrothers
Eardlie John
Mrs. Eardlie John
Dr. Channing Tobias
Dr. George Cannon
Dr. P. M. H. Savory
Dr. C. B. Powell
Dr. Schuyler Eldridge
Mrs. Mattie Eldridge
Dr. Peter M. Murray
Sara Mays
Dr. Godfrey Nurse
Dr. Geo. D. Thorne
Dr. W. Whiteman
Dr. J. T. Granady
Dr. W. A. Freeman
Dr. J. L. Wilson
Dr. J. Lord
Dr. Arthur Brady
Dr. Myra Logan
Dr. L. Brown
Dr. J. S. Peters
Dr. E. Holder
Dr. A. G. Daly
Dr. H. Edgehill
Dr. C. L. Allen
Dr. Arthur Logan
Dr. J. J. Jones
Dr. Henry Delaney
Dr. John Randolph
Dr. N. E. Douglas
Dr. Lisle Carter
Dr. Walter Delph
Novella McCrorey
Mrs. Sara W. Dunston
Mrs. Dorothy Vaughn
Dorothy Reese
Ruth Ellington
Atty. H. A. Stevens
Atty. Thomas B. Dyett
Atty. C. McDougal
Richard Thomas
Hugh McDonald
Jane Morris
Richard Parrish
Hunter Johnston
Mrs. L. McDonald
Mrs. John Hope
Mrs. F. Townsend
Atty. Sara P. Speakes
Dr. Warren Brown
Rev. W. B. Scott
Lorenzo Sims
Dr. John Davis
Dr. Kenneth Williams
Liberal Arts Guild
Wilberforce Club
Tuskegee Club
Howard Univer. Club
Mrs. Rachel Clayton
Dr. Thomas Ames
Mrs. Mary Sledge Inspiration Club
Dr. Samuel McKinney
The Gothamettes
Eugenia Pemberton
Dr. Alma Haskins
Ada V. Dillon
Dr. Leon Bryan
Dr. C. S. Patterson
Dr. F. D. Speaks
Mrs. T. T. Patterson
Mrs. Carrie Thomas
Dunbar Billiard Acad.
Mrs. Blossom [illegible]land
Miss Helen [illegible]
S. A. Browne
Guichard Par[illegible]
Mrs. Thelma [illegible]
Rev. John H. [illegible]
Assemblyman [illegible]
C'ncilman A. [illegible]
Judge C. E. [illegible]
Dr. A. M. Rivers
Dr. Jesse Miller
Friend of Movement
Friend of Movement
Mrs. Mary McLeod
T. A. Mil[illegible]
Curtis Jackson
Dr. Au[illegible]
Comm'r [illegible]
Lester [illegible]
The Ob[illegible]
W. D. [illegible]
Angelina Grimke
Floria Pinkney
Rev. W. H. Morris
Cornwall E. John
Grace Congregational Church
Les Amies Bridge Club of New York
Dorrance Brooks Aux. Post No. 528
Interdenominational Ministers' Meeting
Dr. Joel Bolden
William Alexander
Walter Reifer
Will J. Hale Jr.
Mrs. Helena Hale
Mrs. W. H. Bowe
W. C. Mills
Ralph Baker
Dawn Social Club
St. John's Bapt. Church
Dr. T. S. Harton
Augustine A. Austin
Mrs. M. McL. Bethune

THE NEW YORK [illegible]AGE

Saturday, [illegible]

March On Washington Movement Seeking 50,000 At Meeting

The March-on-Wash[illegible]ovement has girded its [illegible] the monster demonstration [illegible]fty thousand [illegible] on Jun[illegible] in Madison Square Garden. [illegible] organizations such as The Na[illegible] association for the Ad[illegible] of Colored People, N[illegible]n League, Central [illegible]al Society, Am[illegible]d Civic Associa[illegible] of Sleeping Car [illegible]s hundreds of in[illegible]re sponsoring the [illegible]ing completed [illegible] A number of out[illegible] the civic, social, [illegible] of America, a[illegible]rtists, will a[illegible]

A. Philip R[illegible] the March-on-Wa[illegible]ovement [illegible] is interrupting a schedule of [illegible]ments throughout the So[illegible]d Southwest to return for [illegible]nt speaking engagements in [illegible]er New York and vicinity.

According to reports from the director, the Negro throughout the country is in no mood for relinquishing his efforts in acquiring all democratic rights insured to all Americans.

The New York mass rally meeting is the [illegible] series of mass meetings that are to be held in cities including Chicago, and Washington, D. C. [illegible].

JACKSONVILLE

TWO

DISMISS MOTION IN TEACHER SUIT

The circuit court of appeals in New Orleans has dismissed a motion by the Florida Education Association to intervene in a suit brought against the Duval county school board by Negro teachers seeking equal salaries with white teachers.

Federal Judge Louie W. Strum denied the FEA the right to intervene in district court here after Mary White Blocker, a Negro teacher, had filed suit in behalf of herself and "other sililarly situated teachers."

When the FEA sought to appeal the decision to circuit court, Judge Strum consolidated the Duval case with four other similar suits over the state. The Florida suits are part of a nation-wide move by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People for higher teacher salaries.

Attorneys for the FEA attempted to withdraw the appeal two weeks ago, but the necessary papers already had been forwarded to New Orleans.

District court received the dismissal order today.

Meantime, Judge Strum has not ordered another hearing in the Blocker case. The school board, through its attorney, Edwin Coffee, has filed with the court a proposed new salary schedule, which would have as its basis for teacher pay training, experience and responsibility of position.

New Leader

NEW YORK, N. Y., SATURDAY, MAY 9, 1942

Supreme Court Refuses To Hear Waller Case

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Supreme Court this week refused jurisdiction in the case of Odell Waller, Virginia Negro sharecropper scheduled to die [illegible] 19 for killing his farmer landlord, [illegible], in a dispute over crop shares; Waller [illegible] self-defense.

Waller's case, however, was appealed to the Supreme Court by the Workers Defense League on the ground that he was tried by a jury from which non-payers of [illegible] were systematically barred, and [illegible] therefore could not be impartial. The [illegible] presented affidavits showing that [illegible] of the population of Pittsylvania County, Virginia, were unable to pay the poll tax and were thereby barred from grand and petit jury lists in the county.

John F. Finerty, League counsel, is petitioning the Supreme Court for a re-hearing, it was announced, immediately following the Court's decision on May 4. Finerty has asked Governor Darden of Virginia to grant a thirty-day stay of the execution, so that the Court may act on the petition.

The case has attracted wide support from labor unions throughout the country, both AFL and CIO. The Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and the National Association for Advancement of Colored People have given particularly active cooperation.

THE AFRO-AMERICAN, MAY 23,

RANDOLPH LAUDS MARCH

New York, N.Y. — Congratulations upon the militant and effective March on the Maryland capital against police brutality and for the rights of colored Americans. Keep up the good work.

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH
216 W. 125th Street

Negroes Plan New Pressure to End Industry Jim Crow

BY EUGENE VICTOR

Despite the [illegible]dential [illegible]arring discrimination in [illegible] agencies, only a [illegible] industry has chan[illegible] Negro leaders c[illegible] the Fair Emplo[illegible] been unable to [illegible] discriminatory h[illegible] lacks punitive po[illegible]

Because of th[illegible] Movement," headed by A. [illegible] sponsoring a mass meeting [illegible] 6, at Madison Square Garden, for [illegible]. The organization has called [illegible] of 50,000 Negroes, inside the [illegible] streets, to demand effective [illegible] tion of Jim Crowism in [illegible] forces. A. Philip Rando[illegible] Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters Union, the only Negro union, and other prominent Negroes including Frank [illegible] Walter White, Lester B. Granger, [illegible] will be the chief speakers. The [illegible] the first of a series that will be held in every large city where the March on Washington Movement is organized. A turnout in Chicago is slated for June 28, and Washington, D. C. is tentatively scheduled for their meeting on July 4.

The March on Washington Movement was begun in the spring of 1941. Issuing a pamphlet entitled "Call to Negro America," the Committee proposed that tens of thousands of Negroes march on the nation's Capitol July 1, 1941. They summoned Negro Americans to stage marches on their City Halls and Councils in their respective cities and urged them to memorialize the President to issue an executive order to abolish discrimination in the Government and national defense. Before the event occured, the President issued his order against discrimination and setting up of the Fair Employment Practices Committee. Regarding this as a major victory, the Washington project was dropped. Now the Committtee feels that further pressure is necessary.

May 23, 1942

Negroes Plan New Pressure

(Continued from Page One)

At their offices in the Hotel Theresa at 7th Avenue and 125th Street, volunteer workers are busy night and day preparing for meetings, local activities, membership drives, and asking people and organizations for support.

They are reluctant at this time to stage a march if it is at all possible to accomplish what they have set out to do by other propaganda methods. Thirty prominent members wrote to President Roosevelt, but as yet have received no answer. In their letter to the President they stated, "Negro America is willing to help in the defeat of the Axis powers so that democracy may be in theory, and in fact, but we also feel WINNING DEMOCRACY FOR THE NEGRO IS WINNING THE WAR FOR DEMOCRACY." The capitalized type is the slogan of the movement and appears on their letter heads.

Negroes today are particularly [illegible] discrimination in the armed forces. [illegible] the fi[illegible] forces of democracies [illegible] last pla[illegible] it, but discrimination [illegible] and Navy [illegible] perhaps, greater than in industry.

N. Y. AMSTERDAM STAR NEWS
June 1942

June 1942 Amsterdam

ch to Washington Committee ans Mammoth Mass Meeting

By J. ROBERT SMITH

The New York division of the March-on-Washington Movement launched a new offensvie on the labor front this week when the organization planked down more than $700 as the initial payment to reserve Madison Square Garden for the night of June 16.

The occasion will be a mammoth public protest meeting, crying out aloud against the mal-treatment of colored Americans in the defense effort, and it is expected to be the greatest crusade ever staged since Peter the Hermit struck out for the Holy Land.

From All Corners

From all corners of New England, New York State, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, from the seashores to the mountains, more than 50,000 citizens will invade the "House of Rickard" that Tuesday night, not to see a prize fight or an athletic meet, but to listen woefully how the colored man is denied employment, how he is jim-crowed in the Army, Navy and Air Corps and how the color of his skin prevents him from being a member of the United States Marines.

(Continued on Page 21)

(Continued from Page 1)

The huge throng will be reminded of the mobbing, shooting and killing of colored boys in Uncle Sam's uniforms by civilian and military police; they will hear the pitiful review of the segregation of pure colored blood by the American Red Cross and the attitude of the conquered and refugee Poles in the recent Detroit Housing race riot.

Randolph Takes Lead

A Philip Randolph, brilliant labor and civic leader, flanked by other stalwarts of the race, will call upon colored citizens and their white sympathizers to help make America practice what she preaches.

Along with the slogan, "Remember Pearl Harbor," colored America will bow in shame when in the "House of Rickard" Randolph will ask his audience to "Remember Sikeston, Missouri," the scene of the lynching that struck the race more dastardly than the treachery of Nippon on Pearl Harbor on that ill-fated Sunday in December, 1941.

He will voice aloud that the watchword of the movement that calls upon Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the President of the United States, through Mass pressure, to use his executive authority to halt Nazism in America is, "Winning Democracy for the Negro, Winning the War for Democracy."

Colored Man Is Goat

He will proclaim to the housetops, "We are the only group of people in this country that has no entree to the President, and the purpose of this historic protest is to move the President to action against the racial practices that are crippling the war effort and making the colored man a goat."

In mobilizing public sentiment, the anti-democratic tidings as practiced against the colored man will reach the President, the members of Congress, the heads of departments of the Government and, not less important, it will reach the common, ordinary white man in the streets and serve to awaken the colored masses to their just deserts before the [illegible].

Will Be Dramatic

The affair is to be colossal and dramatic. It is expected to be convincing and effective.

Randolph, in his press conference, this week, issued a call to every organization to support the movement which aims to solve the colored man's plight before it is too late.

For 25 cents, members of the race will have the opportunity to share in the fight for their freedom, equality and their right to live.

Will Cost Over $6,000

The huge demonstration will cost over $6,000, the Garden alone consuming $3,500 of that amount. Contributions in person or by mail are accepted by the Star-News for the committee.

The active need of every colored person, young and old, to serve as speakers, typists, ushers, distributors of circulars and to participate in the torch light parades to arouse colored New York is sought, and such persons interested may register at the organization's headquarters in the Theresa Hotel.

June 6

AMSTERDAM NEW YORK STAR-NEWS

MAKING HISTORY. Members of the March-on-Washington Movement pictured getting together on the coming Madison Square Garden rally for Tuesday night, June 16. Inset, left to right, A. Philip Randolph, director of the movement; Dr. Lawrence Ervin, chairman, local committee, and Milton P. Webster, international vice president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and a member of the arrangements committee.

PHIL RANDOLPH CALLS FOR

SATURDAY, JUNE 6, 1942

PROTEST 'BLACK-OUT'

N. Y. AMSTERDAM STAR NEWS
June 6, 1942

'A Darkened Harlem, Silent and Dry'

Certain things that A. Phillip Randolph says should furnish us all with food for thought. The noted labor leader, whose work on behalf of his people has been a bright jewel shining consistently over the last 20 years, has asked for a voluntary blackout by the citizens of Harlem the night of June 16, while the March-on-Washington delegates converge on Madison Square Garden for a significant mass meeting.

"Harlem must be dark, silent and dry," Mr. Randolph has declared, as he outlined his program for the night of June 16. "The time has come when we must make America and the world realize that the Negro is in earnest about securing his complete status of constitutional rights so that he and his chaldren may enjoy the full benefits of his citizenship."

A darkened Harlem, silent and dry, as requested by Mr. Randolph, would present a more effective protest than all the speeches and all the petitions that could be made and distributed in focusing the attention of the nation on our problem. The trouble with us is that we are too gay when serious matters are at hand. We play into the hands of those seeking to keep us back, by forever showing our teeth in bright smiles and laughing at the wrong time. Silence is golden. Temperance at the right time is always requisite.

We must strike our blow today, not tomorrow, for our rights. We must draw attention from those in positions to help us and it must be done with dignity, so that what we seek is not regarded in a humorous light. A. Phillip Randolph is more than right in asking for a darkened Harlem, silent and dry, as his protest mass meeting enters its second phase. He is prophetic and what he asks should be incorporated into a platform for action on our part.

[illegible]M-OUTS IN RACE SECTIONS IS URGED

CHICAGO DEFENDER
June 6, 1942

NEW YORK, June 4 — At the headquarters of the March on Washington Movement at the Theresa hotel in New York City, A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and national director of the March on Washington Movement called for a complete black-out in Harlem during the mass meeting in Madison Square Garden, a blackout in the south side of Chicago during the meeting in the Coliseum, and a blackout in the Negro communities in Washington during the mass meeting in the Soldiers' Park in protest against discriminations practiced upon Negroes in the Army, Navy, Air Corps and U.S. Marines, defense industry, and all departments of the government.

URGES DIRECT [illegible] FOR EQUA[illegible]

While [illegible] are going on [illegible] March on [illegible], every [illegible] Negro community [illegible] all churches [illegible], all houses with the shades of their windows pulled down, and the various social and recreational activities in the [illegible] completely stopped for an all-out pouring of Negroes upon New York, white Chicago and white Washington as an expression of the resentment of Negroes against the status of a half-man in America, and his insistence upon the right to make his supreme sacrifice in this war for the victory of the arms of the United Nations against the aggressor axis forces—not as vassals, serfs or slaves, but as equals, equals as privates and equals as officers in the Army, Navy, U.S. Marine Corps, and also as equals in the Government in the capacity of unskilled, skilled, technical and professional workers, as well as equal as members of the [illegible] that direct the [illegible] of America today.

[illegible]

[illegible] advises that while these [illegible] are making a [illegible] constructive and vital [illegible] for Negro rights and racial equality, that all of the Negro communities should be absolutely dark, dry and silent.

In expressing his belief in the capacity of the Negro people to win justice and freedom [illegible] he roundly condemned the [illegible] pell for lynching of Odell Waller, who shot and killed a white landlord in self-defense and stated that in these giant protest meetings demand will be made for the release and pardon of Odell Waller.

Doris Miller Is Awarded Navy Cross

NAVY CROSS

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii—Special recognition was given Doris Miller, 23-year-old mess attendant, who distinguished himself during the Japanese attack here on December 7, when Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander of the Pacific fleet, presented him with the Navy Cross aboard a warship here on May 27.

On this occasion, when medals were awarded to eight other officers and men, Admiral Nimitz said, "This marks the first time in the present conflict that such high tribute has been made in the Pacific fleet to a member of his race, and I am sure that the future will see others similarly honored for brave acts."

The presentation of the Navy Cross to Miller was ordered by President Roosevelt on May 11 after Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox had refused to recommend Miller for the congressional medal of honor.

Miller's act of bravery was manning a machine gun which he had never been taught to use and helping to remove to shelter the mortally wounded captain of the ship while under fire.

NEW YORK AGE
June 6, 1942

THEY'RE MAKING REAL HISTORY

Surrounded by able supporters who are fighting for the full integration of the Negro in the "American Way of Life," Dr. Lawrence M. Ervin and A. Philip Randolph, leaders in the March-on-Washington Movement, are pictured at a meeting held at their headquarters, 2084 Seventh avenue, last week, at which time important plans were discussed for the Madison Square Gardens rally, on Tuesday night, June 16th.

(Photo by Jack Brooks)

Blackout Of Negro Communities Urged By Randolph During March On Washington Protest Meetings

At the headquarters of the March on Washington Movement at the Theresa Hotel in New York City, A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and national director of the March on Washington Movement, called for a complete blackout in Harlem during the Mass Meeting in Madison Square Garden, a blackout in the south side of Chicago during the meeting in the Coliseum, and a blackout in the Negro communities in Washington during the mass meeting in the Ball Park in protest against discrimination practiced upon Negroes in the Army, Navy, Air Corps and U. S. Marines, defense industries and all departments of the Government.

While these meetings are going on, said the leader of the March on Washington Movement, every business of the Negro communities should be closed, all churches should be closed, all homes with the shades of their windows pulled down, and the various social and recreational activities in the communities completely stopped for an all-out-pouring of Negroes upon white New York, white Chicago and white Washington as an expression of the resentment of Negroes against the status of a half-man in America, and his insistence upon his right to make his supreme sacrifice in this war for the victory of the arms of the United Nations against the sinister Axis forces—not as vassals, serfs or slaves, but as equals; equals as privates and equals as officers in the Army, Navy, U. S. Marine Corps, and also as equals in the Government in the capacity of unskilled, skilled, technical and professional workers, as well as equals as members of the policy making bodies that direct the affairs of America today.

Mr. Randolph advises that while these protest meetings are making a vigorous and vital fight for Negro rights and racial equality that all of the Negro communities should be absolutely dark, dry and silent.

In expressing his belief in the capacity of the Negro people to win justice and freedom today, he roundly condemned the judicial poll tax lynching of Odell Waller, who shot and killed a white landlord in self defense, and stated that in these giant protest meetings demand will be made for the release and pardon of Odell Waller, who is a black victim of southern poll tax autocracy and bourbon racial prejudice.

Issue Call for Harlem Blackout

Journal and Guide SATURDAY, JUNE 6, 1942

Ask Silence On Night Of Mass Protest

NEW YORK, N. Y.—A. Philip Randolph, national director of the March On Washington Movement, on his return to the city last week, has issued an edict for a voluntary blackout by the citizens of Harlem the night of June 16, while the historic protest mass meeting is under way at Madison Square Garden.

"Harlem must be dark, silent and dry," the leader said.

"The time has come when we must make America and the world realize that the Negro is in earnest about securing his complete status of constitutional rights so that he and his children may enjoy the full benefits of his citizenship," Randolph declared.

Randolph, in the meantime has informed Mayor LaGuardia that he will be unable to accept the appointment as a member of the New York Housing Authority and recommended Frank Crosswaith, Lester Granger, Miss Layle Lane, Ashley L. Totten, and Roy Wilkins.

His reason for "declining" was that his time was now taken up with the March On Washington Movement whose program is to secure better opportunities for his people in the "American Way of Life," and he could not do justice as a member of the Mayor's Committee.

EXPECTS 50,000

Three weeks away from the greatest gathering to be staged by Negroes in America, officials of the movement stated that 50,000 people are expected to flood the "House that Tex Rickard built" evidence of which was evinced this week by reports that more than $3,200 has been collected for the demonstration.

Among the speakers who will address the vast throng are: Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune and Dr. Channing T. Tobias.

THE NEW YORK AGE Saturday,

THE MADISON SQUARE GARDEN MEETING

AND SPEAKING of fighting prejudice, we would like to call attention to the mass meeting being held by the March on Washington Committee at Madison Square Garden Tuesday evening, June 16.

The object of this meeting is to let the country know that we are not satisfied with conditions as they are in the U. S., especially as they affect the Negro;

That before the world at large our country has set itself up as a champion of democracy, while at the same time it is using the same tatcics against Negroes, Jews and other minority groups as are used in Germany in an effort to perpetrate the myth of racial superiority of the Nordic races;

That at the present time we have first, second and even third class citizens in this country, which is against the expressed language of our Constitution and in violation of the spirit of democracy.

Official Washington we understand, does not want the Madison Square Garden meeting held, because it will show up the hypocrisy of many of those now prating about our democratic ideals. They fear that such meetings give aid and comfort to the enemy. But so long as the committee members expose conditions as they exist, it is the government itself which permits such conditions rather than the committee that is supplying the enemy with ammunition for their propaganda.

We are therefore, urging our readers to give all-out financial and other support to A. Philip Randolph and his associates who are sponsoring this meeting and to be present, for the voices of 50,000 persons, organized in one meeting cannot be ignored.

DICK CAMPBELL WRITES PLAY FOR JUNE 16th MEETING:

Dick Campbell, whose name gets in and out of social and theatrical columns with the greatest of ease, again finds the Campbell cognomen attracting public attention. Mr. Campbell who was director of the McClendon Players, actor on Freedom's People's radio programs, manager for Muriel Rahn and other outstanding artists, now has time to write a sketch, "The Watch Word Is Forward" for the March-on-Washington mass meeting, June 16th at Madison Square Garden.

The cast include such entertainers as Canada Lee, Rex Ingram, Monte Hawley, Willie Bryant, Mercedes Gilbert, James Lillard, Lorenzo Tucker, Jimmie Baskette, Emmett Wallace, Carol Wilson, Sara Johnson, Fred Carter, Dudley Cotham and Quay Bright.

Muriel Rahn who has just returned from a most successful concert in Studebaker Stadium, Chicago, will open the meeting with singing of the "Star Spangled Banner."

IF YOU ARE LOYAL AMERICANS POSSESSING RACE CONSCIOUSNESS IT SHOULD BE MADE KNOWN THROUGH YOUR PRESENCE AT THIS MEETING.

without [illegible] ington Mover[illegible] meeting [illegible] held in Madison Square Garden on June 16. Present aim of the sponsors of the meeting is to have 50,000 Negroes storm the Garden the night of the meeting.

It is almost unnecessary for me to explain the many benefits that have already accrued to the race since the March on Washington Movement had its inception. Originally planned as an actual march to present to the world the picture of the Negro in his true light in this democracy, the march was called off by agreement of the leaders with President Roosevelt that he would issue an executive order banning discrimination in war industries, and branches of the government.

Ludlow W. Werner

It is the feeling of not only the leaders of the March on Washington Movement, but also by the Negro generally that the President's executive order has not been enough to insure our receiving the full benefits of democracy.

In advertising matter last week, the Movement said:

"Wake, Negro America!

"Winning Democracy for the Negro is Winning The War For Democracy.

"Stand upon your feet and mobilize! and Fight in an all-out and all-Negro demonstration of power, courage, will, pride of race and patriotism for EQUAL RIGHTS—EQUAL OPPORTUNITY—RACIAL EQUALITY IN OUR COUNTRY!"

The committee hopes to make the meeting the biggest gathering of Negro people for justice, democracy, freedom and manhood rights in the world. Their program is such that I hope that even Madison Square Garden will be too small to accommodate the crowd which will storm it on the evening of June 16th.

"We demand," the committee tells the world," the right to fight, serve and work in all branches and departments of the Army, Navy, Air Corps, U.S. Marines, Government, defense industry as : officers in all ranks, technicians in all ranks, skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled workers in all ranks.

"We demand equal opportunity for training to become officers and skilled workers. We demand representation on all policy-making committees, boards and commissions of the Government. Negroes demand the right to make the supreme sacrifice for Democracy in the war against Hitler, Hirohito and Mussolini, but as equals in arms, defense industries and all departments of the Government."

The committee has headquarters at the Hotel Theresa Building, 2084 Seventh avenue, and the other day one of the officers was telling me about a woman coming in and saying she wanted to leave a contribution for the Movement.

"I'm on home relief," the woman is quoted as saying, "and all I've got with me is eighteen cents until my next check comes in, but I want to leave this small contribution because the fight you're making will help my small children when they are grown up."

Flabbergasted at this woman's donation of everything that stood between her and starvation, the officer of the committee said that while he appreciated her thought he still was of the opinion that it would be far better for her to use the 18 cents to buy food. But the woman was adamant and insisted and so reluctantly the 18 cents was received and listed as a contribution.

With such a spirit on the part of the public—and the spirit is rapidly growing and spreading—I can't help thinking that as result of the mass meeting the demands will be met.

Thank God, we've at long last got an aroused and conscious Negro group willing to sacrifice and fight for our rights as American citizens. I hope that each and every reader of this column who lives in the Metropolitan Area will be down at Madison Square Garden to help swell the throng. If you cannot be present, then why not buy two tickets and give them to someone who will make use of them.

The March on Washington Movement deserves the one hundred per cent support of Negroes everywhere for the fight it has been waging.

—a.t.d.—

SPEAKING OF WASHINGTON

a friend of mine recently went down to the nation's capital to work. It was his first trip to Washington and after the novelty of the city wore off he settled down to an appraisal of it. From his letter I quote in part:

"Well, between you and me, confidentially, D. C. is quite like the bear—nowhere. However, as days go by, one becomes better able to adjust himself to Washington's 'splendid' traditional customs of racial intolerance inter and intra, as well, if he doesn't think. The longer I remain here the more puzzled I become as to the real reason for the present war. Some maintain that it's undemocratic purposes, to expel forever intolerance and to show Adolf and Hirohito the folly of the principle of Superman and race.

"However, if such is the case, a few lessons in tolerance might well be taught down here....The one thing that struck me is the people here condone the identical things that we wage an eternal battle against.

That Washington hasn't taken too kindly to this latest resident of the District is gleaned by the fact that he says he's going to "get and use a gallon of Palmer's Skin Whitener, say my old man' a doctor, that I'm part white but that I took after my father."

As my friend found out, Negroes allow too many petty things to separate them and keep them from getting together for the common good and welfare of all. In the eyes of the white man, we're all Negroes, no matter what the color of our skin or how straight our hair. As plain Negroes we'll continue to get nowhere, but as united Ne-

THE CLEVELAND HERALD

Cleveland, Ohio, Saturday, June 6th, 1942

Randolph In Speech Urges Steady Struggle

BY ARDELIA BRADLEY

"In order to struggle effectively, we must have power, and in order to have power, we must have organization. We are not down because we are black, but because we are weak—we don't have power because we do not have organization. The struggle for power is the challenge of the hour".

Thus did A. Philip Randolph, president of the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, boil down the problem of the Negro to a struggle for power. He addressed an audience at the Antoich Baptist Church last Thursday night, under the auspices of the Noonday Luncheon Club of the Pregressive Business Alliance.

Introduced by C. S. Wells, president of the Cleveland Division of the Sleeping Car Porters' Brotherhood, as the "man who won't quit", Randolph completely captivated his hearers with the eloquence of his address on "The Negro's Struggle for Power".

He cited the incident of the proposed March on Washington last year as one instance when combined Negro protests exerted more pressure on the White House than the Southern reaction and resulted in the issuance of the Executive Order by the President, outlawing discrimination in defense industries.

We have certain grievances, but when we go to Washington there are strong Southern influences that step forward and say it is not good policy to hear them. The Negroes cannot get anything from the President until the Negroes' massed power outweighs the pressure of the South. We are at the point today when people get nothing but what they are able to take.

"We are at the crossroads. Let us not be unconcerned about the fate of democracy abroad. There is no freedom whatever in totalitarianism; our hope lies in the maintenance of the democratic system. We are telling white America that we want to help win this war, but we want to fight, not as vasals and slaves, but as equals. Let us remember Pearl Harbor, but let us not forget Sikeston, Missouri".

Randolph ended his address with the famous "Invictus" which he said was symbolic of the Negro spirit today.

Mr. M. C. Clarke presided at the meeting. Music was furnished by the Negro Business Hour Chorus, under the direction of Howard Quintrec and the [illegible] Choir.

Under My Lens

BY REV. JESSE [illegible] GOMEZ

A. PHILLIP RANDOLPH came to town last week and made one of his usually illuminating and forceful addresses. He possesses all the elements that go to make a great speaker. He has language poise, eloquence, matter, and force. It is interesting to see today how he is accepted and courted in circles that refused him audience a few years ago.

I remember well that in the last World War the government constantly spied on him. The magazine edited by Chandler Owen and himself was banned. He was refused admittance into many halls for public speaking. When he came to Detroit, I was the only one to grant him permission to speak. That night agents of the government were in the audience at Bethel Church, Detroit. He acquitted himself with great skill and rendered a great service to our democratic process of free speech.

—o—

Mr. Randolph has lived to see many of his ideas accepted and to be acclaimed [illegible] man by many to whom he was persona non grata. Whatever may be said in opposition to his modus operandi, there can be no difference of opinion as to his sincerity and his aim. He has rendered, and still renders, a great service to the Race. He is accepted in the ranks of labor as one of its outstanding proponents. In the councils of the great labor leaders, he is adjudged a most competent spokesman—not of the Race, but of ALL the people.

—o—

It is Mr. Randolph's idea that we must make very definite economic gains now and hold them, or be shelved in the period of post-war adjustment. He is right. Not many seem to realize how important it is that we occupy places of influence and power NOW; that we contend for our rights NOW; that we share in the opportunities of defense of our country NOW. When the war is over we shall then possess a vantage point from which it would be most difficult to dislodge us.

SOAPBOX -- by Adam Clayton Powell, Jr.

AS LONG AS THERE is freedom of speech, there is democracy. There are many things that can be curtailed "for the duration" but democracy can keep on rolling along. When freedom of speech goes, democracy goes and that won't be just for the duration, either.

Freedom of speech has been and always will be the best yardstick by which to measure government. Therefore, that right should be the most sacred of all our civil liberties. In fact, that right should be inviolable.

When America's only living ex-President, Herbert Hoover, suggested that Mr. Roosevelt be made a dictator for the duration, he was suggesting tossing democracy out the window. There are many utterances of Hoover's, both before and since Pearl Harbor, that border on the anti-democratic. However, the former President really stepped into it up to his neck when he suggested dictatorial powers for the President.

Dictatorial powers for the President or anyone else would mean the cessation of democracy, and incidentally, the curtailment of the rights of people like Herbert Hoover or John Jones to say what's on their minds.

One thing we must not do—we must not give up any form of democracy, even if it is only "for the duration" to win this war. If this is done, we are liable to win the war and lose democracy, and that's equivalent to winning the whole world and losing your soul.

Along with freedom of speech goes the right of assembly and the right to petition and they are all bound up together. They are as fundamental as America itself. They are the springboards of this democracy, even though it is still wrapped in swaddling clothes. What is more important—they are the foundation stones upon which will be built not only a victorious war, but a just, durable and lasting peace.

These rights, however, must not be used by the undemocrats to further their own anti-democratic ends. On the other hand, they must be used, however, by the real democrats to further the cause of democracy.

- THERE IS NO GROUP OF PEOPLE IN AMERICA AS LOYAL AS THE NEGRO PEOPLE.
- THERE IS NO GROUP OF PEOPLE IN AMERICA WHO UNDERSTAND THE MEANING OF DEMOCRACY AS WELL AS THE NEGRO PEOPLE.

Those things in life which are given to you are not appreciated as much as those for which you have to fight. The privileged whites were born with the gold spoon of demoracy in their mouths. The Negro people and underprivileged whites have had to fight for every bit of democracy that they possess now, even when it was granted by the Constitution but withheld by the overlords.

Today the Negro people are engaged in a great struggle. We are engaged in a struggle to make America include us in the war program as fighters and workers without any discriminatory barriers. We are not interested in compromises or half measures. We view with resentment the pitting of Negro and white workers against each other in the shipbuilding yards in New Orleans.

We view with resentment the creation of yard number 4 at the Sun Shipbuilding Corp. in Chester, Pa. to be manned entirely by Negro workers.

As the most loyal group of Americans, using our rights as stated in the Constitution, we have held, are holding and will hold meetings to voice these resentments. Whenever and wherever these protest meetings are held, it is the sacred duty of every Negro and every white who really loves full democracy to attend.

THE MARCH-ON-WASHINGTON MOVEMENT MEETING TO BE HELD IN MADISON SQUARE GARDEN IN NEW YORK CITY JUNE 16 DEMANDS THE 100% ATTENDANCE OF EVERY NEGRO WITHIN 100 MILES OF NEW YORK CITY.

Whenever there are meetings held anywhere in America under the auspices of any group working for the defeat of hitler abroad and hitlerism at home, let us support those meetings.

DEMOCRACY IS ON THE MARCH. THIS CAN BE THE YEAR OF VICTORY.

Randolph Declines Post Due to Frequent Absence

While on a trip in the South-west, A. Philip Randolph, international president, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and national director of the March on Washington Movement, was wired by Mayor La Guardia of his appointment to the New York City Housing Authority.

Randolph wired the mayor that on account of his frequent absence from the city, sometimes over extended periods he could not have the time to give proper and thorough study to problems of housing as they relate to the citizens of New York in general and the Negro people in particular.

▲ Dick Campbell's sketch called the Watchword is Forward to be given at the March on Washington's mass meeting, Tuesday, June 16 will be dramatized by a host of top notchers. At a reading of the play last Friday were Carol Wilson, Lorenzo Tucker, Mercedes Gilbert, James Lillard, Monte Hawley, Rex Ingram, Dick Campbell, Muriel Rahn, Sara Johnson, Fred Carter, Dudley Cobham and Quay Bright.

Cocktail Benefits March

A cocktail party for the benefit of the March-on-Washington movement was held at Club Danceland Sunday, May 31. The group that sponsored the party which attracted a large crowd included Ruth Clukies, Thelma Maybuck, Peggy Wilson, Mrs. E. D. Fisher, Mary Alice Griffin, Rowena Coles, Chick Ramay, Julia Wilson, Lucy Thomas, Marguerite McLarins and Theodora Myers.

PHILADELPHIA RECORD

PHILADELPHIA, JUNE 4, 1942

This Hemisphere Needs The Four Freedoms, Too

The West Indies lie close to our shores.

It was at the island of San Salvador that Columbus first set foot on the New World.

American history had its birthplace in the Leeward and Windward islands of the Caribbean.

But the peoples of these islands—probably 90 percent of them descendants of African slaves—have not found a New World of freedom. They still live in a condition perilously close to slavery.

We must extend to them freedom from want and freedom from fear. Else how can we ask them to help spread the Four Freedoms to the world? How can we talk of freedom for far-off Burma when there is fear and want in our own backyard?

* * *

The rioting in Nassau, which caused the dramatic recall of the Duke of Windsor to his job in the Bahamas, brings into sharp relief the condition of the submerged peoples in this hemisphere.

The rioters, common laborers on an American defense project in Nassau, were protesting against wages of 81 cents a day.

These wages, according to statements made by Bahaman officials, were fixed by agreement between the British and American Governments.

There are reports that the riots were instigated by Axis agents.

We don't believe there need be any instigation when laborers receive 81 cents a day from the United States, which is spending $131,000,000 a day in a war to bring the Four Freedoms to the world.

The Administration should find out why men working on American bases have to riot to enforce their demands for a living wage.

On St. Lucia, American contractors have agreed to pay unskilled labor on Army and Navy bases seven cents an hour.

American officials first suggested 10 cents an hour. But British colonial authorities protested it would upset local standards, based on a minimum of four cents an hour.

Dare we talk of slave labor in Hitler's New Order when men in this continent work for seven cents an hour?

* * *

In our own Puerto Rico, the natives have been called "children of famine."

Admiral Leahy, while Governor there, warned Congress that a starving, miserable and unhappy civilian population was a military danger.

Will the Puerto Ricans, subject to the draft but denied statehood, fight bravely for us in case of invasion as the Filipinos fought, or will Puerto Rico turn into another Burma?

And in the United States

It is not only on the off-shore islands that people wonder whether they have a stake in the war.

In Detroit this week 700 well-paid employes of the Dodge truck plant demonstrated in protest against the transfer of 20 Negroes into the plant. The Chrysler corporation was forced to close the factory.

A company spokesman said the Negroes were transferred from another plant under the Chrysler agreement with the United Automobile Workers (CIO), at the request of international union officials.

Union and company officials must cooperate to discipline the men responsible for this outrageous example of race prejudice.

This is not a Jim Crow war. It is not a white man's war.

It is a war of all peoples of all colors against tyranny, for freedom. We must extend the Four Freedoms to this hemisphere, island and mainland, to strengthen our hearts against dictators.

CHICAGO DEFENDER
June 6, 1943

Ought To Pardon Waller: Randolph

NEW YORK CITY—"If it is proper and to the interest of national unity for President Roosevelt to pardon Earl Browder, noted Communist representing not more than 30 or 40 thousand Communists in the United States, it is certainly fitting, proper, timely, urgent and imperative and to the interest of national unity that Odell Waller, hapless victim of southern poll tax autocracy and bourbon racial fanaticism, and who is a member of a racial minority representing upwards of 12,000,000 of the population of America, should be liberated by the President or the governor of Virginia to further the cause of national unity," observed A. Philip Randolph, leader of the March on Washington movement, and international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, this week.

N. Y. AMSTERDAM STAR NEWS
June 6, 1942

Labor's Front ..... By J. Robert Smith

ON the eve of one of the greatest demonstrations to be staged by Negroes in America, a huge and colossal mass meeting at Madison Square Garden, the night of June 16, sponsored by the March-on-Washington Movement and directed by A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, Mayor LaGuardia has extended an invitation to Randolph to become a member of the New York Housing Authority. Very honestly, Randolph communicated with His Honor informing him that he found it impossible to serve diligently on such an important committee in view of the fact that most of his time was now taken up with the movement which seeks the full integration of the Negro in the "American Way of Life," and could not give proper and thorough study to problems of housing as they relate to the citizens of New York in general, and the Negro people particularly.

Mr. Smith

This column commends Randolph for the just and sincere stand he has taken in refusing to serve on the grounds presented. His refusal falls in line with the criticism offered by this writer in the March 21, 1942, issue of the Star-News in which I wrote, commenting on the Governor's Committee on Discrimination in Employment:

Couldn't Attend Meetings

"RANDOLPH has been unable to attend most of the meetings. He has had Benjamin F. McLaurin, international field organizer of the Brotherhood, act in his stead, he being away from the city most of the time. Beyond a shadow of a doubt, Randolph is one of the most outstanding labor leaders in the country but since his duties do not permit him to be active on the committee, then in fairness to the body, the unemployed and Randolph himself, he should be replaced by either McLaurin or someone of the committee's choice who has time to render the required service."

Forgetting the possible implications why the Mayor should at this time name Randolph to the Housing Authority especially when officially Washington views the Madison Square Garden rally unfavorably and will do almost anything "peacefully" to have it called off, it is high time that the Mayor and other officials realize that there are many more Negroes in New York who are well qualified to fill positions other than Randolph, Lester Granger, Dr. Channing H. Tobias and Frank R. Crosswaith.

We hold a great respect for these men personally, intellectually and from the standpoint of public-spiritedness. They are all honest Negroes with the welfare of the race at heart. They have and are still devoting much of their time to free contribution to the development of the race by attending endless meetings, day and night. It is therefore tantamount to an imposition on them and an injustice to the group they represent to place these men on more committees until they have been released from a few and have more of a breathing spell to take on additional ones.

CROSSWAITH is now serving on about thirty committees and the other gentlemen can boast of as many. We are in need of more such men, and women too. There are many "unknowns" in New York who have not been sought out and given a chance to serve. There are many youngsters, if selected by our senior leaders, will be able to make good representation. It is the duty of the community to see that it be done.

We do not desire the Mayor and other officials to feel that because they name a few of the top-notchers to positions it will appease the masses. Our leaders do not want them to feel that way, either. The Negro is today thinking in terms of the race as a whole and not a chosen few, and we convey to the Mayor, Governor and the rest of the higher-ups this thought.

Randolph Recommends

In his refusal, Randolph also recommended for the appointment Crosswaith, Granger, Miss Layle Lane, Ashley L. Totten, McLaurin and Roy Wilkins.

THIS column differs with Randolph in regards to Crosswaith and Granger for the reasons mentioned. Totten, Wilkins and McLaurin are good men, they know the rotten housing conditions which New York Negroes have to tolerate; they have the courage of their convictions; they can devote ample time to such a committee and they are well-respected in the community, so here goes a very constructive criticism and worthy suggestion, Mr. Mayor, choose from them.

AMSTERDAM
New York Star-News

VOL. XXXIII, No. 27 | SATURDAY, JUNE 13, 1942 | IN TWO SECTIONS SECTION ONE | 10

March-on-Washington To Garden on Tuesday

Randolph Reports Roosevelt Concerned Over Rallies to Be Held in Key Cities

On the eve of the greatest mass demonstration to be held at Madison Square Garden, Tuesday night, the March-on-Washington movement directed by A. Philip Randolph announced this week that Harlem businessmen have gone on record as cooperating with the campaign by voluntarily blacking out their stores from 9 to 9:15 that night.

According to officials of the movement that has as it program the fight to integrate the Negro into the industrial and armed forces of the United States, the business and residential sections of Harlem will be dark, dry and silent.

Welcomed Cooperation

In welcoming the cooperative attitude of the business men, Randolph from his headquarters said, "It is very encouraging to know that we have friends. In this final and decisive hour of the campaign to stop racial Hitlerism dead in its tracks on the home front, I now call upon my people to rally to

(Continued on Page 5)

Finley and the Blanche Thomas Choral Group.

On his return to the city on Monday from Washington, A. Philip Randolph, director of the March-on-Washington Movement, told his membership meeting at the Y. M. C. A. that President Roosevelt is very much concerned over the rallies to be held in key cities of the country, and has called Cabinet meetings in this regard.

Randolph also announced that he learned from reliable sources in the nation's Capital that plans were discussed at the Cabinet sessions relative to problems pertaining to the Negro people, including the Lester Walton plan.

Will March On

Affirming his stand to continue the fight until victory is won, the director said, "If they don't break down the jim-crow policy, we are going to march." Meantime preparations are still underway for the Madison Square Garden meeting, Tuesday night, and will not be called off regardless of what happens, the leader said.

Delegates from the National Joint Conference Committee and the New Harlem Tenants' League in a recent trip to Washington conferred with officials in various governmental departments in relation to several grievances pertaining to Harlem.

The group included the Rev. H. W. Stanley, Mrs. Carrie Trinidad, Miss Inez Guest, Mrs. Anna Best and Victor C. Gaspar.

The delegation called on the War Production Board, WPA, United States Housing Authority, U. S. Department of Labor, American Federation of Labor and the NYA.

March on D. C. Group to Garden and support the cause to break down the policy of jim-crow in the armed forces and government of our country.

(Continued from Page One)

"With faith and confidence in the militant and patriotic spirit of the Negro people and the help of Almighty God, we shall not fail."

Speakers Ready

Ready to meet the masses and deliver their messages of resentment to the treatment of the Negro in America, the following speakers have consented to be present that night: The Reverend Lloyd Imes, Dr. Lawrence M. Ervin, Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, the Reverend A. Clayton Powell, Jr., the Reverend S. T. Eldridge, Dr. Channing Tobias, Frank R. Crosswaith, Walter White, the Reverend D. W. Carrington, Lester Granger, Colden Brown, Arthur Reed, Bernice McMillan, Milton P. Webster, Perry Ferguson, the Reverend George W. Hinton and A. Philip Randolph.

Depicting the many forms of discrimination that the Negro in America is subjected to, a play, entitled "The Watchword is Forward," produced by Dick Campbell and featuring Rex Ingram, Canada Lee, Willie Bryant, Mercedes Gilbert, Carol Wilson and many other stars, will be presented.

Others on the musical program will include Muriel Rahn, who will sing the Star Spangled Banner; the Southernaires, Amanda Randolph, Edward Margetson, Fess

March-on-Washington Committee Grateful

To the Editor:

This is to thank J. Robert Smith for the splendid things he said about the March-on-Washington Movement in his column of the Amsterdam Star-News this week. I certainly wish to state that I am in 100 percent agreement with his line of reasoning when he said that the Negro of today is thinking in terms of the race as a whole, and not a chosen few; and that there are many young Negroes who are well-respected in the community that are competent and willing to take position of trust and responsibility.

May he keep up this line of reasoning and I am sure that a new leadership will come into existence.

LAWRENCE M. ERVIN,
President, New York Division,
March-on-Washington Movement.

Court Denies Sharecropper Case Appeal

The U. S. Supreme Court, June 1, for the second time declined without opinion to review the case of Odell Waller, Virginia sharecropper doomed by a jury of poll taxpayers to die June 19 for shooting his white farmer landlord.

On that same day the court reversed a verdict of rape in the case of Henry Allen Hill, Texas Negro, on the ground that Negroes had been excluded from the grand jury which indicted him. In the opinion on this case, Chief Justice Stone declared:

"Equal protection of the laws is something more than an abstract right. It is a command which the state must respect, the benefits of which every person may demand."

Critics of the court point out that this opinion might have been applied with equal force to the Waller case. If the states "must respect" the right to equal protection of the laws, they contend, then the court must also respect it, since the states and the court are equally bound by the Constitution. They regard the simultaneous recognition of Hill's right to equal protection and disregard of Waller's, as proof that the court, when appealed to from the state's unequal administration of the law, considers this right not a "command," but purely a matter of judicial discretion. And they emphatically stress the danger involved in thus subjecting the constitutional rights of the individual to the caprice of the court.

The equal protection for which Waller appealed was protection from discrimination against citizens too poor to qualify for the right of citizenship. He appealed from the assumption that a jury of white poll taxpayers, ten of whom belonged to the same class of employing farmers as the man he shot, were peers of a poor Negro sharecropper, disfranchised by the Virginia poll tax. In other words, he demanded his constitutional right to trial by a jury of his peers.

March on Washington Rally Given Added Support by Public

The public is alert in supporting the March on Washington Movement which will stage a rally in Madison Square Garden June 16 to protest against discrimination in the armed forces, defense industries and Government agencies. This info was received in an interview with John Eardlie, chairman of the Finance Committee, 2084 Seventh ave, who also said that for the week ending June 5 over $1,500 was collected. He attributed much of this success to the generous cooperation of Negro papers, and added that the effectiveness of the coverage of PV has been shown by the overwhelming number of persons who came in or phoned saying that they wished that their names be added to the list of sponsors published by PV.

Persons and organizations that contributed five dollars or more since last publication:

Dr. Vernon Dubois
Brotherhood of Ry. Carmen of Amer.
Hubert Delaney
Mrs. Grace Jones
Mrs. Eldica Riley
Miss Edith Ransom
Mrs. Jennie W. Odom
Assemblyman William T. Andrews
R. S. McCracken
Women's Civic and Political Club of Staten Island
Julius Richardson
Herbert King
Joseph T. Wells
E. E. Williams
Ethiopian World Federation, Inc.
Dr. Samuel F. Jenkins
Dr. R. E. Gunning
W. W. Simpkins
H. A. Rock
J. M. Houston
Elmer Carter
British Virgin Island Benevolent Assn.
Mrs. Cora Lee Illidge
Mrs. Lena J. Lawson
Mrs. Martha Turner
Miss Beatrice Elleger
Frederick H. Townsend
Mrs. Ruth Clukies
Mrs. Peggy Wilson
Judge J. S. Watson
Henry A. Toppin
Luther T. Eure
Atty. Cuthbert Spencer
J. E. Wilson
H. Hendricks
P. Gregory
George Tanner
D. G. Gavin
T. W. Smith
G. R. Ross
V. O. Goodman
Miss Pauline Neilson

Organizations that contributed $25 or more since last publication:

Ivy Art Circle
Union for Democratic Action
Friends of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters Utility Club, Inc.
Laundry Workers Joint Board of Greater New York
Council of Negro Women of America
Staten Island NAACP
Women's Voters
Council of Brooklyn
Club Danceland
Howard Univ. Club
Harlem Labor Union
Ladies Auxiliary. United Sons of Georgia, Inc.

PEOPLE'S
The VOICE
AMERICA'S GREATEST NEGRO NEWSPAPER

1942 by Powell-Buchanan Pub. Co., Inc. NEW YORK CITY, JUNE 13, 1942

Amsterdam News June 6

N. Y. AMSTERDAM STAR NEWS
June 6, 1942

FEATURE PAGE

Around and Beyond ..... By Frank Crosswaith

"IT is indeed an ill wind that blows nobody some good" is the substance of an old and admired adage in which there is a large measure of truth, When Hitler and his cohorts conspired against the peoples of the world and decided to attack and destroy that form of government that is reflective of civilized and democratic human relationship, he and his crowd did not think that out of the consequent chaos and debris would emerge a dark skinned brother determined at last to place his feet upon the pedestal of equality with his brothers of other hues. But it has happened.

Mr. Crosswaith

As a result of the present world-wide struggle between the forces of light and darkness, the millions of people in India are much closer to their freedom as are the millions in other parts of the world. Having heard for so long and so loudly the deserving claims made for democracy, these people are now justly insisting that their place in the world and especially in their native land also rest upon the lofty principles of democracy. Among the voices easily distinguished in this chorus of tongues is that of the Negro in the Western Hemisphere, particularly here in the United States, and the March on Washington Movement is fascinatingly reflective of that fact.

March Gains Support

Few efforts made by the Negro in his own behalf have gained such widespread and enthusiastic support among the masses and at the same time become the deep and serious concern of our white fellow citizens as has the March on Washington Movement. There are many reasons for this fact, among them are the following: 1. Because the March on Washington Movement has affected an unusually large degree of unity among Negro leaders of demonstrated ability, courage, foresight and unselfishness. 2. Because it has formulated a program of action that is practical and intelligent. 3. Because thus far, the leaders of the Movement have successfully kept out of it, the crack-pots, the hot heads and others who see the Negro problem only as another opportunity to repeat the story of the carpetbaggers (sic!).

Interestingly enough, we have received several letters dealing with the March on Washington Movement and cautioning against the forthcoming mass meeting in Madison Square Garden. One such letter expresses the fear that certain people among "the whites or the Negroes may do rash things that can lead to most deplorable results." The writer then went on to show that "the discrimination practiced against the Negro is not a matter of laws or rulings by higher ups, but that it is inherent in the social arrangement under which we all live, and if the Negro organizes to force his way to equality bitter clashes are almost certain to result."

Leaders Are Forthright

The leaders of the March on Washington Movement are responsible men and women who, during their public lives, have never advocated violence as the path to the solution of our problem. We are opposed to violence and will continue to caution our friends and followers against any rash act. Albeit, the time has come when black America and its contribution to our civilization must be recognized. Morally and otherwise, we have a larger claim upon the privileges and advantages of American democracy than any other group except the Indians. The ancestors of our white fellow citizens came here to gain their freedom, while our ancestors came here to lose theirs. Nevertheless, the first man to give his life in the struggle for freedom was one of our ancestors.

"Negroes have fared badly in our present civilization," says another writer, "because we are not good enough 'go getters' and not selfish or tricky or clever enough schemers." "Our aptitude," says he, "lies in finer directions, we are not afraid to work; we can take orders; we can sing and laugh and dance—even when persecuted . . ." To all of the above quoted remarks we say Amen! But we add that IT IS THE DUTY OF EVERY BLACK MAN, WOMAN AND CHILD—EVEN IF THEY WALK ON CRUTCHES OR HAVE TO BE BORNE ON WHEEL CHAIRS—TO PARTICIPATE IN THE PEACEFUL MARCH ON WASHINGTON MOVEMENT BY JOINING IN THE PEACEFUL PARADE ON JUNE 10TH AND BY BEING PRESENT AT MADISON SQUARE GARDEN ON JUNE 16TH.

FEAR FAILURE OF HARLEM'S BLACKOUT

LOS ANGE
Tribune
A MODEL OF JOURNALISM
Vol. 2—No. 17 Monday, June 15, 1942 20 cents per month or 5 cents per copy Los Angeles, California

Buy the TRIBUNE 5c
At Perry's Newsstand
Vernon and Central
And on your neighborhood stand

Car Porter
217 W. 12
New York Ci

Harlem to be "dark, dry, silent" Tuesday night

BULLETIN

NEW YORK—Efforts to persuade labor leader and March on Washington Movement leader A. Philip Randolph to abandon his proposed blackout of Harlem Tuesday in protest against discrimination, were reportedly being made in several high quarters this week.

Dickering with Randolph to secure cancellation of the blackout and mass meeting in Madison Square Gardens is Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, according to reliable scources. It was La Guardia who interceded with President Roosevelt and secured a conference between Randolph, Walter White and the Chief Executive last year, which resulted in cancellation of the actual March on Washington and the issuance of Executive Order No. 8802.

Randolph has not sufficiently prepared the community for the mass demonstrations he wants, his critics here assert. They fear that the blackout will not be effective because enthusiasm for it has not yet reached a peak.

Adamant, Randolph is reportedly gambling the blackout, effective or not, on the chance that someone higher up than LaGuardia in the Government will intervene to give him some of the concessions he demands.

NEW YORK—Anticipating the greatest mass demonstration to be held at Madison Square Gardens, the March-On-Washington Movement, directed by A. Philip Randolph, announced this week that Harlem businessmen have gone on record as cooperating with the campaign by voluntarily blacking out their stores from 9 to 9:15 Tuesday night.

According to officials of the movement that has as its program the fight to integrate the Negro into the industrial and armed forces of the United States, business and residential sections of Harlem will be dark, dry and silent.

In welcoming the cooperation of the business men, Randolph said, "It is very encouraging to know that we have friends. In this final and decisive hour of the campaign to stop racial Hitlerism dead in its tracks on the home front, I now call upon my people to rally to and support the cause to break down the policy of Jim-Crow in the armed forces and Government of our country.

"With faith and confidence in the militant and patriotic spirit of the Negro people and the help of Almighty God, we shall not fail."

SPEAKERS READY

Ready to meet the masses and deliver their messages of resentment to the treatment of the Negro in America, are the following speakers: The Rev. Lloyd Imes, Dr. Lawrence M. Hershey, Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, the Rev. A. Clayton Powell, Jr., the Rev. S. T. Eldridge, Dr. Channing Tobias, Frank R. Crosswaith, Walter White, the Rev. D. W. Carrington, Lester Granger, Colden Brown, Arthur Reed, Bernice McMillan, Milton P. Webster, Perry Ferguson, the Rev. George W. [illegible], and Randolph.

[illegible]ecting the many forms of discrimination that the Negro in America is subjected to, a play entitled, "The Watchword is Forward" produced by Dick Campbell and featuring Rex Ingram, Canada Lee, Willie Bryant, Mercedes Gilbert, Carol Wilson and many other stars will be presented.

[illegible]orated with banners and [illegible]ed with posters and leaflets, Harlemites have gone all-out for the mass protest rally.

[illegible] churches, social and fraternal organizations, according to officials, have promised financial, moral support to the movement and more than 50,000 people are expected to storm the Garden.

[illegible]aring that the Negro must stand up and fight for his own rights and show the world what he can do, Randolph described the meeting as an "all-Negro" meeting, promoted and conducted by the Negro people.

"Our white friends have been kind and good to us, now we must show them that we mean to help ourselves," he said.

(Continued on Page 16)

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SATURDAY, JUNE 13, 1942.

NEGROES TO FIGHT EMPLOYMENT BIAS

National Campaign to Start Tuesday to Press Demand for Equality in Jobs

MASS MEETING IN GARDEN

March on Washington From All Sections of Country Mapped as Climax

A national campaign to wipe out discrimination against Negroes in the Army, Navy, government agencies, war industries and labor unions will open Tuesday night with a mass meetin gin Madison Square Garden, it was announced yesterday by A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, A. F. of L.

The movement, which may reach a climax in a march on Washington by Negroes from all parts of the country, is sponsored by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the National Urban League, the Harlem branches of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations and scores of Negro labor and fraternal organizations, Mr. Randolph said.

He expressed the hope that the protest meetings to be held in the next month in New York, Chicago and other centers would prove sufficient in themselves to bring about effective governmental action against "Jim Crow" employment policies, thus making it unnecessary to mobilize Negroes for an actual march on the national capital.

Off on President's Request

A similar march was projected a year ago but it was called off atfer Mr. Randolph and other leaders had been called to the White House and assured by President Roosevelt that he would issue an executive order prohibiting racial discrimination in filling defense jobs. The no-discrimination order was promulgated June 25, 1941, and the President set up a committee on fair employment practices to see that ti was enforced.

Mr. Randolph conceded that the committee had done "some good work" in opening up employment opportunities for Negroes in shipyards, aviation plants and other defense industries, but he said its effectiveness was reduced by the fact that the government itself continued to discriminate in the armed forces and in many civilian branches.

He predicted that 50,000 persons would be in and around Madison Square Garden during Tuesday night's meeting. The sponsoring committee has urged all merchants and residents of Harlem to demonstrate their sympathy with the purposes of the rally by participating in a voluntary blackout from 9 to 9:15 P. M. while the meeting is in progress. Mr. Randolph said assurances of cooperation had been received from the two principal trade groups in the district.

Washington Meeting July 4

A gathering of Negroes who live in Washington is scheduled for July 4, according to Mr. Randolph. He said Harold Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, had denied permission to use the grounds of the Lincoln Memorial, where Marian Anderson, Negro contralto, sang three years ago fater she had been barred from Constitution Hall by the Daughters of the American Revolution. The committee is now negotiating for lease of the Washington baseball park and, if it is unable to get that, it will hold the rally in Logan's Circle, Mr. Randolph said.

Elimination bars place by unions upon employment of Negroes will be one of the principal objectives of the anti-discrimination movement. Mr. Randolph said the President's committee on fair employment practices had made some headway in this direction, but that much remained to be done among A. F. of L. unions and the railroad brotherhoods.

He disclosed that Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt had accepted honorary chairmanship of a "national citizens' committee to save colored locomotive firemen's jobs." Mayor La Guardia is active chairman of the committee, which includes six United States Senators and the Governors of three States, the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

The purpose of the committee, as defined by Mr. Randolph, is to prevent the Brotherhood of Locomotive Enginemen and Firemen from forcing 2,500 Negro firemen on Southern railroads out of their jobs. Mr. Randolph said all of the twenty-one standard railroad brotherhoods, except the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes, excluded Negroes from membership and that similar exclusion was practiced by such A. F. of L. unions as the International Association of Machinists, the Blacksmiths Union and the Boilermakers Union.

AMSTERDAM NEW YORK STAR-NEWS

Saturday, June 13, 1942

Labor's Front ..... By J. Robert Smith

NEXT Tuesday night the March-on-Washington Movement will stage what is expected to be one of the greatest mass meetings in the history of the Negro in America. Madison Square Garden will be the scene of a gathering of Americans who will be calling upon their native land to render justice unto them, and that is to give them an opportunity to enjoy the pursuit of its happiness. Negroes on that night will be asking for the right to live like their white brothers. They will call upon America to cease treating its minority groups in the same fashion for which Hitler has been duly criticized.

Mr. Smith

Every true-blooded Negro, regardless whether he likes or dislikes those who are promoting the meeting, if interested in the welfare of his race, is duty-bound to support this movement. The program is vitally constructive. It calls for better employment opportunities and equality in the armed forces of this country; broken down, the movement is fighting to eradicate discrimination, segregation and jim-crowism from the "American Way of Life."

I am interested in the movement particularly from the standpoint of labor. It was the cause of President Roosevelt issuing an executive order banning discrimination in defense industries; it was also the cause of the birth of his Fair Employment Practice Committee. I am more so interested because its hands are not tied. Its promoters are Negro men and women who are independent in thought and action of white dictation. It has no interracial board and therefore is not subjected to compromises.

The March-on-Washington Movement has kept its solicitation within the confines of the Negro people. In so doing, the movement will be able to be more fearless and exacting than our N. A. A. C. P. and Urban League. With their limitations, however, both of these organizations have done a marvelous job.

But the days of appeasement are dying fast. In the struggle to live under this "American Way of Life," the solution lies in fighting for the "rights" that are justly ours and giving no ground in the battle. With the white man's money, we cannot expect to have the first and last say. With his money we cannot expect him to agree to sit around the conference table and accept our "lipping" of his race, as wrong as it may be. Few can take it such as the Pearl Bucks, Wendell Willkies, Eleanor Roosevelts, Malcolm McLeans, the Agars and a couple more. This type is not preponderant on our interracial boards. They are mostly industrialists and others interested because they are "sorry" for us and would like to do something while we remain in "our places."

Until the Negro begins to take an interest in his own welfare and stop looking for handouts and sympathy, he will always be begging for bread, raiment and shelter, and be a "yes man."

The March-on-Washington Committee is moving in the right direction. It should be an example to Negroes all over the country to think in terms of business, owned and operated by them. Our leading Negro organizations should be run and supported by Negroes. The interracial groups will still have their place in the scheme of things; they will very much be needed.

With independent organizations, it will only be a matter of time when we will be able to eliminate such bottlenecks like many of the Negroes who fill "buffer" positions in Washington and elsewhere. Men and women of the race who are paid fat sums to appease the starving masses. Unless a Negro organization is independent it dares not say a word to correct such an evil for fear that some heads will be decapitated. These are but few of the peeves that confront this race of ours. The enemy is both without and within. To win the battle, we must take the campaign in our hands, and that is what the March-on-Washington Movement under the leadership of A. Philip Randolph is launching. The future of the Negro is dependent upon himself.

It can be a race that faces what it must with step triumphant and a heart of cheer, that fights its daily battles without fear, nor loses faith in self, but does its best, and with a smile and words of hope along with action give zest to every brother to help himself. A race is great when by its own heroic life, it conquers fate.

The Negro has to police this "American Way of Life" if he expects to share in the victory to come. Our reward is more jobs and better jobs, better housing and the right and privilege of being an AMERICAN. The crusade is worthy, let's support it.

Odell Waller to Die Next Week Unless High Court Acts

Upper Tribunal Refused on May 4 to Hear Appeal For Rehearing; Gave No Opinion for Action

Is the judiciary of the United States of America, the greatest democratic institution in the power-mad world, deliberately ignoring the voice of the people in the case of Odell Waller, 23-year-old Negro sharecropper disenfranchised by poverty under the statutes of the State of Virginia?

On or before Friday, June 19, 130,000,000 Americans will have this pertinent question answered. But the answer may cost the life of a boy whose only crime was his refusal to be robbed.

Waller has been sentenced to die in a Richmond prison next week. The Supreme Court on May 4 last refused without opinion to reopen the case.

But on the same day that the Supreme Court denied the Waller appeal, it reversed a verdict which had convicted Henry Allen Hill of rape in Texas. The grounds of the reversal were that Negroes had been excluded from the jury which returned the verdict. Handing down his decision and opinion, Chief Justice Stone declared:

"Equal protection of the laws is something more than an abstract right. It is a command which the State must respect, the benefits of which every person may demand."

Critics of the contradictory action of the Supreme Court and of the Chief Justice contend that "equal protection" is as applicable in Virginia as it is in Texas, especially where the merit of the case has been preestablished. Since States are obliged to respect the right of equal protection, it is pointed out, then the tribunals of the land must also respect the same right since the Constitution of the United States binds every person and institution within its jurisdiction.

Went to Landlord in 1940

On Monday morning, July 15, 1940, Waller drove a truck to the farmhouse of Oscar Davis, white tenant farmer and Waller's former landlord, to pick up 50 bags of wheat which he had earned while employed by Davis. He had relatives to help him load the wheat.

Davis was standing in his doorway talking to a Negro employe.

It was the testimony of this employe, Henry Davis, although discredited by the defense, that literally pulled the switch which may yet end Waller's life. Davis testified that Waller, in effect, had lied throughout the trial. The reason for Davis saying this is all too obvious to persons familiar with interracial procedure in the Southland.

However, Waller demanded his wheat. Davis refused and a quarrel ensued which, fearing Davis might harm him, Waller shot his ex-boss. The white man died two days later.

A preliminary hearing was held and the case turned over to the grand jury. A Pittsylvania County Grand Jury indicted Waller on a first degree murder charge and on September 26, 1940, Waller was tried before a jury of 10 farmers, most of whom—like the slain man—employed sharecroppers. The other two jurors were a carpenter and a businessman.

Waller Judged Guilty

Waller pleaded not guilty. The jury deliberated less than an hour and returned a guilty verdict.

Waller was sentenced to die December 11. However, Governor James H. Price granted a stay of execution until March 14, 1941, to permit defense counsel to apply to Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia for a writ of error.

On March 4 the Court of Appeals granted a writ permitting the appeal. But on October 13 the Virginia Supreme Court affirmed judgment and sentence of the Circuit Court. Waller was resentenced to death on December 12 and again Governor Price granted stay to allow filing for writ of habeas corpus. January 22, 1942, the writ was denied by the State Supreme Court without reasons.

Other litigation followed and on May 4 the U. S. Supreme Court again refused to review the case. Two days later Governor Colgate W. Darden, Governor Price's successor, set the date of execution to June 19.

Rally Due in Garden

[illegible]arriage of justice that has kept Waller in the shadow of death.

The Waller case involves a great deal more than just a man's life. It involves the constitutional right of an accused person to be tried by a jury of his peers. The Constitution of the State of Virginia makes the annual payment of $1.50 for three consecutive years a requisite for casting a ballot. This proviso, according to Senator Carter Glass, was deliberately intended to disenfranchise Negroes.

More Whites Than Negroes

In effect it disfranchises as many, if not more, whites as it does Negroes. Lists of qualified voters are consistently consulted in drawing jurors. Thus, Odell Waller was convicted by a jury of white voters, 10 of whom were farmers employing sharecroppers and akin by occupation to the man Waller was on trial for slaying!

If the Supreme Court shall once more refuse to review Waller's case, a plea for commutation of sentence will no doubt be made to Governor Darden who has already shown a courageous disregard of political consideration by granting two reprieves. Because of this record, it is not beyond the realm of possibility that Governor Darden will decide that both justice and mercy can better be served through commutation of sentence than by committing the irrevocable error of sending a man to his death on the basis of presupposed guilt.

To add strength to the appeal for executive clemency for Waller, the Virginia State branches of the N. A. A. C. P. began to flood the offices of Governor Colgate W. Darden with pleas that the young ex-sharecropper's life be spared.

Waller was sentenced to die December 17. However, Governor James H. Price granted a stay of execution until March 14, 1941, to permit defense counsel to apply to Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia for a writ of error.

On March 4 the Court of Appeals granted a writ permitting the appeal. But on October 13 the Virginia Supreme Court affirmed judgment and sentence of the Circuit Court. Waller was resentenced to death on December 12 and again Governor Price granted stay to allow filing for writ of habeas corpus. January 22, 1942, the writ was denied by the State Supreme Court without reasons.

Other litigation followed and on May 4 the U. S. Supreme Court again refused to review the case. Two days later Governor Colgate W. Darden, Governor Price's successor, set the date of execution to June 19.

Rally Due in Garden

Three days before Waller is supposed to die, a huge rally will be held in Madison Square Garden, New York, to protest undemocratic treatment of Negroes. It is the March-on-Washington movement and one of its favorite themes will unquestionably be the MOW. MSS.

PROGRAM

Mass Meeting at Madison Square Garden
June 16, 1942

DR. LAWRENCE MANCE ERVIN, Chairman
COLDEN BROWN, Chairman of Speakers Committee

STAR SPANGLED BANNER.....Muriel Rahn, Concert Soprano
INVOCATION.....Rev. William Lloyd Imes
(Pastor, St. James Presbyterian Church)

MESSAGES:

DR. MARY McLEOD BETHUNE
Director of Negro Youth Division of N. Y. A.

REV. A. CLAYTON POWELL, JR.
Member of New York City Council

REV. S. T. BOLDRIDGE
President, Baptist Ministers' Alliance of Greater N. Y. and Vicinity

REV. JOHN LA FARGE, S.J.
"Associate Editor of America"

DR. CHANNING H. TOBIAS
Director, Colored Division Y. M. C. A.

MUSIC.....Fess Finlay's Band (Noble Sissle)

MESSAGES:

MR. FRANK R. CROSSWAITH
Chairman, Negro Labor Committee

MR. WALTER WHITE
Executive Secretary, N. A. A. C. P.

REV. W. O. CARRINGTON
President of A. M. E. Zion Ministers' Alliance of Greater New York and Vicinity.

MR. LESTER B. GRANGER
Executive Director, National Urban League.

MUSIC—"Brown Soldier Boy".....Amanda Randolph (Radio Singer)
PLAY—"The Watchword Is Forward".....By Dick Campbell
(Director of Rose McClendon Players)
COLLECTION.....Dr. O. Clay Maxwell, Sr.
(Pastor, Mt. Olivet Baptist Church)
MUSIC—"We Are Americans Too".....By Eubie Blake and Andy Razaf
(Blanche Thomas' Choral Group)

MESSAGES:

MR. ARTHUR REID
Organizer of 125th Street Job Campaign

MISS BERNICE McMILLAN
Member, Modern Trend's Progressive Youth Group

MILTON P. WEBSTER
Member, Fair Employment Practice Committee

8-POINT PROGRAM OF MARCH-ON-WASHIHGTON MOVEMENT
Mr. Perry Ferguson, Membeship Secretary, March-On-Washington Movement
ADDRESS.....A. Philip Randolph
(National Director, March-OnWashington Movement)
AUDIENCE—"Lift Every Voice and Sing".....Cora Illidge, Conducting BENEDICTION.....Rev. George W. Hinton
President of the Interdenominational Ministers' Alliance of Greater New York and Vicinity.

EDWARD MARGETSON — Organist JOHN BROOKS — Photographer

MARCH-ON-WASHINGTON MOVEMENT
New York Division

MOnument 2-3350 2084 SEVENTH AVENUE

Richard Thomas	Dr. Lawrence Ervin	Aldrich Turner
Secretary	President	Treasurer

J. Robert Smith, Publicity Director

—JOIN NOW—

440

NEW YORK WORLD-TELEGRAM, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 17, 1942.

Negro Rally Hits At Discrimination

Mayor at Garden Appoints Colored Man

Discrimination in some parts of the country against Negroes casts doubt on the sincerity of the nation's crusade against Fascism, it was said last night at a mass meeting of 18,000 Negroes in Madison Square Garden.

The gathering, sponsored by the March on Washington movement for social rights for Negroes, demanded an end to discrimination in the armed forces and in war industries.

Mayor La Guardia sent a telegram announcing appointment of Frank R. Crosswaith, a Negro labor leader, as a member of the New York City Housing Authority.

Walter White, executive secretary of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, said that six months after Pearl Harbor there still was racial discrimination in the United States. This, he added, must make leaders of the black, brown and yellow peoples wonder about the sincerity of the United Nations.

"What is desperately needed," he said, "is forthright action by President Roosevelt in co-operation with the leaders of the colored world—Chiang Kai-shek of China, Gandhi, Nehru and Azad of India; Manuel Quezon of the Philippines and Haile Selassie of Ethiopia—to draft and put into execution a Pacific Charter which, with the Atlantic Charter of Roosevelt and Churchill, will form a world charter of freedom."

Other speakers included A. Philip Randolph, president of the Sleeping and Dining Car Porters of America; Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, the Rev. A. Clayton Powell, Jr.; the Rev. John LaFarge, Dr. Channing H. Tobias and Lester B. Granger.

medical attention and the fifth | Thus William C. Bu[illegible] his | murdered within several weeks by | gruber himself.

The Defeatist Socialist Call Insults the Negro People

By Ben Davis, Jr.

The hand of the defeatist Socialist Call—official organ of the Socialist Party which opposes our nation's war effort and which is an enemy of the Negro people—weighs heavily in the sponsorship of the Madison Square Garden rally scheduled to take place tonight.

That much is clear from the latest issue of this disloyal sheet which just came out.

For purposes inimical to the war against Hitler and dangerous to the cause of Negro rights, the Socialist Party intends to exploit the just grievances of the Negro people in the same way that Goebbels or Hitler would exploit them.

How is it that the issue of the Call—which was published several days BEFORE the Garden rally tonight—comes out with the cut and dried program which is to be jammed through meeting?

Is it possible that A. Philip Randolph, himself a Socialist and a political bed-fellow of the disgraceful appeaser Norman Thomas, has been working with the Socialist Party to exploit the just demands of the Negro people against the war and against the best interests of the Negroes?

If A. Philip Randolph supports our nation's war against Hitler—which involves the future of the Negro as well as that of white Americans—why hasn't he repudiated the treasonable statement of the Socialist Party against the war?

If the leaders and sponsor of the Garden rally intend that it should support the war, why does the so-called 8-point program published in the Call omit all reference to the war—to say nothing of winning it?

How does the Socialist Call print the so-called 8-point program to be presented at the meeting before it is even released to the Negro people who are supposed to adopt it?

It is not an accident that the Socialist Call in the same issue demands that the "struggle for Negro rights be directed along Socialist lines." What are these "lines"? The lines of disloyalty, defeatism and aid to the enemy by opposing the just war of the American people—black and white?

Furthermore, the Call asks why "American Negroes should fight" in the war. This is a direct incitation to disloyalty which is alien to the traditions of the Negro people.

This newspaper pointed out last Sunday that Randolph's associations with defeatists in connection with this meeting raised grave misgivings with regard to the character of the Garden meeting. Now those connections are clear. Randolph is working with a political faction which actually opposed the war and is therefore detrimental to the cause of Negroes.

That the Socialist Party, with its disloyal doctrines, should be so closely associated with this meeting is an insult to the dignity of the Negro people.

Negro Americans want above all to defeat Hitler. They are determined that no defeatists should take advantage of their just grievances to spread disunity and to stab our nation in the back.

The Negro people backed by labor and white democratic citizens, today fight against discrimination, because more than ever discrimination hampers our war effort and is a disgrace to our country.

Negro Americans will look with suspicion upon any so-called movement for Negro rights, in which such a defeatist, disloyal clique as Norman Thomas and the Socialist party are grinding their axes.

MAYOR PUTS NEGRO ON HOUSING BOARD

Appointment of Crosswaith Is Cheered at a Meeting of 18,000 in the Garden

DRIVE FOR RIGHTS OPENS

Leader Says His Race Must Have All the Liberties for Which Nation Is Fighting

The appointment of Frank R. Crosswaith, Negro organizer for the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, as a member of the New York City Housing Authority, was announced by Mayor La Guardia last night in a telegram read at a mass meeting at Madison Square Garden attended by 18,000 Negroes.

The meeting was held to launch the "March on Washington" movement for Negro rights.

The Mayor's telegram, addressed to A. Philip Randolph, national director of the movement and head of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, said:

"Regret as I have already written you that special duties will keep me too late to attend your meeting this evening. I need not attend a meeting to express my views and sentiments on the subject of discussion. I have asked Mr. Frank Crosswaith to attend for me. I have appointed him a member of the New York City Housing Authority in the place that you regretfully were not able to take because of your multitudinous activities which take you away from the city so much.

"I will swear in Mr. Crosswaith some time this week. He will speak this evening as a member of my administration."

Great Applause for Telegram

The telegram, read by Lawrence M. Ervin, chairman of the meeting, evoked tremendous applause. Mr. Crosswaith spoke [illegible] shortly afterward and referred to the meeting as "the first [illegible] ever attended in Madison Square Garden."

"This is a funeral [illegible] like every other black man, woman and child here tonight. I am here to bury in the grave of forgetfulness the type of black man America too long has known."

Agreeing with what other speakers had said, Mr. Crosswaith said the meeting marked the fact that there was a new Negro in America who, loyal to the government and determined to give every effort toward winning the war for the democracies, would be determined that, instead of just gaining the same rights and liberties accorded to other citizens of the country.

He declared that while others had come to this country to seek their liberty, "my father and mother, like yours, came here to lose their liberty."

Own Son in Service

Mr. Crosswaith said his own son was now in the armed forces "on the Continent of Europe ready to die for the Stars and Stripes."

"I cannot hear him," he continued, "but I can see into his very heart that he has a hope that some day the flag for which he is willing to die will fly as freely over his race as it does over the heads of those who found liberty here."

In expressing his appreciation for the Mayor's appointment, Mr. Crosswaith recalled that the first time he had ever stood before a judge in New York City was "as an agitating tenant in segregated Harlem twenty-four years ago."

Mr. Crosswaith closed his speech by urging the audience to let nothing blind them to the fact that "your fate and the fate of your children rests in the lap of the working class."

"I know there are men who are so blind, stupid and asinine as to fail to recognize their kindredness with you."

The Rev. A. Clayton Powell Jr., member of the City Council, announced at the close of his speech that he would run for Congress this Fall.

Most of the speakers on the long program stressed the point that while the democracies might be able to win the war without the help of the Negro, they could not win the peace unless there were complete equality of opportunity and privilege for all races.

The Rev. John La Farge, associate editor of America, Roman Catholic publication, was introduced by Mr. Ervin as "the only [illegible] sentative, State Secretary of State and Lieutenant Governor. In the last city election he was the American Labor [illegible] Citizen's Nonpartisan [illegible] candidate for Councilman from Manhattan.

Known as an excellent orator, Mr. Crosswaith formerly was a lecturer for the Socialist party and for the League for Industrial Democracy and made nation-wide tours on which he spoke in colleges and universities throughout the country.

As a leader of the liberal right wing of the American Labor party, Mr. Crosswaith joined in an appeal last year to the 150,000 enrolled members of the party to keep "free of control [illegible] disintegration at the hands of Communists."

As a labor organizer, Mr. Crosswaith helped in the formation of unions for elevator operators, mechanics, barbers, laundry workers and moving picture operators. He also was a special organizer for the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. He is general organizer for the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, the third largest in the United States, with more than 12,000 Negroes among the 400,000 members.

FEPC Plans Power Grab D. C. Hears

Cramer-McLean Proposal Taken to White House [redacted] sorb All Colored D.C. Agencies. Mrs. Bethune, Hastie, Weaver, Mrs. Fauset Affected.

WASHINGTON

The President's Fair Employment Practice Committee is divided over its ambitious proposal to constitute itself a Department of Colored Affairs.

This most [redacted] executive secretary of the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee, and Samuel Barron, an ambitious newcomer, now Mr. Cramer's assistant.

This is the plan Cramer and FEPC chairman Malcolm S. MacLean took to President Roosevelt recently without, it is said, the approval of the other committee members.

Cramer-Barron Plan

The Cramer-Barron plan was presented to the President's committee at its meeting here last Monday and Tuesday, but action was delayed when several members of the committee voiced strenuous objections to certain phases. The plan allegedly involves:

1. The establishment of the President's committee as an overall agency to have sole jurisdiction over all colored and minority problems affecting U.S. Government agencies.

2. The immediate abolition of all race relations offices now operating in any government agency and the transfer of all their functions to the committee.

3. The expansion of the President's committee to take over the whole colored and minority problem in the United States.

Randolph, White Opposed

Although A. Philip Randolph, chariman of the March-on-Washington Committee, and Walter White, secretary of the NAACP, and several of the committee members themselves had reportedly expressed bitter opposition to the plan, Mr. Cramer is said to have gone forward with his proposal before last week's meeting of the policy where he had already requested a greatly expanded budget from the budget bureau.

He is also reported to have prepared a draft of an amended executive order expanding the committee's responsibilities.

Committee Divided

The committee halted any further immediate action in this direction, it is reported, by appointing sub-committees to consider all phases of the problem and to report back to the committee as a whole.

Opponents point out that the committee would endanger its own authority by trying to solve the whole race question every-[illegible]

It can, [illegible] provisions of Executive Order 8802 which was directed at defense industries.

Mr. Cramer Talks

In an interview Monday Mr. Cramer told the AFRO that, following a conference which he and Dr. MacLean had recently with the President, two major objectives are on the committee's agenda.

First the committee is attempting to decide on the type of reorganization that will make the body more efficient in its present task of providing minority groups with increased employment in war industries.

Advisory Capacity

Second, the committee is considering a broader responsibility of acting in an advisory capacity to other governmental bureaus which have problems outside the field of emlpoyment but are nevertheless tied up with the overall problem of minorities faced with discrimination.

for the Mayor's appointment, Mr. Crosswaith recalled that the first time he had ever stood before a judge in New York City was "as an agitating tenant in segregated Harlem twenty-four years ago."

Mr. Crosswaith closed his speech by urging the audience to let nothing blind them to the fact that "your fate and the fate of your children rests in the lap of the working class."

"I know there are men who are so blind, stupid and asinine as to fail to recognize their kindredness with you."

The Rev. A. Clayton Powell Jr., member of the City Council, announced at the close of his speech that he would run for Congress this Fall.

Most of the speakers on the long program stressed the point that while the democracies might be able to win the war without the help of the Negro, they could not win the peace unless there were complete equality of opportunity and privilege for all races.

The Rev. John La Farge, associate editor of America, Roman Catholic publication, was introduced by Mr. Ervin as "the only white man who had consented to speak at the meeting." He said the religious-minded men and women of Germany and of the United States, whether Catholic, Protestant or Jew, were demanding "the natural rights to personal freedom and the natural right every man has to the protection of his honor against lies and slanders."

Walter White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said there was a desperate need for forthright action by Jresident Roosevelt in cooperation with leaders of the Negro world.

ONCE ELEVATOR OPERATOR

Crosswaith, Named to City Post, Right Wing Labor Party Leader

Frank Crosswaith, named last night by Mayor La Guardia as a member of the New York City Housing Authority, worked as an elevator operator while attending night schools and eventually was graduated from the Rand School of Social Science, remaining there to teach for several years. He was born in St. Croix, Virgin Islands, and came to the United States while in his teens.

Formerly a Socialist he was that party's candidate in past elections for Aldermanic President, Repre-it can effectively carry out the provisions of Executive Order 8802 which was directed at defense industries.

Mr. Cramer Talks

In an interview Monday Mr. Cramer told the AFRO that, following a conference which he and Dr. MacLean had recently with the President, two major objectives are on the committee's agenda.

First the committee is attempting to decide on the type of reorganization that will make the body more efficient in its present task of providing minority groups with increased employment in war industries.

Advisory Capacity

Second, the committee is considering a broader responsibility of acting in an advisory capacity to other governmental bureaus which have problems outside the field of emlpoyment but are nevertheless tied up with the over-all problem of minorities faced with discrimination.

A feature of this second objective, Mr. Cramer said, is the proposed establishment of regional offices throughout the country, with field investigations by the committee's own staff workers.

Under the President

And in addition it is fairly assured that the FEPC will be established directly under the executive office of the President—after having been set up originally under the office of production management, and later functioning under the war production board.

"The Fair Practice Committee does not have under consideration any plan to remove all colored workers from their present bureaus and setting them apart under an over-all bureau of Negro affairs," Cramer stated emphatically.

Advise Other Bureaus

"The committee may advise other bureaus when it has information on the matter under consideration. But it is the committee's conviction that colored persons should be considered as American citizens. To consider them as somebody different would be setting them apart—which the committee does not intend to do."

Asserting that the various reports which have placed Dr. MacLean as head of a new over-all bureau of colored affairs was "not from the committee," Cramer said that Dr. MacLean was chairman of the committee and, as far as he knew would remain chairman.

Walton Top Man

He had no comment on the report that Lester Walton was to be "top man in Washington" where colored interests are con-

Agencies Affected

Present government agencies which would be "transferred, eliminated or emasculated" by the Cramer-Barron-MacLean plan include the War Department, William H. Hastie; National Employment and Training Branch, WMB, Dr. Robert H. Weaver; NYA, Mrs. Mary Bethune; FWA, William Trent; U.S. Housing, Frank Horne; Defense Housing, Robert R. Taylor; Civilian Defense, Crystal Bird Fauset; Agriculture, Claude Barnett and F. D. Patterson.

Mrs. Bethune said she had no statement until she had an official report. Dr. Weaver and Miss Fauset told the AFRO they could not be expected to comment on rumors.

THE "LIBERAL" DAILY PRESS

MANY NEGROES feel that the daily press has become so liberal in its treatment of Negro news that there is little need for a Negro newspaper, especially in New York. Paced by PM, the Marshall Field tabloid, the daily press has been publishing an increasing amount of news about Negroes, and not all of this news has been about crimes committed by Negroes.

But if anyone feels that the daily press of New York will publish any news story about Negroes, they should consider the treatment of the mass meeting held by the March on Washington Committee in protest against the continued discrimination against and Jim-crowism of Negroes in both defense industries and in the armed forces of the nation.

Prior to the meeing, only one of the dailies would touch this story. Why? Simply because it was something the white people of New York and the country at large did not like. In the first place, the giant demonstration was sponsored and financed entirely by Negroes, and in the second place it mirrored the hypocrisy of white America in its boast that the United tSates is the world's outstanding exponent of democracy.

While the dailies were ignoring this mass protest on the part of its nearly half million Negroes, it made much of the fact that two white socialites had been assaulted and robbed by Negroes. The victims said that they were enroute to the Savoy Ballroom, where they liked to hear the music. Yet the assault occurred on West 134th street, near Lenox avenue. The papers failed to explain how the young men came to make the detour to 134th street address.

It's common knowledge among Negro residents of Harlem that many such white people come uptown for a "good time," get drunk and oft-times flash rolls of bills to impress their audiences that they can pay for what they want. In such an environment there usually are men, and sometimes women, who are looking for what they consider "suckers." While we offer no defense for such criminals, we think that the police and daily press are contributing to this type of crime by ignoring the fact that men in the armed forces and others of the white race who come to Harlem seeking Negro women are laying themselves open to attack of one kind or another.

Crusaders like Westbrook Pegler would render a far greater service by attacking this concerted attempt to make any Negro settlement of the city a "red light" district than by trying to ridicule the Negro press.

So long as the liberal daily press ignores and surpresses news about Negroes that puts the white race in an unfavorable light, just so long will the Negroes need their own organ of publicity, which must of necessity be a propaganda organ as well as a medium for the spreading of news.

"Land of The Noble Free"

By LAYLE LANE

THE FOLLOWING program of the March on Washington Movement with its plan of action is designed to secure full citizenship for loyal Negro Americans.

(Continued from last week)

4. We demand the abolition of segregation and discrimination in the Army, Marine Corps, Air Corps and all other branches of national defense.
5. We demand an end to discrimination in jobs and job training. Further, we demand that the F.E.P.C. be made a permament administration agency of the U.S. Government by legislative sanction and that it be given power to enforce its decisions based on its findings.

6. We demand that federal funds be withheld from any agency which practices discrimination in the use of such funds.
7. We demand a Negro cabinet member and representation of minority racial groups in the U.S. on all administrative agencies so that these groups may have recognition of their democratic right to participate in formulating policies.
8. We demand representation for the Negro and minority racial groups on all missions, political and technical, which will be sent to the peace conference so that the interests of all people everywhere may be fully recognized and justly provided for in the postwar settlement.

Nothing less than this program will afford Negroes their constitutional rights; nothing less will be an evidence of America's devotion to the democratic way of life.

PLAN OF ACTION FOR SECURING 8-POINT PROGRAM

1. Publicity in Negro press; similar publicity in white press under caption: Wake up, white America!

2. Post card, and letter campaign to the President, to all Governors and Congressmen to secure their support of the progam, committees to wait on each for the same purpose.

3. Campaign to introduce 8-point program into both white and Negro clubs, churches, fraternal organizations and especially labor unions to secure their endorsement and support.

4. Intensive drive during summer and fall to get out the Negro vote to make sure that we use our ballot as a weapon in our behalf.

5. Poll of all Congressional candidates on our 8-point program and publicity on their replies.

6. Cooperation with other organizations in instituting a suit to cut down the representation in Congress of states which disfranchise voters in accordance with the following section of the 14th amendment: "when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice President of the U.S., for Representatives in Congress, the Executive and Judicial officers of a state, or the members of the Legislature thereof is denied to any male inhabitant or in any way abridged....the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of male citizens bear to the whole number."

7. Campaign among Negro workers to acquaint them with the necessity of securing the technical training needed for defense jobs; where the training is not given to force the withholding of federal funds till training is made available to Negroes; to use collective bargaining, picketing and boycott of firms which continue to discriminate in hiring workers.

Powell Plans Congress Bid:

Capital March Packs Madison Sq. Garden

By LLEWELLYN RANSOM

Massing under the slogan Winning Democracy for the Negro Is Winning the War for Democracy, a militant throng of Negro and white New Yorkers and out of towners packed Madison Square Garden Tuesday night in one of the greatest mass demonstrations ever staged by Negroes. Sponsored by the March on Washington movement, the meeting attracted a broad cross section of the most liberal thinkers of the day. The program included mass singing, pageantry and militant speeches by an imposing array of guests. Early high point of the meeting was the announcement by Councilman Adam Clayton Powell jr, editor of PV, that he plans to run for Congress from New York. His announcement came on the heels of a stirring speech, extolling the "new Negro, new leadership and a new day."

Said Powell: "Protest is the essence of democracy, as long as that protest is non-violent, constructive and loyal. The only strides the Negro has made during the past years have been due to such protests. Because we protested, we opened up job opportunities by the hundreds in retail stores in Harlem, placed Negroes in drug stores, bread companies, beverage companies, distilleries and breweries, the World's Fair, Consolidated Edison and the New York Telephone Company.

"It was because we protested that Negro people in New York have a councilman in City Hall. These protests must be continued as a vital part in winning the war. If we had not protested we would have no general in the US army, no Negroes in the Sojourner Truth Houses and no medal for Dorie Miller.

"These protests have not only made democracy work, have not only converted untold thousands of whites to the cause of true democracy, but out of these protests there has evolved a new Negro. This new Negro has divorced himself from the pattern of yesterday's jimcro world and has forcibly allied himself with the new world of freedom. He demands new leadership, responsibility to the mass and, above all, honesty and courage.

"It is because of the new Negro that I am councilman of New York. It is because of the new Negro that I am editor and co-publisher of the new paper for this new Negro—The People's Voice. And it is because of the new Negro that I must, regardless of time and energy or previous commitments, run for the Congress of the United States, that he may have a national voice speaking from the national capital. It doesn't matter what ticket or what party—my people demand a forthright, militant, anti-Uncle Tom congressman."

Main address of the evening was delivered by A. Philip Randolph, father of the March on Washington movement, after messages by Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, Rev. S. T. Eldridge, Father John LaFarge, Dr. Channing H. Tobias, Frank Crosswaith, Walter White, Rev. D. W. Carrington, Lester Granger, Arthur Reid, Bernice McMillan and Milton P. Webster.

Randolph made a brilliant historical analysis and summary of the Negro's position in America—that of the least considered minority, hence the most responsible to carry on the great work of making democracy a reality. "That," he said, "has been the purpose and effect of the March on Washington."

Chairman Lawrence Manse Ervin introduced the speakers, Muriel Rahn had sung the Star Spangled Banner, and Rev. William Lloyd Imes had delivered the invocation.

Interspersed most effectively throughout the program were the music of Fess Finlay's band, Amanda Randolph's rendition of Brown Soldier Boy and the singing of Blanche K. Thomas' choral group. With passionate fervor, a cast of best known dramatic artists interpreted Dick Campbell's The Watchword Is Forward, a fiery dramatization of the Negro's role as an American pariah. Benediction was uttered by Rev. G. [illegible] Hinton.

Excerpts from speeches:

RANDOLPH: "The March on Washington Committee was careful to insist in its proposed executive order that it be not confined to Negroes alone, but to all minority groups. Negroes are the worst victims of discrimination and segregation by the government, defense industries and the armed forces, and it is the Negro who has the major responsibility to make the executive order and the Fair Employment Practice Committee work. This is one of the objectives of this great public meeting."

BETHUNE: "Not only are our enemies capitalizing on America's slightest failures but our allies and friends, in China and India, Africa and South America, are weighing America's sincerity in her own scales. Both our cheeks are now so blistered that they are too sensitive for further blows but, regardless of our trials at home, we must not for a moment lose sight of the fact that we must give our all-out, unreserved effort to winning the war."

LAFARGE: "What the religious minded men and women of Germany and the United States, be they Catholic, Protestant or Jew, defend against the infamy of hitler—these three-fold rights are what parents are bound in conscience to seek for our children and our children's children. They demand them for white children, for Negro children, for all children, since racial injustice knows no boundaries and, if tolerated for one race, will soon be administered to all."

CHICAGO DEFENDER
June 20, 1942

ST. LOUIS TO PROTEST DEAL GIVEN WORKERS

Plant Fires 150 Janitors; "March Committee" To Stage Parade

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—The firing of 150 Negro workers from the Small Arms Plant has resulted in plans made by the St. Louis March-On-Washington Committee to stage a mass protest parade on Saturday afternoon, June 20 at 2 o'clock. The action was decided upon at the June 13 meeting of the committee.

At the meeting it was told that there has previously existed at the plant a great disparity between employment of whites and Negroes. The total employment reveals approximately 20,000 whites and only 600 Negroes. The 150 discharged workers were janitors.

Present at the meeting and taking part in the discussions were A. Philip Randolph, New York president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and national director of the "March on Washington" Movement and Milton P. Webster of Chicago, a member of President Roosevelt's Fair Employment Practices Committee.

The headquarters of the St. Louis "March on Washington" committee have opened in the Finance building at Jefferson and Market streets. The office is open from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m.

Receptionists listen to the stories of those who feel that they have been discriminated against in their efforts to obtain employment in the scores of defense industries now booming in the Greater St. Louis area and which are advertising for help in the local papers quite freely.

Emphasis on the importance of the parade scheduled for Saturday was given in special letters sent to the pastors, officers and members of the churches of the city to be read at the services all day Sunday, June 14.

PM, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 17, 1942

Rally Fights Jim Crowism

Madison Square Garden was packed last night by a crowd of 17,000 attending a March-to-Washington rally to fight Jim Crowism.

They cheered an eight-point program that was offered to fight discrimination against Negroes and other minority groups.

The program:

¶ Abrogation of every law which makes a distinction in treatment between citizens, based on religion, creed, color or national origin.

¶ Legislation to reinforce the constitutional guarantee that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of the law, to end the disgrace of lynching.

¶ Enactment of the Pepper Poll Tax Bill, so that all barriers to the exercise of the right to vote are eliminated.

¶ Abolition of segregation and discrimination in the armed forces.

¶ Withholding of Federal funds from any agency which discriminates in the use of the funds.

¶ An end to discrimination in jobs and job training.

¶ Representation of Negro and other minority groups on administrative agencies.

¶ Representation for these groups on all missions, political and technical, which will be sent to the peace conference.

Walter White, secretary of the National Assn. of Colored People, advocated that FDR call a conference to formulate a Pacific Charter. He asked that Chiang Kai-shek, Ghandi, Nehru and Adad, of India, President Manuel Quezon, of the Philippines, and Haile Selassie be invited.

"This charter," White said, "would provide for equality for hundreds of millions of colored people throughout the world."

NEW YORK AGE
June 27, 1942

About—

People And Things

By EBENEZER RAY

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH, founder of the March on Washington Movement and leader of the recent Negro mass meeting at Madison Square Garden, was to have delivered a speech on the latter occasion. For this Mr. Randolph had prepared a 21-page manuscript, but exigency of time prevented his delivering the address. It is almost impossible for one to express Mr. Randolph's thoughts in any brief space, but for this column, however, we bring you excerpts from the closing pages of the manuscript. It was sub-headed:

To President Roosevelt

We hail President Roosevelt, the world's greatest living statesman and champion of democracy! May your strength and courage and will and devotion to the ideals of democracy, liberty justice and peace never fail you! We believe we are upholding your hand when we fight for the Four Freedoms for Negroes in our land.

Mr. President, the greatest tragedy of America in this war was not the treachery of the Japanese at Pearl Harbor. It is America's profession of fighting for democracy while denying it to her own citizens because of color. America's guns will only be invincible when her democratic soul is invulnerable.

Ebenezer Ray

We call upon the President for a conference. The Negro people's representatives wish to talk over with you the problems of discrimination in the Army, Air Corps, United States Marines, defense industry and the Government, that trouble us. Negroes have no contact with you as labor, business, the Jewish and Catholic groups, have. We want some systematic contact with the President and the Presidential system.

The Negro people call upon the President, Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces of the United States, to issue an Executive Order of War Proclamation abolishing all forms of discriminations, segregation and Jim Crowism on account of race, color, religion or national origin in the Army, Navy, Air Corps, U.S. Marines, defense industry and all departments of the Government, city, state and federal, not only for the sake of the Negro people, but also for the cause of national unity and the victory of the United Nations over the Axis powers.

We call upon the President, by war proclamation, to abolish the poll tax and white primaries on the grounds that they are subversive of national unity and the ideals of democracy for which we profess to be fighting.

It is well nigh axiomatic that America can only win the war for democracy if democracy is won for America. Albeit, democracy cannot be won for America unless democracy is indivisible in application to all citizens alike, regardless of race, color, religion or national origin.

If it is a jewel of wisdom of Holy Writ to ask; "How can you love God whom you have not seen and hate your brother whom you have seen?" it is also a jewel of wisdom of our democratic life to ask the question: "How can we fight for democracy in Burma, a country we have not seen, when we don't have democracy in Birmingham, a city we have seen? How can we carry the Four Freedoms to Manila in the Pacific, when we don't have the Four Freedoms in Mississippi, in the Atlantic?

Now the individibility of democracy is the negation of a dual standard of democracy. We cannot have one standard of democracy . . . for white America and another standard for black America. A country with a dual standard of democracy, justice and freedom contains the seeds of its own destruction.

Until the Four Fredoms are enjoyed by all Americans, irrespective of race, color, religion, or national origin, America is not a democracy and only a democracy can win this war for democracy. Only a democracy can win the peace for democracy. Only democracy can keep the peace for a democracy. America cannot assume the moral and spiritual leadership of world democracy until it becomes a democracy in fact and in truth; and America cannot become a true democracy until it eliminates and prohibits discriminations against any of its citizens because of race, color, religion, or national origin

Therefore, America's becoming a moral and spiritual arsenal of democracy is as fundamental and necessary, and perhaps more so, to winning of this war as is her becoming a material arsenal of democracy

Speaking of "Liberty for Boys in the Army," Mr. Randolph says:

We are determined that this war shall not end and our boys now going to Burma, Australia, to give their lives for democracy, return and not find democracy at home. It is our responsibility to them that they shall not have fought in vain for a democracy which they cannot enjoy in their own country.

We do not propose to permit this war to end and find Negroes in the same fix they were in when it began. We are not going to fight for democracy and then live under mob rule, lynching, the poll tax, white primaries and Jim Crow. We are not going to continue to tolerate the injustices meted out to Odell Waller and the Scottsboro boys

NEGROES ENTITLED TO JOBS!

Is March on Washington Best Way to Get Them!

By JOSEPH D. SCHOLTZ
Regional Director of Civilian Defense

Negroes, aroused by discrimination that deprives them of jobs in the midst of the war industrial boom are again talking of a march on Washington to impress their grievances on Congress and the nation.

The grievance march they had arranged a year ago was cancelled by administration request, and thereafter President Roosevelt issued his anti-discrimination Executive Order 8802, which was widely acclaimed among Negro leaders as a Second Emancipation Proclamation. But Order 8802 did not stop discrimination, in the South or in the North, nor did an anti-discrimination clause written by the government into all war contracts awarded after June 25, 1941.

Disillusioned, Negroes have become increasingly restless—increasingly insistent that, as Americans, they be counted as part of the nation's manpower and recognized as citizens entitled to equality in job opportunities. This restlessness had been reported from time to time from various industrial centers. That it is national and serious is disclosed in a detailed report just made after a governmental survey.

The mistake that may be made is misintepretation of the Negroes' quite justified protest as a demonstration or indication of disloyalty, possibly as a response to Japanese agitation for alliance of the "dark races." Such an interpretation would be mischievous error and a grave injustice to millions of unswervingly loyal dark-skinned American citizens, whose major complaint is merely that they are not permitted to do more for their country in wartime production.

The proposed march to Washington should not be necessary to awaken all interests involved in the Negro employment controversy to the injustice of discrimination and the economic waste of rejecting available manpower in a period of labor scarcity.

Statistics from the recent governmental survey disclose that in the past year Negroes have made advances in employment, despite strong opposition. Undoubtedly they will make more advances as opposition further weakens under stresses of the war effort.

This appears to be a time for calm discussion, and for governmental firmness in behalf of an eagerly loyal racial minority—a time when more is likely to be gained through negotiation by wise Negro leadership than by spectacular demonstration.

Editor's Note: The question in the above article, written by one for whom I have a high esteem, is in need of clarification, to that end I take this privilege to answer: I shall begin first asking the question, what is wrong about the proposed March on Washington? Is it not true that every one else marches on Washington when they want something. Is Washington not the Negro's governmental headquarters as well as other citizens? Don't we pay taxes like other citizens to maintain our seat of government? Have we not died on the battlefield and are still dying that our nation and its Capitol may be preserved? Then why not march on what is ours in quest of what should be ours.

If the march is wrong then the cause which gave rise to the proposed march is wrong. If two wrongs fail to make a right, then let those of the first part correct the first wrong.

Negroes comprising one-tenth of the population of the nation are now fighting and dying on the battlefields, those at home are buying bonds and stamps, sacrificing like all other Americans, doing their bit to help win this war, but dispite their patroitism and loyalty, an unscrupolous element continue to sabotage our rights. We are subjects of brutality, mistreatment, and denial.

What about the Sikeston Lynching; the Waller case; Fort Bragg killing; Fort Dix killing; Alexander, La., killing and beating; The Tuskegee icident; Hempstead riots; the Sojourner Truth riots; the denial of the right to vote in the south; the denial of the right to work when qualified in the skill bracket of Defense Industry without a fight; and hundreds of other such cases that have been tactfully suppressed. What has been the redress for these unAmerican acts?

It can scarcely believed that all this meets the approval of perhaps the greatest president of all times. It stands to reason that the Congress of this country "Of the people, by the people, for the people," cannot believe in Democracy or christianty; cannot believe in the "Four Freedoms" for all citizens of the United States far less for the world, and at the same time stand by with out doing their bit to have democracy function here at home in the same manner they advocate for the rest ofthe world.

I say the Negro is not disillusioned, he has merely awakened, and too a man, believes that the time has come when he must exert eternal vigilance plus action. Therefore what could be a better way to exhibit our grievance than a march to the very seat of our government, thereby commanding true recognition as Americans. A right to live free of fear, a right to work on any job for which his ability fits, YES and a right to fight as a loyal American in his chosen branch of armed service.

SATURDAY, JUNE 20, 1942 — The Pittsburgh Courier

150 Race Workers Fired, Plan Protest Parade In St. Louis Saturday

ST. LOUIS, June 18—Drastic and determined action has been decided upon by the St. Louis March on Washington Committee in the form of a Mass Protest Parade and Demonstration at the Small Arms Plant, Goodfellow and Bircher, at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, June 20, following a meeting of the executive committee of the Local March on Washington committee, Saturday afternoon, June 13.

The protest, one of the most unusual ever planned, comes as the result of the discharge of nearly 150 race workers, all janitors, at the plant, which is stated to be one of the largest in the world.

At the meeting, the great disparity in employment, in view of President Roosevelt's ultimatum to Defense industries, many months ago, was cited when it was stated that there have been, at the best, some 600 Negro employes at the Small Arms Plant in contrast to the something like 20,000 whites employed, and that many in this pitiably small number were being given the axe during the past week.

Present at the meeting and taking part in the discussions were A. Philip Randolph, New York, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and national director of the March on Washington Movement, and Milton P. Webster of Chicago, a member of President Roosevelt's Fair Employment Practices Committee.

SATURDAY, JUNE 27, 1942

STAGES PROTEST DIM-OUT

NEW YORK CITY, June 25—It was a few minutes before nine o'clock Tuesday evening and normally Harlem would have been preparing to wake up into the care-free community it is of an evening. An evening of the warm sounds of children's voices and laughter in the city streets, the pounding rhythm of the bar and grill nikelodeons and the strolling couples.

The children were in the streets, but there were very few older folks on the the stoops and sidewalks and doorsteps. They weren't many couples either. Harlem was pretty nearly a deserted village.

ALL LIGHTS BLACKED OUT

There was a reason. Downtown in the spacious Madison Square Garden 20,000 Negroes were renewing their faith in American patriotism. 20,000 militant Negroes were cheering and applauding their leaders as those leaders enunciated that there could be no victory for the United Nations without the darker races.

Downtown, Negroes were unified behind the campaign for a "Double-V"

But, back uptown, was so quiet, so deserted.

Then nine o'clock struck on a hundred clocks. A thousand watches ticked off the hour and as the hour came, lights blinked off here and there. Window lamps were extinguished, store-front lights blinked into darkness and before you could say "Jack Robinson", a velvet clock of blackness covered Harlem. It started at 110th street and swept past radiant 125th street all the way to 165th. It began at Madison and covered the community as far as Amsterdam.

"Wottinell goes on", a white cab driver asked a passerby. "There's no blackout tonight".

He was wrong. There was a blackout—a dramatic one. Negroes who were as willing as other citizens to black out for Mayor LaGuardia for an air raid test, were just as willing to black out for A. Philip Randolph for a test of how well democracy could work.

There were a few lights here and there to mar it, but mostly Harlem was dark. It was a pretty powerful demonstration that Negroes don't want a black-out of civil liberties in the land of the free and the home of the brave.

AMSTERDAM NEW YORK — Saturday, June 27, 1942

We Hope, We Hope!

Powell To Make Bid For Congress; Crosswaith Put On Housing Body

NEW YORK.—Two important public announcements were made in the course of the huge demonstration of Negro indignation held in Madison Square Garden Tuesday night under the sponsorship of the "March on Washington" movement.

At the conclusion of his address the Rev. Adam Powell Jr., member of the city council, said that he would be a candidate for congress from the twenty-first Congressional district. Although this is a congressional year, the councilman did not specifically state that he was making the bid now.

The reapportionment bill passed by the state legislature in the final days of the session does not become effective until 1944 at which time the opportunity of Harlem sending a representative to Washington is practically assured. This is attributed to the manner in which the district has been carved.

The other announcement made was that of the appointment of Frank R. Crosswaith to membership on the New York City Housing authority. Mayor F. H. LaGuardia's telegram to A. Philip Randolph carried the announcement as follows:

"Regret as I have already written you that official duties will keep me from attending your meeting. I need not attend a meeting to explain my views and sentiments on the subject of discussion. I have asked Frank Crosswaith to attend for me. I have appointed him a member of the N. Y. C. Housing authority in the place that you were regretfully not able to take because of your multitudinous activities. I will swear in Mr. Crosswaith sometime next week. He will speak this evening as a member of my administration."

The new appointee was sworn in at City hall on last Thursday. He expressed appreciation for the appointment and "welcomed" the opportunity to render service to the tenants of the City of New York." Particularly is this true, he said, with regard to the Negro tenants "who are daily being crucified on the altar of high rent by heartless landlords."

During his speech he pointed out that in his first appearance in a courtroom it was before a judge on the complaint of being an "agitating tenant" fighting to organize other tenants. This was 24 years ago.

Crosswaith is an organizer for the International Garment Workers union, a national director of the "March on Washington" movement, and chairman of the Negro Labor committee. Born in St. Croix, Virgin Islands, he came to this country in his teens. He attended and later taught in the Rand School of Social Science. He has been a Socialist and for a number of years was that party's candidate for many important public offices.

MURIEL RAHN, brilliant young concert soprano, singing the National Anthem as 20,000 Negroes stand at attention in huge Madison Square Garden during monster mass meeting of March-on-Washington Movement in New York City last Tuesday night. Friday night found her giving concert for army and navy men at famous Freedom House just off Fifth Avenue.

BIRMINGHAM JOURNAL RAPS FEP HEARINGS

Magazine Claims Probes 'Race Trials;' Calls For Fight

BIRMINGHAM. — Characterizing the Co-FEP hearings as "race trials" and a "carnival of reform," "ALABAM," the new magazine of the Deep South published at Birmingham, in issues of June 12 and June 19 called on all of its ilk to fight this ominous encroachment on the sacred principles of their homeland."

Daily newspapers [illegible] the Birmingham News and [illegible] Herald, the Montgomery Advertiser and the Anniston Star had spoken favorably of the hearings in editorials.

Styling the hearings "inquisitions" the magazine feared that they would "jeopardize admittedly stable race relations among workers here." Unions in telegrams to the committee expressed friendly feelings and congratulated them on their decision to come to Birmingham.

In the June 19 issue Alabam made the discovery that the Southern Negro Youth conference had assisted in working up the complaints and evidence to be presented to the committee.

THE AFRO-AMERICAN, JUNE 27,

Free Us Now, Not after the War - White

NAACP Calls for Pacific Charter That Will Include All Colored Races

Adam Powell and Frank Crosswaith Speak at Madison Square Garden Rally

NEW YORK—"Six months after Paerl Harbor and Singapore, discrimination based on skin color is as firmly rooted in the thinking of the white world as it ever was," Walter White, secretary of the NAACP, stated at a mass meeting last week at Madison Square Garden, sponsored by the March-on-Washington movement.

Walter White

In pointing out that the colored nations of the world are not yet convinced that America and Great Britain mean to discard their imperialistic policies if victorious in the present war, the NAACP official added:

President Urged to Act

"What is desperately needed is forthright action by President Roosevelt in co-operation with the leaders of the colored world—Chiang Kai-shek of China; Gandhi, Nehru and Azab of India; Manuel Quezon of the Philippines, and Haile Selassie of Ethiopia—to draft and put into execution a Pacific Charter which, with the Atlantic Charter of Roosevelt and Churchill, will form a world charter of freedom."

Fascist-Minded Elements

In our own country, Mr. White said, action on the problems of colored citizens is determined "almost completely by the most fascist-minded elements in the deepest and dark South."

He added: "This element—which practiced Nazism long before Hitler was born—almost completely dominates our federal government. Our President, our army, our navy, and our government generally are afraid to challenge or to offend these Southern demagogues by eliminating the color line."

South Exercises Control

The NAACP executor cited the "control" being exercised by Southerners over the government, and named several of them who head Congressional committees.

He concluded with a plea to the United Nations to consider colored people on an equal basis with others during the war, not promising that this will be the case when it ends. He said:

Proof Is Asked

"Prove to us, United Nations, and prove to the colored peoples of Asia, Africa and the Caribbean that you are not hypocrites when you say this is a war for freedom.

"Prove it to us and we will [illegible] and will

NEW YORK MASSES PROTEST I

AIR PLAINTS AT RECORD GARDEN MEET

Other Cities To Follow With Gatherings Of Like Nature

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

NEW YORK. — (ANP) — Black America proclaimed to the nation in no uncertain terms that no longer is it willing to suffer and sacrifice itself under the lash of race prejudice in a land supposedly fighting for the freedom of all men. To this end, a conference with President Roosevelt on specific objectives was sought for the very near future.

Such action took place here last week when nearly 20,000 Negroes and a scattering of whites crowded into Madison Square Garden arena in midtown New York last Tuesday night and gave full endorsement to this attitude through their vociferous responses to remarks of the blue ribbon panel of speakers.

Difficulties cropped up from the very beginning when there was reluctance on the part of the management to permit use of the garden where Joe Louis, the heavyweight champion, twice fought for the armed forces. Refusal of permits of one kind or another were confronted, and outright appeals to the leadership not to go through were made. The large marquee over the entrance to the sports arena carried not a single mention of the event going on inside although such announcement is customary.

Through the media of oratory, music and drama, the complaint of the Negro was bared. With the lone exception of Father John LaFarge, S. J., associated editor of America, the national Catholic weekly, there were no whites on the program. Alfred Baker Lewis, noted liberal, was the only white face to be seen on the speaker's rostrum. This arrangement was not accidental but rather by design. The intention was early expressed that the meeting should be kept as completely Negro in makeup as reasonably possible.

Beginning with an address by Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, of the NYA, the meeting ran four hours and terminated about midnight with the announcement by A. Philip Randolph, national director of the "March on Washington" Movement and president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, that Chicago, Washington and other large metropolitan areas would have their opportunity to speak. The failure of Mr. Randolph to deliver his prepared speech was the only casualty of the evening. This was caused by the shortness of time.

A burst of applause greeted the Rev. Adam Clayton Powell Jr., city councilman, who declared that "American fascism marks the wolf of Ku Klux Klan hypocrisy behind the sheep's clothing of psued patriotism." He spoke praisingly of the virtues of "protest" and demanded for the Negro full inclusion in the war effort as a basis for complete cooperation to defeat the Axis.

Father LaFarge highlighted the importance of the home circle of every American citizen in the present day discussion of the various fronts of the war.

Dr. Channing H. Tobias, director, colored division, Y.M.C.A., saw as the purpose of the meeting the desire to insist upon "a single standard" of citizenship, to insist on integration in the armed forces and in war industries, and to remind the nation that the denial of full citizenship rights is the real threat to successful prosecution of the war effort.

A telegram from Mayor F. H. La

Labor's Front ..... By J. Robert Smith

THE March-on-Washington Movement's mass meeting at Madison Square Garden Tuesday night was a colossal success, marred in no manner by any incident that would tend to cast any finger of doubt on the sincerity of the program which was mainly to prove that Negroes can be rallied together on a serious matter affecting their entire welfare; that 20,000 of them can meet and orderly discuss their program without a single blemish of disturbance; that Negroes are dissatisfied with the treatment meted out to them, and finally, that they are prepared to see that something be done to remedy an ungodly situation.

Mr. Smith

The audience consisted of Negroes from all walks of life with a preponderance of the working class. There were not many of the "cocktail class" and of the Negro social register, whatever that is. Since it was a gathering of serious-minded people where the usual frills and toasts common to the lighter side of life had no place on the program, that would more or less account for their absence. However, it made very little difference especially when the salvation of the race is greatly dependent upon the man and woman who toil for an "honest" living, and that element was very much there.

A Vivid Picture

The speakers and the skit gave a vivid picture of the many hardships that confront the Negro in this crisis. The moral behind the entire program, namely that the Negro must, like Jews and Catholics, unite to make an effort to take an interest in and fight his own problems, was masterfully staged. It did not give the impression, as some fifth columnists predicted, that it was a Negro nationalist movement. It certainly went on record as strongly supporting the war effort, but it was also very emphatic that democracy must begin here at home. It further disproved the position taken by many Negro and white opportunists that the Negro must have the guidance of white and interracial groups in order that any move he makes should be a success.

The March-on-Washington Movement made history last Tuesday and left no loophole for anti-Negro propaganda.

It was interesting to watch from the sidelines how the fifth columnists tried to sabotage the main objective of the mass meeting. Scores of pamphlets, hot and red hot, were distributed outside of the Garden, some tending to blast A. Philip Randolph, leader of the movement, as being a stooge of the Socialist Party, and others advising the Negro how he should go about fighting his battle. They were all disregarded!

The shrewdest politician, who failed in his effort as far as the Negro press and public were concerned, was the Little Flower. His subtle propaganda to have directed a telegram to Randolph at the Garden announcing the appointment of Frank R. Crosswaith to the New York Housing Authority and stating his inability to attend, was smooth, but the colored newshounds were on to him. Randolph was informed of the trick, and was big and fearless enough to permit the Little Flower to have his ineffective play. It was known that there was very much concern about the wire being delivered and a report on it made direct from the meeting. The dailies were waiting for the announcement for their leads and headlines. It was almost time for the papers to go to bed.

Got Left

The announcement played perfectly and conveniently into the hands of the daily reporters who were patiently waiting for some disruption that would be blown up to over-shadow the main purpose of the meeting, but the boys were left holding the bag. There was no inkling of such a thing, so the announcement to them was apropos. Evidence of that fact was the name of Crosswaith being played up in the dailies, and the meeting submerged.

Another thing, is there any truth in the news that a certain Government set-up in Washington ordered the press to play down the story? Even our friend, PM, said almost nothing. And we wonder what will be the reaction of Bourbon Washington when the secret recordings that were made at the Garden are audibly revealed! And what happened to the radio?

Was Too Big

The rally was too big, its conduct too orderly and its objective too well accomplished for the saboteurs to have gained a toe-hold for confusion and misrepresentation.

I have covered many white local and national conventions around the country and I still have to report one so dignified and constructive as that of the March-on-Washington Movement last Tuesday night. Negroes really made history.

A burst of applause greeted the Rev. Adam Clayton Powell Jr., city councilman, who declared that "American fascism marks the wolf of Ku Klux Klan hypocrisy behind the sheep's clothing of psued patriotism." He spoke praisingly of the virtues of "protest" and demanded for the Negro full inclusion in the war effort as a basis for complete cooperation to defeat the Axis.

Father LaFarge highlighted the importance of the home circle of every American citizen in the present day discussion of the various fronts of the war.

Dr. Channing H. Tobias, director, colored division, Y.M.C.A., saw as the purpose of the meeting the desire to insist upon "a single standard" of citizenship, to insist on integration in the armed forces and in war industries, and to remind the nation that the denial of full citizenship rights is the real threat to successful prosecution of the war effort.

A telegram from Mayor F. H. LaGuardia explained his inability to be present and was also the occasion for the announcement that he had appointed Frank R. Crosswaith.

The doubt in the minds of the colored peoples of the world as to the sincerity of the allies in their promise of liberation after victory was expressed by Walter White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. He denounced "southern demagogues" in congress who hold key positions on important committees and whose influence the President is "afraid to challenge."

Lester B. Granger, executive director, National Urban League, acknowledged the logical differences that might exist among the various speakers but took comfort in the fact that all were in agreement that democracy must not be allowed to die abroad, and certainly not at home.

Others who spoke briefly were Rev. S. T. Eldridge, president, Baptist Ministers' alliance of Greater New York and vicinity; Rev. W. O. Carrington, president of A. E. E. Zion Ministers alliance of Greater New York; Rev. Thomas S. Harten, and Arthur Reed, organizer of a 125th street job campaign.

have—our share of

Mrs. Bethune's Address

While colored soldiers are protecting the flag of their country on the other side, "we want our flag to protect us at home," declared Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune. "America needs today, as never before, your fighting hearts, your courage, your refusal to surrender or retreat in the face of discouraging odds," she added. "Colored citizens are seeking full freedom, justice, respect, and opportunity.

Mrs. Bethune

No Longer Begging

"You are no longer begging—you are insisting, because you realize that America, the only country you know and the country you love, cannot be preserved nine-tenths free and one-tenth oppressed."

The NYA divisional director approved the adoption of a militant attitude by colored Americans, but cautioned that it be "kept within the bounds of law and order."

"We have grown tired of turning the other cheek," she declared. "Both our cheeks are now so blistered they are too sensitive for further blows."

Dr. Ervin Presides

The tempo of the mass demonstration was set by Dr. Lawrence M. Ervin, chairman of the meeting, who said: "We want to have an assurance that this country gives to us all the rights, privileges, protection and emoluments accorded to any other of its citizens. In other words, we want to belong to this democracy."

Dr. Ervin is also president of the New York division of the March-on-Washington Movement, which sponsored the meeting as the first of a series to be held in other sections of the country.

A. Clayton Powell Speaks

The meeting increased in fervor when the Rev. A. Clayton Powell, Jr., member of New York's city council, stated that colored people "are demanding a full share in dealing death blows to yesterday's world of jim crow. We will not rest until democracy is granted to us on a full and equal basis with all other people," he declared.

Rev. Powell

Frank Crosswaith

Frank R. Crosswaith, veteran labor leader, emphasized the advent of a new leadership from the masses when he stated that the meeting was a "funeral" for "the type of black man that America too long has known."

AN EDITORIAL

It's a War, Mr. Nelson

The reader will remember that there was an Adm. Husband E. Kimmel in charge of the Navy and a Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short in charge of the Army at Pearl Harbor when the Japanese struck.

He will also remember that 10 days after Pearl Harbor these two sleeping beauties were removed from their commands.

If we handled our Army and Navy the way we handle our dollar-a-year men, Kimmel would have been sent to help the Russian Navy defend Sevastopol and Short would probably have been promoted to field marshal.

As for Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts, who investigated the Pearl Harbor affair—he'd be denounced as a cantankerous, prying, suspicious fellow, and removed from the bench.

* * *

One of Donald M. Nelson's most important tasks as head of the War Production Board (WPB) was to convert civilian industries to the making of war materials.

He assigned that part of his job to James Stewart Knowlson. As his principal assistant, Knowlson picked Philip D. Reed.

It was their job to stop the manufacture of radios and refrigerators and other articles of this kind as quickly as possible.

Some people were dubious of Nelson's choice of help. Knowlson is chairman of the board of Stewart-Warner and Reed is chairman of the board of General Electric. Both manufacture radios and refrigerators.

No one questioned their patriotism, as no one questioned the patriotism of Kimmel and Short. But it was felt that Knowlson and Reed would be only human if they hesitated to crack down on their own businesses.

* * *

Reed appointed a man named Robert R. Guthrie, also a businessman, and also a dollar-a-year man, as his assistant.

Guthrie was a different kind of a businessman and a different kind of a dollar-a-year man. He was a working director and a large stockholder in White Sewing Machine Co. when Reed made him assistant chief of the Bureau of Industry Branches.

Guthrie startled his superiors by selling his stock in White Sewing Machine and giving up his directorship because the sewing-machine industry was one of the industries he would have to shut down and convert to war.

When Guthrie announced this to John Lord O'Brian, chief counsel of the WPB, and to Reed, O'Brian said:

"You're certainly a rare bird."

Reed said he thought Guthrie's action was "silly."

Guthrie went on being "silly." He thought radios and refrigerators ought to have been converted to war more quickly. When he persisted, he was demoted and when he continued to persist, his powers were cut down again. When he couldn't stand it any longer, Guthrie resigned and said in public what he had been saying in private about the continuance of business-as-usual at the WPB.

When the Truman Committee investigated, at Nelson's request, it found that Knowlson and Reed were wrong and that Guthrie was right and that Guthrie's resignation and his public protest accomplished some good.

"The pall of inaction," the Truman Committee reported, "was lifted three days after Mr. Guthrie's resignation. . . ."

* * *

Industry cannot be converted by the turning of a switch, and one way to understand the loss of Tobruk in June is to go back to this loss of time in March and April.

One would think that Nelson would dismiss the men the Truman Committee had found guilty of slowing up the war effort and recall Guthrie, the man who woke the country up to what was going on.

Hadn't Nelson said:

"Any lagging in the conversion effort may lead directly to the death of American fighting men."

* * *

What is Guthrie's reward for shaking the dollar-a-year men out of their lethargy? Is he recalled to Washington and given another assignment in the WPB?

Guthrie was and Guthrie remains on the blacklist of the WPB. He is the boy who told tales out of school. He is the bounder who forgot his old school tie. He may look like a patriot to you and me, but to the dollar-a-year men he is the man who ratted on his own crowd.

What is the reward for Reed and his allies in WPB and the War Dept. for allowing aluminum to go into radios when it should have been going into planes?

Nelson is sending Reed to England as his representative on the British end of the Combined Anglo-American Production and Resources Board.

What is Knowlson's reward for letting GM's Frigidaire and General Electric and Stewart-Warner go on making refrigerators while their war orders for gun mounts and cartridge cases and bomb-rack assemblies waited?

Knowlson has just been promoted to the job of Nelson's deputy on the Combined Anglo-American Production and Resources Board.

* * *

Is the Combined Anglo-American Production and Resources Board so unimportant that we can afford to man it with those who have failed to make good elsewhere?

Isn't there an urgent need for coordinating the production and resources of Britain and America? Hasn't Libya demonstrated how poorly the Board has been doing its job? Is it likely that it will be strengthened by the addition of Knowlsons and Reeds?

Is this war so trivial an affair that we can afford to give new commands, higher commands, to the Kimmels and Shorts of industry after every one of their Pearl Harbors?

* * *

Mr. Nelson, this is a war.—I. F. STONE.

Japanese Infiltration

PITTSBURGH, July 7.—Eleven employes of a concessionaire who peddled cane pennants labed "Made in Japan" at the Army War Show were fined yesterday for selling without a permit. The U. S. Army Intelligence investigated the affair after charges had been made that it was a plot "to confuse the American people." Show directors announced that purchasers could have their money back.

McNutt Lists 138 'Critical' Jobs Meriting Draft Deferments

PM's Bureau

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Here's a list of 138 trades and skills defined yesterday by Paul V. McNutt of the War Man Power Commission as "critical shortage occupations" in which workers are eligible for draft deferment.

McNutt said that deferment, not guaranteed, would be considered by local draft boards "to the extent required for the maintenance of essential activities." The most serious shortages, he said, exist in the metal-working and industrial-machinery trades and in occupations essential to shipbuilding, aircraft, tool and ordnance manufacture.

The list of potential deferment occupations follows:

A

Acetylene burner operator; airplane inspectors and woodworkers; armature winder, all-around; asbestos worker, general; assembler (firearms); assembler (ship and boatbuilding and repair).

B

Babbitter, bearing; batten maker (ship and boatbuilding and repair); boatbuilders, steel and wood; boilermakers and helpers, assembly and erection; boiler-shop mechanic; boiler-up (ship and boatbuilding and repair); boring-machine operator, automatic; boring-mill operator; bucker-up (construction, ship and boatbuilding and repair); burrer, hand.

C

Carpenter, ship centerless-grinder operator; chassis assembler, radio; chipper, metal; coil assembler, electric; coil winder, production; coremaker, all-around; crane rigger (ship and boatbuilding and repair); cylindrical-grinder operator.

D

Detail assembler; die maker; die maker, jewelry; die maker, textile printing; drop-hammer operator, skilled; dynamometer tester, motor.

E

Electrical assembler, testers (power equipment and radio); electricians airplane and ship; engine, lathe operator, external-grinder operator production.

F

Fabric worker, aircraft; filer, machine; final assembler, aircraft; fit-up man (boiler-making); flanging-press operator; floor assembler (machine shop); foreman (machine shop); foreman (nonferrous metal alloys and products); foreman (ship and boatbuilding and repair); forging-press operator; form builder; fox-lathe operator.

G

Gear-generator operator, all-around; gear-hobber operator, all-around; gear-shaper operator, all-around; gear-tooth grinder; Gisholt-lathe operator.

H - I

Hammersmith; heat treater; honing-machine operator; horizontal-boring-and-milling-machine operator; inspector (machine shop); inspector (optical goods); inspector, chief, casting; instrument makers (electrical, mechanical and optical); internal-grinder operator.

J - K - L

Jig-boring-machine operator; job setter (machine shop); joiner (ship building and repair); Keller-machine operator; lapping-machine operator; lay-out man (boilermaking, foundry and ship and boatbuilding); lens grinders and polishers; loftsman.

M - N

Machinists (all-around, bench, marine, marine gas-engine); milling-machine operator; molder, floor; mounter, eyeglass lens, nitrating-acid mixer.

O - P

Ordnanceman; oxyacetylene-cutting-machine operator; painters (boat, finish and rough); parachute packer; patternmaker, metal; pipe fitter; planner operator, metal; plate hanger (ship and boatbuilding and repair); precision-lens grinder; profiling-machine operator, skilled; punch-press operator, automatic.

R

Radial-drill-press operator; radio equipment assembler, special; riveters (aircraft, hydraulic, pneumatic, skilled); rivet-heater; rotary-surface-grinder operator; rotor-core assembler.

S

Screw-machine operator, semiautomatic; sectional-hydraulic-press operator; sheet-metal worker helper; ship fitter; ship rigger; skeleton assembler; skin man (aircraft); speed-lathe operator; steel-plate calker; still operator; straightener, hand; straightening-press operator; structural-steel lay-out man; surface-grinder operator, multiskilled.

T

Tank tester (ship and boatbuilding and repair); thread grinder (machine tool); thread-milling-machine operator; tool-grinder operator; tool hardeners, inspectors, makers; tubing-machine operator; turret-lathe operator; turret-lathe operator, automatic.

V - W - Y

Vertical-turret-lathe operator; welder, arc; welder, butt; welder, flash; wood calker, and yardman (ship and boatbuilding and repair).

Professor Fights Fish in Primary

Special Correspondence

ALBANY, July 7.—Rep. Hamilton Fish, isolationist friend of George Sylvester Viereck, Nazi propagandist, faces stiff competition in his campaign for re-election this year.

Assemblyman Emerson Fite, Vassar college professor, yesterday filed petitions to oppose Fish for the Republican designation in next month's primary elections.

And before midnight tonight, when the deadline for filing designations here for the primaries is reached, two other GOP candidates may enter the race—Augustus Bennet and State Sen. Allan A. Ryan, grandson of the late Thomas Fortune Ryan..

Ferd Hoyt, another aspirant for the seat held by Fish, is expected to file petitions as a Democratic candidate today.

Held as Saboteur

BALTIMORE, July 7.—Leo Nicholas Geller, a guard at the Bendix Co. plant here, was arrested yesterday on a charge of sabotage at a California aircraft factory where he formerly worked. FBI [illegible] said Geller, the day after Pearl Harbor, filed bolts of a large patrol bomber under construction for the Navy at the Consolidated Aircraft plant in San Diego.

Garden Rally, Drew 20,000, Protests Aired

The beginning of a nation-wide drive to kill jimcro in America and to enlist one million members in the March on Washington Movement got off to an excellent start last week when some 20,000 Negroes packed Madison Square Garden in the greatest mass demonstration ever staged by Negroes.

Each speaker on the program and the timely playlet by Dick Campbell, The Watchword Is Forward, expressed the immediate need to bury home-made jimcrowism in the same grave the nation and allied forces are digging for hitler's nazism, mussolini's fascism and hirohito's militarism.

Among important items not mentioned in PV's last edition was the adoption of a petition for a mixed army of Negroes and whites, and announcement of the appointment of Frank R. Crosswaith, labor leader and columnist, to the NYC housing authority.

The most important outgrowth of the rally was the adoption of an eight-point program to fight discrimination against Negroes and other minority groups. It follows:

- repeal of every law which makes a distinction in treatment based on religion, creed, color or national origin,
- elimination of segregation and discrimination in the armed forces,
- legislation to strengthen the constitutional guarantee that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of the law, to end the disgrace of lynching,
- passage of the Pepper Poll Tax Bill, so that all barriers to the use of the right to vote are eliminated,
- withholding of federal funds from any agency which discriminates in the use of the funds,
- elimination of discrimination in jobs and job training,
- representation of Negro and other minority groups on administrative agencies, and
- representation for these groups on all missions, political and technical, which will be sent to the peace conference.

AMSTERDAM
New York Star-News
Saturday, June 27, 1942

"Uncle Tom's" Funeral

FRANK CROSSWAITH, keynoting the March-on-Washington Movement rally at the Garden last week, declared: "This is the first funeral I ever attended in Madison Square Garden. This is a funeral because, like every other black man, woman and and child here tonight, I am here to bury in the grave of forgetfulness the type of black man that America too long has known."

Mr. Crosswaith thus intimated that one of the main objectives in leadership strategy today is to rid the racial front of "Uncle Toms" and "Aunt Dinahs" so that the traditional, unholy business of selling us out and for a price, will be eliminated. Excellent. There is nothing more despicable, yet tragic, than the Negro with the bouncy legs, especially around the knees, whose head bobs up and down and whose teeth are perennially skinned at the slightest glance of a white person. He stands (or has stood) upon the threshold and with the two-faced cunning of centuries of experience inbred in him, waved to the rest of us to "keep quiet"; telling us "the time ain't ripe;" "you just got to stand white fo'ks; dey ain't all bad," etc.

Some day somebody is going to write a book on the art of Uncle Tomming. It has been an art all these years since slavery and a very profitable art to quite a number of us whom we all know. There was an excuse for a bouncy-legged "Uncle Tom" in the days of slavery when the "uncles" and the "aunts" got better food from the big house for their children in the plantation cabins by bowing and scraping and showing their teeth. But today—we don't want it if it has to come through an almost complete renunciation of manhood. We are at the stage today when "Uncle Toms" and "Aunt Dinahs" should be hunted out, ostracized and made into examples. We don't need them any more. The 20,000 who attended the New York "funeral" should be duplicated in every town, village and hamlet where we live throughout the length and breadth of this land until all are eliminated. Then, we can march on.

The Watchtower

By Roy Wilkins

BY this time the agents of various Government departments have studied reports on the mass meeting held June 16 at Madison Square Garden by the March - on - Washington Movement. If their reporters were careful workers, the Government men must know that the high point for the huge crowd of 18,000 persons was the little speech of Canada Lee, during the playlet staged by Dick Campbell, in a skit at the draft board.

Mr. Wilkins

Lee, taking the part of a man called up and classified as 1-A, said something like this: "I want you to know I ain't afraid. I don't mind fighting. I'll fight Hitler, Mussolini, and the Japs all at the same time, but I'm telling you I'll give those crackers down South the same damn medicine!"

Line Hits Jackpot

That was the line that "broke it up." The crescendo of applause was greater than at any time during the meeting. Screams, cheers, and hand-clapping made the Garden a bedlam. One woman yelled down from the balcony: "Say that again!" The crowd was generous with applause for all speakers, but that punch line spoken by Canada Lee hit the jackpot so far as emotional reaction was concerned.

The Government would do well to ask itself: "Why?"

The point is that our people, although keenly aware of all other injustices, and justifiably resentful because of them, still feel most strongly about the mistreatment of their soldiers in uniform. They hate the Red Cross Jim Crow blood bank. They hate restrictions in employment in wartime industries. They don't like the segregation in the army and navy with all the evils segregation always brings with it. They resent the restrictions placed upon our nurses and doctors. They hate the system which permits congressmen and senators from the South to dictate to the Federal Government and to spread the race-hating philosophy of Tunica, Miss., for example, throughout the U. S. Government.

But they are most bitter over the insults and actual physical assaults upon their men in uniform. They feel that if a man is good enough to be called to fight and possibly die for his country, then he is too good to be kicked around by either civilians or other soldiers.

If the Government would learn this lesson quickly it would save itself a lot of headaches and in one fell swoop would do much to lift the morale of its greatest minority group.

The Government could tell the little two-by-four towns in Dixie that there is a war on, that every man and woman is needed if we are to catch up to our enemies and win the victory, that neither local nor sectional race prejudices can be tolerated, that every man in the nation's uniform must have the same treatment, regardless of color. But the Government is timid. Government departments are so honeycombed with unreconstructed Southern whites that any liberal policy dies a-borning. The Negro has friends in every department, including war and navy. There are men in the war and navy departments who favor no segregation and full, equal rights. But these men are in the minority, and are not in positions powerful enough to launch their ideas.

There was no disloyalty at the Garden meeting. Probably 90 percent of the audience is buying War Bonds or otherwise supporting the war effort. Many had brothers, cousins, nephews and sons in the army or navy. But their self-respect demanded they register protest against "phony" and hypocritical democracy. This they did, emphatically. Will the Government heed them?

More Than 10,000 In Chicago At March On Washington Meeting

CHICAGO, Ill.—More than 10,000 Negroes jammed the Coliseum Friday night to participate in the March on Washington Movement's mass meeting—the second in a series of nation-wide meetings called to focuss attention on discriminatory practices against Negroes by the government and private industry.

Attorney Charles W. Burton, regional director of the movement, presided at the meeting, the highlight of which was the dramatization of the playlet, "The Watchword Is Forward," written and directed by Dick Campbell, of New York City, and acted by local talent.

Speakers at the rally included A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and national director of the March On Washington Movement; Walter White, executive secretary of the NAACP; Milton P. Webster and Alderman Earl Dickerson, members of the FEPC, and Dr. A. B. Terrell, president of the Chicago Physicians' Association.

A Militant Paper

PEOPLE'S
The VOICE
AMERICA'S GREATEST NEGRO NEWSPAPER

Serving All People

VOL. 1, NO. 20 NEW YORK CITY, JUNE 27, 1942 10¢

Mass Meeting at Madison Square Garden

This immense crowd swarmed into the Garden last Tuesday nite at the call of the March on Washington Movement, in protest over neglect of the Negro in war industry, and to formulate a program to combat native fascism. It was the largest such meeting ever held in New York, and the most orderly. Speakers were outstanding leaders of the community, the crowd listened intently, passed resolutions, were glad they attended. Other fotos, story on page 2 (M. Smith foto).

HIGHLIGHTS, FOOTNOTES ON NEW YORK'S PROTEST RALLY

NEW YORK CITY, June 25—Every single New York daily newspaper, except the New York Times, turned a cold shoulder to advance publicity for the tremendous "March-On-Washington" rally at the Madison Square Garden here Tuesday night. The fact that 25,000 New Yorkers turned out, in spite of this, is an unusual tribute to the pulling power, co-operation of the Negro allies with the Committee and a credit to the press relations and publicity job done by the Amsterdam Star-News' J. Robert Smith.

* * * * * *

Councilman Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., took the opportunity to announce to the vast audience formally his intention to seek Congressional election, confirming what has long been buzzed on Rumor Row.. The shrewd clergyman-publisher did not, however, allow his PEOPLE'S VOICE to be scooped on the story. As he leaving the meeting, going uptown saw "PV" on the newsstands with the announcement streamered on the front page.

* * * * * *

Back to the subject of publicity and the meeting, the Communist Daily Worker took a strange stand, went overboard to let its readers know it did not approve A. Philip Randolph or "March-On-Washington's" efforts. Sunday's Worker carried a piece authored by Ben Davis Jr., in which the latter attacked Randolph as a friend of "defeatists," stated it could not "sanction this meeting without reservation." Alibi for the opposition was the contention that the Randolph committee's publicity, literature did not take a definite stand against the Axis and for participation in the war effort of the United Nations. This was, of course, untrue.

In Tuesday's edition of the D. W., Davis accused Randolph of "playing ball" with Norman Thomas and the Socialist Party, specifically intimating Randolph was "working with the Socialist Party to exploit the just demands of the Negro people against this war and against the best interests of Negroes.

* * * * * *

"March On Washington's" Rally, though deadly in earnest, was not without its humorous notes, as witness. . . Rev. S. T. Eldridge (Prexy, Baptist Ministers' Alliance of Greater New York and Vicinity): "After this world conflict is over, we want to be a part of this democracy. We don't want to be like a label on a bottle—all around it, but not in it." . . Dr. Channing H. Tobias (Director Colored Division, YMCA): "After this Niagara of eloquence which has preceded me, the only degree of distinction left for me is to confine myself to the time limit." (P.S.—He did. Each speaker was to have a five-minute period. Dr. Tobias finished in four minutes, 30 seconds flat.) . . Rev. W. O. Carrington (President, AME Zion Ministers' Alliance of Greater New York) in his definition of an orator: "A fellow who instead of saying that two plus two equals four, states: 'When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for a person to take the figure two and to add to that figure a sum of like denomination, I believe that I can say without fear of reasonable contradition, that the result of this process will ultimately and inevitably result in the figure four.'" . . . Illustrating the power of unity . . "Anybody might tackle a single hornet, but everybody will have a healthy respect for a hornet's nest." . . Dryest humor of all issued from Urban League's Lester Granger. . . Most spontaneous laughter was caused by Dick Campbell's especially-penned sketch, "The Watchword Is Forward," showing as it did the human foibles and weaknesses of "handerkchief head" folk of the race, and the embarrassment and discomfort of whites attempting evasively to explain discrimination policies against Negroes.

* * * * * *

To Mary McLeod Bethune go orchids for most ringing appeal of evening . . to Rev. Powell for most militant, fighting speech . . to Rev. John LaFarge (associate editor, America) for most dispassionate, searching analysis . . to Frank R. Crosswaith (chairman, Negro Labor Committee) for most passionate, moving plea . . to Walter White for most eloquent, informed diagnosis. . . to Lester Granger for most matter of fact, down-to-earth treatment . . to the Rev. Thomas S. Harten for showmanship in handling fund-raising, his wit, eloquence inspiring more than 100 folk in audience to give five-dollar bills over and above regular collection . . to Committee's National Director, A. Philip Randolph, the greatest spontaneous applause, lasting fully three minutes, only then ceasing at his plea of the lateness of the hour.

* * * * * *

ORATORICAL GEMS:

We are not against this war. We are too intelligent to be against it. To what avail would it be for us to gain democracy and to lose our country?" (Dr. Lawrence Ervin, meeting chairman) . . . "I want all America to understand that we will never strike our flag. On the contrary, we will eternally protect it with all that we have in courage, in faith, in endurance. At the same time, we want our flag to protect us—at home in our right to produce and live, abroad in our willingness to sacrifice and die." (Mary McLeod Bethune) . . . "To those who say 'The Negro is disloyal'—to them I say, 'we are the most loyal group in America,' and it is because of that loyalty that we are demanding a full share of this democracy, for if we did not love democracy, we would have none of it and we would not be gathered here tonight. We would say to hell with the war.'" (Adam Powell) . . . "We are here to repudiate the traitorous elements within our country which regard more highly their prejudices than an ultimate United Nations Victory. We are here to remind our government that it is the denial of rights, rather than the protest against that denial, which is the true threat to democracy and to constitutional government." (Dr. Channing Tobias) . . "Here we stand at last, crying to our native land, give us liberty or give us death." . . (Frank Crosswaith) . . "Even if Japan surrendered unconditionally tomorrow, her capitulation would provide only a brief interlude of peace unless the white world believes and acts without reservation to make certain that discrimination between peoples because of their race, creed or color be abolished." (Walter White) . . "This meeting was not called to embarrass the President or our Government. The fact of the matter is, they have embarrassed themselves and we are trying to help them find a way out." (Rev. Eldridge) . . "Yes, we love peace. But there can be no peace in America, until there is peace for the black man throughout the length and breadth of the nation—peace for every American citizen from the lowliest to the most high." . . "Tanks, guns, ships, planes, submarines must be built, and black workers stand ready to do their full share. Don't let color prejudice defeat America." . . (Arthur Reed) . . "This meeting tonight is evidence of the fact that

FEP Hearings

DIXIE DIE-HARDS THREATEN BUT F. D. ROOSEVELT MUST STAND FIRM.

BY HORACE R. CAYTON

THE Fair Employment Practices Committee is holding hearings in Birmingham, Alabama and the South doesn't like it. So I'm going to give a word of advice to the Administration about the whole thing.

In the first place, I wouldn't take the ranting and raving of some of the die-hard Southerners too seriously. It's true that they are having plenty to say and are bringing a lot of pressure on the administration. Just recently I read the leading editorial in a magazine called "Alabama" — "The News Magazine of the Deep South." The forecoming hearings were discussed and the population incited to riot in the following terms:

Mr. Cayton

"Of all the brazen halo-wearing missionaries of New Deal Socialism who have sought to reconstruct a sinning South, the representatives and members of the Committee on Fair Employment Practice, soon to conduct their race trials in Birmingham, constitute the gravest threat yet to the time-honored right of Southerners to direct the social development of their own region . . . But now as never before, when the South is running its vast industrial machinery at top war speed, the disturbance of the delicate relationships of the races is likely to cause the greatest possible amount of harm. Even the most starry-eyed Washington dreamers should have the sanity to desist from juggling his dynamite in one of the nation's principal war production powerhouses. If any matter should be left in status quo for the duration, certainly the Southern race problem should.

It is pointless to indicate that this attitude is the very thing which will lose the war for us; that this mentality will prevent us from fully utilizing our manpower, from unifying our people or from setting an example for our non-white allies, the Chinese, the Indians and all the others. That southern gentry is incapable of understanding even their own self-interest, much less the wider implications of the necessity of moulding a new democratic world.

DIXIE DOES A LOT OF TALKING

But the administration should not take this too seriously. The South has been fighting labor and racial reforms from the inception of the Roosevelt Administration, and has greeted each bit of progressive legislation with threats of dire consequences. During the NRA, Southern manufacturers revolted against the steel code because the North-South wage differential of 15 cents an hour for unskilled labor was not considered enough. They did a lot of talking about subnormal Negro labor as a justification to establish even a greater differential. One manufacturer stated: "Sherman's march to the sea was no more destructive than the NRA is going to be in the South. Before it is over, we may have secession." The Administration put through the code and there was no secession and the South had to take it and like it.

AN even more successful attack on the "right of the South to treat their racial problem according to their own likes" was the complete abolishment of the North-South wage differential by John L. Lewis in the coal mining industry. Again the South hollered, said what it was going to do, but the big fellow didn't back down and now Negroes in the South receive the same basis of pay for mining coal as do white workers in the North.

LEWIS STILL DANGEROUS

This all leads up to a couple of things I would like to impress on the Administration in connection with the Fair Employment Committee hearings. The South didn't secede during the NRA period, although the Administration did back down to an extent and didn't try to abolish the differentials. John L. Lewis, with his bluff and bluster, completely wiped out the differentials in coal. This is the point: If the Administration has the courage to face this problem out—the problem of forcing the integration of Negroes into industry throughout the South—the South will take it. If they vacillate one single bit and give away as they did in the NRA period, they will lose the confidence of the working population of that entire section and of Negroes throughout the country. Then I would predict that John L. Lewis will come along and do just as he did in coal. They say that Lewis is a dangerous man and that the Administration is afraid of him. If they don't act more courageously now than they did during the NRA, they will be delivering the leadership of Negroes (and for that matter, poor whites) right into his hands.

THERE is going on at this time an internal struggle for power, which will break out into the open after, or perhaps even during, the war. Lewis seems to be on one side and the Administration, at least the liberal elements of the Administration, on the other. The working population of the South, especially the Negro population, will follow the side that gets them the most concessions. If the administration does not show courage in this situation and eventually abolish the poll tax so that Congress is not dominated by reactionary Southerners, then Lewis will lead a mass movement which will do just that.

ROOSEVELT MUST ACT

The Fair Employment Committee hearings in Birmingham is just one indication that the lines are being drawn. Roosevelt will have to stop acting like a politician and act like a statesman, inside of the United States, and give the franchise to those who are on his side and on the side of democracy before someone else recruits them for the side of reaction.

would have none of it and we would not be gathered here tonight. We would say to hell with the war.'" (Adam Powell) . . . "We are here to repudiate the traitorous elements within our country which regard more highly their prejudices than an ultimate United Nations Victory. We are here to remind our government that it is the denial of rights, rather than the protest against that denial, which is the true threat to democracy and to constitutional government." (Dr. Channing Tobias) . . "Here we stand at last, crying to our native land, give us liberty or give us death." . . (Frank Crosswaith) . . "Even if Japan surrendered unconditionally tomorrow, her capitulation would provide only a brief interlude of peace unless the white world believes and acts without reservation to make certain that discrimination between peoples because of their race, creed or color be abolished." (Walter White) . . "This meeting was not called to embarrass the President or our Government. The fact of the matter is, they have embarrassed themselves and we are trying to help them find a way out." (Rev. Eldridge) . . "Yes, we love peace. But there can be no peace in America, until there is peace for the black man throughout the length and breadth of the nation—peace for every American citizen from the lowliest to the most high." . . "Tanks, guns, ships, planes, submarines must be built, and black workers stand ready to do their full share. Don't let color prejudice defeat America." . . (Arthur Reed) . . "This meeting tonight is evidence of the fact that Negroes are determined to bury Jim-Crow in the same grave with Hitler's Nazism, Mussolini's Fascism and Hirohito's militarism." . .(A. Philip Randolph).

Most significant, shortest speech was from National Baptist Convention, President D. V. Jemison. Describing a recent trip in Southern States, Jemison recounted that he entered a jim-crow train and was asked by the steward what he wanted.

"I told him I wanted the same thing the other people wanted." Jemison declared to his audience, "and he gave it to me." On this, the Baptist leader ended his minute speech. The audience got the point and cheered wildly.

* * * * * *

Better than a thousand speeches, more dramatic was Dick Campbell's sketch, graphically picturing Negroes being denied opportunity by naval recruiting officers, draft board officials, unions and hospitals (in regard Negro doctors, nurses). Modest Canada Lee in the role of a draftee was eloquent. . . Outstanding musical offerings were Babe Wallace's singing of his own "Song of Dorie Miller," Blanche Thomas' Choral Group's rendition of "We Are Americans Too" and Amanda Randolph's "Brown Soldier Boy." Fess Finlay's orchestra turned in a neat job.

WHITE CHURCHMEN 'ALL OUT' ON

FEDERAL COUNCIL URGES ACTION, NOW

National Body Directs "Message To Our Fellow-Christians," Urging Action Towards Real Christian Brotherhood.

NEW YORK, June 25—The executive committee of the Federal Council of Churches in a "Message to Our Fellow-Christians" today urged churches to set their own houses in order in the matter of race discrimination, saying:

"Out of the churches of America must come leaders who . . . vigorously oppose all policies and practices of racial discrimination in the armed forces; (who) work constructively for the relieving of the acute white-Negro tensions growing up in camp and war industrial communities; (and who) as employers or workers give strong support to President Roosevelt's executive order against discrimination in industry. . . ."

The message, which was directed to the members of the 24 national denominations which comprise the Federal Council, declared that "Racial discriminations against Negroes and other minority groups has persisted in our communities partly because it has not been eliminated from our churches. . . . The achievement of the Christian ideal of democracy in our nation falls short because of the lack of clearer demonstration in our churches. Men and women of all races should be warmly welcomed among their members.

"The experience of our missionaries . . . has shown conclusively that we need to achieve justice and fellowship among racial groups in our own land in order to show the sincerity of our belief in the Gospel we carry to the peoples of other lands."

CHICAGO EXPECTS 20,000 AT PROTEST MEET FRIDAY

CHICAGO, Ill., June 25—(ANP)—A protest mass meeting against Negro injustices, sponsored by the March-on-Washington Committee, is expetced to bring 20,000 Negroes to the Coliseum on Friday night with A. Philip Randolph, Walter White and Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune listed as principal speakers.

The meeting specifically will foment sentiment against the killing of Negro soldiers, discrimination in the army and navy, the Sojourner Truth riots, separation of blood by the Red Cross and discrimination in defense industries.

A blackout in the Southside community between 9 and 10 p. m. has been asked.

WHAT NOW?

Last week the March on Washington Movement staged its widely advertised mass meeting in New York's Madison Square Garden.

Eighteen thousand Negroes and some whites were in attendance to listen to five hours of speech making and musical renditions.

It was an impressive gathering, this massing of eighteen thousand Negroes with but a single thought: i. e., the ending of discrimination against Negroes in the war effort.

The meeting has become history, the newspaper clippings have been collected, the assorted orators and singers have departed to their respective homes, and the lengthy resolutions have been sent to high officials who are now aware (not for the first time!) that Negroes are dissatisfied with a jim crow status.

Well, what now? Eighteen thousand Negroes have cheered the obvious, but what are they going to do about it? What have the leaders of the movement told them to do about it? We do not know and we doubt that anybody else knows.

No definite move or series of moves have been suggested or advocated.

All we have so far are ear-splitting generalities and blowsy platitudes. We do not have a program. Nor does there exist any machinery for carrying out a program if there were one.

It is one thing to get a mass of people together and steam them up to go places, but it is quite another thing to organize them effectively to execute a prescribed program.

We believe that much can be accomplished by organizing the masses of American Negroes IF the organizers possess vision, courage and especially administrative ability.

Negro mass movements are nothing new in American history nor was the New York meeting unique. The masses have been periodically organized only to be led astray by earnest, well-meaning but incompetent people.

The nearest approach we have had to an intelligently administered mass movement is the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People with its 70,000 dues-paying members, its well-written propaganda, its trained staff and its army of volunteer local officers.

Neither the March on Washington Movement nor the National Negro Congress has offered any improvement over the NAACP, although admittedly there is tremendous room for improvement in the program, tactics and administration of the latter organization. Indeed, the younger movements seem to be covering the same ground no less ineptly and are consequently unnecessary.

And so, having staged another mass meeting, what now? Is there going to be any new action? If so, what kind, where and when?

DISCRIMINATION

TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND STRONG . . . AT NEW YORK CITY'S MADISON SQUARE GARDEN . . . HEAR SPEAKERS

TAKE MILITANT STAND FOR DEMOCRACY

Twenty-five thousand Negro Americans participated in the gigantic "March on Washington" movement at Madison Square Garden in New York last Tuesday night, as many of the nation's most militant speakers denounced the Axis and the foes of liberty within our home borders. From this colorful, historic exhibition of unity came an epochal eight-point program designed to improve the conditions of 13,000,000 citizens of the United States. Pictured above are some of the brilliant leaders whose declarations brought thunderous ovations from the inspired audience. Left to right: A. Philip Randolph, the man behind the gun, national director of the "March on Washington Movement". Here is the mother of imprisoned Odell Waller, condemned sharecropper, who pleaded: "My boy is a good boy, please save him; he's all I've got." Walter White, executive secretary of the NAACP, who declared "Democracy belongs to everyone." Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, shown here with Mrs. A. Philip Randolph, Bessye Bearden and Francis Williams of the Price Administrator's Office. "A new Negro has arisen in America," Dr. Bethune said. Rev. W. O. Carrington, president of the AME Zion Ministers' Alliance of New York, was also one of the speakers. Councilman Adam Powell and Frank Crosswaith, two of New York's most prominent leaders, thrilled the audience with their speeches. Last, but not least, Lester B. Granger, Urban League director, who spoke brilliantly.

Lower photo is a general view of the gigantic mass meeting. People from all walks of life attended and participated.—Photos by Rowe and International News.

The New York Age
SATURDAY, JUNE 27, 1942

COMMUNISM AND THE NEGRO

THOSE who remember the bitter fights led by the National Negro Congress, the International Labor Defense, the New York Daily Worker and other Communist-supported organizations in behalf of the Scottsboro boys, the share-croppers, the WPAers and Home Reliefers—the ignorant, disfranchised and oppressed peoples of this country—during the depression days must be mystified at the present attitude of the Communist Party and its supporters.

Since Russia entered the war on the side of the Allies, they have taken the position that winning the war, and opening a second European front to help the Russians beat Germany are the paramount issues and the discussion of any domestic issues at this time is disrupting to the war unity so necessary to victory.

Instead of leading the fight against discrimination and jim-crowism of the Negro, Ben Davis jr., of the Daily Worker and Dr. Max Yergan of the National Negro Congress and others of kindred thought are now political bedfellows with the white South and its leaders who insist that now's the time to keep silent on these issues.

The National Negro Congresss instead of trying to aid the March On Wahsington Committe in its protest mass meeting at Madison Square Garden spent several hundred dollars advertising in the Negro press in what was construed by many as an attempt to sabotage this meeting. The ad intimated that this demand for full and equal participation in the war effort on the part of the of the Negro was hampering the war effort warned:

> "Those who would use selfishly the just demands of the Negro people to obstruct America's war program are not friends of the Negro. They work for Hitler."

And in The Sunday Worker of June 14, Ben Davis used two full columns in an open letter to A. Philip Randolph to explain why The Worker could not give publicity to the Madison Square Garden mass meeting. The burden of his argument was the same as that of Westbrook Pegler—that agitation for democracy at home at this time is hampering the war effort—but Pegler was more candid and terse than our Communist friends.

It's a strange sight to see known Communists who led a wave of strikes under the banner of the CIO, prior to June 1941, and who have been the severest critics of American democracy, now prate about their patriotism and love American institutions, including race prejudice as practiced in this country.

The Negro can less afford to keep silent at this time than at any time in his history. For the record shows that we only get what we are willing to fight and die for. At the same time we are fighting to repel an invading foe, we must insist that our neighbors here at home realize and recognize us as and give us all the rights and privileges of Americans too.

FEATURE PAGE

Southern Rule of Nation Is Absolute

Dixie Solons Dominate U. S. Committee Chairmanships

Walter White Touches on Issue in Speech Tuesday at Madison Square Garden Rally

By JULIUS J. ADAMS

In his reference to the control of Congress, and therefore, to a great extent, the affairs of the Government by southerners through important committee chairmanships, Walter White, U. A. A. C. P. executive, obviously didn't have time to tell the whole story during his speech before the 20,000 people attending the March-on-Washington rally at Madison Square Garden June 16.

Mr. White

To the uninitiated, Mr. White's remarks might not have been too significant, but to those who understand the organization of Congress, and its operations, it will readily be comprehended what he was driving at. However, some additional information concerning the makeup of the Congress and of the men who dominate the committees through chairmanships should serve to enlarge the picture Mr. White was seeking to portray.

Many Fascists Here

Said he, "The plain, bitter truth is that the thinking and action on the problem of race in our country are determined almost completely by the most Fascist-minded elements in the deepest and darkest South.

"This element," he declared, "which practiced Naziism long before Hitler was born—almost completely dominates our Federal Government. Our President, our Army, our Navy, our Government generally are afraid to challenge or to offend these southern demogogues by eliminating the color line.

"Disfranchisement," he continued, "of black people has inevitably brought about the disfranchisement of an overwhelming majority of the white people of the deep South. Thus, today, the South with only a little over one-fourth of the population of the United States, holds more than 50 percent of the chairmanships in the United States House of Representatives and Senate. They have achieved this," he pointed out, "under a Democratic Administration through the ease by which demagogues can get themselves elected and re-elected with ridiculous ease through the rotten borough system of the South."

Mr. White then went on to invite attention to the list of Senate chairman of important committees.

"Chairman of the Appropriations Committee," he noted, "is Carter Glass of Virginia."

But before presenting the whole picture, it should be pointed out here that chairmanships of committees are attained through seniority, with the majority party in the House or Senate, electing the ranking member on the committee as its chairman. The ranking member of the minority party retains his seniority, and when and if the pendulum swings would be entitled to the chairmanship, and Senator Glass, if he is re-elected would thus become the ranking minority member.

Mr. White pointed to the Agriculture Committee, naming "Cotton Ed" Smith of South Carolina as its chairman. Second ranking member on the Democratic side is Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, while the ranking member on the Republican side (who, in fact, is listed as an Independent) is Nebraska's George W. Norris.

Speaking of Senator Thomas Connally of Texas, chairman of the powerful and extremely important Foreign Relations Committee, Mr. White said, "Tom Connally of Texas who Life Magazine recently said would be the most influential of Americans at the peace conference in troweling out the new world. I invite you to read," he said, "his bitterly sardonic comments on Negroes during the seven weeks' filibuster which he led against the anti-lynching bill in 1937. Having read them, I invite you to consider the kind of world Connally would trowel out with his attitude of contempt for colored people."

Fish Is Big Issue

Directly behind Senator Connally as number two Democrat on the enormously important Foreign Relations Committee is Senator Walter F. George of Georgia, while the ranking Republican member is Hiram W. Johnson of California.

With all the discussion centering around Republican Hamilton Fish of New York, it might be somewhat enlightening to reveal that Representative Fish is the ranking Republican member of the Foreign Relations Committee in the House, and will become chairman in the event the Republicans win out in November and Fish is re-elected. Because of his views on the international situation, Fish, as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee might prove tremendously embarrassing to the Administration's war and post-war programs—that is, in case Mr. Fish is the archi- [illegible] he is said to be. In [illegible] circles, [illegible] with the [illegible] that Representative Fish would also take over the chairmanship of the powerful Rules Committee of which he is ranking member is believed in some circles to have played a prominent, yet subtle part in the campaign to defeat Representative Fish. The Foreign Relations Committee's present chairman is Sol Bloom of New York, while the Rules Committee is headed by Representative Adolph J. Sabath of Illinois, dean of the House, who was elected to Congress in 1906 and has served continuously ever since. The Rules Committee in the Senate is bossed by Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, with McKellar of Tennessee, the second in command. Michigan's veteran, Arthur H. Vandenberg is the ranking Republican.

Referring to the committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, which he said is becoming increasingly important because of the global nature of the war and post-war world, Mr. White stated. "it is headed by Senator Tydings the United States, holds more than 50 percent of the chairmanships in the United States House of Representatives and Senate. They have achieved this," he pointed out, "under a Democratic Administration through the ease by which demagogues can get themselves elected and re-elected with ridiculous ease through the rotten borough system of the South."

Mr. White then went on to invite attention to the list of Senate chairman of important committees.

"Chairman of the Appropriations Committee," he noted, "is Carter Glass of Virginia."

But before presenting the whole picture, it should be pointed out here that chairmanships of committees are attained through seniority, with the majority party in the House or Senate, electing the ranking member on the committee as its chairman. The ranking member of the minority party retains his seniority, and when and if the pendulum swings and his party becomes the majority, the House or Senate is thus organized by the new majority party and the individual who was the ranking member of the minority party becomes the chairman of the committee in the new Congress.

Glass Is Head Man

Now in the case of Chairman Glass of the Appropriations Committee the second ranking Democratic member is Senator Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee, who, in the present Congress, would become chairman in case of the death of Senator Glass, or would be entitled to the chairmanship in the next Congress if Senator Glass were defeated, but the Democrats elected a majority.

On the other hand, if the Republicans won the Senate at the next election, Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota, the present ranking Republican member and the other that Representative Fish would also take over the chairmanship of the powerful Rules Committee of which he is ranking member is believed in some circles to have played a prominent, yet subtle part in the campaign to defeat Representative Fish. The Foreign Relations Committee's present chairman is Sol Bloom of New York, while the Rules Committee is headed by Representative Adolph J. Sabath of Illinois, dean of the House, who was elected to Congress in 1906 and has served continuously ever since. The Rules Committee in the Senate is bossed by Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, with McKellar of Tennessee, the second in command. Michigan's veteran, Arthur H. Vandenberg is the ranking Republican.

Referring to the committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, which he said is becoming increasingly important because of the global nature of the war and post-war world, Mr. White stated, "it is headed by Senator Tydings of Maryland." His second in command is Senator Carl Hayden of Arizona; the ranking Republican member is Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota.

Stifled Anti-Lynching Bill

Mr. White made special reference to the chairman of the Judiciary Committee in the House of Representatives where he said anti-lynching bills have been tied up for year. Of Chairman Hatton Sumners of Texas he said, "openly boasted he would never permit even a hearing on any anti-lynching bill as long as he was chairman, and today his committee refuses to report out the anti-poll tax bill."

New York's Emanuel Celler is next up behind Representative Sumners, and ranking Republican is the Kansan, U. S. Guyer, who proposed an anti-poll tax bill, only to have it pigeon-hole for good by Sumners and his crowd in committee. Incidentally, an anti-poll tax measure sponsored by Senator Claude Pepper of Florida is now pending in Congress.

"In the light of the control of our government by these men who spit upon democracy wherever the Negro is involved," Mr. White said, "is there any wonder that meetings like this are

(Continued on Page 24)

NEW YORK SEABOARD
Pittsburgh Courier

PITTSBURGH, PA., SATURDAY, JUNE 27, 1942 PRICE TEN CENTS

25,000 [redacted]roval

As Speak[redacted] Democracy"

"VICTORY ABROAD, AT HOME" IS THEME

By ALFRED A. DUCKETT
Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK CITY, June 25—Forming a wildly-cheering cross-section which cut boldly across political, denominational and social lines, a vast audience, 25,000 strong, jammed to seating capacity this city's huge Madison Square Garden Tuesday night, to voice lusty approval of A. Philip Randolph's "March-On-Washington" Movement and to participate in the greatest race meeting in this city's history.

To the accompaniment of a shattering applause from 25,000 pairs of hands, cries from 25,000 lungs, the nation's most militant Negro leaders expounded the central theme that Negro America's destiny lies in defeat of the Axis, but that Negro Americans are dedicated to the task also of crushing the foes of liberty within the confines of their native land.

A NEW NEGRO HAS RISEN

Keynoting the rally, Chairman Lawrence Ervin told the audience in the flag-bedecked Garden that "peaceful assembly" is the inalienable right of citizens who desire "changes that may affect our social, political and economic welfare."

Issuing a ringing challenge to the nation, Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, Director of Youth, Negro Division of the National Youth Administration, heralded the birth of "the new Negro".

"A new Negro has arisen in America," Dr. Bethune declared.

(Continued on Page 4, Col. 3)

(Continued from Page 1)

"He is here in Madison Square Garden tonight. He is neither young nor old—he is just new. You are seeking full freedom, justice, respect and opportunity. You are militant in spirit. You are unwilling to accept less than the Constitution guarantees to you as citizens of the world's greatest democracy. You are no longer begging—you are insisting, because you realize that America, the only country you know and the country you love, cannot be preserved nine-tenths free and one-tenth oppressed."

His fiery oratory punctuated by waves of applause, roars of approval, Councilman-Publisher Adam C. Powell, Jr., painted a brutally clear picture of a world at the crossroads. One way leads into the old world of poverty, crime and hatred, jim crow, oppression and injustice, the Councilman warned. The other road leads upward into a new world of justice for all, equal rights, civil liberties, proper housing and equal economic opportunity, he added.

PEACE MAY BE LOST

Dramatically upholding the loyalty of "black Americans from black Crispus Attucks shedding his blood on Boston Commons, to black Dorie Miller, manning a machine gun at Pearl Harbor," Powell served notice on the government of the United States that:

"The war can be won without us, but unless we are included, the peace will most certainly be lost."

Introduced as "the only white man who readily accepted an invitation to speak out at this meeting of many invited," the Rev. John La Farge, S. J., Associate Editor of the Catholic Publication, "America", told his listeners that "the supreme front of all, where ultimately the world's business will be decided, is the home circle of each and every American citizen".

ONE STANDARD OF CITIZENSHIP

"What wins or loses there, will clamp the final decision upon the battles of the globe," the priest contended. La Farge branded as calumnies and legends the theory that Negroes cannot work side by side in factory and shipyard with those of other races, without arousing friction and antagonism.

Main purpose of the meeting, Dr. Channing Tobias, YMCA Senior Work Secretary, told the meeting was to inform the government that the Negro insists upon a "single standard" of citizenship. "No double standard ever won a war," Dr. Tobias declared.

Eloquently presented by Chairman Ervin as "the unchallenged spokesman for 13,000,000 Americans," the NAACP's militant Walter White bluntly stated that "the thousand million brown and yellow peoples of the Orient and the 155 millions of black people in Africa just don't believe that the white world believes that the age of imperialism is ended".

WANT PACIFIC CHARTER

It will take the extension of the Atlantic Charter to the Pacific and the full integration of Negroes in the war effort and civilian activity plus the abolition of jim crow to convince the darker races of the good faith of the United Nations, White counselled. The N. A. A. C. P. executive advocated "forthright action by President Roosevelt in cooperation with the leaders of the colored world—Chiang Kai-shek of China, Gandhi, Nehru and Azab of India; Manual Quezon of the Philippines and Haile Selassie of Ethiopia—to draft a Pacific Charter which, put into execution with the Atlantic Charter will form a world charter of freedom."

White quoted names and committees to illustrate his argument that the "prejudice-ridden" South is in the saddle of the Senate and Representatives. Grim boos greeted his allusion to George of Georgia, Connally of Texas and many other legislators known for their anti-Negro attitudes.

With an eloquence unsurpassed by any speaker of the evening, labor leader Frank Crosswaith threw down the gauntlet to American democracy.

"Flesh of my flesh, blood of my blood, bone of my bone, I have a son who lives tonight somewhere on a European front", Crosswaith cried. "I cannot see him and he cannot see me. I cannot hear him, nor can he hear my voice. He is ready to fight, he is willing to die for democracy and I am resigned to have it so. But I believe that he is willing to die because he has faith that his sacrifice may make it possible for his children, his race, his nation to enjoy the light of a new and all-encompassing freedom."

RANDOLPH PRESENTED

"The biggest job before Americans today is to help America find her soul," the Rev. W. O. Carrington, president of the AMEZ Ministers' Alliance of New York state.

"The Negro has no other flag, has no other land, has no other love than America," Lester Granger, Urban League Executive Director, pointed out.

High point in the meeting was the presentation of the genius behind the scenes of the Movement. Hailed as "the greatest leader since Douglass," A. Philip Randolph talked briefly, simply.

The man who welded the Negro Pullman Car Porters into a mighty organization, received an indication of their respect. When he rose to approach the speakers' stand amid the extended cheering of an audience which had risen, as a man, to its feet, a large delegation of Pullman Porters remained standing to hail him with a few lines of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters' theme song.

March-On-Washington's ideology is not alone for the Negro, but it is a mass protest against all injustice and unfairness against all minorities of all races, creeds and colors, Randolph told the crowd. He announced that the Committee will seek the abolition of jim-crow from the nation's capitol.

"We want to make Washington a free city for Negroes," he declared. Mr. Randolph's remarks revealed a conference will be sought with President Roosevelt to discuss every phase of discrimination against the Negro.

Others who participated in the program were: Colden Brown, Chairman of the Committee's Speakers' Bureau; the Rev. William Lloyd Imes, the Rev. S. T. Eldridge, the Rev. Thomas S. Harten, Arthur Reid, Bernice McMillan, Milton P. Webster, FEPC member, the Rev. George W. H[illegible]ton and Perry Ferguson; also [illegible]riel Rahn, concert soprano; [illegible] Finlay's band; Amanda Randolph, the Blanche Thomas Choral Group, Cora Illidge and Edward Margetson.

"TIME TO END THE POLL TAX"--SE

THIS SIGHT IN EASTERN AIRCRAFT FACTORY WOULD STRIKE TERROR IN HITLER'S 'HEART'; NEGRO WORKERS ON

MAKE DEMOCRACY

TENN. OPENS DRIVE FOR NEGRO MARINES

WHITE S

MRS. ROOSEVELT IN SPEECH TO PORTERS PRAISES NEGROES

"Races Must Work Together To Perfect Democracy In This Country," First Lady States.

NEW YORK CITY—(By John H. Thompson for ANP)—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, first lady of the land, headed the largest group of celebrities ever to attend an all-colored labor convention in New York or elsewhere, when she adderessed the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters at their dinner at Mecca temple Monday night, as part of the week long 15th anniversary and biennial convention.

Other celebrities at the speakers' table included Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, "first colored lady of the New York City; Lieutenant Governor Charles Poletti; Aubrey Williams, national director of the NYA; Dr. Channing Tobias of the YMCA; Walter White of the NAACP; James Quinn of the Central Trades and Labor council of New York City; A. Philip Randolph, president of the brotherhood, and other officials of the BSCP.

More than 800 persons paid the $2.50 per plate to listen to this brilliant array of speakers, who paid tribute to Randolph and the brotherhood.

Mrs. Bethune introduced Mrs. Roosevelt, who after paying tribute to the head of the colored division of the NYA, launched into her speech. Said the First Lady in part: "We have a right to improve Democracy in the United States. The conscription bill is the only way make the nation really safe, for

New York, Sept. 25 (by John H. Thompson for ANP) Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, First Lady of the Land, headed the largest group of celebrities ever to attend an all-colored labor convention in New York or elsewhere when she addressed the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters at their dinner at Mecca Temple Monday night, as part of the week long 15th anniversary and biennial convention, Sept. 15-20.

Other celebrities at the speakers table included Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, "First Colored Lady of the Land", Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York City; Lieut. Gov. Charles Poletti; Aubrey Williams, National director of the NYA; Dr. Channing Tobias of the UMCA; Walter White of the NAACP.; James Quinn of the Central Trades and Labor council of New York City; A. Philip Randolph, president of the brotherhood and other officials of the BSCP.

More than 800 persons paid the $2.50 per plate to listen to this brilliant array of speakers, who paid tribute to Randolph and the Brotherhood.

Mrs. Bethune introduced Mrs. Roosevelt, who after paying tribute to the head of the colored division of the NYA, launched into her speech. Said the First Lady in part: "'We have a right to improve Democracy in the U. S.—The conscription bill is the only way to make the nation really safe—for it is better to have young people trained for warfare than to send them into battle untrained—if they are not trained early, last minute measures may not save us from war—

"Each of us has an obligation to try in all ways to perfect the democracy of the country—you know what it is to struggle against handicaps—we can overcome them only as we work side by side—The color line is gradually being broken down and becoming a thing of the past—We must work together and not let any one group suffer. It is only lately we have realized how much culture of the country has come from the minority groups of the United States. As James Weldon Johnson once said to me, "You are making a mistake when you do not recognize how much more my race has contributed in many ways—The Negro has a great gift for culture in many things—I am tremendously interested in young people and I know those of your group and their difficulties. I appreciate what young people meet with today in colored

(continued on page 2)

Mrs. Roosevelt Addresses Pullman

First Lady 1 Of Large Group To Address Meet

NEW YORK.—(By John H. Thompson for ANP)—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, First Lady of the Land, headed the larg- group of celebrities ever to attend an all-colored labor con- tion in New York or elsewhere, when she addressed the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters at their dinner at Mecca Monday night, as part of week-long 15th anniversary and convention, September 15

Other celebrities at the speakers' included Mrs. Mary McLeod "First Colored Lady of Mayor Fiorello LaGuar- New York City; Lieutenant Charles Poletti; Aubrey national director of the Dr. Channing Tobias of the Walter White, of the James Quinn of the Cen- Trades and Labor Council of City; A. Philip Randolph, of the brotherhood, and officials of the BSCP.

than 800 persons paid the plate to listen to this bril- array of speakers, who paid to Randolph and the brother-

Bethune introduced Mrs. Roosevelt who, after paying tribute the head of the colored division the NYA, launched into her Said the First Lady in part: have a right to improve democracy in the U. S. . . . The con- bill is the only way to the nation really safe . . . for better to have young people for welfare than to send into battle untrained . . . if are not trained early, last- measures may not save us

We all have an obligation to all ways to perfect the of the country . . . you know what it is to struggle against handicaps . . . we can overcome them only as we work side by side . . . the color line is gradually being broken down and becoming a thing of the past . . . We must work together and not any one group suffer . . . It is only lately we have realized how much culture of the country has come from the minority groups of the United States. As James Weldon Johnson once said to me, 'You are making a mistake when you do not recognize how much more my race has contributed in many ways' . . . The Negro has a great gift for culture in many things . . . I am tremendously interested in young people and I know those of your group and their difficulties. I appreciate what young people meet with today in colored groups . . . we all need courage and wisdom and patience as great changes do not come over night.

"In the past few years we have come along the road to a better understanding, a greater appreciation of the dignity of human individuals regardless of race, color or creed . . . We can make all democracy better by all giving the best we have to give . . . I pledge to you my faith, my cooperation to make this a better country not for you alone but for all. This will make all feel our country is safe and a better place in which to live."

Mrs Roosevelt received a tremendous ovation from the audience as she took her seat. Ashley Totten then rose, declared it "was not a political meeting nor do I wish to speak of politics but Franklin D. Roosevelt is the greatest man ever to step into the White House." Waves of applause greeted this statement.

Totten next introduced Mayor La Guardia, "a friend of the common people,' who told listeners that it had been made perfectly clear "that this was a non-partisan meeting and therefore I can speak in ease In any gathering of men and women who toil for a living and who have witnessed the progress made by the brotherhood in the past few years, would also be non-partisan and for Franklin D. Roosevelt." (Loud cheers.) "I want to tell you all that your greatest success was not only in the right to organize, increase wages and gain better working conditions, but it was in giving self-respect to every employed Pullman porter . . . ."

Walter White, field secretary of the NAACP, took to task William Green for his speech before the brotherhood Sunday at Salem church in which Green stated: "I am against intolerance and racial prejudice as long as I can express myself." White cited numerous instances to refute this statement.

Lieut. Gov. Poletti paid tribute o the BSCP and Randolph and ended his speech by calling Mrs. Roosevelt the "quintessence of American Democracy."

Other speakers who praised the BSCP and their 15-year fight with the Pullman company included the Rev. William Lloyd Imes and C. L. Dellums, fourth international vice president.

At the conclusion of the dinner Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Bethune were besieged by autograph seekers. They shook hands with their numerous admirers. This was the first public appearance of Mrs. Bethune since her recent illness.

Headliners at Garden in Greatest Mass Demon

PRINCIPAL SPEAKERS on the mammoth March-on-Washington mass meeting at Madison Square Garden Tuesday night included, left to right, A. Philip Randolph, Frank A. Crosswaith, Rev. Adam Clayton Powell, Lester B. Granger, Rev. Thomas S. Harten, Dr. Lawrence, W. O. Carrington, Dr. Mary M Walter White. The 20,000 odd people who a 20,000 Storm Madison Sq To Help Bury Race's "U

AMSTERDAM

New York STAR NEWS Star-News

VOL. XXXIII, No. 28 | SATURDAY, JUNE 20, 1942 | IN TWO SECTIONS SECTION ONE | 10c

NEGROES MAKING HISTORY. Just a part of 20,000 Negroes who gathered in Madison Square Garden, Tuesday night, to let the government of the United States would know that they are dissatisfied with being kicked around and deprived of their rights and privileges of being loyal, true-blooded and Americans first and la

8-Point Program Adopted By March-on-Washington Group

Following is the eight-point program that forms the blueprint of the March-on-Washington Movement, as enunciated at the gigantic mass meeting in Madison Square Garden Tuesday night.

1. We demand in the interest of national unity, the abrogation of every law which makes a distinction in treatment between citizens based on religion, creed, color, or national origin. This means an end to Jim Crow in education, in housing, in transportation and in every other social, economic and political privilege; and especially, we demand, in the capital of the nation, an end to all segregation in public places and in public institutions.

2. We demand legislation to enforce the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments guaranteeing that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law so that the full weight of the national Government may be used for the protection of life and thereby may end the disgrace of lynching.

3. We demand the enforcement of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments and the enactment of the Pepper Poll Tax Bill so that all barriers in the exercise of the suffrage are eliminated.

4. We demand the abolition of segregation and discrimination in the army, navy, marine corps, air corps, and all other branches of national defense.

5. We demand an end to discrimination in jobs and job training. Further, we demand that the FEPC be made a permanent administration agency of the U. S. Government and that it be given power to enforce its decisions based on its findings.

6. We demand that Federal funds be withheld from any agency which practices discrimination in the use of such funds.

7. We demand Negro and minority group representation on all administrative agencies so that these groups may have recognition of their democratic right to participate in formulating policies.

8. We demand representation for the Negro and minority racial groups on all missions, political and technical, which will be sent to the peace conference so that the interests of all people everywhere may be fully recognized and justly provided for in the post war settlement.

Nothing less than this program will afford Negroes their constitutional rights; nothing less will be an evidence of America's devotion to the democratic way of life.

Randolph Tells Why He Didn't Make His Talk

A. Philip Randolph, director of the March-to-Washington Movement, who was cheated out of the opportunity to deliver his speech before the 20,000 people in Madison Square Garden, Tuesday night, took the disappointment good-naturedly and Wednesday afternoon he received reporters in his 125th Street headquarters to dis-

(Continued on Page 24)

nstration in History

IcLeod Bethune and ttended the rally represented one of the largest crowds of Negroes ever to attend a meeting of this kind.

quare Garden Uncle Toms"

Frank Crosswaith Keynotes March on Washington Rally

(BY J. ROBERT SMITH)

Visualizing the dawning of a new day in the history of the American Negro, Frank R. Crosswaith, chairman of the Negro Labor Committee, and Star-News columnist, speaking before more than 20,000 Negroes in Madison Square Garden, Tuesday night, told his vast protesting audience that "this is the first funeral I ever attended in Madison Square Garden.

"This is a funeral because, like every other black man, woman and child here tonight, I am here to bury in the grave of forgetfulness the type of black man that America too long has known."

Blasts "Uncle Toms"

Striking vehemently at the "Uncle Toms" and "tie-heads" of the race, Crosswaith, one of the main speakers at the March-on-Washington Movement rally to protest discrimination in the armed forces of the United States and in industry, the labor leader stated that the meeting marked the fact that there was a new Negro in America.

"The new Negro in America, who is loyal to the government and determined to give every effort toward winning the war for the democracies, is still determined [illegible] other citizens of the country."

es and the rest of the st.

[illegible] touching on the perpetuity of the Negro. Continuing, he said the crowded house that while others had come to this country to seek liberty, "my father and mother, like yours, came here to lose their liberty."

Mass of Utter Silence

The most impressive, peaceful and yet adamantly determined au- [illegible] and [illegible] and patios when Cross- [illegible] with dramatically described t[illegible] he saw his son in the arm[illegible] forces, somewhere in Europe ho[illegible] ing that some day there will [illegible] liberty here in America for Negroes.

With outstretched arms and head looking heavenward, the speaker said, "My own son is now in the armed forces on the continent of Europe ready to die for the Stars and Stripes.

"I cannot hear him, but I can see into his very heart that he has a hope that some day the flag for which he is willing to die will fly as freely over his race as it does over the heads of those who found liberty here."

Depends on Labor

In closing he exhorted his listeners who patiently sat for five hours to hear how the Negro was being mistreated in the armed forces and was expected to give his life for democracy, to let nothing blind them to the fact that their fate and the fate of their children rests in the lap of the working class.

"I know there are men who are so blind, so stupid and so asinine as to fail to recognize their kindredness with you," he declared.

At the gathering which was the largest aggregation of Negroes in America for a protest program and not a baseball game, Crosswaith accepted Mayor LaGuardia's appointment by telegram on the New York Housing Authority.

Adam Powell for Congress

Councilman Adam Powell, Jr., also embraced the opportunity to announce his intentions to become a candidate for Congress in the Fall. The young preacher brought the resentful throng of Negroes who gave evidence of being tired of the "kicking around" given by white people, to its feet, when in using the words "damn" and "hell" he urged them that "now is the time to fight like hell for their rights."

Speaking in the same militant tone as others on the program, Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, director of Negro Affairs, NYA, struck a receptive chord when she said, "You who are here tonight are a new experience to America. You have been regarded as the patient, submissive minority. You had no rights, the Supreme Court held you were chattels like any horse, or plow or iron pot.

"He Is You!"

"But, today, a new Negro has arisen in America. He is here in Madison Square Garden tonight. He is you. You are neither young nor old, you are just new. You have awakened as has the world. You are seeking full freedom, justice, respect and opportunity. You are militant in spirit. You are unwilling to accept less than the Constitution guarantees to you as citizens of the world's greatest democracy."

Mrs. Bethune in encouraging the Negro to keep on fighting for his rightful place in the life of America said, "Thank God you have the qualities of militancy and insistence. You know how important it is that this surging spirit be kept within the bounds of law and order.

"You know how necessary it is that your militancy be non-violent. But you must at the same time keep it persistent, keep it courageous, make it intelligently articulate."

Daily Jim Crow

Walter White, executive secretary of the NAACP called upon the United Nations to prove their sincerity to the colored peoples of the world by asking, "How can a Negro believe wholeheartedly that the cause he is asked to die for is worth dying for when daily he is confronted by insult, discrimination and segregation?"

"Prove to us, United Nations, and prove to the colored peoples of Asia, Africa and the Caribbean that you are not hypocrites when you say this is a war for freedom. Prove it to us and we will show you that we can and will fight like fury for that freedom. But we want, and we intend to have our share of that freedom," he said.

In line with White's viewpoint, Arthur Reid, labor organizer, told his hearers that the black man should and must participate in the peace conference after victory is won, otherwise the peace that will be attained will be short-lived. Lester Granger, executive secretary of the National Urban League, urged Negroes to fight their own battles and do not depend upon advice from the "right, centre, left or further left."

In presenting Mrs. Annie Waller, mother of Odell Waller, who is expected to be electrocuted in Virginia next week, A. Philip Randolph, director of the movement who had to curtail his speech due to lack of time, called upon Negroes all over the country to take a hand in the stand for their liberation.

Other speakers were Dr. Lawrence Mance Ervin, chairman; the Revs. Thomas S. Harten, O. Clay Maxwell, S. T. Eldridge, John La Farge, W. O. Carrington, Dr. Channing H. Tobias and Milton P. Webster. A play was presented by Blanche Thomas' Choral Group and written by Dick Campbell.

AFRO-AMERICAN July 11 1942

The Modern Tower of Babel

A PHILIP RANDOLPH — OUR NEW LEADER

The lack of dynamic, practical and uncompromising leadership pressing forever onward the legitimate demands of the masses, has been the greatest handicap to the solution of the Negro problem. Although every major national crisis in the past has brought forth some kind of a Negro leadership, that leadership, however, has been of the wrong kind—the kind that could either be bribed into compromise or silenced by threats.

For awhile it appeared that the burden of promoting the just cause of the Negro would have to be borne by enlightened, sympathetic whites of the moral and intellectual stature of Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Buck and Mr. Willkie. The Negroes who, though devoid of the requisite qualifications, would have catapulted themselves into leadership were dissuaded from such step by the very militancy of the new generation of Negroes who brook no compromise. They were forced to recoil into their shells.

Times and circumstances create great men; men who have courage, determination and a self-sacrificial spirit to carry on their work at the risk of forfeiting their own personal freedom. For the first time in our history, the Negro has found a clear-visioned, practical yet fearless leader: A. Philip Randolph.

It was he who initiated the "March On Washington" that resulted in the issuance of the President's Executive Order forbidding racial discrimination in the defense industries, and creating the Fair Employment Practice committee. It is he who is organizing the masses on a scale unparalleled since the collapse of the Garvey movement. It is he who has come forward with a program and the means to achieve it. He says:

"The main and basic responsibility for effecting the solution of the Negro problem rests upon Negroes themselves. We believe that Negroes should supply the money and pay the price, make the sacrifices and endure the suffering to break down the barriers to a realization of full citizenship rights in America. The March On Washington movement believes in racial equality, and we propose to fight for it with all our might. It rejects the doctrine of racial supremacy of Adolf Hitler in Germany and Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia.

"We believe in the technique and method of mass action as an expression of Negro power to batter down all forms of racial segregations and discriminations. We are opposed to any movement or propaganda against white people and any movement or propaganda of anti-Semitism, anti-Catholicism, or anti-foreignism or anti-labor. The basic principle of the March On Washington movement is democratic. It believes wholeheartedly in the cause of the United Nations and seeks to aid in achieving victory of the armed forces of the United Nations over the Axis powers."

This is the type of leadership that all of us should endorse, and must endorse if we hope to achieve our goal in this world and take our rightful place in this democracy.

Chicago Defender July

JULY 11, 1942
DEFENDER

NEBRASKA, F

seeking their valuable assistance based upon a clear understanding of the issues involved in the article, I offer the following observations .

First, of course, we must realize that "discrimination that deprives them of jobs in the midst of the war industrial boom" is neither all by which the Negro is aroused nor it it all that March-On-Washington headed by Mr. A. Phillip Randolp seeks to end. While this injustice is perhaps as diabolical to the Negro and as ruinous to the nation as any of the other outrages which have been allotted the Negro as his share of our democracy in an all too matter of fact way, one has but to consider the poll-tax system of disfranchisement, the plight of the Negro share cropper, lynch law, ruthless exploitation of Negro Labor, segregation of the Negro nto the slums of the Ghetto, and the disparity of educational advantages where we have separate sechool systems to mention a few instances, to realize why the war industry situation is certainly not all the Negro seeks to remedy as Mr. Scholtz seems to believe.

Neither is the Negro disillusioned over the accomplishments which have been made by the intelligent and effective use which has been made of Executive Order 8802 by The President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices and the March-On-Washington group. While the Order may be a poor substitute fo rwhat the government might do for its several persecuted minorities, the Negro, for his part, has actually been surprised to see the sugar-coated gesture surpass his wildest expectations.

Again, it it not quote correct to say that the proposed March of July 1941 was cancelled by presidential request. The fact is that the March was postponed by the Committee headed by Mr. Randolph after the President had issued Order 8802 pending what effect the Order should have and the decision of the President upon the matter of a second order.

Speaking of the President, there are three things of which the Negro generally is convinced. First, that he lives under the best form of government yet devised by man; secondly, that our President is the greatest president since Abraham Lincoln; and thirdly, that Mr. A. Phillip Randolph is among the wisest of living world leaders.

The Negro, today, realizes that the March-On-Washington Committee is the most effective plan he has yet devised, the only movement over which he has ever exercised complete control due to the fact that it has grown entirely out of his own resources, and that it is the most common-sense approach to the solution of his problem he has yet known. For evidence, he looks and satisfaction upon

OPEN LETTER

July 9, 1942

To the Editor of The Omaha Star
2416 North 24th Street
Omaha, Nebraska

Dear Editor:

I read with interest an article written by a Mr. Joseph D. Scholtz which appeared in the June 26th issue of your paper.

Mr. Scholtz, writing presumably upon the subject, "NEGROES ENTITLED TO JOBS"? raised the question, "IS MARCH ON WASHINGTON BEST WAY TO GET THEM?"

It is, of course, always gratifying to see a white person who is interested in any phase of the problem of the Negro in America.

The Negro appreciates this because he realizes that his problem is fundamentally one peculiar to minorities rather than to any particular color or creed in the final analysis, and while he realizes his salvation must come primarily of his own efforts, he knows also that he must have the help which solid alliances with other groups and sincere individuals can bring.

Hence, the Negro is ever ready to welcome a new ally.

The Negro has also learned, however, that regardless how sincere a friend may come, any real service to the cause of the Negro that the friend may render can come only out of a genuine understanding of the problem. Unfortunately, the wish to see a problem solved does not necessarily carry with it the understanding required to help solve the problem.

Hence, presuming the sincerity of Mr. Scholtz and others who may subscribe to the views stated in his article, and earnestly NEGROES ENTITLED TO JOBS: only?

Thursday, July

Is March on Washington Best Way to Get Them?

By JOSEPH D. SCHOLTZ
Regional Director of Civilian Defense

Negroes, aroused by discrimination that deprives them of jobs e midst of the war industrial boom are again talking of a h on Washington to impress their grievances on Congress the nation.

The grievance march they had arranged a year ago was lled by administration request, and thereafter President evelt issued his anti-discrimination Executive Order 8802, was widely acclaimed among Negro leaders as a Second cipation Proclamation. But Order 8802 did not stop dis- nation, in the South or in the North, nor did an anti-dis- nation clause written by the government into all war con- awarded after June 25, 1941.

isillusioned, Negroes have become increasingly restless—in- ngly insistent that, as Americans, they be counted as part e nation's manpower and recognized as citizens entitled to ity in job opportunities. This restlessness had been reported time to time from various industrial centers. That it is al and serious is disclosed in a detailed report just made a governmental survey.

he mistake that may be made is misintepretation of the es' quite justified protest as a demonstration or indication loyalty, possibly as a response to Japanese agitation for e of the "dark races." Such an interpretation would be evous error and a grave injustice to millions of unswerv- loyal dark-skinned American citizens, whose major com- is merely that they are not permitted to do more for country in wartime production.

The proposed march to Washington should not be necessary waken all interests involved in the Negro employment con- rsy to the injustice of discrimination and the economic e of rejecting available manpower in a period of labor scar-

Statistics from the recent governmental survey disclose that e past year Negroes have made advances in employment, te strong opposition. Undoubtedly they will make more nces as opposition further weakens under stresses of the effort.

This appears to be a time for calm discussion, and for gov- nental firmness in behalf of an eagerly loyal racial min- —a time when more is likely to be gained through negotia- by wise Negro leadership than by spectacular demonstration.

Letters to The Times---

In Which Dean Morse Replies

NATIONAL WAR LABOR BOARD
Department of Labor Building
Washington, D.C.
July 21, 1942.

Editor, Los Angeles Times:

My attention has been called to an editorial printed in the Saturday, July 11 issue of your paper entitled "What Is There Improper About It?" The editorial refers to my opinion in the Caterpillar Tractor Case, decided by the War Labor Board July 5, 1942.

I assume from a reading of your editorial that you have not read my decision in the case but have based the editorial upon incomplete newspaper accounts of the decision. A copy of the decision is enclosed for your reading, and you will note that I am not opposed to regulating unions. However, I am opposed to turning a quasi-judicial body such as the War Labor Board into either an employer or union legislative lobby. Therefore, I opposed Mr. Lapham's proposal to place a War Labor Board sanction upon the Vinson bill.

The aims and objectives of Mr. Lapham's proposal became clearer when he advanced it again in the Board's discussion of the "Little" Steel case. At that time he proposed that one of the conditions for granting union maintenance should be that union funds could not be used in political campaigns. I did not have an opportunity to write a reply to the employers' dissenting opinion in the "Little" Steel case because it was not completed until just before the press conference. However, at that conference I did answer it and I am enclosing a copy of my remarks.

You will note that in the Caterpillar case I had this to say about a regulation of unions:

"The writer wishes to have it definitely understood that he is not opposed to subjecting labor unions to greater government regulation. For several years he has been on record over and over again, in favor of checking by legislation the abuses that have grown up in unionism, if American unions fail to exercise the good judgment of cleaning their own houses. During recent years, in particular, American unions have been the recipients of increased rights, privileges, powers and opportunities from the hands of a democratic government, and that government in turn has the right to demand of unions that they exercise those rights free of abuses. Any failure on the part of organized labor groups to do so places upon a democratic government, the obligation of regulating them or any group so favored, be it union, employer or any other in a manner which will protect the public. However, such regulation should flow from the halls of Congress and not from a war emergency agency such as the National War Labor Board, which was set up for the specific purpose of settling labor disputes and not for the purposes of determining legislative policy."

In my statement at the press conference I said in part:

"[illegible] would suggest to [illegible] judicial tribunals have been taking unto themselves powers which they don't possess, and they have been quite right about it. And for years I have been on record as sharing the view that the jurisdiction of administrative tribunals and quasi-judicial tribunals should stay within their terms of reference."

"Now, it is interesting to note that if they did file these books, what would we do with them? What use would we make of them? Would we deny them because maybe we didn't like some use that the union might make of its funds? And it is very significant to me to note that in the employers' discussion of the matter, during the course of the hearings in executive session, the point was made that maybe some limitation ought to be placed upon the use of union funds to be spent for [illegible] ly beyond our jurisdiction; and of c[illegible] my second point on that is that if w[illegible] the power to request the books of u[illegible] then we ought to also say we will [illegible] this board a depository for employer [illegible] and pass judgment upon the use o[illegible] ployer money."

I think the above-quoted excerp[illegible] forth clearly my views on the at[illegible] of the employer members of the [illegible] to exceed the board's jurisdiction.

Very truly yours,
[Signed] WAYNE L. MORSE,
Public Representativ[illegible]

With respect to the above, The Time[illegible] leave to repeat the question propounde[illegible] editorial to which Dean Morse refers. "If the W.L.B. has no jurisdiction in this [illegible] (that of requiring union financial accou[illegible] what right has it to decree 'union maint[illegible] or anything else having to do with un[illegible] duct?" Dean Morse asks, in effect: [illegible] would we do with the financial accounts [illegible] unions if we had them?" The answer [illegible] rather obvious: Make them public. [illegible]

Death of Sharecro[illegible] Stirs National Un[illegible]

Odell Waller, disfranchised Virginia Negro sharecropper convicted of first-d[illegible] of white poll-tax-payers, was electrocuted Thursday, July 2, at 8:35 am, in the [illegible] mond. His death brought to an end a legal battle with active support from thousands of [illegible] izens in all parts of the country, from leading newspapers and magazines, from the [illegible] AFL and CIO, and hundreds of national and local unions, and from the country's [illegible] leaders and organizations. Efforts to secure justice or mercy for Waller increased in [illegible] announcement Tuesday night that Governor Colgate W. Darden jr. of Virginia, follow[illegible] hearing on Monday, had refused to commute the sentence. Wednesday morning, W[illegible] John F. Finerty, telegraphed the governor requesting a stay of execution in order to permit Waller to exercise his legal right to appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States for a writ of certiorari. Wednesday afternoon, a petition by many prominent Americans, urging President Roosevelt to appoint a commission to inquire into the case, appeared as a full advertisement in the Washington Star. At 1 am leaders, headed by A. Philip Randolph, who had spent the whole of Wednesday attempting to reach the President, were informed that he would neither receive them nor act in Waller's behalf. This refusal signalized the final defeat of the efforts to get Waller a fair trial.

Delegation Meets Rebuff

As soon as Governor Darden's denial of commutation was announced, Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and national director of the March-on-Washington Movement, organized a delegation of Negro leaders to go to Washington and attempt to persuade President Roosevelt to appoint a commission of inquiry in the Waller case. The delegation included, in addition to Randolph, the following members:

Channing H. [illegible] of the National Council of the YMCA; Layle Lane, vice president of American Federation of Teachers; Anna Arnold Hedgeman, regional director of race relations, New York Area Office of Civilian Defense; Rev. William Lloyd Imes, St. James Presbyterian church, New York; Frank R. Crosswaith, director of Harlem Labor Center and member of New York City Housing authority; Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, director of race relations, National Youth Administration; Theodore Poston, War Manpower Commission; Bill Alexander, Office of Facts and Figures; Frank D. Reeves, administrative assistant, Washington Bureau of National Association for the Advancement of Colored people; Dr. Leon A. Ransom, national legal committee of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People; Pauli Murray, special field secretary of the Workers Defense League, and Ralph Matthews of the Afro-American.

After a day spent in vain efforts to get an interview, Randolph, as head of the delegation, announced at 1 am, Thursday, July 2:

"The President and Governor of the United States have called us [illegible] Waller's death will [illegible] leaders of their country will not defend. All we can say to American Negroes is 'The President by his failure to publicly put the White House on record in this case has let the Negro down. In failing us the cause of hitlerism at home has been aided.'

"Upon our inability to obtain an interview with the President, Wednesday night, we spent ten hours in the Nation's capital, speaking to representatives of the Department of Justice, of the Vice-President of the United States, and conferring with Elmer Davis of the office of War Information. We made two simple requests to these officials. We asked that these men close to the President, request of him a hearing with the delegation. If that was not possible we asked that they urge the President to issue a public appeal to Governor Darden of Virginia, to grant a stay of execution for Odell [illegible] which time a [illegible] mission of inquiry [illegible] gate the circum[illegible] ing the conviction [illegible] poll tax jury.

"Failure to grant [illegible] of inquiry as was [illegible] case of Tom [illegible] Wilson will be [illegible] 000,000 Negroes [illegible] cause Waller was [illegible] Negro people will [illegible] to in the halls of go[illegible] Washington. The [illegible] come when a Negro [illegible] be sacrificed on the [illegible] actionary politicians [illegible] cans remember [illegible] Negro Americans [illegible] Odell Waller, [illegible] pledge that he shall not [illegible] in vain."

[illegible] judicial [illegible] unto themselves powers which they don't possess, and they have been quite right about it. And for years I have been on record as sharing the view that the jurisdiction of administrative tribunals and quasi-judicial tribunals should stay within their terms of reference."

"Now, it is interesting to note that if they did file these books, what would we do with them? What use would we make of them? Would we deny them because maybe we didn't like some use that the union might make of its funds? And it is very significant to me to note that in the employers' discussion of the matter, during the course of the hearings in executive session, the point was made that maybe some limitation ought to be placed upon the use of union funds to be spent for [illegible]

[illegible] I have to pay to be union a month from now on.

There is another union here that charges only $5 to join but the teamsters say its card is no good for us packers. We have to join because the packing company that employs us in the plant to get parts ready for trucking has made a contract with the teamsters that it will make all its employees join the union.

I don't know much about law but it looks to me like some kind of a conspiracy because I'm going to refuse to pay the unioneers money and then I will be fired and I, as an American citizen, will be denied my right to work in a defense plant and help win the war because I won't give part of my earnings to the union men.

Please do what you can for us. I am afraid to sign this because I hear the teamsters have a way of dealing with ones who try to buck it.

AMERICAN,

Los Angeles.

[illegible] which they don't possess, and they have been quite right about it. And for years I have been on record as sharing the view that the jurisdiction of administrative tribunals and quasi-judicial tribunals should stay within their terms of reference."

"Now, it is interesting to note that if they did file these books, what would we do with them? What use would we make of them? Would we deny them because maybe we didn't like some use that the union might make of its funds? And it is very significant to me to note that in the employers' discussion of the matter, during the course of the hearings in executive session, the point was made that maybe some limitation ought to be placed upon the use of union funds to be spent for political purposes in political campaigns.

"I have two points to make on that. One, it would be very interesting, of course, for us to check into the use of funds made by employers and employer associations of America in politics—clear-

[illegible] card is no good for us packers. We have to join because the packing company that employs us in the plant to get parts ready for trucking has made a contract with the teamsters that it will make all its employees join the union.

I don't know much about law but it looks to me like some kind of a conspiracy because I'm going to refuse to pay the unioneers money and then I will be fired and I, as an American citizen, will be denied my right to work in a defense plant and help win the war because I won't give part of my earnings to the union men.

Please do what you can for us. I am afraid to sign this because I hear the teamsters have a way of dealing with ones who try to buck it.

AMERICAN,

Los Angeles.

And this is a commonplace now!

Saturday, July 11, 1942

Memorial Mass Meeting Held Here To Mourn Killing Of Odell Waller

Under auspices of the New York Division of the March on Washington Movement, a memorial meeting to mourn the execution of Odell Waller was held Sunday afternoon at the St. James Presbyterian Church, 141st street and St. Nicholas avenue.

A fair-sized audience heard A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and national director of the March on Washington Movement, and Frank R. Crosswaith, of the New York City Housing Authority and chairman of the Negro Labor Committee denounce attempts by the Communist Party to use Negroes as a stepping stone. The audience also heard Attorney John Finnerty, counsel for Odell Waller, tell of the legal aspects of the losing battle which had been waged to save his life.

With Dr. Lawrence M. Ervin, chairman of the New York division of the Movement, presiding, the meeting was opened with prayer by Thomas Patterson, of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Caar Porters. Miss Pauli Murray, of the Workers Defense League, told of efforts of the defense committee and gave a brief resume of the deceased sharecropper's life, reading the last letter he had written.

Mrs. Anna Arnold Hedgeman, of the Office of Civilian Defense, told of the run around the committee had been given last week when an attempt was made to see President Roosevelt. She urged continued support and growth of the March on Washington Movement.

In his talk, Mr. Crosswaith declared that the "old story about turning the other cheek is over," and said that power is the only thing that anyone fears. He urged Negroes to harness their power in their fight for complete equality and said that the fight of the Negro is being hampered by efforts of Communists who are "muddying the waters."

Mr. Randolph said that the only way Negroes are going to get their rights is by mass procedure. Speaking of the South being in the saddle in Washington, he said that the President is dictated to by Southern Congressmen and gave that as one of the reasons for formation of the March on Washington Movement. He promised that if discrimination against the Negro continues, the actual march to Washington will, he held "to tell the world that we want all of our rights." A petition, he said, will soon be circulated urging the President to abolish forever discrimination and jim crow in the United States and the sponsors of the plan hope to obtain one million signatures on the petition.

Following lifting of the collection by the Rev. O. Clay Maxwell, jr., assistant pastor of Mt. Olivet Baptist Church, Ludlow Werner, managing editor of The New York Age, urged those present to work to defeat those New York Congressman who have failed to sign the petition in Congress to discharge the Geyer Anti-Poll Tax Bill. "Let us answer the plea of the mother of Odell Waller," he said, "and show her that though it was not within our power to spare the life of her son, it is within our power to strike at the very root of the evil by defeating those who by their actions show that they favor continuance of the poll tax and all its attendant evils."

Miss Ellen Tarry, of the Amsterdam Star-News, urged continued support of the March on Washington Movement. Merritt Hedgeman sang several spirituals between the talks.

JULY 11, 1942 THE PEOPLE'S VOICE

Chicago 'March' Makes Record

CHICAGO—Determined to participate in the fight of this country to change a new world in which complete democracy will be enjoyed by all races, 14,000 Negroes crowded the great hall of Chicago's historic Coliseum June 26 for the local March on Washington meet. Amid thunderous applause Atty. Charles W. Burton, midwest director of the movement, told the enthusiastic audience that he welcomed them and also the FBI agents scrabbled about the auditorium.

"I only wish Atty. Gen. Biddle were here, so he, too, could learn that all we ask is that Negroes be given the opportunity to work at home while their boys fight abroad. We want Franklin Roosevelt to know," he shouted, "we want Rankin and Talmadge to know, that though we are the most patriotic group in America, we are the most discriminated against."

From that time until the end, the jeers rang as Walter White, NAACP, Dr. Archibald Hoag of Chicago, Milton Webster, member of FEPC, A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Pullman Porters, and others denounced the administration for permitting southerners like Gov. Edward Smith, Rankin, Talmadge, Connally and Dies to dominate the federal government.

Ethridge Should Resign from President's FEPC

If He Refuses, F. D. R. Should Remove Him; Committee Must Answer Ethridge Boast That President's Order Is on the Hitler Pattern.

The South had a big mouth in 1860. It would never give up slavery. It would break up the Union first.

Abraham Lincoln freed the South's slaves by Presidential proclamation and union armies under Grant and Sherman whipped the rebel Southern States until they were glad to crawl on their knees and beg admission again to the Federal Union.

And by a quirk of fate, the North (as Lincoln admitted) would not have been able to win had the support of the colored soldiers gone to the rebels instead of the Union.

Mouthing Mr. Ethridge

After eighty years, the mouthing ones are at it again. Physical slavery is not the issue today; instead, it is segregation.

John Temple Graves, Theodore Bilbo, Tom Connolly, and an assortment of equally small-bore politicians and editors are clamoring lest this war for world liberation shall free colored people from racial segregation.

There is, for example, Mark Ethridge, vice-president and manager of two Louisville, Ky., dailies, the Courier-Journal and the Times.

Mr. Ethridge posed as a liberal and was named by President Roosevelt as chairman of the Fair Employment Practice Committee. Its job is to see that war industries hire workers without stopping to see whether they are white or colored, Jew or Catholic, of native or foreign parentage.

The President's exact language is as follows:

"I do hereby reaffirm the policy of the United States that there shall be no discrimination in the employment of workers in defense industries or government because of race, creed, color, or national origins."

All this order means is that war plants must hire workers first come, first served; hire them in all departments, and promote them when they deserve it.

F. D. R.'s Emphatic Order

To make no mistake about what he meant, President Roosevelt added:

"It is the duty of employers and labor organizations in furtherance of said policy and this order to provide for full and equitable participation of all workers in defense industries without regard to race etc.

"Full and equitable participation" can mean but one thing in the English language—forget individuals, treat everybody alike.

The South is alarmed. Treating everybody alike means an end to segregation. White readers of the Louisville papers began writing letters to the editor and sending him telegrams.

Job equality is social equality, they said, and Mr. Ethridge must be put in his place.

First he [illegible] of FEPC but kept his [illegible] issued a half page statement [illegible] be interpreted the President's order to mean hire colored workers and keep them segregated.

Compares President to Hitler

If, says Mr. Ethridge, the President's order is designed to stop segregation in war plants, it is "futile, if not dangerous, disruptive . . . against the general peace and welfare . . . a Federal order . . . in the Nazi dictator pattern."

Not satisfied with putting the President and Hitler in the same category, Mr. Ethridge declared that "no decent Southern white person is willing to give up segregation" in war plants, "the President can't compel the South to do it," and not even "the mechanized armies of the earth, Allied or Axis . . . could now force the Southern white people to give up the principle of social segregation"

THE NEW YORK AGE

People And Things

By EBENEZER RAY

History-making! When Negro history of the twentieth century comes to be written the June 16, 1942, mass meeting at Madison Square Garden will occupy a prominent place in its annals. It is historic in racial achievement, racial determination and racial solidarity.

Many persons have concluded at one time or another that THE great Negro organizer died in Marcus Garvey. Garvey was responsible for massing together more Negro thought and effort than any other living being. A. Philip Randolph, however, in his June 16 Madison Square Garden rally runs a close second. Approximately 20,000 Negroes gathered in the spacious arena to protest injustices meted out to them and it may be safely said there were thousands others who endorsed the movement but could not reach the Garden for one reason or another.

Ebenezer Ray

Aside from proving to the powers-that-be in the U.S. that the Negro individually and as a group is aware of, and ready and willing to protest, the shortend of democracy as handed to him, the mass meeting served to prove further the half-hearted attitude certain powerful elements take in his welfare.

The daily press of New York readily finds space in its columns for news which shows the shortcomings of Negroes. When pictures are possible they are included in bold relief. But the camera boys and the boys with pencil and pad of the New York dailies found little news in the fact that 20,000 Negroes had massed orderly under one roof to raise their voices against racial oppression and racial suppression.

The radio, too, found its wires too preoccupied to spare even a half-hour's time to carry to the nation a justified appeal of an oppressed people. Sections of this form of communication have devoted ("Sheep and Goats Club"—more goats than sheep) and still devote (WMCA Wednesday night, 11—12) time to the lighter side of Negroes, but no time was available for a Negro-sponsored and Negro-conducted mass meeting.

U.S. officials have no doubt observed this mass movement by Negroes and the liberal among them may have decided to remove another of the barriers which have stood in their path these many years. Reactionaries, however, might think in terms of vocal suppression. But that should seem unwise to even the most foolhardy. You can't suppress the just appeal of thirteen million people; you can't suppress the just appeal of twenty thousand people.

Negroes are loyal. They desire nothing less than that the United Nations defeat the Axis enslavers, and to this end they pledge their lot, undaunted and unfaltering. But with similar strength and devotion they ask for a discontinuance of discrimination in the Army, in the Navy, in munitions plants and in other Government setups—Washington, D. C., included; they ask for a discontinuance of unfair treatment and violence against Negro soldiers in camps; they ask for release of the Scottsboro boys; they ask for an end to political jim-crowism in the South, and they ask that the democracy they are going to fight for abroad be practiced here—in the United States.

Compares President to Hitler

If, says Mr. Ethridge, the President's order is designed to stop segregation in war plants, it is "futile, if not dangerous, disruptive . . . against the general peace and welfare . . . a Federal order . . . in the Nazi dictator pattern."

Not satisfied with putting the President and Hitler in the same category, Mr. Ethridge declared that "no decent Southern white person is willing to give up segregation" in war plants, "the President can't compel the South to do it," and not even "the mechanized armies of the earth, Allied or Axis . . . could now force the Southern white people to give up the principle of social segregation" in war industries.

Civil War Reminders

Mr. Ethridge's big talk, his blatant criticism of the President, and his wicked distortion of the Presdential order remind us of Governor Humphrey of Mississippi who, in his 1865 inaugural address, declared colored people were free whether we like it or not, but freedom doesn't entitle them to political equality.

General Sterling Price of the Confederate Army the same year (1865) asserted that the defeat of the South meant that colored people should have the right to serve on juries or sue white people.

Like Price and Humphrey, Mr. Ethridge has his own private interpretation of national policy.

Ethridge Should Be Removed

Since Mr. Ethridge cannot go along with the President, he should resign from the FEPC at once, and if he refuses, he should be removed.

The President's order does not admit of individual interpretations to suit any section of the country.

The Ethridge boast that the committee has taken no position on the question of "segregation of industrial workers" is a challenge that cannot go unanswered.

If "full participation" doesn't mean what it says, let the committee say so. Are the committee members men or are they spineless ignoramuses incapable of interpreting a simple English sentence?

ODELL WALLER MEMORIAL at St. James church Sunday had these leaders on the rostrum. Left to right: Ann Arnold Hedgeman, Frank R. Crosswaith, Ludlow W. Werner, I. T. Parkinson and A. Philip Randolph. (Jensen foto).

Memorial Held For 'Cropper

With practically no advance publicity, approximately [illegible] lovers of true democracy attended a memorial meeting for Odell Waller last Sunday at St. James' Presbyterian church, 141 st and St. Nicholas ave. Speakers were in complete unison in striking a keynote on "the need to fite for democratic rights at home now doing the war." A. Philip Randolph, national director of the March on Washington Movement which sponsored the meeting, said the general purpose was "to keep alive in the minds of Negroes that the democratic process is not working for them and it is their job to make it work. To let the government know that the Negro has not forgotten Odell Waller who has become a symbol of persecution and injustice visited upon Negroes in this country."

A summary of expressions from speakers indicated that while we want Negroes to remember Pearl Harbor, we also want them to remember Odell Waller. Speakers were Mrs. Ann Arnold Hedgeman, OCD member; Frank R. Crosswaith, member NYHousing Authority; Ludlow Werner, managing editor, NYAge; Reverend O. Clay Maxwell, Mt. Olivet Baptist church; John Finnerty, attorney for Waller (during the latter part of his trial); Pauli Murray, [illegible] of Workers Defense League, and A. Philip Randolph. Dr. Lawrence [illegible], chairman of NYUnrech [illegible] March on Washington [illegible], presided.

[illegible] PARADING [illegible] MARCH

[illegible] that the March on Washington movement is awaiting permission to stage a monster silent parade in the city, in which participants will wear black crape on their arms as a protest against the [illegible] of Odell Waller without giving him a chance to expose the sinister domination of politics into his case. The parade is intended to be powerful in that it will be [illegible] other [illegible] and [illegible] black crape.

[illegible] WARRANT

The death of Waller stimulated the March movement to launch an unprecedented project to bring about justice. At present, the movement is circulating a petition to be sent to the President to urge him to use his war powers to grant pardons to unjustly jailed persons in the armed forces, defense industries and all branches of civilian service, and to do similar [illegible] for civilians.

[illegible] business and labor leaders to sign the petition as evidence of their belief in the right of the Negro to receive the benefit of democracy at home while he fights for it abroad."—SWG.

BROWN AMERICA TAKES TO THE AIR

by Frank A. Young

SECOND SECT
THE Chicago Def
JUNE 6, 1942

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—Brown America Takes to the Air! Brown America, in all its glory, is piloting pursuit planes at more than 350 miles per hour, shutting off the gas then doing a double roll, much to the amazement of the onlookers, straightening the ship up and giving her the kick that sends her on a dizzy flight soon to be lost in the clouds.

"Brown America is in the Air"—it sure is, for I saw it with my own eyes and would not have visioned the greatness of it all had I not witnessed this inspiring sight.

* * *

BUT BROWN AMERICA—these brown boys who have earned their commissions as flyers in Uncle Sam's army aviation corps, and the cadets who are daily working hard to earn their commissions, the ground crews, the radio men, the mechanics, the men in the control tower, the medical officers, the men in the headquarter's and quartermaster's departments, the cooks, the carpenters, the electricians, the plumbers, the truck drivers—has an heritage handed down to them from men of their own race who have played an important part in ALL of the wars of the United States. Therefore, given their first opportunity to join the army air corps, all concerned are determined not only to make good but to write history in this conflict for liberty and democracy in which we are now engaged.

Standing in front of the New York Central depot in Albany, N. Y., recently, my gaze was directed to an almost obscure plate set in the stone. Green with age, this brass plate told the story of two Negroes who saved the then town of Albany from being sacked by Indians back in the late 16[illegible]'s.

* * *

RECALLING the feat of Crispus Attucks, the runaway slave, on Boston Commons when he defied the British army in March, 1770; of the Negro lieutenant who stopped a British relief column headed for Concord on April 19, 1775; of Peter Salem and Salem Poor at Bunker Hill; of the various battles in the Revolutionary war; of Prince Whipple, son of an African king, who pulled the stroke oar in the boat which carried Gen. George Washington across the Delaware river and surprised the British forces at Trenton, N. J.; of Yorktown and other early battles, I visioned this great heritage of which these Negro youths are rightfully proud.

* * *

NEGROES were with Jackson at the battle of New Orleans and were more than responsible for the saving of that city; they were with Admiral Perry in the battle of Lake Erie,; 22 went down with the U.S.S. Maine in Havana harbor in February, 1898; the battles of the Civil war are more familiar to those who have delved into the history books of the United States. The Philippine campaign, the Mexican invasion, and the World War I battles have their place in Negro history.

Still the support of Teddy Roosevelt's Rough Riders by the famous Tenth Cavalry stands out as a feat. From General Green's Negro division in the Revolutionary war to the 92nd and 93rd divisions in World War I, to the feats of the 369th New York infantry and the 370th Illinois infantry regiments, it all has been a history of sacrifice, blood, sweat and tears—yet the black man has carried on in hope that some day, this freedom which he hears so much about and has fought so hard for, will finally be his.

Therefore, it was easy for me to understand why this Brown American which was in the air had the courage to do, the will to do, and the determination to excel.

* * *

MY FIRST VISIT was to Tuskegee institute airport about four miles from the school. Here a flat plot of more than 300 acres has been built into an ideal airport with a fine airdrome. It was built by a Negro contractor, Archie Alexander, of Des Moines, Iowa.

I watched the brown cadets take to the double-wing planes. Up in the air they went, handling them about as easily as the average citizen would drive his Ford car to work. This is where the cadet received his primary training. After eight weeks of basic training, these young men who have been housed and fed at Tuskegee institute, are sent 10 miles farther up the road to the United States army flying school.

There I received the greatest thrill of my life. The national administration has bought 1,600 acres and made an ideal airport for the advance flying school.

Lieut.-Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., son of Brig.-Gen. B. O. Davis, in the cockpit of one of Uncle Sam's fast pursuit planes at the U. S. army airport at Tuskegee. Lieutenant-Colonel Davis is a graduate of West Point Military academy and is the first Negro to graduate from the flying school as captain. He was made lieutenant-colonel in the air corps on Saturday, May 23 after being made an air corps major the week before. He is the first of his race to hold that rank. His father is the first Negro United States army general.—Acme photo.

THE TASK of converting this corn and cotton farmland and wooded area into a modern flying field was given to McKissack and McKissack, two famous Negro contractors of Nashville, Tenn. And have they done a job! Even the course of streams had to be changed!

Here were two shifts of men at work. More than 2,500 carpenters, carpenters' apprentices, plumbers, electricians, and laborers—all Negroes, with the exception of a few white men who are government inspectors—work night and day. The job will be completed by July 1 of this year. Common labor is getting 40 cents per hour. Carpenters' apprentices receive 67 cents an hour and carpenters draw down $1.25 per hour with double time for Sundays and holidays.

While this surface construction—the building of hangars, control towers, barracks, hospitals and offices was being completed, it was necessary to move more than 15 million cubic feet of earth, and to build seven miles of underground drainage system.

* * *

LATE ONE afternoon I looked at a big hill and saw workmen erecting posts, [illegible] get busy. The air is filled with the sound of hammers. The air above is filled with the droning of planes. How many barracks are being built? The army would believe [illegible] reporter such a [illegible] army ge[illegible] information [illegible] present [illegible] the bou[illegible] saying [illegible] 65 me[illegible] number [illegible] tary in[illegible]

THE [illegible] the Tuskege[illegible] not all [illegible] each. Stating the [illegible] might be giving mili[illegible] mation to an enemy.

* * *

CADETS who survive basic training at the [illegible] e institute airport do pass the final test. If 50 per cent finish the [illegible] it will be a very high [illegible] It is no disgrace to fl[illegible]

Many of the enlis[illegible] here are men wh[illegible] trained at the Air [illegible] Technical school, [illegible] field, Rantoul, Ill. Th[illegible] attained technical ra[illegible] ings are now crew chiefs, mechanics, radio men, parachute riggers, weather observers and weather forecasters. Read this paragraph over again.

attained technical rat[illegible] now crew chiefs, me[illegible], parachute [illegible] observers an[illegible] casters. Re[illegible] over agai[illegible]

* * *

[illegible] grad[illegible] Chicago's Wendell Phillips high school amon[illegible] ground men. I felt a [illegible] my back which a [illegible] knocked me down, an[illegible] ing around saw A[illegible] Jones, former Chica[illegible] Golden Gloves boxer enjamin O. Davis, Jr., son of Brig.-Gen. B. O. Davis, in of one of Uncle Sam's fast pursuit planes at the U. S. at Tuskegee. Lieutenant-Colonel Davis is a graduate nt Military academy and is the first Negro to graduate ing school as captain. He was made lieutenant-colonel rps on Saturday, May 23 after being made an air corps eek before. He is the first of his race to hold that rank, the first Negro United States army general.—Acme photo.

Continued on Page 15

SECOND SECTION
THE
Chicago Defender
WORLD'S GREATEST WEEKLY
JUNE 6, 1942

50 per cent finish the course, it will be a very high average. It is no disgrace to flunk out.

Many of the enlisted men here are men who were trained at the Air Corps Technical school, Chanute field, Rantoul, Ill. Those who attained technical ratings are now crew chiefs, mechanics, radio men, parachute riggers, weather observers and weather forecasters. Read this paragraph over again.

of converting rn and cotton d wooded area
n flying field was Kissack and Mc-famous Negro of Nashville, ave they done a
the course of
to be changed!
e two shifts of . More than 2,500
carpenters' ap-

get busy the sou air abo droning barracks army m reporter such a army ge informa present, the bou saying

The air is filled with d of hammers. The e is filled with the of planes. How many are being built? The would believe a attained technical ratings are now crew chiefs, mechanics,

, parachute riggers,
observers and weath-asters. Read this over again.

* * *

duates of
Chicago's Wendell Phillips high school among these ground men. I felt a slap on my back which almost knocked me down, and turning around saw Anthony Jones, former Chicagoland Golden Gloves boxer from

Continued on Page 15

mbers, electriborers—all Ne-
he exception of men who are nspectors—work
y. The job will d by July 1 of ommon labor is cents per hour.
apprentices rents an hour and draw down $1.25
h double time for d holidays.
is surface con-
he building of ntrol towers, bar-
pitals and offices completed, it was o move more than ubic feet of earth,
ld seven miles of d drainage sys-

* * *

stories
65 me
number tary inf

THE
the Tuskege
not all

gh, housing 60 to each. Stating the ight be giving mili-
mation to an enemy.

* * *

ADETS who survive
basic training at the e institute airport do
pass the final test. If

Brown America—

(Continued From Page 13)

southern Illinois, who later fought several times as an amateur at the Savoy A. C. in Chicago before he turned professional under the guidance of Eddie Anderson (Rochester of Jack Benny's radio program). He was as brown as an autumn oak leaf from the rays of the hot Ala-army aviation corps, and the cadets who are daily working hard to earn their commissions, the ground crews, the radio men, the mechanics, the men in the control tower, the medical officers, the men in the headquarter's and quartermaster's departments, the cooks, the carpenters, the electricians, the plumbers, the truck drivers—has an heritage handed down to them from men of their own race who have played an important part in ALL of the wars of the United States. Therefore, given their first opportunity to join the army air corps, all battles, I visioned this great heritage of which these Negro youths are rightfully proud.

* * *

NEGROES were with Jackson at the battle of New Orleans and were more than responsible for the saving of that city; they were with Admiral Perry in the battle of Lake Erie,; 22 went down with the U.S.S. Maine in Havana harbor in February, 1898; the battles of the Civil war are more familiar to those who have delved into the history books of the United went, handling them about as easily as the average citizen would drive his Ford car to work. This is where the cadet received his primary training. After eight weeks of basic training, these young men who have been housed and fed at Tuskegee institute, are sent 10 miles farther up the road to the United States army flying school.

There I received the greatest thrill of my life. The national administration has bought 1,600 acres and made an ideal airport for the advance flying school.

Four second lieutenants in the U. S. air corps. Left to right, on top of pursuit plane: James B. Knighten, Tulsa, Okla., and Sherman White, Montgomery, Ala. Lee Rayford, Washington, D. C., is standing on the wheel while George L. Knox, Indianapolis, has one foot on wheel and one on ground. All four were commissioned Wednesday, May 20.—Tuskegee Airport Training school photo.

Keep 'Em Flying By Buying Bonds

prentices, plumbers, electricians, and laborers—all Negroes, with the exception of a few white men who are government inspectors—work night and day. The job will be completed by July 1 of this year. Common labor is getting 40 cents per hour. Carpenters' apprentices receive 67 cents an hour and carpenters draw down $1.25 per hour with double time for Sundays and holidays.

While this surface construction—the building of hangars, control towers, barracks, hospitals and offices was being completed, it was necessary to move more than 15 million cubic feet of earth, and to build seven miles of underground drainage system.

* * *

LATE ONE afternoon I looked at a big hill and saw workmen erecting posts for huge flood lights. Early the next morning after I was allowed to pass the military police guards who scrutinized my credentials, this large hill had been leveled as flat as the top of a kitchen table. It was a glorious sight to see men of my own race at the levers of the big shovels which picked up a load of dirt at one scoop, to see men at the steering wheels of the big five- and ten-ton trucks, to see the smaller trucks, all driven by brown hands, scooting here and there like a lot of busy ants.

The runway is 300 feet wide—all of it paved tarmac. That you will understand is almost 100 yards wide. Here the planes rested. More about them later.

* * *

ONE DAY, workers poured concrete for 8-by-8 piers which support the barracks. The next day the carpenters

65 me
numbe
tary inf

each. Stating the ight be giving mili-
mation to an enemy.

* * *

THE
the Tuskege
not all

ADETS who survive
basic training at the e institute airport do
pass the final test. If

Chicago's lips high school amo ground men. I felt a my back which a knocked me down, a ing around saw
Jones, former Chic
Golden Gloves boxe

Continued on Page

Benjamin O. Davis Jr., and the author, taken at the airport, Tuskegee, Ala., on Thursday, May 7, of this army officer, then a captain in the air corps, was r on May 7 and a lieutenant colonel on May 23.
r correspondent is puzzled over the greatness
rt and the air corps training school.—
S. Army Air Corps.

prentices, plumbers, electricians, and laborers—all Negroes, with the exception of a few white men who are government inspectors—work night and day. The job will be completed by July 1 of this year. Common labor is getting 40 cents per hour. Carpenters' apprentices receive 67 cents an hour and carpenters draw down $1.25 per hour with double time for Sundays and holidays.

While this surface construction—the building of hangars, control towers, barracks, hospitals and offices was being completed, it was necessary to move more than 15 million cubic feet of earth, and to build seven miles of underground drainage system.

* * *

LATE ONE afternoon I looked at a big hill and saw workmen erecting posts for huge flood lights. Early the next morning after I was allowed to pass the military police guards who scrutinized my credentials, this large hill had been leveled as flat as the top of a kitchen table. It was a glorious sight to see men of my own race at the levers of the big shovels which picked up a load of dirt at one scoop, to see men at the steering wheels of the big five- and ten-ton trucks, to see the smaller trucks, all driven by brown hands, scooting here and there like a lot of busy ants.

The runway is 300 feet wide—all of it paved tarmac. That you will understand is almost 100 yards wide. Here the planes rested. More about them later.

* * *

ONE DAY, workers poured concrete for 8-by-8 piers which support the barracks. The next day the carpenters stories

65 me
numbe
tary inf

THE
the Tuskege
not all

ıgh, housing 60 to each. Stating the ıight be giving mili-
mation to an enemy.

* * *

ADETS who survive
basic training at the e institute airport do
pass the final test. If

Chicago's Wendell Phillips high school among these ground men. I felt a slap on my back which almost knocked me down, and turning around saw Anthony Jones, former Chicagoland Golden Gloves boxer from

Continued on Page 15

Benjamin O. Davis Jr., and the author, taken at airport, Tuskegee, Ala., on Thursday, May 7, of thi ırmy officer, then a captain in the air corps, was r on May 7 and a lieutenant colonel on May 23.
r correspondent is puzzled over the greatness
rt and the air corps training school.—
S. Army Air Corps.

Brown America—

(Continued From Page 13)

southern Illinois, who later fought several times as an amateur at the Savoy A. C. in Chicago before he turned professional under the guidance of Eddie Anderson (Rochester of Jack Benny's radio program). He was as brown as an autumn oak leaf from the rays of the hot Alabama sun. He is happy and enjoying his work. I met a former student of Booker T. Washington high school in Tulsa, and one from Kansas City's Lincoln high school in Missouri. I found college men, former athletes, all with one thought in mind. "We'll make good and keep 'em flying" was the prevailing spirit—and why not?

* * *

LIEUT.-COL. Benjamin O. Davis, son of Brig.-Gen. B. O. Davis, the first Negro United States army general is assistant executive officer of the school. Young Davis is a graduate of West Point, class of 1936. He served as captain with the Twenty-fourth United States infantry at Fort Benning, Ga. While there, he attended the infantry school and was later transferred to the cavalry school at Fort Leavenworth Kans., where he was an aide of the commanding general. Lieutenant-Colonel Davis is the first of his race to be commissioned as a captain, the first of his race to be commissioned a major in the U. S. army aviation corps and now becomes the first Negro lieutenant-colonel in army aviation history.

The Army Flying school here is commanded by Col. Fred V. H. Kimble, white, a graduate of West Point, and one of the veteran flyers of the United States air force.

This is the home of the 99th and the 100th pursuit squadrons. The field as now planned will accommodate several times as many soldiers and officers as when first planned and construction first started.

BUILDING A NATION . . . By Roscoe S

He Examines The Lay Of The Land, But In No Spirit Of Rude Conquest

The world as now seen, as seen but a year ago, you will not again see. He looks across the short stretch of waters which divide the natural Not so now. From Cuba South to the far

ON . . . By Roscoe Simmons

Lay Of The Land, Of Rude Conquest

He looks across the short stretch of waters which divide the natural

Not so now. From Cuba South to the far points of habitation the United States is guardian and guide, the unfailing liberator of man from

He Examines The Lay Of The Land, But In No Spirit Of Rude Conquest

The world as now seen, as seen but a year ago, you will not again see.

Thought in the world, on every continent, across all the waters, thought is now a UNIVERSAL thing. A ONENESS in the soul of men has suddenly sprung forth!

Overnight the world was born again. MAN has conquered thrones and wealth.

Freedom—to be, to live and dream, to labor and enjoy in peace without the stunting, the killing touch of fear the fruit thereof—FREEDOM is now watchword wherever the sun shines.

The feeble grandeur of empire totters towards the decline and end of its vulgar swagger!

New occasions greet the amazed sight of men with each swift motion of Earth.

The question flung by Cain at the outset of time and life in response to the dreadful inquiry addressed to him, finds answer in the New Spirit which has captured the hour!

Races are dying and PEOPLE begin to live.

Boundaries fall away and the seas themselves are no longer watery fences which separate hearts and hands in the COMMON ENTERPRISE of human hopes and struggles.

See in the above illustration the President of the United States, surrounded by MEN of his country, serene in the security afforded him by the sentry whose blood is wholly free of guilt, see the President examine the lay of the land at his door.

He looks across the short stretch of waters which divide the natural realm of the U.S.A.

He studies countries and isles but in no spirit of conquest. He thinks in no terms of acreage. TWO IDEAS stir his always benign interest!

First, PROTECTION of his country, for whose destiny he rides the stormy age which finds him invested with a charge as grave as that GREAT LINCOLN bore.

Second, FREEDOM, that is, the FREE man, wherever he may live, whatsoever be his color, or the altars and temples of his sires!

He might say, having no precedent to light his hard, heavy, his rugged way, as Dryden puts it:

> "Those fair ideas to my aid I'll call
> And emulate my great Original."

It was Watterson who invented the inspiring, historic phrase: "MANIFEST DESTINY." He dreamed of a WESTERN WORLD of free men, lit up by the brightness of this land.

Unlike the far-flung lands of great European nations, the AMERICAN EMPIRE will be one of SPIRIT; its flag not one of power and oppression, of dominion and conquest, but THE FLAG OF MAN'S STEADY GAIN!

Into the bays and ports of the isles of the Caribbean already the ships of the Union have anchored. Once the ships of Napoleon dropped anchor in nearby waters and steamed away with MATCHLESS L'OUVERTURE chained and bound for a dungeon.

Not so now. From Cuba South to United States is guardian and guide, the despot and unhappy circumstance which

As with Haiti and Cuba, as with Pu tinique and Gaudeloupe, and every place of the American Union.

Peopled by colored millions, from am the mighty intellects of the last four cent will be happier and bright with fondest h hand of help extended by the WORLD'S

Mr. Roosvelt knows the lines from O

> "Nations and empires flou
> By turns command and in

From the Northern lights to the And the United States, the form and patter unrivalled in the long, full story of the h about will be molded into ONE Nation, hav after awhile a common faith, each owning noble breeze, but all turning to the FLAG ful remembrance of a noble act or for sec

Thus your LEADER meditates the sce

As Shakespeare says:

> "For some must watch, whil
> So runs the world away."

Of The Land,
ade Conquest

oss the short stretch of waters which divide the natural .A.

ountries and isles but in no spirit of conquest. He thinks reage. TWO IDEAS stir his always benign interest!

ECTION of his country, for whose destiny he rides the finds him invested with a charge as grave as that GREAT EDOM, that is, the FREE man, wherever he may live, color, or the altars and temples of his sires!

having no precedent to light his hard, heavy, his rugged ts it:

"Those fair ideas to my aid I'll call
And emulate my great Original."

on who invented the inspiring, historic phrase: "MANI- He dreamed of a WESTERN WORLD of free men, lit s of this land.

flung lands of great European nations, the AMERICAN e of SPIRIT; its flag not one of power and oppression, nquest, but THE FLAG OF MAN'S STEADY GAIN!

nd ports of the isles of the Caribbean already the ships nchored. Once the ships of Napoleon dropped anchor nd steamed away with MATCHLESS L'OUVERTURE or a dungeon.

Not so now. From Cuba South to the far points of habitation the United States is guardian and guide, the unfailing liberator of man from despot and unhappy circumstance which has enfeebled millions!

As with Haiti and Cuba, as with Puerto Rico, so it will be with Martinique and Gaudeloupe, and every place covered by the light and destiny of the American Union.

Peopled by colored millions, from among whom have emerged some of the mighty intellects of the last four centuries, these lands, large or small, will be happier and bright with fondest hopes, when they accept the tender hand of help extended by the WORLD'S GREATEST COUNTRY!

Mr. Roosvelt knows the lines from Ovid:

"Nations and empires flourish and decay,
By turns command and in their turn obey."

From the Northern lights to the Andes, under the beneficent sway of the United States, the form and pattern of whose government are still unrivalled in the long, full story of the human race, the peoples around about will be molded into ONE Nation, having presently ONE LANGUAGE, after awhile a common faith, each owning its own standard dipping to the noble breeze, but all turning to the FLAG OF ALL FLAGS either in grateful remembrance of a noble act or for security from approaching dangers!

Thus your LEADER meditates the scene and thus enriches his mission!

As Shakespeare says:

"For some must watch, while some must sleep;
So runs the world away."

Event OF THE WEEK

▲On the speakers' platform at the Greater New York Inter-Racial Rally Wednesday, June 3, at Lewisohn Stadium are Eunice Hunton Carter, Thomas E. Dewey and Nevil Ford, state administrator War Savings Staff. PV picked the rally as event of the week because it showed the unity of Americans.

▶Marian Anderson, world famous contralto, chats with Olivia De Havilland, Hollywood actress. Miss DeHavilland made a plea for racial unity. Marian Anderson sang the aria from the opera Le Cid, Massenet's Let's Break Bread Together and the spiritual, My Soul Has Been Anchored in the Lord, arranged by Lawrence.

▼Included in the list of distinguished artists who offered entertainment was the immortal Bill Robinson. The Eva Jessye choir sang This is God's War with John Garth III as soloist.

▲Pearl S. Buck, the novelist, talks with Dr. Channing H. Tobias, chairman of the meeting. Miss Buck's speech brought cheers from the audience. Dr. Tobias is associate state administrator of the New York War Savings Staff. Other speakers included Dr. Marshall Shepard, distinguished leader.

▼Lewisohn Stadium was dimmed out in compliance with new regulation. The crowd saw the stage of the stadium darkened with blue lights on the stadium colonnade. Admission was free, with tickets being distributed through the Office of Civilian Defense.

The Reader's Digest

An article a day—of enduring significance, in condensed, permanent booklet form

TWENTY-FIRST YEAR JULY 1942 VOLUME 41 NO. 243

How the Negro Fights for Freedom

By

Stanley High

THE WAR has set the American Negro marching. Where he is going he is pretty sure of. How he will get there he hasn't quite made up his mind. But from New York City's Harlem to red-soil Georgia, he is on the way.

Last February, James G. Thompson, a war-age Negro of Wichita, Kansas, wrote to the Pittsburgh Courier: "Will things be better for the next generation of Negroes in the peace to follow? Would it be too much to demand greater liberty and opportunity for people of my race, in exchange for the sacrifice of my life?" His proposal was: "Let colored Americans adopt the Double V — VV — for a double victory: the first over our enemies from without, the second over our enemies within."

This proposal the Courier, largest and most potent of Negro periodicals, put in inch-high type on its front page; enlisted its 8000 dealers; distributed bushels of Double-V buttons, blotters and car-stickers bearing the legend "Democracy: At Home — Abroad." National Negro organizations and other newspapers endorsed the idea. The five leading Negro denominations called on their 40,000 ministers to celebrate Easter as "Double Victory Day." In Evansville, Indiana, 10,000 Negroes staged a Double-V mobilization meeting.

Better led, better educated than in 1917, the Negro is asking for extension of democracy at home — and getting it.

This rush to the Double-V bandwagon is symptomatic of what the Negro thinks about the war as it affects him.

The Negro is neither disloyal nor ungrateful. He believes he is realistic and logical. He knows from experience that the Negro future cannot be left wholly to the unprodded action of the white man's conscience. He is prepared to use the war and the white man's global embarrassments to speed up his advance.

"I believe in the religion of Christ and the Constitution of the United States," a Negro businessman in Pittsburgh told me, "but in the way they are supposed to function."

The People's Voice, a weekly tabloid edited by the Rev. Adam C. Powell, Jr., minister of Harlem's Abyssinia Baptist Church, the world's largest Negro congregation, declares: "As long as Negroes are kept in the glory-hole of ships, in the isolated 99th Pursuit Squadron, in the Jim Crow regiments of the army, and get no closer to the assembly line in defense industries than as porters in the toilets, the war is futile and the peace is already lost."

When the War Department sent out a picture of heavyweight champion Joe Louis and his recent ring opponent, Billy Conn, sitting side by side in army uniform, the Washington Afro-American published it with the caption: "Stupid Army Regulations Say That They Can't Fight Side by Side."

"The loyalty of our race to the ideal of democracy remains unshaken," said the Michigan Chronicle, "but we have a legitimate grievance and we intend to be heard."

"In the past," said the Afro-American, "the nation has welshed on Lincoln. The time is ripe for a new emancipation."

The Negro effort to hurry this emancipation often lacks finesse, is sometimes injudicious, and in some instances is exploited by the considerable number of Negroes who live by agitation. There is, however, no evidence of fifth column work. Only one Negro is known to have been arrested for Axis leanings — one Robert Jordan who in Harlem got himself labeled the "Black Hitler." When he went to jail his soapbox following evaporated. Communist influence among Negroes, once strong, has declined toward the vanishing point.

Substantial Negro leaders — their Americanism unwavering — believe that our democracy can be made even more worthy of the Negro's sacrifices abroad if it is made more effective, in his behalf, here at home. Thanks in large part to such leadership, considerable progress has been made.

Army policy now calls for Negro units in every branch of its service. That these outfits are segregated is vastly displeasing to some Negro professionals. Among Negroes, generally, there is a great deal of pride in the 99th Air Corps Squadron, the famous 41st "singing engineers," the 768th Tank Battalion, the 92nd Infantry Division, and other all-Negro outfits.

In the navy, up to mid-April, Negroes could serve only as messmen. At Pearl Harbor a colored messman rushed up from his galley, manned a gun, and was subsequently decorated for his heroism. Today the navy, in accordance with liberalized policy, accepts Negroes and, under their own petty officers, they will man certain small naval craft.

This victory for Negro leadership and ability the Courier headlined: "We Asked for More — We Want More — We Deserve More." But the widespread satisfaction among the rank and file over this advance is reflected by the way in which the Negro press, the Courier included, spread over its front pages photographs of the types of vessels which will be Negro-manned.

Nowhere is the Negro fighting more persistently under his Double V than in the field of employment. His most pressing problems are economic. So are his aspirations. Before the war, only a few plants — Henry Ford's being the most notable — gave the Negro an equal chance to rise in the industrial scale. When management did not discriminate, the unions did.

Negroes are 10 percent of U. S. population but for 10 years they have comprised 20 percent of our unemployed. They were "last hired and first fired." A government survey found that of 29,215 employes in 10 war plants in the New York area only 142 were Negroes. In 56 war-contract factories in St. Louis last year, each employed an average of three Negroes. Outside the NYA and WPA, there was practically no provision for Negroes in the program of war-employment training.

To dramatize this situation, A. Philip Randolph, forthright head of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, last summer called for a "Negro march on Washington." Buses were hired, special trains chartered and a capital visitation of at least 50,000 Negroes appeared to be in prospect.

White Washington, as the Negroes hoped, was stirred. Mrs. Roosevelt, sometimes known among colored people as the "Great White Mother," asked Negro leaders to call off the march. They refused. President Roosevelt called them to the White House and made the same request. They refused again — unless the President agreed to issue an order, with teeth in it, banning discrimination against Negroes in war industry and training. They got the order. The President also set up a Fair Employment Practice Committee, with two of its seven members Negroes, to carry out this promise. It has by no means ended the Negro's economic problems. But it is opening many hitherto closed doors.

In January 1941 there were fewer than 300 Negroes in the aviation industry. By April 1942 there were 3500, a majority of them in skilled or semiskilled production work. In September 1940, 5900 Negroes were employed in navy yards. A year later there were three times that number, working in 37 different crafts. In three leading East Coast shipbuilding companies today, Negro employment is 24 percent of the total. In Detroit nearly 1500 Negroes have completed eight weeks' training as machine-tool operators, welders and riveters. One unit of the new U. S. Cartridge plant in St. Louis will be entirely manned by Negroes.

These war strides have been particularly notable in the South. During 1941 the navy yard at Charleston, S. C., increased the percentage of its Negro employes from 9.5 to 17.7. Negro employment in the Norfolk navy yard has more than tripled since September 1940 and now stands at approximately 25 percent of the total employed.

That these, among the country's 13,000,000 Negroes, are no more than "token" achievements is continually proclaimed by some Negro leaders and most of the Negro press.

Negro leaders in the federal government are more realistic. These men and women (sometimes called the "Black Cabinet") who look after race interests from positions of key importance are among the best educated and most constructive-minded leaders in the country. They are aware that the Negro cannot move ahead of his preparation. These "token" advances, they say, are opening the door. The next job is for the Negro to make good. How well is he prepared to do so?

There is no doubt he is far ahead of where he was in World War I. He is better educated, better led, better organized and more experienced in doing things in his own behalf.

Today only eight percent of Negroes are illiterate, as compared with 30 percent in 1910. There were 64 Negro high schools in 1915; today there are 2500. Between 1930 and 1939 there were 16,500 Negroes graduated from college, more than twice as many as in the preceding decade. Ten years ago only 15 percent of Negro supervisors of education in the South were college graduates; today 70 percent are graduates and many have master's degrees.

Of the many agencies which influence Negro life, the most powerful is the church. The Negro goes to church not only because religion comes naturally to him. He goes because in church, more than anywhere else, he is in a world that uniquely and altogether belongs to him. Ten years ago the hold of the Negro church appeared to be slipping. Today it is in the midst of a healthy comeback due to the improved educational training of its preachers and to the fact that, during and since the depression, many of these ministers have stepped to the front in the Negro's effort to lift the level of his own life.

In Detroit I attended a mass meeting called to discuss the employment of Negro women in war industries. The discussion was led by a Negro official of the United Automobile Workers Union and a Negro Episcopal clergyman. For sound sense the preacher had the better of it.

Churches that set the pace are more and more manned by men who studied for the ministry in first-rate seminaries. The largest Negro school for ministers is Gammon Theological Seminary, a Methodist institution in Atlanta. Its students are trained not only in the Scriptures but in such practical matters as the construction of septic tanks, the importance of screens, and family hygiene. They take courses in Atlanta University's excellent School of Social Work. Every summer Gammon runs an Institute which brings in preachers from rural areas for the same sort of training.

Negro self-determination and self-help are given similarly aggressive leadership by the National Urban League, organized in 48 cities; by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which has 565 chapters extending even to rural communities and is the nearest thing to a national Negro lobby; and by the National Negro Congress, more recent and more Leftist but, with its 102 chapters, more all-out in support of the war than either of the other organizations.

Prior to the appearance of the CIO, organized labor, with few exceptions, had bars up against Negroes, and 24 unions — ten of them AFL — still follow the policy, "Never let a Negro pick up a tool." The CIO, however, set out to organize the colored workman.

Negro labor responded with a rush. Five years ago Negro unionists in Detroit numbered a few hundred. Today the United Automobile Workers alone has between 25,000 and 40,000. Negro union members in New York City total 70,000. Of the 102,000 CIO members in Alabama, one third are Negroes. Almost all of these CIO unions have some Negro officers, and a Negro is president of a large steel workers' local near Birmingham.

The better-organized determination of the Negroes to improve their lot is backed, too, by a powerful Negro press. There are 230 Negro papers — of all varieties, with a total circulation of 1,406,800, reaching probably one third of the country's 13,000,000 Negroes.

These papers are not organs of general news. They are, more accurately, house organs for the national Negro community. The news they publish is almost wholly Negro news. The causes they espouse are Negro causes. Too often they lean to the side of sensationalism. Their effort to turn every incident to race account is as uniform and, sometimes, as poorly supported by the facts as the class-angle policy of the Communist Daily Worker. Much of the self-assertiveness, some of it misguided, now apparent among Negroes can be traced to the journalistic diet on which many of them are nourished.

The Negro is more positively American than he was in 1917. In a southern city I met the head of the Negro civilian defense setup — a graduate of Hampton Institute and Harvard University and a World War veteran. His organization has a thousand air-raid wardens, 800 enrolled in first-aid classes and hundreds of others taking war nutrition and other courses. In the city's first blackout the Negro district carried off the honors. On the day of my visit he showed me an announcement from Civilian Defense headquarters of a mass meeting at which Negroes, as customary, would be segregated.

"Our board," said the director, "has unanimously turned this invitation down. The time is past when — in a civic enterprise in which we share the responsibility — we will submit to segregation when we can avoid it."

When I was in St. Louis, Convention Hall was filled to capacity each night with an "Old-Fashioned Revival" in which, according to the original plans, Negroes were to be segregated. The Negroes, with churches of their own to go to, objected so strenuously in their press, pulpits and mass meetings that the fence came down.

When, last winter, Negroes discovered that the American Red Cross refused to accept Negro blood, Negro opinion was promptly mobilized to fight the ban. After some weeks, the Red Cross partially revised its policy. Negro blood is now accepted, but it is segregated, presumably for Negro troops. Even so, it is a step forward in recognition of the Negro's right to share participation in common causes.

The Negro has learned in the past 25 years that by picketing the stores where he trades he can force them to hire colored help; that his meetings, petitions and hearings get him better schools and more recreational facilities; that lawsuits result in increased salaries for Negro teachers; that through union activity he can get more jobs at better pay; that the delegations he sends to Washington do, in time, produce slum clearance and housing projects.

Proof of what the Negro can do — collectively and on his own as a better-educated, better-trained American — is appearing from many quarters. Whether the Negro's aggressiveness will get out of bounds depends a great deal on the spirit with which the white man receives his legitimate aspirations. Much has been done in recent years by whites and Negroes alike to improve race relations. There is much more yet to be done. More deeply than ever before in his history, the Negro is sure that he has what it takes and can deliver. With such eagerness and such a faith, he does not believe that America will short-change him or let him down.

So That's How It Started!—26—

THE BRITISH built the first tanks in World War I with complete secrecy. Even the workmen who made them didn't know for what purpose they were being built. They were told the machines were to be used in Egypt for transporting large containers of water, and every record in connection with their manufacture was made under the heading "water carrier." Eventually the men in the factories adopted the word "tank" for brevity. The name stuck and is now used by practically all countries.

— Major Paul C. Raborg, Mechanized Might (Whittlesey House)

CHICAGOANS ATTEND MUSICAL WAR RALLY AT AMPHITHEATRE

Over 15,000 persons attended the musical war rally at the International Amphitheatre Wednesday sponsored by the Illinois War Saving Staff of the Treasury Department to encourage sale of war bonds. Above, left to rgiht, seated on platform are Bishop Sheil, Rev. Archibald Carey, Jr.; Hebert Agar, Kentucky publisher whose address was one of the highlights of the meeting; Singer Marian Anderson, Movie Star Olivia de Haviland and Norman B. Collins, state administrator, war savings staff. Lower left, Agar as he addressed vast audience, and lower right, Miss Anderson, whose singing was roundly applauded. —Clynell photos.

Citizens Give Bousfield Testimonial On June 5th

Dr. Midian O. Bousfield, prominent physician and member of the school board, will be given a public testimonial at the Parkway ballroom, Friday, June 5, at eight p.m.

A citizen committee of almost one hundred is taking this means as a farewell to Dr. Bousfield, who will report to Camp Davis, June 7, where he will be inducted into the United States government hospital prior to heading the government base hospital in Fort Huachuca, Ariz., next month.

Under the title of Lieut. Colonel, Dr. Bousfield has been placed in complete charge of developing the new institution, with authority to select the needed personnel. Official order from the Adjutant General's office came to him recently, and he has proceeded to assemble the staff that will go to the famous Arizona camp where for many years soldiers of the regular army have been stationed from year to year.

Among those who have been selected by Dr. Bousfield, and who will soon be in the hospital are: Dr. Harold Thatcher, major; Dr. John West, major; Dr. Maurice Shaw, major; Dr. Arthur W. Thomas, captain; Dr. Clarence Jamison, captain; Drs. Earl Shephard and Joseph Mitchell, lieutenants, all of Chicago.

Dr. Bousfield has been a director of the Rosenwald Foundation for several years, is a member of the Board of Education, is a former president of the board of trustees of the Chicago Urban League, and is an official of St. Edmunds Episcopal diocese. Mrs. Bousfield is the principal of Wendell Phillips high school. Dr. Bousfield is likewise medical director of the Supreme Liberty Life Insurance company, with home office in Chicago.

The testimonial promises to be one of the largest ever held in Chicago, as indicated by the acceptances that are coming in to the committee. Admission is by invitation, two dollars per person.

On the committee of honor are listed Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Bishop John A. Gregg, Mayor Edward J. Kelly, Marshall Field, Edwin Embree, James B. McCahey, Franklin D. McLean, Lewis E. Meyers and Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune.

Heading the Citizen's Committee are Joseph D. Bibb, chairman; Homer Roberts, vice chairman, and William P. Harrison, secretary-treasurer. Mr. Bibb will act as master of ceremonies. Truman Gibson, assistant civilian aide to the War Department, will attend.

The Gentleman from Mississippi

A Speech by Rep. Rankin of Mississippi in Congress on May 28, 1942

MR. SPEAKER, one of the most vicious movements that has yet been instituted by the crackpots, the Communists, and parlor pinks of this country is that of trying to browbeat the American Red Cross into taking the labels off the blood bank they are building up for our wounded boys in the service so that it will not show whether it is Negro blood or white blood.

That seems to be one of the schemes of these fellow travelers to try to mongrelize this Nation.

They are not so much interested in its effect upon our wounded boys as they are in carrying out their Communist program.

Thank God, the Red Cross has stood its ground and refused to permit this outfit to have Negro blood pumped into the veins of our wounded white men on the various fronts.

That is no discrimination against the Negroes. I am not sure that it would not be as detrimental to a Negro to pump the blood of some other race into his veins as it would be to pump Negro blood or Japanese blood into the veins of white men.

Being unable to browbeat the Red Cross into submission, they are now bringing pressure to bear upon the OCD to try to get them to take the labels off the blood they are storing up for the civilians of this country when a disaster occurs. They seem to have some crackpot alien doctors advising them that it makes no difference what race this blood comes from. I suppose that these doctors and their fellow travelers would contend that it would be all right to fill our soldiers full of Japanese blood.

They had better remember that there is still a Congress of the United States, and that Congress represents the American people, and that the American people through their Congress are not going to permit such outrages against our wounded boys at the front, or against our men, women, and children who are injured in local disasters.

One of the papers that has been urging or advocating taking these labels off this blood is a New York tabloid known as PM. In its edition of Friday, May 22, it quotes one of these doctors as saying that "whether the blood comes from Negro or white makes no difference whatsoever."

I am calling this to the attention of Congress now, so that each and every one of you may know what is going on. I am going to demand that the OCD label this blood it is storing up to be used on the men, women, and children of this country just as the Red Cross is doing that to be used in treating our injured men in the armed forces.

(Mr. Rankin's remarks ended here and the Speaker of the House said, "The time of the gentleman from Mississippi has expired.")

The Truth: The Journal of the American Medical Association, May 16, 1942, declared; "There is no factual basis for the discrimination against the use of Negro blood or plasma for injection into white people. . . . The transfusion of Negro blood into white persons and that of white persons into Negroes has been repeatedly performed in civil practice without any evidence of harm or aversion on the part of the recipients." Shortly afterward, 372 Massachusetts physicians—among them some of the nation's most highly regarded doctors—petitioned the Red Cross in protest of its blood segregation policy. Said the petition: "This policy . . . runs counter to the fundamental democratic principles for which we are now fighting. As physicians and scientists, we know there is no valid basis for the discriminatory policy. All biochemical and physiological researches have emphasized the fundamental identity of human blood, irrespective of race and color. . . . We must not succumb to the racial myths of our enemies. . . . We recommend that the blood of all Americans be made available without prejudice and whenever necessary for the American sick and wounded."